THE WEATHER.

TO-DAY'S PROBS.

Generally fine and warm to-day and on Sunday. Thunderstorms in a few localities to-day.

Circus Van Injures Crowd.

Montreal, July 1.—While going down St. Lambert Hill yesterday, one of the heavy parade vans of Bell & Downie circus became unmanageable, and swerved into the crowd, lining the street, injuring several people. It also struck a street car, but did not cause serious trouble.

Gift of Millions to Education.

New York, July 1.—Ten million dollars for the general education board for education in the United States has been given the general education board by John D. Rockefeller. The announcement was made by Dr. Wallace Buttrick at a meeting yesterday.

Shot at His Fore

Guelph, July 1.—Robert Anderson, an Englishman working at Crowes' foundry, yesterday at noon fired a shot from a revolver at Samuel Terrell, shop foreman, fortunately he missed his mark. Anderson was arrested.

Jews to Support Strikers.

Montreal, July 1.—The striking carpenters are complaining that the committee of the Baron de Hirsch Institute, a local Jewish charitable organization, are seeking to fill strikers' positions with recently arrived Jews, who are neither skilled mechanics nor able to speak English or French.

Haul Down The Red Flag

Mutineers Oh Knias Potemkins Tamely Surrender.

"Yield Or Be Sunk," Was Kruger's Alternative, and They Accepted Without Amnesty, Which They Vainly Demanded, the First Part of the Decisive Signal—Now Prisoners on Way to Sebastopol.

Odessa, July 1.—Without firing a gun or the slightest show of resistance, the Knias Potemkine has hauled down the red flag and surrendered the battleship to Vice-Admiral Krieger's squadron, which arrived here at noon yesterday. It was an anxious moment for Odessa—the fleet of twenty-five battleships and seven torpedo boats, with their crews at quarters and their decks cleared for action, steamed within range of the United Potemkine, the flagship flying signals which read: "Yield or be sunk."

Faron, Too Overpowering.

The overawing force was too overwhelming for the mutineers, and all thought of resistance was abandoned. Admiral Krieger ordered the Ekaterinoslav, the only other cruiser on board the Knias Potemkine, and the slightest tread of the squadron immediately sailed away.

All mutineers will be transferred to the Ekaterinoslav, the vessel lying alongside the Knias Potemkine, and will be taken to Sebastopol.

Everyone was expecting a naval fight. The city was like a fortified camp. Troops barred all the approaches to the harbor and were bivouacking in tents in Cathedral-square, while artillery and cavalry were well supplied with ammunition, had been placed in the parks, and at Langeron.

Cleared For Action.

The Knias Potemkine was seen to be clearing for action, and the squadron to be manoeuvring in battle array, continually signalling, until the rebel battleship lay midway between the shore and the squadron, with broadsides pointed respectively towards the town and the squadron, as if threatening to shell Odessa should she be attacked. The rebel ships, in addition to his seeming reluctance to destroy so fine a battleship, Admiral Kruger was apparently ashamed by a desire, in case he should be compelled to open fire, to fight further seaward.

Later, the squadron was observed to send ten boatloads of marines to what the Knias Potemkine, apparently to take possession of the ruthless ship, for it soon became known that she had surrendered unconditionally, after, it is said, vainly demanding amnesty.

Strike At Cronstadt.

St. Petersburg, July 1.—A strike of 6,000 imperial workmen, together with the workmen in the naval dockyard at Cronstadt, occurred yesterday, and one officer was killed. The strike soon yielded, but the workmen continue on strike.

GERMANY TAKES DARK VIEW.

Inclined to Belief That Disturbances Are Revolutionary.

Berlin, July 1.—German newspapers, discussing the happenings at Odessa and Libau, take an extremely dark view of the situation in Russia, and write preceding event were classified as a revolutionary movement; these latest incidents, it is said, constitute real revolution.

Gentle, the military expert of the Tageblatt and formerly its correspondent with the Russian army at the front, writing yesterday, after saying that St. Petersburg appears to act implicitly on the army, says he never sees, after 1870, the discipline displayed by the Manchurian army, witnessed among the officers the slightest trace of spontaneous patriotism.

They showed no wounded sense of military honor, and no thirst for vengeance. They felt only humiliation over pain, while many showed undisguised satisfaction at the defeats.

Opens Advances.

Tokio, July 1.—Field Marshal Oyama's right has begun an advancing movement against Haliangchen.

Russian Warship Floated.

Tokio, July 1.—The Russian battleship Peruvetz, which was sunk at Port Arthur, was successfully floated by the Japanese Thursday.

Has Reached Pekin.

Pekin, July 1.—M. Pleuloff, who succeeds the late M. Lessar as Russian Minister to China, has arrived here from St. Petersburg.

ALEX. HARDY SHOT.

Toronto Bachelor Victim Of An Indignant Husband.

Troy, N. Y., July 1.—Alexander Hardy of Toronto, Ont., one of the umpires of the Troy Baseball Club, was shot and possibly fatally injured last night by Charles Thorn of Danbury, Conn., who alleges that Hardy paid undue attention to Thorn's wife.

The latter lives in this city. There met Hardy in a gunswag and shot him in the back. The bullet lodged near the heart.

Hardy denies paying attention to Mrs. Thorn.

Election Cases Division Reserved.

Ottawa, July 1.—The Supreme Court has reserved decision in the Pudding and Borden election cases and adjourned for the long vacation.

HOPEY YOUNG CONFESSES

Alone and Frightened, She Evolves Tramp Outrage Plan.

Says the Babe, May Ward, Died Naturally—Her Story Does No; implicate Any Other Person, and Contests Her Own Innocence of Crime—But Main Defence Will Be Plea of Insanity.

Halifax, July 1.—Hope Young's confession, made to Detective Power yesterday afternoon, was read and signed. Her story, which is given in full in Sergt. Power's report, does not implicate any person other than herself and she contests her own innocence of crime. But main defence will be one of insanity. Dora Young smothered baby Ward and explains that in the first fold was concerned because of her infancy at the time of the birth of the child, and she was alone in the house.

"I was afraid to tell anyone," said she, "and I had no help and no doctor. I feared when Kinsley Melanson would say when he returned and found May dead. I thought he would blame me for coming to the house. All the night I was there alone in my room and I had nowhere to go if I left Melanson's. I remained in my room all day Sunday and did not go out to the woods. My mind is a blank after 6 o'clock in the morning. After 6 o'clock I do not remember. I had been sleeping with the child and on that morning I left the room for some nights and had not noticed that she was dead. I took her in my arms and tried to give her the breast, but found that the milk had dried and would not swallow.

"I remember nothing after a while died in my arms. I left her on the bed and went downstairs and about the house doing washing and other household work. As the day became more and more frightened of the dead child, and more afraid of going towards even looking at her dead body. I did not know how I got her back.

"On my return to the house was crying. She had been locked in the room during my absence. I made a stump story and arranged accordingly. I told her that I had been out in the back door cabin, so that nose and mouth were covered. I told her that the collection of going out, with her or of going out at all. Questioned as to the disposition of the dead and cake in the pantry, she says: "I always kept the cake there, and always there." Asked if she told Melanson, she said: "I only told him in the evening, were missing. I did not tell him of May's death and my taking them out."

The Crown asks to prove that May Ward's death was due to suffocation. If Mr. Mcdonald is the case stated this to be the case, but defence will claim that it is impossible to prove that in the absence of any of the usual symptoms. Dr. Slayter will be made; also that a child of seven months could smother without struggling, making violent resistance, which could be seen by marks extra. The main defence will be doubt be the plea of insanity.

HUMAN PICTURE GALLERY.

Man Found Drowned at Prescott Literally Tattooed.

Prescott, July 1.—There was found drowned, floating down the north channel yesterday, a man, aged between 25 and 30 years, weight about 175 pounds, dandy moustache (short clipped), brown hair, black eyes, tattoo on breast of a lady, on left arm large fish and anchor, and some flowers; on right arm lady and star; calf of left leg, two ladies' faces; on left hand, a star; on right hand, a leaf; above the knees, on both legs, a bow knot. Nothing was found in the pockets to identify him.

WON'T TAKE "NO" FOR ANSWER.

Gaynor and Green Continue in Fight for Liberty.

Montreal, July 1.—Judge Cuimet yesterday morning decided that he had jurisdiction to hear the Gaynor-Greene application for continuance of habeas corpus in chambers and that the case should go on.

Meanwhile Mr. Cangrain asked for delay, as he was going to appeal to the Privy Council from the judgment of the Supreme Court dismissing the appeal from Judge Davidson's refusal of the writ of prohibition.

Couldn't Make Other Side.

Toronto, July 1.—"I'm afraid I can't make it, Mr. Ward," said Fisherman Mason when he was in the middle of the bay this morning. After attempting to swim across at about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, he didn't make it. Two hours afterward his body was taken out of 18 feet of water by Chapin Nurse, about 150 yards from where it sank. Fisherman Musselman was in his 70th year. He leaves a widow and ten children, who tried to keep him afloat but failed.

Judge Fitzgerald's Sudden Death.

Port Arthur, July 1.—Judge Fitzgerald died of heart failure early yesterday morning. He retired early Thursday night in good health, and went to awaken him to meet the morning train, and found him dead. He had been dead for some hours. The article may either dipped in the lacquer or coated with a brush, taking care not to go over the same place twice nor to leave any portion uncovered. The lacquer will dry in a few seconds.

Conservatives and the Constitution.

Mr. R. L. Borden, leader of the Conservative party, has of late been subjected to criticism, both by political opponents and others. Under the circumstances it is interesting to read in the Halifax Herald, the leading paper of Mr. Borden's native city, and which he represented till the turn over of last November, a defence of that gentleman. The article in question follows:

"The retinal remarks that are but now being made about the Conservative leader, Mr. Borden, and his party, are almost as amusing as they are contradictory, and they are as contradictory as the police are opposite.

"Some very eage writers already tags that Mr. Borden has ruined the Conservative party by opposing the "school clauses," of Sir Wilfrid's "Autonomy Bills," that by such opposition he has discredited his party more than anything else has ever done to wreck it. This must, indeed, be regarded as all very, very sad! But let us inquire: (1) Has Mr. Borden done to discredit his party? and (2) In the minds of whom is it possible that he has discredited his party?

"Touching the first question the fact is that what Mr. Borden has done, and all that he has done with reference to Sir Wilfrid's "school clauses," was to insist on the due and proper observance of the letter and spirit of the Canadian Constitution and to leave all matters of Education and school systems to the exclusive management and jurisdiction of the Provinces where, according to that Constitution, such matters exclusively belong. That was the head and front of Mr. Borden's offending, if offence it were, but so far from being an offence Mr. Borden's offending, if offence it were, but so far from being an offence Mr. Borden's conduct on this question stands, and will stand, to his lasting credit. He is bound by the Constitution; he went not beyond it, either on the one hand or on the other. He excluded from consideration all side issues or questions not absolutely and inevitably involved in the matter before Parliament and the country. Both in his speeches in Parliament and in his speeches during the 5-election campaign, Mr. Borden refused to discuss any question as to the several merits of Separate Schools and National Schools, because he held, as he was bound to hold under the British North America Act, that the Dominion Parliament had no right to consider or decide what kind of schools should exist in the several Provinces, because that is a matter which, by that constitution, belongs to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Provincial Legislatures. Mr. Borden, both in Parliament and during the election campaign, has throughout been strict and firm at and by the Constitution and nothing else, by protesting against the Dominion Parliament passing any restrictions on the new Provinces, either compelling them to have Separate Schools or preventing them from having Separate Schools if they wished. He declared for the absolute freedom of the Provinces to make their own school system and manage their own schools just as they wished. He was opposed to the Provinces wished them, National Schools if the Provinces preferred them — and protested against the Dominion Government and Parliament interfering in a matter which the Constitution had relegated to the exclusive jurisdiction of the Provinces. This is the absolutely correct statement of Mr. Borden's conduct and position on this important matter.

"Now, touching the second question, in the minds of whom is it possible that such conduct and position on the part of Mr. Borden should discredit his party? Not in the party! Manifestly only those who did not or could not wish to stand by the Canadian Federal Constitution and the Constitution upheld in its integrity, but were or are willing in origin or countenance—a dangerous breach of that Constitution—to the satisfying of some partisan, — racial, sectarian or other improper end. Such are the only sort of people with whom Mr. Borden's opposition to the satisfying of some partisan, — racial, sectarian or other improper end. Such are the only sort of people with whom Mr. Borden's opposition to the school clauses of the Autonomy Bills, and his strict and firm stand by the Constitution can possibly have discredited him. And to such he has discredited him, and a mere Constitution, of interest. He was determined to say that one of the chief merits of Christianity was that it was the only religion that there was far apart as heaven and hell and that no greater calamity can befall a nation than a weakening of the religious fabric of it.

A Stupid Professor.

It was a party composed of "Richard III," and a poor one, to which the two men from Wilson's ranch had listened for nearly an hour with ill concealed impatience.

"Come on out. I've had enough of this thing," said one of them at last, in the audible aside.

"That one in the middle on the stage is a leader of dramatic art," the other said in a hoarse whisper. "He's hold on till the show begins right away."

A Gentled Curiosity.

"I want you to take back that parrot," said the irritable customer.

"But only in Spanish, ma'am; only in Spanish."

"Yes, I know."

"But how can madam know?"

"I studied Spanish to find out what he said."

STORIES FOR THE LADIES.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX URGES GIRLS TO CULTIVATE THEIR MINDS.

Captious critics declare that the higher education is a foe to matrimony.

They say that men are afraid of the girls who possess a great store of knowledge; that a man wants an ignorant girl for a wife, not a walking encyclopedia.

In this as it may, the fact remains that many thousand girl graduates" of this year at Vassar college are about to be married.

Within the next eight young men have made the discovery that it is quite possible for a girl to be learned and charming at one and the same time.

And it a girl can add the beauties derived from a good education to her outer charms of goodness, loveliness and sweetness, she is the better for her.

Now, you know, is no respecter of age, beauty, goodness, environment, anything.

It shoots his arrows when and where he will.

Though one is a perfect Minerva of learning or the most veritable little Sphinx-mass; if she possesses the contagious quality that begets love, she will have lovers in plenty.

But it sometimes happens that the girl who has relished Sunday and will be able to hold love longer than she will. She has investigated, craves to set her, of.

But it all very well to say that men don't care whether women know anything about it. They do care.

During courtship a man may be very casual about his sweetheart's lack of knowledge and think her ignorance amusing, but he won't be quite so pleased with his wife's deficiencies.

A man loves a woman for her loveliness, her good qualities, but he will admire and respect her all the more if she is able to listen and talk intelligently on the current topics of the day.

We can't all go to college and begin fit, we have higher branches of education, but it remains to say that the majority of any girl friends lack the advantages of a public school education, and if one is anxious to add to it there is a great deal in the books found in any one of the public schools.

Having had that privilege, here is no reason why you should not help yourselves to a great deal of general information.

Suppose you don't get your father read novels that are anything else. Well, if you don't read them, read good ones; don't read trash, read trash.

And above all things don't read the lives of novels whose moral tone is not good.

There are some books that are not to be read by young girls, and you will have the added interest of being taught.

The librarians of the public libraries will be glad to help you select.

Absorb all the knowledge you can get from books, and attention will compel you that the girl who knows not much will not find a husband.

The quality that will make a man love you will not be destroyed by the fact that you are striving to educate yourself.

And putting aside men out of the question, you will find that, more and more full your life will be.

Every day that you pass there will add to your stores of knowledge.

Read the papers, and spend ten or fifteen cents a week for a good magazine.

Keep your eyes and ears open; listen, learn something.

Don't be afraid to display your knowledge on a topic if you are sure you know something about it.

Don't be afraid of talking.

Don't be afraid to display your knowledge on a topic if you are sure you know something about it.

Don't be afraid of talking.

Nature has made you pretty and she has made you bright. Don't destroy your mind and educating yourself to be as full of charm as your face.

BY ROYAL WARRANT - MILLERS TO H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES

Is "Royal Household" Really the Best Flour?

Thousands of women who do their own baking know it is the best, by results—they don't care about the reasons—but those who have not tried it may want to know why it is the best.

Of course any maker of flour—with the same experience—the same facilities for selecting the best wheat —the same tremendous plant equipment for milling, and the same process for Electrical Purification of flour could make just as good flour as ROYAL HOUSEHOLD—if he had the genius for flour making.

But no other flour maker in Canada has all these requisites and facilities, therefore no flour equal to ROYAL HOUSEHOLD is made in this country.

In these talks we shall give you good reasons why ROYAL HOUSEHOLD is the best flour and why it is the cheapest flour for you to use.

ORIGIN OF PIKE'S PEAK.

Indian Legend of the Formation of This Famous Mountain.

The quaint Indian legend of the formation of Pike's peak is as follows:

"At the beginning of all things the lesser spirits possessed the earth and dwelt near the banks of the great river. They had created a race of men to be their servants, but these men were far superior to the present inhabitants of the earth and made endless trouble for their creators. There were the lesser spirits resolved to destroy mankind and the earth itself, so they caused the great river to rise until it burst its banks and overwhelmed everything. Everything was lost save a large portion of the best of the earth that they might create a new race men and a quantity of maize, which had been their principal food, and returned to heaven. Arriving at the gate of heaven, which is at the door of the plains, where the sky and mountains meet, they were told that they could not bring such burdens of earth into heaven. Accordingly they dropped them all then and there. These falling masses made a great heap on the top of the world which extended far above the waters, and this is the origin of Pike's peak, which is thus supposed to be directly under the gate of heaven. It was formerly the highest land on the river. They had created a race of men to be their servants, but these men were far superior to the present inhabitants of the earth and made endless trouble for their creators. There were the lesser spirits resolved to destroy mankind and the earth itself, so they caused the great river to rise until it burst its banks and overwhelmed everything. Everything was lost save a large portion of the best of the earth that they might create a new race men and a quantity of maize, which had been their principal food, and returned to heaven. Arriving at the gate of heaven, which is at the door of the plains, where the sky and mountains meet, they were told that they could not bring such burdens of earth into

A Funny Stenger.

According to Law Notes, Sergeant Ballantine used to tell this story on Lord Chief Justice Cockburn of Engand: One night while Ballantine was passing along Piccadilly he came across a policeman who was escorting a woman he claimed was drunk. He stopped to expostulate and stated that the woman seemed to be ill rather than intoxicated. Just at this time Lord Chief Justice, who was Attorney general, came by on his way home from the house of commons and joined in the discussion. Immediately another officer rushed up and, seizing Cockburn by the collar, exclaimed: "I arrest you also." "Arrest me!" cried the astonished magistrate. "What for?" "Oh," replied his captor, "for many things. You are well known to the police."

A Wonderful Record.

The Rev. Mr. Maitland was curate of Patterdale, England, for nearly sixty years. His income for many years was £12 and never exceeded £40 per annum. He married and lived comfortably and had eight children. He buried his mother. He married his father and buried his father. He christened his wife and published the banns of marriage in the church. He christened and married all his own children. His education on his own son until he was fit for college. He lived till he was eighty-six, and died worth £1,000.—London Answers.

Carlyle on Right and Wrong.

Carlyle held that the whole drift of sentiment about criminals was very prevalent in his day, when tender and sorry only to obliterate or diminish the real difference between right and wrong. He hated with an intense hatred that whole system of philosophy which denied that there was a deep, essential, fundamental difference between right and wrong and turned the whole matter into a mere calculation of interest. He was accustomed to say that one of the chief merits of Christianity was that it taught that right and wrong were as far apart as heaven and hell, and that no greater calamity can befall a nation than a weakening of the righteous hatred of evil.

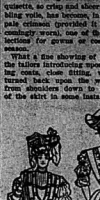

A Stupid Prologue.

It was a performance of "Richard III," and a poor one, to which the two men from Wilson's ranch had listened for nearly an hour with growing impatience.

"Come on out. I've had enough of this thing," said one of them at last, but the other hesitated.

"Wait a little, Jim; they say the stage is going to be a long while," he said in a low voice. "I've got a bottle of Wilson's Fly Pad for $1.00, or 6 for $5.00."

A Greatand Certain Cure.
"I want you to take back that parcel. He uses dreadful language."
"Did you say in Spanish, ma'am; only in Spanish."
"Yes, I know."
"But how can madam know?"
"I studied Spanish to find out what he said."

AFTERNOON AND MORNING GOWNS.

tons appear as well upon all pockets and sleeve cuffs. There can be no false touch in using buttons this season, for they are destined to appear upon everything, from the fringe of drawing room apparel to the simplest of morning dress.

In the cut appears a trefoile dress of blue Irish linen with pearl enamel medallions of antique lace, head run with heavy blue ribbon. The full blue and white handkerchief linen guimpe is trimmed with band run tucks and valenciennes lace insertion. The sleeves are covered with white linen and embroidered in blue French knots. The skirt is circular, with three wide tucks at the hips and before the circular yoke. The yoke at the front fastens under the wide scallop with narrow bias folds at a border. The waist has double bow tefles and fastens at the right of the front. The crush girdle is also of linen, trimmed with buttons and fastens at the back. Blunt ribbon trims the gibbon of fancy straw in two shades of blue.

The second figure shows a blue bond suiting trefoile dress with blouse of silk over guimpe, valenciennes. The skirt is in eleven gores, alternating in tucked and plain. The full blue bretelled bar plaits below short pointed panels, the bretelles are crossed by shoulder straps, and above the girdle short straps finish in points on each bretelle and are fastened with small gilt buttons. The guimpe is double breasted waistcoat shape, the fronts crossing on the vest in one with the bretelles. Taffeta bows trim the blouse sleeves. A white empire straw hat is trimmed with a blue velvet ribbon bow; bluets in several shades are banded on the back bandeau.—Vogue.

Brass on Bedsteads.

Brass on bedsteads should not be polished with ordinary brass polishers, as they destroy the coat of lacquer that is put on to prevent the brass from tarnishing. It should be rubbed with a soft cloth, and if it is very much discolored rub it with a cloth moistened with sweet oil and powder it with a soft cloth, then with a chamois skin.—Farm Journal.

The Waltz in 1781.

I was engaged in looking at those fine people when a gentleman and lady came whirling by and had almost overwhelmed me. I could not imagine what they were about. I had scarcely arrived, when I heard a deep, sonorous voice which they threatened me when another and another couple came twisting by in the same manner. I could plainly hear this was a favorite German dance called a waltz and is performed in the following manner: The lady and gentleman stand face to face. The gentleman puts his arm around the lady's waist and with the other hand he gets firm hold of her right hand. I suppose you think they were going to wrestle. Thus prepared and each determined not to lose so good a purchase upon the lady, they begin to spin around and around with a velocity which would have made me giddy in half a minute.—Twining Papers.

Lacquer For Brass.

Make lacquer for brass as follows: Turmeric root, ground fine, one ounce; best dragon's blood, one-half dram, put into one pint of alcohol. Place it in a moderate heat and shake at intervals for several days. It must then be strained through a linen cloth and put back in the bottle. Now add three ounces of powdered gum sandarac and keep as before in a warm place for a few days longer, or take heat occasionally. When thoroughly dissolved strain it through fine muslin in a bottle and cork. The metal must be perfectly clean and free from dust or grease and be heated before the lacquer is applied, either dipped in the lacquer or coated with a brush. Heat again to dry and pour over the same place twice nor to leave any streaks appear. The lacquer will dry in a few seconds.

England's State Records.

England's state records are kept in a great building known as the record office in London. Here are 130 strong rooms, and in these rooms the rolls and records for over eight centuries are kept. There is the chancery roll room, containing over 40,000 rolls of the chancery court, each roll consisting of thirty or forty skins of parchment stitched together and rolled up tight into a cylinder. Another set of rooms is set aside for the records of the king's bench and common pleas, the latter extending from the reign of Richard I. to the present time. Each roll is formed of a number of long parchment skins fastened together at the head and inclosed in stout vellum covers. Each roll weighs from 100 to 200 pounds and contains from 500 to 1,000 skins of parchment.

Twin Earthquakes.

Earthquakes are the result of two shocks separated by a brief interval of quiet, or two motions of intensity are known as twin earthquakes. In the Lisbon disaster in about every twenty earthquakes is a twin, and the strongest shocks experienced in that country belong to this variety. It is believed that twin earthquakes are due to impulses arising from two detached foci, separated in different cases from a few miles to twenty miles, and lying along the same fault in the earth's crust.

LIFE IN THE BALKANS.

An Oddity Woman, Whose House Was Her Castle.

Miss Edith Durham in her volume of travel, "The Burden of the Balkans," tells this little story of life in that region: "One night a man came to me mysteriously. He said that in his village there were three traitors. Before anything further could be done they must be destroyed. They could not be shot, for there was no power to shoot down the authorities, and it was impossible to have them arrested, as all on the side of it was very strictly enforced. But 'madama' (myself) was a friend of the king's. So he asked if she asked him he would write her something that could get to color. Then the three gentlemen could be asked to supper and their political differences quietly arranged. Nor had he any doubt that I should fulfill this humble request."

Of the dangers of smallpox and like diseases Miss Durham says that the Balkan people show a childlike ignorance. She writes: "At one village we met a woman leading I was asked to go to a house to speak to the priest's wife. 'For woman' they said, 'I've got her little children are ill of the smallpox, one has died, she had to be herself and is not yet well, but she raised her head, brushed back her hair and brought it here for you?' Another time a woman rushed out of a house, seized me in her arms and kissed me upon either cheek until I struggled free. Her own children were down with smallpox, and this warm greeting was supposed to be its give help."

POMPEII'A TOY CITY.

It Was Given Over to Intuition and Luxury, Contrasted Strangely.

Pompeii, as can be seen on every hand, was a city of luxury. Mau describes it—a toy city, given over to intuition and luxury. Rome set both the example and the pace.

The excavations which have proceeded for more than a century and a half may be said now to be fairly complete. Only a few houses needed to enable the archaeologist to reconstruct the life of the city. Pompeii remains the best illustration of the modern seaside or inland resort.

The temples, the villas, the theaters, the baths, the taverns, disentombed at different times, are all richly decorated with rare marbles and granite, while the floors are covered with fine mosaics, yet telling it plainly enough to the passing visitor. The streets are full of day-to-day scenes of indolence and frivolity mingled by the semibarbaric mind with pictures of religious import. In the public places, mysterious orgies in private, feasts and banquets, processions to the gods, gladiatorial combats, and the most revolting doings find fit illustration in mimicry of human life, already beginning its downward course toward death.

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal.

Moscow is situated almost in the geometrical center of European Russia.

UNHYGIENIC TIDINESS.

Valuable Points In Some Very Good Housekeeping.

Even systematic housekeepers will confess to some weakness in their order that would surprise their friends. There seems to be a vulnerable point in every nature where the longing for disorder shows through. One immaculate housekeeper would always keep one small thread in which to "throw things."

In a shining, spotless kitchen a most reliable maid was found to fold her dish towels and put them in a drawer after each meal "to make the kitchen look clean."

A certain cook was very proud of her delicate bread. It was good one day, only, the first. "To keep up the style," the fresh bread was put away wrapped in a towel in the tray to sweat and steam.

The Refrigerator.

The best receptacle to hold things that want to be out of sight and smell is the refrigerator. It would seem to take the conscience of antiseptic surroundings to keep the health of the family through the refrigerator. Even the most standard purity of its shining shelves and walls cannot speak out loudly enough for all housekeepers to hear. Bits of bread that have left touch the edges, and a pan of milk may stand too long. Meat is placed where the milk and butter only should go, and a cold roast may be put indeed before it is cooled sufficiently to be stored.

Basement or Cellars.

While the refrigerator is the vulnerable point for many city households, every house has danger lying under its very feet. The basements throughout the country is most likely to leave that part of the house to the servants. And what can be expected from the maid when the mistress is really unjustified in forgetting? Dampness is dark, cool cellars, and there is little incentive to keep them sweet and clean. Dirt accumulates or fresh air, constant cleaning and ventilation are necessary. Basements such sins are will be the atmosphere of the upper rooms.—The Talk.

CULTIVATE TACT.

If You Do Not Possess It, Strive to Acquire It.

I want it recognized that fact should be thought conscientiously, seriously, thoroughly; that it should be placed in the forefront of education and take its place with the three R's as one of the fundamentals.

Tact, psyche, as afternoon visit recently, my hostess, wishing to know in which our conversation had referred, passed over some fruit. When she had the servant appeared with tea, and the following colloquy occurred:

"Who told you to bring tea?"

"Please, ma'am, I thought that was what you rang for."

"Well, please don't think. I hired you to answer the bell, not to assert the spirit for a guessing competition. When I want you to do that I'll speak in the kitchen with a copy of a newspaper."

The girl retired crying, but she duly changed her servants frequently.

Progress is the activity of today and the assurance of tomorrow.—Emerson.

FAMOUS PEOPLE

PROFESSOR GOLDWIN SMITH

The Greatest Living Master of Style

In "The Grange," a delightful, plain, brick house, half-concealed by the network of vines that cover it, with a wide sweep of lawn and grounds filled with old trees, in the "healthy city" of Toronto, lives in his 81st year the man who is, since Canada's venerable author, Goldwin Smith.

The greatest Master, as regards the English language, as he has been called, has had a busy life in his eighty-one years, yet his own words prove it to have been a serene and peaceful one. "Contented to the Fullest," he says. "Of no reason of strength our years be fourscore, yet is their strength labor and sorrow." And again: "I have had many years of life more than first they have been free from the second."

Born in Reading, England, and educated at Eton and Oxford, graduating in 1846; two years later was elected a Fellow of University College, where he lectured for some time, and though called to the bar, he never practiced. He was prominent in the two commissions appointed to examine into the condition of Oxford University which led to a number of salutary reforms. In 1858 he was made Regius Professor of Modern History of Oxford, a post he held for eight years. During the Civil War in the United States he was a valiant champion of the Northern cause, and on his lecture tour in that country in 1864 he was the recipient of many flattering receptions and received the degree of LL.D. from Brown University.

The United States and Canada have ever had a warm place in the heart of the famous Canadian publicist, and in 1868 he was offered the chair of History at Oxford, he again visited the United States and received the honorary degree of D.C.L. from Cornell University.

On his retirement he went to Canada, being still Professor Emeritus of Oxford, where he was active in literary work, and in 1871 was appointed professor of English and constitutional history.

Here he met with flattering recognition and served in a number of positions that gave him opportunity to render invaluable service to the cause of education and letters, and on all questions of vital political interest his voice and his pen were ever ready. A long list of books on history, religion, national politics, philology and biography he has to his credit, yet a far greater bulk of material consists in his constant contributions to the newspapers and periodicals of the day. A rare scholar, a master of style, a great thinker, a fearless journalist, at once champion, a tireless worker, Goldwin Smith has been a strong force for good.

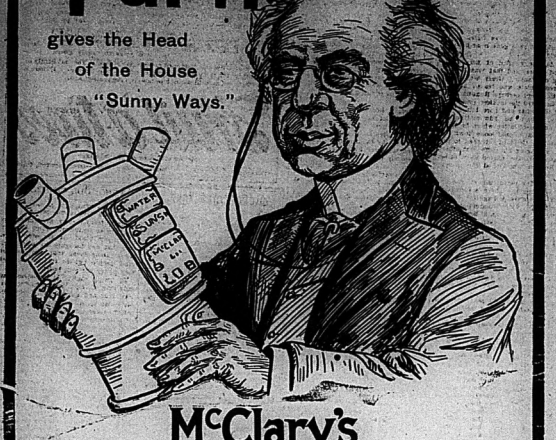

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by W. G. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A Texas negro has been sentenced to imprisonment for a thousand years and a day. The day was probably added so that it might be struck off for good behaviour.

Perhaps some people who profess to have such a deadly fear of the "yellow peril" will be gratified to learn that according to Admiral Clark, who has been studying the subject, China has only two hundred millions of people instead of the four hundred millions she has been credited with. This reduces the peril just one-half.

It would be interesting to know how much of the $2,000,000 Intercolonial deficit is represented by contract. Every subscription to the campaign funds of the last general election.

It is to be hoped that Canada has heard the last of Messrs. Gaynor and Greene. Whether their place is in a prison cell or not is not for Canada to say. That is a question for the United States courts, and the sooner they are free to deal with the problem the better pleased Canadians will be.

A New Fish Story.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)

Game wardens lead a strenuous existence, it would seem, and know that most of them have to be pretty shrewd to carry on the work for which they are appointed, said R. L. Ferguson.

"I was told a story as a little story out on the edge of the state the other day which beats out this state.

"A game warden found a man spearing pickerel through the ice. At the side of the little shanty in which the fisherman was busy lay a large pickerel. The game warden stole to the hut and threw open the door. 'Did you spear this pickerel?' he asked.

"'I did that,' said the fisherman, lifting the fish by the gills and displaying a commercial traveler. 'Can you beat it? Ever since I've been in this work I've never taken too near a view of the school ourse.—London Post.

Dominion Day.

Next Monday's demonstration at the Driving Park promises to be a very magnificent one. It will be honored by the presence of the Premier of the Province, Hon. Mr. Whitney, K.C., who will deliver the address of the occasion. Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P., will preside and introduce the Premier, who will also receive an address of welcome from the Mayor, on behalf of the citizens. A most elaborate programme of games and sports has been carried out, and the day is sure to be a most enjoyable and memorable one for all. The Citizens' Band, of which the Premier is a member, will discourse sweet music during the time of the games. Dinner and supper will be served by Mr. Thomas Mikhael's reputable caterer. You cannot spend the holiday in a more pleasant place than at the Driving Park on Monday next. Come along and bring yourself. Dinner will run half-hourly, beginning at 12.30. Don't look for lower and upper bridge.

His Precise Legal Right.

(London Express.)

An instance of the application of a precocious knowledge of the law by a child has occurred in a Paris public school. In France education is obligatory, but the law cannot compel children to remain at school after the age of thirteen. This law, needless to say, is usually a dead letter, and the question of attendance is left worry entirely to the middle classes. A little girl entered up his books daily in his desk, took her seat and turned toward the

Another Ship Mutinies

VESSELS APPARENTLY EXPECT ATTACK — ORDERS TO SINK BOTH.

London, Saturday, July 4.—A mutiny occurred to the Daily Mail, dated Odessa, July 3, 12.30 a.m., says: "The war at first reported by the authorities that the Kniaz Potemkin Tavrifichesky had surrendered unconditionally, but it is now confirmed that the mutineers, whether right or wrong, joined by the battleships George Pobedonostsi, the officers of which are prisoners.

The vessels are anchored in the roads and are keeping their searchlights vigorously as if expecting an attack during the night. The fleet which is about 15 miles distant. One of the searchlights of the latter is visible.

The information of this second mutiny comes from an absolutely reliable source.

The town is again in darkness except the lamps in the streets which are lighted electrically. All is quiet. There is no traffic on the streets. I saw an arrested sailor brought to the commander's palace. I believe he was better to a hospital. He was shot.

The commander of the troops has received a telegram from the Governor at to sink the rebel ships regardless of a possible bombardment."

FALLING HAIR STOPPED.

Dr. Hanna Cured by Destroying the Parasite Germ that Causes Dandruff.

Baldness follows falling hair; falling hair follows dandruff; dandruff is due to the result of a germ disease. To stop hair-fall you must kill the germ. A hair where it stops the vitality of the hair. To destroy that germ, and prevent it, use well-to-use Dandruff Germicide, and falling hair ceases. There is no other preparation known to do that. Nowhere is it possible to get an article that will destroy the germ. Wherever it has been tried it has proved successful. Dandruff Germicide can't be otherwise, because it utterly destroys the dandruff germ that causes the cause, and removes the effect.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Parisian Co., Detroit, Mich. Dr. Hanna's Germicide, Special agent.

A SILENT TONGUE.

There Are Times When It is the Part of Wisdom Not to Speak.

The best of us talk too much. The essence of power is reserve," said a man who knows.

Jaay a reputation has been built on silence. Many a one is spoiled through rushing prematurely and vainly into speech.

It is safe to be silent when your words would wound. "Faithful are the wounds of a friend, and we can recall, but one wants to be mighty sure of a friend before he risks wounding, if that we are qualified to administer it.

Silence is often the highest duty and courage. It is infinitely better to suffer wrong forever than to utter one follow being less able to cope with you.

Keep still when your words will inflame the anger or discretion. Only a little amount of breath is used in the utterance of words, and we can recall their dislike their friends.

Keep still when you feel you have to say is not for the purpose of exalting yourself.

Shut your lips with a key when you are inspired to babble incontinently of yourself—your plans, your accomplishments, relations, loves, hatreds, hopes and desires. It is by no means a rare friend that one may speak of these things without becoming a foe.

Old Man of the Mountain.

The title "Old Man of the Mountain" was first applied to Napoleon Bonaparte, who founded a formidable grasslands in Syria. As the name was the prince or chief of the sect of the Mohammedans. Having been banished from his country, he took refuge in a cave in Mount Lebanon, gathered around him a band of fellows, and began to rame the terror alike of Christians, Jews and Turks. They paid the most implicit obedience to his commands and believed that if they sacrificed their lives for his sake they would be rewarded with the highest joys of Paradise. In 1257 [illegible] "Old Man," as they called themselves, continued to be a terror to the country. Wherever their chief, the "Old Man of the Mountain," commanded, he was sure to be obeyed. Some of his agents were ordered to murder the regent. This is the origin of the use of the word assassin for a secret murderer.

He Might Have.

A Tennessee settler was asked to go over, or, as it is expressed, on the river, to show his prize cucumbers. He was very ill for years, and during these long years he learned to be lonely, to live with himself and with God, and to be at once incurable. Yet even in the dreadful time men will attend to business, in the siege of life. They make love in the times of famine and pestilence, they quietly sell war, and form projects that, as if they were to live in luxury and delight for a thousand years.

A Need in Schoolmasters.

We should like to see in schoolmasters that every schoolmaster before the age of thirty should for one full year at least be banished from the school world and from the academic groves, and for that year he had to work as a hayer, a reaper, or a commercial traveler, or a bagman, or something strenuous, with no time to think of books, and no chance to see a view of the school course.—London Truth.

Enjoy What You Have.

Don't worry about your health. Keep in good condition and get as much fresh air as you can. People who are always puttering over themselves are like hens—they don't enjoy what they have.

Good humor is the health of the soul.

Greer, Disciplinarian

By Ethel Barrington

Copyright, 1905, by Ethel Barrington

Rezana's dog was an ill conditioned cur. He was a fighter by nature and never met his master and delight in meeting him. It most emphatically for those who sought Rezana's company. He was devoted to her and to her alone, but she was so proud of his fine ribbon and ugliness that she endured his faults with equanimity. Nevertheless, there were times when even she was forced to admit that he was the world.

One day he mauled at her fellow, Goldard Greer, and that was the beginning of trouble. Greer was a fighter by nature, and he had designs on each other perhaps because they regard, he disliked Rezana's dog, her by the collar and bore him to the library, where he administered a strong argument, after which he tossed the smoked animal loose down the hall. Then he returned to the library parlor, snapping his cuffs, but otherwise as tame, as he stepped short as he faced Rezana, who looked like up out the smoking.

"A truly fine performance," she declared scathingly. "There is your ring. I never wish to see you again."

"What's up? I don't understand."

"Up is behind you. You have shown me your true character before it was too late. Never speak to me again."

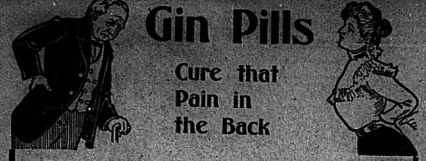

"Never mind my wound. He tried to bench, but not very successfully.

"Never," she repeated angrily. "You know the old proverb—'A dog, a woman and a walnut tree.' The more you beat them the better they are."

Rezana's eyes blazed as though she almost hated him. "Another character assassin. "Oh, is that your theory? Well, I'll tell you that you can shower my dog or any animal and keep my regard that you appear to crave. Good day, sir. I discovered your true character before it was too late."

Greer stood his ground. He tried to bench, but not very successfully.

"Never," she repeated angrily. "You know the old proverb—'A dog, a woman and a walnut tree.' The more they're beaten

Gin Pills

Cure that Pain in the Back

That sharp shooting pain—that dull, steady ache—means something wrong with the kidneys. Pain is nature's danger signal. Where there is pain in the back or through the hips, there is an unnatural condition, or disease of the kidneys.

GIN PILLS cure that pain in the back, by curing the kidneys.

They neutralize the acid urine—stop uric acid from poisoning the blood and inflaming the nerves—soothe and quiet the pain—make urination natural and regular—sharpen the appetite—make one sleep sound—build up the whole system.

GIN PILLS have saved hundreds from chronic kidney trouble and dreaded Bright's Disease.

If you have any kidney trouble, or suspect that the kidneys are not doing their work properly—and especially if you suffer with pain in the back—don't hesitate to get GIN PILLS. They cure or your money back.

STRICTURE AND KINDRED DISEASE CURED.

"I have been a sufferer for many years. I finally became discouraged. I had no confidence in anything and in anybody. I was so nervous that I could not sleep. I had a desire to urinate frequently. I had a pain in the back. I had a terrible headache. I had no ambition. I had no energy. I had no courage. I had no hope. I had spent hundreds of dollars in vain. Finally I commenced to use Dr. Kennedy's Discovery. I had not used it long before I received a letter from the firm that I had been dealing with, telling me that they understood I had been using Dr. Kennedy's Discovery, and that if I felt that it was doing me no good I was to write to them. I have pleasure in writing to inform them that I am entirely cured."

IT is not the amount of heat you possess in the boiler that makes a successful heating plant. It is the quality of heat you use.

We have succeeded in designing a boiler that holds and uses more of the best generated heat than any other boiler on the market.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

Sides of the fire-pot slant inwards above the fire, so that instead of the best sliding up through the flame, it is sharply forced against these inclined walls. In first water section nearest fire, the heat is cut off as soon as the water in that surface is exposed.

The inn also sheltered a band of robbers and cutthroats, the others known as of which were the four hilltop cutthroats, and had jumped upon Vandal. In response to the cries for Robert that gentleman, a rotund and ruddy faced captain, appeared.

"Here, here! What is the matter? Have you lost your senses?" he demanded.

"Sir, this place is knock down inns-keys and take their gold. You will hang out a sign next. 'Friar Here Rewly Robbed Here!'"

"Shut up, you fool!" exclaimed one of the men who was on Vandal's head. "We are not robbing this fellow. We caught him trying to rob you."

A loud laugh greeted this witty speech.

"Hold me! That fellow rob me! Did he take the silver?"

"Oh, no. He took nothing. But he was trying to rob you of the good name of a soldier."

"Oh, oh! Base impudence! Have you not already killed the beast?"

"Not quite," said another of the gang. "I feel him pawing under me. However, I think killing now is beyond a punishment. What do you say, Pinon Robard?"

"Well, now, after all, I think we had better go slow," said a third. "The fellow has been severely punished. What did he do, after all, more than a good, gallant gentleman in Outre have done? He simply admired our good Mother Robard."

"So! Well, it must have been the new power, I tell you," said Pinon Robard. "But, even so, is the thing to make the old woman look smart."

"It was the spread," came a struggling, strangling voice from under two men. "Let me up! Let me up! I can explain."

"That is what I was about to say," added the former speaker. "Here we are thumping the life out of a man just for the fun of it. Robard screamed. Let 'here is she now.' She fled from the house. Give the fellow a chance to explain."

With evident reluctance they got up from Vandal's prostrate body, and he slowly and painfully got to his feet.

"The devil! You fellows are brave!" he said, as he looked around to see if he could run.

"Well, I must say it is not the way we do in Europe."

"Ho! Frauds! I have been there," said Robard. "Now don't give you a chance to explain them. The gallantry of the robbery; the murder."

"Give the fellow a chance to explain, I say!" insisted the advocate of fair play.

Vandal staggered to a chair and begged for a glass of cognac. This was brought him, and after swallowing that and gathering his wits and energies he began his explanation.

"You see," he said, "I and my two companions were—where are they now? They deserted me in my need. Find the fools, I say, and they will create a disturbance. They will run half way through Dauphin telling that I am being murdered here."

The one who seemed to be the leader of the gang was much alarmed at this as Vandal seemed to be. He at once stepped outside and gave orders to some hangers on to find the two strangers in Outre and return them to him with every assurance of safety.

"Here, here! Have you lost your senses?" he demanded.

This matter being then attended to, Vandal continued:

"You see, I and my companions came from Outre in search of a young fellow who had robbed us—that is, who had robbed a friend of mine of several thousand francs."

"What is this the fellow is saying?" asked Pinon Robard, who had not spoken when quiet was restored. She did not understand French.

"I will speak German," said Vandal, who was quite at his ease by this time.

"For see I and my companions came from Paris in search of a young fellow who robbed a friend of mine of several thousand francs in money, some valuable papers and his clothing. We traced the rascal to Strasburg, and then from city to city and stopped through Prussia. We lost the trail at last, but the direction had steadily been toward Dresden. Arriving there that he had friends here, we believed he would make for the country.

"We knew that he left Paris in the disguise of a woman. He arrived at Strasburg in the same disguise. And one day the mysterious part of it is that he wore a gown the counterpart of the one Pinon Robard now has on. I am sure of this, and was so sure that the moment I set eyes on the gown I believed the wearer of it to be the thief.

"To make sure, I stepped up to the lady, and, thinking more than ever that I was right, rudely raised her head in order to see her features. Imagine my amazement and consternation when I beheld the sweet face of Lady Pinon Robard. Or, I assure you, gentlemen, it was a most grievous error on my part, and no one could regret it more than I did, especially since I felt your billiard cues ramming me in the stomach.

"Well, the evil is not so great, if the good frau can forgive me."

A look of great significance passed from Robard to the younger of the two. This was his son.

"And you say this fellow was a thief?" asked the elder Robard. "How much did you say he stole?"

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the tartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a t of a lexicon of clothes, style and correct- ss. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, , aren't enough, for unless that snappy, unty appearance—characteristic of our ex- llent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't hat the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not st "luck." It's due to our knowledge of hat the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Can we find you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

George Johnson's Story.

(Hamilton Times.)

George Johnson, Ottawa, is re- sponsible for the following: A some- what amusing error said to have been made by a Cashian printer in de- ciphering copy for matters for a pol- itical meeting. The writer did not use the motto in question, although he was at the gathering. Probably Mr. Johnson gave the committee the idea. Have it taken down before the gathering!

Mr. Johnson with Sir John Macdonald on his tour in 1891 through Western Ontario. The party was headed by William Meredith, was billed to speak in Chatham in the theatre. I went into the building in the after- noon to see the decorations and the mottoes. One of the latter on the wall in large letters caught my eye as it referred to Mr. Meredith and read, "Our nobby Irish Comedian." Not relish- ing at the paper-writing from which the artist drew, which I found that the sentence certainly did look like that. A little effort enabled me to decipher the hieroglyphics. The motto really read "Our Meredith, our Noble Irish Comedian."

ST. AGNES' SCHOOL CLOSING.

A SPLENDID YEAR'S RECORD—A EVENT SATISFACTORY PRIZE LIST.

On the two closing evenings of the very large attendances of friends and relatives were present in the basement and chapel of St. Agnes' School in their at- tractive evidence the public interest taken in the good work done by the school, and the varied and attractive programme presented by the pupils spoke volumes for the quality of the education imparted, the great spirit which animates the school, and the splendid opportunities for a general training in all departments, of music, art, literature and language, which this school affords.

The exhibition of physical culture on Tuesday evening by seniors and juniors, under the instruction of Miss Hales was a revelation of soft move- ments, graces and harmony of motion, rhythm and cadence at step, but al- so of a healthful development of strength and endurance, which cer- tainly fall to lay the foundation of good health, vigor and self-reliance. The very tasteful and artistic arrange- ment of the drawings and paintings by the pupils, and the group, showed clearly the development and progress which they had received, and the ad- mitted instruction of Miss Armstrong, whose accomplished pupils they are. In the reading of Art was apparent. These works of art formed a most suitable setting for the exhibitions of skill in marching, Swedish exercises, Calisthenics, fancy drills, and a pantomime of the Lesson Bell, which delighted the spectators.

On the second evening a most at- tractive musical and literary pro- gramme was rendered by the pupil- representatives of the various classes and departments, who did themselves and their teachers great credit, and evinced a proficiency which showed not merely excellent training but solid work in preparation, but also skilled direction and care of those who have been charged with the respon- sibility of their training. The music during the past most successful and delightful.

The musical part of the programme was delightfully performed by Misses Kerrison, Helen Vermilyea, Mary Ashcroft, Winnifred Gibbs, Helen Houston, Charlotte Whitbrill, Edna Benjamin, Hall Sills and M. Hall, and the literary portion was in the hands of Misses Constance Sloan, Mary Ashcroft, Louise Sills, Char- lotte Whitbrill, Agnes Houston, Ger- trude Purdon, Helen Harrington, Mabel Ashcroft and Miss Brady. The French and German dialogues and recitations were remarkable for their correctness as to idiom in the answer in pronunciation and showing a grasp of the genius of those lan- guages far more than mechanical. Those taking part were Misses Mc- Lloquist, and pupils and member are to be congratulated.

The readings and scenes from Silas Marner, by Miss Brady, were given with much spirit and feeling, the manner in which the plot was worked out, the dramatic and narrative parts were appropriately taken, and as to leave the impression of a com- plete whole.

Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, M. A., acted as chairman of the evening, which followed, and was assisted by the Rev. Canon Bedford-Jones, Rev. G. Sills, ex-M.P.P., and Lieut.-Col. Foster, M.A., who in some very appropriate and felicitous remarks in connection with the prizes which were presented, to the happy winners, spoke in connection with the cred- itable work of the school, and the part of congratulation to all Belleville citizens in the interest, care and energy displayed by the Direc- tress, Miss Dupont, the Lady Vice- Principal, and the accomplished staff of teachers associated with the last young her, have been crowned with success.

While it may be invidious to dis- criminate, where all have proved to be called to the musical record for the year, the results of which have been phenomenal. Of the eighteen pupils in Toronto Conservatory of Music in Harmony, History of Music, and all passed, and with high honors and sixteen with first-class honors, fourteen with honor certi- ficates, and the remainder passed papers. In piano the second year pupils, Miss Gertie Wetherall, pre- sented with honors. In vocal two pu- pils, one with honors.

CHEESE MEN MEET.

EASTERN CANADA PRODUCERS AND DEALERS DISCUSS MAN- FACTURE AND CARE OF GOODS.

The cheese instructors of Eastern Ontario, to the number of twenty-six, have been visiting the various cold storage warehouses and other places where cheese is handled in Montreal, assembled in the Council Chamber of the Montreal Board of Trade shortly after noon yesterday, where they had a meeting with the members of the wholesale cheese and butter trade of the City of Montreal.

Arthur Hodgson, president of the Butter and Cheese Association, pre- sided. Daniel Derbyshire, M.P., who is a member of the party, referred to the fact that this band of instruct- ors were visiting Montreal in the in- terest of the entire trade. They had been in the cheese trade regard to benefit it, and during their stay in Montreal they had received nothing but courteous treatment at the hands of the wholesale men of Mont- real. The Ontario member went on to state that they were not such a part of the great business of dairying in the Province of Quebec as they themselves.

The next speaker was Chief Dairy- strator Publow, who stated that regular visits of inspection to Montreal was to visit the merchants, to see how could only speak all for the cheese. (Laughter.)

Chief Instructor Publow.

Chief Instructor Publow of the Eastern Ontario division, gave a lec- ture and address to the party, and he- lis said that now that they had all the cheese together in the warehouses of merchants, examining their ware- houses, the Montreal men and their systems of conducting business, it was not up to the merchants to prove not thieves, as to the quality of the cheese sold in the country. In fact, he could not see any reason for the action which was passed as finest could be sold as such. Mr. Publow also said he told the merchants that by an- nouncing that their cheese was fin- est such they were really not help- ing the factory-man. As to the idea sought that he could make inferior cheese and get paid as much for it probably, as if he had taken a great deal of trouble over it. (Laughter.) He encouraged the merchants to buy cheese on quality, purely and simply cutting them when they were ready to be sold.

This would be better for all in the end. He also gave instructions that they were not properly performing their duties in that they permitted cheese makers to go on making cheese which they knew was not up to the finest without making a note of it. He said as they went back to their posts all should do their best and the cheese buyers were leaving inferior cheese behind them in the mak- ers' hands. In many of these cases it might be that the cheese was the best the maker could think out of the milk he had to work with, but what the maker's fault. Referring to some of the cheese which he had seen stored in Montreal warehouses during their few days' visit, Mr. Publow said that, he would go on record as say- ing that some of the cheese was not up to the standard of the cheese makers than any- thing else.

Prof. Reddick, Chief Dairy Com- missioner, spoke at some length upon the superiority of the Danish system of making butter. The milk from the cow, he intended to make a special study of the matter this summer. The Danes manage to pro- duce as much milk out of their cows as Canadians. He spoke of the im- portance of selection of the herds. He had inaugurated a dairy in Che- shire with a view to the better se- lection of herds, and was encouraged to say, he had not received that no- tice to quit. He hoped that when one would expect, the farmers in- terested in the dairy would do their job, however, hoped in the end his undertaking a good deal by persever- ance.

TO REMEDY THE TROUBLE.

PURER WATER TO BE SUPPLIED ON SOUTH JOHN STREET.

The Medical Health Officer of the city informed the Intelligencer that he had received a number of com- plaints from residents of city water taken by a citizens from his tap on South John street, and had inform- ed the authorities of the matter in the same. It was certainly unfit for use. A sample of water in the house is taken from a dead end of the ser- vice pipe, and this is the evidence to be in evidence. The waterworks engineer will remedy the matter by the fact by putting in a pipe where the water is running continuously through the main and thus obviate the trouble.

Trenton Harbor.

Mr. W. H. Noble, an official of the Marine Department, was in Tren- ton this week and was shown over the harbor by Mr. R. Weddell, Mayor Sills and Mr. Ed. Bird. He says the necessity of a light house and better depth of harbor entrance has been ver- sed pressed upon Mr. Noble, who promised to report the matter to the Department.

THE SUCCESSFUL CANDIDATE A BAY OF QUINTE BOY.

An election was held in East Pres- burg, England, on Thursday of this week resulting in a victory for Mr. J. Allen Baker, Liberal.

Mr. Baker is a native of the Bay of Quinte district, of United Empire parallel stock, and was educated in the Trenton High School. He has been a member of the London County Council since 1895, having been elect- ed to the seat vacated by Lord Newberry. He is a free trader and a land law reformer. Mr. Baker has been actively identified with the educa- tional of adult schools, and the movement for the better housing of the poor. The cry of place was ine- fectively raised against him.

NOT GUILTY OF ABANDONMENT.

MAGISTRATE BLAKE DECIDES A CASE OF DESERTION.

Ethel Clapp, of Thurlow, who was charged with abandoning her child, was yesterday afternoon acquitted by the Police Magistrate of the al- leged offence. The evidence showed that the mother left the child at the home of Mr. Jra Simmons, where his son, (Wallace, lived, who, she swore, was the father of the child. Mr. Sim- mons testified that she was insuffect- ive to care for the child.

Mr. Jra Simmons testified as to the child being left in the door of his home by Mrs. Clapp and he had Mr. Ct. S. Johnson come and take it away.

Mr. W. S. Morden, who appeared on behalf of the accused, argued that the Crown had not made out a case of abandonment.

After some argument between counsel, the Magistrate dismissed the case.

Mr. Anderson for the Crown, and Mr. Morden for the accused.

Mining Notes.

The old Wallbridge property, near Queensboro, now the Silver King, is being operated by a Buffalo com- pany.

Chief Engineer Evans has been surveying a route for a spur from the Central to the mine at the pyrite mine.

The large demand for mica and consequent rise in value has caused a renewed activity in the Syd- enham district.

The B. Q. Ry. is building a load- ing dock at Actinolite station for the pyrite mine which installed in this new line by the end of the month.

The installation of the six drill compressor plant at the Wilbur Mo- ritz mine has been completed. It is expected that underground operat- ions will be resumed in the near future.

After thoroughly repairing its mill, the Deloro Corundum Co. is now pre- paring to resume operations. The mill has been idle for nearly a year, and a new instlined tramway has been erected from the mine to the mill. The machinery, pumps, magnetic separators, and crushers have also been installed in the mill and grad. The mine is now in good condition for operations made, all tending to in- dicate a large and steady output in production of corundum. It is an- nounced that the company will build a Mr. S. G. Kerr, M.M., as manager, Mr. Kerr has been with the Cor- poration's plant for another year.

The Artistic Taste.

(Dundas Advertiser.)

A young woman of great, per- haps too great, sensibility, begged to be excused from visiting an aunt who lived in an old-fashioned house, where there was a "spare room" and a "best parlor." "There is an engraving of a blacksmith's shop in the dining room," said she hysterically, "and I can't expect me to eat my dinner there—I smell the hoofs."

A similar criticism came from one who suffered not from over-refine- ment, but from a naturally quick dis- cernment. She was a woman of recently acquired wealth, who went into an art gallery and asked for a painting by Rembrandt. "I have just what you want," said the dealer. He show- ed her a beautiful picture of Ruth, but she looked at it for a few min- utes, and then said: "I want one that is pretty." "Not the drawing room an- swered the woman, evidently sur- prised. "You couldn't have a new in a draw- ing room."

AMONG THE ESKIMOS.

Manslaughter in Ivo Quinnipeu, and Palpramen of Fur Seas.

Manslaughter is by no means unom- mon among the Eskimos of the Arctic circle, according to Professor Billman, but invariably leads to a kind of ven- detta between the relatives of the pris- oner and those of the murdered per- son. Again, if a young married man or his wife dies the surviving party has the right to kill the cause. Children should be or she not be in a position to guarantee their maintenance. Aged persons, on the other hand, are with- ingly supported by their relatives. Unmarried women become burdens no matter how badly they behave. The Eskimo explains their conduct by say- ing that the children have no power or understanding and therefore have no idea of wrong and responsibility.

Polygamy is unusual, as there is a scarcity of Eskimo women. In spite of this, however, the professor met with several men who had four wives. The exchange of wives is very frequent. Wives must obey their husbands abso- lutely, even to the death. Husband maintain that their wives must be- come weak-minded, although they pre- vent their desire for supremacy in the household from becoming too power- ful.

OLIVE OIL.

The Method by Which It Is Made on Tuscan Farms.

The olives, green and all, are first crushed in a stone mill run by ox pow- er. The crushed pulp is then trans- ferred in flat wicker baskets to the "torchio," or oaken press, from which the oil comes into a vat below. The presses at Dicesle are very old, shab- bily carved with the dust and de- vices of some early padrona. Tremen- dous pressure is applied through a primitive capstan and lever, which the men work by heavy wooden levers. The pressed and crushed olives stand floor in a track much worn by the feet of laboring generations. There are commonly two or three squeezings of the pulp, the product of the first be- ing of the finest quality. But the pres- ent, once begun, must be carried for- ward continuously, or the oil should spoil in the making. It is finally drawn off into large earthen jars of lacquered pattern, like those in which the Forty Thieves of the Arabian tale con- cealed themselves for nefarious pur- poses. And it stands thus for a week at the spindalo of Dicesle, which is the "chiarasto," after which it is ready for use. From "Life on a Tus- can Farm," by T. S. Sullivan, in Scrib- ner's.

CANARY BIRDS.

The Plant of Them Are Raised in the Harz Mountains.

The chief breeding ground for cana- ry birds is among the Harz mountains, but of late years only the finest birds are reared in that district. The trade was transferred to Belgravia, in the province of Hanover, where pose is the principal seat of the pyrit- ine. The most important market for these birds is the United States, which takes quite 100,000 birds a year. Great numbers are also sent, with the tin- ned is followed by Brazil, Chile and the Argentine Republic.

The principal dealers have large fac- tories which can turn out material for 1,000 bird cages a day. The manufact- ure takes this away to their homes and finishes it off in the cages. Journeymen, who each have charge of 1,000 birds in the breeding season, are sent throughout the Atlantic and on their return very- ago bring back Mexican and Cuban birds, which are much prized.

About 250,000 canaries are bred ev- ery year in Germany, the trade in- eolve £50,000, gone chiefly into the pockets of the peasants.—London Tit- tyaph.

ENGLISH ROYAL VETO.

It Is Practically Extinct, Not Having Been Used Since 1708.

The earliest instance of the exercise of the royal veto was when King Hen- ry VIII., shortly after the battle of Spurs, refused to assent to any Yarliament, (the king will consider it) to a petition for the appointment of a commission of suits at common law into chancery. The commission was appointed, dem- ing succeeding reigns until that of Queen Anne, who by a resolution of the House of Lords in the very interesting power in refusing the sovereign's as- sent to the Malt Tax Bill for Scotland, passed by the lords and commons in the session of 1707-8. This is recorded in the journals of the house of lords.

Since 1708 the veto has never been exercised, and is practically extinct. Sovereigns of royal prerogative have passed forward to the days of the reign of Wil- liam and Mary, who died in 1702. Mr. Bagehot considers that this power is extinct, and added that even Queen Victoria must sign her own death war- rant if both houses present it to her signature.—London Standard.

SENTENCED IN NOVEMBER.

Christian Scientists Give Their Own Trial and Adjournment is Made.

Toronto, July 1.—A few minutes after 9 o'clock this afternoon for Mr. Justice Ardagh, in conjunction with the wife of Mrs. Sarah Stallybrass, Mrs. Isabella Grahl, Mrs. Elizabeth Hall and Mrs. Mary Hall, Christian Scientists, found guilty of being accessories after the fact of the late William Goodfellow.

His Lordship stated that Mrs. Hall's name had only been furnished with a copy of the evidence on the 30th of May. In the case the argument could be heard by the Court of Appeal. It was agreed that the ladies named in the indictment should appear before the Court on the 6th November, for sentence. The Court did not desire to add to the last sentence. Mr. H. Cassells, Q.C., on behalf of the ladies, asked that they be present in November. The others were likely over bail in $500 to appear.

GOVERNMENT DEFEATED.

Premier Reid Unable to Form a Commonwealth Cabinet.

Ottawa, July 1.—The Minister of Trade and Commerce received a telegraphic despatch stating that the Australian Government has been defeated. The Australian Ministerial party, under the premiership of Hon. George Reid, at the last election, December, 1895, held 36 seats; the opposing party, under Mr. Deakin, 34, and the labor party, of which Mr. Watson is leader, 28. The Labor men in the fight over the Australian arbitration bill, as stated, the Ministry by April, 1904. The Watson Ministry was formed later on, however, by a lack of opposition support, and Premier Reid was again recalled on to form the present Parliament, the Governor refusing a dissolution.

INCOME FROM SUCCESSION TAX.

Nearly Hundred Thousand Dollars Increase Over Half of Last Year.

Toronto, July 1.—Returns from the succession duties tax shows a big increase for the last half year over the last night.

The total receipts to June 30, 1905, aggregate $212,583.64, as compared with an income of $123,674.74 for the same period last year. The increase therefore is $91,017.72.

From the month of June just closed, the revenue amounts to $15,144.41. This does not include any of the big duties on the Cobalt properties or Sutherland legacies — which have recently become liable by law, but which have not yet been wound up.

Berlin Doubtful.

Berlin, July 1.—It is semi-officially stated that notwithstanding the extremely optimistic views of the French newspapers regarding an agreement reached or nearly reached at Berlin between Germany on the Moroccan question, the diplomatic circles here are inclined to consider that the affair will be settled immediately.

Paris, July 1.—The Council of Ministers this morning after Premier Rouvier negotiations yesterday and a communication was issued stating that they are progressing satisfactorily toward an agreement.

Insurance Rates Drop.

Montreal, July 1.—After the years of steady increase in insurance rates the Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association yesterday morning made its first reduction. It was decided to reduce all the general surcharges of 15 cents per $100 insured dollars to be imposed after the great Toronto conflagration. The reduction goes into effect in Ontario and Quebec on July 1st.

Police Come Off Wagons.

Chicago, July 1.—Because the teamsters' strike is officially ended by next Monday or not, the police guards are to be taken off the wagons of strike-bound firms in the business district of the city. The policemen thus released will be employed to guard threatening stations. Mayor Dunne made this decision this morning.

Frank Hollingshead Shot.

Charlton, New Ontario, July 1.—Frank Hollingshead, a young farmer of Sandfield, Ont., was accidentally shot by Robert Preston, an employee, a few days ago. He was carried on a stretcher by eastern Algoma settlers through the bush, and sent by boat and train to North Bay, but died before he got to life. He is a graduate of Queen's University, aged about 25.

Failure of the Knies Potemkine, However, Was the Result of a Plot of 20 Sailors Who Were Members of a Revolutionary Organization—Chats in Bombardment of Odessa Did No Damage—Causes of Firing.

St. Petersburg, July 1.—The official version of the mutiny on the battleship Potemkin, which has been received here, says the guns on entirely new light on it. It is claimed that the mutiny on board the Potemkin was the result of a plot organized by twenty sailors who were members of a revolutionary organization. The plot was discovered and the men arrested, were mere pretexts. When the conditions on board the battleship Potemkin of the battleship to cause the disorders, a few days before the outbreak, asked those who were satisfied to step out, and of the 700 men on board they were in the majority. Whereupon the mutiny broke out, headed by the revolutionists, who are said to have murdered Captain Golikhoff, cast lots and distributed them upon their comrades.

A bloody battle followed. Nine officers and petty officers were killed or wounded, and the remainder, after a fight, after placing the remaining officers in irons, brought the ship to Odessa. Commander Golikhoff was sending these signals when the flag was hoisted when the Knias Potemkine appeared off Odessa.

Assured of Support.

When the body of Golikhoff, the man who was shot by the commander of the vessels, arrived (according to previous reports), was taken to the shore, it was attended by a large number of students and revolutionists, many of whom, it is said, have influential speeches were made, and subsequently the body was carried to the vessel on board the ship and assured the sailors that they would support and continue to cooperate with them.

The sailors paid great attention to the ships in the harbor, and the Potemkin fired a shot along the water front, which was soon answered by the guns of the forts.

During the wild excesses of Wednesday night about three hundred citizens were killed by the troops, and several hundred were wounded, a number of them being Jews. Many dreadful stories pertaining to the disorders.

Shots Did No Damage.

Early Thursday night the Knias Potemkin approached the harbor of Odessa and the blank shots was followed by two solid shots, but they passed over the town and did no damage. It is reported that the battleship then coaled and provisioned from steamers in the harbor and then dropped anchor in the roadstead.

Three wrapped officers were released from when the others were sent ashore. They were taken to the Russian steamers in the harbor, which escaped. Nothing definite is known regarding the 19 surviving compiled from the latest report the officers were the information to the Associated Press.

It was not a revolution. It is merely drunken sailors.

Causes of Bombardment.

Advices received by the Associated Press, from Odessa say the firing in the harbor on the battleship Potemkin was caused by the local authorities arresting a sailor who accused the chief body of Golikhoff, to the graveyard, after the latter had threatened to fire on a public house in the centre of the city. Demolishing the city unless the authorities gave in and surrendered the sailors.

St. Petersburg, July 1.—Martial law has been proclaimed in the following districts at Sebastopol, Nicholaieff and Evian.

The strike at Yonzowesky, Province of Ekaterinoslav, is over. The town resembles a military camp. Infantry and Cossacks are constantly in the streets and courtyards, and are bivouacking there.

BOWEL POISON.

Thousands of Men and Women Poisoned and Don't Know It.

HOW TO FIND OUT.

Bowel poison means blood tainted by foul excretions absorbed from the bowels. Men and women suffer:

If your skin is disfigured by eruptions, boils, pimples, blotches, or sallow complexion; if your head aches and your skin is scaly and rough; if you are constipated, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bad breath; if your head feels heavy and aching, your eyes are sunken, with dark circles around them; if you have cold feet and your hands get sweaty and clammy; if you are nervous, irritable, and peevish seemingly to invite police, impure blood is the cause, and you are liable to have serious trouble right away.

Smith's Purgative Cascarets Pills are the most wonderful blood purifier in the world, for they not only remove the impurities from the blood, but they tone up the entire system so that they will perform their functions naturally. Smith's Purgative Cascarets Pills are the greatest of all tonics for the stomach, liver and bowels, and by their use the whole system is built up and made strong and healthy. Sold by druggists everywhere at 25 cents per box. Manufactured by the Smith Medicine Co., 50 Queen street, Belleville, Ont. Ask for Smith's Purgative Cascarets Pills and get genuine signed W. F. MUTINEERS SURRENDER.

Cowed by Machine Guns, Lines in Battle Array Sailed.

Libau, July 1.—The mutiny of Nicholas Battalion, which began on Tuesday, after a parley with the commander of the garrison, has surrendered unconditionally and returned to duty upon the promise of the Governor that they will be pardoned and the city is being patrolled by the troops.

About four thousand mutinous soldiers and sailors occupied a small area near the port of entry, entrenched by barricades. When the troops arrived the mutineers were surrounded and gave up their arms.

The mutiny started Wednesday night when the soldiers of the garrison and the naval units are known to have been in sympathy with the revolt. They were joined immediately by the strikers, numbering about 2,000 employees—8,000 blue jackets for all the breed of a fine boat is to them, killing men and wounding several, but the mutiny was soon quelled.

They seized the guardhouse, broke open the magazines and looted the ammunition. Pandemonium followed and the streets were filled with soldiers and the barracks attacked the quarters of the police. The mutiny started at midnight and continued the next day.

The city was under martial law Thursday morning. Artillery arrived, and the mutineers were surrounded. Machine guns were placed to command the entrance to the barracks. The mutineers were driven back to the barracks and surrendered.

Much firing ensued with the commander of the Libau army has been heard, but everything is now quiet, and the troops are patrolling the streets and every from the force of the mutineers. The Governor has promised that no further punishment will be inflicted beyond the new provinces. Mr. Monk said it was not the intention of the Government to attempt to introduce a dual language in the Territories. It was introduced in, secure the maintenance of the rights of the minority. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he could not give an answer to that question.

French in New Provinces.

The House then went into committee of the whole on the Alberta Bill, Mr. Oliver 2 was taken up. F. D. Monk moved a resolution, notice of which had been given some days ago, regarding the use of the French language in the new Provinces. Mr. Monk said it was not the intention of the Government to attempt to introduce a dual language in the Territories. It was introduced in, secure the maintenance of the rights of the minority. Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he could not give an answer to that question.

After the dinner adjournment the Prime Minister replied to Mr. Monk. He appreciated the motive which he discussed in the Province of Quebec, and declared that the principle it was based upon was correct. It was for the best interests of the new Provinces that both the English and French tongues should be used. That was of his origin and fact, he could not see how it could be. That he would be for the best.

Mr. Bourassa moved an amendment to the amendment to make French an official language in the new Provinces.

Sprouts Proposes.

Dr. Sproule observed that he was pleased, in this connection, to hear Sir Wilfrid Laurier again with him as he was in 1896, as only four per cent of the Territories were French, and they were not thoroughly in favor of the search and the Sterling, both with headquarters in Ottawa.

TEST CANADIAN MAIL ROUTE.

Best Will Meet Virginian and Make the Run into Sydney.

Ottawa, July 1.—Steps have been passed to rush repairs on the steamer Virginian, so that she may be ready for the Virginian's mail into Sydney on the 15th inst.

The Government has decided to test the question of the most suitable route for mail delivery. With that end in view the steamer Virginian will probably sail from Liverpool July 6th, are to be taken off by the Canada Sunday mail steamer from Sydney probably on the 15th inst. Should the test be successful it is understood that the boats on an intermediate route will be built, and will be waiting to make the run to Montreal.

If repairs on the Virginian are not completed the Lady Laurier will be used, and will make the wireless. There would probably be 48 hour lost through her slow speed.

Customs Revenue Increases.

Ottawa, July 1.—Customs and excise revenue shows a decrease of $11,314 for the month of June, but for the twelve months which ended yesterday there was an increase of $1,500,000. The returns are details for the two periods:

1904 $	2,703,657
1905 $	2,692,343
Decrease $	11,314
1904 $	141,554,971
1905 $	93,063,112
Increase $	1,508,941

Here's a Rare Avec.

Sandwich, July 1.—Leo Pare, recently appointed a marriage license issuer, refused to issue a license to the appointment. Page has always been a Liberal, and Pare is a Conservative. Pare considers himself by accepting office from the Conservatives. Wesley Gauthier has been appointed in Perry stead.

SERVICE AT ST. PAUL'S.

London Will Honor Ambassador Hay As it Did McKinley.

London, July 4.—A memorial service for the late Secretary Hay will be held in St. Paul's cathedral Wednesday afternoon, similar to that held in September, 1901, in memory of President McKinley.

Instead of cancelling the event which had been arranged for the celebration of the 4th of July in London, it has been decided to postpone them until July 8 out of respect for the late Secretary of State, John Hay.

At Cleveland.

Cleveland, July 4.—The casket containing the body of Secretary John Hay arrived here yesterday and was placed in the auditorium of the Chamber of Commerce, where it will remain under military guard until 9.30 o'clock Wednesday, when it will be taken to the chapel in Lake View cemetery for the funeral rites.

GODERICH ELEVATOR BURNS.

Held Over 320,000 Bushels of Wheat—Loss Will Be Great.

Goderich, July 4.—The Goderich Elevator and Transit Co.'s elevator was totally destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon, together with about 320,000 bushels of wheat in storage.

The elevator was valued at $127,000 and insured for $85,000. There was also $5,000 insurance on the power house adjoining, which was saved, slightly damaged.

It was impossible to ascertain last night the amount of the insurance on the wheat, each owner having placed his own insurance, and most of it is owned by outside parties.

The wind happened to be blowing across the harbor, or the Goderich Milling Co.'s elevator would also likely have been destroyed.

The End of Autonomy.

Government Designs the Third Reading for Wednesday.

House Had Its Working Clothes on and Put Through Much Overhanging Work on Monday—Old Matters Well Cleaned Up —The J. J. Hill Railway Bill Put Through Last Jumps and Stands for Third Reading.

Ottawa, July 4.—Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick, before the adjournment of the House last night, said it was the intention of the Government to take up the Saskatchewan bill in committee today and deal get, if possible, to the second reading. Then on Wednesday it was decided to bring each bill on for the third reading, and on that day dispose of the autonomy bills.

House In Working Clothes.

The House, in truth, had its working clothes on yesterday. The hot weather has apparently made everyone from the Premier down to the much-bemedalled veteran doorkeeper anxious to get away.

Many of the outstanding estimate items were polished off and the slate swept comparatively clean of old matters. The menu dished up consisted of private bills, public bills and estimates. For an hour and a half the chamber of the Commons resembled the Railway Committee after a redhot sitting.

Stands For Third Reading.

The railway bill that has caused so much stir in committee this session, and which has been described by some very plain speaking, was put over the last jumps and now stands for the third reading.

Messrs. Borden and Foster were both absent, and Mr. Barker said he understood that as Mr. Foster wished to have an amendment but could not possibly be on hand to-day, that an arrangement had been arrived at between the members of the Government to defer the bill. Sir Wilfrid said that no such arrangement had been made and insisted that the bill be proceeded with.

Against Foster's Amendment.

The Minister of Railways announced that the Government had considered Mr. Foster's amendment and that it would not be well to impose such restrictions. The amendment was to the effect that before the committee should be permitted to deflect its line into American territory the Governor in Council should be satisfied that such deflection was necessary in order to overcome some physical difficulty on the Canadian side.

Mr. Henderson of Halton repeated his arguments in favor of an all-Canadian road.

Mr. Galliher retorted that British Columbia members were quite able to look after the interests of that Province.

Mr. Henderson was very glad to hear it, but showed that in previous instances such consideration for the Province had not been manifested.

The Minister of Justice intimated that certain changes in the wording and which has been necessary in order that trifle might be avoided in the future. After some further desultory discussion the bill was reported.

Special Tuberculosis Committee.

A special committee is to be organized to look into the question of the suppression of tuberculosis. The matter was brought up by Mr. Perley and concurred in. Those who will form the committee are: Messrs. Barr, Belcourt, Black, Cash, Chisholm, Davis, Gordon, Hughes (P. E. I.), Johnston (Lambton), Lawrence Lovell, Miller, Pelletier, Pardee, Pugsley (Marquette), Schaffner, Scholl (Oxford), Smith (Nichola, Colombia), Thompson and Perley.

The Senate will be invited to make it a joint committee.

Praise for N. W. M. P.

When the House went into committee of supply Sir Wilfrid made an extended statement regarding the vote required for the Northwest Mounted Police, and in the course of it paid a high tribute to the work being done by that excellent organization. Col. Hughes thought that the Government should consider the matter of scrip for lands for the wives of those born in 1885. Sir Wilfrid Laurier contented himself with the remark that the Government did not see a way to reconsider the question at the present time. Mr. Herron also pleaded for a recon sideration of the matter.

After the vote had gone through the new Minister of the Interior put through several items required to be provided for surveys.

A resolution was passed authorizing provision for the inspection of water powers, and an act founded thereon was introduced and read a first time.

The Metis System.

A bill to amend the Dominion lands act was read a third time. W. F. Maclean drew attention to the fact that large quantities of American raw furs were being imported and sold as Canadian whitkey. He was assured that such liquor could not have the bonded stamp of the Inland Revenue Department. Mr. Maclean also suggested that the decimal system of weights and measures were to be adopted in the future as contemplated in the statute no better beginning could be made than in the Inland Revenue Department. Hon. Mr. Brodeur thought the suggestion an excellent one, and promised to look into it.

W. F. Maclean, when the bill respecting an amendment of the naturalization act was taken up, contended that under existing conditions foreigners coming to this country and becoming naturalized in reality became Canadians, and not British subjects. The men might go into other countries after becoming naturalized Canadians and become subjects of these countries. The bill was read a third time.

Summer Holidays.

Ottawa, July 4.—The Railway Commission have decided not to sit during the months of July and August, unless cases of an urgent character should present itself.

Death of Thomas Ridout.

Ottawa, July 4.—Thomas Ridout, one of the pioneers in the Federal civil service, died yesterday afternoon. The late Mr. Ridout, was 75 years of age.

RUSSIAN CRUISER SAVES LIVES.

French Steamer Is Wrecked Off the Arabian Coast.

Aden, Arabia, July 4.—The Russian auxiliary cruiser Rion arrived here yesterday, having on board 418 persons from the French steamer Chodoc, from Saigon for Bordeaux, which is ashore off Cape Guardafui, at the mouth of the Gulf of Aden.

The Rion, which was homeward bound from Batavia, was attracted by the signals of the survivors, who managed to get ashore at Cape Guardafui despite the hostility of the natives.

Only a few lives were lost during the transfer of the passengers and crew from the Chodoc to the shore.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER.

Government Appoints Commission to Look Into Uruguay Outrage.

Ottawa, July 4.—Canada at last is going to make an independent investigation into the Agnes D. Donohue affair. Sandford H. Pelton, K. C., of Yarmouth, has been commissioned to visit Uruguay and ascertain the facts. Heretofore negotiations have been carried on through imperial channels. This method has been found too deliberate. The captain and mate of the schooners are still in prison in Montevideo on a conviction of having stolen seals.

DR. JOHNSTON, M.P., DEAD.

Liberal Member For West Lambton Dies in Ottawa.

Ottawa, July 4.—Dr. Johnston, M.P. for West Lambton, died at 12.22 this morning. Death was due from blood poisoning, following an attack of erysipelas. Dr. Thomas George Johnston was elected to the House of Commons as a Liberal to represent West Lambton at a bye-election in 1898, and was re-elected at the subsequent general elections. He was born in Barnia in 1849.

Circus Employe Fined.

Quebec, July 4.—James Jordan, the negro connected with Lemon Bros.' circus, and one of the quartet arrested for complicity in the Roberval outrage, was committed to stand his trial at Roberval yesterday. William Justin, one of the prisoners, pleaded guilty to carrying firearms and was fined $10 and costs or a month's imprisonment.

Cornwall Strikers Beaten.

Cornwall, July 4.—The strike of the motormen and conductors of the Cornwall Electric Street Railway was called off last night, and it is understood, that most of the men will return to work to-day at the old scale of wages, 13 cents an hour. They struck last week, asking first 17 and then 15 cents.

Last of Boxer Indemnity.

Pekin, July 4.—The final letter in recently agreement was signed Sunday, the Russo-Chinese Bank difficulty having been removed. China, therefore, will liquidate on the basis originally proposed. The affair is regarded as satisfactorily settled.

The Manitoba School Law

In an interview with a Toronto reporter, a short time ago, the Hon. Colin Campbell, Attorney-General of Manitoba, explained what the school system is in that Province. He said:

"In 1890 a compromise was arranged between Premier Greenway and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by it the Remedial Bill was withdrawn and a clause inserted in the Educational Act to the effect that where there were ten children in a school section speaking a tongue other than English, it might be demanded that that language be taught in the schools. This amendment was drawn by Prof. Bryce, of Winnipeg, who so strongly advocated the education clauses of the Autonomy Bills for the new provinces."

At the time this "compromise," if such it may be termed, was effected, it was supposed to apply to the French people only. Since then, however, other complications have arisen and other people settled in the province without becoming assimilated with the English-speaking population. Several of these demanded that their language be taught. As a result there are now three normal schools where teachers are trained to teach foreign tongues. At St. Boniface, is the French Normal School, at Alton the German School; last of all to be founded was the college at Winnipeg where Galician instructors are taught. It will not be long before the Doukhobours and Finlanders will demand their schools; so that instead of having an amalgamated people, the Canadian Northwest will continue to be foreign and class. Would it not be better to have Separate Schools pure and simple, in which the English language is taught and not a Babel of languages?

KISS HER.

Say, young man! If you're a wife,
Kiss her.
Every morning of your life,
Kiss her.
Every evening when the sun
Marks your day of labor done,
Get you homeward on the run—
Kiss her.

Even though you're feeling bad,
Kiss her.
If she's out of sorts and sad,
Kiss her.
Act as if you meant it, too;
Let the whole true heart of you
Speak its ardor when you do—
Kiss her.

If you think it "soft" you're wrong
Kiss her.
Love like that will make you strong,
Kiss her.
It's how her husband now, but let
Her guess—he'll never get,
Every blessed chance you get,
Kiss her.

Every good wife lets her man
Kiss her.
Be a man then, when you can;
Kiss her.
If you'd strike with telling force
As the Evil of Divorce,
Adopt this simple course;
Kiss her.

According to J. R. Brantford milk story we think a side line could be added to the milkman's industry—namely: Undertaking.

"Say, Mr.," Don't you think if the street cleaners would remove all the oil lies in the street railway, it will somewhat affect the Old Boys' Reunion?"

We told our kind enquirer that he need not worry, even were the old lies all removed from Front street, new "lies" could be made with our old boys.

Yesterday not being a working day Big Jim's street automobile didn't frighten the horses quite so much as the other faster and more giddy "automobilites,"—those fellows you know who dart around the corner when you least expect them.

Putting all nonsense aside, our City Fathers should, we think, get busy and put a stop to automobiles going on Victoria Park at any time.

On Sunday evening an auto was seen to approach the park roadway and prepare to make the circle. Just at this time a carriage containing two women and a man was coming off the Park. The women jumped out and the horse and rig were left to the man.

No one in this instance was hurt, but some day, if automobiles are allowed full swing on the Park roadway, someone will get hurt or killed.

BRIDGE ST. SUNDAY SCHOOL

BAD ITS HANDS FULL YESTERDAY — THE 73RD ANNUAL PICNIC AT TWELVE O'CLOCK POINT PARK, WAS THE BEST OF ALL.

From 7.15 yesterday morning scores and scores of happy girls and boys and equally as joyous older people, from all parts of the city were wending their way towards the Corby dock, full of joyful anticipations of one of the great days of their lives. For many of them from their fathers and mothers, grandfathers and grandmothers, and in not a few cases from even their greatgrandfathers and greatgrandmothers had heard, year in and year out, of the annual Sunday school picnic of Bridge St. Sunday school. Although it is nearly three-quarters of a century since the late Honorable Senator Flint, then superintendent of Bridge St. Sunday School out of his fertile brain conceived the seed thought of a Sunday school picnic, it is safe to say how important factor in the unification of the local school and has become world-wide in its influence.

The attendance yesterday at Twelve O'clock Point Park was a record maker; not only did the Bridge street congregation turn out en masse, but many scholars from other churches in the city were present.

The various committees which managed the affair worked with their accustomed ability and zeal, the grounds were handled with dexterity bogut, free of expense, and the programme of amusements was sufficiently long to easily occupy everyone.

The Summer school was inaugurated yesterday and many are in attendance at it.

A NEW HEAVYWEIGHT.

Marvin Hart of Louisville Knocked Out Jack Root in Twelfth Round, and Jeffries Has Retired.

Reno, July 4.—Marvin Hart of Louisville yesterday knocked out Jack Root of Chicago in the twelfth round of a fight for the heavyweight championship. The betting odds were 3 to 1 in favor of Root. The punch which composed the downfall of the Chicagoan was a short, powerful jolt of the right arm to the body. The blow was delivered with terrific force, and it caught Root while he was coming in. He reeled, tottered and fell in a heap. Referee Jeffries towering over the prostrate form of the Chicagoan, counted ten, making Hart heavyweight champion pugilist of the world.

He might have counted twenty, for Root was hopelessly defeated. Up to this point of the fight Root had an apparent lead over Hart.

James J. Jeffries, retired champion of the world, received $1,000 for acting as referee.

Before entering the ring, "Jim" Jeffries waited upon both men, stated that he had retired for good from the ring, and that the winner of this fight is entitled to the name of heavyweight champion of the world.

Movable History.
(London Chronicle.)

A traveller who passed through a small English town noticed a post on which was marked the height to which the river had risen during a great flood.

"Do you mean to say," he asked a native, "that the river rose as high as that in 1894?"

"Oh, no," replied the native, "but the village children used to rub off the original mark, so the Major ordered it to be kept higher up, so as to be out of their reach."

We Want More Workmen—

Painters and Paperhangers

but we must have good men. It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen, three times larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Deseronto. Ask in that locality for the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 26th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Belleville Methodist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—a number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

Wars of the Irish Jarvey.

A good story, which illustrates the absolute genius with which an Irish jarvey extracts money from his victims, is told in an English journal. A commercial traveler wanted to take a side trip to Belfast, and, aware of the rapacity of the average jarvey, insisted on knowing the exact fare before getting on the car. The following dialogue ensued:

Commercial Traveler—What's the fare to C——, jarvey?

Jarvey—Ask, that's alright, sorr. Just get on.

Commercial Traveler — Now, look here, what's the fare, I say?

Jarvey—Shure, it's alright, sorr. Just jump up.

Commercial Traveler—I insist on knowing the fare before I get on.

Jarvey—Belaid, sorr, I'm not goin' up 'till after ye've nothing at all, sorr.

Needless to say, when the commercial traveler finally got to his destination he was mulcted of an amount much larger than his fare, paying an amount he had to pay to save his face.

One Address Enough.

The other day the expressman who was just about to toss the package back of the counter when he noticed that it was addressed on both sides, said, "It's good I saw that. Charges might have been collected twice," he said. "That's funny," remarked the shipper. "I just paid the charges, you know." "Yes," responded the clerk, "and I marked it paid, but the second address might have caused them to collect at the other end. You see, I checked it off paid on one side, but when it reaches the Other office it might be that the prepaid check would be on the bottom. That would bring the other address up, and nobody to check mark them at the receiving office would mark it collect and the party to whom it was consigned would pay the second express charges." "And I thought I was doing something to expedite matters by putting the address on both sides," commented the shipper.

The Word "Blackmailing."

The word "blackmailing," derived from the Anglo-Saxon "mal" (tax) and the old French "mail" (a coin of small value), was originally applied to rents paid in kind, in order to distinguish them from rents payable in silver or "white" payments. About the sixteenth century it was applied to money paid as the price of protection from freebooters. This was declared illegal by Elizabeth, but revived in the Highlands of Scotland until after Culloden, in 1745.

"Blackmail" is mentioned in Archbishop Hamilton's Catechisme (1552). One of the most picturesque letters of blackmail was Rob Roy, who grew famous in this connection about the year 1720. In its modern use blackmail is the extortion of money by threat of public exposure.

Valuable Queen Bees.

Just as there are valuable strains in horses and other stock, so there are varieties of queen bees which are worth many hundred times their weight in gold. The most valuable strain is the Italian, and many Italian queens originated with Rob Roy, who grew famous in this connection about the year 1730. In its modern use blackmail is the extortion of money by threat of public exposure.

Internally All Right.

A country sexton in England officiated at a funeral clad in a red waistcoat. At the conclusion of the obsequies the vicar gravely remonstrated with the old gravedigger, saying: "Robert, you should not wear a red waistcoat at a funeral. You hurt the feelings of the mourners." Robert replied, placing his hand on his breast, "Well, what does it matter, sir, so long as the heart is black?"

The Head of the Family.

"It has come to my ears that you are calling me 'the governor,'" said the old man sternly. "Are you?"

"I might as well admit it," said the young prodigal coolly.

"You ought," continued the old gentleman, "you ought to have more respect for your mother."

Secret of Admiration.

"I have a great admiration for the Moors," observed Miss Motherly.

"I think I can tell why," from her best chum. "Their women never celebrate a birthday and make it a point of honor not to tell their ages."

A Little Mixed.

Bessie, inspecting the new arrangement of Nannie's hair, exclaimed: "Nannie, you don't look like yourself with your hair that way. But" (admiringly) "you look better when you don't look like yourself than when you do."

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S QUEUE.

It Has a Luxurian Suit of Straight and Very Dark Hair.

The Father of his Country concealed a luxuriant suit of hair beneath that powdered wig. Many now think the old fashion were in vogue, to conceal the growth of baldness. Yet no one need have this hair nor be bald, if he cure the dandruff that causes both. Dandruff can not be cured by scouring the scalp, because it is a germ disease, and the germ has to be killed. Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germs—any other hair preparation will. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." There's no cure for dandruff but to kill the germ. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

CAKE OF SEAWEED.

One common kind of seaweed seen on every beach is used for making soap, for lining boilers, for dyeing cloth, for making a size for fishing lines and for the knives. Ashes of seaweed are potash, or soda, and among the "Highland tons" for kelp" are the making of glass, soap and alum. The phosphuric would be at last. Without seaweed as the doctor.

"Fish glue makes the court plaster you wear when you cut yourself, and two more of our seaweeds are dishes of the first rank on the table of the Japanese Emperor.

Isinglass is made of it; also the gelatin which makes the blancmange you all like so much.

SCRAINED HER ANKLE.

"I slipped on an icy step and sprained my ankle very badly, writes Miss Minnie Burgoyne, of Glenwood, it swelled to a tremendous size and caused intense pain. I applied Polson's Nerviline and got prompt relief. The swelling was reduced, and before long I was able to use my foot. Sprains, swellings and muscular pains Nerviline is the one sure remedy. Strong, penetrating, swift to destroy pain—that's Polson's Nerviline. Fifty years in use.

The Window Habit.

In nearly every home in New York that has windows fronting on those avenues traversed by elevated trains there are one or more particular cushions known as the "elevated cushions." As their name implies, they are cushions on which the members of the family rest their elbows when leaning out of the window to look at either the passing elevated trains or what is going on in the street below. This habit, like out of the window habit is particularly a New York one, one that is noticed immediately by those coming here from out of town. Residents of other cities look out of their windows if there is anything in particular going on, but here women and children by day and men, women and children by night may be said fairly to live with their heads projecting from the windows. This habit is not prompted by any particular curiosity; it is simply born of the desire to be in touch with what is going on, though one may be a hundred feet above it.

A GIRL'S ROOM.

Some Suggestions Pointing the Way to Health and Comfort.

It is much better to forego all dressing about the bed, although if you feel that you must have a canopy let it be a dainty muslin that can be frequently laundered.

Be most particular to have your bedding thoroughly aired every day, all except feather pillows. Sun is said to draw the oil from the feathers, but there is no objection to a thorough airing. Great danger lurks in damp bedclothes. Especial precaution is to be observed in travel. Damp linen offers encouragement to microbes. And now as to the walls of the habitation of youth. Oil painted walls are the most hygienic and most satisfactory. In boudoirs a pale yellow or drab has been found most pleasing to the eye. A plain color is always preferable than a figured hanging. HAVE you not all had the experience when you were sick of staring some grotesque figure around and around with your wearied mind until the very pattern was engraved upon your brain? Oil painted walls, too, can be wiped down daily if you wish with oiled cloths. They will preserve their color unless you disfigure them with nails. Your ceiling should be light in color. It is most advantageous to have a hardwood door in the bedroom. Carpets should be banished and only rugs employed. Choose a closely woven rug that it may hold as little dust as possible. Your curtains should be simple and crisp—lace or fiber. Such a floor covering is both satisfactory and inexpensive. These can be taken up and cleaned every week.

The broom should always be damp ened when used, and a carpet sweeper is better, for it gathers up all of the dust without scattering it about the room. When dusting use a damp cloth, never a feather duster. Keep your dust cloth clean, washing it out after its use.—Ladies' Home Journal.

SERVICEABLE SCREEN.

Cover a Hinged Frame With Burlap and Add Simple Decorations.

One of the prettiest ways of getting up a screen is to have a carpenter make a plain, strong wooden frame, with its three "leaves" separate, and then to cover it yourself with burlap or canvas that fit in with the general color scheme of the room. The burlap should be tacked on neatly and smoothly, without a wrinkle, then the leaves joined by little brass hinges and the screen decorated. One girl gave herself a constant reminder of the shades in autumn by painting on the linen leaves in rich glowing colors on her dull green screen. Another chose to paint a quaint nursery rhyme in each of little Dutch figures clear across the top.—Philadelphia North American.

BURLAP SCREEN.

The Ball That Can't Tangle.

Those who knit and crochet know the trouble caused by the ball of yarn or floss falling and rolling about the floor. This trouble is really obviated if the yarn is wound so that it can be used from the inside of the ball instead of in the ordinary way. Unrolling from the outside is the cause of the ball's rolling propensities. First wind the wool or silk six or eight times over the outstretched fingers of the left hand, giving as great a length as possible to the windings and keeping in mind the fact that these windings are to be pulled from the center when the ball is finished. With these first windings always protruding at the top and bottom, proceed to wind the wool very loosely. When the skein is wound the outside end is pulled out through the hole left in the ball and the work of working from the outside.

The Lovable Girl.

To be placed in the corner of a young girl's attractiveness and read while she is making her toilet:

She cultivates reserve.

She thinks, then acts.

She speaks ill of no one.

She is loyal to her friends.

She lives in her mother's faith.

She cares for her body as God's temple.

She writes nothing she may regret.

She knows there is nothing more undignified than anger.

She knows that to love and be loved is her birthright if she is but worthy of love.—Hubbard City News.

Bath Mitts.

For the after bath rub nothing is better than the mitts of Turkish toweling, which quickly bring an exhilarating glow to the skin. They can be bought in the shops, but are far less expensive when made at home.

Use the ordinary Turkish towelling by the yard, and bind the seams and top with linen tape.

CHILDREN'S APPETITES.

Satisfy Them With Proper Foods, Digestible and Nourishing.

Children are often accused of eating more than they should, when their food is of the kind they crave. But when plain, nourishing food is given them and indigestible sweetmeats kept away or given in moderation the small people are not likely to overeat. Parents should remember that children are growing and that a healthy boy's appetite instead of being a sign of natural depravity may be a proof of loyalty to the laws of health.

It is the regulation of the quality more than the quantity that should be carefully looked after. Instinct is always unerring when it comes to the food that a child craves, therefore there is a certain amount is placed before him and his taste has not been perverted by overeating or dainties. Children are like monkeys. They like milk, honey and nuts and above all, bread. It is suggested that this test be tried on a growing boy of, say, ten years of age. Offer him his choice between a huge ripe pear and a porterhouse steak. Almost any parent can see in advance that the boy will prefer the pear.

Many times it is the children who first rise up and refuse food when they have had enough, and in letting it simply because it is nice and palatable. "I'm full," they cry, which is the time they state-ports. This is plain physiological fact. The "schoolboy" hunger is seldom pamphlet. It is after youth has been satisfied, but with proper foods, digestible and nourishing.—Detroit Tribune.

ROOM GROUPS.

The Art of Effectively Placing Pictures and Furniture.

Even where the room is large enough for the furniture to arrange itself in groups, as where the piano is under a large dark picture, the sofa at the right, a lounge or chairs sat diagonally at the left, all together making a mass of shadow there, no effect would be considered so important an object as the fireplace group for the mantle piece. Where a picture or piece of sculpture it may well be left by itself to stand out and accent it, but ordinary pictures are better if arranged together and in reference to one another. Sometimes this is sometimes obtained by grouping on one wall or in a corner several tiny miniatures, silhouettes or small old fashioned prints, and a screen of plain drilling or a superb brocade half covered with these in order to get the effect. Choice bits cut from the magazines or from old books and framed at home in passe partout are often as rich in result as something a thousand times as costly. The desire and end in decorating is not to have the house an exhibit of wealth, but to use the knowledge and appreciation of beauty and suitability with the means of obtaining it in giving and receiving enjoyment and to minimize the sacrifices of taste and refinement. —Success.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

All custards with eggs and milk should be baked in a pan of hot water.

Potatoes, cereals and all starchy foods should be thoroughly cooked, or they may be easy to digest.

Toast should always be crisp and out of the way, so that the loaf and dry the slices over the stove before toasting.

Fish, particularly the salt water kind, is better if when it is boiled a cupful of good cider vinegar is mixed with the water.

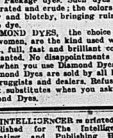

The secret of having light, good mashed potatoes is to keep them hot while mashing and to have the milk with which they are moistened hot also.

Bacon broiled in the gas range oven is delicious and wholesome. Place the slices in the broiler as usual and set in the oven over a dripping pan. Cook until browned under a moderate flame.

The Gas Range.

Two very simple expedients have simplified the care of my gas range 100 per cent—a strip of table oilcloth laid on the oven shelf at the back and side and an ordinary small whisk broom hung directly behind it within easy reach. Using the place so convenient for laying down a spoon or fork as one has to do with the cupful of good cider vinegar is mixed with the water. The secret of having light, good mashed potatoes is to keep them hot while mashing and to have the milk with which they are moistened hot also.

Bacon broiled in the gas range oven is delicious and wholesome. Place the slices in the broiler as usual and set in the oven over a dripping pan. Cook until browned under a moderate flame.

Each year thousands of letters come in from all parts of this vast Dominion telling of victories and successes with Diamond Dyes in the home.

The marvellous and immense sales of Diamond Dyes in Canada have induced adventurers and speculators (who know nothing about the chemistry of colors) to go into the putting up of package dyes. Such dyes are adulterated and crude; the colors are muddy and blotchy, bringing ruin to many homes.

DIAMOND DYES, the choice of wise women, are the kind used when bright, full, fast and brilliant colors are required. No disappointments possible when you use Diamond Dyes.

Diamond Dyes are sold by all leading druggists and dealers. Refuse to accept substitutes when you ask for Diamond Dyes.

Strawberry Festival at Wallbridge

The ladies of the Wallbridge Methodist Church gave a strawberry festival on Thursday evening the 22 inst. The tables were laid in the Sidney Town Hall and a large number sat down to a splendid repast furnished by the ladies; afterwards the company adjourned to the church where an excellent programme was rendered.

The service opened with a hymn by the choir, prayer by the Pastor, Rev. T. Williams, B. A., reading by Mr. E. O'Flynn, of Belleville, was then introduced and took charge of the meeting.

Solos were given by Mrs. Bonisteel and Miss Gowsell, duets by Miss Chisholm and Miss Gardiner. One of the attractive features of the entertainment was the pantomime given by Mrs. Wilbur Sharpe, Miss Vera Sharpe and Miss Hetty Ketcheson; this was accompanied with music in the gallery and was very effectively rendered.

The church was crowded to the doors and the repeated applause gave evidence of an appreciative audience.

At the conclusion the chairman complimented the ladies on the great success of their entertainment, spoke of the excellent order both at the supper and during the entertainment, and the pastor in the church thanked the committee and the parties taking part in the programme for their assistance.

Mrs. C. J. Massey is the President of the Ladies' Aid, and Mrs. J. Phillips the Secretary. The ladies have reason to be pleased with the success of their untiring efforts, and the entertainment was pronounced by those present as one of the best ever held at Wallbridge.

The meeting was closed with God Save the King.

Sir William Mulock, as Postmaster-General, boasts that he has saved money for the Government; by reducing the expenses of his department, yet, as Minister of Labor he challenges attention and the favor of Government liberality to the chairwomen of the House of Commons. What merit lies in the liberality he boasts of if it is counterbalanced by grinding parsimony in another branch of the service?

Do Not Limit Your Ability.

Poverty and failure are self invited. The efficient and successful often come to them. Worry and anxiety cuffeble their powers and bring on blunt their creative and productive faculties that they are unable to exercise them properly. Fear of failure or lack of faith in one's ability is one of the most potent causes of failure. Many people of splendid powers have attained only mediocre success, and some are total failures, because they set bounds to their achievement, beyond which they did not allow themselves to think that they could succeed. They put limitations on their ability; they cast stumbling blocks in their way by aiming only at mediocrity or predicting failure for themselves, talking their woes down instead of up, disparaging their business and belittling their powers.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1900, by Seward W. Hopkins.

the longer he lay there the better he felt. The strength was returning to his limbs.

He did not even feel the pangs of hunger.

He at last got out of bed and went to the door to call some one. He found it locked.

There was another door on another side of the room. He opened that. It led into a space now evidently used as a closet, but which, on the opposite side, another door led somewhere. This he tried, but could do nothing to save push, as there was neither knob nor latch.

While he was in the closet he heard voices.

"The fellow is the very devil for escaping," said a voice. "First he eludes us at Paris, then at Strassburg and now at Ostro. It is a pity old Rolard did not hold him. That 2,000 francs would pay for the trouble."

Buckford's heart beat rapidly. He recognized the voice of Vandal.

"Yes," said Rolard, "he is a pedicer" asked Reber. "This is a strange game. Why did he sell the gown to that woman?"

"Oh, to get money to buy the horse, I suppose. But that was a gay story about his stealing diamonds and 12,000 francs. Well, I had to say something. There is no use in our being across all Europe for 1,000 francs."

Buckford, panting in the closet, wondered what it all meant. Evidently they were under the impression that he had gone on toward Trolle. They had also been told that he had sold the woman the gown when he had presented it to her.

These things, together with his strange cessation of illness, aroused his suspicions. He stepped quickly back to his room and felt for his purse. It was gone.

"Ah!" he said bitterly. "I have fallen among thieves again. This was a cal of an innkeeper has robbed me. Now, how shall I get out of this scrape with no money and my enemies in the very house?"

He crept back to the closet.

The footsteps of the thief who stole so much wealth had been given two connecting rooms. Reber and Rolodo occupied one, and Vandal was alone in the other. Their conversation, carried on while the men were pairing off, was necessarily a little loud. Buckford heard it easily.

"How far Trolle from here?" Rebello was asking. "When will he arrive there?"

"How old is a goose? It all depends on the horse the innkeeper sold him. If it was a good one, he can do it in two days."

"Two days! And we are a day behind him!"

"Well, we will get the best horses to be had and try to overtake him. I have seen some horses in the stable-out-handsome beasts, but strong, and they looked speedy."

"The devil! Did you find a stable? This inn is the only stable I saw."

"Well, there is a stable for horses in the rear."

The conversation now ceased, and Buckford went back to his room. He was now in a thrill of excitement. He had lost his sense of illness. His mind was alert and quick. His eagerness to find a way to escape had overcome the effect of the drug.

He had taken off his clothes before retiring and now dressed himself. He then made an examination of his room. He remembered that the window looked out toward a large building. He had seen it at the twilight hour when he had entered. This must be the stable spoken of by Rolard. He next cautiously opened the window, making as little noise as possible.

It was a dark night, there being no moon and but few stars to be seen. The great peak of the barn rose like a black mass against a short distance away.

He knew that he was on the ground floor of the inn. There seemed to be the roof of a shed under him.

He was about to let himself down from the window when a key turned in the lock of his door, and he heard the voices of Robard and his son.

At the same moment he heard the loistering voices of three or four half drunken fellows under his window.

He was caught between two forces. To drop from the window at that moment was to drop into their hands. Robard would s'once call out, and he would be taken.

While he was debating what to do Robard and his son entered.

"Ah, my friend, you have slept long," said Robard. "We feared you were ill."

"I was only very weary," said Buckford.

The younger Robard carried a lamp. By the light of this Buckford saw a knife sticking from the pocket of the elder, rascal's coat.

With a leap like that of a panther, he was on the old man and tore the knife from his pocket. In another instant the point had found a soft spot between the robber's ribs.

Then, with a blow from his fist that sent the younger Robard reeling and the lamp flying against the wall, Buckford ran to the window and leaped to the roof of the shed below. From this he jumped down to the ground and came plump upon the loistering party of four, who were startled at this sudden alighting of a man laid among them.

"Ho, ho! What's this? A robber!" called out Robard Robard! Seine this fellow! Hold him till Robard comes!"

"Fools!" said Buckford as he saw the window of his room lighted with a red glare. "I am a guest of the inn. My lamp upset. Help me to escape!"

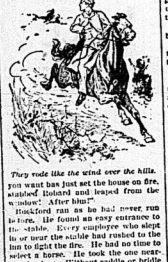

This was the only escape. Do you see?"

"Fire, fire! Robard's inn is on fire!" they shouted, and, sobered by the terrible catastrophe, they ran toward Buckford and up to the front of the building to gain an entrance.

"Fire, fire!" Buckford could hear the alarm ringing from one end of the house to the other.

Then from the window of the room he had left came screams and yells of wild rage and despair.

"Murder! Robbery! He has gone! After him, you Frenchmen! The thief

They rode like the wind over the hills.

you want has just set the house on fire, stabled Roland and leaped from the window!"

Buckford ran as he had never run before. He found an easy entrance to the stable. The gatekeeper who slept in or near the stable had rushed to the inn to fight the fire. He had left one of his men to guard the stable.

Buckford saw this man and came upon him suddenly. He took the one near est the door. Without saddle or bridle he led it from the stalled upon its back, and as the glare from the burning building sent a gleam of light around the stable he dashed away, followed by the hoarse cries of rage and the pistol shots of the enraged Frenchmen and Robards.

Vandal, quick to grasp this opportunity, left his Rebellions to fight their own fire and, calling Reber and Rolodo, ran to the stable and got out horses.

"Too late, that rascal's gone!" he grunted. "This time, by heaven, I'll kill him!"

Near three, mounted much as Buckford was, dashed after him.

Buckford had gained three to five minutes' start, and that start had carried him out of the sight of his pursuers before they could hear the sullen pounding of his horse's hoofs on the hard road. They followed the sound.

It was not long before Ostro and its burning inn were left far behind. Mile after mile, the horses carried their exhausted riders. Buckford, feeling for his life, spared not his horse. The others, less skilled horsemen, bobbed and pounded painfully on the bare backs, but clung to the flying steeds with a tenacity that showed how eager they were to overtake and finish this American, who baked their inn and stole their horses.

Vandal alone controlled his horse. The others merely clung round their horses' necks and let the beasts follow their leader.

Vandal alone controlled his horse. The others merely clung round their horses' necks and let the beasts follow their leader ridden by Vandal.

They went through little villages, all peacefully asleep. They rode like the wind through farming regions, through valleys and over hills till their overridden beasts nearly fell to the ground.

And now at last it was simply a question of the staying qualities of the horses. Had Buckford in his quick selection of the nearest horse to the door obtained a good one, or had the others, taking horses from more practiced hands, got hold of the best of animals of better speed or less weariness than the one he rode?

Buckford's horse was showing signs of exhaustion. He had hoped to gain enough headway to escape from his foes and find a hiding place. But instead the steady and thunderous hoof beats of the pursuing horses grew louder and nearer.

He was now in a rough and hilly country. The road was bad, and the weary horse stumbled constantly.

A pistol shot rang out behind him. The Frenchmen were near enough to shoot at him.

He knew that cruelty would not make his horse go faster.

Before him rose forms that obscured the way. He could not see the ground ten feet from his horse.

Three pistol shots rang out together. With a cry almost like that of a human being his horse dropped to the road.

For an instant he himself was conscious of a stinging sensation in the side. But this was lost in a greater shock as his horse, as he fell, sent the rider headlong from his back over the brink of a yawning ravine, along which the rough country road had been laid.

CHAPTER XI.

SLEEP AND WOLVES.

THOSE pistol shots were heard by three men who were waiting for the signal to give a bypath which led from the main road through a well tilled farm that skirted the opposite side of the ravine from that on which the pursuit of Buckford had taken place. His trail ride had ended just too soon, for not more than a hundred yards further there was a bend in the road and a bridge which would have carried him almost into the very presence of these men and within sight of the lighted windows of the large and comfortable farmhouse where they dwelt.

"Hark!" said one, an elderly appearing man of solid build and undoubted strength of arm. "Shots across the gorge! A cry! What do you make of that?"

"Something wrong, surely," replied a younger man, but one no less muscular. "They are to the edge of the ravine and listened.

"Something crashing through the trees," said the elder. "A man or a horse has fallen. And hear the voices opposite! There seems quite a party of them."

The ravine was not wide, and the sounds of the Frenchmen could be plainly heard.

"I am sure I took the devil," Vandal was saying. "He fell at once."

"Well, he found a nice deep place to roll," said the younger, with a laugh. "How are you ever going to be sure of the result of your shot?"

"Because I never miss. I will fired to gether?" added Reber.

"Oh, as to that, it makes little difference what we do. The thing is to get rid of him. We must find him and make certain there is no failure this time."

"What! Go down into that beastly hole?" protested Reber.

"Go down! Of course. Do you think the fool will come up and tell us how he landed in Hell?"

"Well," the elderly man across the ravine said to his companion, "there seems to be a desperate fight. Three against one, and the one down in the ditch, fighting for his life, seems likely to lose, and we will join the search. If I mistake not, those fellows are Frenchmen. I know of those fellows. I know, I can tell you."

What, therefore, was the surprise of Vandal and his companions to see a bright light not more than 40 feet away from him on the opposite side of the gulf.

"Ho, there!" came the voice of the farmer. "Who are you and what do you want on my premises?"

"Your premises! Do you call a nest like this a premises?" laughed Vandal. "Well, then, to tell you the truth, we are three traveling gentlemen, and we want a bed. In fact, we want him very much."

"Him, a thief! What sort of thief? From Prussia?"

"I know not whence he is. I know that he dares to rob us."

"At Ostro?"

The farmers whispered together.

"Can it be Roland who has been bold enough to rob these men and die to our woods for shelter? No; Roland never did that."

"But he may not have thus intended. Let this time that rascal's life be counted. This time, by heaven, I'll kill him!"

"Stay there, mounted much as Buckford was, dashed after him.

Buckford had gained three to five minutes' start, and that start had carried him out of the sight of his pursuers before they could hear the sullen pounding of his horse's hoofs on the hard road. They followed the sound.

It was not long before Ostro and its burning inn were left far behind. Mile after mile, the horses carried their exhausted riders. Buckford, feeling for his life, spared not his horse. The others, less skilled horsemen, bobbed and pounded painfully on the bare backs, but clung to the flying steeds with a tenacity that showed how eager they were to overtake and finish this American, who baked their inn and stole their horses.

Vandal alone controlled his horse. The others merely clung round their horses' necks and let the beasts follow their leader.

They went through little villages, all peacefully asleep. They rode like the wind through farming regions, through valleys and over hills till their overridden beasts nearly fell to the ground.

And now at last it was simply a question of the staying qualities of the horses. "Stay there, mounted much as Buckford was, dashed after him.

"And I say again, Vulmer," said the young man with the lantern, "this may be another plot against one we love. Is not the prince expected soon? His arrival has been unaccountably delayed. He was not at Trolle yesterday. Could he have come by way of Ostro, think you?"

"He might, he might," said the man called Vulmer. "He and his lovely princess and the sweet Princess Marie Louise, that Vandal should hold trai tors to these three! But Casparin came yesterday—from Ostro, he did say. He was at me again about the rent money. Heaven! How can I pay what he demands?"

"There is something mysterious lately about Casparin," said Debblek. "Think you there is any foundation for us?"

"Hush! You are speaking of the brother of the queen. Here! What have we here? A man, and a young one."

Vandal, Reber and Robello were still some few feet away as the lantern swung low over the white upturned face of Buckford Wallace, and the three agriculturists bent to examine the handsome features.

"My faith in God!" exclaimed Vulper. "That young man looks not like a thief."

"Nevertheless such he is, and nothing else. In his pockets you will find nearly a thousand francs he stole from our room at the inn at Ostro."

"And did you know the fellow?" asked Debblek.

"Know him! He is wanted just now by the Paris police," said Vandal, in fact, Journeyed from Paris to find him."

"Hum! Let me think," said Farmer Vulmer. "Yes, I have heard of him. In truth, strangers. Men are often rebbed at Ostro; it is a fact. But the rob ber is not, as I have said, a young and handsome fellows like this. Come. We will examine him presently, and if he is dead we will take him to the house."

"For what?" demanded Vandal. "Does he not belong to us?"

"Not exactly," said Vulmer, with a laugh. "Under the rule of our beloved prince, that thing is settled. A chase, wounded even to the death, or the capture of the thief is occupied ground, belongs to the tenant or owner of that property. Thus, if a hare, or even a wild pig or a deer or a goose it would now belong to me. I shall appeal to the prince in the young man."

"I protest. He robbed us. We are French gentlemen. We demand—"

"Demand! If he is dead you may have him. If he is but wounded, he shall have a fair trial and tell his story as my name is Vulmer."

"Vulmer! Your name Vulmer?"

"My name is Jerome Vulmer, at your service."

This information seemed to disappoint Vandal considerably.

Without noticing the effect of his name on the Frenchmen, Vulmer, indeed, he could not see without a colpseous use of the lantern, Vulmer had dropped on his knees and bent over in his powerful arms.

"We will get him to the top, where we can examine him," he said.

To Vulmer that burden was as nothing. He lifted the senseless form of Debblek in such a manner as to throw its gleams ahead. Vulmer led the way, followed by Debblek and his partner, both employees of Vulmer.

Then followed the three discomfited Frenchmen, who had, by the unfortunate claim of Vandal that they had been robbed, lost their last friend, lost the opportunity of posing as the invited guests of Casparin.

Up rose the path toiled Vulmer. Buckford uttered a groan.

"Ah, he lives!" said Debblek. "He is not dead. Thank God for that!"

"Curse that American!" whispered Vandal to Reber. "He must be killed, it seems. If that fool gets him to his house and brings him to his senses he will tell the whole story. Not only will the plot of our friend be spoiled, but undoubtedly we shall be pursued and shot."

"Yes. Mon Dieu! Almost anything rather than that!" whispered Reber in affright.

Then do you and Robello stand by me with the rest of your cowardice. Stick to me like men now, and we will get the jumpstart of the whole party. Leave it to me to wind; fire into the backs of these two fellows. After that the old man. One thing at a time."

Fortunately for Debblek, Reber, the immoral blunderer, elicked the right way for a full minute. Before it was to be time to fire. Like a flash the two young farmers had turned, drawn their long clubs descended with terrific force on the skulls of Reber and Robello. Reber sank to the ground with a gasp, while Robello, less injured, staggered, felt his head and then fired at his assailants. But Vandal, who had Vandal fired into the face of Debblek.

"Traverse! Traverse!" Vulmer roared farmer Vulmer, dropping his groaning burden and springing into the fray.

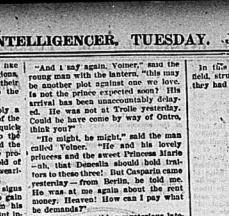

He came none too soon, for Debblek was lying on the ground, his companion was in the grasp of Robello and the two powerful young Vandal was drawing a knife to spring upon him.

With a mighty oath the enraged farmer hurled the murderous body on Vandal and sent him headlong to the bottom of the ravine. He then grappled Robello and Robello and crack ed their heads together till the two skulls almost rang like bells. Hurling them from him, he quickly made sure his workman was not hurt and then hastily again.

"Can you manage Debblek?" he asked. "We must get these two wounded ones to the house and come back for those rascals. Thief! I know who the thieves are now!"

The two men struggled out of the ravine. Buckford was carried easily by Vulmer. Debblek, however, who was a heavy man, was half dragged and half carried by his associate.

In this way the party traversed a field, struck again into the farm path they had quit at the sound of the pis tols and hurried toward the lights that streamed from the windows of the house.

As they approached and their heavy tread was heard on the paths around the house the door was thrown suddenly open, and a girl appeared therein.

"Have you found the sheep, father?" she asked in a sweet voice.

"Sheep! We have found sheep and wolves this night!" was the farmer's reply.

"Sheep and wolves! Sheepand wolves! What do you mean, Sester?" now came an anxious voice from the doorway as a woman appeared and hovered over the girl's side. "Have the wolves ventured forth from the Green forest again?"

"It's human wolves I mean, and whether they came from the Green forest or the haunts of vice in cities I know not."

As the farmer ended his speech he stepped within the circle of light that streamed from the doorway.

"A young man, father!"

"And what is he? Our Debblek wounded!" cried Mme. Vulmer.

"Two beds at once. We must attend to them. Run, Sester, and get cordially," said the farmer.

Mme. Vulmer and her daughter at once sprang to do the bidding of the farmer. The wounded men were placed upon two sweet beds.

"It is far to the surgeon, though he might be got at by daylight," said Vulmer. "However, the nurse is skilled in surgery, and he can tell if we need another."

A nurse was at once dispatched for the cure of the village, which village was some three miles away.

While waiting for the cure the farmer worked over his two wards.

Debblek, he found, was shot through the jaw. His wound, though terrible to look at and disfiguring in his possible results, was not apparently fatal. Vulmer soon had his wife and daughter attending the sufferer. He then applied himself to Buckford.

He found that a pistol ball had entered the young man's side from behind, had glanced on a rib, gone in an upward direction and was now lodged somewhere in the region of the chest cavity. By a miracle it had not touched the heart.

There were also severe bruises on the white forehead, which had been inflicted by the club.

"Here, Adria," called Vulmer, "Come to me. This one needs your tender and most than Rebello."

And in an instant the pretty Adria was bending over Buckford.

The cure arrived. He was a gentle old man, skilled not only in what comfort. He had, however, been soothed the aching brow or healed the crimson wound.

"This man, my son," he said to Vulmer as he stood over Debblek, "is not in danger. His wound will be painful, but there is no danger. It is strange that he is so slow in recovering consciousness. But he will doubtless be well now. Yes, in a short time he will be awake. But this other, this poor young man, he is one of the Parisian bohemian or American, is sorely near to death. I think we will have to call in a surgeon in this. Send for him at once."

"I will, father. And now I will leave the two in charge of Adria and go to some men to the ravine. The rascals who did the work are there."

"Yes, two in number. Vulmer and Adria together, throwing their arms around the farmer's burly neck. "You will be very careful, father. You have not told us who the rascals are, but we know you are quite a formidable foe, for they have wounded our powerful Debblek."

"Formidable foe!" growled the farmer as he gently pushed them away. "Formidable foe! Three cowardly rascals that could not strike except at a man's back! Formidable foe!

With the hands on this farm I could with a an army of rascals.

He would not stay, but took two men with him, armed, and searched in the direction of the ravine for the three Frenchmen. But those worthies, having had enough of farmer Vulmer's lovely strength, had disappeared.

As the good cure had said, Debblek was injured more mighty than the unseriousness of his wound had promised, but Buckford lingered long in the land of unconsciousness.

The surgeon came, examined him and announced that the cure was competent to manage the case.

And the cure, relinquishing many other duties, took charge of the interesting and mysterious patient.

But, splendid as were the efforts of the cure, the nursing of Adria Vulmer deserved as much praise. She was ever at the bedside. Her touch was cooling to the fevered brow. She was gentle. She was thoughtful.

"He looks like a brave young man," she said. "Suppose it was my Bosso, brave, gentle Bosso! Bosso, my boy, who was wounded in a strange land. I will do for him what I would wish others would do for Bosso. It is not right, mother?"

"Quite right, my daughter. And how I hope to see Bosso in a short time. The news has come that the prince has been engaging in Berlin for a few days and will reach Denesla by way of Ostro."

"Oh, I must see Bosso at the village. Will the royal coaches pass this way, do you think, mother?"

"I do not know. There are but two roads from Ostro to Trolle, and the road by the Green forest is the shorter and best. It is likely the coaches will pass this way."

"Then I will see Bosso," said Adria. "Dear Bosso! I wonder if that wicked Paris has changed him any?"

"No, Bosso would change," said Mme. Vulmer. "He is made of oak. It stands the changing winds of the evil world."

Adria smiled. She loved to hear her brother praised, and she knew how well he deserved it. Had he not saved the life of the prince more than once by his courage and alertness?

And still Buckford lingered. The bullet was probed for and found. But though the wound seemed inclined to heal, the stunned brain refused to restore its functions.

And while the good people in Volner's house nursed him so tenderly four rascals were holding a secret conference in the castle of Casparin at the edge of the Green forest, not far away.

"This is most unfortunate, what you tell me," Casparin was saying. "You should not have taken up the pursuit. We could have found the fool with less trouble. Now undoubtedly he has told his story to Volner. And Volner is a strong adherent of my brother. Though a tenant of myself. Ha! I have an idea! Volner owes me considerable land. He is as far behind as Parisian or American, is sorely near to death. I think we will have to call in this. Send for him at once."

"I will, father. And now I will leave the two in charge of Adria and go to some men to the ravine. The rascals who did the work are there."

"Yes, two in number. Vulmer and Adria together, throwing their arms around the farmer's burly neck. "You will be very careful, father. You have not told us who the rascals are, but we know you are quite a formidable foe, for they have wounded our powerful Debblek."

It was on the following day that the cure, while riding his sleepy and well fed horse toward Volner's farm, was stopped on the road by two of the ballifers of Casparin's official and faithful.

"Whither goest thou, father?" asked they.

"Whither indeed, my son, but to nurse the wounded. Hast thou not heard of the poor young gentleman who lies wounded at Volner's farm?"

"We know naught of that, father, but we have received orders from Prince Casparin, our master, to allow no one to enter Volner's or one of Volner's people to come out."

"Is that so?" queried the priest in surprise. "I knew that Volner was behind in his rents, but what has he done to merit this?"

"It has become known that he is planning a step out and leave the place and the prince in the lurch."

"Nonsense! Volner was talking with me but yesterday about his plans for the coming year."

"And has been writing to land agents in England to obtain a farm for this very month," said the bailiff, with a grimly lie.

"Is it possible? Is it possible?" said the priest, who had not suspected that of Volner. Then I am even forbidden to attend the wounded at Volner's house?"

"You are not to enter, or any one, father."

The priest, shaking his head sadly, turned his horse and rode homeward.

"Here's a pretty pass!" said he to the farm hands, who had started for the village to make purchases, to Volner when he had been sent home. "I am stopped at the gate by the bailiffs of Prince Casparin, who informed me that one of us was to be allowed to leave the place nor another enter."

"My God! Has Casparin received from the crowd me to death? What plan has he by which he can squeeze money from the stones on this farm, whether seeds or come?"

GOD'S PITY FOR A MAN

WITHOUT A COUNTRY INVOKED BY DR. TALMAGE.

THE GLORY OF PATRIOTISM

Twists the Usual Fourth of July Oration Around and Shows How the British Empire Has Conquered America," Until England Stands "Not a Conquered Rival, But a Conquering Friend."

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dreer, of Toronto, in the Department of Agriculture.—Ed.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 2.—In this sermon a new aspect is given to the patriotic holiday. The text is Job xxxi, 24: "Our friends salute thee."

God pity the man without a country! God pity such a man as Philip Nolan, whom Edward Everett Hale pictured in his famous story, who, on account of his own sins, has lost the confidence of the land of his birth, and the people among whom he was born and who on account of those sins is excluded from the land of his birth! God pity the man who does not delight in the sacrifices and triumphs of his nation's heroes and heroines, who does not live in his country's hopes and who does not feel a thrill of honest pride when he mentions his birthplace and avows, as did Paul, "I am a man which am a Jew, of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city." God pity, I say again, the man who does not feel in every part of his body, mind and soul that the land of his nativity is the best place in all the world in which to be born, that his people are the best people in all the world with whom to associate, that he does not hope that the place of his cradle will be the place of his sepulcher!

But as I began to think over my sermon which I was to preside our national holiday, I said to myself: "Have we truly triumphed over England? Are we truly independent of our mother land? Has not the British nation conquered us in truth as well as in fact? Have she not and does she not annually send over great shipping armies and annually demand that we pay her not only gold, but things more precious than gold? Yea, yea," I said to myself, "England is not a conquered rival, but a conquering friend. Instead of preaching a patriotic sermon to show how the American nation has a triumphed over the British Empire I will twist my theme around. I would tell how the British Empire has conquered America. And when I shall show how British Empire has conquered us I will glory in that conquest, for as England and Scotland and Ireland have put their impress upon us, so we in turn through them are helping to put our impress upon the whole world for civilization and for Christ."

The British Empire, in the first place, has conquered America by the conquest of the tongue. The first words that we learned to lisp at our mother's knee, the words that we shouted on the playground and spoke before the school desk, the words that we read in the morning newspaper and in library books and heard from our pulpits platform and pulpit are English words. The language of the American people is the language of England's nobility and of Scotland's thistle and of Ireland's shamrock. The same tongue we speak was spoken for centuries in the British Isles. Therefore, though a man or woman was born on July 4, 1776, it was not a new race that simply left the Goddess of Liberty as a bride leaving the old English homestead and setting up in housekeeping for herself. She still belonged to the old English family. She still spoke the mother tongue. More than that, she was dominated by her mother's sentiment, way of thinking and doing things. And this tie of language which binds the American people to their British kindred cannot be found binding us to any other nation on earth.

When two nations like the British people and the American people speak the same language they must inevitably be one in feeling. It does not make much difference who sits upon the English throne or who is in America's Presidential chair, the two nations are one. They are one because they have the same teachers. They are one because they have the same legends. They are one because they naturally think alike, whether they will or no. This fact was beautifully illustrated some years ago when John Hay, then American Ambassador to London, spoke at the unveiling of the bust of Sir Walter Scott in Westminster Abbey.

"The books a boy reads," said Mr. Hay, "are those most ardently admired and longest remembered, and America reveled in Scott when the country was young. I have heard from my father, a pioneer in Kentucky, that in the early days of this century men would saddle their horses and ride from all the neighboring counties to the principal post town of their region when a new novel by the author of 'Waverley' was expected. Through all the important formative days of the republic Scott was the favorite author of the American lease, and, while his writings may not be said to have had any special weight in our national and political development, yet their influence was enormous upon the taste and the sentiments of a people peculiarly sensitive to such influences, the very circumstances of their environment." What John Hay said in reference to the influence of the pen of the Wizard of Abbotsford upon America can be said to a greater or a less extent of all the leaders of English and Scottish and Irish thought.

British thinking cannot be divorced from American thinking. To the American mind a map of the British Isles is not a mere collection of city or town names. Each spot has its sacred history on account of the men who have lived there and whose fields of influence were transatlantic as well as cisatlantic. Some years ago I rode through Scotland and England on a bicycle. From Glasgow I went to Ayr. There, I found that my youthful idol, Burns, once lived. From Ayr I went to Bannockburn and Stirling Castle. There I found that Bunker Hill was only an echo of Stirling Castle. Those noble Scottish chiefs inspired America's independence. From Bannockburn I went to Edinburgh. There I stood at the graves of Guthrie and Chalmers and went into John Knox's old home and recognized these men as my teachers. From Edinburgh I went down to the lake region and there found its poet, my poet. There I reverently stood by the roadside while a nurse led John Ruskin past me. — John Ruskin, then with his mind a lifetree abbey in ruins, but John Ruskin still—who wrote the books that are on my library shelves. From there I went up to London. Almost every place I stopped I could go and find the grave or one of America's benefactors.

England has conquered America by the power of the tongue. Because the same linguistic doors are opened to both people the two nations are one in everything and one in life. From nearly all foreign lands are ascended the "Delectable Mountains" and the "Celestial towers of unknown tongues." Around these or over these but few of us have the linguistic ability to go or to climb. But though between us and England rolls the Atlantic ocean 2,000 miles wide, the bridge of a common language spans it. Over that bridge every day walk the British statesmen, the British reformers, the British authors, the British preachers, the British leaders of thought. They come in as saying: "Americans, take our books. Americans, follow our customs. Americans, study our ways of doing things. Take us to your hearts, as we are taking you to ours." And so one. We need no Washington living to discover or to fight for each thing. All at the feet of the same Gamaliels and Hillels. The Anglo-Saxon tongue is the world's think and live alike." America is still the land of England. By the same token the English dictionary and the English grammar and the English spelling prevail.

The British Empire has conquered us by the tongue, but not by that alone. Every year she sends over a great invading army. This army of invaders are stout of muscle and clear of eye and brave of heart. They have the bravery to cross the seas. And as soon as they can get a foothold on the land they will swarm over for their fathers and mothers and brothers and sisters to come and join them. In their new homes which they have built in the new land and which they are already beginning to rule. And have not we well fulfilled the prophecy?

We find in America the English and the Scotch and the Irish families everywhere. Regarding the census of 1900 those whom I address to arise and say how many homes. But the Americans who are sons and daughters and grandchildren of ancestors who were born there, how many do you suppose would stand up? A twentieth? A tenth? A fourth? Yes, I think a fourth or even a third is not overstating the numbers. When the original thirteen colonies won their national independence we had had in the meantime, between three and four millions of people. We then had a smaller population than has the present city of New York. In a little over a hundred years we have reared 80,000,000 inhabitants. Whence did these people come? From the American stock. The American patriarch has builded her nests in the chimneys of many homes. But the American stork from 4,000,000 parents could not have reared 80,000,000 descendants in a little over a hundred years. The vast numbers of the American inhabitants to-day come over as emigrants from Europe or their fathers or grandfathers came there. And by far the largest proportion of these emigrants came as invading army from the old shores of England and Scotland and Ireland.

But, though the British Empire has won many successes on land as well as on the seas with small armies and navies, she has not won her American victory by a small army of land forces or grants. From Glasgow and Liverpool and London during the last hundred years she has sent forth her best sons and daughters as invaders of our soil, our sands and by the millions. Still that invading army is not exhausted. Every ship of mine re-enforcements. "Send me my brother and sister," calls back the little servant girl to her parents on Killarney lakes. "Let them come to me, and I will pay their fare." "Send me the girl I once courted across the highlands of Scotland and across the shadow of Lindisfrow while I read to her, the strong and beautiful Queen Mary, who was born among yonder hills," writes the young American Scotchman who is winning a fortune in the new world. "Send me my sisters and let them die in the London fogs," writes the young English man who is making his way West.

Have you as a national man ever stopped to consider how many of our long industries have been fostered and built up by British capital? The British merchants have come here by millions and settled in our land and taken out naturalization papers. The British capitalists are saying to our miners, "You run my mines;" to our railroad men, "You run my railroads"; to our street electric car line presidents, "You run our street railways." Yes, the British capitalists have their moneys invested in our country by the millions of dollars. If all British capital were to be withdrawn from the manufactories and railroad stock and mining industries this country would have the most awful financial crash the world has felt since man began to buy and sell for barter and gain. And, furthermore, one of the most important factors in England will never go to war against America is that, as a financial nation, she cannot afford to do it. She would not only be fighting her own sons and daughters, but she would be fighting her own pocketbook. The British Lion is tied here. The British Lionettes are invested in American coal as well as in Bloomfield cutlery at Sheffield, tar factory or Belfast linen or Glasgow mills.

If the British Empire dominates us in a linguistic and social and industrial way, how much more does she influence us in a religious way? Supposing our churches had been the outgrowth of the Spanish cathedral instead of the Scottish Kirk. What would have happened? Supposing the men who laid the religious foundations of our theological seminaries had come from another class than the Puritans, dominated by the spirit of Rev. John Robinson. Supposing the men who taught us our ideas of men, by and right had not been inspired by the teachings of a John Knox. Would we still be the nation whose God is Lord, as we are to-day? Thank God that the gospel fires which are to-day burning upon American hearths were once started by the live coals of the old Puritans and the old covenanters.

As I believe the British Empire, under God, has religiously made this an English land, so I hope that the British Empire and the American people, under God, are going to dominate the world everywhere for Christ. It is all folly for any one to state that the American Government and the British Government are working together hand in hand. When war was about to be declared against Spain in order to liberate down-trodden Cuba, some one said to Mr. McKinley: "How is England?" Will England uphold you in this war?" Then the President replied: "England is all right. England is an American friend." Aye, yes, the British Government is our friend. She will always be our friend. Side by side the two English speaking nations shall yet settle the Asiatic troubles. Side by side they will yet settle the African and the Turkish troubles. As their Christian missionaries in foreign lands are now working for a common Christian church, so ultimately their Christian soldiers shall yet work side by side to right all civil wrongs and to make war in the future an impossibility, for then public opinion and public policy will never be allowed to be unjust.

Why am I to-day preaching this sermon? Because I feel that it is about time for some one to lift a voice and rebuke the pernicious idea that England is our enemy, and that England, or, rather, the British Empire, is jealous of us, or that we are jealous of England. I denounce the idea that, at the first chance, England and America, like maddened tigers, will leap at each other's throats and tear each other. Why I preach this sermon is that I would help on the day when the nations shall not and thereby hasten the work which the two nations, hand in hand, should do for the salvation of this world for Christ. "But," says some one, "how can you claim that England is our friend? We have had many great foreign wars. We have been with England. During the civil war we almost had another bloody conflict with her. Can England be our friend?"

Oh, of course we have had a little trouble with England. We have had a war or three wars with her. But when you were growing up in your father's home and the children were not always at peace. Your mother every little while had to come to the rescue and settle down upon the troubled waters. But those domestic troubles did not cause a feud between the father and brothers and sisters love sisters. We have had a few domestic quarrels with our brothers and sisters across the seas, but we still remain the best of kindred saints. Perhaps some of the observers are on this side of the Atlantic as well as on the other side. But, though we have had our national differences, they are only domestic differences. The two nations are of one blood, one faith, one tongue, one great purpose for the civilization of the world for Christ. So let us rejoice all the more about the good the British people have done us and the good we are doing us. Then by speaking about the good which our British brothers and sisters have done and are doing we will be drawn closer and closer together and as two nations be more able speedily to accomplish the work which God has given the English speaking race to do.

In closing this sermon I would end it with the sentiment with which Cyrus W. Field closed his speech at the Chamber of Commerce banquet of 1866, "I close with this sentiment," he said—"an old and glorious citizen of Canada across the sea. May this firm grasp be a pledge of everlasting love for all generations." Aye, more than this! "May this common brotherhood of the Anglo-Saxon race be the open door through which all peoples shall enter into a blessed land of peace, where they shall worship the universal fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man through Jesus Christ our Lord." Hallelujah! Then shall the sword be beaten into the plowshare and the spear into the pruning hook. Then man shall not learn war any more. Amen and amen!

Noble Through Baptism.

Nobility is usually a heritage, but in the case of one famous English showman the title was gained through baptism, and not through birth.

The circus business is hereditary abroad, and, appreciating the advantages accruing from an unusual name, the head of a circus proprietor was baptized "Lord George Sanger." Since his remorseful days have already shown before Royalty, there are those who fondly believe that "Lord George gained his title as did Sir Henry Irving and other illustrious men.

As a trade mark the name had been worth thousands of dollars to its originator, and now responsible in a large measure for his early success—a successful circus manager until he introduced to form his circus into a stock company, on the Drury Lane Ballet plan, when the interference of the directors proved his unique methods of self-exploitation.

Gunmaking Depressed.

English gunmakers are suffering from the depression of the present peace, and all English employes who have served less than seven years in the British army, this order affecting some 600 men. A case like this rather startles the unthinkable. Of course it is too bad to have 600 men out of work and perhaps 1,200 children in danger of going hungry. But would it be better to have them at the factories were working overtime and guns being hurried to the front? Widows and children first! A boom in gunmaking is not a thing to be desired, and a depression in gunmaking is not to be deplored. A boom in gunmaking is not a thing to be desired, and a depression in gunmaking is insanity and good health by a veterinary surgeon. The policies range from $250 to $10,000 and the rate is 5 per cent. under $5,000 and 5-1-2 per cent. above $5,000

MILLINERY NOTES.

Small Hats Require Piquant Faces and Smartly Coiffured Heads.

On a small, piquant face and with a beautifully neat coiffure the small hats of the season are very fetching, but the majority of women have to be careful how they adopt millinery of this kind. Modifications both in the tilt and in the height of the bandeau have to be employed and the width of the brim graduated in accordance with the shape of the head and the manner in which the hair is arranged for these shapes to be successful ones.

These small hats should not be overtrimmed. Indeed, a few bunches of flowers where the brim curves or a cluster of sso or ribbon is sufficient.

A delightful little morning hat is a close fitting turban in two shades of brown straw, with a little piping of brown velvet. A knot of velvet appears in the front of the model, which is tilted with a rather exaggerated incline over the eyes. Two shaded brown feathers at the back come low on the hair.

As the season advances there will be an attempt to revive the mushroom shape in a small size, trimmed with a scarf knot of embroidered gauze or fine lawn and a high boudeau of dark colored ribbon or velvet.

The hat illustrated is of leaf green straw. The brim is a double affair, between the edges of which are placed tiny button pluk roses and their foliage. About the low crown is a twist of shaded green and brown ribbon, which ties in two smart bows at the side of the hat where it is slightly indented.

underdress of flimsy embroidered muslin, with soft falling collar and sleeve ruffs of embroidery.

Sleeves in juvenile modes are as startling in their development as in the more grown-up ones. For coats they are large picturesque affairs, with the fullness at the top all gathered into the shoulder. This sleeve stamps a model as of the hour.

On frocks the elbow puff sleeve is going all before it, and short sleeves and slightly decollete necks are coming in vogue for baby girls.

In hats there is a strong feeling for bonnets of the most fascinating description.

A tuscan model, for example, is in a sunburnt tint, wreathed with roses and raised off the face by a bandeau that is softly ruffled with pink chiffon.

The little matron in this group will wear the comfortable loose coat of the Russian blouse style in pale blue cloth, belted with a white kid belt and arranged with three shoulder capes, crowned by a Napoleon hat of blue straw.

The dainty costume in the cut is a directoire frock for a tot of seven years. A dainty little trieorne hat of white chip trimmed with slightly curled ostrich tips is the smart piece of headgear that goes with the dress.

A MONUMENT TO AN ERA

MOVEMENT ON FOOT IN HONOR OF SHAKESPEARE.

Indications Are That a Greater Fund For the Purpose Will Be Raised Than Was Ever Collected in Honor of Any Literary Character in History—A Distinguished Committee—City of Great Poets.

A movement is on foot in London which is beginning to attract attention from parts of the world. It has for its object the erection of a monument to Shakespeare. From present indications, a greater fund will be raised for the purpose than has ever been collected in honor of any literary character in history.

A Monument to An Era.

Monuments, in the mind of the average Englishman, seem post-mortem appurtenances of great military heroes or of statesmen. To many there may appear a surprising incongruity in the notion that a poet or a playwrite should be thus commemorated. In the case of Shakespeare, however, an exception is made. It is a fact, and an odd fact, that the world has had but one poet, or an author of plays. It is not the playwright whose monument will be honor, but a certain force which is connoted by the name. Shakespeare is not an historical character, but an historical event, an era, perhaps the most glorious in our literary history. So great and marvelous a place does he occupy in the world's eye that he has done his memory seems on a parity with that of the Prince of Peace or the applause won by the National Anthem. The Shakespeare monument will in this form it assumes, will be a monument to a race.

The Distinguished Committee.

Some such ideas as these were eloquently set forth at a meeting which met at a recent gathering in the Mansion House at London, called for the purpose of considering the matter. Among those who were present and spoke were Lord Rosebery, who is now president of the British Academy; the Right Honorable Sidney Lee, a noted Shakespearean scholar; Anthony Hope Hawkins, Sir Walter Besant, Sir Algernon Borebohm Tree, and Prof. Gollancz, the latter honorary secretary of the gathering. Others who were there and expressed willingness to serve on the committee that shall conduct the movement are the Princess Louise, the Duchess of Marlborough, the Duke of Marlborough, Lord Roberts, Admiral Fremantle, the Archbishop of Canterbury, the then diplomatic body in London, the Lord Mayor, the presidents of the British Museum, the National Gallery, the Royal Academy and many other distinguished men. The name of every gentleman who was present, and whose name may not be so familiar to our readers, was Mr. Richard Badger, Philip Hawkins, a well known London gentleman has already contributed £1,000 to the fund, in addition to £1,000 for a specific purpose and £500 for the working expenses of the appeal. Another gentleman who could not be present sent a check for 500 guineas.

The City of Great Poets.

It may well be asked what has precipitated the movement at the present time. For many years a monument has been urged, but those interested with the matter agreed to wait until the London County Council came to their assistance, and recently announced that it was ready to do for the monument. The Council felt that it could hardly consider the claims of memorials for collecting funds, and so the Lord Mayor summoned a meeting of those interested. As Dr. Furnivall said, it is fitting that London, as a city, should do something to commemorate its fame as a home of poets. "Chaucer, Spenser, Shakespeare all lived here, and thus the smoky, foggy old city on the Thames has a better claim to other city ever equaled.

An Ecclesiastical Proposal.

What form the monument shall take was not decided by the committee, though many suggestions were made. Prof. Gollancz said that several distinguished gentlemen in the United States had proposed that whatever money was raised in excess of the fund be used in strengthening the fabric of their cathedrals. In return they promised that the poet's bust should be carefully attended to each year on his birthday. As profane now as it may seem to precisely identify that day, they had, moreover, ignored the fact. It is simply unlikely that this idea will be accepted, despite the suggestion that worship may be gained by furnishing Shakespeare with a suitable birthday. The most important suggestion that was made by the gathering was summoned to discuss. This was that a Shakespearean memorial temple should be erected in London to enhance. Most of those present seemed of opinion that it would be impossible for such a temple to be constructed, until it was known how much money would be available. The cost could be found out to suit the cloth.

London's Most Beautiful Monuments.

Mr. Hawkins voiced the opinion of a number who dissented from the idea of a memorial of the artistic point of view as opposed to the practical. There was no doubt in favor of diverting a pound from the main purpose, which he conceived to be the erection of a beautiful monument, not a museum, a hospital, or a lecture hall. Westminster Abbey was the example. After the most beautiful monument in London, it was also the most practical, if they was any, might be used to further its beauty.

No National Theatre Needed.

Lord Avebury thought that the original purpose of the Shakespearean temple which should do for literature what Westminster Abbey has done for science, was the best advanced. It was agreed, however, that more time should be granted for a full expression of public opinion on the subject. Reference was made to the desire of other countries—notably France and the United States—to contribute toward the memorial, and the feeling was that assistance of the sort should be courteously accepted. Before very long we may expect to hear more of the Shakespeare memorial.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and he chooses.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

A PAINFUL ACCIDENT.

MR. B. TUTE FALLS FROM A CHAIR, BREAKING TWO RIBS.

On Sunday morning Mr. Robert Tuite, painter, of this city, was the victim of a painful accident. At the time Mr. Tuite was in the John St. Presbyterian Church and was standing upon a chair, when he by some means slipped and fell striking upon his left side. The result was that two ribs were broken. As soon as possible after the accident medical aid was secured and the proper remedy applied. It will be some time before Mr. Tuite will be able to resume his occupation.

False and Misleading.

Some person who is apparently desirous of causing mischief or who thinks himself a practical joker, is to say the least, extremely annoyance to the Old Boys' Reunion Committee, by issuing an utterly false statement and circulating it through the mails to various citizens. The following is a sample of the absurd "demand" made upon citizens:

Belleville, June 29th, 1905.

Mr. ——, City.—

Dear Sir,—As there will be a large number of people here for the Old Boys' Reunion, and as the hotels will not be able to accommodate them all, it will be necessary for the residents to assist.

I therefore demand that you make preparations for the accommodation of eight people.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH PICNIC GREAT SUCCESS

Premier Whitney and Hon. J. J. Foy in Attendance—Speeches of a Congratulatory Character—Good Programme of Sports Provided—Most Pleasurable Occasion—A Goodly Sum Realized for the Rebuilding Fund.

Yesterday was King's weather, and the scene was the Agricultural Park. There a large number of the city's population participated in one of the big events of the season, namely, a demonstration under the auspices of St. Michael's Church. The members of St. Michael's were not alone in the celebration for friends came from east and west, and north and south, making the gathering one of several hundred pleasure seekers. Everything transpired to make the day one of pleasure as well as profit. The occasion was graced by the presence of Hon. J. P. Whitney, K. C. Premier of Ontario, and Hon. J. J. Foy, Attorney-General.

A word or two in the financial object of the picnic will explain the ready response which brought the receipts up to a goodly sum. It was towards the rebuilding fund of St. Michael's Church, which was destroyed by fire a few months ago. Rev. Father Twomey, the popular parish priest, was at the head of the affair, and he certainly is deserving of favorable comments for the success which crowned his efforts, as are also the ladies and gentlemen who were able assistants. All worked harmoniously together for the success of the demonstration, and to detail each one intended to perfectly, and there was pleased satisfaction on every hand. A platform for the speakers and ample refreshment booths plied a brisk business during the afternoon, and everything suggested a fortnight which had been carefully planned. All elements tending to a day's enjoyment. The ladies of St. Michael's excelled themselves. Their sphere, of course, was the commissariat, which was exceedingly well ordered, and dinner time was marked by most commendatory decisions as to the quality of the viands prepared, and of the hospitality of the ladies of the congregation. Everybody who experienced these will assuredly count the day well spent.

In the afternoon shortly after 2 o'clock, to the soul-stirring strains of the I.O.O.F. band, the distinguished visitors of the day were escorted to a platform which had been erected in front of the grand stand, and an hour was spent in speech-making. Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.L.A., presided over the Gathering and in opening the proceedings Mr. Corby said as follows:

Ladies and Gentlemen.

I am delighted to have the honor and privilege here to-day, and especially as I have been given a hint to make my remarks brief and give the time to our distinguished guest, the Honorable J. P. Whitney, Premier of the Province of Ontario, and the Honorable J. J. Foy, Attorney-General, as I know you are all anxious to hear them.

I congratulate Father Twomey on this great success, and I think he must been puttin up for the purpose of raising money for the rebuilding of the beautiful St. Michael's Church, which unfortunately was burned down a few months ago. I have built some few years ago under the pastorate of the late and lamented friend, Monsignor Farrelly, who we all regret has left us, owing to ill health. I am sure I am voicing the feelings of not only the members of St. Michael's congregation but of the Protestants of the city of Belleville when I say that he may be said to have gained or enjoy the comforts and rest to which he is so justly entitled.

St. Michael's congregation is to be congratulated on having secured the able successor to Monsignor, a gentleman who is well known to all you all and one that has made great sacrifices in the interests of this great Province.

Hon. J. J. Foy was the first speaker and was cordially received. He referred to the pleasure he experienced in being present at the demonstration. A public man was in need of a little recreation, as all work and no play would make one dull. It was a pleasure to see in this great Province of Ontario, with its many industries and all creeds of citizens. We were a happy and happy and prosperous people. We have magnificent prospects in this Province, and they should be used to the advantage of all. We were also a united people working together for the best interest of all. The Province had been highly favored by a multitude of ways for, and we should use these grand gifts for the benefit of all. We should not be small-minded or petty, but broad and benevolent. His prayer was that all should live harmoniously together as true Canadians. We had a great destiny before us and we should work out that destiny together, thus making the country prosperous. He had no fear of the future of this country if the descendants of the pioneers, who bowed out homes for themselves from the primeval forests, were but true to their traditions. (Applause.)

In introducing the next speaker, Premier Whitney, Mr. Corby said: I now have very great pleasure in calling on Honorable J. P. Whitney, Premier of the Province of Ontario, a gentleman of whom I am proud to have been a follower ever since he entered political life, and I am pleased to say to-day that he is endorsed not only by the Conservatives of Ontario, but by thousands of Liberals who assisted in placing him at the head of this Province at the last general election, and if he continues as he has started in, to give us a good clean and honest administration, I am sure that he will live long to fill the honorable position that he holds to-day, and retain the confidence of both parties.

As the Premier stepped forward to speak Mayor Sulman read to him the following address:

To the Honorable James Pliney Whitney, K.C., LL., Premier of the Province of Ontario.

On this your first visit of a non-political character to the City of Belleville since your elevation to the exalted and honorable position of Premier of the great Province of Ontario, as Mayor of the city I desire to extend to you a welcome on behalf of the Corporation and to offer congratulations to you upon your receiving such a hearty manifestation of confidence from the people of this great province, and the approval of the representative of our Sovereign. The fame and growth of a country such as the Province of Ontario, to which the abundant natural wealth to develop the resources of this young Empire is a task that requires the highest order of ability, and you may feel yourself chosen to perform that task, by numbers never before equalled in this province, must be a source of great gratification to yourself and friends.

They must indeed be strong and worthy men who would attempt to wrest from you the honorable and well-earned distinction it is your privilege to enjoy.

Your modest demeanor and frank open nature have won for you the affection of the people, and all realize that you are held enough to be honest and honest enough to be bold.

It is worthy of note that your visit to our city is in the cause of peace and harmony, and for the especial purpose of aiding a large number of our esteemed fellow-citizens, to complete a grand and noble edifice, wherein they shall be able to meet and unitedly worship and glorify our Great Creator.

CHAS. N. SULMAN,
Mayor.

When His Worship had concluded Little Misses Florence Bell and Queenie Grant and Master A. C. Meagher presented to the Premier and Hon. J. J. Foy handsome bouquets. The little girls were in return saluted by the recipients.

MR. WHITNEY'S SPEECH.

In his opening remarks the Premier replied to the address presentation by the Mayor, thanking him for the kind words of welcome. He would carry back with him kindly recollections of this visit to Belleville. He was pleased that the city, which showed signs of prosperity, would in the future prosper and prove to be an energetic and progressive one. He was pleased to visit at this particular time, the Province not said it was a pleasure to be here. When he received two months ago an invitation to be present on this occasion he accepted it, believing he referred in glowing terms to Father Twomey, whom he had known for many years and whom he regarded as a true personal friend. The church over which he had been chosen as its pastor were a favored people and should be happy under his pastorate. He was also pleased to be present to assist in the good work for which the demonstration was held. It was not his intention to make a political speech although if it was necessary he could do so, and he would say one word which would in the least offend a Liberal. We were a free people and the people were the rulers of the country. They say which party shall rule and conduct the affairs. When one party is in power and the other party in opposition it means that the people have endorsed the policy of one thus rejecting the policy of the other party. On this occasion this we can all meet on common ground. The Dominion of Canada was now 38 years old, as it was 38 years ago that Confederation took place, and the various provinces were united into one grand confederation. The people were fully responsible to the people. Whilst there have been differences of opinion, still as a whole we are a contented and happy people. It was also a pleasure to say although we are a people of different creeds we could upon occasions like this meet upon one common platform and intermingle with kindly feeling. If we had not we would rub shoulder to shoulder more frequently, all imaginary troubles and differences would fade away. We all should appreciate the liberties which we enjoy. In conclusion the speaker again referred to the satisfaction he gave him to be present, and it would be a great satisfaction to revisit the city of Belleville again in the future. (Loud applause.)

REV. FATHER TWOMEY.

Rev. Father Twomey said that he was extremely pleased that the Premier and his distinguished colleague were present and St. Michael's congregation owed them a debt of gratitude. He appreciated to the fullest extent the honor conferred upon the demonstration by their presence. The Rev. gentleman then spoke in an eulogistic manner of the Premier, whom he had known for years and whom he highly esteemed. He was in every sense of the word an honorable man.

MR. J. W. JOHNSON.

Mr. J. W. Johnson rose to move a vote of thanks to the Premier and Hon. J. J. Foy, and in doing so made a few excellent remarks. The object of the gathering was a worthy one, namely, to assist in rebuilding a temple for the worship of God. He was pleased that all could assist in this and it showed that Canadians dwell together in unity. He had much pleasure in moving a vote of thanks to the Premier and Hon. J. J. Foy.

Mayor Sulman in a few appropriate words seconded the motion, which was cordially received and gracefully accepted by the distinguished guests.

Sports and Games.

After the addresses the sports were carried out according to the programme and caused considerable enjoyment. The various events and the winners were as follows:

BASEBALL.

During the forenoon an interesting game of baseball was played on the park between teams representing the Lock Factory and Marsh & Henthorne's employees. The game was one of unusual excitement, resulting in a victory for the foundry boys, who scored 5 runs to their opponents 4 during the 9 innings, which were played. Mr. J. H. Truscott was umpire and did his duties impartially. The players and their positions were as follows:

Soundrymen — W. Bawden c, Fales p, Quinney 1b, Reeve 2b, Connell s s, Hunter rf, Clement 3b, G. Bawden lf, Reeser cf.

Lock Factory — Tuite c, Saunders p, French 1b, Watkins 2b, Page ss, Tuite 3b, Stapley lf, Bowen cf, Guire cf.

Baseball match was played between teams representing the Fifteenth Regiment and a team from Northport. The soldiers' boys was securing 1 goal to their opponents 0. Mr. W. J. Hardy was the referee.

NERVOUSNESS A CALAMITY.

Many who don't realize what lies beyond, treat an attack of the "nerves" with indifference. Others conceal it, and it will soon pass away. But in every case nervousness is a calamity. Only one remedy will cure—Dr. Agnew's nerve strengthener that acts through the blood. First, it gives you appetite—you eat plenty. This fills the blood with nourishment for the cells and tissues, and strength is instilled into every part of the system. You get well—keep well—because you're healthy. TOURING IN RUSSIA.

The Difficulties of One Who Cannot Speak the Language.

Nijni Novgorod, where the great Russian fair is held, for on toward the frontier of Asia, I found the most difficult proposition in all Europe from the standpoint of the traveler seeking rest and refreshment. I knew only one word in Russian, "vodka," and even to pronounce that too often. Nobody seemed to speak anything but Russian. I could not get a cabman to take me to a hotel. One invoschic after another would pick me up, seem to understand, and then take me to a shop, a steamship pier, a private residence. I was relieved to the humiliating necessity of making pictures of hotels, beds and food of all sorts—and quite without avail. At last, belittling myself that the trade of Russia was in German hands, I started out afoot in search of any mercantile looking person with close cropped blond beard and spectacles. Such a man I found, and he directed me in German to a traktir, where I had breakfast with the aid of more crude cartooning. "Coffee" is good Volapuk, and the waiter understood me at once, but I had to sketch a number of elliptical figures in my notebook and finally make a spirited drawing of the common or garden hen before he knew I wanted "eggs."

For dinner that night I went to a restaurant overhanging the Volga. It is one of my most baffling memories of travel that when in my thirst I made the sign of drinking and pointed to the river the waiter lowered a bucket out of the window into the stream and brought it to me filled with rich brown water.

THE MUD DAUBER WASP.

She Entombs Living Spiders as Food For Her Young.

When summer warmth has awakened the maternal instincts of the insect world the mud dauber wasp may be seen gathering mortar at the margin of a stream, pool or puddle. Filling her mandibles, which serve as both spade and hod, she bears the load of mud to some rough surface, rock or wall or board or beam. She spreads and shapes her mortar until, after many visits to the mud bed, she has built a tubular cell about an inch long and three-eighths of an inch wide.

Then her business instinct awakens and her raids upon the spider realm begin. Within its cylinder the mother mason will put a single egg. In course of time this will hatch into a ravenous larva whose natural food is living spiders, and these the mother proceeds to capture and entomb while her mud daub nursery. On this errand she may be seen hawking over and near cobwebs of various sorts, venturing within the meshed and beaded snares and decoying toward her inconsiders and sometimes even to herself. If the occupant, expectant of prey, sallies forth to seize the intruder, it finds itself a captive, not a captor. The wasp shakes the silken filament from wings and feet, turns upon the spider with fang and stings it, bears it to her cell and thrusts it therein.—H. C. McCook in Harper's Magazine.

With Volunteer Crew Goes to Sink the Kniaz Potemkine.

Single Russian Torpedo Boat Destroyer Undertakes Big Contract in Hope of Ridding Black Sea of Mutineers —Rear-Admiral Chouknin Commands British Ship for Odessa Refugees—Riot Victims 6,000.

St. Petersburg, July 4.—According to a despatch received by an official agency, the torpedo boat destroyer, Smeetilyy, with a volunteer crew, has sailed from Odessa with the intention of sinking the Kniaz Potemkine.

With Kniaz and other unprotected ports of Roumania, Bulgaria and Turkey at the mercy of the battleship's guns, and with the inability of Vice-Admiral Kruger's squadron to intercept, with her career tacitly admitted by retiring them from commission, this desperate expedient was seized upon to prevent international complications, and to rid the Black Sea of mutineers.

This problem for a single destroyer, which is difficult and dangerous at best, as she will have to encounter both the Kniaz Potemkine and her attendant torpedo boat, is now complicated by the departure of the battleship from Kustendji, and ignorance as to where she will next turn up; but a despatch from Kustendji throws a gleam of hope on the dark situation by intimating that the considerable number of her crew are anxious to desert their leaders and to escape the consequences of their ominous actions.

The Admiralty, however, it should be stated, does not admit that the Smeetilyy has gone on such an errand, though the officials say frankly that the Kniaz Potemkine must in law be regarded as a pirate.

"As far as Russia, as a matter of principle, would like to see the provisions of the treaty of Paris, forbidding the Dardanelles, abrogated, the Foreign Office would oppose the passage of foreign warships as a temporary, expedient, feeling the concession did not warrant such a measure.

SHOT AT MUTINEERS.

But Roumanian Warship Didn't Strike the Kniaz Potemkine.

Bucharest, Roumania, July 4.—The Russian torpedo boat No. 267, accompanying the Kniaz Potemkine, attempted to enter the port of Kustendji yesterday. The Roumanian cruiser Elisabetha fired on the torpedo, but failed to hit her. The torpedo boat then retired. The Kniaz Potemkine left Kustendji yesterday afternoon. It is state she is returning to Odessa.

The incidents followed the refusal of the crew of the Kniaz Potemkine to accept the Government's offer, made through the captain of the port, who personally announced that the mutineers would not be allowed to receive provisions unless they came ashore unarmed and delivered up the battleship and torpedo boat to the captain of the port. If these conditions were fulfilled the mutineers would be given their liberty to go where they pleased. The rebellious steamers conferred together and refuse the Government's demand, to refuse the Government's demand, and renewed their demand for provisions.

This was again positively refused by the captain of the port, whereupon the Russian torpedo boat attempted to enter the port, but on being fired on by the Elizabetha and evidently awed by the fires and taken by the authorities, she decided to retire.

SEARCHES BRITISH SHIP.

Russian Torpedo Boat Destroyer Takes the Cranleyin Charge.

Odessa, July 4.—Estimates of the number killed during the fires and pillaging of last week run as high as 6,000. A far greater number were shot dead, but many of the bodies were incinerated.

The military commandant to-day appointed Gen. Karakosoff, commander of the Lubny regiment, to the post of Governor-General of Odessa. Karakosoff later summoned the editors of the Odessa newspapers and blamed them for the sensational reports of the riots. The Governor-General ordered the editors not to use the slightest provocation to the present outbreak nor to the strike.

The surrender of the Georgi Pobiedonoseets was formally carried out yesterday morning. The warship's officers returned from Nikolaieff, went on board and pledged the ringleaders of the mutiny and several of their followers, all of whom were sent ashore. A torpedo boat destroyer and a gunboat arrived here during the night, bringing Rear-Admiral Chouknin, commander of the Black Sea fleet. The city is quiet. Many strikers have returned to work.

British Ship is Searched.

The torpedo boat destroyer, upon her arrival here, fired a blank shot across the bow of the British steamer Cranley, lying off Pontana, for the purpose of taking off British subjects if necessary. The destroyer then signalled the Cranley to accompany her inside the harbor. The Cranley complied, the destroyer in the meanwhile keeping her guns trained on the steamer. Later, Russian officials took possession of the Cranley and searched her for revolutionary refugees. The British Consul-General protested to the Governor, saying there was no reason to suppose that any refugees were on board the steamer. It is presumed she will be released shortly.

Another British Ship Freed.

The British Consul-General last evening released the five vessels which had been held in readiness to remove the British subjects. The Consul-General considers that all danger has passed. The Cranley incident is ended. The officials, in the presence of revolutionists, and the Russian officials apologized to the Consul-General.

Peasant disturbances in the neighborhood of Odessa are giving rise to much apprehension. The peasants are forcibly occupying lands and seizing live stock. Troops have been sent to suppress the disorders.

No Reason to Interfere.

London, July 4.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Earl Percy, the Foreign Under-Secretary, replying to a suggestion that friendly representations should be made to Russia, proposing a temporary suspension of the treaty excluding foreign warships from the Black Sea, so that British vessels might safeguard the lives and property of British subjects at Odessa, said the present circumstances at Odessa did not afford sufficient grounds for such a departure from the treaty regulating the Black Sea.

More Mutiny at Cronstadt.

Cronstadt, July 4.—The crew of the Russian battleship Minine refused to put to sea yesterday with the other vessels of the fleet squadron, objecting that the age and bad conditions of the Minine prevented her participation in gun practice and manoeuvring. Ringleaders of the mutiny were arrested, and the Minine was towed close to a fort, where she is now anchored.

St. Petersburg, July 4.—Late last evening a rumor was current here that the port of Cronstadt had been closed to foreign shipping, and that all commercial vessels there had been ordered to St. Petersburg.

Strike Hits Ship Yards.

St. Petersburg, July 4.—The strike of the Novsky ship yards, which began early last week, became general yesterday. There is marked excitement in labor circles. Leaflets are being scattered broadcast detailing the recents events of Lodz and Odessa.

During the afternoon there were numerous collisions between the police and strikers on the Schlusselburg causeway, and the Cossacks, who were summoned, charged and dispersed the workmen with their whips.

CHURCH AND STATE.

After Long Fight French Chamber of Deputies Passes Momentous Bill — Amid Intense Excitement.

Paris, July 4.—The bill for the separation of church and state passed by the Chamber of Deputies late last night by the decisive vote of 341 to 233. The bill, which was passed after passionate cheers and Opposition hisses, and which was long anticipated.

The system swept away by this bill dates from 1801, when the famous Concordat" was signed by Pius the Seventh and Napoleon. This gave religious organizations the right to be incorporated, property with the exception of edifices for worship and church administration being under the control of a committee of three President's cabinet. The new system abolishes all laws and regulations under the Concordat and transfers the authority of the concordat itself.

Fish Trust Surrenders.

Sault Ste. Marie, July 4—Acting on a petition setting forth the grievances of the people here against Shields & Co., the alleged fish "trust," Hon. J. Dryden, Minister of Marine, came to Ottawa to fish in the Canadian waters of Lake Superior. When it was found that a small result in two hundred or more men being thrown out of employment, a number of the Premier's cabinet were consulted, and many signed by Mayor Plummer and many prominent citizens, the Minister was given fishing rights west of Pancake Bay. As a result of the drastic action taken by the administration it is claimed that the fishing trust has completely surrendered to the people.

Floods Carried Away Dam.

Westport, July 4.—The Westport water works dam, which a few years ago were broken and carried away Sunday night, as well as the mill and other property, and which Mr. C. Preston hurriedly dam and the bridges at Moon River, Forest and Main street in this village. Damage are estimated at $10,000.

Leave Tokio July 10.

Tokio, July 4.—The amount of repairs to the steamer Minnesota at Nagasaki, it is doubtful if Rear-Admiral Sperry will start with the fleet for Washington before July 10 to participate in the peace negotiations between Japan and Russia. Premier Katsura will act as Minister of Foreign during the absence of Baron Komura.

Governors' Resigns.

The Hague, July 4.—The Cabinet headed by Dr. A. Kuyper has resigned. The resignation is due to the decision of the Government in the recent elections in Holland.

Governor Resigns.

Constance was there. Her mother, having forgotten to do something for her which she had promised, said: "Oh darling, I forgot it! Wasn't it naughty of me?" Constance replied considerately: "Oh, no, mother, dear; not naughty only stupid!"

IMPORTANCE OF THE FIRST STEP

Dyspeptics Should Begin Right by Using Smith's Triple Cure.

The first point in the treatment of dyspepsia is to remove the cause—to cure the catarrh which causes the dyspeptic condition. When your stomach is exempt from overwork, when your teeth are sound and the gums pink, you have gone a long way toward relief by removing the burden. Stomach catarrh, or indigestion, is the mother of disease is due to catarrh of the stomach. Smith's Triple Cure is recommended as a remedy for catarrh wherever located. Its use is the first step toward relief. Be right by first curing the cause of the cause. Smith's Triple Cure will always be found reliable in the cure of catarrh in the stomach and searched her for revolutionary refugees. The British Consul-General protested to the Governor, saying there was no reason to suppose that any refugees were on board the steamer. It is presumed she will be released shortly.

LULU WILKINSON DIES

Tired of Wayward Life Young Woman Drinks Acid.

Discharged From Mercer Reformatory Only Two Days Ago, She Commits Suicide Before Friends on a Toronto Street — Miss Rebecca Brammer Loses Right Arm and Leg in Trolley Accident—Drowned in the Don.

Toronto, July 4.—Dead by her own hand, Lulu Wilkinson lies in the morgue of the Emergency Hospital.

Shortly before 9 o'clock the woman went into the Hargreaves Drug Store on West Queen street, near Dufferin avenue, and asked the clerk for a quantity of carbolic acid. She was handed the bottle containing the poison and was asked to sign the record book. As she did so, her hand trembled. She signed her name "Lulu Wilkinson, 65 Ulster street."

Walking quickly out of the door, she crossed to the entrance to the old Waverley Hotel, near Spence street. Standing there in the shadow, she raised the bottle to her lips and swallowed the poison. In doing so, the acid spilled over her mouth and lower part of her face.

She walked to the pavement, and, half walking, half running, turned the corner of Simcoe street, and sank to her knees, prostrate, in a wild scream of agony. Pedestrians stopped and rushed to her assistance. She was taken to the hospital, where she died in a few moments.

A policeman was sent to the address given by the woman when she entered the poison, and found there her uncle, Robert Armstrong, resident of Lisgar street. Mrs. Armstrong had been committed to the Mercer Home three ago, and had finished serving her sentence only two days ago. She had not visited him since her release, and it is a fear to grief and humiliation for her act other than she was tired of the wayward life she had led.

LINDSAY EDITOR SUICIDES.

A. W. Mallett of Watchman-Warder Shoots Himself.

Lindsay, July 4.—While temporarily insane A. W. Mallett, an editor of The Watchman-Warder, took his own life Sunday morning in the press room of the office. He shot himself through the heart.

Deceased title, which Col. Sam Hughes had presented to Mr. Mallett on the occasion of his visit to South Africa, was found by the side of the dead man with an empty shell in the breech.

Mr. Mallett had been troubled with insomnia for weeks. Loss of sleep from these causes had rendered him ultimately accountable for his actionf.

An inquest was held and the verdict rendered was temporarily insane.

Toronto, July 4.—After seeing his 7-year-old chum, Harry Hale of 90 St. David street, drowned in the Don in an effort to untie an old punt yesterday afternoon, John Scott, a 15-year old lad, took to his heels and ran home. Neither Scott's parents nor the mother of the drowned lad knew anything of the fatality until four hours later, when the latter's anxiety over his absence prompted her to make a search. It was then the terrible Scott told of the drowning.

Died of Injuries.

Toronto, July 4.—Run down by a motor car on Yonge street, one week last night, Rebecca Brenner, aged 13, of 126 Elizabeth street, had her arm and leg amputated at the Emergency Hospital. Though she is weak from the loss of blood, the woman has a chance for recovery.

Killed Two Wagon, Shock Kills.

Toronto, July 4.—Jolted off his delivery wagon, James Macdonald, aged 48, of 151 Preston street, fell upon his head upon the pavement and died from the shock. Also Ice Cream in different flavors.

VOL. 39 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1905. NO. 55

NEW POWER COMMISSION.

Ontario Governments Names Three Manufacturers For the Positions.

Toronto, July 5.—Hon. Adam Beck, Mimico without portfolio in the Whitney Government, manufacturer, London.

George Pattinson, member of the Legislative Assembly for North Waterloo, manufacturer, Preston.

P. W. Ellis of the firm of P. W. Ellis & Co., manufacturers, Toronto.

These men compose the Ontario Government commission to investigate the question of electric power development. A session of the Cabinet was held yesterday afternoon, when they were named to look into the whole question and suggest means of bringing the vast water power resources of the Province under control.

M. Whitney stated yesterday that the commission had been given very wide powers, practically carte blanche, to gather information.

A report will be presented to the Government, and the policy to be pursued will then be determined upon.

It is probable that Hon. Adam Beck will be chairman of the commission. He has taken a most intelligent and lively interest in electric power development. The other gentlemen are also practical manufacturers, and their appointment is such an important commission will be received with satisfaction.

30,000 Chinese Protest.

Hong Kong, July 5.—A meeting, representing 30,000 Chinese, was held at Canton July 1 to discuss the Chinese Exclusion Act. As a result the native Chamber formulated a petition to President Roosevelt protesting against the exclusion act.

Gets $1,200 Compensation.

Toronto, July 5.—For injuries received while unloading a car on the Tillsonburg, Lake Erie & Pacific R.R., Chief Justice Falconbridge yesterday gave Adam Meenie, a laborer, $1,200 compensation. Meenie asked for $5,000, who at a previous trial was given only $1,000. The company appealed and lost $200. They will appeal again.

Raised a Pay Cheque.

Montreal, July 5.—V. Malrowsh, an employe of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. at Montreal, who was arraigned yesterday morning on a charge of forgery, having raised the amount of one of the company's pay cheques, was sentenced to two months' hard labor.

Smetilvy Now On the Hunt.

Signalled Kustenji That She Sought Kniaz Potemkine.

Mutineers on the Kniaz Potemkine, Officially Declared Pirates, Have Declared War on All Russian Vessels—They Send a Note to the Powers to That Effect—Reported Attack on an Italian Ship.

Bucharest, Roumania, July 5.—The Danube torpedo boat destroyer Smetilvy appeared off Kustenji yesterday and signalled that she was seeking the Kniaz Potemkine.

It is stated that the Kniaz Potemkine has attacked an Italian vessel carrying coal. There is much uneasiness among Russian war vessels at Roumanian ports.

PIRATES DECLARE WAR.

Kniaz Potemkine's Crew Hands Declaration to Kustenji's Prefect.

Bucharest, July 5.—Before the Kniaz Potemkine sailed from Kustenji, a delegation from the crew handed the prefect a proclamation addressed to the representatives of the powers in Roumania, formally declaring war on all Russian vessels which refuse to join the mutineers.

The proclamation says the Kniaz Potemkine will respect neutral territory and foreign shipping.

The delegation requested that the proclamation be forwarded to the powers.

Threaten a Village.

Berlin, July 5.—A despatch to the Lokal Anzeiger from Odessa says the Kniaz Potemkine threatened to attack a village of German colonists on the coast near Odessa and requisitioned and took on board some cattle.

Reviving a Mutiny.

Odessa, July 5.—An attempt to revive the mutiny on the battleship Georgi Pobiedonosetz was discovered yesterday. It was frustrated by loyal sailors, who delivered six of the leaders to the authorities. The torpedo boats which remained here have gone to sea.

It is reported persistently in army and navy circles that the Kniaz Potemkine is being stalked and pursued by several torpedo boats, who intend to sink her. The crews of these boats consist of officers and stokers, who volunteered.

Sighted Off Odessa.

London, July 5.—A despatch to The Evening Standard from Odessa says the Kniaz Potemkine has been sighted 28 miles off that port.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—It is stated that the transport Vecha, the crew of which joined the mutineers in the harbor of Odessa, surrendered yesterday in Russian waters.

Mutinied But Repented.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—The Minister of Marine has received the following telegram from Admiral Kruger:

"The crew of the transport Prout mutinied when leaving Boudrovo Bay, arresting the captain and other officers. Second Lieut. Nesterstsef and boatswain Kouliffine were killed.

"The Prout has arrived at Sebastopol and the crew is now repentant. The officers have been released, the crew begging them to resume their posts."

A Bomb Thrown.

Bilostok, Russia, July 5.—There was sporadic firing in several streets yesterday and a bomb was thrown in Lipowaa street, in the centre of the town. It is reported that several persons were killed.

Strikes Spread.

Tiflis, July 5.—The strikes, which are becoming general here, are spreading.

Japanese Victories.

Tokio, July 5.—The following official announcement was made yesterday from the headquarters of the Japanese army in Corea:—

"At dawn on July 3 four hundred of the enemy's cavalry with artillery approached Neromok. Our force repulsed them northward, inflicting heavy loss. Our detachment made a detour northward to cut off the enemy's infantry. Our detachment also scattered the enemy's cavalry retreating from Neromok."

Another despatch yesterday says: "At 8 o'clock on July 3 six hundred of the enemy's cavalry advanced toward the Pinna River. We repulsed them. One hundred and fifty of the enemy's cavalry and mounted infantry, with 18 guns, simultaneously attacked Sinchiku, eight miles north of Pinna River. The engagement lasted until three July 2, when the enemy was repulsed. The enemy's casualties were over four hundred. Ours were slight."

Jap Battalion Destroyed.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—Gen. Linevitch, telegraphing to Emperor Nicholas under date of July 3, reports the annihilation of a Japanese battalion. He says:

"On July 1 our forces assumed the offensive, occupying a position near Sandepu valley, sixteen miles south of Linchupen. At 7 in the evening, after the artillery had prepared the way, the enemy's fortified positions were stormed, and we pursued him for three miles. One Japanese infantry battalion was destroyed."

New War Minister.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—Lieut.-Gen. Rediger, head of the chancellery of the War Office, has been appointed Minister of War, in succession to Lieut.-Gen. Sakharoff, who recently resigned.

Japs Launch Big Battleship.

London, July 5.—The Prince and Princess Arisugawa Takehito attended the launching of the battleship Katori yesterday. The Katori is one of the most powerful battleships ever launched in this country.

How to Live to a Hundred.

New York, July 5.—Sitting in a chair at the home of his son in law, is Joseph Zeitlin, smoking a cigar and sipping a toddy. Joseph Zeitlin celebrating his 100th birthday, gave the following advice for longevity:

"Never have a doctor and don't go into a drug store. Don't worry. Never be in a hurry. Don't eat quick lunches. Take little meat especially in early life. Sleep eight hours a day. When you reach the age of 99 do as you please."

COSTLY FOREST FIRES IN YUKON

Million Dollars Damages to Timber Communication Suffers.

Dawson, T.T., June 28, via Seattle, July 5.—A thousand miles of the Northern Telegraph line have been rendered useless by sweeping forest fires throughout British Columbia, Yukon Territory, and Alaska.

Dawson's communication with the outside has been broken several days by interrupted connection via Skagway and cable. Between Dawson and White Horse the line fell in many places and poles were burned. Eagle to Valdez is another stretch damaged. Dawson to Fairbanks is also out of business.

It is not known how much further north the fire reaches. Nome and Fairbanks have been without services for many days.

Millions of feet of magnificent timber have been ruined, which, it is estimated, is worth a million dollars.

ONTARIO WILL SUE.

Government Objects to Cut in the Rate of Interest.

Toronto, July 5.—Hon. Col. Matheson said yesterday that Ontario's half-yearly subsidy of $474,000 from Ottawa, now due, had not yet been received by the treasury.

This subsidy will be the subject of a lawsuit this fall. Recently the Dominion Government decided that they would pay only 4 per cent. instead of 5 per cent. on the Upper Canada grammar school and land improvement funds. It makes a difference of $20,000. The Government entered suit in January and the case will come up in September, the Ontario Government's interests being watched by Messrs. Irving and Shepley.

The Dominion Government continues to pay 5 per cent. on the common school fund, in which Quebec shares.

Fire Brigade Disruption.

St. Catharines, July 5.—The city faces an entire disruption of its fire department within the next two months, with no apparent way of avoiding it. Last night, at a largely attended meeting of the Central Fire Co., it was resolved to notify the city council that in sixty days the company will disband, as a protest against the unfair treatment accorded its former chief and deputy chief, who, following the installation of a paid chief, have been summarily dismissed, the disbanding taking effect July 1. Aldermen present failed to appease the wrath of the firemen.

A Protectionist Ministry.

London, July 5.—(C.A.P.)—A Melbourne correspondent states that Lord Northcote refused Premier Reid's request for dissolution, and that Deakin is now engaged in forming a strictly protectionist Ministry. Deakin hints that the question of preferential trade will be the first to gain attention.

Contract Awarded.

Ottawa, July 5.—The contract for the Port Stanley breakwater has been awarded to Harvey & Miller. The price is in the neighborhood of $100,000.

GREAT ALTERATION CLEARANCE

Business in our Ladies' Ready-to-Wear and Furnishing Department has grown so rapidly of late that we find our present quarters altogether inadequate. During the next two months we purpose enlarging this department to nearly double its present size. Before we can do this we have to get a great deal of our present stock out of the way. As we have no place to store it, we must sell it out quickly and for the next few weeks we will make prices in this department on seasonable goods that would be almost ridiculous, were it not for our emergency.

Read over the list below, it will convince you of our determination to reduce this stock quickly.

If these offerings do not interest you watch for the next —they will be just as interesting.

A good baking oven is what every housewife requires in a range. Other advantages add to the usefulness of the range, but an easily regulated, perfect baking and roasting oven is an indispensable feature. It is the perfection in operation of the oven of the

that has made it such a striking success.

It is in the oven construction that the greatest difference is found between the Imperial Oxford and any other range on the market. The diffusive oven flue draws the cold air from the floor, superheats it, and distributes it throughout the oven, keeping it at an even temperature in all parts. This flue also makes it easy to regulate the heat of the oven and secure a marked saving in fuel. If your dealer doesn't handle the Imperial Oxford, write us direct and we will send you our catalogue and tell you where you can see the range.

Defaulters and Perjurers Rewarded.

The St. John's Sun tells its readers that "So far as the Laurier Government can settle such a matter it has been decided that the ambassadorship of public funds by government supporters in the public service is not only allowable, but rather meritorious. The last case reported is that of land agent who did not make returns of the money received. His case was investigated an and officer threw the blame on his young son, though it appears that the defalcations began before his son had anything to do with the case. In the end the embezzler was promoted to a position affording a better salary.

A similar case arose recently in another part of the Dominion and was treated in the same way.

In 1896 an officer of the civil service got into a state of lunacy and went to a county where his son was the candidate supporting Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Arriving there he took a false name, and, while so disguised, acted as agent for the candidate, signing and swearing to the papers under the assumed name, which was the one by which the son addressed him during their campaign operations. The facts were subsequently exposed and admitted by all the parties concerned to be as stated above. Sir Wilfrid himself in his place in Parliament excused the conduct of the culprits on the ground that it was an exhibition of fatherly affection. The Premier also contended that as the name taken by the official did not belong to any one in particular no forgery was committed. But not only in words did Sir Wilfrid Laurier commend the civil servant's offence. Promotions and increases in salary followed each other in rapid succession, so that his financial rewards were ample for the son it seed only be said that he is now Solicitor-General of Canada and one of the custodians of public morals in the country.

If all these three officers had performed their duties faithfully and honestly, maintaining their own good name and not assuming any other, yet had happened to declare themselves friendly to the Conservative party, they would not only have missed promotion, but lost their position

The lesson is clear. Public servants may steal and embezzle all manner of frauds, without impairing their prospects for promotion. All sins against the public and against the law may be forgiven, and in certain circumstances may be rewarded with increased pay and higher position The one official crime for which there is instant punishment and no forgiveness is a friendly feeling toward the Conservative party," and the editor added the Jackson case, worse than any of the three.

Science — What Next?

Scientific discoveries have made great advances during the past century. Steam power, telegraphy and telephone are not among the least of them.

Now we are told that a French modern alchemist, by the name of Jobert has discovered a method of converting lead into silver or gold and silver into gold. M. Helo publishes an article in La Presse affirming that Jobert on several occasions successfully performed the transmutation before witnesses, and that he is willing to reveal his method to a scientific committee. He desires the Academy of Science to investigate his discovery. Apart from this the Galeni deposits of Canada, and some people will rejoice, provided that the transmission of lead into gold does not cost more than the gold is worth.

A Californian scientist, by the name of Luther Burbank, tells the world that he has produced a blackwalnut tree that makes the fastest growth of any tree known. He regards this achievement as of immense importance commercially, for it will extend the use of walnut in the manufacture of furniture, and even permit its use as cord-wood for stove or grate fires. His success was attained by crossing two varieties of native black walnut. Walnut wood for manufacturing purpose now costs $250 to $500 per 1,000 feet. When new varieties are grown in sufficient quantities the price will be greatly reduced. Why not join hands with Jobert and have a gold tree at once?

BANG ON.

If you have a job on with keepers,
Just hang on;
Some one else for it is seeking,
So hang on.
Work the very best you can,
Better than the other man,
You will find it the best plan,
To hang on.

If the road is growing thorny,
Just hang on;
Mind not if your hands get horny,
Just hang on.
Labor's what the stomach fills,
Gives the health that throbs and thrills—
It's the rapid pace that kills,
Don't hang on.

If you're going up the slope,
Just hang on.
And the auto gear gets broke,
Just hang on,
Your machine may take a hump,
Fly down hill and hit a stump,
The' you're senseless from the bump,
Just hang on.

If your watch and chain's in pawn,
Just hang on
To the ticket, and hope on,
Just hope on.
Maybe luck will come your way,
You may have a winning day—
Take my advice, bear what I say,
And hang on.

A report comes from Winnipeg that a plan is on foot to turn the International over to the Grand Trunk Pacific, and abandon the section of the national transcontinental from Levis to Moncton. It were well if the report were true, for such a change would be better than the present management. Last year it cost the country $2,000,000 more to work it than the receipts. In addition to this there was the interest upon the $8,000,000 the road cost the country, which at 3 per cent. amounts to $240,000; so that last year the Intercolonial Railway cost the taxpayers of Canada $4,240,000. And the whole is not yet told!

The Moncton Transcript publishes an interview with an Intercolonial employee who says that the deficit on that road is "visible in the shape of new cars, new tools, and new machinery." What a blessing! Nothing else. The charges for all additional new cars, etc., are charged to capital account, and not to current expenses.

A recent writer has caustically referred to advertising as "the only art that now flourishes in England." They are past-masters at it in America, however, as we often admit by a flattering imitation of their ideas. Though business be never so slack may we never go the length to which it has been carried in a New England town, where an obituary notice has appeared in the following terms: "Died on the 11th inst., at his desk, Hartford-street, Mr. Edward Jones, much respected by all who knew and dealt with him As a man he was amiable, as a master quick to appreciate the virtues were beyond all praise, and his bearer hats only three dollars each. He has left a wife to deplore his loss, and a large stock to be sold cheap for the benefit of his family."

A PERILOUS TOWN.

Harney Oldfield, the automobilist, was talking about a trip that he had once made through Manitoba.

"The most dangerous town in Manitoba," he said, "is Brandon. Hazgrave is near Brandon, and on the outskirts of Hargrave, in front of a little inn, I dismounted.

"I found in the inn the landlord and another man. They sat side by side on a bench. They were both very old.

"'Excuse me, landlord,' I said, 'but can you tell me how far it is to Brandon?'

"The old man jumped up and bobbed behind the bar.

"'Brandy?' he said, in a thin quavery. 'Yes, indeed, sir, and very fine brandy it is.'

"He put a bottle and a glass before me.

"'I asked you,' I said, more loudly, 'how far it is to Brandon?'

"The best brandy, of course, sir,' he answered. 'I don't keep nothing but the best.'

"In despair I turned from this deaf veteran to the other old man on the bench.

"'Look here,' I said, 'can you tell me how far it is to Brandon?'

"The other old man, with a grateful look, rose and limped hastily up to the bar.

"'Thanks,' he said, 'I don't care if I do.'"

The dead to speak. In a recent guilloting at Orleans the doctor in attendance made a gruesome experiment, says a Paris correspondent. As the murderer's head fell into the basket the doctor seized it and shouted the man's name in the ear, whereupon the eyes opened slowly and then closed. This was done a second time, with the same effect, but to the third call there was no response. Professor Hartman explained that after death there is a sensibility of the tissues much longer in those executed in the full vigor of health than in the case of those after illness. In the Orleans case, he says, the eyelids opened not because the name was pronounced, but because the voice produced a reflex action on the nerves. They would have lifted just the same if any other sound had been called.

Literary Notes.

In evident anticipation of the thermometer uprising, which is certain to occur about this time o' year, the Delineator number for the August Designer has been kept at as low a temperature as possible. Ice is hardly demanded during August, probably not one ice consumer in ten knows the links of the chain which draws the blocks of frozen water from river or lake to the household refrigerator. It is made clear in the August Designer. A floating boardinghouse was a successful actuality which delighted a host of self-supporting women a few months ago. It was evoked from the moment its gang-plank was thrown out until lack of decking space forced it out of business. The scheme was too good a one to abandon, hence The Designer offers it for consideration to philanthropists and others who like their rivers, lakes or bays. "The Transformation of a Farm House," gives suggestions to owners of such real estate, and Mary Kilreth supplements it with an interesting article on interior furnishing. In "Domestic Life in Holland" some quaint and artistic Dutch pottery and silverware are pictured in beautiful effect. Miss Dertha Hasbrook writes of "The Visiting Lady's Maid," and describes lucidly the accomplishments which such a young woman must have at her finger-tips if she would win a lucrative livelihood. Harriet Whitney Durbin contributes a short story, "Pa's Speech," and F. Jenkins Hains, that noted writer of strenuous sea stories, in "The Temptation of Tommy," puts himself in touch with the feelings of a little child.

SPRAINED HER ANKLE.

"I slipped on an icy step and sprained my right ankle very badly, writes Miss Minnie Burgoyne, of Glenwood. It swelled to a tremendous size and caused intense pain. I applied Poison's Nerviline and got prompt relief. The swelling was reduced, and before long I was able to use my foot." For sprains, swellings and muscular pains Nerviline is the one sure remedy. Strong, penetrating, swift to relieve pain—that's Poison's Nerviline. Fifty years in use.

but we must have good men.

It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen three times larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen. .

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, July 10th, we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Belleville Methodist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—a number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how. .

A WOMAN TO BE PRETTY

Must Have Luxuriant and Glossy Hair, No Matter What Color.

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with scant hair. Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white, scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpicide, an entirely new result of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling hair, and prevents baldness.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. F. S. McKewon, special agent.

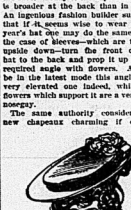

NATTY HEADGEAR.

THE NEW STYLE JUST RECEIVES LAST YEAR'S MODE.

Bats Now Wide and Uplifted at the Back Instead of the Front—Gay and Delightful French Shapes — The Toque For the Taller Made.

Last summer the brim of the hat was wide in front and tilted up over the face. Today it tilts up behind and is broader at the back than in front. An ingenious fashion leaflet suggests that if it seems wise to wear a last year's hat one may do the same as in the case of sleeves—which are turned upside down—turn the front of the hat to the back and prop it up to the required angle with flowers. And to be in the latest mode this angle is a very elevated one indeed, while the flowers which support it are a veritable nosegay.

The same authority considers the new chapeaux charming if chosen with a due regard to the exigencies of profile and type and mounted with intelligent care on the head. They are so inconsecutive, so delightful in their flowery extravagance, that they command a light bearted face beneath to do them justice as we must assume the virtue of a smile if we have it not. It is true many of the new French shapes are not suited to the generality of faces, but among such an infinity of choice there is no compulsion to BX in an unbecoming shape.

The toque which will prove most acceptable to the taller made woman probably will be the narrow shape, with brim rolled over on the crown, "shaken to the needle."

Some of the latest models in hats are in plateau form, small and much tipped over the face, though with but little projecting brim. The style is distinctly daring, yet of good effect. A novel hat is of soft green crin, the edge undulating slightly, and at the back, drawing upon the top as well as forming the necessary support above the hair, is posed a cluster of greenish white water lilies, open flowers and egg shaped buds with twists of green roped stems. The crin plateau imitates the leaf.

CORN STRAW HAT.
(Trimmed with foliage, a bunch of forget-me-nots and sky blue velvet.)

The new hats exact a certain style in hairdressing. The low coiffure is impossible with them. The hair is drawn high, skillfully and closely brought forward from the back, but the front may be as puffy or fluffy as one likes.

THE COLOR OF SNOW.

Although It Appears White, It Is Really a Delicate Blue.

Science, while it gets at the marrow and essence of things, upsets many pretty delusions and fancies. We have been taught from childhood that snow is white, and the impression conveyed to our brains through the medium of sight appears to settle the question beyond the possibility of a doubt, yet, though the judgment of our senses is to the contrary, it can be scientifically demonstrated that its true color is blue. It is a faint and delicate cerulean tint, to be sure, but decided enough to make the scientific declaration that snow is blue one that is positive and irrefutable.

It is a well known fact that pure water in small quantities is perfectly transparent. In large masses it is distinctly blue. Snow is simply the crystals of pure water. The reflection from these is that of all the colors of the rainbow or prism, but by uniting before they reach the eye cause snow to appear to be white. "But," you will say, "the single crystal also appears to be white." This is true beyond question, the reason being that that which appears to be a single crystal is in reality a multitude of microscopic threads, prisms, lines and dots.

In spite of their apparent great diversity in form and shape, which may vary from hairlike crystals to perfect stars of beautiful, delicate and intricate designs, they may be said to be absolutely uniform in original delineation, that of the hexagonal prism. The typical form is that of a straight needle of ice, radiating from a central nucleus, always at symmetrical distances and at angles of either 60 or 120 degrees. What may on casual examination be taken for exceptions to this rule are the little disks which occasionally fall. These on close examination proved to be six sided planes, the angle still being 120 degrees.

POLITE TO THE LAST.

A Maid In Whom Courtesy Was a Ruling Passion.

The Ellen in Samuel Luman Blanchard's excellent but now forgotten book, "Sketches From Life," had probably never heard of Emerson's saying, "There is always time enough for courtesy," but she embodied the great sage's principle in her daily intercourse with her fellow men. Politeness was a ruling passion with her. To the fishermnah's boy she would answer, "Yes, sir; sales, sir, it is quite convenient." Mr. Blanchard lodged with Ellen's mistress, and one day the manservant of a friend brought a parcel of books.

The man delivered the books into Ellen's hands then, remembering he was intrusted with a letter also, he searched his pockets in vain for the missive. Ellen, waiting in the hall, was greatly distressed.

"Oh, pray, sir, do not trouble yourself!"

"Trouble myself!" exclaimed the servant, "I've a letter to deliver I've got to deliver it." And he continued his search.

"I'm sorry to keep you waiting," broke out the apologetic Ellen.

"Why, it is I who am keeping you waiting," retorted the puzzled servant. "What are you talking about? Well, I can't find the letter."

"Oh, sir," entreated the maid, "never mind! I dare say it doesn't signify. Another time will do quite as well."

Mr. Blanchard's landlady was taken sick, and every day the lodger's inquiries were met by the faithful Ellen in somewhat this wise:

"Missis sends compliments, sir, and she had a very indifferent night," or, "My missis' compliments, sir, and she is better very much today."

One sad day when Ellen appeared with the breakfast her eyes were red and her lips quivered. In response to the usual question she sobbed out:

"Missis' compliments, sir, and she died this morning about 8 o'clock."

The Russian Samovar.

Every Russian peasant who is prosperous enough to enjoy the luxury of tea has his samovar. At all inns each visitor is supplied with one. It invariably consists of the traditional urn on the picnicker, and even the officers starting out upon a campaign find room for a small one in their baggage. Samovar signifies "self boiler." It is made of brass, lined with tin and with a tube in the center, in which the hot cinders of charcoal are placed after having been ignited. Often a pipe connects it with the chimney, and two friends will sit for hours drinking the boiling hot weak tea.

Thick Straight.

It would be impossible for a lawyer to make a reputation in his profession while continually thinking about medicine or engineering. He must think about law and must study and become thoroughly versed with all its principles. It is unscientific to expect to attain excellence or ability enough to gain distinction in any particular line while holding the mind upon and continually contemplating something radically different.

"Yes, but what would be the use? If he owned his own home he would simply mortgage it."

A Run-down Woman Cured by Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women.

Mrs. W. H. Graham, of Halifax, N.S., writing to us about the great benefit she received from Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women, says:

"If I had gone to Paris and consulted Dr. Hugohimself I could not have got more benefit that I did from his tablets."

And Mrs. Graham was right, for according to her statement, she was suffering from a run-down condition brought on by overwork. These tablets are just what Dr. Hugo would have given her.

Women are realizing more and more the value of a prescription of this great specialist, and now he has taken form.

These tablets put within their reach the skill and knowledge that come from Dr. Hugo's forty years' treatment of diseases of women, and the latest and best in medical research and discovery.

They make healthy women. Improvement is noticed from the first box. Get a box to-day by mail. B.N. Robinson & Co., Smithook, Que.

HENRI MURGER'S COATS

It Is Hard to Say In Which He Was the More Miserable.

A pleasant tale of the penurious days of Henri Murger, the author of the famous "Vie de Boheme," is related in a French review. Murger when in the extreme of poverty was one day invited to a party at the house of one of the publisher at which it was of great importance that he should be present. Unfortunately he possessed only one suit of clothes, which was in the last stage of shabbiness. He therefore applied to a friend who resided in the possession of two black coats—one old, the other new—to lend him one. This friend, not overwilling, lent him the old one. It was too small for him and very shiny at the seams, but by a liberal use of ink he managed to make it pass muster and attended the party. Unfortunately the friend was there, too, and in great anxiety over his coat followed Murger about the room with his eyes, never daring to stand on one right. You will spilt my coat," or "Now there's a tear, mind what you are doing with that coffee. You are spoiling it all down the front of my coat."

Murger suffered agonies of mortification as he moved about. Murger determined that nothing should make him apply for the same coat. Accordingly he went to another friend and related the whole circumstance. This friend willingly lent him a new dress coat which fitted admirably. But matters were not improved after all, for the wonder was at the party and followed Murger every where, exclaiming in tones of audible admiration: "Look at that man like with my coat, old man. Tear it right up the back or cover it with grease. Just as you like. I shall never say a word. Only too delighted to lend it to you."

Progress is the activity of today and the assurance of tomorrow.—Emerson.

Wanted an Up to Date Auto — or None at All

"SHALL we buy a new automobile?" The young husband looked at his wife anxiously. The voice had a strange tremor in it.

"The one we have is in perfect running order," he continued, "and the engine is not worn a bit. The bearings are like new. Two tires have all been renewed. Everything about it is in first class shape, and we can, I think, get along beautifully. Don't you, dear?"

The wife rose to her full height. It was evident that her indignation was fully aroused.

"You amuse me," she said, with a slight sneer. "As you always say, that they are not now using those bodies? Do you know that nature anything have gone out? Can you get it through your dull brain that nothing but a limousine body is fit for us? And do you suppose for one moment that I would ever demean myself by entering my machine from the rear? Why, I would just as soon wear last year's hat."

Whereupon her stricken husband immediately telephoned to have the back number taken to the iron factory.—Puck.

Returning the Photograph.

Marshall P. Wilder tells of a quarrel between a couple of his acquaintance who had been engaged for some months. The two broke off since haye "made up," but while their quarrel was at its height no ravrimination was too severe for either of them to put upon the other.

Of course the first thing the girl did after the breaking of the engagement was to write to the young man, requesting the return of various souvenirs, and she particularly desired him to send back her photograph, which, she declared in her note, she had given to him "in a moment of girlish folly."

The young man's reply was amusingly cruel. Said he: "I regret exceedingly that at present I am unable to find the photograph requested. However, I send you my entire collection of young ladies' photos, numbering some forty or fifty, among which, no doubt, you will find your own. The rest I shall shall keep in return for the best or of this."—St. Louis Republic.

Profitable Work.

"I believe every man ought to eat good and plenty of work," said the old man. "It never pays to work on an empty stomach."

"I disagree with you," remarked the quiet stranger. "I've found that it often pays very well."

"Indeed! What kind o' work do you do?"

"I'm a surgeon."—Philadelphia Press.

Fling Out Your Sunshine.

What a satisfaction it is to go through life radiating sunshine and hope instead of despair, encouragement instead of discouragement, and to feel conscious that even the newsboy or the bootblack, the car conductor, the office boy, the elevator boy or anybody else with whom one comes in contact gets a little dash of sunshine! It costs nothing when you buy a paper of a boy, or get your shoes shined, or pass into an office, or pay your fare to a conductor, to give a smile with it, to make these people feel that you have a warm heart and good will. Such salutations will mean more to us than we realize, for so called great things, it is the small change of life. Give it out freely. The more you give the richer you will grow.—Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine.

Long Lived Carp.

The ordinary carp, if not interfered with, will live to 20 years. There are now living in the royal aquarium in Russia several carp that are known to be over 100 years old, and it has been ascertained in a number of cases that whales live to be over 200 years old. A gentleman in London has had an ordinary goldfish for fifty-three years, and his father informed him that he had purchased it over forty years before it came to the present owner's possession.

Wall put. To read of such renegade to principle as the Toronto Globe prating about "the better life" of the community being affected by the campaigns in the recent bye-elections is enough to make honest men use unladylike language.

Mr. Barker, M. P., of Hamilton, declared in the House of Commons that were any railway directorate to issue a report such as that presented by the Minister of Railways in the Laurier Government, the directors would find themselves in jail.

Mr. Maclean, M. P., reminded the House that state ownership of railways had proven successful in Australia and New Zealand. All we needed to achieve like results in Canada was to apply business methods and to wipe out political methods of administration. He might have added, and stop "boodling" in pastrards.

It was shown in debate in the House of Commons that the present Government had since 1896 expended on capital account on the Intercolonial Railway $24,000,000, and that the deficit last year in running the road was $2,000,000. Things have come to such a pass in the management of the Intercolonial Railway that if the country will submit to a continuation of the present state of things in I.C.R. management we they will put up with anything.

At a meeting of the Trades and Labor Council lately held in Hamilton, the Senate was condemned for its persistent opposition to organized labor. That is not correct, the Senate's opposition is to the abuse to which organized labor is put.

Three or Four Times Every Day.

One of the worst cases we have ever heard of was cured by Foot Elm. This gentleman had to change his socks 3 or 4 times every day, bathing the feet each time. Now he can wear a pair of socks with comfort for a week. Foot Elm did the work. It makes feet healthy.

One great trouble in life is that the ruts for going wrong are planted so prettily with flowers at the beginning.

Occasionally a disagreeable person will insist that at least he is sincere, but that is no excuse for being disagreeable.

Three things you never discover till there is death in the house: The goodness of the neighbors, the way time drags and the loud the clock ticks.

Fresh Fruit.

"Gold in the morning, silver at noon and lead at night" is always used with reference to fruit. Most people think it means that the explanation of the proverb is that the fruit is strongest in the morning and weakens as the day goes on. But you will note that the proverb says nothing about it. If it has to do with the digestive power only it should be applied to all foods. The real explanation is very different. It is that fresh freshly gathered is fitted for eating and loseens in value as the hours pass. This is true of fruit only, but of all vegetables. That which comes direct from the garden to the table is the most palatable and in every way best fitted for consumption.

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1900, by Seward W. Hopkins.

"Well, it seems there is a race in my story that you have planned to leave Denesila, rob him of the throne and seek a home and fortune elsewhere."

"My God, my God!" groaned Volner, standing into a chair. "If they say that, they have lied. And if they have sunk so low as to lie about me, they are plotting something worse. Ah! This wounded lad! He is the center of this attack, I am sure. Oh, that he could speak and tell!"

"Father, come quick!" cried Adria just then, greeting him upon "Come at once! May heaven be with us now, for we need God's power to help. Our young man is talking, and the cure is not arrived. Oh, come and hear these terrible whisperings! I know not if they be the rambling of the delirious or the words of awful truth!"

CHAPTER XII.

Adria Gives Warning.

VOLNER followed his daughter into the room where the wounded American lay, with his white expectant face turned toward the door.

The farmer stepped quickly to the side of the bed and looked down into the upturned eyes. He saw at once that the delirium had passed. What ever this man said now was said with full possession of his reason.

"You sent for me," said Volner. "What is it you wish to say?"

"You are Volner?" whispered Burkford, using his voice only enough to carry the faint words to Volner's lowered ear.

"That is my name," was the answer. "Do you know her?"

"Your daughter—her name is Adria?"

"Why, yes. 'Twas she who nursed you."

"She is to be the wife of Bosso Duvally, the captain of the prince's guard?"

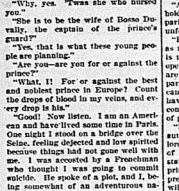

"Yes, that is what these young people are planning."

"Are you—are you for or against the prince?"

"What, I! For or against the best and noblest prince in Europe? Count the drops of blood in my veins, and every drop is his."

"Good! Now listen. I am an American and have only some time in Paris. One night I stood on a bridge over the Seine, feeling dejected and low spirited because things had gone ill with me. I was accosted by a Frenchman who thought I was going to commit suicide. He spoke of a plot, and I, being somewhat of an adventurous nature, allowed him to lead me that I to see what it really was and if I could not prevent a crime.

"I learned of a plot against a prince who was then in Paris incognito. In a room in an inn I saw the photographs of this prince, his wife and his sister.

"You sent for me," said Volner. "What is it you wish to say?"

I knew that his wife was called the Princess Margaret and that his sister the Princess Marie Alexia.

"I was so attracted by the beautiful face of the Princess Marie that I resolved to penetrate still further into the plot and protect the princess and her relatives.

"I made a visit to the prefecture of police and told there what I had learned. I was scarcely believed, but spies had dogged my steps, and since then my life has been more than once attempted.

"I was arrested for the murder of a rich Frenchman and lodged in jail. From there I escaped by the connivance of another American, for I was not caught in another trap, and my friend was killed. While lying in a house where I was hidden away I heard the details of the entire conspiracy.

"The plot had failed in Paris because I had aroused the police, and the publicity of the thing had warned the prince. But the plotters were not discouraged. They were simply to remove the theater of their evil operations from Paris to Denesila. The chief of the plotters was Casparin, the brother of the prince. The object of the plot was to place Casparin upon the throne of Denesila before the prince had an heir to succeed him.

"That there are other objects involved, Casparin found tools ready for the work in Frenchmen where the Denesilians left him. The men he has bribed by offers of big rewards are the three who attacked me where you found me at the edge of the road.

Your daughter has told me how you found me in a ravine near the road.

"When I made my escape from the house where I had been confined in Paris, I learned that the prince and his entire suit and family had left Paris for Denesila. I resolved to reach this country before the plotters to warn the prince. At Ostro I found that the three Frenchmen were at the same inn as I was. At that inn I was robbed of what money I had with me, and for several days I was under a sleepkeeper made an attempt on my life in the night. I escaped, set his inn on fire, stole a horse and set out, followed by the three Frenchmen who had discovered my presence there.

"One of these Frenchmen, a man named Vandal, is to receive for his reward in this matter a large sum of money, a place of honor when Casparin comes to the throne and the hand of your daughter Adria. Duvally is to be killed. The Princess Maria is to be married to a powerful Russian prince to obtain Russian protection in the policy Casparin has at heart.

"All this I learned in Paris. I do not, of course, know what has been done here. The prince is no doubt safe in his palace at Trolle."

As the hurried whisper stopped, Volner clasped his hands in anguish and paced up and down the room.

"Oh, God! That is the worst of it," he said, with a groan. "If the prince had come direct from Paris, he would now be safely surrounded by his faithful people. But he lingered in Berlin, and now, worse the luck could never be, he comes by way of Ostro, and Casparin is strong only in the region of the Green forest, past which the prince must go to reach Trolle.

"And here am I, with all my household penned up by an order of Casparin, whose tenant in arrears I am so unfortunate as to be.

"Ah, I see it through the plot now as through a window glass. Casparin is not strong enough here to attempt open violence in my house. There are friends of Prince Charles in these parts. But for that, my tenancy would can friend, you would undoubtedly have been killed while you were unconscious and unable to tell this story of perfidy.

"But now Casparin, using only such authority as he possesses as my landlord, holds us all within the confines of our farm while he and his hired assistant comrades plan to slay the prince. Then, when Casparin is in power, we may be sacrificed as he wills—my daughter to this French scoundrel and I perhaps to make room for you certainly.

"By heaven! I will get out! I will saddle my horse and fly to meet the prince beyond Ostro. There I will warn him and—"

"You will do no such thing," said Adria, planting herself firmly before her father. "A fine plan that would be. And what would become of my mother, of me and of our guest here with you, our defender, sir?"

"But the prince must be warned, my daughter! Think! Would you have me sit idly in the house, afraid to stir, while our noble prince and his lovely princess are perhaps shot down in cold blood?"

"The prince shall be warned in time," said Adria firmly. "I insist, however, that you remain. Suppose you succeed in dashing past the bailiff armed to the teeth? What then? The news goes to Casparin. He understands that the plot is exposed and the prince will be warned. In revenge he will come here in force and slay us all."

"Yes, yes, there is truth in what you say," groaned Volner, with increasing agitation. "But what can we do?"

"I shall wag the prince."

"You!"

Volner stopped short and looked aghast at his pretty daughter.

"I shall warn the prince. Is there one near you can confide in entirely but the black mare? With the fleetest horse in Casparin's stables deadening at her heels the black mare will reach Ostro safely."

"But you could not get away. How would you pass the bailiffs?"

"That I must leave till I reach them. Trust me, father. This brave American has already taught us a lesson. He has placed his life a dozen times in danger for a prince he does not know. And now should we do less for that same prince who is a friend and protector to all that is good in Denesila?"

"No," said Volner, with a tremor; "no, we cannot do less than the stranger. But I dread, oh, how I dread, to have you make this attempt."

She did not wait to listen further. Buckford, exhausted by the effort of making so long a speech, had sunk into a deep slumber.

Adria spoke to her mother, gave directions concerning the care of the American and quickly slipped away.

In a short time she reappeared clad in a neat fitting riding habit.

"Saddle my black mare," she said to one of the stablemen.

"But, Miss Adria, you cannot leave the place," was the reply.

"Saddle the mare, and we will see," said Adria.

So the mare was saddled, and a pretty picture made Adria as she cantered along the smooth road to the principal gate of the farm.

"Why does she choose the gate?" queried Volner, watching from a window. "I would have tried a weaker force. There are four men there."

But Adria rode on till the bridle of her mare was taken in hand by one of the guards at the gate.

"Sorry, Miss Adria," he said. "It is against our orders. His highness Prince Casparin has instructed us to allow no one to leave the farm."

"Not even to ride to see Casparin himself?" asked Adria.

"Oh—oh—that is something different. I suppose that could be done. But I expect orders to go with you."

"I agree to that, certainly," said Adria. "Two or three of you should be able to protect the country from receiving harm at my hands."

He laughed—as blushed, shamed sort of laugh—and said:

"I trust you will pardon us. We are but obeying orders. I will accompany you to the road. You will not be annoyed."

"I thank you," said Adria.

The man mounted his own horse, which was tethered near, and the two set off.

"In a few hours we should meet the prince on the road to Ostro," said the talkative bailiff. "He rides with full company to meet his brother, our gracious Prince of Denesila, who comes by way of Ostro from Berlin. Word has been received that the train in which our prince and his family ride will reach Ostro late today."

"Late today?" shawered Adria, as though it was a small matter. "It is late already."

"Yes, a few hours—perhaps two or three—the prince will be at Ostro."

They rode on for about a half mile to a spot where the road ran through a bit of woods and where none of Casparin's men were stationed.

"Now you may be seen. The roads were deserted, all of the tenantry being ordered out, perhaps to take part in the ride with Casparin to meet the prince.

Suddenly Adria's mare came to a standstill, while the accompanying bailiff was looking another way.

Adria slid to the ground.

"My mare has cast a shoe," she said. "I think she has picked up a stone. This is a fine mare, the horse."

The man, to be chivalrous, dismounted and stepped to her side.

"Let me see," he said, stooping to lift the mare's hoof.

In an instant his own horse received a cut with a whip that sent it off at a racing pace. He roared out an oath, forgetting the young lady's presence, and run a short distance after his flying steed.

The sound of hoofs brought him to a halt, and he saw with dismay the daughter of the farmer, on her black horse, flying in the other direction—toward Ostro.

"Well, I'm done!" he growled, half inclined to curse and yet feeling unnerved at the manner in which the clever girl had outwitted him. "Well, the girl is out for a lark. Who will be the worse for it? Not Casparin, for she is on the train with him. I'll keep my own counsel on this matter and not be a laughing stock to my companions. But I must get my horse."

His horse had slackened pace, and in a few minutes he had recovered the animal.

But in that 15 minutes where was Adria? The black mare had thundered down the road to a bridge over the river Ostro. This she passed, struck into the road to Ostro and went like the wind to meet and save her prince and her lover from the attack on her prince-her lover.

No one staid her, but still the mare sped on. It was, so Adria thought, a race against time. At any moment the train bearing the prince and his family might enter Ostro, and who knew what miscreants were lying in wait for the prince.

She reached Ostro without mishap. The entire town seemed to be astir, but for a moment's thought, but she asked once as she thought of how that American would have made his escape from the murderous precincts.

At the railroad station she soon learned that the train was then due.

In the now deserted stable of Roland's inn she hid for horse and waited.

The train came thundering into the station. Even as it came the trumpets of Casparin's cavalcade could be heard in the distance.

The first person to step from the train was Bosso Duvally. The first person Duvally saw was Adria Volner.

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

"Adria!" he cried. "Are you the first to greet the prince?"

Danger! Hear the horns of the traitor Casparin coming to meet the brother he would slay!

"What's this? Come here?"

Duvally led her before the prince, where she told the entire story in as few words as would make the case clear.

"It is the Paris plot transplanted to our soil, your highness," said Duvally. "But Casparin! My brother! How can I believe he would do this thing?"

He mastered the good natured prince.

"It seems incredible," added Princess Margaret.

"We must do nothing rash at least," said Princess Marie. "Our brother must but be made out a murderer at the word of an unknown American."

"Leave it to me, your highnesses," said Duvally. "I have not this American, but if there is truth in the story I, Bosso Duvally, will find it out."

So the prince and his family met the smiling Casparin as though nothing had happened, and Adria remained concealed in the car.

In Casparin's train was a rich equipage for the two princesses and a large capacioned horse for his brother. The tenants of Casparin greeted their ruler with shouts of loyalty and he were loyal. It was hard to doubt their master.

"Unfortunately," said Duvally in a voice well understood by his police, "his highness has injured his right leg and will not be able to place the escarpy people by appearing on horseback. He must ride, therefore, with the ladies in their carriage. You, Prince Casparin, must therefore lead the procession from Ostro to your castle, where his highness intends to remain for a day or two. And, as it would be unfortunate for him to be obliged to ride a horse more richly dressed than yours, I will take the steed you now ride, and you take the one intended for the prince."

"Yes, my brother Casparin," said the prince, going to the carriage with an artful limp, "I was unfortunate enough to bruise my leg while riding one of the emperor's wild beasts. Take the horse, then, you so generously proffered for me and let Duvally take your own."

For a moment a pallor overspread the face of Casparin, but he rallied and in a calm voice said:

"No; since my brother will not ride the horse, let him be led at the side of the carriage. There are horses enough for the retinue."

A gleam of intelligence passed from the eyes of Duvally to those of his prince.

"Ride the horse, Casparin," said the prince, with a laugh, yet with a voice of firmness. "I do not wish to turn the parade into a funeral march. When you carry me to the throne, ride the horse at the bearse. But I'll have none of it here."

There was a slight hesitation in Casparin's manner; then, with a smile, he mounted the gayly harnessed horse.

The procession set off from Ostro, with Casparin leading.

The courier rode off.

"I have sent ahead to give orders to have the lights at the castle ready," said Casparin to his brother.

Duvally had fallen to the rear, where his own faithful fellows were riding. He selected four of them.

"Leave the road for a short distance," he said, "and get to the front. Follow that courier of Casparin's. He will speak to some one between here and Casparin's castle and will deliver a note. Arrest him, the person he accosts, and secure the note. Obey this with your best skill, for the lives of all in that carriage are in danger."

The way was at the outset of the carriage again as if nothing had happened or was expected to happen. And that evening the procession reached Casparin's castle without incident.

Adria had ridden later on the black mare in the rear of the royal procession.

"It is done," she said to her anxious parents. "I told the prince, and Bosso is in command."

That night Casparin gave a feast. The great dining hall of the castle was ablaze with light and rang with the voices of good cheer. The prince sat at the end of a table, with Casparin near him.

Duvally, whose eye was everywhere at once, stood near his royal master.

A messenger came to him. He heard what was to be said and then whispered to the prince. A nod was his reply.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

MARCUS DALY'S PLUCK.

The Story of a Loss That Brought Success and Wealth.

When the nation was the blackest and this indomitable captain of men, Marcus Daly, had exhausted his resources and his credit a fortunate accident placed in his hands a small but sufficient sum of money to transform inevitable defeat into certain victory. Lloyd Tevis, the California lawyer, and his mining partner, J. B. Haggin, who had been visiting their properties at Deadwood, stopped at Butte on their way home to California to take a look at the new camp. Marcus Daly knew Messrs. Haggin and Tevis well, for he had worked for them in the old California days. He visited them at their hotel, not the gorgeous palace of granite, marble, precious onyx and mahogany which adorns Butte today, but a humble wooden structure more in keeping with the squalid surroundings of the new camp. In Haggin's bedroom, the only place available for a private conversation, Daly made a clean breast of it to his friends and appealed to them for aid, explaining his theory fully and citing many additional facts which had developed during his mining operations in Anaconda that were to strengthen it.

It was thoroughly characteristic of the man that he did not attempt to haggle over the terms of the loan, but started merely the facts and closed his negotiations with the words: "Now, gentlemen, here is a correct statement of the situation of my affairs and the condition of my mine. I must have $20,000, and I must have it at once to meet next Saturday's payroll and current bills and to provide for the expenses of operation for another six months or so. If I do not get it I am fast broke and will have to close up. I have told you what I have got and what I think I can get, and what I am going to get when that shaft is down another 100 feet or so. Make your own terms. You have the money."

They gave him the $20,000, and, of course, being astute business men, a contract was drawn up and signed then and there transferring to them the controlling interest in the property. But up to the time of his death Lloyd Tevis always declared that, though he believed thoroughly in Marcus Daly's integrity, both he and Mr. Haggin thought that he was chasing a chimera, that the theory upon the elaboration of which Marcus Daly had spent so many sleepless nights and all his substance was fallacious and that no gold-copper deposit would ever be discovered in the bowels of those mountains. In fine, Haggin and Tevis let Daly have $20,000 because they liked him. They certainly never dreamed that Anaconda would prove a more veritable bonanza than the Comstock lode. As for Daly, he had never doubted his ultimate success, and when three months after that meeting in the hotel bedroom the main shaft of Anaconda penetrated, as he had always believed it would, the richest and most extensive copper deposit then in the known world he conveyed the intelligence to his partners in California in the succinct terms of brief telegram: "We have reached it. Come out and look at it."—Public Opinion.

An Indian Legend.

There was once a man who lived in the forest far from the rest of his tribe. He lost his wife and was very lonely. After awhile he made a wooden doll about her size, dressed it in the clothes she used to wear and set it up in front of the fireplace. Then he felt better. So a year passed away. One night he came home, and there was his wife sitting in a chair in place of the doll. She spoke to him, saying, "The Great Spirit felt sorry for you, so he let me come back to see you, but you must never touch me, for if you do I must go." They lived thus together for a twelvemonth, but one night he attempted to clasp her in his arms. Before she was halfway to wooden doll! She did not come to life again, and he was very unhappy ever after.

Welsh College Yells.

The Welsh is a language that looks peculiarly fit for college yells. The Welsh yells are fully up to the level of those of this country. The University of North Wales has a yell something like this: "Bravo, bravissimo, ray, ray, ray-o-rock! Ray-ray-ra-o-rock! Ray-ray-ray-o-rock!" Cardiff has a somewhat similar one, which at Aberystwyth the cry is: "Hip-hip-hur-aber! Hip-hip-hur-aber! Hip-hip-hur-aberystwyth! With a pip and a pang and a yip and a yan. Yah! Yah! Yah!"

Overdone.

Timson—I never fainted away but once, and that was just a few days ago. Simson—What was the cause? Timson—My wife told me that she had treated herself so that she could walk through a store full of bargain counter sales with her purse full of money and never buy a thing.

Paradoxical.

Smith—You remember Muggins, who used to bore us with his long winded stories? Jones—Yes. Smith—Well he's Smith—He was arrested yesterday for being short in his accounts.

Work.

"Anyhow you ain't deny that Hewligus is a self made man. He worked his way through college."

"He certainly did. He worked nearly every student in the institution."

His Flounderings.

"Isn't Mr. Teejus a deep thinker?"

"He must be," answered Miss Cayenne. "I never heard him try to say anything without getting beyond his depth."

Since knowledge is but sorrow's spy it is not safe to know.—Davenant.

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Timely Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

DAY'S WORK OF A POULTRY FARMER.

My first work early in the morning is to attend to the incubators. I always learn the temperature of the machine, and, if needed adjust the regulator and lamp flame before I open the machine. If the heat has varied from the 103 degree mark, and is much too low, I do not open the machine until night. This gives the eggs a chance to make up the lost heat. If I find the heat too high I cool the eggs down to about 80 degrees. I never fill my egg trays each time I turn the eggs morning and night.

The Brooders.

I then attend to the chicks, those that are in the brooders first. I let the chicks out of the brooder, and then see what is the temperature of the brooder. I then adjust the lamp flame high enough so that it will make up for the heat that the chicks had generated when they were all in the brooder during the night. The bulb of the thermometer is held on a level (until the chicks are 3 weeks old) with their backs in taking the temperature of the brooder. I keep the heat 95 to 98 degrees.

I feed the chicks for the first three weeks, on either the regular prepared chick feed, or chicks made forty per cent. hulled oats, forty per cent. cracked wheat, ten per cent. cracked corn, five per cent. beef scrap and five per cent. grit. I feed this dry in litter and only a little at a time. The chicks that are old enough to eat hulled oats, I feed equal parts hulled oats, cracked corn and whole wheat, if it does not storm. I keep the doors open to the colony houses until the last feeding at night.

The Hens.

After the brooders and chicks have been attended to I feed the hens. The first feed for two mornings is the hens' work is oats nine parts and ground beef scraps one part, mixed together and fed dry in troughs. The other two mornings I feed a mash made of equal parts wheat bran, middlings, corn meat and beef scraps, mixed into a stiff dough. I leave the henhouse doors open all day unless it storms.

After the first feeding as limited I give them all fresh water. I see that all the drinking dishes are clean and place them where they will be kept as little filth as possible, by this time with the chores it will be about 9 a.m. I then begin feeding the chicks again and see what is the temperature of the brooders. If the lamp is shining the brooders are liable to be too warm, and if they are I turn the lamp flame down.

The Weekly Spray.

If the day is Friday I clean the brooder and houses out and spray them all over inside with a solution of water to parts and creolin two parts, and put in new litter for them to scratch in. At 11:30 a.m. I feed the chicks again and also see what is the heat of the brooders.

After dinner I visit the incubator room and see that the machine is working all right. At about 2:45 p.m. I feed the chicks again, and if the day is growing cool the brooders are liable to be low, and if so I turn the lamp flame up enough so as to keep the heat at the desired point. After this feeding I close and mix the mash feed for all the chicks that are over six weeks old. A mash of equal parts wheat bran middlings, corn meat, yellow corn meal and ground beef scraps, 1 min this in a stiff dough. At 5:00 o'clock or half past I feed the hens and gather the eggs. For this feed I have equal parts grit, corn and wheat. If this I feed one quart to 11 birds, and the amount I feed of oats in the morning. If the weather is pleasant, the night feed I scatter around the yards; if stormy, I feed in the houses.

I mark the eggs from each hen and if there are any broody hens I shut them up in the crates I have for that purpose in the hen houses. I never shut them up out of doors, as they are liable to take cold. After the hens are cared for I trim and fill the brooder lamps and feed the little chicks for the night. I feed them all they will eat up clean of this feed, if they have eaten each previous meat of the day as though they were hungry. If not I scant the feed until they appear to relish it. Better to feed little than too much. About half an hour after sunset I feed in troughs to the houses over a pint of warm mash that was mixed about 4 p.m. I have this feed as near at 7 each one-half of the day's rations and feed all they will eat of this feeding I shut the doors, the large doors and leave the small doors open so they can go in and out of the house until dark. I now care for the incubators.

I always let the eggs before I fill and trim the lamps, as the hands must be free from kerosene oil when I touch the eggs or I am liable to spoil the hatch. After the chicks and hens are in for the night I close the small doors so they can't get out until they are let out in the morning. And this precaution also prevents any animal from getting in and killing the birds after the chicks are in the brooders for the night. I go to each brooder and see that they are not too warm. As a general thing I have, to turn the lamp flame down. By last from the chicks' bodies will raise the temperature of the brooder from 3 degrees to 10 degrees. Then you may judge how important it is that the brooders should be cared for at this time.

Before I retire for the night I usually visit the incubator room and see that the machines are right, and also go out doors and take a view of the brooder houses, and see that everything is safe for the night.

I am often asked what breed of fowls are the most profitable. In answer to this I would say it depends upon what your market demands. My choice of breeds are the Rhode Island Whites, as I am the originator of this breed, but the Wyandotte, Plymouth Rock, or Rhode Island Reds are good business breeds and will yield a handsome profit if properly cared for.—A. Alonzo Josey, Rhode Island, in American Cultivator.

DOMESTIC HINTS.

Onions As Gratin.

Cut parmesan or any large onions of delicate flavor in thick slices, parboiling the slices in salted water. Arrange them in a buttered dish in layers with plenty of breadcrumbs, bits of parsley and bits of butter. With the top layer of crumbs mix a generous quantity of grated cheese. Do not spread the cheese over the breadcrumbs, as the common custom is, as then it becomes a crust, and is very indigestible.

Dutch Scramble.

Put a good-sized piece of butter in a frying pan, set it over the fire and when melted stir in a cupful of shredded codfish; allow the butter and fish to become well mixed, and if necessary add more butter; then break in five eggs and scramble. Season with pepper and salt and serve hot.

Wax Beans.

An English recipe for serving wax beans is novel. Cut the beans lengthwise in half or quarter-inch pieces and boil in salted water. Drain well and prepare the following sauce: Make a sauce of equal quantities of flour and butter, add salt and pepper and a cupful of sour cream. Add the beans and allow them to boil up once, stirring all the time. If no sour cream is at hand sweet cream or rich cream with a few drops of lemon juice will serve.

Lady Fairy Cakes.

Stir to a cream a cupful of fresh or well-washed butter; add slowly a cupful of granulated sugar, three eggs and two cupfuls of finely sifted flour. Mix and roll thin, then cut into small, round cakes. Beat a tablespoonful of powdered sugar into the yolk of an egg and spread the tops of the cakes with it, grate almond over them and bake a delicate brown.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS.

A good tonic for the hair is to get a penny-worth of quassia chips and pour on a pint of boiling water. Let stand for an hour or so, then strain through a muslin and bottle. Apply to the roots of the hair with a brush of a night. It is also exceptionally good for children's hair.

Cheese may be kept from being mouldy by wrapping it in a cloth dipped in vinegar and wrung nearly dry. Cover the cloth with a wrapper of paper, and keep in a cool place.

The old idea of putting oilcloth under the sheet and cover is now supposted for dailies on nightly-polished tables.

Flavored tea with plenty of lemon juice and lout sugar is very soothing to sore lungs and will often end a hard cough.

If your white washing gloves have black points before them, slightly moisten a little salt, and with your moisten a little salt, and with your finger rub it well into the points. This will prevent the black from running, which otherwise it is very liable to do.

If new boots and shoes are varnished on the soles every few weeks with the best copal varnish they will last twice as long, and rarely want resoling. At first they should have two coats of varnish, as leather absorbs it very quickly.

Add two tablespoonfuls of paraffine to one quart of water when cleaning windows; it will prevent dust from sticking, and will polish the glass brilliantly.

Inexpensive Summer Outing.

Blinkins—Are you going to take your family to the country this summer?

Timkins—No; we are going to remain at home and enjoy all the pleasures of rural life at half the cost.

Blinkins—How will you manage it?

Timkins—By putting a few bricks in the mattress, removing the fly screens from the windows and laying in a supply of canned meats and vegetables.—Chicago News.

The Danger.

"No," said Mrs. Bonnie, "I don't know as there's any real harm in smoking—that is, in itself—but when two or three men get together, puffing at their cigars or pipes, they seem so contented and so happy that I fear they forget the sinful gratification they are. There's where the harm comes in, Mrs. Green, as I've said to Bonnie a hundred times if he said it once."—Boston Transcript.

They Own Some of 'Em.

Certain authors sign so many contracts with publishers the latter have become "proprietors of their time and talent. For instance:

"I'd like to see the new author," said the stranger.

"Can't," replied the publisher. "He's feeding just now. I've just turned him in to breakfast."—Atlanta Constitution.

Too Much Expected.

Mother—Harold, I'm surprised to see you so discourteous to your sister's little friends.

Harold—Huh! It's bad enough to have to be polite to Dorothy. I can't be putting myself out to all the kids in town.—Brooklyn Life.

Well Named.

Motor Cyclist—I see that Muggins has named his automobile after his wife. Isn't that a queer proceeding?

Bicyclist—Not at all. He didn't name the machine until he discovered he couldn't control it. I think the name very appropriate.—Albany Journal.

Rapid Transit.

Conductor—Fare
Passenger—I paid my fare when the train started.
Conductor—There was only a small boy aboard when we started.
Passenger—Well, that's me.

Farewell.

"You say this is to be your star's farewell tour?"

"I have," answered the manager. "It is an opportunity for the public to say goodby to some more of its money."—Washington Star.

A Pretty Good Indication.

Gerald—I wonder whether I shall be numbered with the sheep or the goats on the day of judgment?

Geraldine—Well, you are always butting in.—Judge.

Awful Sate of Inartistic Cutters.

Bad tailoring, like sin, makes men uncomfortable and unhappy, but good tailoring, like good actions, makes them feel at ease and glad they are living.

The cutter of men's clothes sonnid therefore always bear in mind the fact that he is a powerful influence in the world for good if he does good work, but for evil if his work is bad, and should keenly feel that he deserves honor for the one and disgrace for the other. If his work is bad his punishment, even though it may not fit the crime and make him eternally wretched, will surely so fill his days with shame, reprobation, murders of horror, and jeers and insults that he will almost hate himself and will wish in every waking hour that night will come and bring him forgetfulness and always through the night will long for day to escape in its light and haste the hateful memories and silent gnawings of a guilty conscience.

Cutting a Queen Bee's Wing.

Dallas Lore Sharp describes a method of preventing bees from swarming in the Country Calendar. Keep your queen clipped. Lay aside your sentiments, your fears of the Society For the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, your idea that it hurts her, your fears of killing her—and get your scissors. Seize her by one wing (it seems to do better) and, holding her gently against the frame, snip off one wing. This queen will not swarm. She will help keep the bees from absconding, for the swarm won't go off without the queen when you are away. So you are often able to induce them to cull off the attike and go back to work. Clip your queen, then, over the hive in room, give them shade at the hottest hours if necessary, and the bees will not show signs of swarming and keep the colonies strong.

The Pictures of Paul Jones.

"Paul Jones," says a writer, "was portrayed in every possible way that a pirate could be expected to masquerade in, and the artists were very clever in the great, blackest and earliest. He is portrayed in all degrees, from the sardonic greatbeard ruffian to the tall lean one who wounds Bill Bowline type of tar, but always with as much sofa pillow stuffing in the shirt as the portrait painters lurkers afterward known to fame as 'Romantics.' Some were also given a colorful accuracy in all these pictures if they are of the three-quarters or full length. Some will be represented with a girdle full of pistols, a habit-of dress to which he was accustomed."

Training a Cow.

T. P.'s Cashbox tells the story of how Major Miles Malony of Ballydoff was amazed one morning to see from his bedroom window his prize bull doing a cow back and forward again and again over a ditch and through a fence on his land. Undoubtedly overcome with joy, he rushed out to question the little treasure. "What can be after with this cow?" Is it to kill the beast he want?" "Kill her! Shure, it's to keep her alive he want." "Keep her alive! Shure, it's talching her to get her own living I am. There isn't a ditch or fence in the barony that'll hold her in either I've done wid her." Then the major understood. The cow, in fact, was being taught to trespass in search of her living.

Stonewall Jackson's Looks.

Stonewall Jackson's form was tall, gaunt and angular, his features plain, were large, and his walk was singularly ungraceful. He always spoke quickly, in short sentences, devoid of ornament, but to the point. A habit of "balling" his eyes added little to the peculiarity of his appearance. His eyes were gray and ordinarily dull and expressionless, but lighted up by drill, which always seemed to rouse him, especially when charges were fired, the whole man seemed changed, as if he were transported by the roar of the guns to the exciting scenes of the actual field of battle.—Thomas M. Semmes in Century.

The World and a Living.

It is an old cry that the world owes every man a living, but the favorite argument with the lazy and shiftless, that the world owes them much a living. If a man will not work he shall not eat is a mandate as old as the race itself. But there is another and fundamental sense in which the maxim that the world owes every man a living is profoundly true. It should command a fair chance to earn a decent living. And that is all that any self respecting man asks or wants.

Shattering Her Hopes.

Mr. Close—About how much does an automobile outfit for a woman cost? Mrs. Close (coldly)—I don't know. I are not going to buy an automobile, are you? Mr. Close—I should say not! I'm merely trying to figure out how far beyond his income that man Brassey is living.

Double Loss.

"I hear you lost your heart up at Miss Sweetley's house the other evening," said the caller.

"Yes; and worse than that," replied the practical lover, "I lost my umbrella. I suspect one of those brothers of hers."

Wide Awake.

Fuddle—You know Stocks, don't you? Doctor—Yes, indeed. He is now a patient of mine. Fuddle—Pretty wide-awake man, isn't he? Doctor—I should say so. I'm treating him for insomnia.

In all meanness there is a defect of intellect as well as of heart. And even the cleverness of avarice is but the cunning of imbecility.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

A CALL TO ACTION.

MR. J. J. B. FLINT REQUESTS CITIZENS TO HELP COMPLETE PLANS FOR THE REUNION.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir, — Permit me to call attention to some points connected with the approaching Reunion. It is the desire of the Executive that the parade shall be the best that the city has prepared since the last Reunion. It will be the only occasion upon which all of the "Old Boys" will appear together. Most regrettably the 15th Argyll will not form the brilliant feature of the parade which we anticipated; owing to various causes the Lt.-Col. and officers feel that they cannot call out their men simply for a parade. To do so would entail much labor, and considerable responsibility. Duplicated military aid, what elements can be obtained? I have solicited the fraternal societies to assist; possibly may have overlooked some of them. If such is the case, I trust that the societies not notified will kindly inform me so as to whether they will join in the procession. A parade consisting of a number of men marching to the music of several bands frequently makes an effective display; but on this occasion, we shall have the great pleasure of seeing our industries and many business establishments fully represented in the parade. Many citizens remember with delight several very fine trade processions which gave intense enjoyment. There are several industries, such as the Belleville Cement Works, the Belleville Hardware Co., Walker & Co., Forward's Cigar Factory, Reid & Co., Walton & Co., Pringle & Co., several firms selling agricultural implements, Deacon's Shirt Factory, Fobb's Biscuit Factory, Roy's brewery, Ault & Co., which no doubt would gladly respond to the invitation hereby extended. This notice is short, but hitherto none approached, for want of time, writing, etc., has been called for Tuesday in the City Hall; over one hundred have been invited. It is hoped that all persons to notify individually any more. Those who do not approach the invitation from the Executive, to take part in the parade. They will attend the chairman "At Home" called for Thursday, and, will afterwards discuss the parade, together with the leading accounts of similar festive occasions. It is evident that the most beautiful features of the parade are the floats. It is the expressed wish of the Executive that citizens that the ladies should undertake the delightful task of designing and preparing exquisite tableaux, similar in structure and floral loveliness, to those of former years. It is not the work of men, who in the main, are helpless, and not sufficiently epicritic to succeed. The response and advice will have been most gratifying.

All citizens having carriages and public hacks are invited to appear in the parade, provided they are decorated—no other parade will be welcome.

Permit me to address a few words to the citizens generally. Up to to this time, the great labors performed, have been the work of six or eight individuals, elected by the public. It is NOW time for the citizens to wake up, and get to work. We cannot tell how many guests to expect; we do not know the necessary preparations to make. Should our anticipations be correct, Belleville will be inundated by several thousand people who must be cared for. The Executive is doing what it can, but as much remembered, is grasping in the dark. Now, as we do, it is necessary to do in providing accommodation. Pavilion had a terrible experience, I am informed, in the matter of a dinner every reasonable effort to suitably welcome and entertain our guests. We desire the hearty co-operation of all. The Executive does not consider itself infallible, but will do its best. Lend us your brains. Tell us what you think ought to be done, and help us to do it. I am,

Yours very truly,
JOHN J. B. FLINT,
Chairman of Parade.

CORBY COMPANY REORGANIZED.

EXTENSIVE CHANGES IN THE DISTILLERY BUSINESS — BIG BUSINESS DEAL COMPLETED.

Yesterday Mr. Henry Corby completed the new arrangements affecting the business of his distilling plant. Mr. Corby is chairman of the Board of Directors of the reorganized company, which will henceforth operate the extensive business. Mr. A. L. Bird is treasurer, and Mr. R. H. Hudson is secretary.

Extensive improvements are being made in the plant at Corbyville, where a large warehouse is being built. Other plans, which will double the capacity of the plant, are well in hand.

Fuller details of this important business change will be given in these columns in a few days.

THE LUMBER BUSINESS.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM A MADOC CORRESPONDENT.

Madoc, June 30, 1905.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Dear Sir, — In the last "Canadian Journal of Commerce" is an article contributed by "J. J.," of Actinolite. In our local paper, the North Hastings Review, the same article is published over the signature of "Joseph James," no doubt the "J.J." of the Journal of Commerce. It is an article that should have not only the attention of the general public, but specially of this County.

It seems to me there are two matters which the people of this country should wake up to consider. Ever since almost that I can remember, the lumbermen have been looked as the benefactors of the districts into which they carried their operations; another was that it was a thing to get rid of, and lumber those who might get a revenue from it. Then dues charged by the Government on the one hand and streams were made free to the lumberman and special privileges given him on the other he was charged a trifling dues for building a bridge until it would suit his convenience to remove it—and a 'stumpage' charge, when removed, that amounted practically to a gift.

There is no doubt—as light has reached us as to the facts—no greater mistake was ever made. The lumbermen the benefactors of the timber districts! In answer I point to the impoverishing of every district in this County where their work has been carried on; and that it is only when the last stick of marketable timber is taken away—for it has been so arranged that they have held ALL THE TIMBER—that such parts of the districts begin to make headway by settlement. To be sure there have been settlers resident in the timber districts, but they were at the mercy of the lumberman for work and prices for anything they had for sale. There have been at times men who became small paupers waiting for the lumbermen and apparently prospered, but I do not believe there is a single case can be pointed out in this county where they succeeded in the end. I am writing in what to me is the order no obligations to the lumbermen. I have had contact with the business in this county and that the appeal by "J. James" that the present opportunity to use the water powers and courses of this county need have no fear of the want of the lumber. Claims We owe the lumbermen nothing because of their operations that we should have is an investigation, commencing not later than Confederation, and find out what are the balances due the Province of Ontario for timber dues and illegal cutting. Some years ago when a member of the Legislature, I made an attempt at this direction, but the influences were too strong against me to get further than resolutions on paper.

Yours truly,
F. WOOD.

To be Ordained.

Mr. Wm. Collins, son of the late ex-Ald. Collins will on Friday of this week be ordained as a priest. The ordinance service will take place in St. Smith's Fall. The newly-created priest will on Sunday next celebrate his first mass in this city.

Successful Lawn Social.

A successful lawn social was held last evening at the home of Mr. D. M. Waters, Alexander street. The grounds were prettily decorated for the occasion with colored lights, etc. It was under the auspices of St. Andrew's Church, and a good time was realized. The affair was enjoyed by all who attended.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Every dollar he saves can properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

John Bell, K.C., Died This Morning.

THE CAREER OF A MAN WHO, THROUGHOUT A LONG LIFE, HAS FILLED MANY POSITIONS OF RESPONSIBILITY.

The Hon. John Bell, K.C., one of Belleville's oldest and most highly esteemed citizens, passed away at an early hour this morning at the family residence, corner of Queen and George streets. The came peacefully, shortly before the morning twilight appeared. For some time the deceased gentleman had been in declining health and for the past three days he had been unconscious, the end apparently being near.

John Bell, K. C., Consulting General Counsel of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, was born in 1833, in Stranane, County Tyrone, Ireland. He is a son of Robert Bell, who, when Mr. Bell was three months old, emigrated to New York and Mr. Bell attended school where Wall street now is until 1833. In this year Mr. Robert Bell moved with his family to Canada. In 1843 Mr. John Bell became a pupil at Victoria College. In 1844 he started the study of law in Bytown, now Ottawa. In the following year he removed to Toronto and completed his course in the office of the late Chief Justice Hagarty. In 1849 Mr. Bell was admitted as an attorney and solicitor, and immediately after entered into partnership with the late Honorable John Ross under the name of Ross & Bell. In the early part of 1851 Mr. Bell was called to the bar. In 1852 he was on the organization of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, appointed its general counsel, which position he retained until December 31, 1905, when owing to failing health he retired from the active work and became the company's consulting general counsel, a sinecure position he held at the time of his death. He is also a director of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Central Vermont Railway Company and many other railway and bridge companies with which the parent company are interested. In 1850 he was appointed solicitor to the Bank of Montreal, also to the County, and on the incorporation of the Merchants Bank he also became its solicitor. He was also solicitor for the well-known Bathurst Company. All these positions he held at the time of his death.

At the first election of Benchers of the Law Society, Mr. Bell was elected a Bencher, and at each succeeding election.

In religion Mr. Bell is a Presbyterian, in politics a Liberal. He never, although often solicited, was a candidate for any political office or position.

Mr. Bell in 1853 married Miss Helen M. Turnbull, daughter of the late John Turnbull, of Belleville. She died in 1878. In 1884 he married Miss Caroline L. Stewart, daughter of the late Dr. Stewart, of Belleville. She died in April of the present year.

NAPANEE WANTS THIS INSTITUTE.

AGRICULTURAL HIGH SCHOOL FOR TRAINING YOUNG WOULD-BE FARMERS.

An agricultural high school is the next educational institution likely to be established in the Province.

The Government has had the proposal under consideration for some time, the purpose being to give boys and girls a special agricultural training while they are still in the high school course.

This morning a deputation from Napanee, called on Hon. Nelson Monteith, Minister of Agriculture, and was by him introduced to the Premier, the object of the visit being to impress upon the Government the desirability of establishing such an institution and also to point out that the finest place in Ontario for the first agricultural high school is Napanee. On the deputation were Messrs. T. G. Carscallen, W. J. Paul, Mayor Lewis, W. W. Robertson, chairman of Board of Trade, and G. F. Rutan.

WANTS EXPERIMENTAL FARM.

Deputation Asks That Napanee Be Selected By Government.

Toronto, July 5.—T. G. Carscallen, M.P.P., W. J. Paul, M.P.P., Warden Martin of Lennox, Mayor Lowry of Napanee, John J.W. Robinson, a president of the Napanee board of trade, and C. P. Battist of Napanee waited on Premier and Hon. Nelson Monteith yesterday and asked for the establishment of an experimental farm and agricultural school in Lennox, to serve the eastern part of the Province. The claims of the section were promised consideration.

Hon. Mr. Monteith was also waited on by Mr. Newman, secretary of the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, and Mr. Smith of the The Farmers' Sun, who asked that a seed exhibit be made in conjunction with the fat stock show at Guelph.

CHAMBERLAIN MAN WINS.

Elected In Kingsinford Over Liberal Opponent By 605.

London, July 5.—The Parliamentary election at Kingsinford, Staffordshire, caused by the death of Col. W. W. Wyke (Conservative), resulted in the return of Henry Bayley Hill (U.Const.) by a majority of 605 over the Liberal candidate, Dr. Bone.

No Liberal has been returned for the constituency since the Redistribution Act of 1885. At the last contest and election in 1900 the Conservative had a majority of 1,571. The electorate numbers 12,245.

The victory in the southwest part of the country is well within the "sphere of influence" of Mr. Chamberlain.

CAT ATTACKS GIRL.

Beaten Off By Boy, Runs to Swamp—Posse in Pursuit.

Galt, July 5.—John Houghton living in the Township of Dumfries, had a pet cat. Yesterday it manifested peculiar conduct and finally made a fierce attack on Houghton's little daughter, whom it bit on the leg, and so viciously it clung till the child's brother beat it off.

The cat attacked one of the chickens and tore it to pieces, after which it fled to the swamp. A posse is hunting for the beast, which, it is believed, is hydrophobic.

Dr. Vardon was called and cauterized the injured wound.

In Fear, Shot a Man Dead.

Halifax, July 5.—At Stellarton, N. S. early yesterday morning, John Fergusson was shot dead. The shooting happened on the main street, and John McKenzie of New Glasgow is under arrest on suspicion. It is claimed two men ran after McKenzie as he was passing along the street, and thinking he was to be attacked he pulled his revolver and fired it.

4TH DEATH IN SESSION

Premier and Mr. Borden Pay Tributes to Dr. Johnston.

House Rose From 5 o'Clock Till 8 to Show Respect to Memory of Late Member for West Lambton — Mr. Foster and the "Scrip"—Lives of Members Endangered by Bad Ventilation—Will Look Into It.

Ottawa, July 5.—The funeral of Dr. Johnston, M.P., will take place at Sarnia on Thursday at 4.4 p.m. Last night the remains left Ottawa on a special car provided by the Government. Messrs. Clarke, Stewart and Zimmerman, M. P.'s, accompanied the remains west.

A touching tribute was paid to the late Dr. Johnston in the House yesterday, the desk of the deceased member was covered with a magnificent wreath, and before the orders of the day were called in the House Sir Wilfrid Laurier arose and said: Mr. Speaker, once again it is my very sad duty to have to inform the House that we have lost by death one of our colleagues. Dr. Johnston, the member for West Lambton, is no more. This is the fourth time during the present session that death has visited the members of this House. Nobody could have believed that when we met here five months ago that our late friend, who then appeared to be the very incarnation of rugged health, would be one of the first victims. But such is the lamentable nature of life that as upon many other occasions, the hand of fate has been laid upon him who looked to be the strongest. I need not say to this House that Dr. Johnston was one of the most popular members amongst us. He had no enemies, and his acquaintances were his friends. He was beloved on this side, and I know he was beloved on the other by his gentlemen opposite."

Mr. Borden said: "On behalf of those who sit to your left, Mr. Speaker, I join with what has been said by his Prime Minister. Our friend, Dr. Johnston, who has passed away, was a man of very kindly and genial disposition, and I cordially endorse what the right hon. gentleman opposite has said as to the respect and esteem in which he was held by those who sit on this side of the House."

Out of respect to the bereaved, the House rose at 5 o'clock until 8, and a large number of the members of both sides as well as the Parliamentary press gallery, attended a short funeral service at the deceased member's residence and accompanied the body to the station.

The remains will reach Sarnia at 12.20 on Wednesday.

More Scrip Scandal.

Mr. Foster turned to his old friend the "scrip," and the resolutions that was to look into the matter. He said that agencies were already at work trying to get some of the half-breeds who had received the scrip in the Dakotas out of the way of giving evidence before the commission.

Sir Wilfrid took refuge in his old reply of "an answer to-morrow."

Lives Of Members Endangered.

Chief Conservative Whip Taylor called the attention of the Prime Minister to the utter lack of ventilation in the lobbies and especially in the chamber of the House. Mr. Taylor stated that one of the ventilating systems of ventilation that existed, and pointed out that the doctors had warned several degrees higher inside the chamber than outside in the open air. Investigations, he believed, were now in progress going as full blast, merely to find water.

Mr. Foster declared that a member took his life into his hands when he spent a greater part of the session in such a death trap.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier closed the incident by remarking that he would make his investigations in order to see the bottor of Public Works and see what could be done to make conditions more He quite agreed that things were not all they might or should be in the matter of ventilation.

READ A SECOND TIME.

Some Surprises in Putting Through Bill to Establish Province.

When the vote was taken on Mr. Borden's amendment to Sir Wilfrid Laurier's motion for the second reading of the Saskatchewan bill, Jean Baptiste Morin, Conservative member for Dorchester, solemnly rose in his place and declared that Mr. Chapleau was a hum of excitement from the Liberal benches and Messrs. Herron and Monk who, of course, voted against the amendment, turned and looked frankly at their colleague from the Province of Quebec. Whatever was passed through the mind of Jean Baptiste Morin at the time may never be known. The fact remains that he voted against the motion of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to impose a coercive educational policy on Saskatchewan.

Majority Is 53.

The vote stood 37 for the amendment and 90 against. Walsh, of Huntingdon, again voted with Mr. Borden. McIntyre of South Perth again tried to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds by voting against the amendment and the main motion. His effort was frustrated by the second reading being declared carried on the same division. Bats of Middlesex, an Independent Liberal, voted with Mr. Borden. Greenway, who missed no end to dodge the main division in the House, was in his seat and voted with his party. The division was quickly over, and the House rose shortly down to discuss the distribution of constituencies.

Salaries For the Governors.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier moved a resolution that to-day the House consider in committee of the whole the following resolution: "Resolved that section 3 of the revised statutes entitled, an act respecting the salaries of certain public functionaries and other annual charges of the consolidated revenue, be amended by adding at the end thereof the following words and figures: 'The Lieutenant-Governor of Saskatchewan $9,000, the Lieutenant Governor of Alberta $9,000.'"

The House then went into committee of the whole, and the second reading of the Saskatchewan bill was proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Mr. Borden moved the amendment that he regretted in the Address, dealing with Provincial rights and leaving all matters of education in the hands of the Province.

Mr. Clark's Amendment.

The clause all went through without any discussion, although Mr. Monk, to be quite in order, moved the same amendment regarding the dual language as he had moved on the previous division as that of the Alberta one.

Budget Debate.

Mr. Fielding announced in the House late last night that if the third reading of the Alberta and Saskatchewan bills was put through to-day the budget speech would be taken up to-morrow.

Supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1906, were brought down in the House last night, totalling $12,414,872. This, added to the main estimates of $65,444,787, gives us $77,859,659, voted or to be voted this session for the current fiscal year. The six items voted last session, for 1904-5, were $74,376,949, supplementaries will add this session, $6,275,342, further supplementaries will be required to amount to $6,429, making a total appropriation for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1905, of $81,081,417, the largest sum in any current year, so far before Parliament at this session, an increase of full $567,543 over the appropriation for the current fiscal year. In the main the supplementaries next session are up to the average, a good proportion for this year will exceed that of 1904-5 by some six or seven million dollars. A total sum of $6,429 is required this year in an appropriation of $10,000 "to pay the difference of an equity to use in the operation of the tariff."

MAN SEIZES LIVE WIRE

Palms of His Hands Burned Through, Will Be Useless.

Doctors Wonder That He Escaped From Death—During the High Voltage of Electricity the Wires Carried—William Wills Fell From a Yacht Mast He Had Repaired and Confronted Death Twice.

Twice Confronted Death.

Toronto, July 5.—William Wills, aged 19, after repairing a National Club yacht yesterday afternoon, climbed to the top of the mast to test it. Something caused him to reel and slip down the mast. He clutched at two wires which hung overboard to save himself from a fall. They were carrying a high voltage of electricity, and his scream of agony brought help. One man picked up a board and struck the wire which Wills could not let go of and then his grasp loosened and he fell to the deck with an awful cry. One hand is burned throughout the palm, and the other is in almost as bad a shape. The doctors at the Emergency Hospital wonder that the man survived the shock. The hands may have to be amputated.

TWO KILLED AT BARN RAISING.

Accident Near Barrie—One Man Had Back Broken.

Barrie, July 5.—A fatal accident happened in the Township of Vos, about 15 miles from here, on Monday afternoon, two men were killed and several others are badly injured.

During a barn raising on the farm of Peter Moran of the fourth concession of Flos a portion collapsed and the entire structure fell to the ground.

William Harber had his back broken and died instantly, and Thomas McTaggue died about two hours afterward. Both were respectable residents of Fess. McTague was a married man. The others injured are severely crushed.

George Oliver Drowned.

Saskatoon, July 5.—George Oliver, a young man 29 years of age, was accidentally drowned Monday night. He was late here with a load of hay in a barrel of water, but as the water had risen rapidly during the last few days the current carried the horses and rig away. He attempted to jump, but was apparently unable to swim, and disappeared from sight with the horses.

Raft Sinks and Boy Drowns.

Fergus, July 5.—Willie Barnes, about 7 years old, while playing on a raft yesterday morning on the river here was drowned. The little lad's somewhat like a boat, filled with water and sank under him. His little brother, Cecil, gave the alarm.

Little Girl's Rescue Saves Life.

Kingston, July 5.—Yesterday morning a small boy named Twigg fell in the King street Esplanade and was in great danger of being drowned. Norman Twigg, the 7-year-old daughter of William Twigg. Barrie street, was passing along, and promptly took hold of the boy with her parasol and held him till help came.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Rex Meredith of Quebec Has His Arm Badly Injured.

Quebec, July 5.—Rex Meredith, notary public, son of Mr. E. G. Meredith of this city, had his left arm badly shattered on Saturday last at St. Patricks, near Cape Rouge, by the premature discharge of a sporting rifle. He was in the act of lifting from the bottom of a canoe.

Advanced Steadily Drowning.

Montreal, July 5.—The coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental drowning in the inquest on Joseph D. Plamandore, advocate of Quebec, who was drowned in the Lachine canal.

500 Were Drowned.

Guanajuato, Mexico, July 5.—The number of dead in the recent flood here is now estimated at 500. More than 200 bodies have already been removed. The loss will exceed $1,500,000. The Government has subscribed $25,000 for the relief fund.

Stop Trains to Save Life.

New York, July 5.—Jumping before Cowan, aged 25 years, leap into the Hudson River, two New York Central flyers signalmen set their red lights on their tower stopping all trains while they put out a rescue boat. The life boat. The woman was rescued, but died in the hospital.

Fourth of July Accidents.

New York, July 5.—The premature explosion of a shell in a fire-inch gun while a Fourth of July salute of 45 guns was being fired on Governor's Island resulted in one death and several injuries to 14 other soldiers. Fatal shooting fatalities are also reported from Chicago and Boston.

Altogether five deaths were recorded in New York as a result of the day's celebration, and the number of accidents reaches into the hundreds.

JOHN HAY'S FACE.

Although Body Lies in State Public Will Not See It.

Cleveland, O., July 5.—The remains of John Hay now lie in state in the spacious chamber of commerce corridors of this city, guarded by a detail from Troop A., of which the illustrious dead man was an honorary member.

It is said widely, although not true, the body should not lie in state for public view. The people of this city will therefore have no opportunity of seeing the face of the dead secretary of state. The body will lie in state in the hall of the chamber of commerce building two days, but exposed only to the eyes of the troopers, who will stand guard over the coffin. Even the funeral services themselves will be like those of one of the country's most humble citizens. The last words will be spoken over the body of the dead in the privacy of his dearest relatives and closest friends in life.

Knowledge dwells in heads replete with thoughts of other men, wisdom in minds attentive to their own.—Cowper.

TO GET A

PEANUT "right to your taste" is to get something which goes to the spot as nothing else can. Such a peanut in order to be roasted right must retain just enough of the natural oil in the nut to make it tasty, and yet must not be overdone. Experience has been roasted to suit the public's taste for years from this store, and we still have the knack of roasting a peanut just right. Try them and be convinced.

Honor To the Dead.

Sarnia, July 4.—The remains of the late Dr. E. G. Johnston, M. P., arrived here at 1.30 yesterday afternoon from Ottawa. At London the train was met by a number of Sarnia persons representing the Town Council and the West Lambton Reform Association. On arrival at the tunnel station the members of the bereaved family entered carriages and were driven to their residence. The body was transferred from the private car to the hearse. A large crowd of citizens stood with bared heads. The funeral will take place from the family residence on Thursday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, under Masonic auspices.

Charged With Bigamy.

Niagara Falls, July 4.—Peter D. Milloy will be tried here for bigamy. He was arrested at Sturgeon Point, near Lindsay. It is charged that Milloy was married at Albion, N. Y., in 1898, and again in this city on May 15th this year. His first wife is prosecuting him. Milloy is 42 years old. His second wife is 19. He is a promoter of a company to manufacture electric machinery.

Arabian on the Rocks.

Port Arthur, July 4.—The Arabian, loaded with merchandise, went aground while entering the harbor here last night. She ran upon the rocks, and the men came ashore. The tug Gordon went out and lightered her, when she backed off and was not damaged.

Found Dead in Bed.

Montreal, July 4.—Dr. Joseph R. Rebard, a graduate of Laval University, was found dead in bed yesterday morning by his father. He was 25 years of age and his death is attributed to heart failure.

The tornado lasted perhaps 30 minutes. Hundreds of head of stock were killed.

PITTSBURG MAN DROWNS.

First Fatality at Jackson's Point—Got Over His Depth.

Jackson's Point, July 4.—The residents of this resort were Tuesday shocked by the occurrence of the first drowning accident which has ever taken place here, so far as is known.

The victim was John P. Blackley, aged 21, of Pittsburg, Pa., With his brother and Mr. Thomas, at whose cottage he was staying, he went to bathing. The three men had a boat with them. The boat upset, and young Blackley got beyond his depth. He became tired and cried for help. As no oar was shoved to him, but would not sustain him afloat.

The body was recovered within 10 minutes, and for two hours resuscitation efforts were made.

The fatality has cast a gloom over the locality, many residents having witnessed the accident. The body was sent to Pittsburg yesterday.

Two Drowned in Quebec.

Quebec, July 4.—Jean Oulett and Napoleon Bureau were drowned at St. Raymond Tuesday by the upsetting of a boat, in which they were seated together with Boromme Bureau, brother of the latter. Boromme Bureau saved himself with difficulty.

Fatal Gun Claims Another Victim.

Toronto, July 4.—The Don has claimed another victim. This time it is Fred, the son of Andrew F. Simons of 13 Joucher street. The little chap was not quite 3 years of age, and got out of his depth while swimming. The body was recovered about 5 o'clock.

Two Boys and Old Gun.

Sprague, Man., July 4.—A shooting accident occurred at Sprague Landing. Two small boys named Homer and Fan-afrom were playing with an old gun, not knowing it was loaded and it went off, shooting Homer in the abdomen, inflicting serious wounds. Recovery is doubtful.

VALUABLE DOCUMENTS FOUND.

Vancouver's Letter Tells of Meeting of Hawaiian Chiefs.

Honolulu, June 28.—A letter bearing the signature of George Vancouver, the great explorer, has been found among the documents found among the archives of Hawaii. It was written in 1794, and is a testimonial left by the explorer with King Kamehameha, the Great, testifying to his peaceful disposition and kind treatment of Van couver and his men. The document is well preserved.

Many other similar relics have been found, among them being numerous treaties with the various powers of the world by the Hawaiian monarchy. There are also letters signed by the Hawaiian king of the early part of the last century, showing their allegiance to Great Britain, and one from the first Kamemaeha to King George III., telling of the complete conquest of all the Hawaiian group by the island king. Vancouver's letter tells of a meeting of chiefs at which the sovereignty of Great Britain was acknowledged.

EXPECT 20,000 THERE.

London Liberals to Have a Great Time Saturday Next.

London, July 4.—Already the committee have handed out thousands of tickets for the Liberal picnic in Queen's Park on Saturday next, but the demand has not yet been half satisfied. At the present rate, with fine weather, there should not be less than 20,000 people on the grounds.

A program of sports will be pulled off, the whole to be under the auspices of the Liberal Association of London.

U. S. Begins 1,200 Suits.

Washington, July 6.—The Post yesterday says: The Department of Agriculture has prepared and is ready to begin 1,200 suits against the railroads of this country, to secure the imposition of a penalty of $500 in each case, for every violation of the so called 28 hour law. That statute requires carriers transporting live stock from one state to another to unload, feed and water and rest every head of live stock for a period of five hours, after it has been on the road not more than 28 hours. Nearly every railroad from Maine to California is involved.

Furniture Polish.

When furniture becomes scratched, as it often does, it is a good plan to rub it with a woolen cloth which has been dipped in kerosene oil. Should the furniture not polish well, try rubbing it first with a little kerosene, then apply the furniture cream and polish in the usual way.

To clean paint, use warm water and ammonia, with a little soap. If you use a strong preparation on paint you will ruin the finish, and hard rubbing and hot water both have the same effect.

Don't go into a sickroom when heated and don't sit between the patient and the fire, if there be one in the room, as the heat attracts any infectious vapor.

Daily Intelligencer.

Mr. John Bell, K.C.

The death of Mr. John Bell removes one of Canada's oldest and best known legal practitioners. Though he has always lived very unobtrusively in Belleville, where he has practised continuously from the time of his call to the Bar, he has been long and widely known as the solicitor of the Grand Trunk Railway Company. To that position he was appointed in 1853, at the comparatively early age of thirty, and he retained it until failing physical powers compelled a very few years ago, his resignation of the active duties attached to it, though he remained to the end senior consulting solicitor to the company.

The Grand Trunk Company has become one of the great railway corporations of the world, but it started in what would now be regarded as a very humble way. Mr. Bell was one of its promoters and shareholders, as well as its solicitor, and it is an almost unique illustration of the rapidity of Canada's evolution that during the half century of his active connection with the company he should have seen its railway system grow from a local line of a few score miles to a network of widely spread network of Grand Trunk lines in older Canada, and the Transcontinental line which it has undertaken to operate and partly construct through the agency of the Grand Trunk Pacific Company. Of all those who were associated with him at the initiation of the Grand Trunk enterprise few, if any, are left to see the last stage of its enormous expansion. They were persistently accused of questionable acts; they undoubtedly squandered capital in ways that were indefensible; but they were men of ability and foresight, and it may now be fairly said of them that they "builded better than they knew." It would be hard to estimate what the Grand Trunk has done for Canada, and it needed men of courage, selfliance and optimism to organise and carry to completion such a pioneer undertaking.—Globe.

Strikes.

Scarcely a week passes but details of strikes in various parts of the world where organized labor has existence appear in the columns of public journals.

Cornwall has now its troubles. The men operating the street railway have "struck" for higher wages. Cornwall not being a very populous city, the probabilities are that the road is barely paying running expenses. Organized labor cares little for that. It would take money, and read, too, and then strike for more.

Montreal has its periodical return to strikes. Hundreds of carpenters have laid down their tools, with the cry, more pay or no work. Though this paralyses building operations, the sooner employers close all shops and stop building operations the sooner capital and labor will find its level. At present no one is safe in entering into a contract.

One of the most unreasonable and unjustifiable strikes that has occurred for some time is that at the Springhill mines in Nova Scotia. At this mine, says a contemporary "a man through misfortune, was incapacitated from earning his living as a miner. For seventeen months he was supported out of the Employees' Relief Fund. When he was able to resume his duties at his old job, there he demonstrated his incompetence and a desire to shirk work. The work which he was assigned was cleaning lamps. The good condition of these lamps is largely responsible for the safe working of the mines. One lamp supplied to a miner in an unlit condition may be the cause of an explosion costing half a hundred lives or more, and the destruction of tens of thousands of dollars worth of property. This man was found neglecting his duty. He was properly removed from the job and told that he could have other employment. He refused to do anything but the work at which he had shown himself not only incompetent, but a source of constant danger to his fellow employees.

"When the management refused to grant this demand, a meeting of the labor union was held, and a strike ordered. The result was that 1,200 men obeyed. Why? Because they feared the tyranny of unionism. They were afraid. If they refused to quit work they would be denounced as enemies of the organization, as strike breakers, as scabs, as unfit for honest men to associate with. The few are slave to blame. They allowed the management of the union to fall into the hands of agitators, the man who are never satisfied and never will be, the men who are always looking for trouble, and who enjoy the prominence a strike brings to them. If the great majority of the men in the Springhill mines had been actively interested in the union there would have been no strike. It will end just as soon as the conservative element makes up its mind that it has been duped; and there will be no more strikes of any kind in conservative members of the union realize that they owe it not only to themselves to take employment anywhere to see that the business of the union is conducted along business lines.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Last night about eleven o'clock dingi want the phone, and we received a special wire from Boston over the C.P.R. Co's telegraph wires which read: Thomas W. Lawson, of Boston, en route to Kansas in his private car Hastemere is passing through your town via G.T.R. at three fifty-seven, Thursday morning. We know he would be glad to meet your representative. Any courtesies extended will be duly appreciated by us. — T. B. Humphrey Co's."

For the benefit of our readers we may say that Mr. Lawson is the gentlemanly multi-millionaire of financial fame who, when he has time, is looking for considerable free advertising (we have never seen any of his cash), and, as the hour was not a bright one, we rather early for a late sleeper, our representative had to forego the pleasure of meeting the famous Mr. Thomas W. Lawson. Good-bye, Thomas, and may your trip to Kansas be a pleasant one. The next time you come this way we'll be up in daylight and we'll have an X-ray apparatus turned on in an endeavor to find out how you accomplish your schemes.

The announcement in our news columns that the city has obtained permission to issue debentures for $15,000 to extend the gas works is a very gratifying one. The extension is bound to be satisfactory in every way.

A local paper raised a great hue and cry a few days ago about the change of an official which was said to have been made at the county jail. That same official is still doing duty at his old post and, so far, has received no notice to quit from anyone. The getting rid of SMALL, offensive political officeholders is all right, but, mind you, we don't say the man in question was a political partisan. However, Mr. Whitney and the people in Trenton might TAKE A LITTLE BIT OFF THE TOP. Plenty of room there for the axe among the higher grade of offensive political partisans holding office in this city and county. A little bit off the top, please.

AN UNGRACIOUS SPEECH.

"That speech," said Mrs. Coler, "is not a political address, 'was ungracious. It reminds me of a Scot's speech to his wife.

"The Scot had married for the second time. His new mate was sentimental and a little morbid. She could not resist asking her husband now and then if he loved her better than he had loved her predecessor.

"She would say:

"Do I more than fill Jean's place in your heart, Jock?"

"Are ye sure ye're no' regrettin' Jean, laddie?"

"Jock, do ye love me better nor her?"

"The man bore several of these examinations patiently. Then he ended them, once for all, with a gruff:

"Tak' mah word for it, Lucy, if Jean was livin' ye wadna be here."

Col. Charles W. Larned, was talking at West Point about a famous and venerable army chaplain.

"A braver and more upright man never lived," Col. Larned said. "During the Civil War he was in the habit of many a fierce engagement. He comforted the wounded, cheered on the brave, and put new spirit into the faint-hearted.

"He was once distributing cartridges to the midst of a hot fight. As he approached a certain company he heard a black-bearded private swearing at the enemy.

"Blank them,' the man was saying. 'Dash blank the——'

"But the chaplain interrupted this stream of blasphemy.

"You shouldn't speak like that, friend. Then he handed the man a packet of cartridges, adding:

"Don't curse them. Shoot them, shoot them.'"

SHE WAS NOT BEAUTIFUL.

"At the Whistler exhibition in London," said a tourist, "I had a chat with Joseph Pennell, the well-known artist. Pennell had spent his boyhood in Germantown with me, and we talked of our old Germantown friends. We talked of a boy who had become an artist and married a rich woman.

"Pennell said this chap was not altogether happy. He said he would tell me a story about him that would reveal acutely, in a funny James manner, the cause of his unhappiness.

"'A stranger visited the man's studio one day and paused, full of wonder, before a life-size, full-length picture of a woman in a white Greek dress.

"'Is this,' said the stranger, in a tone of amazement, 'your ideal?'

"'No,' the artist answered; 'it's my wife.'"

A DISTINCTION.

Count Stiram, of Paris, has, like all Frenchmen, a fondness, at times, for immoderate drinking. During his recent visit to Newport he said:

"I thought, till I went to England, that all the English hard drinkers, the four and five bottle men, had died off—had been killed off by their own potations. I read somewhere, or heard, perhaps, that red never existed in the flesh, but only in the imaginations of Redding, Smollett, Lever, and the other novelists.

"In England, though, I was undeceived. In an inland English county last fall I met a number of foxhunting and drinking squires—roxy, plump old gentlemen as strong as iron, and as impervious almost as iron to the usual port and sherry. Of these men drank from morning till bedtime, and the only effect that liquor had on them was to make them rosier, plumper and more cheerful.

"One night at a hunt dinner a pale, London broker said that a certain lamented gentleman had died, he believed, of——of drinking.

"At this statement a rosy squire, over six feet in height, and of two hundred pounds weight, brought his big fist down on the table angrily.

"'Died of drinking?' Nonsense,' he said. 'No man ever died of drinking. Some puny things have died learning to drink, but no man ever died of drinking.'"

THE ANATOMY (AUTONOMY) BILL.

(The Khan, in Hamilton Herald.)

Aunt Lucy was scraping new potatoes, and dropping them like pink pearls into a pail of cold water. She looked up suddenly and asked:

"Why do they call it the Anatomy Bill?"

"Cos," said Old Twilight, "they're tryin' to put an old skeleton into a brand new skin."

"No wonder they're makin' such bones about it," put in Phoebe, who was stemming berries.

"There's lots of fellers down to Parliament who couldn't furnish it with a backbone nohow," said Big Bill, as he laid down the Dundas Star.

"Ain' where did they get the skeleton?" queried Aunt Lucy.

"They got it out of the House of Commons cupboard," said Old Twilight.

"My! how it rains!" said Phoebe, peering out through the morning-glory vines that made a green curtain over the cook shanty window. Then, reflectively, "it rains on the just and unjust alike."

"That's so," said Aunt Lucy; "they even give the devil his due."

It was noticed by all hands that Old Twilight kept furtively watching Aunt Lucy all the rest of the day.

Commander Takahito, the Japanese naval attache at Washington, said at a dinner, anent an officer who had broken his parole:

"He who does dishonors himself will be always dishonorable. I do not believe in repentance. I do not believe that we sin and become good again. Sin leaves us inexcusably soiled.

"Hence it is futile to try to reform rascals and criminals. Covertly or openly, as the mood strikes them, these men answer our admonitions as the swindler answered the Yokohama judge.

"The swindler had come, footsore and weary, to the cottage of a poor man. There he had been entertained a month without payment. Finally, departing, he had borrowed the entire savings of the household that had sheltered him, pretending that, with this money for lawyer hire, he would be able to get an inheritance that had been withheld from him.

"So the hospitable poor man gave the swindler all his savings, and that was the end of the swindler, of course. But he was caught by the police a few months later, and at his trial he was proven guilty of having swindled his benefactor of his modest hoard.

"The judge, before sentencing the swindler, said to him reproachfully:

"'How could you be so base as to swindle these honest folk who put confidence in you?'

"The swindler with a smile replied:

"'Your honor, I'll make it worth your while if you'll tell me how to swindle those who don't put confidence in me.'"

Proves That Parasites Cause Hair Loss

Nine-tenths of the diseases of the scalp and hair are caused by parasitic germs. The importance of this discovery by Prof. Unna, of the Charity Hospital, Hamburg, Germany, can not be overestimated. It explains why many hair preparations, even of the most expensive character, fail to do good; because they do not, and they can not kill the dandruff germs. Herpicide is the only hair preparation in the world that positively destroys the dandruff parasites that burrow up the hair shafts called dandruff or dandruff is Newbro's Herpicide. In addition to its destroying the dandruff germ Herpicide is also a delightful hair dressing.

WOMEN WHO REST.

They Can Always Find Time to Make Others Happy.

The woman that really wants her husband to be happy and doesn't find delight in saving her children most doleful side-splitting pears before it is time for him to come home. She doesn't work hard until she hears his step, and then, worried and nervous, run in here with a complaint upon her lips. She stops work before it is time for him to come, bathes her face, combs her hair, slips into a comfortable, clean dress and either lies down or sits doing nothing until he comes.

The woman who wants to look fresh and be cheerful at the evening party does the same thing. Just to get ready for it. She plans her work so that she need not finish the dish pan into a pretty dress. She has her clothes ready and she takes a nap during the late afternoon. This is to make her smile ready and her eyes bright.

Both the husband and the hostess will be appreciative of the woman who greets them with that gentle serenity which comes only from one who is rested. Too many women fail to make others happy simply because they are always tired.—Kansas City World.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Prunes, soaked and chopped, make an acceptable addition to fruit cake.

To improve tough soup stock add and a squeeze of orange just before serving.

Dried peaches, if passed through a potato masher or a fine sieve after stewing, season with pepper and salt, make an excellent vegetable dish.

A most delicious fritter is made by chopping cold chicken meat, seasoning it with pepper and salt and mixing in an ordinary fritter batter. Fry by spoonfuls in deep fat.

Mango frosting for cake is made by mashing the flesh of an orange and squeezing the juice and a tablespoonful of fruit over it. Confectioners' sugar into the mixture confectioners' sugar until the proper consistency is reached.

That Stitch in Time.

Never neglect small holes, never wear shabby clothes, not only nine, but ninety. Don't let buttons hang by their last thread, darn small holes, never wear dirty or unbrushed hats, brush off and and bind frayed skirts. Fine feathers make fine birds, but never go in for only another. Your linens, your dress sets and stockings should be good, if plain, and always carefully kept in order. A clean, simple petticoat is better than a shabby silk one, and the smartest hats look bad if they are worn down at heel or minus buttons or tidy laces. Remember the outward appearance is often a key to one's character and that one is not to put "untidy" in one's character when habits of untidiness are indulged in. The tidy girl makes a tidy wife and a tidy mother, and her influence goes far. The dish water that spread in water after a stone has been thrown in it.

Color Schemes.

If the room is without sun, says the Scientific American, paint it a yellow the color key. If it is cold (on a cellar or in the mountains or in shadow of high, neighboring walls), warm it with a blending of mahogany and pink or old rose and old gold hangings combined with a few touches of turkey red or ecru tint. If it is sunny, mahogany or other dark red and blue will give the desired effect. If it is too dark, light it up with maple or white enamel, with cream or golden brown or with rose tones on the walls, and put some bright blooming plants and ferns about the windows.

Cracked Lips.

Cracked lips are often caused by ill health and indigestion. Put a little good cold cream on every night after washing and overhaul your dietary if you are troubled in this way and want to remedy matters. Never lick your lips, however rough and unconfortable they may feel. Biting makes matters worse rather than better and is likely to permanently spoil the outline of the lips and make them thick and ugly.

MRS. FREDERIC SCHOFF.

Who Adds President of the National Congress of Mothers.

Mrs. Frederic Schoff of Philadelphia, president of the National Congress of Mothers, is one of the philanthropists of this country whose fame as a champion of unfortunate children will live long after she has gone to the great beyond. Mrs. Schoff was one of the pioneers in the movement for a mothers' congress and has always been active in the work of the organization. For many years she has been conspicuous in society, but has ever put her object the betterment of the laws that relate to the care of children. The juvenile court law that was passed in Pennsylvania three years ago was placed on the statute books largely through her efforts, and its result has been to remove children entirely from appearance in criminal courts.

MRS. FREDERIC SCHOFF.

Mrs. Schoff has compiled a book of the laws of every state in the Union concerning dependent and delinquent children and in many other ways, aided by her wealth, has shown her devotion to the cause so dear to her heart.

Mrs. Schoff is also deeply interested in the welfare of her sex and is a favorite organization woman. She is a member of the Century club of Philadelphia, one of the largest and most influential clubs of women in the country. She was chairman of a committee whose efforts resulted in raising the salaries of the public school teachers of her city.

Mrs. Schoff has a beautiful home in Philadelphia and has seven children of her own, to whom she is devoted.

Touches Which Count.

The perfect hostess believes in herself and her power to give pleasure to her guests. She arranges her rooms to artfully conceal shortcomings, furbishing up the furniture with a polish and making cleanliness speak for itself. Windows are clear, draperies are spotless, and care shows in every part of the abode. I have been in the simplest kinds of dwellings where I felt like exclaiming, "How charming!" and I have gone to mansions where I found not an atom of comfort, though it was bewildering with priceless articles. I can call to mind a little house occupied by the vicar of a big, busy church, in whose yard it was plumped, where millionaires' palaces delighted the poor ten when the vicar's wife threw open her doors to the parish, says the Philadelphia Bulletin.

It was wonderfully simple and pretty, with its mattings and rugs, its short muslin window curtains and old fashioned furniture, such as can be bought for a song in secondhand stores and auction rooms, but stained and waxed to old shapes and full of comfort. There were always flowers growing in that house—not many, but the common kinds, suited to the seasons and giving touches of color and sweetness to the place. Nobody stopped to ask how much money had been spent on the tiny house—the vicar's salary was small and his family large, his home pretty, his wife clever. And he was a gentleman! What more was needed?

The Children's Toys.

One of the most perplexing problems with which the busy loving mother has to contend is to decide where to put the children's toys. If placed in the nursery closet they keep the floor in an unsightly litter, and the dust gathers quickly under them.

One of the most convenient devices is a box couch seen feet in length, two feet wide and three feet deep. To this is a hinged top. The box is covered with a deep red cretonne, and on the lid is fitted and securely fastened a hair mattress, also covered with brocade. Into this thoroughly ornamental piece of furniture the toys may be stored every night, it being the children's task to pick off everything from the floor and put it away in a neat and orderly manner.

They soon accustomed to this task and perform it with perfect cheerfulness, and there is a delightfully pleasant conviction that they are helping mamma. By the time their early supper is brought to the nursery not a toy is to be discovered on the floor and the box couch is closed.

Upon this same couch are a number of pillows of bright cretonnes and denims and a folded afghan, and how the mother often takes a pussy nap after tucking in the babies.

Folding Beds.

The strange statement has been made that there are people in the world who buy folding beds because they like them, and who, being willing to pay large prices for them, enjoy them as articles of household adornment. There does not seem any reason for such a condition of affairs, and when we are further told of a house with many large bedrooms containing only folding beds we can but rub our eyes and ask what next? The folding bed is an article of utility, but it is difficult to view it as an article of ornament. A proper place, and its only place, is in a small room where space must be saved in the open bed. It is decidedly insanitary, because it is generally kept closed during the day. Many housekeepers think us believe it is dangerous because it has been known to fold up of itself and embrace the sleeper in its accustomed fatal conclusions. It is seldom beautiful, even though it may be a handsome article of furniture, for it generally suggests to be something which it is set. A folding carved chest or wardrobe, if one must have a heavy piece of carved furniture, would be more logical and more beautiful.—Scientific American.

Bread and Butter Rolls.

There is a knack about preparing the dainty bread and butter rolls for luncheon or the 5 o'clock tea that not every housekeeper possesses. To roll easily the bread must not be more than a day old, while the loaves should not be more than five inches long and three in diameter. Cut the slices very thin with a sharp knife, buttering each time before slicing. Then, after the slices are rolled lightly, pressing just enough to have the folds adhere. If preferred, the bread can be cut in the form of squares of shrimp, anchovy, chicken, cream cheese, salad or fig fillings before rolling. For children's parties or evening lunches frills seem desirable these little rolls are tied with pale pink ribbon, but are seldom adds nothing to their toothsomeness it is best dispensed with under ordinary circumstances.

Relining a Coat.

When a tailor has been asked to reline he first rips out half of the old lining for a pattern, leaving the other attached as a guide. He then cuts out a new lining from the pattern and sews it up, leaving the underarm seam open. He bastes in one half of the lining, fitting it along the fronts and bottom of the coat, and then rips out the half of the old lining that was left and bastes in the remaining half of the new. This gives the new lining around the bottom, neck and fronts and in the skirt. He does the armholes and underarm seams, into which any excess of material can go, and then sews the linings of the sleeves are put in.

Powder Paper.

An ingenious and convenient substitute for the ordinary complexion powder is simply a piece of tissue to be carried in one's chatelaine and to be used when occasion calls and then with rapidity and without courting observation. Are you at all conscious that you are shining? Does your face look far from clear and dry? Then all that is necessary to meet the requisite improvement is to tear a few sheets from little volume, pass it over the cheeks and nose and consign it to the waste basket. No puff, no pad, is needed. The whole operation is quietly and quickly performed.

Helpful Ideas.

A woman who does her own housework and who always manages to look fresh and dainty has many helpful ideas. While washing dishes or clothes she tucks a folded newspaper over her dress. This protects her from splashes and saves the trouble of changing her dress when she goes into the parlor to receive callers.

The Perfumed Bath.

No woman of fashion fails to perfume her bath with a filmy spray. By this method the body becomes saturated with a delicate, delicious odor. Tablets for perfuming the bath come in every scent, from plain violet to all sorts of combinations. A few tablets dropped in the tub of water will perfume not only the bath and the bather, but the room and the whole house.

Valuable Services.

Marble surfaces can be cleaned by rubbing with a paste made of a large lump of spanish whiting and a teaspoonful of washing soda dissolved in water to thoroughly dissolve the whiting. Rub the paste over the surface with a small cloth, leave for half an hour and then wash off with warm water and dry carefully.

Laundry Soap.

Buy your laundry soap by the quantity and pile it in such a way as to leave spaces between the bars to allow a dry room. The harder it gets the less it will wash away in using, while it is often even more effective work.

Tea Grounds.

Tea grounds flavor to a certain fine volatile oil which is present only in very minute quantities. The fact that it is so volatile renders it most necessary to keep tea in a caddy that is air tight.

One good daily exercise for preserving suppleness of the spine is to bend back over the back of a low rigid chair touch the toes with the fingers. This is done while standing.

A practical substitute for the waste paper basket is a high jardiniere which has the additional recommendation of being washable.

Ink stains on any kind of cotton fabric should be soaked in milk before the ink has time to dry.

YOUR LITTLE FINGER.

How Its Use Proclaims a Drinker of a Cup of Tea.

Women who scorn deceit and hate affection can drink tea in the presence of company without affectation in their little fingers. Is it polite to stick out the little finger when one drinks tea? Certainly demand it!

A woman's hand doesn't look any better with one finger pointing toward the setting sun than it does if she doesn't look so well as it would if it had followed its everyday, natural lines. There is a curve from the wrist to the wrist and the little raising of the forearm. Then it goes further and attacks the elbow. The woman who sticks out her little finger when she drinks tea, invariably bugs her elbow a little closer to her side and bunches up one shoulder, ever so little.

And the expression on her face is different too. The eyes have tiny affected wrinkles in the corners. The neck is stretched forward and the cup with the least bit of exaggeration. And if you can imagine the cup you will notice that the lips pucker quite differently when the little finger is pointed than they do when they prepare for the ordinary home table sip of tea. Do we come to little fingers because we feel unnatural or do we feel unnatural because we crook our little fingers? I'm not certain that the question we may be able to discover why we do the affected and one other distinctive, if not quite unnatural things we do daily.

A woman is never so charming when she is natural, but it seems as if we had been unnatural for so many years that it has become quite natural to be unnatural.—Dayton Herald.

WEARING AN APRON.

How Much It Saves One's Dress Because of Its Quaintness.

Our grandmothers always wore aprons. Sometimes they were of such a cut tom we would do well in imitating.

It's woman fancies that an apron is useless because it is worn over the dress for a single morning when about her work and note how soiled it becomes. That is the very reason upon the fact that but for this protection her dress would be soiled over all the suit. "But I wear a black dress always," is another phase of the argument. The soil is there even if you can't see it. Black shows dust does, and the somber dress soon looks worse than does a colored gown.

As aprons, made of the same wear and tear on the front of the dress and lengthens the period of its best and best, before the front breadth of a suit becomes shiny and worn. Gingham aprons are always pretty, and the careful housekeeper when in the kitchen. But there are many women who do not wear an apron at all, and when they spoon to slip on while the bric-a-brac is being dusted or while they are doing the ninety-nine trifles that fall to the lot of the house mother. An apron for this purpose should be of lawn, finished with wide tucks and innocent of elaborate embroidery or lace.

Of a different nature are the dainty sewing aprons, which are made of sheer lawn, with embroidery or lace, and serve as a feminine coquetry as much as for actual service.

HAIR HINTS.

Curl a short wisp of hair over each ear to make those tiny "fascinators."

Dampen your switch (if you wear one) and plait it at night to give it the curly effect.

The best way to arrange the hair before retiring is to brush it well and allow it to hang during the night.

Dampen the hair and plait it in three or four plaits, according to how much is to make it fluffy and abundant looking.

If your hair has untidy short ends that have a habit of falling over the face, invest in an invisible net or a close fitting veil.

Comb your front hair over your forehead and tie it down with a narrow ribbon. Continue pursuing it to make it stay in place. After retiring the hair is slipped out, leaving the soft roll.

Women's Long Goodbye.

"What is the psychological reason which makes women say such good-byes?" Mrs. G. B. Carpenter, president of the Woman's Press club, says: "I should say that it is because women do, as a rule, does not think out logically what she says and does not concentrate her mind upon one line of thought. When one woman meets another she does not do so in a business way and gather together in her mind the things she wants to say to this particular person. She has a general inventory of them and consequently she does not say them in order. When she has apparently all been said, she thinks of something else. So she hastily calls her friend back and, remembering hastily, the other woman does the same thing, and so goodbys multiply."

The Window Curtains.

Telling characters by window curtains is a new fad. If the shades of a house are invariably in the center of the glass panes and always straight up an even line, then it is safe to pronounce the housekeeper a quiet, orderly woman in whose nerves never a disturbance into edges. If, on the contrary, one curtain is up and one down or one string missing and the other tied into tangled knots or one stick broken and the other one lying on the bias, then the reader of character promptly chronicles the woman resident as possessor of a nervous, irritable temperament or as one too indifferent to care for the little things of life that combine to make the great things.—Woman's Life.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS.

A FRENCH TOY.

The Cute and Bobechon Trick Is Interesting and Amusing.

The bobechon is a little toy, easily constructed, with which a very interesting trick may be played. It comes to us from France, where it is much in vogue, and, while a child can play it, it is often indulged in by grownups, for, though simple, it requires some skill. That, however, is soon acquired with practice.

To prepare the bobechon make a tight roll of a piece of flannel or of heavy cloth. The roll should be about three inches long and half an inch in diameter. To keep it in shape wind a string around it tightly from one end to the other.

Now take a piece of fur and cut a circular piece out of it an inch and a half in diameter. If you have not the fur, several thicknesses of cloth may be sewn together tightly, making a disk of the given diameter. Sew the roll of flannel to the center of the disc so that it will be supported in an upright position, the disk making a circular base on which the roll stands.

This will complete the bobechon, and the illustration below will show you how it looks. Now for the game.

Stand the bobechon upright in the center of an ordinary dinner plate and place on top of the flannel roll a small coin. Now have a flexible cane or rod or a piece of rattan, and with the rod remove the bobechon from the coin from the plate so that neither will fall into the plate. The player need not remain on the bobechon, but he must not fall absolutely clear of the plate.

That is your problem. It sounds easy, but try it.

The players agree beforehand on the number of trials each shall have, and to some one keeps score. Each plays in turn, taking one trial at a time, and the first one to make a second trial after all have had their first, and so on, until the number of trials agreed upon has been had by each.

Whoever succeeds the most times is the winner, and if a prize has been offered it will be added to the game.

To remove the bobechon and the coin is not as easy as it seems. If you place the rod near the base and slide bobechon and coin to the sloping edge and then give a push, the coin will fall right into the plate, even if the bobechon is pushed clear of it.

There is one certain way to do it—press the end of the flexible rod on the top of the bobechon and bend it as it curves downward. The curve of the rod will touch the bobechon just where the roll is secured to the disk, and pushing down on the base and against the upright roll, as shown in the illustration.

Now slowly move the bobechon, with the coin on it, to the slope of the plate, and, holding the bobechon with the rod, which you will learn with practice, you may remove both bobechon and coin clear of the plate.

This little toy is well worth making, for you will find that it will amuse every one who comes to see you.—New York Mail and Express.

The Obedient Boy.

A little boy was sailing a boat with a playmate on a good deal larger than he was.

The boat had sailed a good way out in the pond, and the big boy said: "Come in, Jim, and get her. It isn't over safe, sailing. I've been in every time."

"I daren't," said Jim. "I'll carry her all the way home for you, but I'm not to go in there. She told me I mustn't dare to."

"Who's she?"

"My mother," replied Jim rather softly.

"Your mother! Why, I thought she was dead," said the big boy.

"That was before she died. Eddie and I used to come here and sail our boats, and she never let us come unless we had strings enough to hang it in with. I ain't afraid—you know I'm not—only she did not want me to, and I can't do it."

That's what a beautiful spirit that made little Jim obedient to his mother even after she was dead!—Selected.

Forfeits.

Of course all of you boys and girls know what "fine or superfine" means? If any one of you does not, you will be duly quick to tell you!

But we will of us always "hand up" for good forfeits. So we will give you a couple of forfeits that are recommended in the "Book of Indoor and Outdoor Games:"

A bit of paper is pinned to a curtain or portiere and the blindfolded, the culprit, he is requested to remove it.

One is told to kiss himself or herself, which may be done on the hand or on the reflection in a glass.

A Turnabout.

"I'm going to drive the cows home!" Jimmy-Joey said

As off he proudly started, holding high his head.

Back he scampered, screaming—poor little Joey-Jim!

He didn't drive the cows home—the cows had driven him!

THE Oxford Hot Water Boiler takes advantage of every known scientific principle which will increase the generation and distribution of heat.

We have increased its power enormously by making the walls of the fire pot slant inwards above the fire. This gives a greater surface for the direct action of the rays of heat.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The first water section over the fire is double depth, with well shaped flues which also increases the surface directly displayed to the action of the heat.

These are but two of the attractive points which make the Oxford Hot Water Boiler the most economical and most efficient home-warming apparatus on the market. If you will drop us a post card, we will send you our catalogue, which explains the whole system.

Richard Harding Davis, when he was a reporter in Philadelphia, delighted to disguise himself as a "tough" young man and to mingle with the odd characters of the 9th Street district of the Quaker City.

Mr. Davis got to know this district with peculiar intimacy. Its prize-fighters he knew tapcleally well. Not seldom, in the gathering of some odd news items, he would accompany a third-rate pugilist to his cheap boarding-house and dine with him on the most unpalatable fare.

"I used to know one fighter," said Mr. Davis recently, "who was a character, a wit, a man of no mean intellect.

"One day I dined with him at his boarding - house, a typical boarding-house, of those where the landlady sits at the head of the table and serves the dishes to the submissive pensioners ranged in two lines below her.

"My friend got a piece of steak that was full of gristle. Finding this steak intolerably tough, he began to saw at it with burlesque attempts at carving it. He turned back his cuffs and carved, then he took off his coat. Then he held his knife like a chisel and pretended to hammer the handle with a biscuit.

"The landlady, up to this moment, had been too busy serving to notice the pugilist's antics. Now she spoke up:

"'Is there anything the matter with your steak?' she said in a stern voice.

"The pugilist smiled politely and answered:

"'It is a trifle overtrained, perhaps, madam; but, really, I never saw a harder muscle.'"

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS

BY SEWARD W. HOPKINS

Copyright, 1903, by Seward W. Hopkins.

Duvally! Davally! Davally!

Duvally! Davally two cockatoos.” In response to these a door opened, and a squad entered. At the same moment two soldiers with drawn swords stepped to the side of Casparin.

“Traitor!” was the word breathed by Duvally as he looked upon the tall, dark, white faced Casparin.

Four men were brought in. One was Casparin’s messenger. The other three, Princess Marie, Vandal, Reber and Robella.

Duvally handed a note to the prince. It read as follows:

“Be careful. It is not the prince, but myself, who is riding the gay horse. The prince rides in the carriage with the princess.”

A stern look passed from the prince to his brother.

“Casparin,” he said, “you have chosen.” Then, turning to his faithful officer, he said:

“Duvally, the prisoners are yours.”

CHAPTER XIII.

THE STRANGER AND THE PRINCESS.

CASPARIN was taken to a dungeon in the castle cellar. There he was duly stripped of all he possessed and sent, a wanderer, out of his own country. The brand was on him, and no man lent him assistance. He ended his days in a gambling hell in Paris.

Vandal, Reber and Robello were turned over to the Provence authorities, who by that time had found reason to want them themselves.

Mme. Arlay had made a confession.

Vandal was executed for the murder of M. de Bulloz and Monroe, and the other two scoundrels will scarcely live out the long years of imprisonment to which they were sentenced.

Two days after the arrest of Casparin a pretty group sat in the cozy apartment of Princess Margaret. There were present, besides the wife of the reigning prince, the Princess Marie Alexis and pretty Adria, the daughter of Volner, the farmer.

“It is all so strange and inexplicable, my dear Adria,” said Princess Marie. “That you were faithful in your love for me is not to be doubted, but that you, in the seclusion of your farm, should know of all that was started against us in Paris is almost beyond belief. How was it? You have spoken, as the prince has told us, of a stranger.”

“Ah, yes,” said Adria, “an American! He is brave, your highness, as you es, and fought for you with his very life, and it was he that told my father of the plot.”

“An American!” exclaimed Princess Margaret. “My countryman?”

“Yes, even so—a young man about the age of—of—Rosso—tall, handsome face and form, having nothing. But he would see to tell my father.”

“This brave fellow shall be properly rewarded for his conduct,” said Princess Margaret. “We ought to visit him. The serious blow he has given him and him to life after a serious accident.”

Adria looked out through a large window and beheld the trees of the splendid park. A smile, mingled with a look of anxiety, showed on her face.

“You have suggested, your highness,” she said. “But he is very weak and tender. You see I do not know what to do—what to tell Rosso. He is so imperative.”

“Well, I declare!” exclaimed Princess Marie, with a laugh. “You get from the subject of this American to Rosso very rapidly. Has that impetuous captain commanded you to cease your attentions to the American?”

“No; Ah, Rosso is not jealous. But he—he—your highnesses, I promised that before he went to Paris to your train that as soon as he returned I would become his wife. It seems now that the prince has given him an estate some distance from here, and he is eager to have our wedding and go there for our honeymoon.”

“Well, that is romantic and just as it should be,” said Princess Margaret. “Nothing could be prettier. If you promised Duvally, you must keep your promise.”

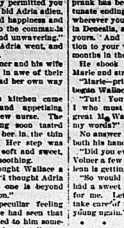

Adria blushed and stammered.

“That—that—is what I want to do,” she said. “But who will take care of the American?”

“We will see to it,” said Princess Margaret, “that your place is filled. We cannot, of course, hope to give this American so sweet a nurse as you, but we will do the best we can.”

“You may yet have that pleasure,” she said. “Princesses talk at liberty to

“You,” said the farmer’s wife, “this is no place for princesses to talk like ordinary persons, but not nurses. I have already permitted you to talk too much. Your old Adria aches, wish her good luck and happiness and then resign yourself to the command of one who is a nurse and unwavering.”

So with kind words Adria went, and Elsa took up the word.

The stranger Volner and his wife seemed to stand much in awe of their pretty niece, for she had her own way in the house.

From the capacious kitchen came wonderful dishes and appetizing dishes made by the new nurse. The water from the spring soon tasted sweeter if handed by her. In the tiny little drinking glass. Her step was light as air, her voice soft and sweet, her touch gentle and soothing.

“What a nurse!” thought Wallace a hundred times a day. “I thought Adria was perfect, but this one is beyond even worldly perfection.”

But something peculiar feeling came over him that he had seen that face before. It appealed to him somehow in a way that a face totally unknown could not. The nurse always seemed to be near him, and captive and out of sight her wealth of beautiful hair.

And Wallace grew stronger gradually and thought more and more of his nurse. He was a simple minded and tender fowl she had broiled with her own hands. She poured his wine for him and put it down on the table Volner had made.

As Wallace reached out to take the wine he looked into Elsa’s face. For a moment he pressed the dainty fingers, then withdrew, but she did not withdraw her hand.

“Ah,” said Wallace, with some bitterness, “it is not to be without power or money! Elsa, you have been too kind. You have given me a wound from which I shall not well until he me to recover. Yet I am poor and would not ask you to wed me in my present condition. In happier days may I hope that some of the love I feel for you is to be reciprocated?”

A vivid blush overspread her face. She was about to reply when the wife of the farmer entered. Then, in her confusion, turned away and put her hands to her face as if to arrange it. But she touched it with too heavy a hand. It fell to the floor, and a mass of beautiful brown hair fell in lovely profusion to her waist. It made a great change in her appearance. Wallace, unmindful of the presence of Volner’s wife, stared, thought and started in embarrassed astonishment to a sitting posture.

“Yes,” said the farmer’s wife, with some confusion, “it is time that we have played out. I knew everybody means harm, but there are limits. This is Princess Marie.”

“Oh, forgive me!” cried poor Wallace. “I could not have spoken had I known. Why did you come? I cannot annoy the words which must have seemed to you like love. But forget them and forgive me. I did not know.”

“Of course you did not know,” replied the unrepentant princess, with a regulish laugh. “That would have been all right, but you thought I was ungrateful all along.”

“No; I did not say it,” remonstrated Wallace. “Forgive me and go back to the castle. Let me remember you as my pretty nurse.”

“And not as Princess Marie?”

“Ah, no! There is too wide a gulf between us. As my nurse you were more my equal.”

Tears gathered in Marie’s eyes. Roughly she pushed on her young shoulders, yet she understood its rights and privileges.

“For one brief moment I rejoice in my position and the etiquette of royalty,” she said. She took his hand in hers and looked down into his eyes with an expression that made the blood leap through his veins as it had not done since he fell. “As you say, I am a princess. While you believed me a simple nurse, you spoke words of honest love. You have withdrawn them since you discovered my identity. But you have spoken, and you have to me love me, was it? It was because, as the princess, you thought I would not accept the love that a nurse might accept.”

“No, no,” said the half maddened Wallace. “I could never cease loving you, though a thousand miles kept us apart.”

“Then do not take back the words,” she said. “I have been courted by high princes of power, soldiers and diplomats. Not for myself, but because I was Princess Marie of Denselle. It is sweet—oh, how sweet—to be loved for love alone. And do you think I have learned nothing each day we have been together? I have learned the same lesson of love. Now you are my patient and my prisoner. I shall write to Charles tonight.”

The letter which Marie wrote to the castle did not surprise her brother in the least. He had framed some sort result of the match-up scheme of his sister by which she wished to show her gratitude toward the hero of America. He had taken time by the forelock and had cabled long inquiries to his representative in London. In reply he received a short cable message and a letter following. So it happened that Prince Charles, as he sipped his coffee, read the note from Marie, walked into Volner’s house carrying a large official looking epistle.

“I have come to offer my congratulations,” he said, “on your new title. This affair promised something like this, and I took the liberty to inquire as to the standing of Mr. Wallace. In reply I get word that he is in every sense a gentleman. Not only that, but he has been raised to the rank of full lieutenant-general in Denselle. If seems his uncle backhand, having no heir of his own, adopted his nephew. Marie, your prank has been providential in its fortunate ending. God bless you both, wherever you may have your home. If in Denselle, a palace and park shall be yours. And I may not be only entertain to your wedding that at least five months in the year you live at Troile.”

He shook Frankford’s hand, kissed Marie and strode out.

“Marie—princess—my love, my love,” began Wallace. “How can I”—

“Tut! You are no longer poor. It is who made you so. You have the great Mr. Wallace. Shall I take back my words?”

No answer was needed. He held out both his hands, and she took them.

Until one year had passed he rode to Volner a few hours later. “That American is getting well very fast now.”

“So would you,” replied Volner, “if I had a sweet wife and fortune waiting for me. Let them alone. They can take care of themselves. It makes no young again.”

A few months later the castle at Troile was ablaze with lights. A grand wedding took place. Officers of army, men of the diplomatic corps, visiting naval commanders, all were present, and the bride was the beautiful Princess Marie and the groom the handsome American. He wore no uniform and was simply dressed as the side the brilliant officers. But on his breast he wore a decoration, even the highest decoration in Denselle, and every man within the palace gates envied him his fortune and his bride.

THE END.

Members of Congress and Mourning.

“Fifty years ago members of congress and of the senate would have been conspicuous by the absence of a wear crape on their arms for thirty days after the death of a president,” remarked an ex-member who had served before the civil war.

“Up to about 1850 a member a member of congress died the resolution of sympathy with his family invariably carried with it the request that members should wear mourning. Deaths of members were much more frequent for the congressional body was numerically smaller. Indeed, the increase of the membership of the house is mainly to a higher death rate, was the direct cause of abolishing the custom.

“A number of members of congress now die every year, and it was not thought advisable to keep members of the house and senate in practically perpetual mourning.”

OBESITY A DISEASE.

Vigorous Measures For Its Removal Are Urged.

At middle age certain organs lose functional activity and shrink and impair vigor. Stomach, liver and kidneys grow energy. This decreased need for nutrition, if not heeded, will result in taking into the body more than it can use. Fat will be deposited and used either to build tissue or to keep accumulating at least and energy. The result is kidneys, liver and other excretory organs are overpowered by the fat that invades the body wastes and become diseased. says a writer in the Housekeeper. Then comes stress of life, the heart weakens, the body wastes and becomes diseased. says a writer in the Housekeeper. Then comes stress of life, the heart weakens, the body wastes and becomes diseased. is every other old corner in the body where it can be stowed away. In time of life illness, accident or shock of fat crowds out muscle, gland and other normal tissues and takes their place. This is really a form of slow suffocation and always shortens life, ending often in sudden death from heart failure, apoplexy or some other kindred disorders

The prevention of obesity means regulation of diet, especially in middle life and when changing from an active out of door occupation to a sedentary indoor life. Often the amount of food should be cut down from one-fourth to one-half, especially yielding fats and sweets, also soft foods, which tend to accumulating from deficient mastication and too hearty eating. No wine, beer or alcoholic drink or tea or coffee should be used. The amount of water should be restricted. Exercise should be taken in the open air and deep breathing practiced to increase the intake of oxygen and burn up and oxidize bodily toxic matter.

If the bowels constipated are overcome, yet retain a fair amount of physical vigor, the day should begin with a cold bath, plunge, spray, cold towel rub or sponge bath, after which should be taken active exercise in the form of work, either in the open air or in a well ventilated room, horseback riding, bicycling or a brisk walk for an hour or more. Exercise in a well ventilated gymnasium may be substituted for the out of door, but is not so effective and invigorating.

THE EVENING WORLD

MRS. JOHN C. HAZEN.

An Earnest and Active Daughter of the American Revolution.

Mrs. John Cunningham Hasen of Pelham Manor, N. Y., one of the ten vice presidents general of the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, is a daughter of the late Benjamin Franklin Hall of Auburn, N. Y., who was appointed by President Lincoln first chief justice of Colorado and was the author of a “History of the Republican Party” and several works on jurisprudence. Through both the paternal and maternal line she descended from distinguished colonial and Revolutionary ancestors.

She was one of the earliest members of the Daughters of the American Revolution women out of ten go on piling things together until the favor of each is lost and a sort of composite favor takes its place. Butter-and-tea, for instance, will absorb odor on the slightest pretext. Fish will not only absorb it, but will give out a very perceptible odor to everything that is near it. Tobacco apparently, if not absorb, then they do give out an odor rather spicy and appetizing in itself, but most unpleasant when absorbed by meat. It is not only uncooked things that absorb odor, either, for crackers are famous on the subject. They should be kept in tins, air tight, or they will soon get soft and tasteless or soft and full of a dozen different flavors. Cheese will absorb odor and give it out again as taste. Whenever you put away things shut up by themselves, and you’ll find your trouble well repaid.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Talon Leftovers.

The talent of the average girl you have on hand and what will not keep longer should be cultivated in all branches of cookery, and soup making is a fertile field, says a household authority. For instance, if you have a cold chicken bone, by running them through a strainer and adding a pint of milk and a tablespoonful of butter and a pint of stock without the butter—with seasoning to taste (onion is very good), one may have a delicious and nourishing dish at once. The same may be said of peas or corn. If stock is used with the liquor of these last named vegetables it should be veal or chicken stock, for beef is apt to make too dark a soup on its own. A few thin slices of lemon add greatly to puree of corn.

The “Butler’s Assistant.”

The “butler’s assistant” has reached this side of the water. In England it has old renown as a breakfast and luncheon table convenience. The butler’s assistant is a revolving tray of polished wood, on which is placed sugar bowl, cream pitcher, butter, bread, olives—almost everything, in fact, which has commonly to be passed. The tray occupies the center of the table and is easily reached from all sides. Being of polished wood, any dish on it is available to all at the table. A craftsman makes the tray in old mahogany for $15.—New York Post.

Sheet Wisdom.

Most housekeepers imagine that linen is the ideal material for sheets, but several household authorities consider it inferior to a good quality of cotton for this purpose. Linen is cold and “slippery.” It is not appropriate for sheets than it is for body wear owing to its nonabsorbent quality. The writer likes to have sheets and pillow cases smooth out than those in cotton and, in addition, keep a bed from looking fresh. Linen, however, is all right when used for tablecloths and napery, in such purposes it is the ideal material.

The Door and the Wall.

The walls of a room near the door are more easily damaged by the door handles knocking against them when the door is flung wide open. To prevent this, take a fairly large cork, cover it first with cotton, wool or wadding and then with velvet or cloth, so as to make it look neat. Fix a screw in the beaded nail through it and fasten it to the floor about four inches from the wall behind the door. Then the handle cannot damage the wall.

Exercise and Health.

The only thing that will make your blood circulate actively is exercise, and you can take this even if you are working all day. Swing Indian clubs five minutes when you get up, standing before an open window. Take five minutes more of your hard work in a dressing room and go through any simple calesthenics. Do the same at night. This may seem a bother, but it will cause a rare circulation without promoting it.

The Looking Glass.

When looking glasses have to be cleaned they should be washed first with lukewarm soapsuds and a sponge and when dry rub it bright with chamois leather and a little prepared chalk which has been finely powdered. A splendid gloss will be given to glasses by rubbing them quickly with newspapers.

Afternoon Tea-cloths.

Apropos of afternoon tea-cloths, the latest fashion of running in a tolerably wide satin ribbon into insertion and finishing it off in bows at each corner closely to match has extended to boudoir cushions. The ribbons may be of different colors or corresponding with the general tone of the room.

“Where light and air cannot come the doctor must,” is more true than most people suppose.

A WONDERFUL MONSTER.

Description of a New Battleship in the Seventeenth Century.

Is it true that our ram battleships are but old inventions in new forms? It would look it. Some one has unearthed a curious announcement which appeared in the Mercurius Politicus for Dec. 6, 1653, to the effect, as stated by the Dundee Advertiser, that “the famous monster called a ship built at Rotterdam by a French engineer is now launched.” In a description of the monster are many points which definitely

“(1) To sail by means of certain instruments and wheels (without masts and sails) as swiftly in a calm or at least thirty miles every hour. (2) Both ends are made alike, and the ship can be stopped at pleasure as suddenly as a bird can turn. (3) In time of war it can with one bouncer make a hole under water in the greatest man-of-war as big as a table and in an hour’s time (for it is built with four or sixteen ships and in three or four hours will destroy a whole fleet. (4) She will be able to go in the East Indies and back again in eight or nine weeks. (5) She may be used to kill Indians and negroes by the hundred, as they may then be laden in fourteen days. (6) She may be used to carry over any pier or wooden work with great ease.”

A wonderful “monster” this must have been. What, one is curious to know, was her fate?

The “King’s English.”

The following appeared as a London coster tailor’s advertisement:

“A slap up togs and kickalee bollder, with upper Benjamins sniped on a downy plan, with moleskins of hanky-panky design, with a double fakement down the sides and artful buttons at bottom, with kicksies cut peg top, half tight or to drop loose over the trotters, with fancy vests made to flash the dickey or to fit tight round the scrag.”

Comforting Him.

“And now,” whispered the lover as he sought his fate, “that you are my own, what we do about the rope ladder? We shouldn’t leave it hanging there.”

“Don’t worry about that,” replied the eloping damsel. “Papa said he’d pull it up again so I couldn’t get back.”

Not Reliable.

Daughter—Are you satisfied that if I accepted him he would mend his ways. Her Mother—Humph! I haven’t much faith in this repairing done while you wait.

The cloudier the day, the sunnier should be your smile.

No furnace drudgery in the Bison

The most exasperating mystery a man can have is a cranky furnace. The dirt of coal, the ash sifting, the hard work of many heaters, make life a burden. With the new “Bison” hot water heater, there are no worries. Its draft is so simple a child can understand them, the shaking down apparatus is operated with the slightest effort, shaking down and ashing is the operation. It is a clean, simple, economical heater, perfectly safe, as it burns in a water jacket and when the drafts are set. Write to H. R. Ives Co., Limited, Montreal, for an interesting booklet, which fully describes it.

Bowser Has A Day Off

He Fails to "Perform," and Mrs. B. Who Knows Him of Old, Is Worried.

IN EXCELLENT HUMOR.

But the Straw Is Too Much, and Next Morning He Is Back at His Old Tricks Again.

STROKING THE CAT IN A FATHERLY WAY.

[Copyright, 1905, by R. B. McClure.]

WHEN breakfast had been concluded the other morning Mr. Bowser lighted a cigar and sauntered out into the back yard to see how many clothespins were getting ready to bloom with the crocuses, and at the end of half an hour Mrs. Bowser called from one of the back windows:

"Won't you be late at the office this morning?"

"I am going to take a day off," was his quiet reply.

Mrs. Bowser's knees began to shake. His day off meant that he would want to overhaul the house from top to bottom, and he would be almost certain to meddle with the water pipes and gas meter and bring about some sort of calamity. She went about with pulpitating heart for the next thirty minutes, but when she looked out again she was somewhat relieved to find him seated on an old trunk and idly stroking the cat in a fatherly way. Now and then he glanced up at the chimneys and the roof as if making a mental calculation, but at 10 o'clock he shifted around on to the front steps and settled down as if he meant to stay there. She presently made an excuse to get out there and inquire:

"Have you got a headache this morning?"

"Not the slightest."

"Does your rheumatism bother you?"

"Not a bit."

"—I have put my house cleaning off to next month. The weather is so very uncertain, you know."

"I guess you are wise."

She could think of nothing more, and she left him, but as she went about doing the upstairs work she kept a general eye on him from an open window. It was not long before a man came along and halted at the gate to say:

"Why, Bowser, you home? I was thinking of going over to the office to see you. I know where you can get an auto for half price."

"Don't want it, thank you."

"But it's a clipper, and the price has been cut in two."

"Don't want it."

"Aren't you feeling yourself today?"

"Never felt better in my life."

The man made some remark about the weather and passed on. On the corner he met the coal man and said:

"You know Bowser, of course? What in thunder ails him?"

"How—why?"

"I was just talking to him. He seems to be loafing around the house, and I offered him an auto at half price and he turned me down."

"He did, eh? Well, I haven't seen him for four or five days, but if he refused to grab for that auto then you can bet he's getting Wrong in the head. I've always said that he'd have softening of the brain some time."

Meanwhile, down at the house, a potato peddler had come along. He knew that Mr. Bowser had chosen three of the profession over the fence and was just one cent more generous per lb. if she bought a turnip of them, but the sight of his enemy sitting on the top step so calmly and contentedly and looking so harmless in the eyes of all emboldened him to stop his rig at the gate and say over the gate:

"Judge, can I sell you a few 'taters today? I've got a load of best ones here."

The words fooled up to Mrs. Bowser and gave her a chill. She was getting ready to run downstairs to prevent a tragedy when she heard Mr. Bowser reply:

"I hardly think we need any potatoes today. Thank you for calling my attention to them. They do look fine."

"I've got some fine cabbages here."

"Yes, they are fine, but I guess I don't want any."

"How about beets?"

"No beets, thank you. Call again as you come along tomorrow."

Mr. Bowser's attitude not only made Mrs. Bowser gasp for breath, but the peddler turned pale and, mounted his wagon and got around the nearest corner as fast as he could. There he met another of his kind coming from the opposite direction and shouted to him:

"Say, if you turn into Third place, look out for old Bowser."

"Why?"

"He's home and sitting on the steps, and he tried his best to lure me inside the gate by taking sort. Say, if I'd gone in he would have tossed me out feet high. You beware of him unless you want to have a widow behind you."

Between that hour and 2 o'clock Mr. Bowser encountered an old man, a boy distributing bills and a mender of tinware, and his reception of them was so kind and gentle that Mrs. Bowser told the cook to have lunch on the very minute and to hold herself in readiness to run the instant she heard any strange rumbles. At the lunch table she asked:

"You were not thinking of painting the house today, were you?"

"No, dear."

"Nor of fixing the water pipes, nor anything?"

"No."

When lunch was over, he stood around for awhile, and then, putting on his hat, he strolled over to the butcher's. As he never entered the shop except to kick, the butcher began to bristle up and get ready for a row. None came, however. Instead of a kick Mr. Bowser softly observed:

"I have noticed such an improvement in the meat during the last three months that I thought I'd drop in and tell you how pleased and satisfied I am. If every one had as conscientious a butcher as you are things would run smoother."

"Bowser, do you mean it?" asked the butcher as he wondered if he had heard aright.

"Of course I mean it."

"Then shake. I have said that you were a chronic kicker, but I take all back."

From the butcher shop Mr. Bowser went over to the drug store. He and the druggist had given each other many a hard rub, and as the latter caught sight of him through the window he said to his clerk:

"There comes that old kicker, Bowser. Wonder what the devil he is home this time of day for? If he gives me any of his chin music I'll order him out."

He did not have to proceed to that extremity. Mr. Bowser sauntered in with a smile on his face, and after asking for a cent's worth of slippery elm he said:

"Grimshaw, I don't know but you've got the impression that I'm a sort of kicker."

"Well, you are a little eccentric."

"That's all, and that's only when my sciatica bothers me. I have repeatedly recommended you as the best druggist in town and shall take pleasure in continuing to do so."

Bowser went to the cool office. Every week he had been in the habit of telling the cool man that he was cheating on the weight. He now meant to drop in and apologize. Unfortunately the cool man was out, but word was left with his clerk, and Mr. Bowser returned home. From 1:30 to 3 o'clock he lay on the lounge and dozed.

From 3 to 4 he smoked and read.

From 4 to 6 he sat on the front steps and let street fakirs yell at him and made answer in the gentlest tones.

At 6 he ate dinner. From 7 to 9 he talked with Mrs. Bowser on various subjects, always placing her opinions in advance of his own, and at 9 he locked up the house, turned off the gas and went to bed. Mrs. Bowser tremblingly followed, wondering what calamity impended, and four or five times during the night she awoke and listened to hear if he was breathing all right. She was dreaming that he was dead when his old time voice returned to her. It was morning, and he was yawning and saying:

"Who in the old Harry kicked my collar under the bed? If this isn't the blamedest rum house in four states then I don't know enough to come in when it rains!"

And she clasped her hands and thanked heaven that he was himself once more. M. QUAD.

Circus at Darby's Ferry

Pap Perkins, Postmaster, Tells of a Scandal In Which Deacon Spooner Was Exonerated.

IT was several years ago, but Deacon Spooner is still shivering over his narrow escape. There was to be a circus over at Darby's Ferry, and a good many of the simple people of Jericho circulated on going. The ministers and deacons and other Christian people frowned upon the idea, of course, and Deacon Spooner in particular used all his influence to keep people at home.

Whatever got the matter with him on circus day he himself could never explain, but he got up at daylight and walked seven miles, and when the performance opened he had a front seat. A hundred Jericho people saw him there, but he didn't seem to care. In fact, he appeared to be having the best time possible, and he didn't even get conscience stricken over it when he got home.

Of course, such a break could not pass unnoticed. When Deacon Tyler heard of it, he called on Deacon Williams, and the two together called upon the minister and others, and it was decided to bring Deacon Spooner to book. He got scared about it and wanted to go to the next visit his sister, but he was held on to and put on trial. When he was asked if he wanted to make a statement, he rose up and said:

"I said I wouldn't go to the circus, and I advised others not to go, and whatever got into me I can't understand. I went to bed feeling that circus performances was invented by Satan to trap the unwary and that my face was set agin 'em like a flint, but I got up at daylight and headed for Darby's Ferry and struck a gait of four miles an hour. I was there to see that circus come in. I was there when the ticket wagon opened. I was the first man inside the tent."

"Deacon Spooner, does insanity run in your family?" asked Deacon Tyler in very serious tones.

"No, it don't."

"Could you truthfully say that your mind was unhinged for the time being? Did you seem to be yourself or somebody else? If you was crazy of course we can't hold you to blame."

"No, I can't say as I was crazy," replied the deacon. "There was a buzzing in my ears a good deal of the time, but I guess that come from kickin' the bedclothes off and catchin' cold. I remember of buying lemonade and peanuts after I got there and of a feller tryin' to pick my wallet out of my pocket, but I don't think I was out of my mind."

"But do you lay it to sinful curiosity?" asked Deacon Williams.

"I guess I'll have to. I'd been hearin' about circuses for the last fifty years and had never attended one. I heard Abner Jones telling about the lions and tigers and elephants and spotted horses, and it didn't seem as sinful as I'd allus thought for."

"THE FIRST THING I RUN UP AGIN WAS FOUR ELEPHANTS."

"But you found it sinful when you got there?" asked Moses Schemerhorn, who rings the bell for prayer meetings and thinks no windmill man can be saved in any shape.

"No, I can't say as I did," slowly replied Deacon Spooner. "That's the part, pars or it. I had more fun than I ebaht down a wild hog or cleanin' out bumblebees, and I didn't see a single sinful thing. That's my defense—that I came home unscathed and untouched. I'm a-feelin' ev'ery bit as good as before I went."

There was a long drawn sigh and a shudder all around, and the minister said:

"Deacon, you may tell us what you saw there."

"Sho, the first thing I run up agin was four elephants. They was flappin' their ears and eatin' hay, and I didn't feel no sinful thoughts as I stood and looked at 'em. Can't a body see elephants and be saved too?"

"Go on, deacon."

"Then I took in the camels and zebras and giraffes. I looked at 'em over and over ag'in, but I didn't boil over and want to swear and fight. Fact is, I felt powerful peaceful over it. Is it agin me to look at critters with humps and stripes and long necks?"

"But they was connected with a circus," protested Deacon Tyler.

"Yes, I believe they was, but I couldn't help it. After I got through there, I went over to look at the rhinoceros. By gum, but he was a hefty critter. He weighed as much as two cows and a calf. I admit that I felt a little bit sinful when lookin' at him. I made up my mind that if a critter like that ever tackled me in the road I'd under-jig him and suspenderize him' to knock his horn off. It is too much to ask that my sin be overlooked?"

"We will ascertain further," said the minister, who wasn't looking so solemn as he might.

"Well, they had an ostrich, two alligators, four hyenas and a sacred bull from India. I took 'em all in and nothin' happened. I didn't even feel like offerin' to bet that I could lose two acres of corn in a day, and I am. If I was hurt by seein' them critters and things I'm willin' to give in, but I'm—sayin' that I don't feel like cellin' any one a liar."

"And you didn't feel that you had sinned?" queried Deacon Schemerhorn as he shook his head in a solemn way.

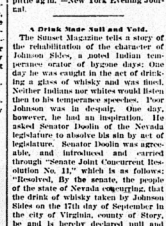

"Not a bit. I even wanted the hosses to go faster and the fellers to flipflop the harder. When a feller some clunkin' around with pink lemonade and charged me 10 cents for a small glass I did wish I had him in a tea acre lot for about two hours, but the feelin' passed off as soon as I had drunk the lemonade. I guess I would have all the sin again, wouldn't you?"

The deacon was turned out of the room and the investigating committee went into executive session, and an hour later it had

Resolved, That while Deacon Spooner had attended the circus and was liable to very sinful fits, he saw the show and was conscious of no real blame and is hereby and to do so again.

A Drink Made Null and Void.

The August Magazine tells a story of the rehabilitation of the late Governor of Johnson Sides, a noted Indian temperance lecturer of bygone days. One day he was caught in the act of drinking a glass of whisky and was fined. Another Indians nor whites would listen then to his temperance speeches. Poor Johnson was in despair. One day, however, he had an inspiration. He asked Senator Doolin of the Nevada legislature to dissolve him by act of legislature. Senator Doolin was agreeable, and introduced and carried through Senate Joint Concurrent Resolution No. 11," which is as follows:

"Resolved, By the senate, the people of the state of Nevada concurring, that the drink of whisky taken by Johnson Sides on the 17th day of September in the city of Virginia, county of Storey, be and is hereby declared null and void." And so was Johnson Sides and he a good man again. He became at once a power among his own people, resumed his advocacy of the cause of water and was listened to with great respect.

What a Diplomat Is.

The London Pall Mall Gazette discusses the word "diplomatist," interpreting it as "one with a double duty and a double responsibility"—to his own country and the country that receives him. The evolution of "diplomatist" from the Greek verb for "to double" is very curious. "Diploma," a doubling, was specialized as a folded sheet of parchment, and so came to mean an official passport or license. Thus the diplomatic archives down to the end of the eighteenth century meant the science of manuscripts and documents, which explains the curious and strange remark that "there is not a shadow of diplomatic doubt thrown over the history of the reign of Henry II." Dr. Murray's Dictionary assigns the expression to the papers pertaining to Leibnitz's "Codex Juris Gentium Diplomaticus" (documentary code of international law) and the title of a similar French work. "Diplomatic" came to be considered as meaning "international documentary," and then the "documentary" dropped out.

Unchanging Circus Rings.

"Circuses," said the old ring master, "have developed a great deal in my time. From the one ring of the past they have grown to three rings, plus an elevated platform, and there are dimensional improvements. But in one particular there has been no change since time began, and that is in the dimensions of the ring. A circus ring is always the same size—forty-two feet nine inches in diameter. Go where you will, you will never find a circus ring with different dimensions from that.

"A bareback rider can ride best in a ring of this size. All riders train in such a ring and all horses are trained in such a ring. There would be trouble for horses and men if the size of the ring should be changed. It would be like changing the size of the baseball diamond, only worse."

THE STOUT WOMAN.

Two Essential Rules to Follow In Selecting Her Gowns.

The late M. Worth, the great French dressmaker, always insisted on long and flowing lines for his stout clients and, quite regardless of prevailing fashions, absolutely refused to trim their gowns with horizontal effects.

The stout woman, therefore, will be wise if she accepts as cardinal points in the study of her wardrobe these two essentials won from a world-wide experience.

All gowns should be made of some soft material that can be put in easy folds over a closely fitted lining of silk. This lining clings to the figure and adds nothing to its bulk, while the voluminous skirt draped upon it is the best foil to take up space over the hips and yet is full enough to give broad, sweeping lines to the bottom.

Many stout women are spoiled at the suggestion of a full skirt, but if they will try on a skirt that lies snugly round the waist and hips and flares well out from the hips down they will see how slender the waist will appear by contrast to the full effect of the skirt.

The fullness should appear to spring from the belt, and the outline of the hips should never be accentuated by having the skirt fitted to them. The fitted yoke with a gauged or fitted skirt springing from the yoke is also an error of judgment.

The top of the skirt should have the fullness laid in plaits or tucks, just as one pleases, for course gathers or massively gauged skirts should never be worn except by very tall women, and even by them with discretion.

In the matter of trimming great care should be taken. Long rows of braid sometimes appear to reduce the size of the figure, but the horizontal trimmings, whether they be many lines or scallops, always reduce the height and appear to increase the breadth of the woman who wears them.

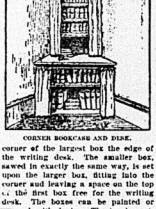

The stout woman who dresses to her figure rather than to fashionable models is always more smartly gowned than she who wears what is fashionable in itself rather than what is suitable.—London Express.

Corner Bookcase and Writing Desk For the Busy Girl Who Studies.

A corner bookcase and writing desk for a young girl's room can be made from two boxes set into the corner and so taking up less space than a desk set straight against the wall.

The boxes for this piece of furniture must be of two sizes or cut to two sizes. Each box must be sawed in two, from corner to corner, making the oblique line drawn from corner to corner the division for the edge of the writing desk. The smaller box sawed in exactly the same way, is set against the wall, fitting into the corner and leaving a space on the top of the first box for the writing desk. The boxes can be painted or covered with denim. The top is prettily finished with a cheap picture molding.

Brass rods for the curtains should be firmly fastened to the backs in the lower and upper cabinet. The writing desk should be covered with felt in harmony with the other colors in the room.

Wireless Telegraphy in the Home.

Every one must admit that wireless telegraphy is destined to be the starting of music boxes, to fire alarm telegraphy, to the ringing of doorbells and the other bells. I might say that when wireless telegraphy was first introduced, that there existed one wireless in the world was agog over the new art, the writer, to entertain and amuse a party of his friends, would rise from where he with the transmitter was arranged at the "send" table in one room, while the coherer with a short antenna was placed in an adjacent room. The arrangement worked quite successfully, and the guests were delighted with the novelty of the affair.—William Waver in Electrical Review.

Baking Fish An Gratin.

An old fashioned way of baking fish au gratin has never been improved upon. Take the fish, starting at the head and drawing toward the tail. Cut off the head, fins and tail and lay in some. This leaves two large pieces of fish. Prepare a sauce by lightly browning a heaping tablespoonful of flour in two tablespoonfuls of butter. When the butter bubbles stir in two tablespoonfuls of flour and add stock or water to make a creamy compound. Season and add the juice of half a lemon and half a tablespoonful of minced parsley. Lay the fish on a buttered baking tin and pour the sauce over it. Sprinkle thickly with breadcrumbs, put bits of butter over and bake in a quick oven for about twenty-five minutes. Tomato sauce is recommended with this.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

LORD'S DAY ALLIANCE.

THE SECRETARY WRITES COR. RECTING AN ERROR IN REPORT OF RECENT SYNOD SPEECH.

Toronto, July 5, 1905.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—Over a week ago there appeared in the daily papers a so-called report of some discussion regarding the report of the Lord's Day Alliance Committee adopted by the Synod of England Synod of the Ontario Diocese. That report purported to state what G. F. Button, of Napanee, said, and did not even suggest what was contained in the Synod Committee's report which strongly supported the Lord's Day Alliance and was unanimously carried. Surely the report was more important than the remarks of a member of the Synod, and yet even these remarks were incorrectly stated, and appeared under glaring headlines doing a grave injustice to both the Church of England and the Methodist Church as well as to Mr. Button.

I wrote Mr. Button about the matter, and quote from his reply dated 23rd June, as follows: "In reply to yours of the 27th instant, would say that I deeply regret that my remarks at the meeting of the Ontario Synod should have been reported as they were. In speaking on another subject, I incidentally remarked that the Sunday excursions referred to by you, was one matter up to the minute people who wished to attend the Methodist Conference at Ottawa, and I further stated that I believed that Thos. Bengough, who is said to be the captain of the steamer Reindeer, have no reason to believe it was properly so attended by Methodists. I am in sympathy with the Lord's Day Alliance in obtaining one day of rest under the statute laws of Canada for the laboring people, and must say that it is unfortunate that the supporters for the public press cater so much to the sensational loving public. Make such use of this letter as you wish in correcting the false impression given."

T. ALBERT MOORE,
Secretary Lord's Day Alliance.

AQUATICS.

The first of the series of sailing races for the season took place on the bay yesterday afternoon, but owing to the fact that it was not a half-holiday the attendance was rather limited and many were unable to participate in the sport. Only two sweets could be carried out and in these the winners at first took such a lead as to make the races uninteresting. The crafts competing were the dinghys and punts.

DINGHY RACE.

The dinghys were sailed out shortly after 3 o'clock and only two started. These were owned by Messrs. P. C. Jones and J. D. Wallbridge, and were sailed by them. At the start Mr. Jones' craft took a decided lead and maintained it to the end finishing five minutes ahead of her competitor. The course was in full view of the spectators. This race was for the Corby challenge cup.

PUNT RACE.

Four crafts started in this event, namely Togo, King of the Water, Blue Bird and Runaway. The latter had the misshap soon after the start and dropped out. The King of the Water was true to its name and proved to be an easy winner, Blue Bird was second crossing the line, and Togo third. The committee of management will endeavor to have at the next races, which will be on Wednesday afternoon of the 19th inst., all classes filled, including skiffs. Yesterday there was but one entry in the skiff race.

A RIP FOR RIP. TARIFF

An Elastic British Preference Is Also Designed.

Hon. Messrs. Fielding, Paterson and Brodeur Likely to Be Tariff Commissioners, and Will Arrange High and Low Tariff on Reciprocity Grounds—Will Visit Every Province and Start In Autumn.

Toronto, July 6.—(Globe Special)—Ottawa, July 6.—The Tariff Commission, which, according to report, will consist of Messrs. Fielding, Paterson and Brodeur, will not begin its sittings immediately after Parliament prorogues. On the contrary, the Ministers will remain for a while in Ottawa to clear off the slate of unfinished business, after which they will disperse for a vacation. The latter part of September or the beginning of October will witness the commencement of the inquiry.

A start will be made in Ontario and Quebec after which a tour will be made of the lower Provinces. A visit of the commission to the west will follow, and, contrary to precedent in 1892, when Winnipeg was the western limit, the sittings in Manitoba will be extended to British Columbia, where there is a great field of inquiry, by reason of the recent great commercial development.

The task before the commissioners will be more difficult than it was when the question was merely one of revising the tariff so as to be more in consonance with the needs of the consumer. Canada will have a maximum and a minimum tariff, the former to be applied doubtless to those countries whose tariffs are hostile to us, and the latter to meet the case of countries which believe in reciprocity. Then there will be a British preferential tariff. Rumor has it that a departure from the slavish adherence to the principle of British preference of 33 1/3 per cent. will be made in the treatment of British goods in each class, and be considered on their own merits, so that in some cases it may be that the 33 1/3 per cent. preference will be the extreme of the existing duty. The advantage of this system will be in its elasticity.

CATACLYSM OF ANARCY

May Tear Russia Asunder If Japan Withholds Armistice.

Russia's Destiny Is Now In Japan's Hand—To Force Battle Would Mean Revolution Greater Than French, and Leave Japan the Russian Ground—Will Visit Every Province and Start In Autumn.

St. Petersburg, July 6.—The situation regarding the armistice is as follows: Russia had formally signified to President Roosevelt her desire for a lasting peace not only by the appointment of plenipotentiaries, who will be accompanied by experts, fully empowered to conclude a treaty subject only to the ratification of the respective Governments, but as a final step has indicated her readiness to suspend hostilities. She has avoided formally asking for an armistice as a matter of pride, but under the circumstances Russia could hardly go further than she has.

Japan, so far as known, has not yet indicated her attitude, or, if she has Russia has not been so informed.

An eminent ambassador of a great European power said to the Associated Press: "If Japan declines it may prove to be a misfortune for the whole world. The position of Russia is critical. The Emperor, crushed by the defeats in the Far East and with almost civil war at home, has bowed his head to the inevitable. He wants peace, and Japan has the proofs in her possession. Japan has vindicated her power before the world and has won the admiration of the world.

"Nothing becomes a victor so much as a generous act of magnanimity. If Japan still insists in humbling the Emperor's head into the dust and forcing useless battle, which will result in the loss of tens of thousands of lives, she will produce a cataclysm of civil anarchy greater than that of the French revolution, which will leave Russia no Government to negotiate with, besides a menace to the peace of Europe."

Japan has another proof that Russia has placed on piece in the sole Government of further mobilization in the St. Petersburg and other districts. Where, in spite of the diplomatic and formal situation, such a step would not be undertaken if the Government seriously contemplated a continuation of the war.

DECLARES REBELLION.

Kniaz Potemkine Issues Another Proclamation to the Powers.

St. Petersburg, July 6.—The battleship Kniaz Potemkine has arrived at Theodosia, a port on the eastern coast of the Crimean peninsula, without the torpedo boat which she towed out of the harbor of Kustendji. It is believed that the battleship took the crew of the torpedo boat on board and abandoned or sank her while on the way to Theodosia.

Summoned by the Kniaz Potemkine, representatives of the Town Council went on board the battleship and were received in the admiral's cabin by the commission commanding her.

The commission demanded the delivery of five hundred tons of coal and provisions of various kinds within twenty-four hours, and threatened that in the event of non-compliance, after the lapse of time, the inhabitants of the town would be bombarded.

The commission also proposed that the Mayor shall transmit to the population a proclamation recommending the termination of the war, and a convocation of senatvos, etc. Learning of these demands the inhabitants fled from the town. The workmen insisted that the demands be complied with.

A special meeting of the municipal council was called and the council consented to deliver the provisions, but refused to comply with the demand for coal for the reason that the town had none.

Declare Rebellion.

The mutineers yesterday formally raised the standard of rebellion and issued the following declaration: "The crew of the Kniaz Potemkin notify the foreign powers that the decisive struggle has begun against the Russian Government. We consider it to be our duty to declare that we guarantee the safety and inviolability of foreign ports."

27 Will Be Shot.

Odessa, July 6.—Sixty-seven of the mutineers of the Grand Duke Constantine, including the ringleaders, were imprisoned here. It is expected that all of them will be shot.

Destroyer Get Supplies.

Bobs, Bulgaria, July 6.—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Strenitelny, which escaped from Varna, opposite Verdinand's palace, Tuesday evening, the commander of the vessel requested supplies which were immediately granted and the destroyer sailed.

Cossacks Fired on Strikers.

St. Petersburg, July 6.—Cossacks fired on striking workmen at Lodz yesterday morning. The trouble was start ed by the refusal of the factory hands entering the works. The police suspected him and barred passage to him for the season. On being made a prisoner the young man drew a revolver, and shot his captor, dead, and was himself wounded by a bullet fired by another policeman. The strikers quickly congregated on the Peterhoff road, and Cossacks were ordered to disperse them. The soldiers charged, using their lashes, and then fired a volley, causing several casualties among the strikers. The excitement in the district is intense.

Get Toward Batoum.

Bucharest, July 6.—The captain of a vessel which has just arrived here from Theodosia, July 2, reports that he met the ship Kniaz Potemkine going toward Batoum.

Mutineers Demand Supplies.

Theodosia, July 6.—The Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine has arrived here and asked for coal, provisions and medical attendance. The mutineers demanded that the authorities of the town guarantee their safety during the stay of the ship here.

Theodosia, formerly Kaffa, is a seaport of Russia on the southeast coast of the Crimea, 70 miles east of Simpheropol. It has a population of about 20,000.

Again Back at Sebastopol.

Sebastopol, July 6.—The Black Sea squadron, under Rear-Admiral Kruger, returned here yesterday from its pursuit of the mutineers. The squadron included the battleship Georgi Pobedonosets.

HONORED IN OLD LONDON.

St. Paul's Cathedral Crowded at Solemn Memorial Service in Memory of John Hay.

London, July 6.—England yesterday paid to the memory of United States Secretary of State John Hay a tribute seldom accorded to a foreigner, when solemn memorial services were held in St. Paul's Cathedral in his honor.

The immense edifice was crowded. The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Davidson; Dean Gregory and Archdeacon Sinclair took part in the services. King Edward was represented by Lord Knollys and Queen Alexandra by Lord Lansdowne. The British Cabinet, the Diplomatic Corps, the Canadian and Cuban Ministers and representatives of the colonies and legations.

The American colony was fully represented, including Ambassador and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid and the staff of the embassy, and Consul-General Wynne. The staff of the Consulate, as well as the visiting Americans present were J. P. Morgan, Senator Depew and a hundred others.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Whitney (Helen Hay), in deep mourning, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Paget, entered the cathedral just before the services commenced with the playing of Chopin's funeral march, which was followed by the processional, "Now The Labourer's Task Is O'er," and the impressive funeral service of the Church of England. The lesson, from the Epistle to the Corinthians, chap. xv., 20 v., the anthem was "Blessed Are The Departed."

Archdeacon Sinclair read the prayers and the Archbishop of Canterbury pronounced the benediction, the service being closed with the dead march from Saul, played on the organ.

FUNERAL OF JOHN HAY.

Assemblage At Grave Small Owing to Wish of Widow.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 6.—At almost exactly noon yesterday the body of John Hay was laid to rest in Lake View Cemetery. Around the open grave at the last moment stood with bowed heads the president and the representatives of the United States, members and ex-members of the present Cabinet, and men who, for a quarter of a century, served with the dead secretary in the official family of President McKinley. There were many others who willingly would have paid a tribute of honor and respect to Mr. Hay, but it was the wish of the family that the funeral should be conducted for John Hay—the man they knew and loved in private life and not for the official, famous statesmilner whose name is honored wherever clean and accomplished statesmanship is esteemed among men.

A DRASTIC BILL.

Mr. R. L. Borden Determined to Put Down Electoral Corruption If Law Can Do It.

Ottawa, July 6.—In the House of Commons yesterday, R. L. Borden introduced an independent bill to amend the Dominion Elections Act.

The bill, which is of a rather drastic character, deals with the subject and was briefly explained by Mr. Borden.

He stated that the object of the first of which makes it punishable by a fine of $200 or a term in the penitentiary for circulars and statements pretending to be issued in the interest of a candidate when such is not the case.

Autonomy Bills Pass.

The Autonomy Bills passed the border line of the third reading just on the stroke of midnight.

Many changes were taken on the various amendments in the Alberta bill, which was read, and the first seven were of the customary character, at which stage the House rose.

At midnight the Saskatchewan bill was taken up, and, with the exception of two divisions, one on the C. P. R. exemption and the other on the Catholic vision. Mr. Lessard of Lake-St. Jean, the votes were allowed to go almost unchallenged, with the exception of Mr. Sproule, who fought every section.

Thus Alberta and Saskatchewan are now the two Provinces of the Canadian confederacy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier was accepted as their first premier, but he will not be brought down to day.

SHOULD TABOO POLITICS.

Auditor-General on What That Official Ought To Be.

Ottawa, July 6.—When the public accounts committee met yesterday Mr. Hergerom moved that the statement of Auditor-General McDougall be referred to suggested changes in the Audit Act be considered. Mr. Fielding said that the matter was not yet ended.

The Auditor-General presented to read another lengthy statement to the committee. He claimed the saving on the Drummond County bridge to be his him and that Mr. Schreiber should have discovered the facts. He doubted the advisability of having a large commitee to investigate this matter, and suggested the Audit Act amendments be referred to a small committee which could sit continuously. He thought the Auditor-General should have no politics and act absolutely impartially. Railway subsidies, he said, should be under the Audit Act. Mr. McDougall contended for the judiciary method of so much per yard, etc., and not by one sum.

After dealing with his early experiences with the conservative administration Mr. McDougall declared an Auditor-General should have no politics, neither should he accept favors from the Government or anyone having dealings with the Government.

"I am not advocating that a man must hold himself as degraded as a leper back, as if he belonged to a party before he entered the service, but he ought to treat that party as if he had never belonged to any party," said Mr. McDougall, adding: "Perhaps these remarks may be of some little service in dealing with the next case."

INVITES THE HAND OF TIME.

The Worrying Woman Helps to Write Wrinkles on Her Face.

A woman who never worries declares that there is nothing more detrimental to beauty in woman than worry. The worrying woman does nobody any good. She simply invites the hand of Time, which writes plenty of wrinkles on her brow, around her eyes and mouth, paints her face a yellow and give a lack luster eye that no cosmetic can brighten.

It is quite unnecessary to worry, and it is a total waste of energy which could be better employed in doing something useful. The man who wrote (it must have been a man) "it is not given, but worry, that kills" knew something. He had a wife or a sister or a mother to care for more than anything else the power to make or mar her beauty, so let her beware of worry lest it nor much lest she lose the greatest of all the gifts.

LOVE AND LAUGHTER.

These Are the Things That Make Home Healthful and Happy.

Love and laughter! Have they not been the watchwords of the world began? The heart beats faster, the blood courses merrily through the veins, the world wears fairer, the beloved one shows fairest of all, and, catching a hint of the infinite joyousness of things —the ultimate happiness of a one day to be perfected creation—the lover exults.

The woman who can make her lover laugh is clever, but the wife who can keep her husband laughing is one of the seven wonders of the world.

Laughter drives ill health, worries, quarrels—all these cease to be when one can laugh. Learn to charm the heaviness from your face, to smile down the sadness from his mien, and you will reign in his heart for all time. Love is sweet, but laughter is the spice to it. Love is the wine, but laughter is the cup. Love is the sweetheart.

There is, you see, so much of the frivolous knowledge left in a man even when he has put away boyish things. The mischievous spirit which will not let itself cooll is but obtain opportunity. Don't check it. Never mind if your dignity is puffed out and your comperforce to join in the laugh against yourself. "Laughter breaks no bones," as the saying goes in old days. "Laugh and grow fat."—Brockton Times.

KITCHEN HELPS.

When fitting up a kitchen remember that paper towels and oil cloth are light and durable.

When one must cook for a small family a great deal of labor is saved by having a few small cooking utensils.

Shelves in a kitchen are handy, but small swinging shelves have the advantage of being convenient and tidy. One of these swinging shelves are a great luxury.

One of the quickest and easiest ways to clean a greasy pan is to turn the grease out and wipe the pan, while hot, with soft paper. Burn the papers and the pan will need a little soap.

Old, scratched knives may be made to look like new if rubbed with cork dipped on the knife board—tallow candle will do—and then knife powder. Scratches and stains will quickly disappear.

The Kitchen.

The kitchen, which is, after all, the housewife's throne room, should be as comfortable and as cheerful as possible. A high stool is a convenience. The chair with the short legs is restful. A rocking chair, if the kitchen is large enough, is not so sinful as our grandmothers would have thought. If the tables are too high or too low, have them raised or lowered. Have the kitchen look homelike. Remember this point when the stove or range is set in place.

Butter will remove almost any kind of stain except ink. Rub it into the stain, then wash quickly in hot water with a fine soap.

Glass or china decorated in gold should never be washed in scalding water nor with strong soap.

VOL. 39 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1905. NO. 56

THE WATER COMMISSION.

Has Instructions of a Wide Nature From the Government.

Toronto, July 7.—The instructions to the recently-appointed power commission are of a much wider nature than was at first supposed. The official document naming and outlining the duties of the commission provides, in addition to the outline of their duties already given, that they are to ascertain the rates or prices that would require to be charged consumers of hydraulic or electrical power in order to meet all expenditure of maintenance and operation and to ascertain the savings that would accrue annually to consumers by the substitution of such rates for the rates now paid.

The commission will also ascertain the actual cost of existing hydraulic and electrical power undertakings, the capacity, state of development, quantity of power supplied and contracted for, the rates charged and to be charged, the actual value of such undertakings, and the estimated capital, if any, necessary to complete such undertakings.

Funeral of Dr. Johnston.

Sarnia, July 7.—Sarnia was in mourning yesterday, all places of business and industry being closed out of respect for the late Dr. Johnston, M. P. Hundreds visited the residence, where the body lay in state, the casket banked with floral offerings. The streets in the vicinity of the house were crowded before the hour of the funeral, and the procession was the longest ever seen in Sarnia. The funeral was under the auspices of the Masons, of whom there were over 200 in attendance. Right Worshipful Bro. Judge Daniel F. MacWatt conducted the Masonic portion of the services and Rev. Canon Davis of St. George's Episcopal Church officiated at the house and grave.

Died Sitting in Chair.

Toronto, July 7.—Sergt. Oldbury, aged 79, who has been a resident at the fort for over 27 years, died suddenly yesterday afternoon. He was having his hair cut, and without saying a word the old man fell forward. Death was from heart failure. Deceased, before coming to Canada, had for 23 years been attached to the second battalion, Essex Regiment, the 56th Foot, with which he served in India for a number of years. He had one son, who was killed in the battle of Omdurman, in the Soudan campaign. He will be buried with military honors Saturday afternoon.

Crimea and The Caucasus.

First on Verge of Revolt and In the Second Anarchy Reigns.

Extremely Alarming News Received at St. Petersburg—Just How Bad it is Cannot be Told Because of Rigid Censorship — Theodosia Workmen Are Backing the Kniaz Potemkine Mutineers—Life Guards Mutiny

St. Petersburg, July 7.—Such news as came from the Black Sea and Caucasus during yesterday was extremely alarming. The whole Crimea Peninsula is on the verge of revolt and anarchy reigns in the mountains of the Caucasus from Batoum to Baku. Only brief details are available on account of the rigid censorship established by Admiral Choukrin, commander of the Black Sea fleet. Even foreign embassies having consuls at Theodosia have not received any word.

At Theodosia the workmen are backing the mutineers. The crews of several ships in the harbor have joined the mutineers, and the well-to-do class of the population has fled in panic. The guns of the Kniaz Potemkine are trained on the city and a bombardment is momentarily expected.

Fanned the Flame.

Telegrams from the Caucasus, where a state bordering on anarchy has existed for a month, say the news of the mutiny on board the Kniaz Potemkine made an electric impression and was the signal for a general movement with which troops and police are absolutely powerless to cope. Railroad traffic in all directions has ceased and the people are fleeing on horseback and all kinds of vehicles over the mountain roads and trails.

Kniaz Potemkine Blown Up.

Odessa, July 7.—It is reported that the battleship Kniaz Potemkine has been blown up near Theodosia.

Bombarding the Town.

London, July 7.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Odessa says it is reported there that the Kniaz Potemkine is bombarding Theodosia, that the town is burning and that the soldiers of the garrison are engaged in looting. He says it is also reported that another torpedo boat has joined the mutineers.

Good Discipline.

Theodosia, July 7.—A correspondent of the Associated Press, who visited the Kniaz Potemkine in company with the Mayor, found the battleship commanded by an elected committee of seven, headed by "Znaign and Quartermaster" Alexieff, a quasi-commissioned rank in the Russian navy. Everything was in order and good discipline prevailed. All the guns were loaded, and it was said that the mutineers had a full supply of ammunition. The crew consisted of 750 men and there were 15 more in the torpedo boat.

Life Guards Refused Orders.

Berlin, July 7.—A correspondent at Kattowitz, Silesia, says he learns that fifteen men designated in each company of the Lithuanian Life Guards Regiment in Warsaw to go to Manchuria refused to go and their comrades declined to make them do so. Their colonel sent to another Life Guard regiment for help, but three men also refused orders. Upon a similar refusal of a third Life Guard regiment, the colonel applied to the commander of Warsaw, who sent a detachment of Cossacks. Some of the mutineers fled on the Lemberg and returned. On the 5th fourteen altogether being killed by those who resisted were arrested.

Dock Strike Ends.

Cronstadt, July 7.—The dock laborers' strike here has been settled, the commercial transport companies granting the hours of work to nine hours per day and increasing the men's wages 10 per cent.

Mikado Request to Envoys.

Tokio, July 7.—The Emperor delivered an address yesterday to the peace plenipotentiaries, charging them that they should devote yourselves with all power to discharge your mission and make every effort to secure the re-establishment of peace on a durable basis."

FRENCH SUBMARINE SINKS.

Ten Men Are Under Water, But Reply to Signals.

Perryville, Tuesday, July 7.—A French submarine boat, with a crew of thirteen on board, foundered here yesterday. The commander and two men were buried in the air just before the submarine sank.

The divers says that the men remain inside the submarine boat at the bottom of Biserta Bay reply to tic for signals.

Crew Are Saved.

Paris, July 7.—Admiralty headquarters received from Perryville indications that the crew of the submarine boat which foundered there yesterday has been saved.

A Girl to Be Pitied.

London, July 7.—Holloway Jail Prison term for one year was handed out to Albert Smith, the young man who was found guilty of inflicting a knife wound upon young Frank Walsh because he called Smith's sister "Liza" and him "blubber," a subriquet which is said to have stuck to the latter for years. As the magistrate passed sentence Smith broke out in a great wail, she had been married but a week, and that week has been spent alone.

Site For Mowat Monument.

Toronto, July 7.—Government will be broken almost immediately for the monument to the late Sir Oliver Mowat in Queen's Park. The site has been decided upon, and will be in front of one of the Parliament Buildings just north of the Queen's Park gate. Designs are now being cast, but the foundation will be put in to give it time to settle.

HAUL DOWN THE FLAG.

Collector at Charlotte, N. Y., Precipitates an International Incident by Ordering British Flag Lowered.

Buffalo, July 7.—According to a report current among marine men here yesterday, an appeal to the Ottawa and Washington authorities to have the American customs officials at Charlotte, N. Y., punished will be made by Capt. William Simmons of the Kingston schooner Acacia. Simmons happened to be at Charlotte on Tuesday, when the residents had the port fairly alive with stars and stripes in honor of independence Day. Simmons showed his Canadian patriotism by hoisting a Canadian flag, but by so doing aroused Deputy Collector Dunn Bump of Charlotte, who compelled the Canadian to lower his colors.

Simmons Threatened to Shoot.

New York, July 7.—A Rochester despatch to The Tribune says: A protest has been filed with the Canadian Minister of Marine by Capt. Simmons of the Canadian schooner Acacia, because the port collector compelled him to lower the British flag on his vessel in the harbor of Charlotte on July 4, Colonel Bump was informed that the Acacia had flouted the Union Jack on the morning of the 4th of July, and he ordered Capt. Simmons to haul it down, saying it was an insult to the national holiday. Simmons refused, and threatened to shoot the collector if he boarded his vessel. Finally Simmons lowered the flag when threatened with refusal of his clearance papers.

No Protest in Ottawa Yet.

Ottawa, July 7.—Neither the Secretary of State nor the Minister of Marine has received any protests from Capt. Simmons of the Canadian schooner Acacia, to the effect that when in Charlotte, N. Y., on July 4, he was ordered to lower the British flag, otherwise clearance papers would be refused him.

Hon. Raymond Prefontaine said that although he had not received a protest it might be on the way. "If the United States Collector of Customs has been guilty of the conduct ascribed to him from the press despatches," the Minister observed, "representations will be made to the proper authorities. He had no right to ask that the flag be lowered or to refuse clearance papers."

ROOT IS SECRETARY.

Chosen by President Roosevelt and Accepts the Office.

New York, July 7.—It can be definitely stated that President Roosevelt has offered the position of Secretary of State to Elihu Root, and that Mr. Root has accepted.

Sketch of His Career.

Elihu Root, who was born February 15, 1845, is one of the most skilful of American lawyers, and ranks among the men of most solid reputation in American politics. He is a New Yorker, his father having been a professor of mathematics in Hamilton College, through which institution young Root subsequently worked his way. President Arthur, in March, 1883, gave him his first political appointment as Attorney of the southern district of New York. He advanced steadily, and President McKinley selected him as Secretary of War in 1899. He was also a member of the Alaskan Boundary Committee. At the time Mr. Choate was appointed Ambassador to England Mr. Root was recognized as his only rival.

THERE has only been one real improvement in cooking ranges in many years. That improvement is the Imperial Oxford Diffusive Oven Flue.

While other makers were adding dampers, racks, door openers and shakers in a vain attempt to make improvements, we studied the heart of the range. We knew that the only improvement you wanted was a better oven, an oven that would bake your better bread, pies and cakes, roast beef to a turn, retaining its juice and flavor.

Our investigations and experiments produced the oven-heating system of the

The important feature of this system is the diffusive flue which draws in fresh air, superheats it and distributes it evenly through out the oven. The article on the bottom shelf fathers from the fire is getting as much heat on it as the article on the top shelf must the fire.

We would like to explain this more fully. If your dealer doesn't handle the Imperial Oxford Range, write us for particulars. We will send catalogue and tell you where you can see the range.

Blackmail Strikers.

It is not long since that some of the walking delegates Union Labor fraternity were imprisoned in the United States for levying blackmail upon employers of labor, in order to "call off" strikes.

Now we have further proof of the villainy of some of those who control Union labor organizations.

In Chicago trade and business generally has been demoralized for some time past owing to a strike of teamsters. The ringleaders of other trusts were prosecuted, and a telegram from Chicago of the 2nd inst., brings the information that "the Cook county Grand Jury, which has been investigating the teamsters' strike, returned 49 indictments against men connected in various ways with recent labor troubles. The following men were indicted in connection with the brick trust: George C. Prussing, President of the Illinois Brick Co.; Charles Hank, President of the Brick, Stone and Terra Cotta Workers' Union; P. J. McMahon, President of the Brick, Stone and Terra Cotta Teamsters' Union; John Gray, general purchasing and distributing agent of the Illinois Brick Co.

These indictments are based on charges of conspiracy to injure the business of independent brick concerns. Several officers of independent brick companies testified that $25,000 had been paid to Gray for expenses in addition to the cutting of the strikes against their plants Among those indicted for conspiracy to injure the business of Montgomery, Ward & Co., are: Cornelius P. Shea, President of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; Jeremiah McCarthy, business agent of the Truck Drivers' Union; John Smith, President of the Coal Teamsters' Union, and George F. Golden, business agent of the Packing House Teamsters' Union. There are nine other union officials included in this indictment. In addition to the indictment against the foregoing, two bills charging intent to commit bodily injury and assault with intent to kill were returned against 32 members of the Teamsters' Union and sympathizers.

Coming down to the teamsters' strike in Cleveland, the Grand Jury report: "We believe the present teamsters' strike to have been conceived in iniquity, and that, though many honest men have been led to believe a so-called sympathetic strike was advisable and just, we feel satisfied that from evidence submitted to us that a very few of the principals at the head of the Teamsters' Union were and are responsible for its inception and continuance that their pockets might jingle with unholy gain."

A few years in the State Prison or Penitentiary at hard labor in the interest of the country would be a proper punishment for those rascals, who use honest men to feather their own nests.

TIMELY TOPICS.

FAITH, HOPE AND CHARITY.

We learn that faith is disappearing, But that is not a serious case; Men still put faith in legislatures, Despite the things they do.

I sometimes wonder why the people With undiminished zeal Go on electing legislatures, And hoping for the best.

The charity of men is boundless, Or they, with clubs in hand, Would fall upon most legislatures And drive them from the land. —S. E. Kiser, in Record-Herald.

Really, the poor Czar is so worried that he must be about ready to swap jobs with Street Surveyor Hulme.

Belleville's City Council is so full of hot air that our distinguished fellow-citizen, Ald. Sinclair, arises and publicly sighs for the cooling breezes of Massassaga Park.

Dear Mr. Hurley—We know for a fact that there are fish in the bay, because we saw four little girls going up Front street last Sunday afternoon carrying a string of five sunfish.

The resolution to muzzle the mosquitoes was not of much avail. Last night at the Victoria Park band concert it is reported there were present 3,000 people and 3,000,000 mosquitoes. The band concert was all right, but dodging the little lump-raisers was a fierce proposition.

JUST LIKE HIM.

The Rev. Canon Burke writes to the Secretary of the Old Boys' Reunion branch regretting that owing to his being now unable to walk it will not be possible for him to be in Belleville for the Old Boys' reunion. He encloses in the letter a money order to help to pay the expenses. How many of our readers will say "just like him" when they add—God bless that good man.

Anyone who knows anything of Belleville's harbor knows well aware that it needs dredging and plenty of it. Some years ago, when Mr. Tarte was Minister of Public Works, we had the dredge here during one summer, but more dredging is needed; in fact the dredge should be here for several seasons. We note in the supplementary estimates that $10,000 is set aside for the dredging of Trenton's harbor, but nothing for Belleville. Why is this? Are our harbor commissioners asleep, or are they so indifferent to Belleville's needs that they don't care?

Jim Stratton, of Ganey fame, is going, says the Globe, to the White Mountains. Eh! does the Hon. James want the scent of a fresh whitening.

The New York police are on the lookout for a Philadelphia man who is said by his brother to have left home with 50 cents. Some people are hard losers.

"I got even with that garrulous Mrs. Brookside to-day."

"How was that?"

"I talked so fast and so long that she couldn't get in a word edgewise about the reason her last cook left her."

First Shipwrecked Mariner—This is a badly island. We must get rid of these natives as soon as possible, so we can own it ourselves.

Second Shipwrecked Mariner—But how?

"Easy. We've saved enough from the wreck to feed them all on health foods."

The daughter of a Saline County (Kan.) farmer got an adequate supply of fashionable to harvest her father's wheat fields by offering a bonus of a kiss in addition to the daily pay. A woman with such true business instinct should not go long without a husband, even in the Sunflower State.

A New York mother wants $20,000 damages from the barber who shingled the golden locks which adorned the head of her son, who is a phenomenon with the violin. The baby prop, in the lad's case was his principal asset if he was really a phenomenon, his hair was of course, his principal asset and the barber should be made to pay.—Buffalo Express.

A gentleman was describing a precocious little girl.

"She showed her precocity the other day," he said, "by a question that she asked me. It was a clever question. It was the question of a misogynist and a cynic.

"I had gone to bed, in the course of an examination in mental arithmetic:

"How old would a person be who was born in 1812?"

She smiled and asked:

"Was the person a man or a woman?"

A reporter was interviewing Vice-President James Guyley, of the U. S. Steel Corporation, on the wonderful new process for making steel, that he has invented.

"It's a phenomenal process, I am told," the reporter said.

"Hardly phenomenal," answered Mr. Gayley, smiling. 'A phenomenon, you know, is a mighty extraordinary thing. Did you ever hear the Scottish lecturer's definition of a phenomenon?"

"No," said the reporter, "I never did."

"Well, this lecturer," said Mr. Gayley, "put the matter thus:

"'Mashag, mon, friends, lo said, 'ye dinna ken what a phenomenon may be. Weel, I'll tell ye. Ye've all seen a coo, nae doot. Weel, a coo's nae a phenomenon. Ye've all seen a appletree. Well, an appletree's nae a phenomenon. But gin ye see a coo gang up an appletree and forgemost to pull apples, that, friends, would be a real phenomenon.'"

Prince Pu Lun and the Chinese Minister, Sir Chentung-Liang Cheng, attended the races at Gravesend early in the month.

A number of noted New Yorkers were presented to the distinguished foreigners, and one of these gentlemen told an incident that illustrated the remarkable intelligence of a dog of his.

The Minister said, with a smile:

"I am reminded, sir, of a Chinese dog story.

"There was a Chinaman who had three dogs. When he came home one evening, he found them asleep on his couch of teakwood and marble. He whipped them, and drove them forth.

"The next night, when he came home the dogs were lying on the floor. But he placed his hand on the couch, and found it warm from their bodies. Therefore he gave them another whipping.

"The third night, returning earlier than usual, he found the dogs sitting before the couch, blowing on it to cool it."

At the recent wedding of John O'Leary, New York's richest pedestrian, a political leader discussed happy marriages.

"The secret of happiness in marriage," he said, "lies in diplomacy. Neither truthfulness, nor economy, nor love, nor wealth will give a young couple happiness if diplomacy is lacking. For it is trifles that cause wretchedness in life, and only diplomacy can handle trifles.

"Let me illustrate.

"My wife said to a young married woman of her acquaintance;

"'Maggie, your Jim must have the best of dispositions. Here you were more than an hour last night dressing for the roof garden party, and we never once called to you to hurry, nor did he get mad or even sour.'

"The young woman, with a wise, diplomatic smile, answered;

"'Ah, but you see, I had hidden his wallet, his cigar case, and his hat. I always do that when I know my dressing is going to keep me late. Afterwards I find them for him, and he apologizes for having kept me waiting.'"

Thomas A. Edison was one day explaining an intricate machine to a newspaper writer.

"Do you understand?" Mr. Edison would ask. And a moment later; "Now do you understand?"

The poor journalist tried to follow the soft sentences of the inventor, but the effort was vain. Every little while he would have to stop and say that, after all, he did not quite understand; and then, sighing, Mr. Edison would begin all over again.

"I know I am very green as regards machinery," the journalist said apologetically.

"Oh, no; I have seen greener," said Mr. Edison. "Did I never tell you about the fireman I once met in Canada?

"Well, in a certain Canadian town where I was running a telegraph office in my youth, a new factory, with a very fine engine house was put up. I visited this factory one day to see the engine. The engineer was out, and the fireman, a new hand, showed me about. As we stood admiring the engine together, I said;

"'What horse power has this engine?'

"The fireman gave a loud laugh.

"'Horse power?' he exclaimed. 'Why, mon, don't you know that machine goes by steam?'"

AN ORIGINAL JOKER.

A Yale man was praising the new locomotive tender that Cornelius Vanderbilt has invented.

"I am glad to see," he said, "that Vanderbilt is making a name for himself. I thought at college that he would. He was in the class of '95 at Yale, and all his classmates recognized that he had a brilliant and original mind.

"Vanderbilt was intensely original. He displayed his originality took the form of a joke. I remember once in Philadelphia, after a football game, how he and a half dozen of us dined at the Manhattan Club, and he brought his originality into splendid play.

"We had a private room for our dinner, and when we entered the room and took our seats, the table glittered with a great quantity of hand-some silver. The waiter busied himself with our chairs, and then he went out to get the oysters.

"He was no sooner gone than Vanderbilt said;

"'Here is a joke. Every man seize all the silver he can, and hide under the table.'

"Like most boys we were but too ready for a joke, and under the table we got forthwith, leaving its surface bare.

"Soon we heard the waiter approaching. We peeped out at him from under the long cloth. He entered the room with the grave, absorbed and conscientious air that waiters have, and then he made a gasp, and set down his tray with a clatter.

"'They've run off,' he exclaimed, with the silver. Where's the proprietor? Oh, to catch—'

"And out the man ran at breakneck speed.

"As soon as he was gone Vanderbilt gave the signal, and we all got up and took our places again, and quietly arranged the silver as it had been before. We were sitting thus in calm conversation when the waiter and the proprietor tore in upon us as though they had been fired out of a cannon.

"We looked at them, with, some-

FAKE HAIR PREPARATIONS

Do Hair No Good, But Often Cause It to Fall Out.

Many hair preparations are "fake" because they are merely scalp irritants. They often cause dryness, making the hair brittle, and, finally, lifeless. Dandruff is the cause of all trouble with hair. It is a germ disease. The germ makes cuticle scales as it digs to the root of the hair, where it destroys the hair's vitality, causing it to fall out. To cure dandruff, the germ must be killed. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Newbro's Herpicide is the only hair preparation that kills the dandruff germ, thereby leaving the hair to grow luxuriantly.

An Indian Rockefeller.

It is believed that Sayaji Roo, the rajah of Baroda, is the possessor of wealth equal if not superior to that of J. D. Rockefeller. He was educated in an English university and his people are well governed.

Much of his vast riches is in the form of precious stones. His wife owns the most famous diamond necklace in the world. It is worth $12,000,000, and is made up of 200 stones, each the size of a hazelnut.

In the treasure chamber is a carpet 6 square yards in surface, made up entirely of ropes of diamonds, pearls and rubies.

It requires $4,000,000 worth of gems and three years of labor. The long corridors of the palace are lined with marble and onyx of incalculable value.

The palace contains baths and electric elevators are placed at frequent intervals. Bronzes, paintings, statuary, all imported and worth many millions of dollars, are scattered throughout the royal dwelling.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnesville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live more one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle from the store here. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before one bottle was half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although we are carrying a staff of workmen 4 times larger than ever any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work enough up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decoration of the beautifully remodelled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Deseronto. So do the Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 26th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Belleville Methodist Church, and we will do it right. Two watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon as number of jobs. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

STORIES FOR THE LADIES.

WHERE YOU ALTOURING CO.

A Few Seasonable Hints on the Subject — Don't Take Much Luggage.

To cross the ocean blue, to tour in Europe, and to sail home again when sight-seeing is done, requires suitable raiment. Indeed, the comfort and pleasure of the journey depends upon that element. One's clothes must be just right, and then very few of them are required. This, of course, refers to women and girls who are going to stay only a few days, or not very long in any one place. It is also addressed to those who are going for the first time, who have not been travelled know, of course, by experience just their personal needs.

This does not call into consideration fair ones who are to remain at any one place, either taking a house, or visiting. For that one needs practically all one's clothes, for that is, which are suitable to the season one is to remain away.

The same holds good for persons of means who stay at smart resorts.

Saving Time and Tips.

There are, however, any number of professional business women who, and even rather young girls, who have enough money and time to make a more or less extended tour. They want to see the things they have always read and they want to look nice, and yet not be overburdened with baggage; takes time and tips; it must nearly always be identified the checking system known in but few places, and every time each piece is handled there is something to pay.

Two women or girls travelling together, with plenty money to spend, should try to get along with one steamer trunk. Then each may have a big suit case, and, as possessions increase, put their steamer rug, and more, in their trunk. Then no porter need never be carried. There are always porters to attend to go to sleep until he has satisfied his hunger. Gradual accustoming a baby more than the sudden removal of the child. A well-known physician recommends a little water. He should have an occasional bottle when very young so as to become accustomed to it."

An Irish Incident.

"Driver," said an English tourist who was being driven in a jaunting car through the Donegal highlands, "notice that when you speak to your horse you always call him 'sir,' and you invariably go on in Irish, but when you speak to me you just do so in English. How is this?" To which came the retort: "Musha, now this, Bu't English good enough for him?"

Good Idea.

"The ancient Chaldeans," observed the professor, "used to write their letters on bricks."

"Why didn't they?" chimed in practical Mr. Grabbit. "Then when a man received a fellow's letters back to him he could use 'em to build a stable or something."

Wedding Bells.

The lawn, at the home of Mrs. Jos. Chambers, Marmora, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday, June 21st, when her daughter, Emma V., and Mr. Samuel Hunter were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. John A. Connell. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Jos. Chambers, and attended by two fair maids, Miss Martha, was gowned in white silk with berths of crimped chiffon and rushing of lace, and carried a shower bouquet of white tea roses and asparagus fern. The brides maid was becomingly attired in sheer muslin with bouquet of blush tea roses. The flower girl, little Miss Hunter, sister of the groom looked pretty in white. The groom was supported by his brother, Mr. Hunter.

After the ceremony a hundred guests sat down under a canopy of evergreen to tastefully-spread tables laden with an abundance of good things.

A large number of beautiful gifts were received through the post and from friends present, testifying to the popularity of the bride. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver fruit set, dish, spoon, cream pitcher and sugar bowl, all lined with gold.

Mr. and Mrs. Hunter mid shower of rice left on the 5 o'clock train for Newcastle. The bride travelled in a becoming costume of brown with cream blouse and hat. From Newcastle they will go to their home in Seattle, where Mr. Hunter holds a situation as bookkeeper in a R. R. office.

Literary Notes.

CHILD FEEDING.

In the January Century, Dr. Grace Peckham Murray has some remarks of value to mothers or others who have to solve the serious problem of feeding the child. "Infant or child feeding," says Dr. Murray, "is a question that has been studied with much profit by the medical profession, especially in the phase relating to artificial feeding. In former days the mortality among the babies, The breast-fed child lives; the duty artificially fed child dies." It is, therefore, the duty of every mother who can possibly do so to nurse her child. The best food for children who are unable to have the breast is cow's milk. Cow's milk is the only human milk in that it contains less sugar. Mother's milk is the best as much evidence that it contains less fat, and it is, therefore, the more easily digested by changing the milk of the cow it must be modified to resemble in character that of human milk. In large cities the milk supply is to be relied on, prepared ready for the child at laboratories, but this can be done at home with a little care. Milk now used to be considered best for children, but it has been discovered that cooked milk is more uniform in its composition, and that should take about fifteen to twenty minutes for nursing. He should not take the milk too fast, nor should he be allowed to go to sleep until he has satisfied his hunger. Gradual accustoming a baby more than the sudden removal of the child. A well-known physician recommends a little water. He should have an occasional bottle when very young so as to become accustomed to it."

DAINTY PIN TRAY.

Make It of Cardboard or of Heavy Water Color Paper.

From cardboard or heavy water color paper cut a circle a bit larger than a tumbler top, hold it firmly over the tumbler and press into the shape of a little plate by pinching every inch or so into the middle, afterward cutting over the tumbler edge. This gives a little scallop effect. With water color paint tint the edge and scatter forgetmenots, violets or stars over the inside, and you have a dainty little pin tray, which is comfortable to close? Housekeeping.

A comb and brush tray can be made in the same manner by pressing the corners into shape over a box cover. Such are small presents for the considered size. A pretty little puff box can be made by covering with the cardboard one of the pasteboard rolls on which the ribbons are wound, removing one end to be used as a cover. A set of these pretty trifles would make an acceptable gift for a friend who is going to the seashore or mountains for the summer, and as they can be packed perfectly flat they are never left behind for lack of room.

TOILET TIPS.

Don't dry the hands carelessly after washing. Use a soft damask towel or a silk handkerchief and dry thoroughly.

Egg shampoo is made by beating an ounce of water with a raw egg. Massage thoroughly into the scalp and wash the hair without soap.

A little powdered alum thrown into the water in which the hands are washed will prevent perspiration. This is especially remembering before putting on one's gloves.

A pint of rosewater diluted with a tablespoonful each of glycerine and of cellosi preservative for the hands and will keep them smooth and white if applied after each washing.

Some skins are so fine and dry they will not retain powder, giving the face a shiny appearance. This may be overcome by applying a little oil of sweet almonds rubbed thoroughly into the skin and then a thin powder.

DE BONE WITH CATARRH!

Why allow this filthy disease to poison your system? It drains your strength, ruins digestion, pollutes the breath, causes headache, and the one certain cure is "Catarrhozone," it is certain because it destroys the cause of the disease, cures thoroughly because it goes wherever the catarrh is, cures every case because it never destroys the catarrh germ instantly. To get well and stay free from catarrh get Catarrhozone and use it; satisfaction guaranteed.

ENGLISH CIVIL SERVICE.

The Pay Is It Is Small, but the Pensioned Are Eagerly Sought.

"Once a civil servant, always a civil servant," appears to be the motto of the English civil service, for unless one proves disloyal or an extraordinarily poor workman he is retained in service until the age limit is reached and his salary list is exchanged for the pension roll.

Unlike the civil service in the United States, there is no strong partisanship. Appointees hold their position no matter what party may be in power.

The pay is not large, even in view of the small cost of living in England. Fifteen dollars a week is the first weekly payment in the postoffice department, though some of the executive positions pay as high as $2,000 a year. The excise department is a favorite branch, and there a clerk rises by seniority, then to the left, twenty times and afterward bathe the sock in warm water and olive oil soap and rub it firmly, but gently, with a soft towel.

If the sock has worn into a little cream rubbed in at this time will hasten matters, and if the treatment be persisted in for six or eight weeks the improvement in the appearance of the neck will be so apparent that the treatment will not be discarded until a spotless white neck is the reward.—American Queen.

HAPPY GIRLHOOD.

From Fourteen to Twenty Is the Time to Form Character.

There should be no happier time in a girl's life than the years from fourteen to twenty. She should have no serious responsibilities during those years, though she should not be permitted to grow up heedless and frivolity. She has much to learn, and her character is usually in such a formative state that she may easily be the making or the marring of her whole life, says Woman's Life.

Girlhood is the time to store up hard and fast rules for this age. Individual thought should be considered always, and solicitous parents must remember that something must be left to the girl herself and that too close supervision is as bad as too little.

There is no need to be discouraged over the number of foolish fancies which the girl will take up at this time, for they are transitory, and in a few years she will be the first to laugh at them. The chief things are to lay the foundation for a true womanly character and make her girlhood so happy that she would be only too glad to live it over again.

KITCHEN HELPS.

The dirtiest frying pan will become clean if soaked five minutes in ammonia and water.

It is well to remember that a pound of sugar is one pint, an ounce of liquid is two tablespoonfuls and a gill of liquid weighs sixteen ounces.

An egg whisk made of wire set in a wooden handle is a necessity in every kitchen. It is required for clearing the beaten white of eggs or cream and to make chocolate froth.

A bed or cedar dust should be kept in every kitchen. When roasting the potatoes guessed—width of door, dimensions of room, length and height of mantelpiece, distance around a circular stand, distance around Claire's neck or Jack's head, number of rows of books and boxes, height of chairs, pictures and vases.

Finally the papers are signed and exchanged and some one with tape line or rule measures the various distances. The best guess is the ring to some one by a cross, the poorest by a cipher. It will be amusing to see how will some of the guesses are.

Hook Ringing.

Fasten a hook about the size of the ordinary meat hook on a wall or a tree at a height of about two feet from the ground. Now tie a strong but light cord about the long to a fairly heavy ring of about twice the diameter of a curtain pole ring. Stand fifteen feet away from the hook and try to throw the ring over the hook so that it will remain hanging there. The cord enables you to recover every ring that you fail, and after a little practice the cord will also make it possible for a skillful player to guide the ring to some extent.

Every Day Is Sunday.

Few boys and girls may know that other days of the week than the first are being observed as Sunday by some nation or other. The Greeks observe Monday, the Persians Tuesday, the Assyrians Wednesday, the Egyptians Thursday, the Turks Friday, the Jews Saturday and the Christians Sunday. Thus a perpetual Sabbath is being celebrated on earth.

A STIRRUP RACE.

It Is an Amusing Athletic Pastime for Boys.

This somewhat grotesque athletic pastime is a very amusing event and is to off with one leg bobbled to the broomstick which takes its place.

A look at the accompanying drawing will show you how to prepare for the stirrup race.

Procure a long, thin pole. Then attach the leather or rope stirrup, which can be easily prepared by making a noose in one end and tying the other end to the wooden pole or stick. The stirrup should be about four feet long, as you will have no difficulty in throwing it over your shoulder.

THE RACE AT FULL SPEED.

The rules are very simple. The suspended foot in the stirrup must not touch the ground nor the stirrup length be resigned from its position over the shoulder. A limited yard also will be plenty long enough for the course.—New York Mail.

GUESSING DISTANCES.

A Good Way to Test Your Accuracy In Judging Dimensions.

Almost every one knows that the head of an ordinary horse is as long as a barrel, but not many persons would take the thought so without measuring. When you have a rainy day or a dull evening try a distance guessing contest. Let each player have pencil and paper and write down the list of things to be measured. All have a voice in making up the lists. Some one suggests height of the table. All then write it down. Then and each puts opposite his guess of the height in feet and inches. In the same way others object to be measured by the guesses guessed—width of door, dimensions of room, length and height of mantelpiece, distance around a circular stand, distance around Claire's neck or Jack's head, number of rows of books and boxes, height of chairs, pictures and vases.

Finally the papers are signed and exchanged and some one with tape line or rule measures the various distances. The best guess is the ring to some one by a cross, the poorest by a cipher. It will be amusing to see how will some of the guesses are.

A BEAUTIFUL NECK.

It Is Not Difficult to Obtain If One Is Willing to Work For It.

A beautiful neck is not a difficult thing to obtain if one is willing to work for it, and as a beautiful neck makes its possessor look fairer and younger than any other beautifying feature it is something worth working for.

Develop the muscles of the neck by the following gymnastic exercises, and developers and skin goods of various kinds can all be dispensed with: (1) Lower, and then firmly, draw the head forward until the chin nearly touches the neck, then gradually raise the head; (2) Turn the head from side to side, and backward as far as you comfortably can; repeat this movement twenty times; (3) bend the head sideways to right twenty times and to the left the same number of times; (4) roll the head slowly to the right, then to the left, twenty times and afterward bathe the neck in warm water and olive oil soap and rub it firmly, but gently, with a soft towel.

If the sock has worn into a little cream rubbed in at this time will hasten matters, and if the treatment be persisted in for six or eight weeks the improvement in the appearance of the neck will be so apparent that the treatment will not be discarded until a spotless white neck is the reward.—American Queen.

An egg whisk made of wire set in a wooden handle is a necessity in every kitchen. It is required for clearing the beaten white of eggs or cream and to make chocolate froth.

A bed or cedar dust should be kept in every kitchen. When roasting the potatoes smell arise from cooking, put a little of the dust on to the hot part of the range, and the smell arising will purify the air immediately.

Brooms if allowed to stand empty and taken from the fire, fill it with cold water. When time allows add a piece of soda and boil out the accumulated grease and the broom will be as good as new and always in good order when wanted.

That Troublesome Meringue.

The secret of making a meringue for lemon pies so that it stands tall and rich is to beat the whites of the whites of the eggs to a froth that will not fall out of the bowl when turned bottom side up. Then add to each the spoonful of granulated sugar for each white, stir very little, spread it on the pies when they are just done and set baking hot without taking them out of the oven and let them bake with the door open. If made enough to brown, the meringue will surely fall when removed from the oven. Five to ten minutes is enough to bake the meringue dry and straw colored. Sift powdered sugar over the top of each meringue as soon as spread on the pie before baking.

A Friend in Need.

When traveling, it is well to be provided with a bottle of aromatic spirits of ammonia. In case of faintness ten drops of the ammonia in a wineglass of water will often give relief. If one is to be alone, it is well to provide the smelling bottle at once. Add a few ounce bottle with boiled water and add a teaspoonful of the spirits, shake well and cork tightly. Take one to two doses half an hour apart.

Matches and Gas.

Close to the gas range there should be a match safe and holder for burnt matches. Not the little boxes sold for the purpose, but a big tin case, roomy enough to hold a dozen or more. Such matches may be easily taken and into which they may be easily thrown when burnt out. Empty tin cracker boxes should be in every kitchen, for they are cheap, while gas is not.

Homemade Night Light.

For a homemade night light take one part of tallow, one part lard, half a dram of phosphorus and two or three grains of flowers of sulphur into it. Hold it in a gentle warmth to dry it. Then shake the bottle and draw the cork and you will have a fine glow worm light. If you rub a little on any part of the bottle it will appear to be in flames.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Rockefeller has offered the General Educational Board of the United States ten million dollars with which to advance the cause of higher education. Is it not well that men make fortunes? Were it not so, there would be none of these munificent donations for laudable purposes.

Selfishness, a ruthless selfishness, consideration for none but themselves, is the great trouble with many of our captains of industry, said William Jennings Bryan at a dinner in Milwaukee. "If the thing keeps on, we shall develop an aristocracy as hard and unsympathetic and cruel as that which a certain count once typified."

Mr. Bryan paused and smiled. Then he went on;

"This count travelled by the train de luxe from Paris to Monte Carlo, and on his arrival at the gayest and most beautiful of the Riviera towns, he sold for his valet.

"The valet, it seems, had preceded him on the journey, but the train had been wrecked, and the poor fellow killed. This was explained to the count by his courier, who ended the sad tale with the words:

"'Alas, sir, I looked my last upon poor Francois two hours ago. His corpse lies on the outskirts of Mentone, cut in a hundred pieces.'

"'Oh, very well,' said the count, 'just go back and fetch me the piece that contains my trunk keys.'"

The late Capt. Charles Angus of New York, the famous life-saver of Pelham Bay, was noted for the quantity of nerve with which he dove among the wrecks and rescued persons from the water.

Capt. Angus never rained smashing blows on his charges' faces. He never held their heads under water till they became quite limp. He had diplomatic ways of rendering drowning persons quiet and submissive, and of his diplomacy he was justly proud.

"Diplomacy always succeeds," he said one day at Pelham Bay. "What you can't get with diplomacy is not worth getting, there, for instance, is my cousin George.

Capt. Angus gave a loud laugh.

"When Cousin George, two years ago," he said, "became the father of a bouncing ten-pound girl, he was a proud and happy man. It seemed to him that he loved every hair of the infant's head. Its howls were music in his ears. Even in its face, red and twisted with colic, he saw beauty and charm. As for walking the floor with it, he asked nothing better than to walk the floor with it all night.

"So a fortnight went by, a happy fortnight. Then the mother announced that she was going to name the baby Emily.

"Cousin George's face fell. He was not particular about names. Almost any name, in fact, suited him. But Emily he loathed. He had loathed the name of Emily from his boyhood. He did not tell his wife that, though. He was too wise. He only said, as well:

"'Emily, eh?' said Cousin George, in his diplomatic way. 'That's good. I like Emily well enough as the name of my first sweetheart. She'll take it as a compliment, our naming the child after her. She'll——'

"But George could say no more. His wife interrupted him.

"'We'll name the child, Joan, after my mother,' she said shortly."

THE LASTING BRICKS.

Once Made, These Cakes of Baked Clay Are Good For All Time.

From the time the clay is dug out of its bed until it finds its permanent place in some building's walls as a brick it is handled not less than a hundred times and by more than a score of different individuals.

Take into account the persons and processes directly and indirectly interested in brickmaking, modern building and inhabiting such buildings, and the human mind is baffled by figures reaching into the trillions and a trillion is written 1,000,000,000,000!

Once made, a brick is practically indestructible. Nearly every brick that has ever been made by man from the beginning of time is still in existence on this earth. The men who made and laid them and who directed these operations have long since been gathered into dust. Some of them have doubtless contributed in their bodies to the making of more bricks. But the steadfast and enduring square of baked clay persists and will until the heavens and earth are shriveled like a scroll.

Upon inscriptions in bricks our earliest knowledge of human history depends. Kings whose glory has passed so utterly that all but their names have perished still owe the preservation of these names to a mark in the perdurable brick.

THE ALLIGATOR'S JAWS.

They Will Open If You Stick Your Fingers In His Eyes.

"If ever you have the luck to be caught by an alligator put a finger in each eye," says an old Australian hunter. "That will have the effect of making him open his jaws, and then you can make the most of your opportunity. There are several known instances of the escape of natives by that means. Alligators prefer their food high, so the chances are if you are caught you will be deposited on the bottom somewhere. I know of one native escaping even then. When crossing the rivers the natives carry stout sticks, so if encountered by an alligator they can ward him off by shoving a stick down his throat.

"These alligators have enormous strength I have evidence besides my own experience. At Port Essington a buffalo was drinking in a stream when an alligator nailed it by the head and drowned it. Soon afterward a horse was caught while drinking at the same spot. It dragged the alligator about forty yards before the brute let go. Mr. Robinson anchored the body of a horse a little distance away, and had cliff close to his camp. In due time he had his chance and shot a fifteen foot alligator."

ARTIFICIAL FLIES.

The Peculiar Business of the Farmer Who Raises Them.

"I raise flies on my farm—artificial flies," he said, smiling. "I am, in fact, an artificial fly farmer.

"That confuses you, doesn't it? Yet it is simple enough. I raise birds that give those little delicate bright feathers that compose fishermen's flies. That is all.

"The finest birds I raise are golden pheasants. You have seen salmon flies? You know the beautiful topping? Well, those toppings can only be got from the golden pheasant's crest.

"At a certain time of the year I gather my golden pheasants around me. I take one between my knees. I pluck out his crest. How mad he gets! I wrap the crest in silver paper. And so I go on till every bird has been plucked. Do you know what I get for these crests? I get $2.50 apiece for them.

"I raise mynahs, finches, mallards, jays and green parrots. I supply ten fly makers with all the feathers they can use."

Why Touch-me-not.

The columbine, geranium and larkspur have this in common, because they are all named after birds—the dove, the crane and the lark. The meaning of geranium is "crane's bill," and if you notice the seed pods of a geranium you will see that they have a beak like the long bill of a crane. The touch-me-not gets its name from a peculiarity of the seed pod, that is the elasticity of appearance. It is the pod you must not touch, for if you do it will burst, and out will fly the seeds.

A Blood Sucking Earthworm.

South Africa is the home of a species of earthworm, a creature closely related to our common angleworm, who is not only a giant among the denizens of the soil, but which is reputed to have a taste for human blood. There are two species of this unsavory wiggler—one of a dark red color and the other almost black. They are larger than one's finger and from three to four inches in length.

A Bold Girl.

Her Mother—If you marry him you need never expect me to come to see you.

Daughter—Will you put that into writing?

"What for?"

"I want to have it to Fred as a wedding present."

Force of Habit.

"A thousand stars are looking down on you this night!" said the poetical young man to the girl.

And she unconsciously put her hands up to arrange the position of her hat.

If we did not take great pains and were not at great expense to corrupt our nature, our nature would never corrupt us.—Clarendon.

A Job In the Senate Chamber

By Frank H. Sweet

Copyright, 1905, by Frank H. Sweet

She went up the middle steps and turned around the corner to the right. A long line was extending back from the door, expectant, impatient, though the visitors' gallery would not be open to the public until 12. She drew from her belt the card remaining last of former opulence. It still lacked ten minutes, and she slipped the watch back with a scarcely audible sigh. Why had she come here at all, she thought accusingly? She would be better visiting the stores in search of a position as clerk; there were surely some business houses she had not yet been in. And—and besides—

Her eyes were brighter, and a flush cast condescended to her lips in a soft, evanescent smile that was more like the smile of the old days before the whitehouse came.

She had been standing at the post-office door, and he had looked precisely as he had that day when he parted from them in the Arizona canyon, he a penniless prospector and her father an extensive mine owner. And he had not forgotten. Even before she saw him he had sprung from a carriage, without regard to his horses, and was coming up the postoffice steps with outstretched hands.

"Good heavens! You here, Muriel—Miss Ashburton?" he had cried, with a gladness in his voice which he did not attempt to conceal and which brought an answering color to her face and light to her eyes. There had been nothing between them except a look and hand pressure, but she had often thought of him in these later dreary years and was glad to know he had remembered her. "I looked for you everywhere—everywhere," he had continued, "but without a clew. I was afraid you had gone from my life. But pardon me; we cannot talk here, and I have a great deal to say. May I call on you at once—this evening? Is your father here?"

"My father is dead," she had managed to say. Her brain had been in a whirl, her heart in a tumult. What did it all mean? What was this impetuous madman saying, implying? By a strong effort she had controlled her self.

"Yes, you may call," she had answered in a low voice. "I—I will be glad to see you." And she had given him the number of the house in which she rented one room.

"Thank you. I will be there early. I would ask to go back with you now, but I have an appointment which is already overdue. Isn't it providential, though, this meeting? I have been in Washington only three days, and to turn up against you like this!"

"Have you employment here?" she had asked for want of something better to say.

"Yes, temporarily; a job in the senate chamber. You remember I was a jack of all trades from a farm boy to an impecunious prospector, with occasional dabs at fresco painting and journalism by the way. Enough outlook, but I will not detain you here in the wind any longer."

She had watched him spring into the carriage and drive away, an odd light in her eyes and a warm color in her cheeks. As she went down the sidewalk she laughed softly. Eight years before she would not have been like this. Evidently he was without any regular employment, just doing some temporary work in the senate chamber—fresco painting probably, for he had spoken of being familiar with that. At first, from his being in the carriage holding the horses, she had thought he might be a coachman in charge of his employer's return. But, after all, what did it matter? Coachman or painter or impecunious adventurer, he was the same hearted and honest and ambitious. She could read that in his eyes and in the strong, full grasp of his hands. And he had remembered her and—and cared for her. A beautiful joy had come to her in the hurrying, indifferent world there was one who still thought of her and cared for her a little. The manner and lack of employment was such a small matter compared with this. The gulf's edge of life soon leveled such petty distinctions.

Almost unconsciously her steps had turned toward the capitol. The only alternative seemed a continuation of her search for employment, and, somehow, she shrank from that just now, even though she had been restricting herself to a single meal a day for a week. She would celebrate the finding of a friend. It was opening day at the senate chamber and would be unusually interesting, and perhaps she might see this friend of hers at some of the work he had been doing.

There was a sudden stir in the line ahead of her as she felt herself being pushed forward. The door was open at last, and the crowd began to pass in, she was being impelled toward it. But when she entered every seat was taken, and she could see crowds standing in the narrow space behind the last row. She could see the chaplain and a few of the senators, but the far end of the chamber and upon the few desks in sight a gorgeous display of flowers.

Presently she heard the opening prayer and bowed her head. Then there was a confusion of voices, with quick, crisp sentences from one desk and another, followed by a short recess in which there was a great shaking of hands and introductions among the senators. At the end of fifteen or twenty minutes some of those in the visitors' gallery began to rise and leave. They had witnessed the opening and were now going home to lunch. Soon she was able to step down to a vacant seat in one of the front rows.

She had now a good view of the chamber, and her gaze swept curiously from desk to desk. Many of the senators she recognized from pictures she had seen in current periodicals. Suddenly she started and half arose. She had not thought to see him down there. If she met him at all it would be in one of the corridors, and probably at work. But there he was, at one of the desks, examining some papers. What did it mean? He had no right to be in there now, while the senate was in session.

An hour later she descended to the next floor, still dazed and wondering. As she left the elevator she met him face to face.

"What! you here, Muriel—Miss Ashburton?" he cried. "This is splendid! Now we can have that talk without waiting until evening. I know a cozy little table down in a corner of the cafe where we can be all by ourselves. We will talk while we eat our lunch. Come."

She was looking at him with wide eyes.

"Why were you in there, at a desk?" she demanded.

"In the senate chamber? Oh, that's my job. Don't see, when I left you that day I went straight to one of the newspapers and opened a law office. My father was a lawyer, and I had studied with him. Somehow the people seemed to like my work, and last year they hatched up a plot to send me here. But come, we can talk better at the table. I have a proposition for your consideration, and," his voice suddenly becoming grave, "I hope you will be able to see your way to accede to it. Come."

And she, after a moment's bewildered, ecstatic hesitation, went.

AFTERNOON CALLS

A Few Don'ts That It Would Be Well to Bear in Mind.

An afternoon call must be a short and yet not a hurried one. Don't enter the house saying that you have not a minute and don't leave it declaring that you must hurry on to another friend or you give an idea that your visit has been paid grudgingly.

Don't monopolize the conversation. Your hostess likes to retell her own news, to air her own grievances, to discuss mutual friends, from her own point of view. You may be the most amusing person present, but your very brilliancy gives others the desire to shine also, and courtesy demands that you should give them their opportunity, says an exchange.

Above all, don't talk of yourself. "I" is a letter of the alphabet to be omitted as much as possible. Who does not know the tone who tells you of his health, his family, his plans, till you sigh of unutterable relief when he at length takes his departure?

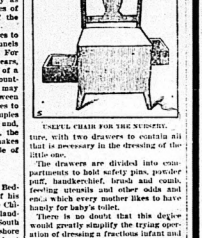

There is a military offense called "leaving the visiting card." Don't "leave" your friend's butler or maid when you are told. "Not at home." Don't say, "Oh, I am sure she is at home to me." The unfortunate hostess may be indisposed, busy, worried or have important letters to write; so respect her orders to her sentry and content yourself with leaving your card.

Don't enter in an audible aside to your companion, "Thank heaven, they are out!" A whisper is fraught with danger and may possibly be retailed from one person to another until it reaches the mistress of the house.

A USEFUL CHAIR.

Saves Time and Nerves in Dressing and Handling the Baby.

The proper caring for baby has grown to be more and more of an art, and among the recent acquisitions made up for the convenience of mother or an attendant in the nursery is a chair fitted, as shown in the accompanying pi-ture, with two drawers to contain all articles necessary in the dressing of the little one.

USEFUL CHAIR FOR THE NURSERY.

The drawers are divided into compartments to hold safety pins, powder puff, handkerchief, brush and comb, feeding utensils and other odds and ends, which every mother likes to have handy for baby's toilet.

There is no doubt that this device would greatly simplify the trying operation of dressing a fractious infant and save nurse or attendant much unnecessary trouble.—Philadelphia Press.

Tender Feet.

Girls who serve in shops and others whose occupation keeps them on their feet a great deal often are troubled with chafed, sore and blistered feet, to whatever part of the foot their duties oblige it. A powder used in the German army for sitting into the shoes and stockings of foot soldiers is called "Unstreupulver" and consists of three parts of salicylic acid, ten parts of talcum and eighty-seven parts of pulverized magnesium. Any chemist will make it up for a small sum. It keeps the feet dry, prevents chafing and ripples heals sore spots. Plenty pulverized sycopodium used in very good. When the feet merely ache a very useful remedy may be found in the following: Take a teaspoonful of ordinary washing soda, dissolve it in half a gallon of warm water and bathe the feet in it for about half an hour. Repeat this from time to time. A hot water bath is also highly recommended for tired feet.—American Queen.

Take a Rest at Noon.

Get into the practice of taking a rest at noon. It will take only five minutes, or five minutes. If you cannot lie down lean back in a chair and close your eyes. Let your whole body relax—head, relax. Even if you do not sleep, rest. This practice will make you live longer. It will make you healthier while you do live. It will probably make you more beautiful to look upon. It will take the tangle out of your nerves, the irritability out of your temper, the nervous fret out of your face. They promptly remove the concretion of the stomach, liver and kidneys, toning them, restoring harmonious action to the digestive organs, thereby purifying the blood. Just one day's use of Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills will ward off and cure any bilious attack, warm up your spinal nerves, restore the appetite and free the blood of any impurities. They are good for young or old, and bring up a rosy complexion. Get from your dealer today and take them home with you and use them when your experience any departure whatever from a healthy standard. Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills are purely vegetable, handled in one nightly. All dealers, 25 cents.

TWO EXTREMES.

Despite This Woman's Reasoning There is Logic in Dress.

"A house is a regular example if you will allow it to be," said a woman who is a keen observer and who longs for time to give to other interests outside of the home. "It will also tell all your thought and vitality," she continued, "until your luck is bent and your brain concentrated on the little scratches on your hard wood floor or the neglect of the kitchen faucets to shine all the time like gold. If we could be compelled by law to live in houses of a limited number of rooms it might be possible not to be tied hand and foot to their care as I am. You know the woman in the corner house? Nobody would ever think from her shoddy appearance that she had such a fine home. But the fact is every penny she gets goes for curtains or a new rug or pretty bits of china, and she looks old and neglected through her extreme devotion to her house.

"Her next door neighbor lives just contrary to this plan and is a picture when she goes down the street. Her house is clean enough, but things in it are so shabby. When it comes to choosing between a new rug and a fairly made suit she promptly chooses the garment. It is a pair of gloves before a china plate every time, yet I believe her way is the better, provided one must go to either extreme, and really there seems no sensible half way."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Erect Shoulders.

One way to correct round shoulders is refused boy or girl to be to teach them to sleep on a very stiffly stuffed hair mattress, with a pillow that fills the hollow of neck. Have only what is best for the rest of the body. A soft bed and plenty of easy pillows are the prime causes of crooked shoulders among our American children. To sleep with the head very high is a mistake, and a soft bed is not by any means the most beneficial one.—American Queen.

Egg Toast.

Carefully separate the yolks from the whites of three eggs. Beat the yolks, chop them finely, heat half a pint of milk, add a teaspoonful of butter, a little chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Thicken slightly with flour and stir in the yolks of eggs. Have ready slices of buttered toast, arrange the yolks on them and pour over the sauce.—Serve hot.

The Greatest Evil.

The Persian author Saadi tells a story of three sages—a Greek, an Indian and a Persian—who in the presence of the Persian monarch debated this question. Of all evils incident to humanity which is the greatest? The Persian declared, "Old age oppressed with poverty;" the Indian answered, "Pain with impatience," while the Persian, bowing low, made answer, "The greatest evil, O king, that I can conceive is the conch of death without the good deed of life to light the darkness way."

Ups and Downs of Santa Cruz.

Probably no other of the West Indian islands has had such a checkered career as Santa Cruz. In turn it has belonged to Spain, which abandoned it; to England and Holland jointly; to England alone; to Spain again, which left upon the colonists and destroyed or deported them all; to France, which took it from Spain; to the Knights of Malta, who received it as a gift from France to a private company of adventurers. Then it was resumed possession of by France, but abandoned, as that in 1720 it was uninhabited. Then it became a no man's land until 1727, when Portugal took it again, and presently sold it to a Danish company, which sold it in turn to the king of Denmark. In 1801 England took it over once more, gave it back to Denmark, repented and took it away again in a few months, held it for eight years, and then returned it to Denmark, which holds it still.

Plucky Oglethorpe.

Of General Oglethorpe, the founder of the state of Georgia, Boswell, Dr. Johnson's biographer, relates this story: "When a very young man, only fifteen, serving under Prince Eugene of Savoy, he was sitting at table in company with a prince of the house of Wurttemberg, who took up a glass of wine and by a flip made some of it fly into Oglethorpe's face. The young soldier was in a dilemma. He durst not challenge so distinguished a personage, yet he must notice the affront. However, keeping his eye fixed on his lordship and smiling at the time, as if in jest, he said, 'Sir, if I think and if I live, Oglethorpe exclaimed, 'That's a good joke, but we do it much better in England.' Between the two there was a thick shrubbery of wine in the prince's face. The affair ended in good humor."

American Women's Jewels.

To the average English woman her jewelry is a necessary, an adjunct, having no particular connection with the rest of her toilet, but added at random. With the American woman it is quite another woman. She dresses to her jewels and has her gowns made to match them.—London Interior and Truthful.

Jack and Jill in Korway.

A writer on Norway says, "Our familiar nursery friends Jack and Jill are represented there as Hjalmi and Brit, the ebbing and flowing tides, the tumbling crests of which, breaking one over another like the waves wash the shore, are rather aptly described in the nursery rhyme."

The Difference.

Mrs. Slenderpich—What? Pay $14.00 for a hat like that! Why, it's outrageous! Salesman—But you forget, madam, it has been especially reduced from $15. Mrs. S.—Oh, is that case I'll take it. You see, I didn't know it had been reduced.

Be Sunny.

Christianity wants nothing so much in the world as sunny people. The old are hungrier for love than for bread.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. M. C. GOODLETT.

Founder of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Few have accomplished more for living patriotism and as perpetuating the memory of the heroic dead of the southland than Mrs. M. C. Goodlett of Washville, Tenn., the founder and first president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. No one but a woman of such force of character, united to the social training that comes from inheritance through a long line of ancestors, together with parliamentary experience, could have conceived and firmly established in so short a time a society that now has 40,000 members.

Mrs. Goodlett is most modest in speaking of that cherished child of hers, whose birth has given monuments and loving tribute to both living and dead southern heroes. Her object in uniting the women of the south was to bring them together, to pull shoulder to shoulder with the Confederate veterans in extending all necessary aid to the needy sirvors of the war between the states, to protect historic places of the Confederacy, to record the part taken by southern women, as well in untiring effort after the war in the reconstruction of the south as by patient endurance of hardship and privation during the struggle; to honor the memory of those who fell in the service of the Confederate states and to cherish ties of friendship among the members of the society.

She worked years striving to organize the United Daughters of the Confederacy before even her own associates, of which she was president, would co-operate with her in calling a convention and inviting other Daughters of the Confederacy to unite in forming a national association. At this time, having been president of the Tennessee Daughters, she was a member of the National Conference of Charities and Corrections, the National Prisoners' association and the National Humane association and was educated up to the point where she could see the advantage of consolidating the scattered forces of Confederate workers, who were few and far apart. Her work with the national associations showed her the great possibilities of concert of action, and, having time, means and social influence to back her in the work, she determined to carry out her plans and unflinchingly fought opposition from start to finish. The result was that on Sept. 10, 1894, the Society of the United Daughters of the Confederacy organized at Nashville, Tenn.—Washington Post.

Taking Trouble Lightly.

When one cake has fallen or one shirt waist pattern been spoiled the world seems a wilderness with neither truth nor virtue under the sun. Here are the wasted materials, time, labor, patience. There are some things which are gained only by losing them and others which we cannot lose. Speaking them, we still have them in our possession. The materials are spoiled—perhaps. If they are quite hopeless it is best to thrust them far away, lest they tempt to further lamentation. The time—why throw good time after a bad time? Then let the next hour be all the more profitable because of the one wasted. The patience—the patiences is one of the blessed possessions which are gained by spending, of which the store is increased by paying out. The labor, being honest labor, cannot be really lost, though its end we cannot see and though its present result be accounted failure.

Choosing a Hat.

The following advice is given by a well known fashionable milliner:

"I can rule out no hat for women. I match the hat to the hair. The result is always good. Of course if the woman is old, with white hair, it is not so satisfactory. But the woman with brown hair should wear a brown hat, and the woman with red hair should wear a hat in dark red tones, and so on. If you are going to buy a hat, match your hair.

"The second best thing is to match the hat to the eyes. The woman with big brown eyes should wear a big brown hat. The girl with sea-green eyes can wear a blue hat, and the girl with hazel eyes ought to cultivate hats that are hazel and light brown and yellow brown.

"That is a splendid rule for any woman to remember. Match the hat to the hair or the eyes. It is sure to be a success."

Serving Dinner.

In serving dinner the hand holds plates and large dishes in her hand, but passes sugar, cream, olives and small dishes from a small tray covered with a doily. Service plates which remain on the table generally during the soup and shellfish courses are removed by the maid with her left hand when she lifts the plate of the meat course into place with her right hand. When the hostess has unusually handsome plates she wishes to display, they remain through the meal up to the dessert. All dishes are removed by the maid before serving the dessert and the table gone over with a silver crumb knife. Finger plates holding finger bowls and tiny doilies are placed before the guests when the dessert is of fruit or cold dishes.

Thin Eyebrows.

The nervous rush of modern society is held responsible by the beauty doctors for the thinning of the eyebrows and lashes among fashionable women. A physician should be first consulted, so that the general system can be restored, but a good local application to the eyebrows and lashes must assist the doctor's science. A good wash may be made from one ounce of glycerin, two ounces violet water and a dram of powdered quinine. Mix thoroughly and apply with a small line brush. Great care must be taken to prevent the tonic from getting into the eyes, as it would result in painful inflammation.

Weak Ankles.

If the ankles are very weak, braces may be necessary, and that, of course, must be decided by a physician. There should be no chances taken on this, for real weakness in the bones may eventually cripple one if they are not treated. If the weakness is merely one of the muscles, exercises night and day will strengthen them. To do this, put the leg on a chair so that the foot is free and then point the toe in a straight line. Then bend the foot from the ankle, first one side and then the other, doing it for five minutes at first and increasing in a week.

French Fry Pan.

A French fry pan in a four-quart size is not a necessity, but if a woman has ever owned one she will never be without it willingly. It may not be of value in preparing healthful foods, but if foods are to be fried in fats there is no more convenient and healthful way of cooking them than boiling oil out of which they may be carefully drained in the wire basket. Pan fried croquettes, meat chops and fish steaks never have the flavor nor the perfect cooking which French frying gives.

Teaching a Child to Feed.

The task of teaching a child to feed himself can be much simplified if a small enough spoon is used. We found that even the diminutive coffee spoon held enough to allow some for face and bib, while a teaspoon was entirely too large. When we tried the dessert somewhat coffee spoon, the bowl of which was about as large as a woman's thumb nail, baby got on very easily. The spoon held so little that it all had to go in the tiny mouth.—Good Housekeeping.

"Oria" Lace.

To get just that soft "old" look to lace, dip it in tea, using about a table spoonful of green tea to a quart of water to make an infusion of the right strength. Do not use boiling water as discouraging shade at first, but boil it a few minutes in water in which a handful of soda has been dissolved and the color will fade to just the right shade. Don't use coffee; it is sure to take on too yellow a tone.

A Nail Polish.

A powder for polishing the nails may be made by mixing one-half ounce each of talcum powder, pulverized boric acid and powdered starch. Then add ten drops of tincture of carnaline. A nail rouge is made of half a dram of fine powdered carmine, a dram of fresh lard and twenty drops of oil of lavender.

Sprinkling Clothes.

Never sprinkle calicoes till the day they are to be ironed. Sprinkle and fold all cotton and linen clothes at night to be ironed next day. Pack closely in a clean basket covered with a damp cloth next them and a dry one outside, and you will have immaculate linen fresh and fragrant.

To Gain Flesh.

To gain flesh eat a hearty breakfast and dinner and a light luncheon. Bread, butter and stewed fruit and milk are necessary articles of diet. Let the bread be brown or gluten loaf and have the milk hot, but not scalded; take some often during the day, but eat no solids between meals.

The Housewife's Hands.

Cotton gloves for sweeping and dusting are comforts few women know. I keep continually on hand several pairs of various sizes, for the larger the better, as they shrink with much washing, and I pay 15 cents a pair for them.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Olive oil will clear the skin if taken in small doses—a teaspoonful half an hour before breakfast and one half an hour after the last meal every day. The use may be kept up until no longer needed.

Where valuable books or pictures are the room must have a stove. It is false economy to save coal and ruin good articles of furniture through keeping them in a damp room.

Nothing is better for making the face and neck fat than drinking warm milk. A glassful taken just before going to bed is excellent.

Cover the top of the refrigerator with white oilcloth, tacking it on with brass headed tacks.

AN ODD REVENGE.

The Visit Hans Christian Andersen Paid His Old Dean.

Among the many amusing things Hans Christian Anderson treated us to was a little anecdote which, curiously enough, since it was so very characteristic of him, is omitted from his autobiography. He mentions in his "Life's Story" that during the autumn of 1844 he was a daily guest at the Danish royal family at Ivali, and was on terms of intimacy both with them and with the family of the King of Augustenburg. He told us the following incident about his stay there: It had been one of the mortifications of his younger days that the dean of the diocese, who in his day had confirmed him, had treated him harshly, and put the affront on him of placing him, as a poor boy, down in the bottom of the church, among the curate's poor candidates, although he properly belonged up above, among the dean's own. He chanced to hear that this man now held a post in the island of Fohr. "So I asked the king," said Andersen, "if I might for once have one of the royal carriages, with coachman and footman in red livery, the same as the royal family themselves used, placed at my disposal, to pay a visit. The king smiled and said, 'With pleasure.' So I drove out in the royal carriage, with panached horses, and coachman and footman, to pay a visit to my old diocesan dean. The carriage waited outside while I was in the house. That was my revenge." It seems to me that we have Andersen's whole self, his romantic bent, his old humiliations and his vindictive, half childish greed of honor, in this little story.—George Brandes in Contemporary Review.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS.

The Famous Painter Was the Son of a Devonshire Rector.

Sir Joshua Reynolds was born at Plympton, four miles from Plymouth, on July 16, 1723. His father, rector of the grammar school, early trained him in classical studies, intending his son to be an apothecary, but he displayed such an inclination for drawing, diligently copying the prints which fell in his way, that the father yielded and sent him to London as a student of art. After four years he returned to Devonshire and established himself as a portrait painter in Plymouth, where he was taken up by Commodore Keppel, who, being appointed to the Mediterranean station, induced the young painter to accompany him in his ship, the Centurion. Thus he was able to visit Italy, spending two years there in very close study, especially of the works of Raphael and Michael Angelo. It was while engaged in the corridors of the Vatican that he contracted a deaf which brought on the deafness that afterward afflicted him during the rest of his life. Leaving Rome, he visited Parma, where he first saw Correggio's influence, then Florence and Venice, in the latter city studying the works of the great colorists. On his way home he stopped in Paris, making acquaintance with the work of Hogarth. Arrived in London, he settled in St. Martin's lane, and painted a portrait of his patron, Commodore (then Lord) Keppel, which laid the foundation of his fortune. Later he established himself in Leicester square, where his house, 47, may still be seen.

Speak Good of the Living.

Few will be found to dispute the spirit of the old Latin proverb, "De mortuis nil nisi bonum." Is it not a pity, however, that we are all so inclined to offer fulsome adulation of the dead, about whom, while living, nothing was too vile to say? This is not to be understood as criticising unfavorably the natural tendency to forget the faults and foibles and to remember only the virtues of the people who have "gone on before," but it does seem too bad that more even justice, greater toleration and charity cannot be shown to the living.—Success.

Lovers of Coffee.

The London Globe doubts whether there is anywhere in the world a place more addicted to the use than the little island of Groix, about nine miles distant from Lorient. The customs' receipts show that the annual consumption of coffee in the island is about 90,000 pounds. Now, the population is 5,000, and, as the men pass practically their whole lives afloat as seamen, this large quantity must be consumed by about 2,000 women, children and old men. It works out at thirty pounds a head per annum.

A Healthy Puppy.

"There's a pretty good thing about that young puppy that came to see you last night," said the humble father, "and that is he's healthy."

"I'm surprised to hear you admit that much," replied the dutiful daughter.

"I wouldn't except for the fact that I'm going to put him in the hall tree night I heard you say, 'Oh, George, how cold your nose is!'"

The Wall Street Way.

Jobson—You bought the stock on your broker's advice, didn't you? Dobson—Yes; he gave me four excellent reasons why I should go up. Jobson—What has he to say now? Dobson—He has given me two equally good reasons why it went down.

Goodness Knows.

Mrs. Naybeleigh—Judge, I want you to try some of my angel cake. Judge Solomon (absently)—What is it charged with?

To believe is to be strong. Doubt cramps energy. Belief is power.—Robertson.

NOW OR NEVER

Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1905,
by Martha McCulloch-Williams

Billy Wharton's coming did not surprise Joe in the least. She had known something out of the common was going to happen ever since Saturday, when she had seen the new moon clear, had a black cat follow her home and then dreamed of getting safe across a clear running stream. All these were omens of good luck. It was the best sort of luck to have a boarder in the big front room upstairs, a gentleman evidently craving quiet, solitude and country-fare. Mrs. Greer, Joe's stepmother, had been set against boarders. She would have none of them even yet but for that dreadful doctor's bill. She had been ill nearly four last winter, her first real illness. Though the doctor was in no hurry for his fee, he naturally resented slightly against having him wait.

Therefore Joe had had no new summer frocks. Therefore also she was not going to picnics and parties and things—anywhere, indeed, but to church, where the wearing of old clothes might be regarded as a sign of piety rather than poverty. She heard money would change all that. In fancy Joe saw herself brave in new winter finery, holding up her head with the best. Her head had not really been drooped, for she was by nature spirited and full of fun. But the atmosphere was a little morbid on the point of Joe's head. It was the fault of her aunt, she neglected the girl, who, it was well known, she did not love. Still there had to be a living together until the epoch of Ransom Farley.

It was Mrs. Greer's nephew and prospective heir; hence it seemed to him but right and natural that he should marry Joe, who held a near place on the farm. Mrs. Greer had fetched her husband and his daughter with her to live, and, as the farm estate had been turned into cash and used to free the homestead from sundry mortgages, Joe's common interest had kept the two women together after Squire Greer died. Ransom Farley's letter announcing the death of his uncle, who, being appointed to the Mediterranean station, had taken the young man over to accompany him in his ship, the Centurion. Thus he was able to visit Italy, spending two years there in very close study, especially of the works of Raphael and Michael Angelo. It was while engaged in the corridors of the Vatican that he contracted a deaf which brought on the deafness that afterward afflicted him during the rest of his life. Leaving Rome, he visited Parma, where he first saw Correggio's influence, then Florence and Venice, in the latter city studying the works of the great colorists. On his way home he stopped in Paris, making acquaintance with the work of Hogarth. Arrived in London, he settled in St. Martin's lane, and painted a portrait of his patron, Commodore (then Lord) Keppel, which laid the foundation of his fortune. Later he established himself in Leicester square, where his house, 47, may still be seen.

"Maybe this is our last walk together."

But Billy, quite beyond prudence, flung his arms around her and kissed her full on the mouth, saying thickly, "It shall not be—I want you—always."

He slept little that night, but fell into a heavy done at daylight. It lasted until it was almost time for church. The sight of her set his heart beating madly. She was all in white, bridelike indeed, with a knot of pale roses nodding on her breast. By their rising and falling he knew she was strangely stirred, but he dared not speak. He took a chair and sat beside her he obeyed, although Ransom Farley, whom he cordially disliked, was at home since Thursday. All through the service she sat statue still notwithstanding he felt the thrill of her mood increase. After the prayer and the closing hymn there was a general stir of people half rising or craning their necks to see who might be going up to the altar.

"I'm going to be married—somebody. Which shall it be?" Joe breathed rather than whispered in Billy's ear, glancing alternately at him and at Farley. He understood. With almost a bound he was up and in the aisle, holding out hand tight and almost dragging her forward. And then before he knew what was happening he heard her say, solemn, "I pronounce you man and wife."

The church buzzed like a hive, but through the buzzing Billy heard Farley Ransom shrieking hysterically, "I'm sure you're sorry for this, sir, before you are much older!"

Joe looked up at him; flushing a lovely red, she said, "I'm sorry for nothing," said. "I had to marry you now. You never would have come back."

Forming Characters.

No human being can come into this world without increasing or diminishing the sum total of human happiness and only of the present but every subsequent age of humanity. No one can detach himself from this connection. There is no unpresidential spot in the universe, no dark niche along the disk of nonexistence to which he can retreat from his relations to others, where he can withdraw the influence of his existence upon the moral destinies of the world. Everywhere his presence or absence will be felt. Everywhere he will be the cooperator with God for good or worse for his influence. It is an old saying and one of fearful import, that we are forming characters hereafter, and in that momentous fact lie the peril and responsibility of our existence. Who knows what he is doing? Thousands of my fellow beings will hereafter enter eternity with character formed for good or for evil, they would have carried thither had I never lived. The thought of such a thing as that their dauntless marks in their primary formations and in their successive strata of thought and life.—Ellis Balfour.

Hunting Foxes With Eagles.

The hunting of foxes with eagles takes place among the Kirghese in the southwest district of Siberia. It is in autumn and early winter, when the foxes' coats are ruddy and perfect. The eagles are trained to attack the fox by weight that a small wooden support is carried by the hunter on his wrist. Upon him of more than usually fierce temperament will occasionally kill a fox. Immediately on the release of the birds make their flight and swoop down with great precision.

"One of the best ways to use to my knowledge," writes our correspondent, "killed seventeen foxes in one day and I can assure that the killing of foxes by eagles, for I personally took photographs and saw the whole sport from beginning to end.

"Years ago I wrote a letter to the Field, telling about my success with small pine trees in Florida when a 'kill' appears imminent. I have frequently—to them do not grow as I have politely had what an Ananias I must be."—London Sphere.

Insisted on the Contract.

Many of Mark Twain's stories are concerned with her early girlhood in the United States, where she had gone along to realize the great hold she had on the public with her voice. After a lecture in which she had sung the Scots on one occasion a supper was given to the singers, at which many notabilities, including Mark Twain and Bret Harte, were present. Supper over, Judge Matthews pressed little Adelina to sing again, however. Somewhat to her confusion, so Matthews in desperation cried, "Sing and I'll do anything you like." "Anything?" asked Patti. "Anything," repeated the grave lawyer delightedly. "Then sing 'Home, Sweet Home." Hardly had she given the last note, however, than she said, "Now, Mr. Matthews, what about on your bond?" "You're joking, child," gasped the judge. "A bargain's a bargain," murmured the future diva. "Well," said Matthews, "here goes." And he wrote and she read the frantic applause of the company.

Fishermen's Patron Saint.

St. Peter, of course, is the fisherman; but anglers are not the only ones of their own in St. Zeno, who is commemorated on April 12. Verona's patron saint is conventionally represented holding a fishing rod, with a fish at the end of the line, the reference being to the tradition that he used to enjoy fishing in the Adige during his episcopate. He must have commanded good sport if he exercised as much control over that river in life as he is said to have done on numerous occasions after his death. In 589 Italy was visited by terrific floods, and the Adige threatened to swamp much of Verona. But the faithful gathered in St. Zeno's church by the river, and, though the water rose to the windows outside, none of it could pass the doors, and after twenty-four hours of prayer it subsided. This rests on the authority of Gregory the Great.—London Chronicle.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS IN SESSION

Gathering of Over 20,000 Delegates and Friends at Denver.

Denver, July 7.—The seventh international convention of the Epworth League opened yesterday with three simultaneous meetings, which taxed to the utmost the capacity of Colfaxan Hall, Trinity Methodist Episcopal Church and Central Presbyterian Church, the largest auditoriums in this city. Over 20,000 delegates and visitors have been entertained.

The chairmen were Bishop Joseph F. Berry, Indiana, N. J.; Dr. Stephen J. Herben of Chicago, editor of The Epworth Herald, and Rev. Melvin Tapper of Quebec, Canada.

Governor McDaniel, Mayor Speer and others made welcome addresses, and responses were given by Rev. G. F. Dalton, Ottawa, Ont.; Rev. R. J. Cbown, D. D., Toronto; Rev. I. Tovell, Toronto, and others.

Jaurez Forbidden to Speak.

Berlin, July 7.—Chancellor von Bulow responded to Prince Radolin, the German Ambassador at Paris, yesterday to decree M. Jaurez, the French Socialistic leader, that the German government thought it best to defer from appearing in Berlin July 9, as it had been announced he intended to.

Explosion Kills Five.

NERVOUSNESS A CALAMITY.

Many who don't realize what lies beyond, treat an attack of the "nerves" with indifference. Others consider it will soon pass away. But in every case nervousness is a calamity. Only one remedy will cure—Fernozone — a nerve strengthener that acts through the blood. First, it gives you appetite — you eat plenty. This fills the blood with nourishment for the inner cells. Energy and strength is instilled into every part of the system. You get well — keep well —nervousness forever departs, because the nerves have used Fernozone. Price 50c per box of—fifty tablets at all dealers.

CLEAN FRUIT BASKETS.

THE LAW IN REGARD TO THEM WILL BE ENFORCED HERE.

The Medical Health Officer of the city informed The Intelligencer that there had been some complaints as to old boxes being used for berries sold upon the market. He investigated the complaint and found that there was some truth in the report. The officer made a personal canvas of the market yesterday, and informed those who were offering berries for sale that they must provide clean boxes for the same. The law in regard to this matter is strict and is being enforced in other places and will also be enforced here. It is a move in the right direction and the Inspector, or officer should be assisted by all in the discharge of his duties in this regard.

ROWING.

The Leanders Won.

Henley, July 6.—The Leanders, who yesterday defeated the Vesper boat club of Philadelphia, won the final heat today in the contest for the Grand Challenge Cup, defeating the Belgian crew by 2½ lengths in the fastest time ever made on the course. This is five seconds better than yesterday, and is only five seconds outside the record time for the event. Diamond Sculls Kelly easily beat Blackstaffe in 8 minutes 10 seconds, a record for the race.

The Band Concert.

Victoria Park was last evening virtually covered with visitors who gathered to hear the band concert. In addition to those on the park the harbor was dotted with crafts filled with pleasure seekers. The program provided by the band appeared to give general satisfaction.

The Lloyd Case.

Police Magistrate Flint will tomorrow morning give judgment in the case of Adam Lloyd, who had a preliminary trial on the charge of causing the death of his wife.

Amusing Trick.

All that is necessary is a napkin ring At the table is a good time to try it—if you are allowed. Insert the two forefingers into the ring from different sides, and turn the fingers around each other slowly, letting the direction of sway from the body. Gradually work longer and thumbs of each hand around the ring, and bring the tips of the four together. Open both and drop the ring. The trick sounds simple, but if one succeeds in a half dozen attempts it is astonishing. The important fact to get into one's head is, when the tips of the fingers and thumbs are together, keep the tips of the fingers of the right hand under those of the left hand, and vice versa. In opening, keep the fingers and thumbs joined together, perfectly still, and the ring will at once be free.

DROPPED DEAD IN THE FIELD

MR. SIMEON HALLETT, AN OLD RESIDENT OF HASTINGS CO., EXPIRED SUDDENLY ON TUESDAY LAST.

While at work in the field mowing, Mr. Simeon Hallett, of Fuller, received a very sudden summons on Tuesday and died without a moment's notice. Although he had been ailing for some three years from a nervous trouble he was as well as usual that morning and went about his work with his accustomed energy. Deceased, who was sixty-seven years old, has resided in Hastings county nearly all his life. He was twice married and is survived by his second wife and a number of sons and daughters.

OLD BOYS' REUNION.

LADIES WILL PREPARE FLOATS FOR THE PARADE.

A number of ladies met at the Council chamber, city buildings, yesterday afternoon to talk over the advisability of preparing floats for the Old Boys' Reunion parade and it was unanimously decided to have some prepared and the ladies will no doubt make this part of the parade a success. The floats will be most appropriately decorated. All ladies who are willing to assist in this part of the demonstration are requested to communicate with Mr. Flint, who is chairman of the parade committee.

KINGSTON CARS TO RUN.

COUNCIL MADE AGREEMENT WITHOUT SUBMITTING IT TO THE VOTERS

Kingston, July 6.—By a vote of ten to nine the City Council accepted terms with the new Street Railway Company, so that it may run next week. The Nickle Bros. and the Richardson Bros. are the heads of the new concern. The opposition was as to whether Council should submit the agreement to the voters for acceptance. By one vote the Council decided to act itself. By the new terms power will be given at 1½c per kilowatt hour, with the right to double track the line, and lease to cut off the Williamsville branch. A reduced service will be given from September to June, 20 years' tax exemption, relief from paying for snow removal from streets and keeping the streets in repair.

INSPECTION AT BARRIEFIELD

GEN. AYLMER AND COL. LESSARD COMMEND WORK OF THE TROOPS.

Kingston, July 6. — Gen. Lord Aylmer inspected the troops on Barriefield Common this afternoon, and they were showed to good advantage, and the General commended the officers on the excellent training displayed by the men. Col. Lessard, in complimenting the Cavalry Brigade after the action, stated they were 25 per cent. better than any he had inspected up to the present time. The camp will break up on Friday night. To-morrow forenoon there will be a mock battle.

WEDDING AT CHAPMAN

MISS EFFIE KIRK UNITED IN MARRIAGE TO MR. CARL G. LAILEY, OF HAROLD.

A very happy event took place at the home of County Councillor Andrew Kirk on Wednesday evening, June 28th, when his daughter Effie was united in marriage to Mr. Carl G. Lailey, of the township of Haydon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. R. McElwain, assisted by Rev. W. R. Secombe, the new pastor, on the day previous in Thomasburg. The marriage took place on the lawn in the presence of over seventy-five guests. After the ceremony a dainty was everything that could be desired, and the Lodge Room orchestra was in attendance. The bride, who was a general favorite in the neighborhood, looked very beautiful indeed.

Wedded in Toronto.

A quiet wedding took place on Monday last Toronto, when Mr. William H. Lynn, of Sherbrooke, Que., was married to Miss May McCune, daughter of Mrs. M. McCune, of this city. The ceremony took place at the residence of Rev. Mr. Taylor, who officiated. The couple were unattended. The groom was for some years a resident of this city. Mr. and Mrs. Lynn will reside at Sherbrooke.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings He must spend some dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenditures. Every dollar he spends properly invested, like buying seeds for the garden, will save several dollars in outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bit the of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

Procure some of those Old Boys' Reunion envelopes at The Intelligencer office. Four designs, printed in colors. Just the thing for everyone to use during the next three months.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE JOHN BELL, K. C.

RAILWAY OFFICIALS AND LEGAL DIGNITARIES GATHER TO PAY A LAST TRIBUTE OR RESPECT TO AN HONORED ASSOCIATE.

Although the funeral of the late Mr. John Bell, K. C., was announced to be strictly private, it was found to be impossible to have this wish carried out to the letter owing to the desire of many important personages to attend. These included magistrates of the Grand Trunk Railway Co., representatives from the Lincoln and Bar at Toronto and the Hastings County Bar, who attended in a body.

Services were held at the house at 2.30 conducted by the Rev. A. H. Brumm, pastor of the John Street Presbyterian Church. Only the immediate relatives and a few friends were present. A number of beautiful floral designs were placed upon the casket. The bearers were former associates of the deceased when the legal offices of the railway were in the city and were as follows: Messrs. W. H. Biggar, K.C., W. W. Pope, E. Donald, W. E. Foster, J. P. Pratt and T. Waterston.

Justices Moss and Osler, of Toronto, represented the Board and Messrs. Brayton, McCarthy, Rose and Barwick, solicitors, of Toronto, represented the Bar of that city.

The following Grand Trunk officials were in attendance:

Messrs. G. M. Hays, second vice-president and general manager; T. Hurst Morse, first vice-president and general manager of the G.T.R.; E. H. Fitzhugh, third vice-president; W. D. Robb, superintendent of Motive Power; J. Kilgour, chief engineer; W. E. Davis, passenger traffic manager; W. H. Moore, the general solicitor; J. W. Loud, freight traffic manager; F. B. Campbell, of the Canada Northern; H. B. Beauvais, freight claim agent; H. W. Walker, general auditor; C. A. Bidwell, legal department; W. Mc Wood, superintendent of car department; F. St. Scott, Chicago freight agent; A. E. Beckett, legal department; W. G. Brownlee, superintendent of Motive Power; J. H. Hanwin, trainmaster at Lindsay; T. G. Cumming, trainmaster at Montreal; E. J. A Western Version of The Good Samaritan.

It was in the Rocky Mountains of Wyoming in the days of the Last Kansas famine. A visitor was called on to teach a class of young savages reared from seven to ten. The subject before the house had been about the Good Samaritan.

"Now," said the teacher, "which of you boys can tell me about the lesson for last Sunday?"

Several hands went up. One of the boys was selected.

"Well, sir," said the boy, "the lesson for last Sunday was 'bout the feller up in Jericho came, an' was a man travellin' and a gang of toughs went to 'im an' welted 'im one and mighty nigh killed 'im. Then they touched him for 'is wad and worked 'im for chicken-feed, an' left. He said, 'Uph, dat ain't none o' my business,' an' went on. Here comes along a preacher. He look at 'im, low, and say, 'Dat ease ain't in my district.' Then a doctor. Here comes long a cowboy on his bronche. He jump off an' say, 'Feller, here; die fellow is hurt.' Den he put 'im on his bronche and carry 'im to de road house and say to the fellow, 'Now, here; dis fellow got into it down yonder in de canon and got hurt. You take care of 'im. He's my pal, and when I come to Jericho I will pay you anything when I git back from de ranch I'll square it."—Biblical Record.

ENDS LIFE WITH A SHOT

Oliver Findlay, Son of Barrie Clergyman, Found Dead.

Revolver Lay at His Feet in His Room at the Windsor Hotel at Wobwood—Brother Was Killed in South African War—A Popular Young Man in C. P. R. Employ—His Reason For the Deed Unknown.

Wobwood, July 7.—Oliver Findlay, son of Rev. A. Findlay, D.D., of Barrie, superintendent of Presbyterian missions for Ontario, was found dead in his room in the Windsor Hotel yesterday morning, and was cared by a revolver shot, the revolver being found at his feet. A coroner's inquest is being held by Coroner Flaherty of Mossey.

The deceased was a popular young man, and was employed as real estate agent's assistant at the C.P.R. station here. He was an active member of the Presbyterian Church, and his untimely death caused a great shock to his many friends here.

Dr. Findlay has the sincere sympathy of the whole community in this his second loss, a son having been killed in the South African war.

Body Found in the River.

New Hamburg, July 7.—A young Roumanian named Briddlehank, was drowned here while bathing in the river this afternoon. His clothes were found lying upon the bank, and search was made, when his body was found near the bank. He came from Liverpool about two years ago.

Mud Delays Trains.

Winnipeg, July 7.—Mudslides, following heavy rainfall in the Fraser River district, have interfered with C. N. R. traffic during the past few days. Three men were injured yesterday in an accident on the C. P. R. Prince Albert branch.

One Drowned; Two Escape.

Winnipeg, July 7.—F. Johnson was drowned in the lake at J. Carless' bathing place, Macleod, N.W.T., while two Carless boys had a narrow escape.

Thirty Passengers Hurt.

St. Paul, Minn., July 7.—About thirty people were injured Wednesday night in the Great Northern westbound flyer at Springbrook, 21 miles east of Willmington, N.D. All of the injured were able to resume their journey yesterday, except C. H. Stricker of Boise City, Idaho, who is reported to be in a critical condition.

Fifteen May Be Drowned.

Concepcion, Chili, July 7.—A boat containing 15 people, who left the British steamer Tropic when that vessel went ashore fifteen miles north of Concepcion, July 5, is missing.

Death List Is Twenty-Six.

Fort Worth, Texas, July 7.—Twenty-six persons are known to have been killed and 50 injured by the tornado which swept over a portion of Montague County, in the northern part of this state, Wednesday afternoon. The property loss will probably aggregate $200,000.

Cuties From Manning Estate.

Toronto, July 7.—The Provincial Treasurer has received from the estate of the late Alexander Manning the sum of $24,586 for succession duties. There is still a balance of $50,000 of Manning & Macdonald against the Dominion Government, which is yet unsettled and on which the dues have not been paid.

JUGGLING OF FIGURES

Enables Fielding to Claim Deficit as a Surplus.

Expenditure For Outstrips Revenue—Hon. Mr. Fielding Admits a Waning Surplus—Says Government's Motto Is to Spend Freely but Wisely — A Few Slight Changes in Thy Tariff—Hon. Mr. Foster Denies Surplus Is a Most Convenient One.

Ottawa, July 7.—With the prover bial flourish of trumpets, Hon. W. S. Fielding yesterday introduced the budget. In spite of the forced applause at convenient intervals from the jubilant side of the House, it must be confessed that the effort of the Finance Minister was not a scintillating success. There was less of sparkle and a plethora of lively rounded phrases, but they meant little. For Mr. Fielding, in spite of his heroics, did not have an easy job to tackle. He had to explain, as well he could in his statement, a largely increased expenditure. His explanation was sugar-coated, but the bitter pill was there all the same—the fact that an increased expenditure was largely overbalanced the increase in revenue. Another fact was made evident. The surplus for the year just closed was not so large as that of last year.

Hon. George E. Foster, criticising the budget speech, pointed out the large liabilities of the next few years and uttered a word of warning. Money will have to be raised shortly at the specific time when the country is seemingly pledged to the big spending extension.

The tariff, as had been predicted, will be dealt with very gingerly, and the old war horse of an excuse was trotted out that the tariff commission would be appointed shortly and would deal with a great many matters left undetermined by the budget. After some discussion the House went into committee on the tariff resolutions. The resolutions were reported and the bill introduced on a item-read at first and second time. The tariff bill will be read a third time to-day. The House adjourned at midnight.

Mr. Fielding's Speech.

Mr. Fielding's speech may be summarized in the following results:

Duties Reduced.

Rolled Oats—Duty imposed of 40 cents per hundred-weight.

Dry White Lead—Duty increased from 5 per cent. to 20 per cent., with preference.

Cement—To equalize, duty of 25 per cent. ad valorem imposed on bags in which cement is imported from United States.

South African Wines—Duty of 25 per cent. to encourage trade.

Se-tlers' Effects—Clause substituted to prevent the importation of any machinery or plant under the guise of effects.

Machinery—Best sugar-machinery and machinery used in alluvial gold mining continued on free list for another year.

Molasses—To accommodate Newfoundland refiners, molasses from British West Indies coming through Newfoundland may be admitted free as if coming direct.

Tariff Commission.

Members to be appointed from the Cabinet; meetings to be held in the Senate Chamber of Canadian products from a year hence on basis of maximum and minimum tariff, between general tariff and a British preference.

The Surplus.

A surplus of $17,058,984 is announced as "the largest in the history of Canada" or $16,500,000.

A surplus of $9,000,000 is estimated for the fiscal year, 1905-6.

Receipts and Expenditure.

For the fiscal year 1903-4:

Revenue (estimate)	$71,000,000
Revenue (actual	76,869,919
Increase	5,930,184
Expenditure (estimate)	59,000,000
Expenditure (actual)	58,807,935
Increase	1,192,935
Capital expenditure (estimate)	11,500,000
Capital expenditure (actual)	11,210,749

For the fiscal year 1904-5:

Revenue (expected)	74,250,000
Increase of	400,000
Expenditure (consolidated fund account)	67,250,000
Increase of	8,637,168
Expenditure (capital account)	12,750,000
Net addition of debt	1,750,000

Estimates, 1905-6.

Expenditure consolidated fund account	71,349,938
Expenditure (capital)	16,649,472
Total	87,999,410

Largely Increased Expenditure.

"A gradual increase is theoretical in receipts from customs, excise and postal services; and a material increase from Dominion lands, due to decreased receipts from the Yukon.

"The expenditure has also only a moderate increase in revenue, but a largely increased expenditure is to be expected. The Government is not afraid to spend wisely, believing it to be true economy.

"Loans will continue maturing yearly until 1912, when a long period without any.

"The Government will pay a bonus of 3 8 of one per cent. for the return from banks of foreign silver in exchange for Canadian currency. It is expected to be a profitable country by increasing Canadian coinage.

Mr. Fielding's Conclusion.

In concluding, Mr. Fielding declared that the progress of Canada to day was at a most remarkable character. Industrial concerns as a rule were in good shape and as to the crop prospects he would be necessary to enquire how far they might be caused by the tariff. From all parts of the country the reports as to the crops were more than usually favorable. With the immigration flowing into Canada, with the record of the past, there was reason to feel the utmost confidence in the future. As to immigration, as to which there should not be greater discrimination, he had full confidence in the power of Canada and its institutions to assimilate the people of all nationalities. Nevertheless he appreciated the fact that we should be assisted to bring in a larger proportion of British immigrants.

Mr. Foster to the Front.

Mr. Foster, beginning his reply, went on to point out that for six or seven years there had been a steady increase of revenue, but this process was now ceasing and there was not very much to be hoped for on the present basis. The word of caution which had been uttered by the Minister of Finance in this respect deserved much more than alluded to—it deserved to be translated into a principle by the Government from this very moment. As to the surplus, this was when all going well. Sir Libeals questioned the right of any Government to have a surplus. The Minister of Finance had alluded to the surplus as magnificent. It was magnificent; it was by no means moderate. It might be viewed from three very different standpoints. If you leave out certain items, the surplus would be so much. If you charged to capital certain items which the Minister frankly admitted should be so charged, you would have another kind of surplus. If you did neither of these things you would have a third surplus. It had been said that unfriendly critics objected to any money being declared until all the expenditure of the Government were met. The Minister of Finance dissented from that view. Mr. Foster also dissented from that view, but only on condition that a strict and definite line should be drawn between capital expenditure and the expenditure out of the revenue for the year. If each were kept properly and adhered to it was possible to make a distinction. That was not done by the Government. The distinction between capital and current expenditure had been radically changed by the present Government so that now it was not possible to arrive clearly at either.

Not Chargable to Capital.

Mr. Foster held that bounties should not be charged to capital account. If the Government undertook to build a railway the cost was an item chargable to capital account, at the moment it was built and in operation the capital account should be closed and the maintenance and betterment should come out of income year by year, and not be placed against the revenue of the road. The Finance Minister had approved of the saving of interest charges on the debt; and would have the House believe he had been hamstrung by the wonderful management of this wonderful Government. All these had contributed to this result. Other loans practically were a blight and a curse and had fallen now, and such was the condition of the money market that it was possible to take these loans up and substitute money borrowed at three and two and a half per cent.

More Juggling of Figures.

For 1904-1905, the estimated revenue expenditure was estimated at $70,250,000, and the receipts at $71,- 250,000. This left about $9,000,000 more than was anticipated. Against that would the surplus have been if the proper distinguishing line had been observed. There should be added to this estimated expenditure $12,500,- 000 capital expenditure, and $4,000,000 subsidies to railways and bounties to industries. The actual deficit would then would diminish to a deficit of $3,500,- 000, or when this year's figures are taken out a deficit of $1,500,000.

The expenditure for the past year was over four million dollars more than the preceding year, and the estimated increase showed an extraordinary departure for the present year. The Finance Minister should there should be no cause for alarm, but business men were losing confidence, and what Government used statesmen might well use also. It would have been well if the Government had completed reasonable economy in view of the state of the country, and the large and still future obligations.

"Now frankly in all this is, I am afraid," said Mr. Foster, "that each year's surplus grows less, and as a law unto itself, each makes its own estimate, pushing on with a single eye to the main expenditure and taking sufficiently into account the work of the whole of the year, and the whole expenditure which it is entailing upon the country."

As to the Intercolonial.

But more than that, he took the salient assertion of the Minister of Railways that he did not consider it his duty to see that we would not be a deficit on the Intercolonial. It was a railroad built for the defence of Canada and for but here was a Minister piling up deficits on it. He was the hewer in the public till for capital expenditures, "As to the tariff, what shall I say? he continued. "Is there a sound scheme, which our country requires? I have never builded for themselves, in which they have installed their gods and their idols. Is there a sound scheme? Here we shall come and worship?"

Mr. Foster went on to point out that these one-time apostles of free trade had now become the high priests. He was the pie plus ultra of protectionists, he was more and plus dumber than dummy. Mr. Foster also pointed out that in 1896 the total expenditure was $36 per head per year, to-day it was $12 per head per annum.

Despatcher Has Been Dismissed.

Toronto, July 7.—David Kennedy, a C. P. R. despatcher at this point has been discharged for holding up a train which was carrying Sir Thomas Shaughnessy. He was served the railway for over 20 years, and Kennedy's reason for his dismissal is not owing to his fault, but because he was one of the leaders in the recent increases in salary. His reinstatement will be asked for.

Volunteers Win Bisley Match by Two Points.

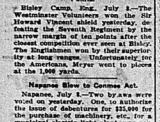

Bisley Camp, Eng., July 5.—The Westminster Volunteers, under Sir Howard Vincent abided yesterday, defeating the Seventh Regiment by the narrow margin of ten points after the closest competition ever seen at Bisley. The Englishmen won by their superior first at long range. Unfortunately for the Americans, Meyer went to pieces at the 1,000 yards.

Napanee Blow to Cornmee Act.

Napanee, July 5.—Two by-laws were voted on yesterday. One, to authorize the issue of debentures for $25,000 for the purchase of machinery, etc., for a municipal electric light plant, was carried almost unanimously, the vote being 287 for and 37 against.

The second by-law related to the matter of whether the plants, when installed, would be run by a board of commissioners or not. The vote was in favor of commissioners by about the same margin.

Thus the citizens of Napanee are from the Commee Act, and have their first blow in favor of municipal ownership.

Citizens will find envelopes printed in four different designs, with announcement of the Old Boys' Reunion dates, on sale at The Intelligencer Office at 10c per package. tf

A Mutiny of Our Own Exists

Twenty-Four of Crew of Dominion Cruiser Canada Leave.

Vow they Will Not Return to the Ship, and Alleging Treatment "Like Dogs"—Will Government Test of Fast Transport of the Virginian's Mail Have to be Abandoned?—What the Men Say.

Halifax, July 5.—A state of mutiny exists on the Dominion Government cruiser Canada. Twenty-four of the crew refused duty yesterday, and at 12.30 o'clock left the ship in a body.

On Thursday, the arrest of three men, charged with absenting themselves without leave, took place, and their sentence in terms of imprisonment—2 months, 2 months, and three weeks, and the others to two weeks each, precipitated matters.

Captain Distilled.

The men who left the ship are signalmen, cooks, seamen, stokers and clerks. One and all positively declare that they will not sail in the Canada under any ship commanded by Capt. Knowlton. None of the other officers have put themselves distilled.

Dissatisfaction commenced on the Atlantic's arrival at the West Indies in February, through the ship being put on board short leave. It is also claimed by the Halifax men that the captain has refused to grant short shore leave on arrival at Halifax, but has kept the vessels, etc. The men claim the forecastle leaks, water runs through the deck, and on their hammocks, and they have to sleep in the wet. Also that the stoves are put on lockers and tables. The blankets and bedding of the men shipped here last January have never been changed, and several men who came from England in the vessel claim their bedding has changed once only since August. They also allege that the provisions are being weighed out to feed cooks of less uncomfortable.

Can't Get New Crew.

In addition to this, the men have not been paid in full for three months. When they walked on shore they left on board the ship the officers, only one cook, one fireman, two sailors, the sentry, stewards and engineers. They allege that these men have signed on for a month to stick to the crew in whatever step is taken.

The Canada was to intercept the Virginian, with the mails, in order to have the mail run to Montreal. Whether this action of the men will have any effect on it is not known, but efforts being made last night to pick up a new crew were not meeting with success.

STILL AFLOAT.

Knisz Petersblume Unreported For a Day, But Black Sea Fleet Is Hot on Her Trail.

St. Petersburg, July 5.—According to the latest reports the Kniaz Potemkine has escaped her pursuers and is still at large in the Black Sea with the torpedo boat destroyer Smetlivy and the Black Sea fleet hot on her trail. There is little doubt that she is heading for Poti or Batoum, but no despatches from either place had been received up to 2 o'clock this morning. Advices received by the Associated Press indicate that the mutiny is increasing in the Caucasus, where the turbulent elements are varied over reports regarding the condition of the fleet.

To Take or Destroy.

Odessa, July 5.—Vice-Admiral Chouknin has telegraphed the Governor-General of Odessa that the Black Sea fleet has been ordered to capture or destroy the Kniaz Potemkine.

Theodosia Protested Now.

Theodosia, July 5.—A Russian warship has arrived to protect the town. The inhabitants, who refused while the Kniaz Potemkine was in port, are reforming.

Investigating Mutiny.

Schastopol, July 5.—A naval magistrate is investigating the causes of the mutiny on board the battleship Potemkin. One hundred and fifty sailors of the Perout has been imprisoned in the fortress here, and the others are still on board.

Linevitch Has Trouble.

London, July 5.—The Daily Mail's correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Tokio says that Gen. Linevitch has sentenced several Russian officers to death for circulating seditious circulars and on the authority of the press correspondent at Shanghai and Nagasaki, Japan, asserts that all Poles and Jews in the Russian army are seditious and are constantly surrendering so as to enjoy a pleasant captivity as prisoners of war.

SHIPBUILDER IS LOST IN RUSSIA.

New York Friends of Lewis Nixon Are Now Getting Anxious.

New York, July 5.—Failure to receive answers to cablegrams sent to Lewis Nixon, head of the Forth Ammunition Shipbuilding Co., Engineering, who went to Russia to reconstruct the navy for that country has caused apprehension among Mr. Nixon's friends in America, especially as it is pointed out that he has completed several warships that may be used against the mutineers.

In St. Petersburg it was announced Thursday that the shipbuilder's silence was probably due to the rigid censorship maintained there and not to any danger to himself.

Four hundred fighting vessels of all classes, it is reported are to be built under the personal direction of the American shipbuilder in as short a time as possible. He went to Schastopol June 1.

Boy Drowned at Elora.

Elora, July 5.—While swimming in the Grand River at Elora last evening Ernest Card, aged 14, years of age, was drowned. Another small boy who was with him gave the alarm, and by the time the body was recovered though every effort was made to restore life.

TELEPHONE DECISION.

Bell Company Held to Have Right to Compensation.

Ottawa, July 5.—Judge Killam of the railway commission yesterday handed out the decision in the long-argued controversy between the towns of Port Arthur and Fort William and the C. P. R. and the Bell Telephone Co., concerning the right of the municipalities to install public-owned telephones in the railway stations, although the Bell Co. has an exclusive contract for the privilege.

The judge holds that the Bell Co. is entitled to compensation for the loss it will sustain for the towns of Port Arthur and Fort William, respectively. The position of the railway company was different.

SUBMARINE RAISED; ALL ALIVE.

Entombed Sailors Were Kept Provided With Food.

Paris, July 5.—The ministry of marine issued a communication this evening, saying that the combined efforts of French and German vessels and tugs succeeded yesterday afternoon in bringing to the surface the submarine boat Farfadet, which sank Thursday morning at the entrance to the port of Bizi Abdallah, Tunis.

Water, provisions and fresh air were supplied to the members of the unfortunate craft, who are safe. The submarine was being slowly towed into the shallow water, when some of the cables snapped, the boat remaining in a perpendicular position, held by a cable from a French tug.

Town to Sue a Doctor.

St. Thomas, July 5.—Dr. Barnhart A. K. Cameron, acting on behalf of the village council, Port Stanley, yesterday issued a writ against Dr. English of London, claiming $25,000 damages. Statements alleged to have been made regarding Dr. Ellis's water supply and on behalf of Dr. Metherell. Port Stanley's water supply, are alleged to have been that little or nothing had been done in purifying the water.

Abducted Girl Returns.

Toronto, July 5.—Bessie Hopkins has returned. Word came in from California last week that the girl, Bessie Hopkins, for whose abduction Fred Westwood of Caledon Township is in jail on bail, had been returned to her home through the efforts of County Constable Glassford. She refuses to account for her absence. The case against Westwood will still be pressed, for the girl was only 15 years of age.

Pat Crowe Robs Cars.

Omaha, July 5.—Pat Crowe, the Cudahy kidnaper, held up and robbed two street cars on the Council Bluffs-Omaha Line on Tuesday night, taking every cent of the day's collections from the conductors, and making his escape. The police of Omaha and Council Bluffs yesterday acknowledged that the hold-up was perpetrated by the redoubtable Pat.

Judge Quimet Won't Take Risk.

Montreal, July 5.—Judge Quimet decided yesterday that he had jurisdiction in the matter of granting Messrs. Gaynor and Greene their liberty, but he had to use his discretion and he thought it better not to run the risk of allowing the prisoners out on bail, thus avoiding the risk of having to find the accused again. He consequently declined to accept bail.

Shot In Slave Hands.

Kingston, July 5.—During the sham battle on Barriefield Heights yesterday Trooper Anderson, D. Squadron, 4th Hussars, Prescott, was shot in the fleshy part of the thigh. Quite a serious wound resulted. The rifle was in the hands of a comrade, and he accidentally discharged it, the wad of the blank cartridge causing the wound.

Drowned in a Tub.

Brantford, July 5.—The 14 months old son of Warren Cockshutt, Brantford Township, was drowned in a tub of water on Wednesday at the family homestead. There was comparatively little water in the tub, but the babe was drowned. Before assistance arrived life was extinct.

Sweden Takes Precautions.

Stockholm, July 5.—The Associated Press has high military authority for the statement that Sweden is taking precautionary measures on the frontier to offset the reported threatening attitude of Norway. The Swedish treasury yesterday borrowed $4,500,000 to pay extraordinary expenditures.

Score of Firemen Burned.

New York, July 5.—Upwards of a score of firemen were seriously burned or overcome by smoke last night during a fire which destroyed the upper floors of a seven storey factory building at Hudson street and Ninth ave nue.

Hamilton's $20,000 Fire.

Hamilton, July 5.—Fire early yesterday in connection with the Hoefner Heating Co. building, which affairs are in the courts, that could be burned out, caused a loss of $20,000, which the loss will probably be $15,000 or $20,000. The cause is unknown.

10,000 Hear Chamberlain.

London, July 5.—(C.A.P.)—Joseph Chamberlain who celebrated his 69th birthday to-day, addressed ten thousand persons in the Alexandra Park to-night on the question of tariff reform. The Duke of Argyll presided.

Village Burns.

Jamestown, N. T., July 5.—Fire broke out in Panama early yesterday, literally destroying the business section of the village. The loss is roughly estimated at $100,000, with not more than 25 per cent. insurance.

Second Tunnel Through Alps.

Brigue, Switzerland, July 5.—The piercing of the second tunnel through the Simplon was completed during the night. The first tunnel through the Simplon was completed February 24.

Smashes Heaviest Armor Clad.

New York, July 5.—That a 12-inch shell loaded with only a small charge of dunnite, the world's most effective explosive, will crumple in the side of the heaviest armor-clad vessel though the shell fall short of its mark by 20 feet has just been demonstrated at the beginning of a series of tests at the Government proving grounds at Sandy Hook.

What They Think in Japan.

Ottawa, July 5.—Japanese papers to hand contain interesting comments on the Exclusion Act of British Columbia, and the disallowance thereof by the Dominion authorities. They express the hope that it will bring about closer relations of friendship and increased trade between Canada and Japan. Japanese immigrants are advised to conduct themselves in such a manner that people may recognize them as being worthy of friendship, not as coolie to be treated or despised."

Dog Kills 87 Chickens.

Welland, July 5.—A dog got into H. McCallum's barn between the other night and destroyed 87 fancy chickens worth over $150.

All Satisfactory.

Paris, July 7.—Premier Rouvier yesterday informed the Council of Ministers that the Franco-German negotiations on the subject of Morocco were making satisfactory progress, adding that a definite agreement was expected after a brief delay.

14 Miners Killed.

Anderlues, Belgium, July 5.—Fourteen miners were killed and a number injured by an explosion in a colliery here yesterday. The explosion was caused by fire damp.

Progress is the activity of today and the assurance of tomorrow.—Emerson.

Publish the Laws!

A contemporary has the cookness to remind people at this torrid season that a referendum in election is to be the order of next month. Well, we are with a few passed at last session of the Ontario Legislature, which, by the way, is dead. Even Press, many persons addicted to sleighing had not heard of this important fact, and have been spared a burden of future trouble by the timely information.

The sleigh returns alluded to return to the width between the runners, which is to be four feet. This law is to be effective from May 24th next, so any county shall pass a by-law exempting each county from the operation of the Act.

The sleigh-runner bill forms part of the Statute Amendment Act, and it is promised will come as a surprise to the community.

But if it is a new law, and a valid one, why should it come as a surprise to any one? It is a maxim of the courts that ignorance of the law affords no man a plea." But how can the general public know what laws are passed unless they are printed in a way to reach it? Here is a serious defect in our methods to keep pace with those of the neighboring States.

In Ontario the statutes are collect, in a volume of which a few hundred number are printed. The magistrates are furnished with copies, and the legal profession, which is not numerous, but the people at large are allowed to grope in the dark respecting the laws passed from year to year.

It is different with our Republican neighbors. The enactments of the State Legislatures are officially printed in newspapers of large circulation. The people are not allowed to excuse themselves before a magistrate with a plea of ignorance of the law. All the laws are laid before them in black and white. The newspaper subscriber may cut out the laws for them and preserve it for his perpetual guidance.

It is a very sensible plan, and one of the progressive ideas among our neighbors which might be adopted in Canadian provinces with benefit to the public.

TIMELY TOPICS.

SONG FOR THE UNSUCCESSFUL.

(Milwaukee Sentinel.)

He worked and he hustled from morning till night,
He used his best efforts, to tried with all might,
But somehow he couldn't succeed.
He bore up with fortitude under the stress,
Whenever he failed he tried over his character stood without over a stain —
But somehow he couldn't succeed,

He bent to his task in the world with a will,
But somehow he couldn't succeed,
The angels that we covet to him were but ill,
But somehow he couldn't succeed.
He plodded along in the very same way
Day in and day out, with but little to say;
He bent to his labors, gave little to play—
He used his best efforts, he tried
He answered a gibe or a jest with a smile,
But somehow he couldn't succeed.
His heart always generous, though he was poor
But somehow he couldn't succeed.
Whenever a thorn pierced his flesh on the road
He shut his teeth tight and shifted his load;
He plucked not nor reaped from the seeds that he sowed
And somehow he couldn't succeed.

He was one, only one, from the million
Who somehow could never succeed.
He travelled his path through a cold, dreary world,
And never could never succeed.
But he used his best efforts in playing the part,
The burden he carried oft made the tears start—
And yet through it all a song welled from his heart:
The man who could never succeed.

"There," said an alderman yesterday afternoon to an intelligencer reporter, "is a committee, and a city street department is managed. Watch those five corporation that cars spread that one load of gravel." The intelligencer man did watch, and in a few minutes that gravel was spread and the five men rested on their shovels doing nothing—waiting for the next load.

"Now," said the alderman, "there is a sixth man, an overseer, who is supposed to oversee. Now I am informed was Mr. McCurdy's assistant. We asked what he did and were informed that he watched the others work. We were then asked if we did not think two or three

Naturally, from what we saw, we were compelled to think that that section of the alderman was good. As we parted the alderman remarked: "That is the way the street department is managed and the taxpayers have to stand the shot."

The girls at Atlantic City are making life miserable for one of the Ocean princes who is visiting that place. They dawdle in the surf where they can't reach him!

It is said in Montreal that the Grand Trunk and New Railways have made a deal in order to protect Chicago and New York, due to change of "gilded" and "fat" rural trade. That will probably not affect rates to Canadian points.

First tourist—Breakfast in a dungeon! Horrible enough; don't you think?

Second tourist—Yes, but I made up my mind to rid myself of the necessity as soon as possible.—Detroit Free Press.

THE ADMIRAL AND THE DOG.

The late Gen. H. V. Boynton died. Gilded dog. He said one day in Washington:

"I know a lady who always receives a present from her husband's admiral, spaniel, pampered and spoiled, on the each birthday. An old admiral, a fat-lipped, fat-jowled, fat-bellied old person, and the spaniel took a dislike to him. It began to bark and growl and show its teeth, and the old fellow threw from its velvet cushion on the sofa and began to make little feints and passes at the dog, admiringly.

"He, as he talked, held his cane in his hand, and kept the tail of his eye on the intended little beast. He growled and yappings redoubled, and its facial-like yawpings at his legs increased. For half an hour one afternoon, and the spaniel took a dislike to him. It began to bark and growl and show its teeth, and the old fellow threw from its velvet cushion on the sofa and began to make little feints and passes at the dog, admiringly. Jaged

BRAINS AND DRESS.

The Theory That Good Clothes Are Essential to Success.

"The well dressed woman is always a woman of keen intelligence and brain power," argued a well known society leader at a popular woman's club recently. "No senseless doll," she continued, "knows how to dress. She may dress gaily rainment, spend a fortune on a gown so utterly inappropriate to the occasion that one can only feel an intense pity for her; but no one would ever dream of laying the burden of her ill attained good form and good taste at the door of the whole of her sex.

"The woman who dresses well, in conformity with her age, her work and her position in society, choosing neither extreme of the prevailing form of art, striking a happy medium, is the woman who has brains and uses them to make a good selection from the fashions of the day."—London Express.

And there is no doubt of the truth of this statement, for it is the well groomed, suitably gowned woman who attains success, whether in business or social life.

The age of the blue stocking has passed, and nowadays the woman who dresses unbecomingly, through choice and not for the sake of economy is regarded as either mentally weak or as seeking some eccentric form of self advertisement, which is but another phase of ungainable vanity.

In the commercial world the dowdy, insignificant woman, even if she has mental ability, is at a discount when compared with the well dressed woman, confident and smiling, with bright capacity written all over her comely face.

The latter has learned an essential fact—that one of the first laws of good clothes—and therefore with genuine brain power reasons for necessity of making the most of all her good points. —London Express.

HOT WATER BAGS.

How to Care For Three Household Articles Without Trouble.

Hot water bags are not cheap things to buy and are rather easily put out of order, but this is how to take care of them in three carelessness or not taking proper care of the bag: A hasty and an irate rubber bag that had got stuck together, and did not know what to do to get it right, as the bag was otherwise perfectly good. The reason of the sticking is that the bag had been put away with no air in it. When not using a bag drain out the water, let it hang bottom side up for a little while, then take it down and blow a little air into it, just enough to keep the inside from coming together, as it would if no air were in, in which case the bag is quite sure to be ruined in pulling it apart. If you happen to have a bag in this condition put into it some hot water, with a few drops of ammonia. Let it remain a few minutes, then with a thin, dull edged piece of wood try to separate the adhering sides very carefully.

In preparing the hot water bag for use quite boiling water should not be put into it, and neither should it be more than half filled. After the water is in it, before putting in the stopper, carefully press out the superfluous air. This makes the bag softer, as it is relieved of the pressure the steam makes. Never fold a rubber bag after it has once been used. A flannel bag for covering the rubber is very useful and very easily made.—Washington Star.

WOMEN AND CLUB LIFE.

Times When Outside Influences Will Freshen Up a Matron.

Judicious intermissions of domesticity are refreshing to women and give them fresh spirits and ideas for quietly then to make home happier than ever when they get back to it. Moreover, there comes a time of life when some of a woman's many years of home duties are largely accomplished. If she marries at twenty-five, her admirable feat of reclaiming the world is apt to be all done in ten years, and by the time she is forty her children have usually reached an age when she can take her ease in her own house without much risk of disaster. She has few duties that are more important at that age to keep her busy than, I fear, Household spinning is gone. There is always sewing to be done as a rule, but always daily tasks to be directed or performed, but hemstitching after this age of ready made are certainly less absorbing than they were a hundred years ago. A clever housewife, especially a mature woman, may stick too close at home for the best interests of her family, and in so far as a club or two annum and add her mind and give her society and new things to talk about they are not at all unlikely to do her good.—Harper's Bazar.

THE HOME DOCTOR.

Try a few drops of spirits of turpentine on a cube of loaf sugar for a hacking cough.

For a felon, or "run around," use streamonium ointment, a preparation of opium or Jamestown weed.

The fire can be drawn from a burn by applying cloths wet in strong alum water. It will also relieve the pain.

To stop hiccoughs, when the attack comes on press the pulse as hard as possible and hiccoughs will immediately cease.

Never drop anything into the ear unless it is to relieve suffering, and never use more than anything but a syringe and warm water for cleansing the ears.

If the eyes are strained or tired, try with sleeplessness or fine work apply to the lids salt water, and rest with closing water. Use this as hot as can be borne, such relief will be felt in half an hour.

Keeping a Desk in Order.

Many women could give men "cards and lessons" in keeping a writing desk. Most women of society have their own business desks, in which they spend a part of the day transacting the affairs of their household and their interest. Mrs. Clarence Mackay, the rich New York society woman, is said to be a model in keeping her desk in good trim. She never allows any one to touch it. She has a place for everything, and the air of supreme order that prevails is shown by the fact that hangs a panel of mauve silk, her favorite color, which has two capacious pockets, one of which is for "Society Week" they are labeled. Here are kept all the notes, invitations and other papers that demand her immediate attention. The panel is constantly emptied, passains, and never did these symbols of thought find themselves in more congenial company.

Sardine Croquettes.

After drawing all oil off fill a cup with sardines from which skin and bones have been removed. Cook half a cupful of boiled state bread in half a cupful of milk, adding the beaten yolk of an egg, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, the chopped yolk of three eggs (sifted) and a dash of paprika with the sardines and mix thoroughly, shape into oval, dip in beaten egg and sifted crumbs, and fry in deep fat.—Pilgrim.

The Hatpin.

"It ought to be possible for an ingenious person to invent some more dangerous method of fixing on the hat than the present hatpin," writes a correspondent. "Not only is the hatpin often fixed on a windy day the terror-rage on the road, but in the case of the large and flapping headgear is entirely useless. It is all wrong as to and causes of headache of which most women complain after a buffeting by the elements."

NERVOUSNESS A CALAMITY.

Many have been the remedies that are beyond, treat an attack of the nervous headache. Nervousness should be considered it will soon pass away. But to many such remedies are a calamity. Only one remedy will cure nervousness, and that is nerve strengthener that acts through the blood. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the one you eat plenty. This fills the blood with the elements that the inner cells. Energy and strength is instilled into the nerves and the whole system. LISSAJOUS' CURVES.

The Salt Artist and the Pretty Design—It Will Freeze Again.

Some very curious natural curved designs may be made with sand or salt and a tuning fork.

Get a piece of wood about three inches in diameter, and in the center of it make a hole large enough for the fine end of a tuning fork. Fasten three pieces of stout twine near the edge of the wood on disk equally distant from each other, so that when their other ends are united in a knot, as at A in the picture, the runnel will hang in a balanced position in the wooden rest while held in the hand by the knot.

THE SALT ARTIST AT WORK.

Then on two hooks in a frame, as shown in the picture, placed about four feet apart, fasten two strings, and let them be united with the other three at the top. When this has all been done, the runnel, which may be of glass or of tin, should hang with its center as close to the table as possible.

Now remove the runnel and make a knot in the strings at about one-fourth the length above the runnel, as at B. Replacing the runnel, hold your finger at the bottom of the tube and pour it full of sand or salt, and your salt artist is ready to draw.

Hold the runnel off at one corner of the table and let it go, when it will swing off in a curve, the sand or salt marking the line of its motion. Now fill the runnel again and, holding it at the opposite corner of the table, let it go, when it will duplicate the first curve from this new corner. If you do this from all four corners you will have a pretty symmetrical design.

If you will now remove the funnel, untie the knot at B and make the knot at some other point, the curves will be different, and you may make an infinite variety of designs by starting from different positions on the table.

You may think that this is great fun, but so it is, but it is more than fun, as the curves really represent a discovery made by a Frenchman, and they are called after him, Lissajous' curves.

The Three Sieves.

"Oh, mamma!" cried little Blanche Philpott, as I heard such a tale about Edith Howard! I did not think she could be so naughty. One!"

"My dear," interrupted Mrs. Philpott, "before you say anything it will see if your story will pass the three sieves."

"What does that mean, mamma?" inquired Blanche.

"I will explain it. In the first place, is it true?"

"I suppose so. I got it from Miss Brown, and she is a great friend of Edith's."

"And does she show her friendship by telling tales about her in every place, though you can prove it to be true?" asked Mrs. Philpott.

"I do not mean to be unkind, but I don't believe it is. I should not like Edith to speak of me as I have of her."

"And is it necessary?"

"No, of course, mamma; there was no need for me to mention it at all."

"Then put a bridle on your tongue. If we can't speak well, speak not at all."

Names of Vehicles.

The word carriage comes from the old Latin word "carrus," which means a cart.

Cabriolet, commonly shortened to cab, comes from a French word which means a goat like leap or caper. The carriage is so named on account of its lofty springs.

Omnibus is from the Latin and means "for all."

Chaise is from the French word for chair.

Jobby is so called because the driver is regarded as a sulky fellow, otherwise a hobby-horse is prefer to ride alone.

Coupe is from the French word "to cut." It is given to the vehicle because it looks like a coach with its front cut off.

What the Robin Told.

How do robins build their nest? Robin Redbreast told me.

First a wisp of yellow hay It in a bowl-shaped they lay. Then some shreds of downy fluff, Warm and soft, to make it stuff. Wetness, next, a sweet, sweet song, This way, that way, all day long. That's what robins do, I'm told, Robin Redbreast told me.

Where do robins hide their nest? Robin Redbreast told me.

It's among the leaves, you see, Where the sunbeams rarely creep. Long before the leaves are gold, Long before the leaves are cold, Bright eyes watch the nest to see Baby robins safe shall be. That's what robins do, I'm told, Robin Redbreast told me.

AGNES C LAUT

A Successful Young Canadian Novelist

Of the Canadian novelists who have won reputation and recognition during the last few years, nearly half of the number have been women, and She was born in Winnipeg in 1872, and received her education in her native province, Manitoba. University her health proved so delicate that she was ordered to pack up her school books and go out into the wild. She was ordered to pack Selkirks, to see what these noble mountains of Canada could do for her. There, in a life-giving atmosphere, where every breath is a natural tonic, she rode and walked her way to health, defying the decrees and prophesies of the mountains, material for her last book, "Lords of the North."

Miss Laut was the first woman to invade the mining camps of the Canadian Rockies and to study the life there at close range. Her style, graphic and terse, her subject were not aged, and editors of mining journals, who had been accustomed to prosaic, practical articles with statistics as their chief charm, were at first inclined to scoff at the "rot" which the "female" sent them. But Miss Laut found him in these camps, uncontaminated by civilization, she pays high tribute when she says: "There I learned to appreciate the chivalry and courtesy of a class receiving small credit for such traits, and this, though I was entirely alone, without one particle of protection or accompaniment." On the travels for literary material Miss Laut has had many interesting experiences, among them an eight weeks' trip in a government mailboat along the coast northward from St. Johns. he made many later visits to the Selkirks, where the natural free man from the trammels of social convention appealed strongly to her.

Best her later books, "Heralds of Empire," "The Story of the Trapper" and the pathfinders of the West," Miss Laut has written strong articles on politics & social questions; subjects rarely handled by women and then only very well with clear-cut, clearness and force which seem to per-taste wt vitality everything she writes. Her contributions to the New York Bookman New York "Evening Post," the "Review of Reviews" and the country are a virility unusual from the pen of a woman, and unsupplied by none as Miss Laut.

Entered according to Act of the Parliament of Canada, in the Year 1905, by W. G. Black, at the Department of Agriculture.

Canada for Canadians

We have the grandest country in the world and a great future awaits us if we only practice loyal and patriotic. Years ago thousands of our young men left the country for U. S., and to-day they are rushing back as the result of generous land and patriotic the country. Canadians should learn to patronize home products. Foot Elm is a Canadian Remedy and the whole world cannot produce a better article for tired, swollen, sweaty, tender feet. Send stamp for particulars of our $100.00 in prizes.

The First English Lighthouse.

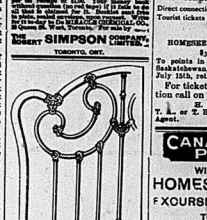

It is to the Romans, who left so many marks of their presence in England, that Britons owe the first lighthouse. This was, and is still, the tower on the south of the keep of Dover castle. This is remarkable as the only remaining specimen of Roman work in the castle and as the earliest piece of regular masonry now existing in Great Britain. It consists of a casing of flints and tufa, with bonding courses of large Roman tiles filled with smaller stones. Its shape is octagonal without, and square inside, the inner room measuring fourteen feet and the walls being ten feet thick. Repaired again and again, it is believed to be one of the oldest government storehouse.—London Chronicle.

Keep Serene.

When you come to think of it, most of us do lose a kind temper keeping ourselves in order, temper, nerves, selfesteem and feelings, snubbings and desire all insulting to have a hearing. Boil down steps wisdom and orders control. Of course there are the unselfish, intellectual people to whom self service means nothing, and who they know of the fight of the other passionate half, for health and discomfort are the fruits of the battle. Keep serene, say, "I shall control myself and be a cheerful philosopher," and all will go well.

Ives' Brass Beds
give brightness and dignity to a room.

Many artistic home furnishers have adopted the metal bed instead of the cumbrous and sometimes unsanitary wooden bed. A metal bed adds grace and beauty to a room, imparts an atmosphere of dignity often times lacking to secure with a wooden bed. Ives' beds are light and graceful and if it is an Ives bed it will be handsome and artistic in design.

Ives beds are always beautifully designed because Ives artists are the most proficient metal designers in America. They have made Ives Brass Bed for high class metal bank and hotel fittings.

Ask to see an Ives bed and you will like it.

TO GET A

PEANUT or "Salt In your taste" it is to get something which is good to eat. Peanuts as nothing else can, but a peanut in order to be roasted right must retain just enough of its natural oil to make it tasty, and yet must not be overdone. Peanuts have been roasted to suit the public taste for four years from this store, and we still have the knack of roasting a peanut just right. Try them and be convinced. Something new, in our Candy Island taffy. Try it.

Sunshine Furnace

DOUBLE FEED DOORS

Just about the meanest thing a furnace can have is a dinky little door.

Ever have one? Hit the edge as often as the hole? One has to be an expert stoker to shovel coal into some furnaces. If you're not an expert you'll get as much on the floor as in the furnace.

The Sunshine Furnace is equipped with a good, big door. You can put your shovel in and drop the coal just where it is wanted—no trouble, no taking aim, no missing, no scattering or annoyance.

Everything about the Sunshine Furnace is on the same scale of thoughtfulness.

DUST IN OUR EYES.

We at Times Collect Curious Things Without Looking For Them.

Few people are aware, says Fred W. Saxby in the Strand Magazine, that we are all constantly "collecting" curious things without looking for them.

In the very act of looking up at the floating spectacle of a fiery orb the reader with the big, wide open eyes may easily record in one of his eyrie a tiny sphere from afar that was produced in a glowing streak of light like the letter "s" in reverse.

Meteoric dust is ever falling and upon all parts of the earth's surface. Little spheres have been found upon the decks of ships far out at sea, in all the deserts of the earth and on the tops of snow clad mountains. Dredging hundreds of feet in the silent depths of the ocean give testimony to their universal presence. The particles all contain iron, and are easily collected by the magnet from the rest of any exclusive or other dust exposed directly to the sky.

Seafarers are sometimes pelted with dust of quite a different kind, composed of the microscopic flinty skeletons of bewitching little animals called diatoms.

These tiny plants live in both salt and fresh water and once in a monsoon number in some localities. Occasionally water ceases and these myriad areas dry up, and the flinty shells of the diatoms which grew there are blown about as dust. There are several instances on record of distance ocean dust falls at sea. During the thickest part of the fall the sailors have experienced much pain in their eyes, the latter being probably caused by the little flinty shells.

SECRETARY SEWARD.

His Influence Upon the Foreign Policy of This Country.

The importance of Secretary Seward's influence in the domestic affairs of the United States during Johnson's administration has probably been exaggerated, but it would be hard to exaggerate the importance of what he achieved and of what he initiated in the early portion of his ministry. His chief, occupied as he was with fierce controversies with other members, found, we may well suppose, but little time for foreign relations. He does not appear to have interfered with policies which were already adopted or to have initiated any new policies of his own. Seward must therefore be held responsible in a degree somewhat unusual for the conduct of the delicate negotiations, involving the gravest issues of peace or war, which the war gave rise to. It was he who first presented America to Europe in that attitude of conscious strength which the thorough establishment of peace at last has enabled us to take. It was he who reasserted effectively, yet without any suggestion of our traditional stand in reference to the Latin republics to the south of us. It was he who, facing westward, accomplished an expansion of our system which a region never contemplated until his day by those who guided our destinies and turned our thoughts also on the shores of the Pacific as a field for American trade and American influence.—William Garrott Brown in Atlantic.

The Pole Star.

We will try to give you some idea at the distance that separates us from the pole star. As you know, light travels at the rate of about 186,000 miles a second—more than seven times round the earth while you are saying "John Robinson" slowly. Well, suppose that a ray of light, traveling at this terrific speed of a million miles in less than five and a half seconds, had started from the polar star on its journey to the earth at the moment of your birth that particular ray will not reach you until you are about one hundred miles beyond your thirty-sixth and consequently your birthday. When you look on the pole star you see it not as it is today, but as it was about fifty years ago.—Tit-Bits.

An Australian Treat.

A treat in an Australian wilderness is described by Cornelius Stephen: "On our way down, of course, it was necessary to stop at McLeod's camp to get something to clear the breathing tubes. There was one great Scotchman who ordered a pint of rum, and I asked him what his poison was. 'Weel,' he answered in his deep 'r,' 'I had a tin of pineapple. Now, the price of preserved fruit at that time and in that part was something unheard of, so you sit up, so that Scotchman scored."

The Brass Band.

"Georgey!"

"Yes, dear?"

"Before we were married you once said you'd rejoyce if anything—"

"Eyes, perhaps I did."

"No, dear, you said you. But it seems I misunderstood you. George, My wedding ring is making a black mark on my finger."

"I—I—I guess it's the weather, dear."

"No, it isn't. It's the brass you've got in it. Georgey, is it a positive fact that you've been playing a cornet all the time we've been engaged?"

"Yes, dear."

"Then you've been playing it to get me used to it. I'm positive it is a positive fact. Georgey, you're a deceiver. You've been playing a horn all the time and you've been playing it to get me used to it. Georgey, you're a fraud. You've been playing a horn all the time and you've been playing it to get me used to it

Good tea must be grown under proper conditions

Low, damp or swampy lands in a warm, humid climate produce tea of rank, rapid growth, coarse in texture, woody fibred, rudely flavored—makes a cup heavy, murky in color, rough-tasting—it is poor tea.

But the Indian and Ceylon teas used to make the Red Rose brand are grown on the high lands of India and the mountain sides of Ceylon.

These teas are grown in clear dry sunshine, they mature slowly, the leaves of the Ceylon teas are tender, delicate, finely flavored, but not strong.

The Indian teas thus grown are full bodied, richly flavored, smooth in texture, strong.

Such Indian and Ceylon teas combined in Red Rose Tea produce a cup of a rich rosy brown, strong and smooth—all the richness and strength of Indian, all the delicacy and fragrance of Ceylon teas—that "rich, fruity flavor which belongs alone to Red Rose Tea—more qualities of tea excellence than any Indian or brand of Ceylon alone can possess.

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

ADAM LLOYD COMMITTED.

Must Stand His Trial on the Charge of Murdering His Wife

Magistrate Flint Renders Judgment in this Important Case.

Mary interested spectators were present at the police court this morning for the purpose of hearing judgment given in the case of Adam Lloyd, who has a preliminary trial before Magistrate Flint on the charge of murdering his wife. His Worship did not keep the audience waiting for his decision.

This is a preliminary trial of Adam Lloyd charged with murder. It is my duty to decide that there is sufficient evidence to send the prisoner for trial—I do therefore commit the prisoner. Adam Lloyd for trial at this Division, next to stand at the bar of the Supreme Court of Judicature for Ontario, sitting at Belleville, on the Fifth day of September next, and that upon examination of the witnesses now before me, I find that there is sufficient evidence to put the prisoner on his trial—I do therefore commit the prisoner but we must have good men. It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a stuff of workmen above times larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen. .

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodeled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Benwood. It is a credit to the Benwood Methodists and to this house.

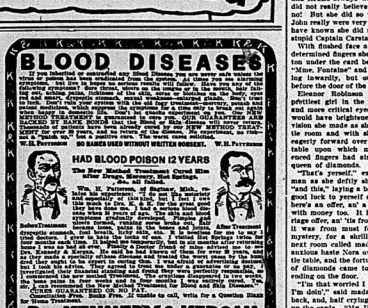

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 26th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Side Methodist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us and you will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—a further evidence that we make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

BIRD'S BREAD

QUEEN OF DIAMONDS

By MARGARET RICHARDS

Copyright, 1905, by E. M. Dunne

The usually cheery face of Mme. Fontaine, "palmist and card reader," was overcast. Even the invitingly clean little room where madame received the anxious seekers after wisdom shared in the prevailing gloom. A crudely drawn hand covered with cabalistic signs had become detached from the wall and lay unheeded in one corner; the cards by whose aid coming events were evoked were pushed carelessly aside. It was evident that misfortune had fallen upon this faithful priestess of the future.

Nora McCabe had access to been a resident of Seattle" for a year, was when Pat McCabe died (an event which the cards neglected to mention), leaving her with five little children, that Mme. Fontaine had sprung into existence. Having an average amount of quick Irish wit and more than an average understanding of human nature, Nora had prospered and as Mme. Fontaine she avoided tragedy and dealt mostly in romantic and glowing generalities.

But of late the fates had not shown madame the consideration due so faithful a follower. There had been a falling off in the number of people who came to explore the misty paths of the future under her expert guidance. Four of the children were too young to do much besides consume unlimited supplies of bread and butter, and the day before Jimmy, the eldest, had been brought home with a broken leg. In short, the outlook was serious.

"Though it isn't always by cea ex-pect to be havin' the luck," sighed Nora, stooping to pick up the hand that pointed a mutely protesting finger at her from the corner.

Quite unconscious of the radiant picture she made against her dull surrounding, a girl, tall, graceful, well made, came swiftly along the shabby street. If her courage almost failed her, she made no sign as she walked steadily on. All the girls had been to Mme. Fontaine. Had she not told Margaret Deane that she would be married within a year, and was not Margaret even now on her wedding journey? To be sure, she had told Louise Henderson the same thing, and there was not even an admirer in Lou's horizon; but then, every one makes mistakes sometimes, and Louise always was hopeless. She did not really believe in it, oh, dear, no! But she did so want to know if John really were very angry. He might have known she did not care for that stupid Captain Carstairs.

With flushed face and trembling but determined fingers she pressed the button under the card bearing the legend "Mme. Fontaine" and soon stood quaking inwardly, but outwardly serene, before the door of the modest little flat. Eleanor Robinson was called the prettiest girl in the Westchester set, and more critical eyes than madame's would have brightened at that radiant vision she made as she entered the little room and with shining eyes bent eagerly forward over the well known table upon which mediums and experienced fingers had already placed the queen of diamonds.

"That's herself," explained the woman as she deftly shuffled the cards, "and that's lyin' just where it is, "is good luck to yerself an' yer wish, an' here's an office, an' a folse after it in, with money too. It looks like a marriage close at the front—but what's it was from most forever remain a mystery, for a shrill voice from the next room called madame, and in her anxious haste Nora overturned the little table, and the fortunes of the queen of diamonds came to an ignominious ending on the floor.

"I'm that worried I don't know what I'm doin'," said madame as she came back, and, half crying, stooped to pick up the cards. "My Jimmy has his leg broke, an' I'm that afeard as soon as Mr. Chetwood sayin' his wages should be raised this Saturday comin'."

"Mr. Chetwood!" interrupted the girl in a strained voice. And madame's keen eyes noted the sudden return of color that flooded her face.

"Yes, miss," she returned, "Mr. Chetwood, the lawyer. It was a folse place for Jimmy, an' I'm that afeard it got into Mr. Chetwood's ways. An' now his leg's broke, an' no knowin' when he'll git around to his work again. Objectedly, and in spite of herself a tear splashed on the fortune-telling cards.

The girl rose. "I don't believe I care to have my fortune told today," she said nervously. "I—I've changed my mind, but I shall come to see you again," she added in a kinder voice and with sympathy. She took a bill from her bag and laid it on the table.

"Take these, too, for Jimmy," she said, lowering her head to cover her eyes. And with a smile and a quick little nod she was gone.

It was hours later that a tall, broad shouldered man knocked at madame's door and inquired for Miss McCabe. A few minutes later John Chetwood was holding Eleanor's quivering little hand and smiling down on the little freckled face that grinned back at him sheepishly.

"We cannot do without Jimmy, Mrs. McCabe," he said, "and I intend to depend on you to send him back as soon as possible." Then turning to Eleanor from his pocket and continued: "I want you to take good care of him. No! No! That's all right; you can't pay me back him. "You may pay it back when Jimmy is well," he added in a low voice, "tell my fortune." He laughed, good humoredly, looking quizzically at the bowed heads decorating the little room beyond.

Madame gasped. Her warm Irish heart was full of gratitude to the one who had been so good to her. If only she could do something for them!

He watched her with amusedt interest as she slowly spread out the cards on the little table.

"I've have success to yerself an' yer wife," she began in the time worn formula, "an' there's a light woman, the queen of hearts, close by she added, her face fastened on the cards.

John Chetwood never was back head and laughed delightedly. "I thought it was always a dark woman," he said. "She's tall and graceful, as yerself," Nora went on, "an' it's like one of the saints she is, with her sweet face xit' eyes as blue as—as the violets," she continued.

The quick start of surprise John Chetwood gave did not escape madame's shrewd eyes, and she went on rapidly:

"She love ye—there's something come between ye—but she loves ye. Never mind what it is—just be true to her; she's waitin' for ye. I see the weddin' cake."

John Chetwood rose abruptly. "That's a great fortune. Well, we have to take that, Mr. Jimmy," he said, but his laughter was forced, and the lines on his face deepened as he bent to light down the stairs.

He hesitated outside the shabby little flat. She lived to the north. A few blocks to the south his fiancee was waiting for him. He had tried to keep away from her. It was evident she cared for Carstairs, and he would keep his disappointment to himself and let no knowledge of it shadow her. What could that woman know about it? Nothing! Even though, about the violets. No; of course it didn't believe it, but he squared his shoulders and turned to the north.

The Human Nature Picture.

"You can talk all you want about the beauties of landscape pictures," said a man in the art store, "but a picture with the human interest in it that attracts the crowd. Put a human nature picture in a window with landscapes and it will be the only one noticed. Not long ago I noticed a number of small boys congregated in front of a window. They stayed so long I went out to see what was attracting them. It was a picture of two cowboys leaving a newly made grave on the prairie, one of them leading a horse with an empty saddle. Over the grave stood a dog. Finally one of the boys said, 'Come on, fellers; we gotta go home.' 'I ain't goin' home yet,' replied another; 'I'm dead sure I'm goin' to see the finish.' 'Well, come on; we've gotta go. You can come back tomorrow, an' we'll come over,' came from the first. 'Tomorrow morning' he asked the second. 'Yes.' 'All right,' he said, and off they went. During the day I noticed perhaps a dozen people bringing their friends up to see the picture. The picture that 'got next' to a person is the one the big majority of people love."—Kansas City Times.

The Celtic and the Lady.

Talleyrand, the noted Frenchman, possessed wit of so high an order that it has stood well the test of time, and his jokes are still good. The author of "Lesinger Stories" relates two of his sayings to Mme. de Stael.

He was a great admirer of Mme. Recamier and Mme. de Stael, the one for her beauty, the other for her wit. Mme. de Stael asked him one day if he found himself with both of them in the sea on a plank, and could only save one, which it would be, to which he replied:

"Ah! Mme. de Stael knows so many things, doubtless she knows how to swim."

When "Delphine" appeared, it was said that Mme. de Stael had described herself as Delphine and that Talleyrand was the original of Mme. de Vernon.

Meeting the authoress soon after ward, Talleyrand remarked in his most gentle tone of voice:

"I hear that book you and I appear in your new book, but disguised as women."

A Cow and a Wheelbarrow.

When Czar Peter the Great visited England in 1698 William III. hired Sayes Court, the manor house of Deptford, for use as his court and palace, and the king's dockyard, where he proposed to instruct himself in shipbuilding and to act as a shipwright. During his tenancy the czar every morning either wheeled his favorite wheelbarrow or was wheeled in a barrow in every direction over the adjacent fields, the roads and gardens, trampling all into one general wreck. A path was thrown through Mr. Evelyn's famous and almost impregnable holly hedge, which was 400 feet long, 9 feet high and 12 feet thick. In short, he did so much damage during his three months' residence there (January to April 21 that Mr. Evelyn had as compensation £150 from the government.

Insects That Love Heights.

"On peaks where even bird life ceases," said an Alpine traveler, "and the eternal snow seems to have frightened still life away, I have always found insects. No matter how high I might climb in those awful solitudes, beetles in their huge coats would be seen. The beetles dwell under the rocks and in holes in the snow. Butterflies and moths are missing entirely, for the snow circumscribes their wanderings, and they generally stay in one place all their lives. Even on the ice fields, where there is not a sign of vegetable life, and where everything is white and frozen, there is a great and largest insect of cylindric al shape and coal black in color. It is the only insect which seems to live there as other insects are in a lower garden."

Pasture the Node.

"Pasture the node" is the motto which the lady of the house will ever bear from table. She never suggests a frayed or soiled napkin, but always a clean one of its coloring. Even the men are quick to appreciate the advantage of this teaching, while the untidy girl is severely criticised by members of her own set.

The superb quality proved a revelation to the board of judges at the World's Fair, St. Louis, who promptly awarded the First Prize and Gold Medal to

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our ex. cellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the thrifty young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

BELLEVILLE'S BEST TROTTERS AND PACERS

Some Chat About Harness Horses Owned in and Near Belleville — The Performers and the Prospects—Many Standard Bred and Registered Ones—A Fine Showing in Roadsters and Pacers.

In view of the fact that the races to be held here under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Turf Club Association are near at hand, a little talk about harness horses is in order.

Up to the present no animal has been bred in Belleville or in its immediate vicinity that has approximated closely to the records of 2.08 and 2.12 for Canadian-bred pacers and trotters respectively, yet there are grounds for hoping that some of the numerous "young things" produced from the highly bred mares which are owned in or very near to Belleville may develop speed enough to win celebrity.

Herewith are a few notes concerning the best-known or more promising of the performers and "prospects" of trotting lineage that are to be found within the narrow territorial limits named:

Dr. Caldwell, dentist, always has a trotter or two about him. His stable at present comprises the brown gelding Hickory Grove, by Nutgrove, by Nutwood 2.18 1/4, dam Mary Ford, thoroughbred. He is aged and is the family horse. The young mare Grace C., by Frank Smith, dam by Mambrino Sheridan, is double-gaited and is quite promising. She trotted a half-mile in 1.17, and had passed almost as fast.

The pair best known among local horses must be awarded to Mr. Sam Mc. Reid's bay gelding—a present from his brother, Dr. J. F. Reid, N. S., of St. Louis, Mo. He is perfect in harness and under saddle. Although new to Mr. Reid's ownership, I hope, his pedigree could not be ascertained, it was learned that he is trotting-bred and is by Wilkes, Jr., Mr. C. J. Jeweil's brown mare Juanita and Mr. S. E. Carman's bay mare Wanda, 2.29, have been bred to sire, because they are both handsome, stylish-standard bred and registered—and are among the greatest branches of the Hambletonian family—Wanda, the former from the Wilkeses, and the latter from the Electioneers—in fact, they are "cut and dried" for producers of the Go Easy, by Ambassador, by George Wilkes; dam Ivenna D., by Alcyone, by Alcyone, by Mambrino Patchen 58.

Wayne Otis is by Antevolo, by Electioneer; dam by Seattle Wilkes, by Geo. Wilkes. This gelding's sire is gaited on the harness style, having plenty of action. Similarly, it may be said, is thoroughly "cut and broken," fears neither auto nor locomotives, and a child could drive her.

Mr. L. H. Terwilliger is not a raiser, but he loves a fast roadster. He has the fine gelding Lord Derby, Anderson 2.16 pacing, by Saranac, dam Sister Rhoda, dam of the famous trotter, 2 years old, by Hermit 2.18 1/4 line.

Mr. W. Carnew is an enthusiastic admirer of the fast and handsome and on his stable the very fast bay gelding Jim Hill, a handsome double-gaited, black, no white; sire unknown; dam Lady Hill, by Gen. Wilkes, by Gen. Wilkes, by Gen. Wilkes

CANADA GOLD-BRICKED

Declares Mr. Bickerdike of Montreal is the Embargo.

British Government Was Playing the Game With Loaded Dice and Caught in the Act, Was His Exact Statement, Which Mr. Foster Thought Was Rather Strong — "But, It's True," Said Mr. Bickerdike.

Ottawa, July 7.—The British embargo on Canadian cattle took up the time in a sitting of the House today, and a report of the agriculture committee recommending the appointment of a veterinary on the Imperial Government was adopted. A number of private and public bills were dealt with, and an import made on the Militia Estimates for the supplementary estimates. Among the private bills read a third time was that respecting Victoria & Eastern Railway, Mr. Fisher's amendment being withdrawn. Others put, the Government giving assurance that it would become responsible for the line being constructed as a Canadian road running as far as possible through Canadian territory. The militia estimates are up for Monday, and a field day is expected.

Mr. MacKenzie of Bruce, in presenting the report of the Agriculture committee, referred to the inquiry of the embargo upon Canadian live cattle in England, and pointed out that the imposition of this restriction was not warranted so far as Canada is concerned, for not a single case of contagious pleuro-pneumonia had been found in Canada or ever had existed. Therefore, as the report set forth, it was demanded that the British authorities either remove the embargo or publish to the world the fact that Canadian cattle are free from contagious pleuro-pneumonia.

Earl Grey Is With Us.

Recently, Mr. MacKenzie said, he had had a conference with Earl Grey, one of the best authori ies in Great Britain upon the subject, and his excellency declared there was no beef trust existing, for he had the Canadian steer, and speaking for himself he would endorse the report on the moral of the embargo.

Mr. Bickerdike of Montreal declared that there was no disease in Canadian cattle and the British Government believe it in this matter. Canada was being gold-bricked. They were playing the game with loaded dice and were caught in the act, that was his metaphor like.

"That is a very strong statement," Mr. Foster observed.

"It is true," was the reply.

Mr. Bickerdike went on to say that the cause for the embargo was not a desire to protect the British farmer, as read letters from the president of the British Board of Agriculture, in which that gentleman stated he was satisfied that there was no cattle disease in Canada, he would not ask him to remove the embargo against this country without some reciprocity against the United States.

No Beef Above Money.

"Just another of those little fibs, which the mother constantly plays with Uncle Sam, for which Canada will get a spanking some day, mighty high," said Mr. Bickerdike. "I know John Bull pretty well," he added, "I have done business with him for 23 years, and I tell you there is not a particle of sentiment in him. He is business all the time. John Bull wants as soon buy his cattle from a Hottentot or a Boer from one of his own kin."

Mr. Fisher reviewed the whole of the embargo question, and said the action of the British Board of Agriculture stated an unfriendly act, which showed that they would sacrifice the vested bonds of Imperial unity which should be dear to every citizen of the empire, as Canada. The report was adopted as read.

An act to provide for the regulation of the fisheries of Canada was read a third time.

Said Bill Was Illegal.

During the hour for private bills, the following was read a third time and passed:

Respecting the Vancouver, Victoria and Eastern Railway Co. Respecting certain patents of David Frederick Respecting a certain patent of the Metal Vulcanizing Co. Respecting the blade grooved bill. Respecting the Canada Northern Railway Co. Respecting the Brandon, Saskatchewan and Hudson Bay Railway Co.

Mr. Henderson, for Mr. Bickerdike, moved the second reading of the bill respecting the Canadian Agency, explaining that the object of the measure was to correct a verbal error in the French version.

The Minister of Inland Revenue said the bill was illegal, as it purported to amend a charter which had already been repealed. The bill was therefore allowed to stand.

$6,000 For a Dredge.

Mr. Prefontaine introduced a bill empowering the harbor commissioners of Montreal to issue debentures of $4,000 to pay for a dredge. Discussion in the memory of Sir John Abbott, the founder of the city of Montreal. The remainder of the amount to be distributed in the form of a memorial. The bill was given its first reading.

For Imperial Defence.

Sir Frederick Borden moved on the table of the House a return of the correspondence between the Canadian and Imperial Governments re the further assistance to be given by Canada to the Halifax and Esquimalt garrisons. It was brought down in response to a motive to a direct contribution for Imperial defence.

Rushing Them Through.

The House in committee on the supplementary estimates put through $100,000 for the militia, increased pay Marine and Fisheries.

Mr. Borden introduced to take up other items of Marine expenditure which he proposed to rush through. He was willing to help through the House any measure that was considered it an outrage that the Government should be allowed to rush through a scandalmongering estimate and expect to rush them through in the last two or three days of the dog days of the session.

These large estimates and the principle of them he proposed to consider on Monday.

The civil Government estimates were up through, and the House rose at 12.05.

Time For a Divorce Court.

Ottawa, July 8.—The report of the divorce committee, recommending a divorce court for Canada, was brought up in the Senate yesterday.

Mr. Macdonald (British Columbia) thought it better to have a divorce court. Scandals were often carried away by their feelings.

After good discussion, Sir Mackenzie Bowell said it was not the establishment of a divorce court in Canada that was before the Senate, but the report of the committee adopted on the understanding that the bill stands until Monday.

A Divorce Bill Rejected.

Ottawa, July 8.—The Commons private bills committee, by a vote of 4 to 11, rejected the bill to which Albert H. Harvey of Montreal sought divorce from his wife. This is the first time in years that a divorce application has been put down for hearing before the Commons after it having passed the Senate.

BABY ATTACKED BY YOUNG PIGS.

Had Eczema Away One Toe and Other Was Affected.

Oak, July 5.—It was not until some young pigs had eaten off the toes of a three months' old infant of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gilbert of Morris that the baby was rescued by the mother and the child painfully disfigured and have suffered. The parents of the child are employed on the farm of Joseph Cornish.

Mrs. Gilbert was cutting hay, and his wife was assisting him. She could find the baby about with her for something, but growing tired, she placed the child on a pile of hay on the ground and then continued her work. Some little time later she heard the baby crying.

Eight pigs, none of which were over a month old, had attacked the child and gnawed off the three toes and part of one of the toes. The clothing was torn from the child's side, and the pigs had bitten into the flesh.

Little hope is held out for its recovery.

BRAKE SNAPS.

Care Smash and a Man is Killed at Deseronto.

London, July 8.—A broken brake chain allowed a crowded Bringhams car to jump the rails on Berkley's Hill at the York street bridge. Boy Cain was killed and the motorman threw the front of the trailer and received injuries to his shoulder and arm. Conductor Spencer escaped. He slept at the hospital. He died at 4 o'clock this morning. His skull was fractured at the base.

Mrs. Thomas Johnson, John Sivvely, 547 Queen's avenue, nose said to be broken, are among the injured. Motorman Claude Jarvis, 13 Stanley street, badly cut about the head, and Miss Clara Cowan, suffering from nervousness. Mr. Wilson, Dundas street, received a bad body; S. Shearer, bruised; Mrs. Will Franklin, 1111 street, painfully bruised.

BARRIE BARN BLOWN OVER.

Big Wind Storm Destroys Property—No Loss of Life Reported.

Barrie, July 6.—A tornado, accompanied by hail, rain and terrific lightning, swept this district Thursday.

Charles Kowarty's property on the 6th concession of Vespra suffered about $150 damage. His barn being blown off his barn and the kitchen torn away from the house. Fences were also carried long distances and fences were scattered several hundred yards over in Midlothian.

Peter Donovan went into a partly constructed barn. The building fell, burying him underneath. Others struck the back of his head, jamming the bone into the cavity of sand, and probably saved his life. His lower jaw is also broken and he sustained other serious injuries.

Lightning struck several places near Thornton.

FEWER LIQUOR LICENSES.

In Year 1903-4 There Were 5,974, a Decrease of 1,021.

Toronto, July 8.—The annual report of the Provincial License Department has been issued, showing that the number of licenses for the year 1903 4 was 5,974, an increase in 1902-3 of 3,013 in 1901-2 and 3,014 in 1901-2. The revenue was $264,677.60, a slight increase over the previous year, the total collections in connection with the Act for the period ending 30th September $267,844.64. EIGHT MEN BLOWN UP.

Premature Explosion of a Big Blast of Rock Powder.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 10.—Eight men were blown to pieces and two others were injured by the premature explosion of a big blast of rock powder on the Pennsylvania Railroad improvements near New Cumberland, at 7.20 o'clock yesterday morning. All the victims were employes of H. S. Kerbaugh & Co., contractors.

The bodies of the men were terribly mangled and particles of flesh and bone were scattered a distance of 200 yards from the scene of the explosion. Not a trace of two, policed men who were killed can be found, and it is supposed their bodies were blown into the river.

An inquest was held yesterday. The jury rendered a verdict of premature explosion from an unknown cause, and no blame attached to the contractors. All the killed and injured were laborers, aside from James Wiseman, the dynamite boss, whose body was terribly mangled.

CONSENTS TO CONFERENCE.

Franco-German Dispute is Settled Amicably at Last.

Paris, July 10.—Premier Rouvier and Prince Von Radolin, the German Ambassador, reached an agreement Saturday evening relative to the communications to be exchanged between France and Germany regarding Morocco.

France consents to participate in a conference, having been assured in the course of the negotiations that her interests will be safeguarded.

The official notes on the subject will be communicated to the Chamber of Deputies, probably on Monday.

Information obtained in diplomatic quarters shows that it has practically been settled that the conference will be held at Tangier.

JAURES' TEN COLUMN SPEECH.

Calls on All Socialists to Work Together for Peace.

Paris, July 10.—The speech of M. Jaures, the Socialist deputy, the delivery of which in Berlin Saturday, Chancellor Von Buelow prohibited, appears in M. Jaures' paper, L'Humanite, the same morning.

It covers ten columns and is a fervid, powerful and logical appeal to the Socialists of all countries, particularly those of France, Germany and England, to adopt a common program against militarism and the capitalist and work togwther in the cause of peace.

Escape But Yield Ship.

Potemkine Mutineers Surrendered to Roumania.

Promise of Immunity for Crew—Men Will be Treated Merely as Deserters, and Will be Conveyed to Any Frontier They May Select, Leaving Russian Treasure Behind — Naval Battalions Revolt.

Kustenji, Roumania, July 10.—The flag of St. Andrew's once again floats over the battleship Kniaz Potemkine and the torpedo boat which have proven such terrors to the Black Sea communities for a couple of weeks past. The formal surrender of the mutinous crews actually occurred at one o'clock Saturday afternoon, after a series of discussions and negotiations between the Roumanian authorities and the leaders of the mutineers.

Roumanian officers who boarded the battleship on her arrival here called upon her crew to surrender, in which case they will be treated as foreign deserters, or else leave the port forth with. It speedily became apparent that the Russian vessels returned to this port with the intention of giving themselves up to a foreign Government, and the crews soon announced their acceptance of the Roumanian terms. The mutineers wanted to be permitted to take off the treasure which was on board the Kniaz Potemkine, but the Roumanian authorities declined to acquiesce.

The Russians will gradually be conveyed to any frontier they may select, and then will be liberated, local officers having given an under standing to this effect. The Roumanian flag has been hoisted over the Russian war vessels, as well as the flag of St. Andrew, so as to prevent any attack on them by Roumanian warships by the vessels of the Russian squadron, which are reported to be in pursuit of the mutineers.

Potemkine Returned to Russia.

Kustenji, Roumania, July 10.—Admiral Kruger yesterday afternoon boarded and took possession of the Russian battleship Kniaz Potemkine. King Charles of Roumania having sent instructions to the commander of the Russian squadron that the vessel be delivered to the Russian authorities without raising difficulties.

The torpedo boat which accompanied the Kniaz Potemkine, however, left for Odessa without surrendering, declaring that she had not mutinied, but that the Kniaz Potemkine had compelled her to follow.

No Ship In Disorder.

Despite the efforts of the Roumanians to get things in shipshape everything aboard the battleship was still in a state of wild disorder. The officers' cabins were stripped of everything of any value, and bloodstains were everywhere. There was sufficient ammunition aboard the Kniaz Potemkine to have enabled the mutineers to make a desperate resistance.

All the papers and books belonging to the vessel were destroyed. It appears that the decision to surrender the Kniaz Potemkine was made when it became evident that no other vessels would join in the mutiny.

A Russian priest, after the transfer, held a service of purification on board the Kniaz Potemkine, sprinkling the crew and the flag with holy water. Admiral Kruger's squadron, which brought a crew for the Kniaz Potemkine, sailed with her for Russia last evening.

Naval Battalions Revolt.

London, July 10.—A despatch to a news agency from St. Petersburg, says that a serious outbreak on the part of the men of the 14th and 15th Naval Battalions occurred Saturday at Krionvski Barracks, in St. Petersburg. The rioters, it is asserted, broke all the windows and their officers were compelled to summon armed men from the various military posts.

Lods Disturbance Unjustified.

St. Petersburg, July 10.—The official Messenger Saturday morning prints a detailed account of the disturbances at Lods, and editorially declares that they were unjustified by local economic conditions, and were fomented by revolutionary, Socialist and Jewish agitators. The account says that the disturbances culminated on June 24 in an open conflict between the troops and the rioters. On that day 160 of the rioters were killed and 153 wounded, one officer and three soldiers were wounded, and two police agents were killed and many wounded, while $2,000 worth of property was destroyed. According to the account, 20,000 Jews left town within two days.

Persian Bandits Invade Russia.

St. Petersburg, July 10.—The Russian Government is faced with a hard problem in the Caucasus. The Associated Press correspondent, who visited Lenkoran, in the extreme southeastern corner of the Caucasus, reports that Persian bandits are streaming across the border and into the province of Salin, as well as into Erivan.

At Tiflis four bombs were thrown Saturday. All business life there has ceased, and the peaceful citizens are in terror stricken. News of bloody collisions between Cossacks and mobs are expected.

At Kief a non-commissioned officer has been tried by court martial and sentenced to prison for disseminating revolutionary literature among the soldiers.

Encouraging.

The publication of the Emperor's reply to the peace appeal presented by Count Sherematiff, in which He Majesty addresses the deputation as "Gentlemen and brothers," has created a favorable impression among the Liberals, as it is noticed that the Emperor intended his promise to summon an assembly of notables, among the deputations suggestions, looking to the formation of a Consultative Body in the Boulgian project, and also that His Majesty has refrained from any advocacy of a continuance of the war.

The Socialist organs are disappointed that quiet prevails in Odessa.

Crew Is Lost.

Paris, July 10.—All hope of saving the crew of the submarine boat Farfadet, which sank last Thursday morning at the entrance to the port of Sidi Abdallah, Tunis, is lost, the efforts made during last night to raise the vessel being ineffective.

Skiff Smashed and Lad Drowned.

Utica, N. Y., July 10.—A despatch from Clayton says the first fatality of the season at the Thousand Islands occurred yesterday afternoon at Prospect Park, a mile west of Clayton, where Horace Cook, the 17-year-old son of Emil M. Cook, was drowned. Cook was sailing a skiff, which collided with the large yacht, Transatlo, captained by W. D. Garmen of St. Catharines, Ont. Cook attempted to cross the bow of the yacht near Manatuck, and perceiving that a collision was inevitable leaped from his skiff, which was shattered by the prow of the big boat. He struggled for a moment, then sank in ninety feet of water.

Germans Do Some Killing.

Berlin, July 10.—Small engagements continue to take place in German Southwest Africa. The most considerable engagement since that at Naruz, June 17, occurred June 27. Major Grasser with three companies attacked 200 Hottentots near Kochas, on the Fish River, stormed a temporary entrenchment and killed many of the natives. The German loss was two officers and three men killed and an officer and 11 men wounded.

Grabbed Live Wire; Is Dead.

Montreal, July 10.—On the Upper Lachine road Saturday morning a man was instantly killed through taking hold of a live electric wire. One of the electric wires belonging to the Montreal Light, Heat and Power Co. broke and hung over the sidewalk. The deceased and another man came along, and in spite of the warnings of nearby residents took hold of the wire. He was instantly killed.

Stabbing at Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, July 10.—A stabbing affray took place here Saturday afternoon when John McDermid was stabbed by John Bentley. The men arrived here Friday from the Soo and got into a row. Bentley pulled out a razor and cut a deep gash in the other fellow's head.

Two Women Instantly Killed.

Medina, N. Y., July 10.—A westbound New York Central engine struck an automobile at the driving park crossing Saturday evening, killing Mrs. C. I. Eddy and Miss Margaret Downey.

Drowning at Hamilton.

Hamilton, July 10.—Lazzaro Tinpernore, an Italian, 18 years old, employed as a G. T. R. navvy, was drowned yesterday afternoon. He was bathing at the west end of the bay.

Sunk in a Fog.

Portland, Maine, July 10.—The three-master schooner Sarah C. Smith, of Boston, nine ladies, was sunk in a fog off Portland harbor early Saturday by the steamer Governor Dingley.

The Crops.

So far as Ontario, Manitoba and the North-west are concerned, it would appear, says a writer in the Montreal Gazette, that Canada stands more than a good chance of a bountiful harvest. This is the tenor of the reports received by the Molsons Bank from a large number of correspondents, comprising managers of its branches, managers of branches of other banks, farmers, elevator men, agricultural implement and other people in positions which make their opinions of value. More encouraging reports have seldom, if ever, come out of the Canadian Northwest. Not only is there a considerable increase in the wheat acreage, but the reports are practically unanimous in giving the prospects for the growing crops as most encouraging. The only exception is the Red River Valley, where too much rain is reported to have done damage, running all the way from 10 per cent. to half the crop. Some wet in some parts on the Red River Valley was the whole Northwest, but it is now a very small section. In addition, this section is settled by generally well-to-do farmers, and so the consequences of the partial failure reported here will not be nearly as serious as if it had occurred further west, where the new-comers are taking up land, and who require a bountiful crop to place them firmly on their feet. The reports indicate that this is just the kind of a crop that will be harvested, though it is, of course, much too early to speak with any degree of certainty. There has been too much rain generally, and a spell of hot, dry weather was required, a spell which has since the reports were made duly put in its appearance, and done much good. The grain is well rooted this year, and favorable weather during July is all that is required. There is apparently less land speculation in Manitoba than usual, though the evil is referred to in some of the reports from that territories. In the great number of districts the financial position of the farmer is reported to have improved. Where he is not as well off as he was last year at this time is in those sections where rust did the most damage. Accompanying the report is the following statistical statement prepared by Mr. F. O. Fowler, secretary of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, showing the acreage of the growing crops:

Grain.	1904.	1905.	Inc. P.C.
Wheat	3,462,460	4,019,000	17 1-2
Oats	1,206,000	1,423,000	18
Barley ...	392,000	438,800	10 1-2
Flax	46,500	34,900	*25

*Decrease.

Turning to Ontario the most notable fact to be recorded is that the farmers of this province are now engaged in caring for one of the largest hay crops in its history. From all parts the word is the same. Where the height is given as deficient the crop is reported to be a very thirty grown one, or thickly, in fact, that double is expressed as to the possibility of curing it all in good order. Spring wheat is satisfactory, and a general increase in acreage is notable. Fall wheat came through the winter in fine shape, and a good crop is promised. Oats and barley promise to be above of being a fine crop. The wet weather has to some extent affected corn and some of the root crops, but they are now coming on well. In most of the districts in which peas and beans form a considerable portion of the farmers' output the prospects are encouraging. Apples will, probably, the province over, run something under an average yield, and small fruits will probably be quite as good. All told, however, the farming community is in a happy frame of mind these days.

Mrs. Sheriff Hope, of Belleville, and Mr. A. Bell were married in the river yesterday afternoon and successfully landed a number of four-pound bass. The story is true for we had it from both gentlemen.—Trenton Advocate.

What's the Sheriff trying to do? Can't he get any fish in Mr. Bell's bay, or does he think the Morrison waters are more fitting for his angling now. "A little bit off the top please; a little bit off the top."

The Kingston News and Times doesn't want to be so cock-sure that electricity will turn the wheels of its street railway this week. The despatches say that the ratepayers are sore and that legal action will probably block the street railway agreement. How about the "smile" now?

A subscriber to The Intelligencer writes "calling the attention of the authorities to the numerous crops of weeds on both sides of Bridge street west. As on Wednesday a large number of visitors in the city will pass and down this thoroughfare would it not add much to the appearance if the weeds in question were cut down." We think the idea good, and it might also be applied to other streets in the city.

The Princess Troubetzkoy of America, as she is better known, appraised, at a dinner, the wit of a French poet.

"Even in English, which he does not know at all well, he is often brilliant," said the Princess. "I remember once, at a reception in Paris, how well he conducted himself before a middle-aged Virginia woman.

"She had known him a long time. Therefore as they conversed about the past, it was quite natural for her to say:

"Ah, Henri, I found three gray hairs in my head this morning."

"He smiled gallantly.

"So long as they can be counted, madam, they don't count," he said.

Senator Dobbs was lamenting the decay of oratory among American statesmen.

"With only a few exceptions," he said, "we have in Washington no orators worthy of the name. On the contrary we had to accept in silence during the last session an acid criticism from a clever woman.

"I attended a meeting of the Senate the other day," she said, "and that night I had a terrible dream."

"What did you dream?' said I.

"The lady smiled.

"I dreamed,' she said, 'I went again."

The following is a certain man's idea and we don't altogether agree with it:—

"As the world matures, it improves, just as we improve as we mature.

"A man of mature minds an improvement on a child. He is in every way better. He is more genuine, does more work.

"I have no sympathy with those who laud childhood and the virtues of children. I hold that children are only a little removed fro savages, and, when I hear them lauded, I think of a boy I used to know.

"This boy's brother lay ill with a fever, a bad fever, so that it was feared he might succumb.

"To the well youngster the nurse said one morning:

"'What will you do if your brother dies?'

"The child answered calmly:

"'I'll have his bird, won't I?'"

Very little notice has been taken of the raising of a jail in Georgia by a mob of neighbors, who took out all the inmates, tied them to posts and shot them. There were nine prisoners. All were killed but one, and he was supposed to be dead when the committee left the place. Some of the prisoners had been convicted and some were awaiting trial. There was no certainty of the guilt of all, nor were all charged with capital crimes. The prisoners did not belong to a gang or group, but were arrested at different times, in different places, and charged with different offences. It appears that the mob of citizens simply made their minds to clear out the jail, and they did. If this thing had happened in China or Turkey or Central Africa the incident would have been discussed by enlightened nations in a superior way as one that could only take place among savages. The United States is a great country, but the toleration of such anarchy shows that society in some States is totally unsettled. It is said that the Governor of the State has offered a reward for the discovery of the perpetrators. This is a common formula. As a matter of fact, a whole community must be parties to the murder, and the moral sentiment of the neighborhood is apparently not much disturbed by it. The jailer knew that he would be killed if he left his duty and protected his prisoners, and the murderers are equally certain that they will not suffer, whether their names are known or not, unless they fall into the hands of some friend or relative of the men they butchered.

12TH JULY DEMONSTRATION

EVERYTHING POINTS TO A LARGE AND SUCCESSFUL GATHERING.

In view of the celebration which is to take place here on Wednesday, it may not be out of place to mention the fact, that there was a time not very long ago in Canadian history when this demonstration provoked a certain amount of ill feeling between the Orangemen and their Catholic fellow-citizens, but it is gratifying to notice that in these days of toleration and liberty of thought and action this spirit has almost entirely disappeared. Nowadays, however, Orangemen are regarded more considerate of the feelings of their fellow citizens, who do not think as they do, while the latter have learned to take allowance for the day, and view the proceedings with generous toleration, if not admiration. The 12th of July is also one of importance to others besides Orangemen, because on that day, 1690, William of Orange defeated James II. on the banks of the Boyne in Ireland, which brought to an end a government which was controlled by church and party. No man has a right to speak or act disrespectfully to its dictates of his conscience in these days without first consulting his superiors; a violation of this gift from heaven would leave a man liable to go to the BLOCK, according to the decree of the King.

In regard to the celebration which takes place here on Wednesday, the Secretary of the county, who has visited all the towns from Brockville to Millbrook, via Port Hope, on the main line of the G.T.R., on the Midland division to Peterboro, on the Madoc division and on the C.O.R. to Marmora and Coe Hill, reports a large attendance from Belleville by rail; Kingston City, Picton, Deseronto, Trenton and Port Hope, are coming by boats.

If the weather is favorable the prospects are that the largest 12th of July demonstration ever held in this section of the country will be seen here on Wednesday. We hope our citizens will help making the city as attractive as possible to our visitors, by decorating their places of business.

NATURE SPEAKS.

The Stricken Rose From Grief.

What a fortunate provision of nature it is, that deprives the rose of mental suffering! Isn't how poignant would be its grief to discover, in the height of its blooming glory, that a canker fed at its heart, and that its lovely and fragrance were doomed forever. Nature always spares the suffering; she is a veritable storehouse of pleasing rewards, for those who seek her aid. In the years gone by falling hair and grayness have cast a gloom over the lives of thousands of young women, but thanks to the investigations of scientists the true cause of hair destruction is now known to be a germ or parasite that burrows into the hair follicles. Newbro's Herpicide absolutely destroys this germ, thus permitting the hair to grow as nature intended.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. B. McKeown, special agent.

but we must have good men.

It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen, numbering larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmanship.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and refitted Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 20th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Belleville Methodist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—a number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

WATER BASEBALL.

An effort is being made to introduce in the city water baseball. Those who are familiar with this summer sport speak of it as both exciting and amusing. There should be no difficulty in getting in this city the requisite number of players to engage in this sport.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about his expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying some of his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is true anne in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a box the of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

MISS GERTRUDE BERG.

An Energetic Worker in the Cause of Jewish Women.

Miss Gertrude Berg of Philadelphia, secretary of the Philadelphia section of the National Council of Jewish Women and one of the charter members of the organization, is an energetic woman whose name stands as a synonym for the advancement of Jewish women not only in Philadelphia, but throughout America.

With Mrs. S. B. Fleisher Miss Berg brought the Jewish women, who are essentially home loving and not city loving women, into the council, which aims to promote religious, philanthropic and educational interests. To her influence more than to any other is due the fact that the council has become united with the Pennsylvania State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Yet it is not upon the council alone that Miss Berg's time, energy and money have been expended. When she moved to Philadelphia, twelve years ago, from Savannah, Ga., she at once entered into the personal service work conducted by Hev. Dr. Joseph Krauskopf in the foreign quarters of the city and in this way learned for herself the needs of the city. Then she became interested in building up the Young Women's union, whose headquarters are at 428 Bainbridge street. As president of this union Miss Berg at present is more closely associated with its work than of any other organization. All classes of the people of Philadelphia, from the lowest up to and including the juvenile court to the delicate girls whose lives are spent in cloistered seclusion, receive her personal attention and have learned to love her. In the latter she is a frequent visitor at the Kindergarten and Day Nursery union.

In the summer much of her time is spent at La Grange, the beautiful vacation home for Jewish working girls maintained by the Young Women's union at Sixty-first street and Kingsessing avenue during July and August. Here working girls, without regard to sect, may spend their two weeks' vacation and enjoy all the delights of farm life. One may find Miss Berg at this home at almost any time when it is not receiving her into the plain fare for the entertainment of the girls.

Miss Berg is the second vice president of the Home of Delight and secretary of the Ladies of the United Hebrew Charities.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Complexion and Diet.

Dyspepsia is the most dangerous and important effect upon the complexion is that of causing pimples. Every one is aware of or to which, at any rate, they pay very little attention. It has been the writer's experience to see very many of these pimples, which are a very trifling to attain clear and lovely complexions. A long experience has, however, proved that the majority of women are anxious to retain their good looks during middle age and to preserve their complexions by legitimate and natural means, the proposition of foolish cures for them is to become suddenly beautiful by the aid of a "universal" recipe or a drastic and perhaps painful system of facial treatment is after all, very small. The mistake which is made by many is to imagine that wrinkles, sallow skins, "muddy" complexions or eruptions—of various kinds—can be entirely cured by local applications. This idea is as erroneous as the one held by many people that the appearance of every kind of spots are injurious. The cosmetic treatment is frequently a very painful and unnecessary adjunct to internal treatment, and the sweeping condemnation of all creams, ointments, powders, etc., for the skin indulged in by the so called "antifrivolous" section of society is based on as much ignorance and want of common sense as is shown by the indiscriminate abusing of so many "skin peeling" lotions and other injurious preparations.

In the main hospitals local applications for the skin affections are very largely used, but dietetic reform is always first insisted upon, for undoubtedly a large proportion of eruptive diseases and discolorations which come before skin doctors are due to improper diet and are the result of complete ignorance of the dietetic laws of health.

Laundry Economy.

All women have not grasped the fact that clothing but little soiled, even when more abundant, is easier to launder than that which loudly proclaims its need of soap and water. It lasts longer, too, because it does not require such rough handling. This is the argument used by a young housewife whose chances her tablecloths as often as they need it and never uses napkins but once before consigning them to the washtub. After each meal she looks the cloth over for spots and carefully removes them with clear warm water and a soft cloth. This means that the cloth must remain on the table between meals, a thing she does not mind, as the dining room can be shut away, and time and labor are saved, no trifle in consideration of the fact that she does all her own work save what the girl says the Philadelphia Bulletin. The napkins she does herself, save the finer ones that go into the family wash. It is easy to wash and iron these small pieces, even though a man whose name stands as a synonym for the advancement of Jewish women not only in Philadelphia, but throughout America.

Finger Bowls.

It might at first seem unnecessary to say anything of the correct use of finger bowls after 25 years in which they have been daily put upon tables, but as one observes the way some people seem to be imbued with the idea of using them as wash basins for the hands it is really necessary to make a suggestion—that is, to remember that only the tips of the fingers are to be wet, and, if one wishes, it is permissible to rub the fingers across the lips. This latter is not often done, however, laying the fingers afterward to dry on the napkin as daintily as possible.—Memphis News-Scimitar.

The Ideal Figure.

The modern girl, delightfully improving in the right direction, is not exactly in accordance with the old Greek ideals of a perfect woman. Their ideal woman should be five feet five inches. Her waist should measure twenty-four inches, the bust under the arms thirty-four inches; over the arms, forty-three inches. The circumference of the upper arm should be thirteen inches, the wrists six inches, the thighs should measure twenty-five and a half inches and the ankles eight inches. Her weight should be 138 pounds.

To Clean Skin.

Enough moisture is sometimes to make a slightly sallow lotion makes an excellent skin cleaner. Apply it frequently with a soft old linen handkerchief, and you will find fewer blackheads and coarse pores. So few women under stand that it is necessary to assist in cleansing the face skin than plain soap and water that it is scarcely to be wondered at that the skin and rough faces are common. Sweet milk and water is a skin lotion of the utmost, quite pretty salt, is a favorite English cosmetic.

The Circular Refrigerator.

The model refrigerator is quite circular in shape, being the beauty of it—not a corner anywhere to harbor dirt or grease; the newest thing in the world to keep in that spotlessly clean condition which should characterize the place where food is kept. Another delightful thing about it is that the shelves revolve, so that things can be taken out and put in very much more conveniently than in the case of the old style refrigerator.—Philadelphia Record.

Salads.

For all salads have all dishes very cold. The ingredients should also be chilled. Salads should not be stirred, but the materials tossed with a fork until well mixed. Dressing and ingredients should not be all put together at once, but added to each other gradually, one by one, beginning with a little celery and whatever else is used.

Eyebrows That Meet.

Eyebrows that meet should have the offending hairs removed. This can be easily done with a pair of pincers or the blade of a dull knife, catching the hairs between the thumb and the knife. The hairs will return and should be removed as fast as they grow. Eyebrows that meet give an unpleasant and sinister expression to the face.

Hair and the Hat.

Never wear a hat with light colored linin when you have red hair. Use pepper and salt stage. Either a rich dark color or black is the most suitable. Light or fluffy hair should be of little appearance to the hair that is most unbecoming to the woman of white hair any light or bright color that suits the complexion may be worn.

A Pastry Slab.

The top of an old marble topped table may be used as a pastry slab in the pantry as a slab on which to mix and roll out pastry. By having a wooden top made for the table and covering it with a cloth the table is just as serviceable as any piece of furniture and much more convenient for use because not so heavy.

Blackened Ceilings.

When a white washed ceiling has become blackened apply a layer of starch and water to it with a piece of soft flannel. Allow the starch to dry and then brush lightly, using a brush. The blackness will disappear, leaving no trace.

Varnish the linoleum in kitchen and hall three times a year to insure its lasting qualities. The varnish should be thoroughly dried before the floor is used.

Kerosene should be poured through the drain pipe of a sink at least once a month. It will be found most effective in cutting out collected grease.

Cheesecloth, hemmed, makes excellent pantry cloths for glassware and fine china.

An hour lost in the morning has to be run after all day.

THE GIFT OF GAB.

Why Stephenson Thought There Was No Power Equal to It.

When George Stephenson was visiting the seat of Sir Robert Peel at Drayton on one occasion, says the writer of "Famous English Engineers," there happened to be present Dr. Buckland, the scientist, and Sir William Follett, the famous advocate.

Stephenson discussed with Dr. Buckland one of his favorite theories as to the formation of coal and, though unaccustomed in the right, was ultimately vanquished by the arguments and oratory of the doctor, who was a better master of language than himself. Next morning while pondering over his defeat in the solitude of the garden he was accosted by Sir William Follett and confided to that gentleman the story of his failure.

Sir William, acquainted with the details of the matter in dispute, agreed to take up the case and soon afternoon attacked Dr. Buckland on the subject. A long discussion ensued, in which the man of law completely silenced the man of science, who was at last compelled to retire himself completely. Sir Robert Peel, highly amused at this example of "all for tal," then turned to the inventor and inquired, with a laugh:

"Well, what do you say on this matter, Mr. Stephenson?"

"Why," he replied, "I will only say this—that of all the powers above and under the earth there seems to me no power equal to the gift of the gab."

Pitched Lower.

In the course of her first call upon one of her husband's parishioners young Mrs. Grey spoke feelingly of his noble, generous spirit.

"He is as hearty an altruist as man may be," she said proudly and affectionately.

"Is he an altruist?" said her hostess with mild surprise. "I thought from the tone of his voice that he probably was a base."

Odd Horse Feed.

"What do you think of feeding horses on goose eggs?" asks an Australian back woodsman. "That was done by a party who were stuck up on the Adelaide during the wet season. The natives used to bring in canoe loads of eggs, which were broken into buckets and supplied to the horses."

The road to failure is the one that is full of ruts.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A New York couple who missed a train the other day went at once to a preacher's house and were married. It is strange how missing a train upsets one.

Thomas W. Lawson announces that he intends to tell the Westerners the bitter truth during his forthcoming trip. It will be bitter, all right, whether it is the truth or not.

Chicago's directory gives the city a population of 2,272,000. But what of that? The Clevelands tumbled the Chicago mins from first place in the American League on Wednesday.

Several persons who tried to jump off a moving train on an Italian railroad were reported officially to have been made insane by the heat. Someone; they probably had just remembered that this is the time to travel by water.

A Cleveland man arrested for fighting was sent to an insane asylum. The man to send to an asylum is the one who won't fight—after sufficient provocation. - Buffalo Express.

An English jurist named Gill, in his speech in a recent breach of promise case, made some epigrammatic remarks about women which will not make him popular with the sex. However, he was counsel for the man in the case. He said: "All women have a capacity for describing themselves as martyrs." "They regard any other woman that a man knows as a "creature." "The first thing a woman did when she was engaged was to take the man round in triumph and show him to her friends."

A STRENUOUS REMEDY.

How a Servant Tried to Sober Up a Careless Diplomat.

The story had reference to a former senator of the United States who was sent to Russia as minister. There were the usual evidences in the archives of the legation that sobriety was not this gentleman's especial virtue and among the many bundles of papers of the offices have any law students at all. Many of the ablest lawyers expressed the opinion that study in a law office is an absolute waste of energy. Nearly all the successful law firms declared that they had no time to devote to young men who desired to study law and that such young men were a nuisance in the office. The only young man they could use at all was one who had already passed his examination for the state bar and who was willing to work for nothing for a year or two in order to get the experience which comes from a large office. Out of the 1,000 replies only seven favored preparation for the bar in a lawyer's office.

Another striking result of this investigation is found in the answers to the questions as to the proper degree of preliminary education a student should have before entering the law school. A majority of the whole number urged that every one taking up the study of the law should complete a full college course. Of the others a majority were in favor of at least two years in college. There was a practical unanimity that the completion of a four years' high school course was the absolute minimum which was at all acceptable.

It was the general opinion that, having once entered the law school, the young man should give his entire time to the work of the school and not attempt to combine it with work in a lawyer's office or, indeed, work in any other place unless that was absolutely necessary to pay expenses. One lawyer declared that it was a poor school that could not keep a student busy all the time, and if he kept found himself in such a school he ought to leave it for one which could keep him busy.

PITH AND POINT.

A child is always surprised that you don't know the washerwoman at its house.

When you throw a friend a bouquet, don't throw it so he will catch the flowers in his hands.

Hope is a progressive game. One's children failing to become famous, the boy prepares to the grandchildren.

It is easy for a woman to be polite; all she has to do is to smile, but a man has to smile and raise his hat.

Worrying about the future is believing there will be gloom tomorrow, though you know there are none today.

Parents are hard on their children when the children are young, and when the parents are old the children are hard on the parents.

The Theological Labyrinth.

Stephen Essex, a Methodist minister, is the hero in "The Bishop's Niece." His state of mind after his ward's undergraduate in the theological labyrinth is thus described by the author, George H. Picard:

At twenty-seven Stephen Essex had not made a perfect recovery from the panic into which a premature discovery of the plan of salvation had thrown him. He had employed all the remedies which are prescribed to heal our common moral illnesses, but their abundance and variety as well as his disposition to leave none untasted had retarded his convalescence. His present condition was that of one who, though realizing that he has halted, almost unconsciously, just beside the end of opportunity, is still fearful of doing something which will undo everything.

Knox and Scotland.

Scotland owes to Knox and its existing Presbyterian government—this was the subsequent work of Andrew Melville—the strongest line in Christianity in the administration of the church, combined with that comity and subornation (which Congregationalism fails to secure) of the whole church to one representative and supreme authority. It is owing to Knox and his fellow reformers that the Scottish church was not ruled by either episcopacy and of anarchy."—John Knox," by Professor Henry Cowan.

A Bearded Freak.

One of the curiosities of the American bearded freaks was Louis Jasper, who lived in southern Virginia at about the time of the close of the Revolutionary war. His beard was nine and a half feet long and correspondingly thick and heavy. He could take his moustache between his fingers and extend his arms to their full length, and still the ends of the mustache were over a foot beyond his finger tips.

Important Question.

The wasp was buzzing languidly around the house.

"You needn't come any nearer," said the cat.

"I won't hurt you," said the wasp. "I'm half sick today, anyhow."

"Which half?" asked the cat, backing off.

Too Suggestive.

HUMMING BIRDS.

Feeding the Beautiful Looks Like a Boarding House.

When I first crawled in under the bushes close to the nest the little mother sat at me with a look of fear from my nose, as if to stare me out of countenance. She looked me all over from head to foot that way. Then she seemed convinced that I was harmless.

She whirled and sat on the nest edge. The bantlings opened wide their hungry mouths. She spread her tail like a flicker and braced herself against the nest side. She craned her neck and drew her dagger-like bill straight up above the nest. She plunged it down the baby's throat to the hilt and started a series of gentle, rhythmic, fashioned lip puncture him to the toes. Then she stabbed the other baby until it made one gulp. It looked like the murder of the infants. But they were not mangled and bloody. They were getting a square meal after the manner of humming bird method of regurgitation.

They ran out their slender tongues to lick the honey from their bills. How they liked it! Then she settled down and ruffled up her breast feathers to let her babies cuddle close to her naked bosom. Occasionally she reached under to caress them with the endearings of mother love.—Country Calendar.

SURE HER TOOTH WAS OUT.

Force of Imagination as Exemplified in a Dentist's Chair.

Dentists have a splendid opportunity of studying the power of imagination. A New York practitioner by way of illustration told a reporter about one of his women patients. She entered, accompanied by her husband, policeman to her swollen face, asked the dentist to extract the aching tooth. He placed her in the chair and, taking the small hand glass which dentists use, put it into her mouth for the purpose of examining the molar which was to be extracted.

The glass had no sooner touched the tooth than she uttered a frightful scream and, bouncing out of the chair, rushed out into the waiting room, crying that her jaw was broken. The united efforts of her husband and the dentist were for some time unable to persuade her that the tooth was not extracted and that she could now safely play havoc with it. After examining her mouth with the aid of a glass she finally became convinced of the truth and went away in the place. Taking her seat in the chair again, she submitted to the operation of extracting the tooth without a murmur and expressed her surprise that the pain was so slight.

Seldits Powders In Siam.

Sale of seldits powders is prohibited in Siam. Forty years ago Phra Mongkut, the then ruling emperor, bought a box of seldits powders from a trader missionary, and, misinterpreting the instructions on the lid, mixed the six blue papered powders into one tumbler of water and the six white papered ones into another. The result was that of this the further sale of the remedy in question was prohibited—a prohibition which still remains in force.

Proof of Originality.

"Yes," remarked Mrs. Upstartin, "that picture is an original thing. Husband had heard so much about counterfeit Raphaels that he not only bought the print from an artist upon whom he could depend, but he went so far as to go to the studio every day while it was being painted, so you can take my word for it that this is a real original Raphael."

Coming Around.

Mrs. Cafferty—And how is that pretty young widow? Is she reconciled to her loss yet? Mrs. Malarpop—No, she ain't exactly reconciled yet, but they do say she's got the man picked out.

And War Continued.

STUDYING LAW.

The Lawyer's Office Not What It Once Was For Students.

Questions regarding the study of law were sent out recently to many lawyers of Illinois by the University of Illinois and elicited 1,000 replies. From these it appears that the days of studying law in a lawyer's office have passed away. Very few of the offices have Hummingbirds Like Pie.

Hummingbirds are very fond of pie. Not long ago a man who lives in the suburbs of Pittsburg had a piece of pie on the table and left the room for a few minutes. When he returned he found a hummingbird sitting on the edge of the pie and helping himself to the contents. The bird was not disturbed by the man's presence and continued to eat until it had had enough.

Bankers Like Mohammedans.

A swarthy man drew $500 out of the saving fund, and the cashier said on his departure:

"If all our depositors were like that gentleman our cashiers would soon be out of work. Murad Ali is an Indian, a native of Calcutta, and his religion forbids him to collect interest on money. He has had a savings account with us for twelve years. His interest altogether has ammounted to $700. And he has never accepted a cent of it. It has all flown back into our coffers again.

"All Mohammedans are like Murad Ali. They won't take interest on their money; hence India, I think, must be a grand country for the banking business, and how gilt edge bankers would be if Mohammedanism were to spread a little!"

JeDorson's Prayer and Poultice.

Joseph Jefferson was suddenly taken ill one day, arriving at the home of a friend. The wife of the friend whose hospitality he had enjoyed became alarmed over his condition and, being of a religious turn of mind, wished to instill in the mind of the actor her belief in the necessity for spiritual consultation. A call to his room for the purpose of administering a soothing gave her the much desired opportunity.

"Mr. Jefferson," she said, nervously slipping the poultice from one hand to the other, "for your sake, for the sake of your friends, your family, I—I would like to pray for you."

The actor listened attentively, and his answer came slowly.

"Yes, madam," he said, "pray for my sake, for your sake, for everybody's sake—but for heaven's sake get on that poultice!"

Bankers Like Mohammedans.

A swarthy man drew $500 out of the saving fund, and the cashier said on his departure:

"If all our depositors were like that gentleman our cashiers would soon be out of work. Murad Ali is an Indian, a native of Calcutta, and his religion forbids him to collect interest on money. He has had a savings account with us for twelve years. His interest altogether has ammounted to $700. And he has never accepted a cent of it. It has all flown back into our coffers again.

"All Mohammedans are like Murad Ali. They won't take interest on their money; hence India, I think, must be a grand country for the banking business, and how gilt edge bankers would be if Mohammedanism were to spread a little!"

BOYS' BLOUSE SUITS.

Nothing more becoming to the average small boy has ever been devised. For summer wear the Blouse Suit is particularly appropriate. Quick & Robertson have about 800 sample Blouse Suits in serges, blackets and worsteds, ranging in price from 75c to $7.50. These goods are being sold much below their regular worth and are all this season's productions.

A VARIATION

By
ROBERT JERMAIN COLE

Copyright, 1905, by Robert Jermain Cole

"Men are such monotonous creatures. They march together like that always." The girl waved her hand lightly toward a file of suites that paraded down Fifth avenue. Her companion did not answer immediately.

"You must reduce your complaint to specific charges, Miss Breen," said the young man at length. "What, for example, renders man so tiresome to you?"

"I'm sure I don't know what makes him so. I only know that he is," returned the girl. "He—I mean they—all wear forever the same kind of clothes, walk with the same stride, stick to the same amusements—"

"Are true to the same friends," finished her listener for her, "and, worst of all, persist in expressing admiration for the same girl in the same words. You must find it monotonous."

"Don't be personal, Mr. Roscommon," protested his companion, with a blush.

"I am discussing fact, and that is always personal," replied the man. "It is true, isn't it?" Roscommon had a quiet habit of persistence. He did not talk much, but what he did say was apt to start his companion into a frantic scrutiny of self defense.

"What do you mean?" asked the girl. "You certainly would not accuse me of bragging about the number of my admirers. I was only speaking in a general way."

Roscommon was silent, and the girl went on:

"I refuse to testify against myself, but you must give me credit for knowing a few other women. Besides, I have read the novels written by creatures of your own sex. They ought to say a good word for the ingenuity of man, yet their heroes all make love in precisely the same way."

They turned as they walked into Fifty-seventh street, where Miss Breen had lived with her aunt since her father's death. She had always gone with a rather gay set, but a few months after she came out her father had lost most of his money. For the last three years that he lived he insisted on her accepting many invitations, although they were able to do little entertaining.

"AND YOU HAVEN'T ONCE SAID 'I LOVE YOU,' ROSCOMMON," SHE EXCLAIMED.

Her liveliness of speech and manner, a trifle defiant, masked a hurt pride. She was fondly envied among the men—too easily to suit her high spirit. They gave her flattery in plenty, which comforted her as little as gold offered to a starving woman. She was all heart and spirit. Almost unconsciously her father died she was hungry for some one to lavish her affections upon. Yet no one had ever aroused more than a passing kind gone about that she would marry anybody for money. She hated poverty, but she hated a lie still worse.

When they entered the house she took off her hat and stood a moment beside a table.

"You may sit down," she said condescendingly to Roscommon. "I shall stand up awhile. You haven't made me tired yet."

"If you were one of these unvarying men how would you propose to a girl?" asked the young man gravely. Miss Breen promptly sat down. After she had rested and meditated for half a minute, she answered:

"It would depend on the girl. That's the very point. Instead of having a formula such as you men hand down from father to son, I should study the character of the woman and the words to appeal to her and to her alone. If she loved flowers, I'd spend my last dime on a rose. They say a drowning man lost once for want of a horseshoe. More women have been lost for want of a chocolate drop than are dreamed of in your philosophy."

"I have not seemingly that will fit the race of women," corrected the lawyer.

"I'm glad to hear you admit your ignorance!" laughed Miss Breen.

"I did not say I was ignorant. I merely said I had no theories," observed Roscommon.

"Very well, here is a fact for you. I know a man that told a girl of his ambition to be a painter. Then he asked her to marry him. Now, the girl didn't care a hairpin for art, and the only idea she had about it was that artists were always poor and shabby. She was just ready to fall in love with him, and if she had it wouldn't have mattered what he did for a living. If he only had sense enough to tell her how prettily her hair shone in the lamplight he wouldn't be a sour old bachelor now, and she—"

"It looks just as well in the daylight," remarked Roscommon, addressing the mirror behind Madge.

"I hope the subject doesn't bore you, Miss Breen," he went on, "but you have made an impossible condition. You say a man should know the girl. That is well if he can. But now suppose the one thing he knows about her is that he wants to know more. Perhaps the very mystery of her nature attracts him."

"Then let him surprise her into some revelation of herself."

They were silent for a long time after this. The short winter day was almost gone. Twilight had yet see each other through the twilight.

"Miss Breen, did you ever hear that I was a millionaire?" The question came from Roscommon with startling suddenness. His tone was harsh and had a ring of self satisfaction in it. Madge Breen turned impulsively and then looked away, but not before he was aware of the hurt, disappointed expression in her wide open eyes.

"No, and I hate you for telling me now," she flashed.

"I did not tell you. I only asked a question." The harshness was all gone from his tone. For the first time that afternoon Roscommon's voice grew tender. He leaned toward his companion and said:

"They told me you cared only for money—that you had no heart. I know they lied, but I wanted you to prove it to me. You have shown me the girl I have been waiting to see. You have taught me the way to woo her. I am not rich, Madge, and if I were I should never dream that money could buy you. You say that all men are alike. All but one, you mean. The man you love will be transformed. I ask you to be my wife, dear, not because of what I can give you, but because of what I can take. A man with any other ambition would not have room to keep the treasure of your love. You can do what you will with me. The only thing I shall boast of is a boundless capacity for being loved. Do you want such a man?"

"And you haven't once said, 'I love you,'" she exclaimed with a touch of amusement in her voice. "That is a slight variation from the usual form. Do you suspect I shall do it all?"

"You would have to try me to find out, no matter what I might say," replied Roscommon.

"Well," she breathed softly and then paused. He rose and walked to her chair and waited, with his head bent toward hers.

"Hugo," she whispered, "if you don't love me never let me find it out."

A Discreet Servant.

A certain duke was dining in full kit dress at a ball given in anniversary of his ner, his piper standing behind his chair. At dessert a very handsome and valuable snuff box belonging to one of the guests was handed round. When the time came for it to be returned the snuffbox could not be discovered anywhere. A search was made, but with no result, the duke being especially anxious about it.

On the next anniversary he again donned the kilt—which he had not worn in the interval—for the annual dinner. As he was dressing he happened to put his hand in his sporran and there, to his astonishment, found the box which had been lost. In the last year's dinner. He turned to his piper and said:

"Why, this is the snuffbox we were all looking for! Did you not see me put it away in my sporran?"

"Yes, your grace."

"Then why did you not tell me?" demanded the duke.

"Because I thought your grace received the little matter kept quiet," was the grounded the piper, with a knowing wink.

Unconsciously Funny Ads.

"Humor," says a writer, "is the frank enjoyment of the imperfect." Yes, but not of imperfect fun. And all the advertiser most deliciously amusing when his least aspires to be. I frankly enjoy its laughter-provoking imperfections. "Mind Ellen Terry will positively appear in Hop o' My Thumb' while she, or "Try an intent lamp chimney and save half your light," or even, "Our fish cannot be approached in this department for school of advertising declares in its enthusiastic prospectus, "You will never see the like of it in the whole wall flower in society." And, good luck, why should we? Or, "Gentlemen will find it a pleasure for any author of unwittingly humorous advertisements. Indeed I should be glad to receive them myself, and I promise to acknowledge all such as one and frankly enjoy his correspondent's humor. Meanwhile I would perhaps reserve the right to order his own affairs without assistance from anybody and his humorless su intellect.—Atlantic.

Satmeg Tree and Fruit.

"The nutmeg tree begins to bear at the age of ten years," said a gardener. "It keeps on bearing until it is ninety. The fruit resembles an apricot, and like that fruit the pulp is hurtful to eat, showing at its heart the black nutmeg inclosed in a network of scarlet.

"The nutmeg, after plucking, must be dried. It is dried over a slow fire, and the process is tedious. It often occupies two months.

"Before shipping the nutmegs are always steeped in sea water and lime. This is to protect them from insects. They have nothing but insects to fear. In an insect proof condition they keep —well, they keep practically forever."—New Haven Register.

VICTORIA CATARACT

IT IS ONE OF THE NOTABLE WONDERS OF THE WORLD.

There Is No Other Falls on Earth Just Like It, and There Is No Possibility of Comparison Between It and Our Own Niagara.

It was on the 22d of November, 1855, that the friendly natives with whom he was traveling brought Dr. David Livingstone for the first time within sight and sound of the wonderful cataract on the Zambesi river, now known as the Victoria falls. Before hauling it, the good missionary had journeyed for three months, and from his point of departure at Kuruman, in Cape Colony, had traversed quite 4,000 miles of hitherto unknown country.

Today one takes the train at Cape Town on Wednesday, passes through Kimberley on Thursday, reaches Buluwayo on Saturday, and late in the afternoon of Sunday begins to see in the distance the rising pillar of mist from the great cataract.

The natives call it "Mosi-oa-tunia," meaning "the roaring smoke." Twenty miles away the spray thrown back from the depths of the tremendous cavern into which the river tumbles appears like a column of smoke rising from a burning village, and during the last mile of the railway journey the roar of the falling water becomes audible. Finally, when the edge of the chasm is reached, if the river is in flood, the eye and ear are assailed by a combination of phenomena that probably cannot be duplicated as marvels anywhere else on the planet.

The first question that is asked of an American who has seen this African wonder generally is, "How does it compare with Niagara?" There is not possibility of comparison. The two are as different as day and night. Niagara is a perfect picture in a lovely natural framework. Every point and line and curve of motionless rock, trembling verdure and gliding water is a touch of majestic beauty. Victoria is simply a phenomenon, a terrific gash in the floor of an apparently unending plain, which as one gazes simply swallows a river in a manner that produces almost a thrill of horror.

The Zambesi valley for a hundred miles or more in every direction from the cataract is a rough and broken country covered with low brush and stunted trees, with here and there an outcrop of somber basaltic rock, all intensely monotonous. The horizon is far faintly green and the tropical sky only faintly blue. It is a hot, dull, forbidding country, wanting in clear, cut lines in every direction and lacking almost everything else that observers we always unconsciously seek in nature picture-life. The absence of this produces in the mind a feeling of loneliness and often of fear. Across this solemn scene appears a river a mile and a half wide, perhaps half a mile wide. If a deaf mute were following down current he would be struck at once by the quiet water and the evil looking column of smoke ahead. As he neared the column he would be startled to see the river banks leading down to the water moving away in one side of the confluration and might attribute to the rapid and left to note the fact that his intent. But the panorama changes as he nears. The river is no more, and there, where it should be, is only the heavy plain, as described covered and mountains as ever. One cannot by any stretch of the imagination see the river. It has disappeared into the yawning gash stretching directly across the bed of the river. This fearful abyss is every several swallowing thousands of tons of green and white water and belching up bluish of mist that rise hundreds of feet into the air and hurry away with the winds as if repelling the intruder from the hideous hole. And somewhere, nearly 400 feet below, the entrapped river is fighting its way through a series walls of black rock toward a narrow cleft in the eastern wall, whence it escapes, foaming, boiling, through the zigzags and curves of a deep gorge leading off to the east—and one goes to an edge of the delivering chasm and looks down upon the leaping waters, ever pressed from behind by other floods struggling out of the narrow black gateway, and realizes for the first time in current in motion. It is not difficult to believe that even in such a grim and ghastly way nature has provided a means by which the fearful silt of a flood above that has swallowed the stream can disgorge it again without causing an overwhelming catastrophe. The Victoria cataract should be visited at least twice before one is competent to pass an opinion upon it. When the river is in flood it is the view that is simply terrible. One sees nothing but an enormous sheet of water disappearing into the bowels of the earth with a noise as of mountains falling upon one another, which fogs the mental faculties so that it is impossible to think. One sees the fearful depth of the rocky walls and bending gracefully around the corners toward the narrow outlet pass gayly and laughingly to freedom. For a fine description of the cataract in sleeping.—Theodore F. Van Wagenen in Century.

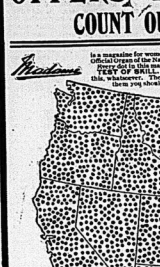

Nothing raises the price of a blessing like its removal.—Moore.

DIRECTIONS.

1. Write your count, name and address very plainly.
2. Say just what subscription and plan is, without any "ifs" or "ands" "make it plain.
3. Be sure to say whether or not you are taking MADAME.
4. Counts may be accompanied by subscription. Note: pass a list of six months subscriptions and one count. If 50 pays for one years subscription and three counts. If you have three counts (subscription) you receive nine additional counts at 25 each. You get $150.00 extra if you have three counts and win. It will pay you to have three. See conditions.

THE DOTS The counting is perfectly free. Good counters can coin dots into dollars. The contest will not last long. Make hay while the sun shines. There is fun in counting and money also. Of course, you know how to count. Any child can count. The contest positively closes July 1st, 1905, at noon. That is why we say send in your count or two to the best counters. The better you count and plan, the better your chances of getting one of the 757 prizes.

The more counts you register the surer you are of winning one of the prizes. Anybody having three counts entered may enter additional counts at 25 cents each.

The list of prizes is large. They are worth working for. You have 757 chances. You are as likely as anybody to get a prize, but if you don't get first prize there are lots of other prizes worth having. It all depends upon you. If you can count and think up a good plan you are likely to win.

An Easy Way to Cure Splitting Headaches.

If headache sufferers would do a little hard thinking, they would surely learn that headache of all kinds are simply results—warning signals—of far more serious trouble. Usually these mean that the blood and nerves are poisoned by an inactive and sluggish liver. The first symptom of the habitual headache sufferer, who explain their condition by saying, "Oh, I have a bad headache," and always get headache if I get excited, or it is too sultry." There is no need of it, either. Stop taking headache powders and powerful drugs that injure the liver, and have your liver in condition in the end. Your liver is good when your skin is clear, your eyes bright, your breath sweet and your blood pure. But in December, when the water is low, the edge of the cataract shows as a long, creamy film of lovely lace; the rising mist flows softly away through the little rain forest below the cavern's lip; the dramatic vault itself becomes a wonderful spectacle, a dream of neutral tints, a cave of beauty. Far down in its dark depths the waters, gliding along the

BEAU BRUMMEL.

Some Incidents in the Life of This Noted Dandish Fop.

An English paper prints a number of stories of Beau Brummel, some of which perhaps are not generally known. At the Pavilion at Brighton, he ordered the footman to empty his snuffbox into the fire because a bishop had taken a pinch unasked. A man who knew he had lent at dinner offered him a gift in his carriage to Lady Jersey. "Thank you exceedingly," he said the Beau, "but how are you to get?" You would not like to get up behind, and I cannot for even in the dickey I'm full with you." He made no secret of his humble birth and when asked about his parents developed the fact that poor old creatures both cut their fifteen years ago cutting peas with a knife." Once at least Brummel showed his mettle. He was playing hazard at Watier's when a certain nobleman, a brewer, was one of the party. "Come, Mardula," said Brummel,

STRANGE ACCIDENTS.

A Broken Neck as the Result of the Turn of a Foot.

"The man who fell out of bed and broke his neck will scarcely attract more than passing notice," said a thoughtful man, "for there have been many cases equally remarkable. I recall one case where a man's neck was broken by a very slight turn of his foot. He attempted to 'catch himself'—that is, to preserve his balance—and the effort was of such violence that he broke his neck. Many men have broken their leg by a sudden stumble and a fall on the sidewalk or by being knocked down by some hurrying pedestrian, or by a street car or a vehicle of some sort.

"It is not at all uncommon for a policeman, with no intention of doing more than subdue a unruly member, to break an offender's neck by rapping him over the head with his club. Sometimes, the fall which follows a blow causes the blow breaks the neck of the offender. Sometimes a sudden, violent motion of the head, a quick jerking motion, the kind we make when dodging, will break the neck.

"I recall a case where a man threw his neck out of joint without breaking it by throwing his head to one side in an effort to dodge a bullet fired at him at short range. The bullet passed through the top of his hat. Even after that he carried his head tilted over the right shoulder and was never able to straighten it."

DUST OF THE DESERT.

It Is an Affliction, but It Is Not Impure, Like City Dust.

A traveler in Egypt writes: "With all its heat and dust the desert has its charms. True, the desert dust is an affliction, for when certain evil winds blow the desert is shrouded in dust—vast swirling clouds through which no eye can see. But when the dust storms have blown over and the desert is calm again you forget the pain for the desert dust is dusty dust, but not dirty dust. Compared with the awful scum dust of New York, the Indian or Paris it is inorganic and pure.

"On those strips of the Libyan and Arabian deserts which flank the Nile the desert dust is largely made up of shredded royalty, of withered Pharaohs, of faded Pharaoh, for the tombs of queens and kings are constant here by the heedless and of their regal purple and their royal linen strips by the tourists. These desiccated dynasties I keep drying and long that they are now quite miniscule.

"Dust of these dead and gone kings makes exceedingly fertile soil for vegetable gardens when irrigated with the rich waters of the Nile. Their mummies are also said to make excellent pigments for the brush. Rameses and Setos, Cleopatra and Hatasu—all these queens dead and turned to clay—when properly ground make a rich umber paint highly popular with artists."

The Stuart Kings.

The family name of the Stuarts was originally, as Mr. Bayley observes, Fitzalan. The original Walter Fitzalan, brother of the ancestor of the dukes of Norfolk, was lord high steward of Scotland, and from this circumstance his branch of the family appears to have adopted the name of Stewart. When the change began is not certain, but it was probably not later than the time of Alexander, the great-grandson of Walter Fitzalan, for both his sons—James, the grandfather of Robert II and all the Scottish Stewart kings, and John, the ancestor of Lord Darnley—appear to have borne the name of Stewart.—Notes and Queries.

A Designing Doctor.

The Sydney bulletin tells of a motoring doctor who ran into and capsized a pedestrian. He looked behind him and, seeing the man still prone, made a circuit and ran back, intending to stop beside and help him. But the motor had a yard or two beyond the mark and hit the man again just as he was getting up. The doctor turned his car once more and was cautiously stealing near to the prostrate sufferer when an excited spectator rushed from the sidewalk and, shaking the victim, exclaimed: "Look out! He's coming at you again!" Whereupon the man scrambled up and started to run.

Hats All Around.

The famous English Chief Justice Holt and his wife hated each other to the limit, and when she fell dangerously ill he was so delighted that he because dignified! Ugly. But his wife was equal to the emergency and sent for the great Dr. Radcliffe, who hated Holt, and therefore out of spite when the case was presented to him came with great quickness and saved her life.—London Chronicle.

Horrible Example.

"Maw, what is a horrible example?" asked the youngest boy, looking up from his newspaper.

The eldest boy stopped his figuring long enough to say, "Wait till you get into algebra, and you'll find my amount of 'em."

WHOLESOME WARNING

SHUN EVIL COMPANIONSHIP AND FOOLHARDY RISKS.

TWO BIG THINGS TO AVOID

Real Courage Does Not Rashly Court Danger, Either Moral or Physical, But Rather Avoids Its Picture of Noble, Brave and Self-Reliant Old Age, Farseeing and Inspiring Through Carefulness.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Profession, Limited, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—In this sermon the preacher gives wholesome warning against foolhardy risks and evil companionship and shows that the real courage does not rashly court danger, either moral or physical, but rather avoids it. The text is "Ecclesiastes xii, 5, "They shall be afraid of that which is high."

What is the Biblical picture of my text? More physical decadence and mental decrepitude? Do we find here, as a dear friend of mine some time ago tried to prove to me, simply a bald blind, deaf, toothless, stiff jointed, unattractive, palsied, helpless old man being wheeled around in an invalid chair or hobbling about on a crutch or grunting and groaning on a bed of chronic invalidism? Is he a nervous wreck, a white haired, timorous old patriarch, afraid of his own shadow? Is he a cowardly person, who, realizing his own physical infirmities with a diseased mind, is enduring up a life of unimaginable dangers if there are no real dangers at hand? I think not. I believe that the writer is here picturing old age, but it is the noble, brave and self reliant old age which your father and mine had when they drew near the end of their earthly career. It is not the pitiable old age of senile cowardliness. It is the farsighted, in spring old age of caretaking cautiousness which generally comes from the bitter experiences of misfortunes. To be cautious is not necessarily to be cowardly. To be reckless is not necessarily to be brave. The reason some young folks are reckless is because they do not see any danger on hand, against which as sensible men and women they should carefully protect themselves.

Let me illustrate. You call me up on the telephone, say: "Hello! Is that you? Will you take a drive this afternoon? I have a fine team of horses and I'll ring in twenty minutes." When you drive with the carriage I see that you have a beautiful, high strung, mettlesome thoroughbred. When I enter the machine I see a bold look in reins that. You speak gaily and confidently to your horse. By the looks of your voice and by the way you handle the reins I know you are a fine driver, and I feel perfectly safe. But supposing I enter your carriage and see you jerk the lines. Then you lose confidence in your bodily strength in horse or cut him with the whip. What do I do? Why, I simply get out of that carriage and walk home, not because I am a coward, but because I know that I am not good how to drive a spirited some horse. I know what that means. I have seen maiden behind a fiery steed, with just such an inexperienced driver as you are, and I was nearly killed. I have more respect for my neck and my life than to trust it into such inexperienced hands alone. Now, I was a young man, I did not care what kind of a horse I rode behind or what kind of a driver had hold of the lines, but from bitter experience now I know about such dangers and give them a wide berth. Such, I think, is the distinction of my text. We see the old man in cowardly, but cautious. We see him afraid of that which is high because past experience has written for such plain "Beware." This is a danger sign, "Beware!"

But do we have to wait until old age before we become wisely cautious. Not by any means. We can be wise and be careful and run no needless risks, but it is certainly the duty of every one of us to learn from old men the lesson of "loving cautiousness." There is entirely too much foolhardiness being on most of us younger men. Many of us have families of children which we are looking to us for their daily bread. We are also responsible for our reputations which can be shot all mankind about us. Thus, instead of telling my hearers to be needlessly reckless, I would tell them in youth and those in the prime of strong, middle life to be "lovingly cautious." Be cautious for your own sakes. Especially be cautious for your dear ones and for the good which you may do for Christ and for the great outside world. No man has a right to run any useless risks whereby his physical life might quickly be ended. If duty calls you as a nurse or a surgeon to enter the contagious ward of a hospital, then there you should go. If duty bids you shoulder a rifle and charge the enemy upon a bloody battlefield for your country's preservation, then there you should go and fight. But if duty does not command you to endanger your physical life, then you have no right to run such reckless risks.

Loafers, lookaroons is not the sign of a sublime bravery, but of arrogant and insipid stupidity. General Wilford T. Sherman on his famous march from Atlanta to the sea powerfully taught this truth. For days and weeks and weary months Joseph E. Johnston and he had been playing hide and seek behind their opposing breastworks. Each would scan the other's flanking movement, then the brave charge, then the quick retreat and the manifestation of the Confederate flank and the building up of new breastworks. One day Johnston, the commander was standing in a dangerous position in a certain fortification. He was telling his engineers how the defenses should be laid out. The bullets in regular hail storm were falling about him and plowing up the ground on every side. A chaplain of one of the regiments climbed up and took his position by Sherman, side. "What are you doing here?" asked Sherman in his blunt, gruff way. "Have you any message for me?" "No, general," answered the chaplain, who had merely come up to view the enemy's position. If you are willing to face danger here I should be willing to do so." "I am here for duty's sake," answered Sherman. "I am not here for curiosity. You have no right to needlessly risk your life. Go below at once. You are doing no good here whatever." What General William Tecumseh Sherman said to that chaplain I say to you with your children depending upon you, with your store depending upon you, with your church, in one sense depending upon you. You have no right to run any useless physical risks.

But, though this truth should be admitted, why every hand we find men trying to prove to the world that they are brave merely because they are foolhardy reckless. Some while ago I went to Yosemite Park, looking upon the Half Dome, rising many hundred feet from the valley below. There is a trail running up within three or four hundred feet of the summit. Then the rock ascends almost perpendicularly to the top. As I stood looking at that height a gentleman told me that in 1874, a Dutchman made up his mind he would ascend to the top of the Half Dome. He ascended it, would do no one any good. It would only endanger his own life. But ascend it he would. So he went and got a lot of iron pegs. He drilled drill and one hole into the side of the Half Dome and then stick a peg into the hole. Then he would crawl up and pound upon that peg and drill another hole and shove in another peg until at last, after days of weary toil, he stood upon "that which is high." "Oh," I said to myself, "how like to the foolish actions of that man are some of our actions!" We risk our physical lives for nothing. Down at the seashore we swim away out beyond the life lines, to make people think we are brave. We go fishing in cranky boats. We climb perilous heights. We ride frightful horses. We run needless risks to bene fit no one. We avoid that which is high. Be wise, and shun foolish and reckless physical dangers. Lovingly cautious should we be in reference to our physical life.

Lovingly cautious, also, should we be in reference to our good names. If the gift which holds the advertising masterpiece is valuable, how much more precious must be the gift called "Horse Fair" be than the wood which holds the name of the great advertising painter? If the setting of a jewel is valuable, how much more valuable must be the "Pitt diamond," which flashed from the golden bit of the queen sword which Napoleon wore on the day of his coronation? If a man's physical life is valuable, how much more valuable is his good name, by means of which he can live that he can be made of some practical good to his fellow men as well as to himself. And yet just think how quickly some are ready to risk their good names as well as their physical existence!

In the first place, for a mere social gathering there are ready to risk little good names by evil associations. Men and women are always judged by the associates they have. You know that well as I know it, but you do not remember that well as I do. Years ago, my father dug the name of a young man whom I was very anxious to have join our church came up. Again and again I have said, "Is it not too bad that Miss So-and-so does not join our church and become a good Christian worker? She seems to be such a nice girl." A church officer of mine said, "Well, I do not know whether she is a nice girl or no, but one thing I do know, she associates with men about town who are very much noted for their immoralities and indecencies—men whom I would not allow to darken my office or my residence. That does not speak very well of her Christian character." What could I say? I could answer nothing. Good men and good women, as a rule, do not make companions of bad men and bad women. And yet to day there are not what some of us are doing for social preferment. Like the Scotchman who risked his physical life by climbing the smooth rocks of the Half Dome or like that reckless climber on the other day lost his life when crawling along the edge of El Capitan in the Yosemite, some of us are risking our good names by associating with such companions and people of unsavory reputation with whom we are seen on the street and in social gatherings.

But the narrow ridges of social gatherings which many men and women foolishly risk their good names are not nearly so many or as narrow as the high as the dizzy and dangerous ledges along which some men are ready to risk their good names in order to win a prize of gold. Where there is one who is ready to risk his or her good name for social success there are ten, twenty, fifty—yea, a hundred—men who are ready to risk their good names for financial success. And these men are often ready to risk their good names when these names are their only capital in life.

Oh, my friends, never allow your good name to be linked to a shady financial enterprise. Never trifle with your good name by investing in a dangerous ledge on which your feet may slip and you may be precipitated into the abyss of disgrace. My father many years ago impressed this fact upon my mind. He said: "My son, for a minister of the gospel, in all probability you will never be financially wealthy, but on account of your good name, unless you are careful, some scheming men will try to drag you into their shady enterprises. Then you will be disgraced, as was my dear friend Schuyler Colfax, who was the political death in the Credit Mobilier scandal."

Let me tell you how Schuyler Colfax was politically ruined. He was at heart an honest man. He was a prominent member of the Christian church, and in his youth was the ignorance of all that was good and true. My father and I, one time, in a business trip had come to him and before a column of thanks a wife high had sworn that Schuyler Colfax was a scoundrel who would have denounced every one of them as a perjurer. He had known Schuyler Colfax for years. He knew him to be a man of an honest purpose, but of an intentional dishonesty—never! But he was a man indiscretion. Some dishonest men were trying to organize a fraudulent conspiracy under a guise of building the Union Pacific Railroad. The company was capitalized at $1,- 000,000. In order to induce the guilible public to take stock the promoters of this company came and said to Vice-President Colfax, "We will make you a present of so much stock for the use of your name," which will give us a standing in the community." And Vice President Colfax, being a professional man and not a business man, was innocently anything to the wrong. He did not intend to do any wrong. He thought the best way to encourage and help a commercial railroad a worthy one. He thought the value of his good name was worth a little, perhaps. But when the scoundrelly promoters of this company had flashed the money out of the pockets of the American people and swamped the financial world all the people as a hurrican broke over Before Colfax's face, and he was driven, into political oblivion. "Now," I said to my father to-day, "you risk your good name. Never be drawn into any financial enterprise in the outside world, even though a dear friend man face the world with clean hands." "Dare Flag" Lewis' motto. Now your good name. Never risk it in shady financial transactions for the reward which you are not willing to tell the world. Be cautious of the reputation of your name for your self. Be lovingly cautious of your name for your dear ones. Be lovingly cautious of your good name for the good you can do. Fellow men. Avoid the wide's is high." Run no dangerous risks.

But now, I must hasten. I am there here. Be prayerfully cautious about your faith in God and your relationship to God. Be careful that you never do anything to endanger that dear, earnest gospel faith in Jesus Christ which you learned at your Christian mother's knee. Be careful that you never, by with those men and women who are accustomed to cast a dirt upon the cross or to joke about the divinity of Jesus Christ. Be careful one that you never read a book which will in any way sap your religious vitality. I know some people like to make the foolish boast that they are intellectual enough not to fear contact with evil associates or evil books. Thomas Jefferson in a late age once wrote a skeptical letter to John Adams. It went something like this: "I thank you for the book you have just sent. I have made a few rude cut in the leaf, but fifty years never to be afraid to read any book, and I shall send this one with pleasure." But, though that sentence may seem to be a very brave statement, I believe it to be a foolish one to make. There are books—evil books—which are full of the gravest danger. They are infidel companions you and I should fear. You have no right to run any useless risks about your spiritual life. Keeping fast hands up by associating with blasphemers and infidels. Be lovingly cautious. You have to risk your physical life or good name by that "which is high."

Be careful, for the devil, and he will flee away from you." But the devil is cowardly. He will not rage to God, and he will draw nigh to you." Only one of the cowards ever to run high to God is to run away from him. Only one way to keep the faith in God is not always like puss gold. It is more often like a rare, beautiful, precious diamond. Bring your diamond too near the hot flames of a blacksmith's forge and it may become it into black, lustreless charcoal. It is not a melting stream of water, clear as crystal, which when you pour it into the fiery forge beneath the surface and draw it out there is left no hole, but a hole. Keep your diamond of faith as bright as it is like a beautiful vase which when once shattered will always show the marks. Be lovingly cautious about your gospel faith by reading a bad book. No man walks closer to Christ because he goes hand in hand with a blasphemous, infidel companion. But there are many dangerous risks in reference to your spiritual life which I might mention, but "which is high."

Be lovingly cautious very careful that we, like Enoch, walk close to God, how much more careful should we be that we have no fears of evil, and we should not lead our loved ones into dangerous spiritual places! Because you are able to row out in a boat and leap over board and swim back to the shore it does not follow that your son will have the strength to do the same. Be careful breakers. Because we are able to some to go through certain temptations and not be harmed it does not follow that we are following after us will be able to do the same. Be careful of dangerous precipices.

Be careful not to needs temporal and spiritual danger reminds me a great deal of that beautiful illustration in Wilson once gave to depict the evil of drunkenness. He said: "Down and up. They were free, free as the air. Then a turn and they were the surprise of the spectators as well as the horror of the owner. Instead of being the birds fly away to the woods they came back to the flames. Round and round they went, hoping each time to get through. But each time they were singed into the fire, until every songster was destroyed.

When I read that account of the destruction of those beautiful birds I said to myself "How like the sinner's course is that story! Christ comes and opens the cage of sin and says, 'Fly away from it.' Free, free. Fly away to heaven.' But after we have become free to sin and to hate God our spiritual strength we answer: "Nay, nay, we do not want to fly away. Let me warm my golden plumage by yonder hot flame of evil." And back we go into the fire of intense love of needless temptations, and thus we are destroyed forever.

Oh, my friends, flee temptation as you would flee death or hell. Christ will save you if you cling to him. Christ will never save you if you deliberately, intentionally and stubbornly cling to needless indiscretion or to seek needless spiritual dangers. By the shortcomings of your past life wantonly guard against the temptations of the future not only for your self, but for those dear ones who are by your side.

The Old Man Cactus.

Nature indulges in an occasional joke. There is found growing in the desert region of North America a species of cactus known to botanists as Pilocereus senilis, or the "old man cactus." There is in this plant a wonderful resemblance to the human form covered with gray hairs. The plant is shaw of the trunk, and full specimens are more frequent than large ones. The plant is covered with long white hairs, which in combination with the body or trunk of the plant. These hairs are frequently gathered into locks, adding to the resemblance of the frowsy head of an old man. Plants known to be twenty-five years old are but a few inches in height, yet specimens are found which are twenty-five feet tall and a foot in diameter, and botanists do believed, the growth of several hundred years. In these gigantic specimens of old man cactus the hairs are long, and quite the most appropriate part of the title.

His Seldlitz Powder Carriage.

How a man can be made a fool by a common seldlitz powder is described by a German physician, Dr. Hanck, who was called to treat a man who had swallowed a large piece of tough meat without chewing it properly. It was impossible to dislodge the meat by natural means and as the patient's condition was critical, the doctor tried the efficacy of the gas which is generated when the constituents of a seldlitz powder are mixed. He directed the man to swallow the two halves of one of the powders separately, and the resulting peanatmic pressure, aided by the man, who shut his mouth and nostrils, dislodged the meat with sufficient to drive the piece of meat out of the gullet into the stomach."

Making Wives Happy.

"It seems to me that the way to make a woman happy is to give her all your sympathy and affection," says Dr. Lubbock, "and to show that you feel old." As for overlooking my faults, I must say that I never do. Public is the wife. If it does happens that there are a few very patent ones—and I suppose there are some women who are not—I quietly angels—a man ought not to remember that no matter what disguises he may experience after this range it was he himself who undertook the responsibility of taking to himself a young woman that he promised to love and honor."

Oxford Chancellor Range

One of the troubles with most wood-burning ranges is the lack of hot water. The usual reservoir is of small capacity and not placed near enough the fire to raise the water to a sufficiently high temperature, and it takes considerable time and fuel to heat the water at all.

The Oxford Chancellor wood-burning range is fitted with a large reservoir of planished copper, which is easily kept clean. This reservoir is placed next the fire-box, and therefore the water heats very quickly and to a high temperature. The reservoir may be detached or attached to the range in five minutes by anyone.

Write us for booklets about the Oxford Chancellor Range, and the address of the nearest dealer who can show it to you. A post card will do.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLES DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

St. Thomas'.

Services yesterday were bright and well attended. The rector officiated, both morning and evening. The morning sermon was on "God's call to every man, and the nature of our response," from 1 Sam., 3—10. "The Lord called to Samuel and he answered." The text of the evening sermon was from Matt. 19—10.

The services for the next two months will not cover a longer period than one hour, the sermons themselves being under 15 minutes.

John Street.

In the absence of the pastor yesterday Rev. A. Martin preached in the the morning, and in the evening the Rev. Dr. George, of Chicago, a former pastor, occupied the pulpit. His discourse was an able effort. During the service Mrs. L. Higgs sang a solo.

Bridge Street.

William, Prince of Orange," was the subject of the Rev. J. P. Wilson's sermon at Bridge Street Church last evening. The Rev. gentleman's discourse had reference to the approaching anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne and the duty of Protestants to Church and State. It was an admirable discourse on the text in St. Matthew, 23rd chapter and latter portion of the 5th verse:

"For one is your Master even Christ, and all ye are brethren." During the service Mrs. Humphrey sang a song entitled "Thy Will be Done," and Mrs. G. Dier rendered a solo entitled "Tarry with Me, O My Saviour."

Christ Church.

Rev. Canon Lauder, of Picton, occupied the pulpit of Christ Church yesterday and his discourses were much appreciated. The morning lesson was from St. John, 18th chapter and 14th verse:

"Ye are my friends if ye do whatsoever I command you."

Baptist Church.

Yesterday Rev. J. McDonald, of Dunnville, preached two very able and instructive sermons. In the morning his subject was the "Lessons of Sin"; text 2nd Kings, 5—1:

"Now Naaman, captain of the host of the King of Syria, was a great man with his master and honorable, because by him the Lord had given deliverance with Syria; he was also a mighty man in valor, but he was a leper."

St. Michael's.

The congregation of St. Michael's pro-Cathedral in the house is exceptionally large numbers of Jubilee yesterday, when Rev. Father Collins, who on Saturday last ordained the Smith's Falls, celebrated his first mass. He was assisted in his mission, J. J. Fahey, and Dorion Rhoume, of Ottawa, as also of boys in addition to the members of the congregation a number of the newly-ordained priest's Parishioners from Smith's Falls were present. The sermon was preached by Rev. Father Twomey, who spoke very highly of Father Collins, and congratulated him on the position to which he had attained. The sermon is said to be one of the best ever given in this city.

DRUNKENNESS IS ON THE INCREASE.

NUMBER OF COMMITMENTS LAST YEAR SHOW AN INCREASE OF 693.

The number of commitments for drunkenness in Ontario last year was the largest in fifteen years, being 8,590, an increase of 693 over 1903.

The Provincial Secretary, in a report just issued, gives the following comparative table, showing number of commitments for years as far back as 1879:

1879:	1904,	3,590;	1903,	2,987; 1902,
2,674;	1901,	2,981;	1900,	2,777; 1899,
1,892;	1898,	1,707;	1897,	1,716; 1896,
1,987;	1895,	2,237;	1894,	2,274; 1893,
2,052;	1892,	2,746;	1891,	3,614; 1890,
4,210;	1889,	4,797;	1888,	4,451; 1887,
4,189;	1886,	4,205;	1885,	3,936; 1884,
4,650;	7883,	4,697;	1882,	3,497; 1881,
4,328;	1880,	4,305;	1879,	4,981; 1878,
3,765;	1877,	4,032;	1876,	3,858.

The report shows that the sale of liquor licenses and fines brought in to the Province last year a revenue of $649,412.90, compared with $614,- 1904 in 1903, and $627,852.22 in 1902.

The year's receipts were distributed as follows: Paid to municipalities, $257,866.64; paid to Province, $304,- 277.79; paid for inspectors' salaries and Commissioners expenses, $69,412.- 72; paid for sundries, $14,959.99; total expended in balance transferred to 1904-5, $2,495.51. Total, $649,412.90.

While the revenue as mentioned, the total number of licenses was decreased, being 2,97, compared with 3,023 in 1903.

The fines collected during the year amounted to $20,465, as compared with $16,559 in 1903.—Toronto News.

HOME-COMING PREPARATIONS

BELLEVILLE WILL BE EN FETE FOR SEVERAL DAYS.

At the meeting of the Belleville Old Boys' Association, held in St. George's Hall, Toronto, on Friday evening last, the announcement was made that the people of Belleville, in anticipation of their home-coming, had made preparations for holding a reunion there from July 22nd to 27th. Reduced rates will go into effect on the railways, and the programme will include concerts, excursions, games, aquatic sports, and special church services. At the meeting an entertaining concert was provided, selections being rendered by Messrs. John Cameron, W. R. Carmichael, Charlie Bond, Miss E. Stiles, Miss Gertie and others. An appropriate address was made by Mr. J. Finkle, of Belleville. Mr. J. E. Cook, the president, occupied the chair.

MR. JOS. TEMPLETON WRITES ABOUT FISHING.

HE HANDS OUT A FEW LEFT-HANDED COMPLIMENTS TO MESSRS. HURLEY AND MACMILLAN.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir,—It may interest many of our angling friends to quote a few passages from the Sixth Annual Report of the Department Fisheries, Ontario, just issued.

"Overseer Freeman, Brighton, reports: Fishing poor last season and advises that no net fishing be allowed in the spring in the Bay of Quinte. Presque Isle Bay or Weller's Bay as they are the best spawning grounds."

"Overseer Gillespie, Campbellford, reports: 'Bass and muskinonge fair, and trout (now as poor, and not equal to last season."

"Overseer Clark, Picton, reports: Large decrease in all kinds of fish except white fish, which show an increase, but that 90 per cent. of fish are shipped from Bay of Quinte to United States."

"Districts Overseer McCargar reports, 'Fish plentiful in Mouth of Bay of Quinte. Bass fishing was splendid in all parts of the Trent River waters, and some fine muskinonge below Belleville was simply unequalled. Overseer reckoning of sailfishes, as they are in many cases carried out."

While many of us were busily disappointed at the extension of time for net fishing this spring, we have hope that, when the department investigates the case in the Bay of Quinte district, they will restrict spring fishing in futures, and if they do approach anywhere near as W. P. Clarke was when he was nominated for Inspector, who will enforce the law, while we cannot expect good fishing for several years, it ought to improve a little, as things must do, unless we starve, or live on fish entirely. What is most objectionable in the reports of Messrs. Mc-Millan and Hurley is the fact that they are used by net fishers to help their claim that fishing is not impaired by wholesale netting at all seasons, but rather improved. Hon. Mr. Latchford, the new Minister of Fisheries, seems to be a man with his head screwed on tight, and will act in his action in other places, and we look for him for the part.

A local inspector should be appointed at once, as not only numerous night nets, but several gill nets are being set within five miles of Belleville. Every day I see a number of gulls on the towers that some of them may be preserved. Many of us wonder what Mr. Hurley does for his salary, when he will allow the law to be laughed at right at his door — even if it is not his place to prosecute he should and would report the state of affairs if he was at all fit for the position. Instead of writing annual reports on the splendid fishing of the Bay of Quinte. Talk about fish hatcheries or fish stories, he is the champion for this district, and "there is no second."

Thanking you for space,

Yours respectfully,

JOS. TEMPLETON.

FOR 56 YEARS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT ROBERT GORDON, ESQ., OF BWEED.

From the Christian Guardian of the 28th inst., we clip the following: Mr. Robert Gordon is well known to many of our citizens, he is the father of Mr. Norman W. H. Gordon, superintendent for several years of the Tamworth Methodist Sunday School:

Rev. J. W. Sutton writes that on the Tweed Circuit, at the Lodgeroom Church, Mr. R. Gordon, superintendent of the Sovereign Bank, is now in his fifty-seventh year as superintendent of the Sunday school. Some of his workers in the school during the term of Mr. Gordon's superintendency are no doubt now aged people. Our brother has always been up to the last that there are in the school as scholars persons who are well advanced in years. We would like to know if there is in any other school a similar record of uninterrupted service in superintendent for fifty-six years, entered with vigor and zeal into the fifty-seventh."

PAIN ABOUT THE HIPS.

It is a common complaint with women. The right treatment is Nerviline, which penetrates to the seat of the pain immediately. Nerviline warms and soothes the affected parts, draws out the irritation and pain, allows the patient ease after one rub-bing. No liniment so economical and safe. Nearly fifty years in use, and the demand immensely greater every day! Nerviline must be good.

SENATE ARMING TO DEFEAT COERCION ?

INDICATIONS THAT THE SENATORS MAY YET BE THE HEROES OF THE AUTONOMY BILL TRANSACTION—AN EXCITING DEBATE MAY END IN REFERRING BILLS BACK TO HOUSE.

(Toronto Sunday World.)

Ottawa, July 8.—Special)—There is a well defined impression this morning that when the autonomy bills come up in the Senate on Tuesday there will be very little plain sailing, for these two fruits of a bogus session.

It is said that a determined effort will be made by the Upper Chamber to modify the drastic terms of the education clause and a long and heated debate is to take place. Sir Mackenzie Bowell is opposed to the shackling of the west, and there is every indication that on the Liberal side of the Senate, among the Liberals of the old school of Liberalism, there will be many protests against the proposed outrage.

It is even asserted that the Senate may send back the Alberta and Saskatchewan bills to the Commons for reconsideration. In the event of the bills passing the Senate it may be stated confidently that it will be only after a long and exciting discussion, and the prorogation may be delayed for another week or ten days by reason of the determination of the Upper House against the coercion of the west.

Not only the educational clauses but the land clauses are likely to meet with considerable criticism. Senator Langlois has already asked for information concerning the areas of land, especially school lands, in those districts, and this information may take some time to get together.

The senate intends, one thing is certain, to discuss the bills and dissect the autonomy bills very thoroughly and prorogation will not be hastened or delayed by reason of that intention.

Ottawa, July 8.—Special)—Returns ordered for a return showing the number of closed grazing leases granted before 1897 by the Government of the Northwest Territories. The request was made on Saturday at Smith's Falls, by Archbishop Gauthier, assisted by the priest in charge of the church in that town and by several priests from surrounding churches. Among those who witnessed the solemn ceremony were the young Father's mother, Mrs. Daniel Collins, Miss Geary, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burke, Mr. and Mrs. McGinnis, and Mr. Walter Belair, of this city. Father Collins' brother and Morrisburg were present as well.

Later in the day the newly-ordained priest entertained his mother at her home in this city.

OMINOUS SIGNS IN INDIA.

Europeans Fear a Mutiny For Native Unrest is Not Lid.

Simla, India, July 10.—Dread of another mutiny is being felt by all Europeans here. India is in a very serious state, and the authorities are making heroic endeavors to prevent the unrest and the mutinous spirit which, in spite of all their efforts, is spreading like an infection from Province to Province.

The cause of this condition is the war between Russia and Japan for the supremacy of the East. Any one has come as a revelation to the natives. That an Asiatic race has defied and even conquered a European race has made them think. The spirit of self satisfaction and trouble in the air now is far more acute than it was two years before the mutiny.

Lord Kitchener's statement that the Indian army is practically worthless has been widely circulated among the ignorant natives. Lord Curzon's tyrannical methods have set every class against his personality and the personality of the ruler has an effect in India which is inexplicable.

It is a fact that in Central India hundreds of Afghans are looting and skulking alone or in couples. This is considered to be an ominous sign, for the Afghans do not wander so far south with any peaceful purpose in mind. If a holy war were to be preached, the Mohammedans would be in much the object of native fury nowadays as the Christians.

The situation has an ugly look and there is a prayer on everyone's lips that the cloud will not emit a storm.

AUDITOR GENERAL RESIGNS.

J. Lorne Macdougall Carries Out His Threat of The Other Day.

Ottawa, July 10.—Auditor-General Lorne Macdougall resigned Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Macdougall was returned for the House of Commons for South Huron in September, 1885, again in 1874, and at an interval in 1887. 1874, when he was appointed Auditor General of Canada by the Mackenzie Government, and has held the office ever since.

Tamagami Not Fireswept.

Montreal, July 10.—The rather sensational despatch regarding forest fires in the Temagami region, sent out from Ottawa last week, was misleading. There was only a very small fire, about one mile south of the Temagami station and not on Temagami Lake proper. The south of the lake has not been touched by fire, as was stated, and the country in the north is

JAPS ATTACK SAKHALIN

Land Troops on Important Island to Aid Her Diplomats.

Jap Squadron Opens Fire on the Village of Korsakovsk—Torpedo Boats Begin Movement for Possession of the Island—Russians Blow Up Their Guns and Burned Government Buildings Before Retiring.

St. Petersburg, July 10.—A landing of Japanese troops on the island of Sakhalin was officially reported Saturday to the naval and military authorities in St. Petersburg, though it had been realized, since the defeat of Admiral Rojestvensky, that the Japanese were able to take possession of the island as soon as they thought fit. The strength of the landing force cannot be ascertained, but the garrison of the island is too weak to offer an effective resistance.

Gen. Liapunoff Reports.

A despatch, dated July 7, from Gen. Liapunoff, commanding the Russian troops on the Island of Sakhalin, says:

"At 9 o'clock in the morning of July 7 a Japanese squadron appeared off the Village of Chlpivan, about seven miles southeast of Korsakovsk, and opened fire on the shore."

Another despatch of the same date says: "At 2 p. m. Japanese torpedo boats approached Korsakovsk, and the Russian artillery opened fire on them and compelled the boats to retire. During the bombardment four of the inhabitants of Korsakovsk were killed. The bombardment had been anticipated, and the commander had ordered the withdrawal of the defenders south ward."

Stroke of Diplomacy.

Though the above seem small forces to risk a grand battle with Gen. Liapunoff, should the issue menace Washington and the landing of troops on Sakhalin is considered in connection with Japan's decision regarding the formal appointment of a general ambassador, that in the interval before the reading it is necessary to occupy the island whose possession is an important one in Japan's diplomatic contest at Washington.

Russians Blow Up Guns.

The Japanese first encircling the land log of troops on the island of Sakhalin, consisting of two battalions, engineers, some gunboats, 32 torpedo boats and 10 transports hooded with troops.

The Japanese landed at the Village of Muraw, between Ba-gin and Kusakowsk.

The commander of the Russian detachment left troops at Korsakovsk to guard the town and proceeded to blow up all the Government buildings before retiring.

For the First Time.

With the Japanese fleet loosely patrolling the Tartar Straits and other eighteen months of war, the Japanese army is landing on Sakhalin island. It is generally admitted here in response to a request and in deference to Tokio. Complete occupation of the island is the next step for consideration in the treaty of peace.

There is a discrepancy of opinion with regard to the terms with which the peace negotiations at Washington open. Of the irreconcilables declared that it is the desire of the government to occupy more immediately than before.

The Japanese Position.

Washington, July 10.—Count Cassini, to-day, called at the White House conference, on the ground that one is to be held tomorrow. It is the first time it has been received by President Roosevelt, and informally transmitted to the Japanese government, as a method to favor the suggestion, Japan will not demand $1,000,000 per steamer, but will publish her acquiescence that Manchuria is to be returned to the Chinese. Each of the principles for which she saw sacrifice is fulfilled.

Gradually Driving North.

Tokio, July 10.—The following official despatch has been received from the Japanese army headquarters in Manchuria:

Occasional collisions take place between Virginia, on the east of the road along the Pechiwa, Kai Yuen and Kwan Cheng roads.

The enemy is being gradually driven northward.

Peace Plenipotentiaries Sail.

Yokohama, July 10.—The steamer Minnesota, having on board Japan's peace plenipotentiaries, sailed from this port for Seattle at 4.20 Saturday afternoon. The Governor of Yokohama and the officials received the peace plenipotentiaries to the pier, where they were received by a military escort. On the pier the plenipotentiaries and their suites and the Americans were conveyed to the Minnesota, which was dressed with flags, as were all the ships in the harbor. The Marquis Ito, Baron Kaneko, the other members of the Japanese and the Americans lunched were among those who accompanied Baron Komura and his party to the Minnesota. An enormous crowd of Japanese and foreigners, with bands of music, assembled at the waterfront, and a great enthusiasm was manifested. The bands playing patriotic airs and the crowds discharging fireworks.

The Japanese guardship Tatsuta fired a salute of 19 guns as the Minnesota put to sea, escorted by a torpedo boat and a naval steamer specially detailed to convey her out of Tokio Bay.

Engineer and Fireman Die.

Reging, July 10.—Engineer Lang of Saskatoon and Fireman W. Parrott, the men injured in the accident to the freight train at Pilot Butte, died at Victoria Hospital Saturday. Lang died from effects of internal injury, and Parrott could not survive the shock of amputation a little below the thigh. An inquest will be held on the bodies on Monday.

Lightning Kills Live Stock.

Madoc, July 10.—Farmer John Deyarmon, living on the 4th concession of Madoc Township, had 12 head of cattle killed by lightning Saturday night. He had $200 insurance. Farmer Rice, 7th concession of Rawdon, had eight horses killed in the same storm.

MURDER AT OSHWEKEN

Betsey Jacobs Choked to Death by Bad Indian.

Crime a Peculiarly Revolting One—Squaw's Throat Bare Marks of Finger Nails Choked Her Life Out—Alleged Murderer, Joe Bennett, Still at Large Although Police Are Hot After Him.

Brantford, July 10.—Early yesterday morning the little village of Oshweken, 12 miles from Brantford, was the scene of a revolting murder. A squaw, Betsey Jacobs, was choked and outraged by one whom suspicion claims to be Joe Bennett, a noted horse thief and bad Indian.

The discovery was made by David Davis, an Indian, for whom the murdered woman did washing. In the little log cabin where she lived her body was found, her throat bearing the marks of the fingers which choked her life out. One eye was also bruised considerable, as if pummeled. The murdered woman was living alone at the time, the rest of the family being at the berry-picking at Norwich. They occupied a little one-roomed log cabin situated in the Village of Oshweken. In this cabin are three beds and upon one of these Betsey retired on Saturday night. Towards morning the little house was broken into through the window. The murderer evidently sprang upon the helpless woman, forced her to the floor and choked the life out of her in his frenzy. The weapon used in the crime was a stick of bed and was in this position when found.

Police Chase Suspect.

Suspicion points directly to Joe Bennett, one of the worst characters on the reserve. On Sunday he was in this city and while here figured prominently in a row. It is said that by night he was badly intoxicated. The theory is that he left the city after the row and made for the Jacobs house and breaking in discovered that the occupant was alone.

When the body was discovered the constables set out at once for Bennett. The Indian had a fair start, but before noon he was also discovered drinking in Cayuga. When Bennett saw that he was recognized he mounted one of the horses and the cal plunged on foot into the Indian bush. The pursuit was also unable to find him being reinforced by constables from Brantford.

Will Get Him.

At a late hour he was still at large, but his capture is only a matter of time. It may be some days, but he will be caught. Since the murder the Indians are ill-at-ease and the police have extra constables sent. For several years Bennett has been a source of complaint in a horse stealing case.

The proof that Bennett is the man is considered strong. Other Indians who had taken out the Oshweken pool tickets left on Saturday night and called on Joe Bennett for the murdered woman. The name of the woman who bore these pools of nine and has been a partial cripple for a considerable time. Bennett is a powerful man and one of the Brantford police have several records of his strength and prowess to his against him, but of late he had been on the Six Nation reserve.

MUTINY DOESN'T BOTHER.

New Crew Secured — Strikers Leave for Boston.

Halifax, July 10.—The majority of the crew of the Allan steamship Corinthian, who left the ship Friday on account of the strike, left Halifax Saturday evening for Boston.

It is understood none of them will be prosecuted against. A sufficient number of men have been secured to complete the crew, and the cruiser was to sail Saturday night to meet the turbine Virginian, to take her place on Glen mails and hurry them to Sydney, to connect with the Empress.

Peterboro's Political Picnic.

Peterboro, July 10.—Great enthusiasm marked the 22nd and successful picnic held Saturday under the auspices of the Peterboro Young Conservative Association. Over 5,000 people were present. There was an attendance of 2,000 from Lindsay. The excursion included Hon. Nelson Monteith, Senator Ferris, Peterboro; Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Maniboba; Andrew Brady, M. P., Dundas, and E. H. Gurney, who gave addresses.

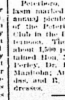

Capt. Wilson's Leg Cut Off.

Cornwall, July 10.—Capt. H. F. Wilson of the steamer Lansdowne, had his leg cut off Saturday night.

While passing his boat tied up above lock 19, Cornwall Canada, when the log got caught in a loop of rope and crushed so badly that amputation was necessary.

The limb was taken off below the knee.

MAST BROKE; MAN MAY DIE.

Serious Accident on Hamilton's Canada Cup Challenger.

Hamilton, July 10.—The doctors fear that Harry Brockbank, 227 1-2 North Macnab street, one of the crew of J. H. Farnsdale's challenger, Canada, Kingston, was fatally injured Saturday afternoon.

The boat was taken out for a spin, and the wind carried away about half the mast. Brockbank, who is deaf and dumb, was struck by the falling mast and injured internally so badly that the doctors at the City Hospital has not much hope of his recovery.

German Lieutenant Suicides.

Kiel, Germany, July 10.—First Lieutenant Niemann, commander of the torpedo boat S 124, which collided with the battleship Wurth, July 5, killed himself with a revolver at his residence Saturday night, doubtless from the humiliation which he suffered over the accident and the probability of his professional career being ruined. He was the son of Lieut. Gen. Niemann.

War History.

An old darky was watching the G. A. R. parade one Memorial day and was vociferously cheering the band. I suppose you were through the civil war, uncle?" said a bystander. "Ever' step of it, suh!" "At the surrender too?" "Ever' step of it, suh!" "What did General Lee say to General Grant?" "Never said nuttin', suh; dey chopped off his haid an' went on!"

The Wily Barber.

"Ah, yes," mused Mr. Oldboy, "when I was a young fellow and went to the hairdresser's to get my hair cut he used to flatter me by asking if I wanted a shave. Now when I go to the hairdresser's to get a shave he flatters me by asking if I want my hair cut."

MISSOURI RIVER BOATS.

Trips of the Old Side Wheelers In the Early Days.

In the early days there was a regular line of packets between St. Louis and St. Joseph, all side wheelers, and the average round trip occupied eight days. A boat left St. Louis every day for the Missouri river, and as there were fourteen boats in the line each boat made a round trip once every two weeks during the season. During the winter the boats ran between St. Louis and New Orleans.

Coming up the river the boats ran all night, but in going down they always laid up as soon as darkness set in. In going down the river the boats usually left St. Joseph early in the afternoon and laid up for the night at Weston, where there was always a lot of freight to load. The next day they went to Lexington, the next to Boonville and the next to St. Louis. Occasionally during high water a boat would leave Lexington at daylight and reach St. Louis in time for breakfast the next morning.

The boats carried from 200 to 400 passengers on the trip up the river, counting the immigrants on the deck, but going back they only had cabin passengers. The cabin fare from St. Louis to St. Joseph ranged from $10 to $15, which included meals and stateroom. The boats were all supplied with fine cooks, and the passengers lived on the best that money could buy.

The average boat carried 500 to 600 tons of freight in addition to passengers. During low water freight that now costs 20 cents a hundred cost $2.50 a hundred. The expense of a round trip from St. Louis to St. Joseph, including loading and unloading, was estimated at $4,000, and the income from cost to $7,000. Each boat carried a crew of from 80 to 100 men. The average value of the boats in the line was probably $45,000 each.

The boats were often on sand bars, where they sometimes remained for a day and night, but altogether the time was made surprisingly well. A pilot who had a reputation for keeping his boat off the bars commanded as high as $500 a month. Each boat was provided with two pilots, and this expense usually amounted to from $900 to $1,000 a month. All a river pilot saved he put in his watch chain. You could tell a high priced pilot by the size of the links in his gold watch chain. A rattling good first mate who knew how to handle a boat after it struck a bar received $250 a month.

Poker was a favorite river amusement, and it was not an uncommon sight to see eight or ten games going at the same time in the main cabin of a steamboat. And the playing was for actual money, which was displayed in stacks on the tables.

Among the famous boats on the river at that time were the Kate Kinney, F. G. Aubry, Morning Star, John D. Perry, Sioux City, Omaha, Carrier and the James H. Lucas. The last named made the fastest run in the history of the river—20 hours and 22 minutes from St. Louis to St. Joseph.

How Wines Are Colored.

"Most people think white grapes make white wine and dark grapes make red wine," said a visitor. "That is a popular error.

"Red wine is made by fermenting grape juice and grape skins together the skins giving the color, and white wine is made by fermenting grape juice alone.

"The juice of white and of dark grapes doesn't differ in hue. In each sort of grape the juice is almost colorless, like the weakest cider. It is

"Champagne, one of the dearest of the white wines, is made of a grape so dark as to be nearly black. But the juice of that nearly black grape is quite as pale as the juice of the bloodest white grape."

Japanese Radish.

Picture to yourself a pure white radish the size of a baseball or larger, firm and solid. Such is the Japanese radish. Cut it, and you find it has the consistency of a Baldwin apple, firm and fine grain; taste, and it proves to be away ahead of the most delicate spring radish that ever passed your lips. It will thrive at any season during the growing year. It may be transplanted or left alone, cultivated or unpitated. It is as good to eat when in bloom as in its younger days, and one radish will provide bulk enough for three or four people or more.—Garden Magazine.

THE APPOINTING POWER.

A Story of President Grant and an Obstinate Subordinate.

General Grant's generosity to his foes, his many private and official kindnesses to the needy and orphans of Confederate soldiers, is an old tale, but it bears repetition in the form of an incident which Hetha D. Longstreet gives in "Lee and Longstreet at High Tide."

The widow of a Confederate officer applied to the postoffice department to be appointed postmistress in a small southern town. As she heard nothing of her application, she went to Washington to press it. She was unable to move the authorities at the postoffice department and was about to go home in despair when a friend suggested that it might be worth while for her to see the president.

With such effort she summoned courage and appeared at the White House. The president received her in a most friendly manner and after hearing her story took her application and wrote a strong but brief indorsement on the back of it. She hurried in triumph to the postoffice department.

The official to whom she presented the application frowned and pondered over it for some time and then wrote under the president's indorsement, "This being a fourth class office, the appointment lies with the postmaster, power."

The application was handed back to her, and she went away in deep distress and was again preparing to return home when a friend kindly told her by all means to take the paper back to the president, so that he might see how his indorsement had been received. When the president read it he wrote under the last indorsement, "While the president does not have the appointing power in this office, he has the appointing power in the postmaster general," and, summoning his secretary, President Grant directed him to accompany the lady to the department and in person deliver her application to the intimate postmaster general.

She received the commission before she left the office.

STREET ETIQUETTE.

While walking with a lady, the gentleman should take the side next the street.

One salutation is all that civility requires when passing a person more than once on a public promenade.

If the lady with whom you are walking is saluted by another gentleman, acknowledge the same by removing your hat.

The gentleman should raise his hat when asking a lady's pardon for an inadvertence, whether she is known to him or not.

Should you desire to converse with a lady you should happen to meet, do not detain her, but turn and walk in her direction.

While walking with a lady in a crowded thoroughfare and obliged to proceed singly, the gentleman should precede the lady.

When Goldsmith Wrote.

An old volume which an Atlanta booklover prizes was found in an old bookshop recently. It is "The History of Rome," by Oliver Goldsmith. Goldsmith's name takes one back to the literary fellows of that day, the hack work they did to keep life in them, for when Goldsmith was at work writing that history he was doing twenty different things besides, little odds and ends that brought money for his daily bread, with a scolding landlady laying down the law to him, for it was the time when the great Dr. Johnson thought himself lucky when he could dine in a cellar on sixpence worth of tripe and a pennyworth of bread and wipe his fingers on the back of a Newfoundland dog after his greasy meal!" And to think of the growling that is done by the little authors of the present day!

"Home, Sweet Home."

"Home, Sweet Home," Payne's song, was originally a number in the opera "Clari, the Maid of Milan," a production brought out in 1822. The opera was a failure, and nothing is now known of it save the one song, which became instantly popular. Over 100,000 copies were sold in the first year of its publication, and the sale in one form or another has been constant ever since the first appearance of this beautiful theme. The melody is a Sicilian folk song and was adapted to the words by Payne himself.

Easy Way.

"I want to do something that will draw out the conversational abilities of my friends," said the hostess.

"That's very easy," answered Miss Cayenne. "Give a musical."

Nightcaps and Insomnia.

All one has to do in order to secure a good night's rest is to wear a nightcap. We are assured that the great secret is to keep the head warm, and then one may sleep like a top.—London Draper.

Is it a Good Sign ?

One sign of prosperity pointed out by Mr. Harding in the budget speech was the increase in money orders drawn in Canada payable in Italy. The amount of such orders was $60,000 in 1900, whereas in 1905 it was $546,281.

This is undoubtedly a sign of the growth of the Italian colony in Canada, and a proof that these people are gathering in money and sending it home. There is no doubt that the number of immigrants from Italy, Greece, Syria and other additional Mediterranean countries is large and increasing. These are not colonists in any true sense of the word. Some are laborers, but many are peddlers and small traders. They spend little. Many of them live as no Canadian would live, and send their money home, returning to their own country after they have saved what they regard as a competence. The sum mentioned by Mr. Fielding represents instalments on the savings which thrifty Italians are making to be spent in their later years in their native land. It is not certain, says the St. John, N. B., Sun, that the presence of these colonies, and the increase of the number who belong to them, and the larger sums sent by them to Italy are good for this country.

Hay's Successor.

No one will question the ability of Mr. Elihu Root who succeeds the late John Hay in the Department. Clothed though few would credit him with the fortunate equipoise, humanity and breadth of view of the man so unexpectedly summoned by death, Mr. Root's standards are not so high as Mr. Hay's were, and his recent association with some of the leaders in the corporation jugaling in the United States should tend to make him a figure of questionable standing in the popular fancy and estimation. Mr. Root is a great lawyer and a man of proved administrative ability. He needs money and is ambitious to be President.

In the view of many in our country and Great Britain another secretary of State would be preferred to Mr. Hay was a friend to Britain. He had been bred in a great school and his great gifts were broadened thereby. He had seen the worst face of war and was the confirmed advocate of peace and fair play. Mr. Root was a member of the Alaska Boundary Tribunal. He is said to have engineered the latest Equitable deal. That is to say, he is a clever man. More is needed to fill us satisfactorily. The company in the circle of Mr. Roosevelt's advisers, in that circle Mr. Hay was popularly accounted the reliance was based largely on. It appears to have projected certain lines of policy which his successor will be somewhat reluctant to disturb.

TIMELY TOPICS.

I WONDER—

The more I think of this and that,
The more I wonder why a hat
That's worn in Spring, is all agiow
With Autumn leaves—I find it so.
I wonder why a woman who's fat,
Sighs, moans, short and all of that,
Will lay his cap for stately queens,
And why not, too, strange as it seems
I wonder why a girl who's old—
Who says she never has been told—
Will search full all her live-long days
For a husband young—boy to raise.
I wonder why a man whose face
Is ugliest of the human race
Is named Marie, or Caro-line—
A puzzle, this, too deep for mine.
I wonder why the matron plump,
Who thinks each man a hopeless chump,
Whose intellect more than equals par,
Can't learn to leave a trolley car.
I wonder how that piker, Jones-
Earns less than I by full ten bones—
Can wear as vile ties out of town
Yet I must rob the baby's bank.
I wonder why it is that when
A girl gets on a car, the men,
If she be ugly, sit and stare;
But, holy snakes, if she be fair
It's awfully different—every chump
Gives her his seat right on the jump!

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The entire boiler is steel and iron. The joints are made with steel push nipples, which are absolutely indestructible — no rubber washers.

THE Oxford Hot Water Boiler is built to use absolutely all the heat generated in the fire-pot.

The inclining walls of the fire-pot expose great surface to the direct heat of the fire. The first section is greater in depth than the other sections, and the flues of this section are bell-shaped, against which the heat rays sharply impinge, so that a greater body of water gets the direct effect of the fire.

The giving of a grant by the Council to assist in having a full fair established in this city will no doubt be approved by the citizens. Belleville is the centre of a rich agricultural section and there is no reason why a fair, first-class in every respect, should not be held here annually.

The City Fathers have decided to take a rest from civic duties for a few weeks. They have earned a vacation, judging from the length of some of the Council sessions held during the past few months. The gentlemen of the Council have also done some very good work and the citizens should remember that these gentlemen give their time for nothing.

Mayor Sulman at the Council meeting last evening stated that two prominent citizens, so he was informed, were doing all in their power to prevent a sale of the railway mills property and it was his intention to find out, if possible, who they were and let it be known. Can there be such men in Belleville? If so, we would be pleased to have the public know who they are.

It is a fact that mosquitoes and fish usually bite at about the same time of the year. If you don't believe it, ask Joe Templeton.

The Pope has issued a manifesto requesting Catholics to take part in politics. It is understood, however, that the postage was saved, on second thought, upon the copies intended to be sent to Montreal, Quebec, and vicinity.

John D. Rockefeller led an Italian boys' band at a concert in Cleveland last Friday. Is the Oil King trying to wrest Emperor William's laurels for versatility from him?

The King of England wears blue spectacles at the race track. His sporty subjects wear them home from the track.

The trading stamp bill renders a company who sells stamps to a merchant liable to a year's imprisonment or $500 penalty. The merchant is liable to six month's imprisonment or $200 penalty, and the customer who receives them is liable to $40 penalty.

"The disgusting yellow newspapers have made some big minutest details of every breach of promise case," says a Boston clergyman. This is untrue, comments the Detroit Free Press. When a woman sues for $25,000, and is awarded one cent, no reputable newspaper can keep the privacy of her home to find how she intends to spend the money.

Thomas A. Edison is said to have perpetrated a joke, the first one of his on record. He said: "Radium will likely to be as cheap as coal one of these days, when it is discovered in sufficient quantities." That was Solomonic.

Japan takes the apparently reasonable position that she would like to be reimbursed for the money she has spent in the war with Russia. Russia, however, says that she never O. K'ed Japan's war bills and therefore hesitates regarding peace. In the meantime the bills are increasing almost beyond computation to say nothing of the impending vast loss of life.

A small boy recently wrote to a member of parliament asking for a copy of the Experimental Farm reports. The member, who is fond of the youth, was greatly pleased at the request and exhibited it to other lawmakers. It made the boy, however, asking what report was wanted, explaining that a volume was issued yearly. Whether he ever guessed how to say no thing friends or not, it has leaked out. It reads: "I don't care which year it is. All I want is a copy of that heavy enough to press wild flowers."

Dr. G. P. Mains, the treasurer of the Methodist Tract Society, was talking about various forms of income that had been profitable and popular.

"Not many ministers, though," he said, "are able to put upon the market good sermons and popular volumes of sermons."

Then Dr. Mains smiled.

"I am reminded," he said, "of an elderly Scottish minister. At an evening gathering a certain volume of sermons came up for discussion, and it was stated that the author of the volume had cleared considerable thing like five hundred pounds.

"At this point the minister's wife leaned over and whispered to him:

"My dear, I see nothing to hinder you from printing a few of your sermons, too."

"They were all printed long ago," the old minister whispered back."

THE ECCENTRIC DEPOSITOR.

H. A. Fuller, toastmaster at the annual banquet of the Pennsylvania bankers' convention in Wilkesbarre last month, introduced with this story the banker who responded with the toast, "Our Depositors."

"A depositor in a neighboring trust company is an eccentric farmer of middle age. This farmer, though he is wealthy, overdrew his account one day to the tune of $500.

"Notification of the overdraft was at once sent to him.

"He replied:

"'You tell me I have overdrawn my account $500. Well, I know it. So what is the necessity of bothering me about it? Why not trust me as I do you? Do I go to you, when I have money in your institution, and shout: "You have $5000 of mine?" Such statements are superfluous either way.' — Buffalo Enquirer.

Buried at Queensboro.

The remains of the late Mrs. Wm. Wigg, nee Ella Henderson, who died in Ottawa, arrived in Trenton on Wednesday morning, June 28, and were taken to the home of her son, Mr. Jerry Clark, near Queensboro, where the funeral took place on June 29, at 1 o'clock. An impressive service was conducted by Rev. C. M. Tongue. The funeral was very largely attended, some 60 or 70 carriages following the remains to the church and burying ground. Interment took place at the family plot at Asselstine's Corners. The pall bearers were Mrs. Bell, Wm. and Wm. and John Wiggins, and the two sons of deceased, Simon and Jerry. Deceased was 64 years of age. The remains were accompanied from Ottawa by Mr. and Mrs. Nicholson.

EULOGIZE G.T.R. SERVICE.

G. T. Bell, general passenger and ticket agent of the Grand Trunk railway, is frequently in receipt of communications from patrons eulogizing the service that is found on the entire system. An unsolicited letter, dated June 21st, reads as follows:

"I have just returned from the Pacific coast, and it may interest you to know that my wife and I immensely enjoyed the run over your road, and we cheerfully admit that when a meal is pleased and delighted, she received something that has the classic touch of excellence and elegance. I am inclined to think that the railroad that pleases a woman is pretty near perfection."

Another letter from a physician of Aiken, South Carolina, dated July 1st, reads:

"I had the pleasure of travelling over your line from Chicago to Montreal, via Detroit, and have no hesitation in saying that your roadbed is one of the smoothest I have ever been on, and the night from Montreal to Toronto the train was as steady as if one had been in a hotel."

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although we have men are carrying a staff of workmen three times more than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to have the work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, employ our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 10th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Belleville Methodist Church, very well dated it right. You watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—a number of them. Ring us up, drop us a line, church decorating because we know how.

DANDRUFF CAUSED BY A GERM.

A New Discovery That Kills the Germ and Prevents Baldness.

Pretty nearly all the hair preparations for dandruff have some merit in allaying itching of the scalp, and in being a fairly good dressing for the hair, but there is only one that recognizes what causes dandruff, falling hair, and baldness, and that destroys the cause, a little germ—the Bacillus Newberry Herpicide. This germ eats its way into the scalp, it digs up the scalp into little white scales, and destroyed there's no permanent stopping of falling hair or cure of dandruff and baldness. Newbro's Herpicide kills the germ. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Too Sensational a Story.

A clipping appearing to some of to-day's Toronto papers reads as follows:

Belleville, July 10.—On Saturday night, Lieut. Webster of the 40th Regiment was missing. He was blown or fell from the train conveying the regiment home, two miles east of Belleville. Sergt. Hodge and Pte. Cummings jumped and rendered assistance. The train was travelling at the rate of 25 miles an hour. Webster is now in Belleville Hospital.

Upon inquiry The Intelligencer is informed that Lieut. Webster was at the Belleville hospital only long enough to have 3 or 4 slight scalp wounds dressed, when he went on his way.

Wedding Bells.

McKEOWN—STRAIN.

A pretty home wedding was celebrated at noon o'clock on the afternoon of June 27th, at the home of the bride's mother, 20 Alexander St., Toronto, when Miss Mabel Blanche, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Strain, was united in marriage to Mr. John McKeown, of Iellevieux, brother of the bride's father, Rev. John McKeown. Wilhelmina Jackman played the wedding march.

The bride was a pretty gown of white India silk, with chiffon trimmings, and wore a handsome lace bride roses. The bridesmaid's dress was of blue silk organdie over blue satin and she carried pink roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet and to the bridesmaid a turquoise ring, and to the best man a gold scarf stickpin.

Mr. and Mrs. McKeown left on the five o'clock train for their future home, the bride going away in a navy grey two-piatted suit and grey toque.

Among those present were the groom's sister, Miss Lilian McKeown, and Miss Dunn (nee Stewart), of Belleview; Mr. Geo. Burchell, of Cardinal; Mrs. E. J. Thompson, of Lindsay, and Mrs. Turnbull, of Churchill.

POLICE CORDON A BUSH

Expect Betsy Jacobs' Murderer is Come Out When Hungry.

Should He, However, Be Able to Break the Cordon, He Would Undoubtedly Make Tracks For the Lewiston Region in the States, Where He Would Be Comparatively Safe—Excitement Intense on Reserve.

Brantford, July 11.—No new developments have taken place in the Betsy Jacobs murder on the Indian reserve. All day long a large force of police and the Indian bush into which Bennett betook himself when last observed in the cemetery. The bush is an extensive one, and the murderer will have a right advantage, but there is scarcely any opportunity for Bennett to escape.

The posse are making little effort to locate the bush because of its density, and are awaiting the time when Bennett will be driven into the open by the pangs of hunger. The constables are being constantly reinforced, and the police guard has assumed large proportions. The excitement on the reserve is intense and the Indians are awaiting developments with the keenest interest. A close watch has been kept on all outtrains in the event that Bennett is able to elude the cordon. Should he be able to do so he would undoubtedly make tracks at once for the Lewiston reservation in the States, where he would be comparatively safe.

Adviser Gordon, Six Nations Caledonia and other points bordering on the reservation have been the most striking watch is being kept.

Coroner Secord went down yesterday afternoon, but further than empanelling the jury nothing was done. Authorities are absolutely certain that Bennett is the man.

RUNAWAY OR FOOTPADS.

Brantford Hotelman May Have Been Robbed and Bitten.

Brantford, July 11.—Jery Dunn, proprietor of the Imperial Hotel, was out driving Friday night with his wife. He returned, left his family at home and went down to the rig back to the livery. About 11 o'clock he was brought home by two constructions could-hardly been found at the north end of Sydenham street, and Constable Wilhelmins Jackman played the wedding march.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white India silk, with chiffon trimmings, and wore a handsome lace bride roses. The bridesmaid's dress was of blue silk organdie over blue satin and she carried pink roses.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold bracelet and to the bridesmaid a turquoise ring, and to the best man a gold scarf stickpin.

KIDNAPPED HIS OWN CHILD.

Now He's Charged With Bigamy and Abduction.

Port Huron, Mich., July 11.—Mrs. Wilson Crowder went to Sarnia yesterday, where her husband is under arrest, and entered a complaint against him for larceny and kidnapping. Two years ago Crowder married a Sarnia woman, but later separated from him. He then married a Port Huron woman and a single week later secured a divorce. The second wife lately discovered that Crowder was already married. She left him then coming with their child to Port Huron.

Sunday night Crowder came to his wife's home here, snatched the baby from her and carried it to Sarnia in the rain. Officers were notified, and the father arrested as soon as he stepped off the ferry on the Canadian side.

The child was returned to the mother yesterday morning.

New Charge Against Hall.

Toronto, July 11.—Detective Alfred Hall, of Victoria street, appeared in the Police Court yesterday to answer the charge of stealing the proceeds of a draft for $150 from a newcomer from England, Alfred C. Bridge. Through his counsel, H. H. Dewart, he pleaded not guilty. The case was adjourned until Friday. Hall is also wanted in Hamilton, Que., on the charge of passing a worthless cheque on S. G. Faulkner, of that city.

Victim in Cabin.

Cheyenne, Wyo., July 11.—Bob McCoy, a well-known rancher residing on the Big Horn River above Thermopolis, was found dead in his cabin who decayed him to a deserted cabin and found his body on the floor of the house to enter. His body was then weighted with stones and sunk in the river. Several times during the past few months McCoy has received anonymous letters warning him to leave the country and threatening his life.

A MILITIA DAY.

Sir Frederick Borden Lays Down Government's Policy and Extent to Were All Passed After Discussion.

Ottawa, July 11.—In the House yesterday Sir Frederick Borden had a small life field day. The large militia estimate was taken up by committee of supply, and the Minister of Militia had the floor for the whole day end of it.

R. L. Borden's bill to amend the act respecting the Militia of Canada was read a first time. It provided that, upon a vacancy occurring after a general period, the clerk of the Crown in Chancery may issue his writ for the new election and appoint a returning office, to whom the writ shall be addressed. This will prevent a Government delaying a by-election to suit their own convenience, as they do now against a returning officer.

The Minister of the Interior informed Mr. Foster that a commission of enquiry into the Pictou riots was now sitting at Macleod, and that he had given instructions that the enquiry should be made, particularly as to the amount of reasonably resting upon the Niarcs, Galbert and son respectively.

Sir Wilfrid gave notice that the House will meet at 11 o'clock Wednesday next, and sit on Saturday. Mr. Borden said he presumed there would be no railway work or resolutions this session. Sir Wilfrid Laurier replied that there would be the railway and canal bills, but no other business of importance. Except certain resolutions, of which I am not prepared to speak at this moment."

In introducing his bill to amend the criminal code, Mr. Fitzpatrick said its object was to do away with the anomaly, with the mischief connected with the present system of bail, and was designed to apply to the gentleman who disposes of the stamps, to the merchant who sells the stamps, to the customer who seeks them.

"My amendment sets the criminal offence?" Mr. Borden asked.

"My amendment makes it a criminal fence," Mr. Fitzpatrick repeated, in reply.

The bill to amend the Canada Evidence Act was withdrawn.

The remainder of the supply, Mr. Foster entered a protest against the bringing down of the main supplementary estimates within a few days of the end of the session, and moved a resolution to that effect, which after some discussion was lost.

The House then went into committee of supply, and Sir Frederick Borden proceeded to set forth the militia policy of the Government during the course of the session. He announced his intention of consulting with the militia council with a view to establishing a military school at Kingston.

All of these were passed, after considerable discussion.

The main works estimates are up to-morrow, and Mr. Hyman will make his debut as a Public Works Minister.

Japanese Capture Guns, and Pursue the Flesing Enemy—The Japanese Suffered No Loss — Kniaz Potemkine Has Been Sunk—Muitineers Opened the Seacocks and Flooded Her Hold and She Lies on the Bottom.

Tokio, July 11.—The following report has been received from the Japanese army headquarters on Sakhalin Island.

Our army without much resistance occupied Korsakovsk early on July 8. The enemy suffered no loss. Our detachment to positions eight miles north, where they resumed resistance.

"We dislodged them and are now in pursuit.

"At 11 a. m. on July 8 the enemy had retreated to a point 32 miles north of Korsakovsk.

"We captured two 12-centimetre guns, two 3-pounders and also an amount of ammunition.

"The enemy burned Korsakovsk.

Potemkine Has Been Sunk.

Kustendji, Roumania, July 11.—The announcement that the battleship Kniaz Potemkine sailed with Rear-Admiral Kruger's squadron Sunday evening turns out to be incorrect.

Before leaving the Black Sea Potemkine, the mutineers opened the seacocks and flooded the ship's hold, so that she lies at the bottom, but it is expected that she will be repaired in time for Sebastopol July 12.

"BOBS" WARNS EMPIRE.

Army Is Unfit to Uphold Britain As a First-Class Power—People Are, He Says, Apathetic.

London, July 11.—Field Marshal Lord Roberts created a sensation in the House of Lords this afternoon in a lengthy and well considered speech on the condition of the British army, as a practical soldier, that the military forces of the country are in a most unsatisfactory, ramshackle and totally unfit to uphold Britain as a first-class power. Lord Roberts did not blame the Government, which, he said, he considered to be animated by a patriotic feeling, but he scathingly attacked the people of the country for their apathy in the matter.

The speech was delivered in presence of the Duke of Cambridge, the Earl of Wemyss and Mackay of Glenconra, Inverness, and was the result of careful study regarding the impossibility of the invasion of Great Britain and the necessity for the army to be used for defence and forces to repel any possible invasion.

Promises Solution.

Lord Lansdowne, the Foreign Minister, defended Premier Balfour. He said that Mr. Balfour had always admitted that the defence of the country solely dependent on the navy. Premier Balfour also believed that every possible phase in considera tion, and would be able to state in the near future his solution to the satisfaction of every one. The Government had decided not to oppose the motion of the Earl of Wemyss and Mackay, which was passed without division.

PUT CRUISER IN COMMISSION.

To Stop Poaching by United States Citizens In Ontario Waters.

Walkerville, July 11.—Inspector Labut, a fisheries officer, claims to have lost six hundred dollars' worth of nets and gear by depredations of United States poachers.

Commissioner Reaume, who is in Windsor, states that the continued operation on the waters of Lake Erie and the Detroit River will result in a fisheries cruiser being placed in commission.

Refuses Licenses.

Toronto, July 11.—Hon. Dr. Reaume, chief of the Ontario Fisheries' Department, announced yesterday that he proposed not fishing in the waters of Geor gian Bay. The matter was discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet yesterday, and a deputation from Parry Sound, which saw the Government to urge that licenses be issued, was advised to look to Ottawa.

GREW THIS HAIR

ISABEL SUTHERLAND

This lady is but one among the thousands whose hair was grown by the 7 Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower; but the fact that she is one of the family, and has used the remedy from experience, and the manner in which she recommends it, has induced many people to write us for further information regarding the remedy, as well as the culture and preservation of the hair.

We have decided to place before the public yours to the most important subject—the structure of the hair, and the scalp on which it grows, which may be prevented or restored to health by original, simple, natural methods. We have published a book containing valuable information regarding their own hair in the first and unquestionable proof of the claims we make for the world-renowned 7 Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower and Scalp Preparations. This book is handsomely illustrated and all Druggists sell 7 Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower, 50c. and $1.00. SCALP CLEANSE, the only Sulphur Soap, 25c. CONSERVATIVES TO PROTEST LONDON AND OXFORD.

HON. MR. HYMANS JUBILATION

Is So Satisfied With the Last Straw—Steps to Be Taken at Once.

Ottawa, July 10.—The election of Charles Hyman in London and George Smith in North Oxford will be protested immediately.

The Government and general hurrah given to the electors of the Forest City on Saturday by the Minister of Public Works as regarded as a desperate effort on the part of the new Minister to "fall in the coming" tidal wave.

Evidence has been accumulating since the election there which more than justifies the action about to be taken by the Conservatives.

The general bacchanalian orgy indulged in—by—for—the—occasion—by Minister—in the last straw, and the Conservatives of London will push the protest to a finish.

TIMELY TOPICS.

A Philadelphia lawyer who has a telephone in a four party wire in his house had a recent experience of human curiosity. On such a telephone arrangement any one or all of the four subscribers may hear any conversation if they wish to eavesdrop. The lawyer's wife suspected one of the neighbors of eavesdropping. "Saturday," said the lawyer, "she held a prearranged conversation over the telephone with me, and suddenly shut me off. She explained that one of her neighbors was eavesdropping and that she intended to have the thing stopped. 'I know the woman well,' she said, 'and the next time she speaks to me I'll insult her.' Later my wife explained that she could tell the culprit she avoided her. Next day we went to church to make the test and met an awful shock. Not one of our three neighbors on the party line noticed us, although they had always been very friendly. My wife found the culprit all right, but she had neglected to figure on the natural curiosity of all women."

Reginald Vanderbilt, admirably dressed, sat in his box at the Philadelphia Horse Show. "He is no fool," an elderly Philadelphian said of the young man. "Had he not been born rich he would have made a great success in life. I'll tell you of an incident that exemplifies the readiness and alertness of his mind.

"He was travelling one day from New York to Boston. The weather was warm, and now and then he would put his head out of the window to see the landscape better. Thus, all of a sudden, his hat blew off.

"Quick as a flash young Vanderbilt reached for his hat box and tossed it out of the window after his hat. A shout of laughter arose

"What on earth did you do that for?" everybody said. "You don't expect your hat box to bring your hat back, do you?"

"I do," replied the young man. "There's no name in the hat, but my full name and address are on the box. They'll be found together, and both will be forwarded to me promptly."

Sir Charles Howard Vincent, the former head of the London detective and police force, was talking in Washington about juvenile criminals.

"Your juvenile courts are excellent institutions," he said, "but how fine it would be if there was no juvenile crime."

"What is the cause of juvenile crime, sir?" a reporter asked.

"A very potent cause is crime literature," Sir Charles replied. "I mean by crime literature, books about detectives, murders, stage coach robberies, bandits, pirates, and all that sort of thing. These books are read by children avidly. They are written as if to inculcate virtue, but really they inculcate vice.

"A story, you see, may deal with a bloodthirsty highwayman and a youthful detective, and throughout the work the highwayman may be condemned and the detective lauded; yet the boy who reads this story likes the highwayman much the best, and he will say to himself that he would rather be the highwayman than the detective any time.

"Coming over on the Campania this queer, perverse trend of child-hood—this sympathy with the wrong rather than the right thing—was curiously brought home to me.

"In the dock chair next to mine there sat a young mother and her little son leaned on her shoulder, looking over an illustrated book of religious stories.

"The mother turned page after page and finally she came to the well-known picture of the martyrs thrown to the lions. Do you think the boy's sympathy was with the pious martyrs rather than with the cruel raging lions? No, indeed. He studies the picture closely and what he said was:

"O, mamma, look at the poor little lion behind there. He won't get any."

LIGHT FASTER THAN SOUND.

Some Everyday Incidents That Go to Prove This Fact.

About a thousand yards from the window where I sit in a factory which blows its whistle every noon. The steam always comes from the whistle some little time before the sound is heard. Yesterday I counted three seconds between the time when the first steam was seen and when the sound of the whistle was heard. The whistle is heard when the steam is fogey or clear, hot or cold, windy or calm. It is sometimes louder than at other times, but it always takes three seconds to travel the 3,000 feet from the factory to my house.

We often hear also an echo of the whistle, which comes two seconds later than the first sound. This is the same sound coming by a roundabout journey 5,000 feet away. It travels first 1,000 feet to a hill beyond and then is sent back 4,000 feet to our house.

A few days ago I heard a band of musicians playing upon the street, and, although they were far distant from me, the high tones of the piccolo and the low tones of the bass horn reached me exactly together, showing that high and low tones travel at the same speed.

During a thunderstorm I noticed a flash of lightning and counted ten seconds before the sound of the thunder was heard. This showed me that the storm was about 10,000 feet (or about two miles) away. A little later, however, the time between the lightning and the thunder began to grow less, and the noise of the thunder became louder, which showed that the storm was getting nearer. Finally a dazzling flash of lightning was followed immediately by a deafening crash of thunder, and at the same time the shingles flew from a patch of roof on a barn near by. It had been struck by lightning and was soon in flames.—St. Nicholas.

THE CRUEL PIANO.

Juvenile Sacrifices That Are Offered Up to the Instrument.

My landlady's little boy, separated from me only by a thin lath partition of a wall, is playing five finger exercises in halting rhythm and with numerable false notes. The instructor is not in the room at present or has left a tone like a discontented automeg grater.

The little boy, a pale child in a long pinafore and big white ears, hates his chosen instrument as much as I do, and so we meet on a level of mutual affliction. I loathe hearing him, and he hates his instrument; even in the case of good common sense, why must he be offered up as a sacrifice.

His mother is a poor woman, and the tinkling cottage piano with plaited faded green front represents the chops and many other luxuries which she has not eaten, and what she allows the young lady in the third floor back, who takes her board out in lessons, is a serious sacrifice. Now, I ask what for?

Why is all the world playing an unnecessary piano?

Marriage has a fatal effect on music. For some occult reason as soon as a girl is married the piano—the grave of so much money and time—comes out of active life and swathed in "art draperies," burdened by vases, cabinet photographs and knickknacks, and serves less as a musical instrument than a warning. But no sooner are the next generation's legs long enough to dangle between the keyboard and the pedals than the echoes awaken in the same old false notes that serve no purpose unless an hour of daily martyrdom over a tear splashed keyboard is an excellent preparation for the trials of life.—Mrs. John Lane in London Outlook.

A Pathetic Incident.

There is a pitiful story told in the Bookman of Philip Bourke Marston, the blind English writer. One day a particularly good idea came to him, and he sat down to his typewriter with enthusiasm. He speedily filled two hours and had nearly finished the story when a friend rang the bell. "Oh," said Marston piously, "and tell me what you think of it." The friend waved at the happy author all then at the blank sheets of paper in his hand before he was able to understand that Marston's words had been taken from the typewriter, and Marston's toil was for nothing. He never had the heart to write that story again.

Power of Sulphuric Acid.

An instance of great dissolving powers of sulphuric acid is furnished by an accident which occurred in the chemical factories at Mulhouse, Alsace. An operative was blown up into the air and fell into a trough filled about three feet deep with sulphuric acid, the temperature of which was found to be 50 degrees C. ten hours after the accident. The death of the man was only proved by the discovery of his caoutchouc respirator, muzzle, two porcelain buttons and other insoluble articles. Everything else had chemically combined with the acid.—London Engineer.

Evil of Familiarity.

"A good friend," said Captain Bill, "is the greatest blessing a man can have. But men are like canal boats in lots of ways, and it doesn't pay for either men or boats to get so close together they wear one another's paint off."

It Sometimes Happens.

His Wife—You're home at last! I thought you'd never come. Mr. Out-in-the-Ann showed me instead of making the heart grow fonder has merely affected the temper.

It is better to hold back a truth than to speak it ungraciously.—De Salis.

Hope Jones Talks on Love

He Tells What It Is In a Lecture to Fellow Countrymen of Harper's Corners.

FELLOW Countrymen of Harper's Corners—The subject of my lecture this evening has already been announced by handbills, but as some of you may have got things mixed up I will say that it is "Love."

Let me begin business by asking. What is love? No one can give a technical answer, but we've all been there and know how it is. Perhaps it is needless to tell you that love began in the garden of Eden. Adam had been sloshing around for weeks and weeks all alone in the world and bossing everything, but he wasn't exactly happy. He found himself sighing and yearning and looking about for something that wasn't there. Day by day the feeling grew stronger and he couldn't shake it off by climbing trees or jumping over fences. It may seem ridiculous to that old baldhead sitting on the back bench, but that, my friends, was the budding and the blossoming of love in the human breast. One day Adam found Eve as he was prowling around, and I don't suppose it was two hours before he was squeezing her hand and calling her an angel and telling her how much he loved her.

Love today is the same as it was in the beginning. There has been no change. The feeling seems to begin way down in our toes and work up until it lifts the hat off our head. Sometimes there is loss of appetite connected with it; sometimes it makes one hungry; sometimes it makes one sleep and dream of cherubs flying about; sometimes it keeps one awake and pacing the floor all night.

There is no other human sentiment so strong. Ambition will send a man out to a ward caucus on a dark night, but love will defy it. In such there miles in a snowstorm to see the outside of the house in which his girl resides. You may hate a man and keep it up for three or four weeks, but it finally palls on you, and you let go. Not so with love. It hangs right to you like a dog to a root, and you either marry the female or she throws you down with a dull thud and breaks your heart. It has been truly said that the sentimental of love was eliminated from the human heart we would degenerate into either wild beasts or donkeys. I'm one can doubt it.

In all times and all ages love has been the spur to incite a man to great efforts. I cite you the case of Alexander the Great. He was jogging along at a pretty good gait at the age of twenty-three, but the highest aim he had in view was to command a hundred soldiers and be addressed as "Cap." One evening when he was out to a candy pull or something of the sort he met a very pretty girl with a slender form and fell in love with her at the drop of the hat. He saw her home from the party, and he had hardly left her at the gate before he was ambitious for place and power. He took jump upward from that very hour, and he continued to jump, and history has told you the pinnacle he finally reached. In due time their cards read, "Mr. and Mrs. Alexander the Great," and love was the cause of it.

You have heard of Diogenes of course. He was the old chap who sat around in his tub most of the time, but upon occasions went about with a lantern in the daytime looking for an honest man. He got off a lot of stuff he called philosophy, but it was no thing for than the prince on the back of his neck. He got the reputation of being a cold proposition, and would have died in his tub and been dumped into a sewer if he hadn't met up with a certain widow named Lathis. She was fair, fat and forty and had about $100,000 in cash behind her, and old Diog was no chicken.

When he saw that she was a little sweet on him, he got out of that tub, washed his face and had his hair cut and inside of two weeks was courting her and forgetting all about philosophy. He felt the glow of love from his head to his heels, and he got his face lifted and some of the wrinkles rubbed off his face, and they were married and lived happily for years and years. Under the spur of love he opened a bank or a pawnshop, or the way he did get in among the millionaires was good to see.

When you think of Cicero, whose oratory made a nation cheer or weep, it is hard to think of love in connection with him, and yet he loved, and it was love that put him to the front.

At the age of twenty-five he was only aador politician, specializing at ward caucuses and talking reform on the street corners. Without love he might in time have been elected an alderman or a walking delegate, but he would have aspired no higher. One evening, on his way home from a caucus in the Fourth ward, where he was billed to make a speech, he met a young lady to whom he had been very and fell in love with her on the spot. She was a girl who was looking higher up, and to win her he had to take off his boots and go clear to the top of the tree. It took him years of hard work and a wife, but he won them at last and left a name never to be forgotten. Nothing but love for the fair sex might have offered the best farm in Greece to get up and hump himself, but he would have done it for love.

We think of the immortal George Washington as a soldier and a statesman, but he'd never have reached the top notch without love to boost him. And let me tell you that he loved just the same way that you and I love today. When he met the widow she attracted because his wife he aired her up out of the corner of his eye. Then he hustled around a little nearer. There was talk about poetry, the moon, angels and all that, and he ate popcorn and drank cider and went away with a tickled feeling in his heart. There came a time when he called her Martha and she called him George, when she pillowed her head on his shoulder, when he said that if she happened to get kicked to death by a cow he would go out and break his neck ingalloing of a barn. Yes, they loved and loved, and they married, and love spurred our idol on until there were no more bounce for him to rebo. Had he remained an old bachelor he might have invented a double ended rat trap or a double barreled cockroach exterminator, but that would have been the end of it.

We now come down to the case of Q. Hope Jones, the man who stands before you. It is without egotism that I bring myself forward, as I use my case simply to illustrate. Five years ago I was a sap, smitless, unaspiring young man. About the only aim I had was to be elected constable of my village. Even my own father became so discouraged over my case that he would no longer buy my beer and tobacco. [illegible]

Then a sudden change came. I fell in love. It is not necessary to give the name of the girl, but love acted like magic in my case. In a week I was at work in a cornfield. In a month I was a leader in politics. In a year I was preparing to set out on a lecture tour and reached my highest notch, and here I am. I didn't marry the girl I loved, as she was unfortunately bitten by a rattlesnake, but I fell in love with another, and still a third, and today I am in love with the fourth. It's an original idea of my own and one I can recommend. If you want to climb up, you can't love too often nor too many.

And now in drawing to a close let me recapitulate. Ambition is good for 90 cents on the dollar, but love is worth an even 100. Perseverance is a furnace to get up steam, but love is the fuel to supply it. Integrity is a good thing to brag about as long as you don't get caught at it, but there are no weak spots in the armor of love. If not in love, go out and take a tumble. Love well, love as hard as you can. When once started, keep it on the jump, like a scared rabbit. And incidentally I would observe that the fare to the next town in which I lecture is 95 cents, and unless there is a liberal contribution on the part of this audience I don't see how I am to get there. Some of you may recall that I have given you 95 cents' worth, but any one who will follow suit will find that I will head over heels in love will feel conscience stricken that he didn't empty his wallet into my hat.

M. QUAD.

Fishing For Salmon.

Salmon fishing differs as much from trout fishing that it has been said an absolute beginner at fly fishing will learn to take salmon sooner readily than will a trout fisherman who tries the lordly fish after years of practice with the smaller one. This I doubt, but I know that a very different style of fishing is needed. There is really no such thing as "striking" in salmon fishing, and if you keep a little line and raise your rod as soon as you feel the "pluck" of the fish you will be doing your whole duty, and it will be up to the fish to do the rest. There is no occasion for the swift strike by which one hooks a shy trout inclined to rise a trifle short. The salmon is such a weighty fellow that when he turns to go down after taking the fly his momentum drives the hook above the barb with very little resistance on the part of the angler, provided the line be fairly taut.—Charles A. Bramble in Recreation.

Lost His Decoy.

A western man was describing a banquet that he had once attended in New York.

"I found this banquet interesting," he said, "only I was one of the first to leave. In the cloakroom, as I was putting on my hat and coat, I couldn't help noticing the woebegone look on the attendant's face. The poor fellow appeared worried and sad, and every little while he sighed and muttered to himself.

"'You seem disconsolate, friend,' I said.

"'I am disconsolate, sir,' said the attendant.

"'What is the trouble, sir,' said I. 'Haven't the guests tipped you well to-night?'

"The attendant answered in a subdued voice:

"'It's not only, sir, that they haven't tipped me, but they've taken the quarter that I put in the tray for a decoy.'"

How Inventions Are Made.

The great majority of practical inventions are made by a group of men of whom the public never hears. These men are members of one of the most complicated and highly organized of the modern professions. Every great manufacturing concern maintains, under one head or another, an "invention department," employing men who are paid various salaries simply to develop inventions. They are supplied with every mechanical appliance to facilitate their work. The bills are paid by the concern, and every invention they make is assigned to the company "in consideration of salary and one dollar." And the men unknown and struggling with the everyday, practical problems of great manufactories, who make most of the inventions of immediate commercial value.—World's Work.

The Making of a "Corot."

There are two kinds of inferior Corots—the "Corot de commerce," which the dealers always compelled the painter to sell them, whereas he thought them hardly worthy of a frame, and the works such as another has about him and generally paints over; and the pictures of Daubigny which "le Père Corot" was too good natured to con demn. When the anxious owner brought him a beautiful landscape for authentication the old man was very reluctant to deny the work. "It is certainly not a Corot," he would say, "but it is so nearly one! It wants so little! Only touch it!" The worry often put "that" on the spot and made a Corot of it.—London Chronicle.

An Ex-Ray's Complaint.

"You were once so sunny and bright," he said complacently, "a regular ray of sunshine. What has changed you?"

"Yes," replied she, "I suppose I am what might be termed an ex-ray of sunshine, but it is your constantly coming home cross that has spoiled my cheerfulness."

She exclaimed he angrily, "if it is a woman's place to dispel her husband's gloom, isn't it the husband's business to furnish something for her to dispel?"

And he strode angrily away to his work, grumbling at the unreasonableness of womankind.—Baltimore American.

One Way to Avoid Wrinkles.

Four-year-old Alice had been to visit a very aged lady whose face was badly wrinkled. On returning home she described the old lady's aunt's big gold, looking at her intently, queried:

"Was you always grandma Barker's face all wrinkled?"

"Because she is very old, dearie," was the reply.

"Will your nice, smokre face be like her's when you get to be old, auntie?" asked the curious lady.

"Yes, darling," said the aunt, sighing in anticipation of her fast chums.

"Oh, well, auntie, don't feel bad!" exclaimed the child. "Maybe you'll die pitty quick!"—New York Press.

"What's the subject of Ella's essay?" "Harmonies."

"And how does she illustrate it?"

"By putting a blue ribbon in her oldest mop of red hair."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Waning Fleur.

The architects are building receptacle completed and which extended from one street through to another with a diameter of thirty inches in the street levels of the two thoroughfares. Steps at either end of the building were regarded unfavorably, and so it was decided to build the first floor of the house at first sight this slope was not noticeable, but the clerks discovered it in the most unthought of way. Several of these were counting notes on the all absorbing question of socks one day, and one of them remarked: "I can't seem to get socks any more that wear well. Mine have holes in 'em one day's use."

"That's odd," said another salesman. "So do mine, and they never used to."

Others echoed the experiences, and finally the solution was offered by the department superintendent, who said this was due to the man walking on an incline so much. "Your socks are all right," he said, "but they won't stand the wear incident to traveling up and down hill all day."

Mr. Bowser As a Poser

Mrs. B. Held Out Lots of Encouragement and Obligingly Draped His Toga.

TRIED TO HIDE MIRTH.

Neighbors Came In and Caught Him, However, and God of War Was Turned Loose Again.

WHEN dinner had been concluded the other evening Mr. Bowser made a break for the library and disappeared for the best quarter of an hour. When he reappeared he had a volume of encyclopedia in his hand and said:

"I have been trying to find out something about Napoleon, but I can't get just what I want."

"And what particular thing did you want?" asked Mrs. Bowser.

"I want to know how he used to dress."

"Why, in war he wore a uniform, of course, and in peace he wore a swallow tailed coat most of the time. He always wore a chapeau, you know."

"Didn't he wear a toga or cloak sometimes?"

"Yes, I think I have seen him pictured in both. Why do you ask the questions?"

"I suppose you will set in and call me an old fool, as you always do, but the fact is the B. and T. club are going to give an entertainment soon, and they wanted me to pose for a few figures."

"And what is the B. and T. club?"

"The Bowling and Theatrical club."

"Oh, I see. I didn't know but that it was the Beef and Tripe club."

"That's it—go ahead with your sarcasm!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as his face began to redden up.

"I have no sarcasm to utter, Mr. Bowser. On the contrary, I think it a good idea and will encourage and assist you in every possible way. If you are going to pose as a living picture of Napoleon you had better do it in a togs. It will give your figure more grace, and for the reason why you shouldn't make a great hit."

"That's the way to talk. That's more sense than I've heard you utter in a month of Sundays. When you encourage me that way I'm bound to succeed. I'll step in right now and get into the togs."

"Not so much so. That's one reason I married you."

"But am I too fat in the body and legs?"

"Not at all. Napoleon grew very fat after a time, you know. I should say that you would look right. Did you bring home a toga to practice with?"

"Why—why, no, I didn't, but thinking you would make fun of me, I left it out in the vestibule. I'll bring it in, and then you can do the draping, I guess."

By John, but you are a good wife to help me in this thing! I thought you'd begin to make fun of me right from the start."

Mrs. Bowser's conscience gave her a hard twinge, but she hid made up her mind not to oppose Mr. Bowser in anything he did that evening. When he returned with the togs, which he had hired of a theatrical costumer, he removed coat and vest, and Mrs. Bowser proceeded to drape. When he was ready he was pronounced the parlor and the portieres arranged so as to show only his face and one shoulder, and Mrs. Bowser left him thus for five long minutes. When his knees began to wabble under the strain she said:

"You may move up and down the parlor now, but don't make any wooden drop down or your back lump up; also keep that stern look on your face, as if you were at the battle of Waterloo. The cat is following you, but don't mind him."

Napoleon Bonaparte Bowser paraded up and down with his heart in his mouth, but when he had reached the back parlor doors for the fifth time Mrs. Bowser clapped her hands and exclaimed:

"Admirable! Admirable! One would think Napoleon had returned to life. You will certainly make the hit of the evening, and we shall see your name in all the papers tomorrow."

"Then I will pass for Napoleon, eh?" he proudly queried.

"Pass? Why, you will astonish everybody. Are there any more characters you are going to pose for?"

"They wanted me to be George Washington, but I don't see how I can. Washington and Napoleon didn't look alike."

"Perhaps not, but we must make them. Let me redrape you and then touch up your face with this crayon. The toga is all right. Washington always wore a toga in battle, as he was superstitious about having buttons shot off his coat-tails. I will draw a black line under each eye and down your nose, and then you must assume a patriotic expression. Let your mouth twist around to one side as if you had a touch of colic. That's the very thing, and you mustn't alter it. Now take your stand between the portieres."

Mr. Bowser moved to his place like a wooden man, and the cat followed and took advantage of his helpless situation to rub against his legs and scratch at his slippers with his claws. Mrs. Bowser went down to the kitchen to get a drink of water and choke over it, and was absent ten minutes. When she returned Mr. Bowser demanded:

"Do you think I can be George Washington all night?"

"I wanted you to catch and preserve the true expression, you see," she replied, "You may now go to yourself for a moment. I suppose there are other characters?"

"Yes. They want me to represent the ancient god of war of the Greeks, but I have no idea how I am to proceed this time. I reckon the toga ought to come in somewhere."

"Of course. You must use it in all the figures. Limber up your legs and then we'll begin on the new figure."

"Wasn't the Greek god of war taller than I am?" he asked as he walked about.

"Yes, rather, but you can stand on Webster's Dictionary to increase your height. You should also bare both arms to the shoulders. Now, stand with your right foot forward and your right arm raised. I will place this paper knife in your hand. I will draw a second line under your nose and down your nose and touch up the corners of your mouth. That produces a bloodthirsty expression of countenance."

"This way?"

"More ferocious than that."

"How will this do?"

"Not enough. You are a god of war, remember. You are out after gore. There—that's the way. Don't move for fifteen or five minutes and your fortune will be made."

What happened is assumed by Mr. Bowser was simply diabolical, and after standing it for sixty seconds the cat made her way in disgust to Mrs. Bowser had to visit the kitchen again. She was just returning upstairs when Mrs. Green and her husband entered by the front door. They were neighbors and had just been to a party at Mr. Bowser and his murderous leer, and after a moment of astonishment they gave way to laughter. Mrs. Green fell into a chair and her husband on the floor, and the former could no longer restrain her own merriment. It took Mr. Bowser about fifteen seconds to begin to make fun of the cat, which now began to happen. The togs was flung the length of the parlor; then a kick was given at the cat, which escaped, and left him a mangled corpse had he not dodged. Then a chair was thrown at a score of swords spit out in rapid succession, and Mr. Bowser got into his coat and vest, picked up his hat on the way down the hall, and in another moment was outdoors. Then the fun came in its dusty full until both were around the corner. That he eventually got home is a mystery, and then three people in it there can be no sort of doubt. M. QUAD.

Why Touch-me-not.

The columbine, geranium and larkspur are three of my favorites because they are all named after birds—the dove, the crane and the lark. The meaning of geranium is "prepare to bill," and you notice the seed pods of a geranium you will see that they do look like the long bill of a crane. The touch-me-not gets its name from a peculiarity of the seed pod, too, but not a peculiarity of appearance. It is the pod you must not touch, for if you do it will burst, and out will fly the seeds.

She—I am surprised at Effie. She was in love with that fellow long enough to know better than marry him. He—Yes, but too long to do any better.

Dead Ashes Cost Money to Heat.

Most hot water heaters have a Center draft only—also most center draft hot water heaters have a wall of dead ashes next to the water jacket, because thorough combustion with center draft only is not possible—coal burns principally in the centre.

The Ashes must be heated before the water can be heated.

Ashes are hard to heat—they are expensive to heat, they absorb the heat which should go into your coils.

The "Bison" hot water heater has side drafts, draws the heat and fire to the sides, up the sides, and around the water jacket. It heats the water quickly, economically.

How Red Rose Tea is Grown

TEA is a native plant of Northern India. Transplanted to Ceylon it lost much of its strength and richness, but gained in fragrance and delicacy. That is why Ceylon tea is not a strong tea.

That is why I blend Indian and Ceylon teas together—that is how the strength and richness, fragrance and delicacy of Red Rose Tea are secured—that is why Red Rose Tea has that "rich fruity flavor."

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Timely Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper

HORTICULTURAL.

Making and Using the Bordeaux Mixture.

One of the easiest ways of preparing stock solutions is to use a vessel of known capacity, fill it with water to the desired point, then enclose the required quantity our pound of a gallon of copper sulphate crystals in a coarse sack, such as a bran sack, and suspend them in the water from a stick or board laid across the barrel. The crystals will dissolve more quickly if not too deeply immersed in the water. In the case of the lime weigh out the desired amount, one pound to the gallon, and slake it in a barrel, adding just enough water at first to prevent burning and at the same time thoroughly slake the lime, after which it can be made up to the required volume with water.

The stock solutions were made so that each gallon of the solution represented one pound of the copper sulphate or of the lime. The formula used in making up the Bordeaux was that known as the 4-4-40 formula, that is, one pound of copper sulphate and one of lime to every ten gallons of water. However, in making up fifty gallons of Bordeaux, all that was necessary was to transfer fifty gallons each of the stock solutions to the dilution barrels, and fill them up with water to the twenty-five gallon mark.

Some authorities recommend a stronger stock solution of copper sulphate than that mentioned, that is, instead of pound to a gallon, two pounds are used; and others advise a saturated solution, claiming for the latter that when such a solution is used no change in its strength can occur by evaporation, as it is always at the saturation point. A saturated solution takes about three pounds of copper sulphate to the gallon. If the weaker standards are used the only precaution necessary to observe when carrying over a stock solution is to mark the height of the liquid in the barrel and restore it to its original volume before using.

The time of application is not always easy to choose. For example, the first spraying for apple scab should always be made before the buds have swollen very much. A spraying at this time will ordinarily do more toward ensuring freedom from scab than subsequent ones, the ultipate success is, however, dependent on not only precaution necessary to observe when carrying over a stock solution is to mark the height of the liquid in the barrel and restore it to its original volume before using.

The time of application is not always easy to choose. For example, the first spraying for apple scab should always be made before the buds have swollen very much. A spraying at this time will ordinarily do more toward ensuring freedom from scab than subsequent ones, the ultipate success is, however, dependent on not only or two subsequent ones, say, one shortly after the blossoms fall, followed by another from ten to fourteen days later. In the same way the codlin moth can only be controlled by spraying with arsenites, which may be added to the second Bordeaux application for scab, shortly after the blossoms fall.

WHEN AND HOW TO PLANT SHRUBBERIES.

Early spring, just as soon as the ground can be easily worked, is the best time. If possible give them new land just cleared from the woods. The soil should be worked deep, but keep the subsoil where it belongs. In planting on old land, apply fifteen to twenty cords per acre of stable manure—one-third of that amount will do on new land. The next best fertilizer is bone and ashes, one ton of bone and two tons of ashes per acre. Put the manure or food on top of the furrow and harrow it in.

If a large field is to be set make rows 3 1-2 to four feet apart, set plants eighteen inches in the rows. In August place the new plants about six inches apart, till the width of the row by hand hoeing, then cut off all runners beyond this width. Every runner you cut off causes the parent plant to send out a side shoot, so at the end of the season they will be very large plants, and will bear from a pint to one quart each of large fruit. When setting plants have the crown just level with the top of the soil. Be sure to press the earth well about the plants.

THE WASH FOR TREE SCALE.

Professor Britton's recent summary of extensive spraying experiments in New Haven, Westfield, Ct., etc., show that over four thousand trees were treated for San Jose scale. Some were sprayed in December and others in March and April. The remedies, "The boiled mixture of lime and sulphur, is probably as effective and inexpensive as any other. Try mixture: For a mixture used without boiling, a potassium sulphide and lime is excellent for; a few small trees or shrubs, but is rather expensive for spraying large trees. The home sulphur and solium sulphide mixture is a promising one worthy of further trial, having good results in these experiments.

The lime, sulphur and solium sulphide mixture, when may be used without boiling, comprises 20 pounds of lime, 6 pounds of sulphur, 6 pounds solium sulphide to a barrel of water. The lime is materially put in the barrel and add water. When it begins to slake, add the dry sulphur and lumps of solium sulphide. Keep the whole well stirred. When the lime is slacked, add a few more pails of water and let the solution stand for twenty minutes. It can then be strained, diluted and sprayed upon the trees.

A formula for a soil-boiled wash which is prepared as follows: Put five or six pailfuls of hot water in a wooden barrel, preferably a half barrel or oil barrel, add 20 pounds of lime, quickly followed that with 15 pounds of sulphur and then 10 pounds of sal soda, and stir until the slaking is practically completed. It may be necessary to add cold water at intervals to keep the mixture from the building over. After the rapid bubbling of the lime is practically over, set the open barrel with burlap and allow it to stand fifteen to thirty minutes or more. This wash sprays nicely and, in the experiments conducted last spring, gave very good results in killing San Jose scale as any of the sulphur washes. Orchardists desiring to use a soil-boiled sulphur wash should by all means give this a trial.

USING A SEPARATOR.

Much of the trouble with the cream from farm separators is, according to a contributor in Iowa Stock and Home, the result of a misconception on the part of the dairymen and of a failure to understand the real value of the separator company or agent who sells the machine. Whenever this is stated that it is not necessary to wash the separator if it is used, or that it is possible to properly wash it without taking it apart, is pure misleading such statements is either ignorant or a knave. The writer can be in mis-stating facts. It is true that, visible dirt may be washed from the bowl by a few turns of filth, the filthy bacteria, remain and develop, and the cream obtained the first time that passes through it. Not even the agent that may make such statements would be willing to eat from dishes that had been washed but once a day. If we assume the argument, we soon see how false it is. The first morning it is possible to run the separator twice a day and wash it but once, why may we not use it three or four times without washing? Or if it be possible to wash the machine without taking it apart but once a day, why take it apart more than once or two days or three or four, ad infinitum?

The sooner users of farm machines awaken to the fact that the separator must be thoroughly cleaned every time it is used the sooner it will be possible to deliver cream in first-class condition. Another defect is the result of holding milk and cream on the farm long enough. This is usually done with cream. It is true cream may be kept sweet, for several days, under favorable conditions of the average farm it is impossible to keep cream free from bacterial contamination; and while it is possible to stop the growth (not the destruction (the souring kind) from developing by keeping the cream or milk at low temperature it is impossible to stop the other kinds from growing, consequently milk or cream held for some time develop off flavors. Milk or cream, like wine, may grow old without becoming sour. The sooner milk or cream is quited into the hands of the buttermaker, the better butter he can make of it, and consequently the more money may be returned to the patrons.

THE HORSE.

Blocking the Road.

It is important to bear in mind that highways are dedicated for the purpose of travel only, and anybody that interferes and obstructs travel in the highway throughout its whole width, from the line on one side to the line on the other, who is not himself a traveller, is a wrong doer, per se, and in case of accident resulting in damage, is not only barred from recovering for his damage because of his wrong-doing, but he is liable to respond in damages to the other. Under this head may be cited the usual habit of many people of leaving their wagon, a pile of wood, their hay hook, or other trunk on the side of the road.

Another instance under this head that might be mentioned is the case where a teamster drives his team to a hitching post on the side of the street, ties them to a post and goes away and leaves them. At this moment he ceases to be a traveller and must be esteemed as one who is obstructing the highway. Here it is right, you still ask, to hitch my team to a post and go away and leave them? I would answer, certainly you have, only you must be aware of hindering travel; the street was made to travel on, and if travellers can get by you by ordinary diligence, they, my stopper, have no right to complain, but, if they can't get by with ordinary prudence, it is not the man to get out of the way, travel on, or suffer the consequences

I mention this case because I have observed some people in hitching their team to a hitching post, instead of pulling the wagon close up to the curb, to avoid interference with travel, leave the hind wheels far out in the highway. If such a person coming back found both his hind wheels broken, I don't think it would pay him to enquire who broke them.

BREEDER'S NOTES.

Men who have been scouring the country in search of marketable horses report a scarcity and that animals from 15.2 to 15.3 hands high than of smaller ones. Those farmers who raise but one or two foals each year should endeavor to raise well-proportioned animals which will stand 15.2 or 15.3 hands at maturity. What is the use when will only the majority of buyers, but they must have substance as well as height. Right here that love "to ride behind daylight underneath" are hard to find at satisfactory prices.

Farmers who have good-sized mares and their foals thoroughly educated to harness at the proper age.

Just as soon as a colt or other animal is found to be hitting himself, take him to the shop and have his shoes changed. Here some much is applied in such a manner as to remedy the evil with the least pain and will soon acquire the habit of hitching or going feel guided some other way.

Colts that are properly educated to a good halter will be found very useful to harness will have better appearance in harness than those that are not so educated. It requires good judgment, however, to break a colt properly.

When colts are taking their first lessons in harness an open bridle should be used. After they have become thoroughly used to harness a carriage a blind bridle should be substituted for the open one until they are thoroughly accustomed to that.—Horse Breeder.

MEN IN BURNING MINE

Thirty-Nine Miners Are Already Given Up For Dead.

Two Hundred and Fifty Escape, But the Rest Are Lost — Six of the Rescuers Reported to Be Missing—Supporting Timbers Are Burning and Ground Over the Mine Is Falling—Women and Children Suffer.

Dortmund, Prussia, July 11.—A fire has broken out in the Corussela coal mine, caused by the careless handling of a lamp by boys. The lamp exploded, igniting the timbers of the sight, which burned rapidly.

Two hundred and fifty miners escaped through an air shaft, but 39 were cut off, and their death is regarded as certain.

The work of rescue is attended with great difficulty, owing to the escape of poisonous gases, and six of the rescuers are reported missing.

The ground over the mine is sinking gradually with a sound like that of thunder, as the supporting timbers of the mine are being burned away.

Crowds of women and children are standing about the mine in a pitiable state, hoping for the rescue of husbands and fathers.

DROWN LIKE RATS IN A TRAP.

Last Message From Submarine Was "Water Gaining."

Paris, July 11.—Despatches reaching the Ministry of Marine show that the authorities at Interia, continued strenuous efforts to raise the submarine boat Farfadet with the utmost calm of taking out the corpses of the imprisoned crew.

The lines were again passed under the boat yesterday, but the rescuers were unable to bring her to the surface.

The futile efforts to rescue the imprisoned men shook up the divers, causing the cap and permitted water to enter the interior orifice for the admission of air.

One of the last messages from the imprisoned men was simply "Hurry. Water gaining." Since then complete silence has prevailed within the fatal cage bringing no response. Therefore it is believed that those men are dead being smothered were drowned.

SHOT BY ACCIDENT.

Freddie Brothers May Die From Shot Wound at Strathroy.

Strathroy, July 11—Freddie Brothers, 16 years of age, son of George Brothers of Adelaide, was accidentally shot here yesterday.

It seems that four boys went out to pick berries, and Freddie and took a 22 rifle along. One of the older boys took the gun from him to shoot and turned away to do something, when the gun was discharged, the ball entering little Freddie's abdomen, the object carrying the brain.

The lad was brought home, and no hopes are entertained of his recovery.

TROLLEY COLLISION.

Elk Delagates Seriously Hurt and Motorman Gets Leg Broken.

Niagara Falls, July 11.—About midnight a crowded car of the Buffalo Park and River road at the first bend, about a mile from the falls, met a river local car, in charge of Motorman A. E. Rae and conductor Ryan. The cars were loaded inside of the curve with a disabled trolley arm, the motorman on top fixing the disabled arm, and a belt line car, loaded with tourists and delegates to the Elks' convention, was on a good rate of speed.

The motorman, four of the local, both cars were bound for Queenstown. Motorman Rae was in the motor car but the motorman. The heavy belt line car plowed into it and the impact threw the local car off the track. The front of the belt line car was badly cut in front and was derailed.

The force of the collision threw the passengers from the belt line car out of their seats and over the heads of others, causing a panic. Fortunately there were more or less injured, two of them seriously. J. Hickson, of Toronto, was thrown headlong out under the eye and was badly bruised. W. Turner had his left leg broken. Others hurt were Fred Fowler Buffs. Motorman Rae of this city had his leg broken.

ALL HAS ENDED HAPPILY.

Premier Rouvier Submits the Morocco Notes to the Chamber.

Paris, July 11.—Premier Rouvier submitted to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday the notes exchanged by himself and Prince von Radolin, constituting the Franco-German agreement relative to Morocco.

M. Rouvier followed the reading of the note with a detailed explanation of the negotiations. He declared that the understanding now reached between Germany and France was the result of mutual desire to fully recognizing the special interests of France.

M. Rouvier's statement was rapturously applauded by every part of the chamber. The agreement brings a deep sense of relief to the European powers. On the other hand, the agreement many weeks of tension.

Both agree as to the sovereignty of the Sultan, the independence of Morocco and the open door, without interference with the integrity of the Sultan and the prospective subdivision of the country among European powers. On the other hand, the agreement is said regulates French interest in the country, due to the geographical proximity of Algiers, and its result thereby to advance the frontier and maintain peace and order. It still remains for the details of the reform program of the conference.

The British government's position is weakened by the negotiations.

IMMIGRANT TRIES SUICIDE.

Cuts His Throat on Train — Wife and Child With Him.

Winnipeg, July 11.—Alexander Anderson, an immigrant from Scotland, attempted suicide yesterday by slitting his throat with a razor in the smoking car attached to the westbound Imperial limited, between Portage and Oak of Winnipeg.

His wife and one child were on the train with him and had been struggling against the man's despondency, result that from a letter.

Dr. Critchlow of Montreal, who was on board, dressed the wounds, and the man was removed to the General Hospital at Stiglit Junction, where he is in his recovery.

In committing the deed, Anderson deliberately tore up a $500 draft on the Winnipeg Bank, which would have been recovered and the money will be paid his wife.

Sat Down in Front of Train.

Milton despatch says: Alfred Wilbur Smith, a resident of New Brunswick, N. J., while walking on the Me Gonigle Life Insurance Co. committed suicide here yesterday. Coroner Hilton Gibson empanelled a New York Central train at a crossing, he sat down on the track, with his head resting on a rail but a few feet away and was instantly cut to pieces by the train coming. He was about a week ago for treatment at the sanitarium.

Motorman Lost His Hand.

London, July 11.—Before the coroner's jury inquiring into the death of Motorman Reid, who was killed by motorman Rensted of car No. 152, which crashed into the rear of car No. 150, it was stated that he could have stopped the car at a safe distance but he could not do so because he was never thought of it, losing his presence of mind. The inquest was then adjourned.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the well young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

OLD BOYS' REUNION.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR THIS APPROACHING AFFAIR ARE PROGRESSING NICELY.

The arrangements for the Old Boys' Reunion received impetus from last night's meeting. The Chairman of the various committees submitted reports which were in the main adopted. For the different functions is also for the great parade of Monday afternoon, four bands have been engaged. The Belleville, Kilties, City, Oddfellows, Trenton, Deseronto and Mosoo. The Belleville Kilties Band will appear in the procession, and will, in addition to the two concerts on Saturday and Sunday, also pay at the reception at St. Agnes' School on Monday afternoon and another concert on Monday evening. From all quarters come promises of assistance for the parade. The Finance Committee has now $1500 collected, but need at least $800 more, the response for financial aid has been most encouraging not only in the amounts given but in the spirit in which the money has been contributed. From several places letters have been received stating that the old boys would like to contribute in something which would be commemorative of their gratitude for the place of their birth and of the first Old Boys' Reunion. It was unanimously decided that in no better way could their views be met than by adding our City Hospital the Executive of the Hospital Board on Thursday afternoon to perfect plans. It is also decided to the Old Boys and freshmens on Victoria Park should be placed in the hands of the Women's Christian Association.

MINING OUTLOOK.

SATISFACTORY REPORT FROM HASTINGS COUNTY.

During the past two years mining, particularly gold mining, has been under a cloud in this region, due to the closing at the two largest plants, namely, those of the Canadian Gold Fields Syndicate and the Deloro Exploration Company in Belmont township. Happily, however, prospects have changed for the better of late, and there is now no reasonable doubt, that, with the introduction of the latest machinery, by the use of which working costs will be reduced, as is expected to ensure to the mine on operation, and the opening of new ore bodies, which are known to exist under mines, the mineral production of the district will shortly exceed that of any year in the past.

The Star of the East, in Harris township, which has for several months been a source of profitable mine, is being worked extensively with modern equipment, continues to yield satisfactorily, and the plant is likely to be enlarged in the near future.

The Craig Gold Mining & Reduction Company, under the management of Mr W A Huggerford, of this city, the property of Belleville, in which mine in New Yorild State, have been down to the 300 foot level at Bannockburn, and are both producing and developing. They have erected the first stamp mill in Ontario, by the use of which three tons of ore per hour are now being crushed by each stamp as with the old battery, and by the use of the latest improvement and by the 1st of September they will be able to mill 125 to 150 tons per day of 24 working hours. The ore, although of low grade—average $4 per ton—is in abundance, there being five shafts from the foot to the first deep on the main vein. No stock has been offered for sale by this company.

The Big Dipper Mining Company have secured a lease of land in Huntingdon township, and judging from assays made of material from their property their prospects are bright.

The Cordova mine, which was closed owing to a misunderstanding between the proprietors and the manager, is likely to be in operation again ere long, as Mr. Kirkegarde, formerly manager at Deloro, is arranging for the merging into one large concern of this mine and the Canadian Gold Fields at Deloro.

Mr. W. A. Hungerford, who is one of our principal mining men, has secured a clear title to the famous Richardson property in the gold area first discovered in Hastings, and the fabulous richness of a great pocket in which assays run into the hundreds.

This property has been in litigation for more than a decade, and Mr. Hungerford will make a thorough examination of it.

The Hollindia lead mine, near Bannockburn, has been showing up well of late. The shaft is now 60 feet deep, and the stockholders are reaping a handsome return from their investments.

A sulphide mine is in operation near Tweed, the shipments being from 12 to 15 cars per week. About 600 men are employed.

Copper sulphides, which assay very highly, have been discovered on the Cox property near Eldorado, in what was formerly an iron mine. An American company have secured an option on this, and diamond drilling to arrest a smelter. The assays report. All ore are therefore favorable, as they were made by Mr. Burrows, Provincial Assayer.

PAIN ABOUT THE HIPS.

It is a common complaint with women. The right treatment is Nervilina, which penetrates to the seat of the pain immediately. Nervilina warms and soothes the affected parts, draws out the irritation and pain, allows the patient ease after one rubbing. The liniment is economical and safe. Nearly fifty years in use, and the demand immensely greater every day! Nervilina must be good.

CITY FATHERS IN REGULAR SESSION.

A Number of Matters Disposed of—An Extra Appropriation to Park Committee—A Grant of $300 for Holding of a Fair - Council Adjourns for a Few Weeks.

At the meeting of the City Council held last evening considerable business was transacted, and the City Fathers decided to take a few weeks' holidays as fan as civic business was concerned. The Council will not meet again until the 5th of September, unless it is absolutely necessary to hold a special meeting. All the members excepting Ald. Green were present at the meeting.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of last meeting a few accounts were presented and some communications were read, all of which were laid upon the table to be disposed of.

On motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc. Ald. Vermilyea in the chair.

The reports of the various committees were first taken up, the accounts in which were passed without discussion.

A motion prevailed that St. Agnes' School be allowed to connect on the Bridge St. sewer at the junction of William and Bridge streets, but not at the manhole.

A resolution prevailed that Mr. J. H. Weller be allowed the use of a portion of Zwick's Island for his portable saw-mill, at a rental of $5 per month.

A recommendation from the Executive Committee, that the annual rent of $10 as paid to the Ontario Steamboat Co. for the use of the Bridge Street Wharf, be remitted by the Executive, and the Solicitor be requested to attend the meeting of August next, was adopted.

The recommendation that automobiles be excluded from Victoria Park was also passed.

Ald. Mark asked if carriages and sleighs were prohibited from the park during the night.

The Mayor—Carriages are, but not automobiles.

Ald. Sinclair said that automobiles would become a nuisance if they were allowed to run that way. Automobiles should be allowed upon the park as well as horses and carriages.

The recommendation prevailed.

The City Committee's recommendation was then proceeded asking that more suitable premises for office and workshop be secured.

After an explanation by Ald. Sinclair, the recommendation was adopted upon.

The following accounts were presented and ordered to be paid:

T. Mark	$60.00
W. Walker	19.59
J. Lang	8.25
Dale Martine Co.	6.85
Globe Printing Co.	5.26

On motion Ald. Sinclair moved, seconded by Ald. Vermilyea, that the City Hall be placed at the disposal of the local lodge of Independent Order of Foresters for Exhibition, of the Eastern Ontario Grand Lodge, to be held in the city on August 30th and 31st of this year, between 300 and 400 delegates would be in attendance.

Mayor Solman moved that the request be granted. Ald. Marsh seconded the motion, which was unanimously adopted.

Petitions were presented from Mr. W. H. Robinson and others, complaining that the drain at the corner of Albert and Bridge streets needed repairs, as it does not take off the water in wet weather.

On motion the matter was referred to the Board of Works.

A letter was read from Mr. T. Pullman, requesting that the wages of city employees be increased.

On motion the letter was referred to the Board of Works and Executive Committee.

A petition from the Street Surveyor was presented, showing that the rails taken up of the electric railway weighed 170-4 tons.

The report was ordered to be filed.

A petition was presented from the East Hastings Agricultural Society, asking that the date of the fair be changed to Belleville this year and that $300 was made for a grant of $300 to assist in the holding of a fair in the city.

Ald. Sinclair was in favor of the city having a fair. We are, he said, the centre of a large agricultural country, and he would be in favor of granting $300 for the purpose of having a fair here. He made a motion to that effect.

Ald. McCrodan seconded the motion.

The Mayor said that the object was to have a central fair here and he believed that this would be successfully accomplished in the near future. He would favor such a grant.

The prayer of the petition was unanimously granted.

A petition was presented, asking that a granolithic walk be constructed on the west side of Commercial street, between Parker and Charlotte streets.

Messrs. Vallance and Phillips, who were present and who had signed the petition, addressed the Council, urging the necessity of having such a walk constructed.

On motion the matter was referred to the Surveyor and Solicitor to report upon.

The motion the committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Knox asked if the walks in Corby's park were to be gravelled; if so, an addit onal grant would be necessary.

Mayor Solman—They should be gravelled and an additional grant will be made.

Ald. Panter desired to know if there was anything new in regard to the rolling mills.

The Mayor, in reply, said that the last option held by some Pittsburg people had expired on July 1st. He might as well tell the Council that he had learned several times that the works on the mills was being interfered with, and recently he had been informed that some people were looking upon considering the purchase of the mills had given up the idea, owing to the fact that they had received discouraging reports from some Montreal men who are connected with the Bank of Montreal in Montreal, and also from two leading editors of the city, and the idea he spoken was endeavoring to find out who these gentlemen were, so that they might be known to all.

Ald. Panter asked why the by-law in regard to putting on the sidewalk had not been enforced. There seemed to be no action taken by the authorities to enforce the same.

The Clerk said he had notified the Chief of Police as to the provisions of the by-law and would do so again.

Ald. Panter asked Ald. Sinclair if his name was down as recovering. Ald. Sinclair was cordial, in reference to the gas debenture transaction.

Ald. Sinclair said it was and that to the Clerk was due all credit for the manner in which he had put the matter in hand. Every detail had been done to the very latest. He was certainly after the city's interest.

Mayor Solman asked if anything had been done in reference to Mr. Martin's claim that the sidewalk had caused some damage to his greenhouse.

The Surveyor said that in his opinion the sidewalk had not done any damage to the building in question.

The Council went into committee on the by-laws, Ald. Gordon in the chair.

A by-law to raise by debentures $15,000 for extension to the sewer system was given its third reading by title.

This by-law was numbered 13C.

MOTIONS.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. McCrodan, that the by-law should be required at an estimated cost of $150.—Carried.

Ald. Gordon moved, seconded by Ald. McCrodan, that the ferry slip be entered for the season commencing for $100 per annum.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Sinclair, seconded by Ald. Vermilyea, that the gas debenture by-law as passed be published in a daily paper, and that it be referred to the Printing Committee for that purpose.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Panter, seconded by Ald. Mark, that in view of the extra expenses in connection with the parks, this an additional grant of $200 be made, the same to be taken out of the proceeds of the sale of street rails.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Panter, seconded by Ald. Vermilyea, that when the Council adjourns it adjourn to meet on 5th September 5th, and that the following committees do not meet again till regular session until Sept. 5th, and that the Mayor be ex-officio Chairman of the Executive Committee and the Treasurer be authorized to sign all cheques for same and other necessary expenditures upon the certificate of the Mayor or the chairman of the standing committee in which the expenditure belongs.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Panter, seconded by Ald. Sinclair, that a committee consisting of the Mayor, Aldermen Panter, Gordon, Marsh, and the Clerk be appointed to look after the construction of granolithic walks during the vacation.—Carried.

GUARD AGAINST GERMS.

KEEP WELL BY STRENGTHENING THE STOMACH IN SUMMER WITH MI-O-NA.

Everyone with weak digestion should use Mi-o-na at this season and so strengthen the stomach that disease germs can have no effect whatever. This remarkable remedy puts the whole digestive system in so healthy, clean and sweet a state that fermentation of the food cannot exist, that any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed, and food will be so readily assimilated that a rapid and healthy increase in flesh will result.

Nervousness and sleeplessness come more often from a disordered stomach than from any other cause; headache, back-ache, and rheumatic pains are directly caused by an acid condition of the stomach. Mi-o-na corrects that evil, prevents the formation of acids, and nervousness, kidney trouble, or rheumatism, is quickly cured.

Ask J. S. McKeown to show you the guarantee under which he sells Mi-o-na. Price 50 cents. It costs nothing unless it cures.

DRESSING THE NECK.

It Plays a Very Important Part in a Woman's Appearance.

Few women realize how much their appearance depends on the way they dress their neck. Women with short necks bundle themselves up until they look as if they had chronic sore throats, while a girl with a neck like a giraffe wears a little turndown collar and makes a fine caricature of herself.

Let her who has the long neck wear all the high soft neck adornments she can get together. With an evening gown she need not be afraid to put a band of ribbon under her necklace, and she will look all the better. In the daytime a uniform necked woman should never wear a collar that confines the neck too much. In the evening the least adornment possible, and if she be fortunate enough to have a pretty neck and throat she is better without any jewels. If she must wear some, let them be a string of pearls or a necklace of solitaire diamonds.

The thin necked, scrawny women are those that can drape themselves with the old fashioned necklaces with pendants. A dress cut open at the throat is always much more dressy and even for old ladies is becomingly pretty. But their necks must be thoroughly covered with folds of net or soft tulle. Nothing is prettier for old ladies' wear than the kerchief, which consisted of a square of net folded and put under the gown. To be sure, in those days gauze and strings were in fashion, so that there was a framing of white all about the face and neck that was becoming to the skin. But even now their gowns can be made in the fashion above described. —Washington Star.

A Norway Legend.

According to a work on Norway, the acuteness of the soil in that country is explained by some of the country people as follows: At the creation of the world the angels whose duty it was to scatter the soil forgot Norway. Seeing this, the guardian angel of the land made complaints to the Creator. What was to be done? Impossible to restart the whole of the creation for the sake of Norway. "Come, my little angels," said he, "look carefully and perhaps you may still find a little earth." The conscience stricken angels swept the floor of heaven, and the little dust they found they gathered in their draperies and scattered over the Norwegian rocks.

Faces and Feet.

An English writer, writing in a London woman's magazine, says:

"I do not know if any one has ever drawn attention to the fact before, that you can generally tell the shape of a woman's foot by her face. Its nose is as much character in a foot as in a hand. You will generally find the round faced, short nosed little woman has the prettiest ankle and foot; the high cheeked, long nosed woman the smallest hand. Women with very pretty faces seldom have pretty feet; Nature, somehow or other, compensates its daughters."

MUSE AND MATRIMONY

By T. SHERWOOD BOYD

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

"Do you know," remarked Gerald Goodsell, "I think I shall take to writing poetry."

Stella Ainsworth gave a little laugh as she settled herself more comfortably in the big chair. "Who ever heard of a poet with a waist line larger than his chest measurement?" she teased.

"I say," he cried, "I'm not to blame because I'm—er—plump—am I?"

"You're not to blame, Gerry," she laughed, "but you cannot have indigestion and the fires of genius within you at the same time.

"But I have a splendid digestion," he persisted. "Four meals a day never fease me."

"Poetry," counseled Nettie, "never have regular meals. When they feed regular lives they cease to become geniuses."

"But that's all tommyrot," he declared hotly. "I can be a genius and have the comforts of life, can't I?"

"If you are a very great genius, Gerry, you may be able to live those humble cups down, but few men write good checks and good verse at the same time."

"Well," he said stubbornly, "I don't think my checks would be protested, and I write verse. Bob Thompson said they were first rate. I read him some the other night."

"So that is what he meant," mused Miss Ainsworth.

"What's what who meant?" demanded Gerald.

"Why, Bob said he had been to see you the other evening and had had one of the best laughs he has enjoyed in a long time," she explained.

"He told me they were good."

"No," explained Nettie. "I think you will find that he said they were great."

"It's the same thing."

"Great is a word capable of a wider latitude of definition," she reminded him. "It includes some of the verses."

"You'll laugh," he contended.

"No," she promised; "I'll be very good and quiet."

"Here's one I thought up last night," he began bashfully:

"My lady's eyes are blue and kind,
Her cheeks are flowers of fair and mind,
Her mouth would be hard to find;
'Tis not a rose mouth clearly.
My lady's face is pure and sweet,
My lady's form is dainty, neat,
And trim her tiny little feet,
And she's a regular angel dearly."

"I think that last line needs a little polishing," said Miss Ainsworth gravely. "The 'really of the line might object to being called a near angel."

"I say," cried Gerald in shocked tones, "you don't suppose I meant that, do you? That's poetic license—to make the rhyme, you know."

"Suppose you make it, 'And she's an angel, clearly?'" suggested Nettie, "that would be more polite."

Gerry's face brightened. "It's awfully good of you to suggest that," he said. "I think the whole line better."

"Is there a second verse?" asked Nettie.

"Not yet," admitted Gerry, coloring. "You see, the different verses should be alike in meter. Now, when I start a second verse it sounds different. I had a second verse to this. It goes:

"I never loved another girl
With half the tender passion
That keeps my head all in a whirl
In this unusual fashion.
If she would only give her love
To one who loves her dearly
I'd think the stars in heaven above
Like her eyes shone more clearly."

He paused expectantly. Miss Ainsworth acditated that the verses were scarcely of the same metrical measurement.

"I think," observed Gerry, "that I'll have the verse done in a booklet where there is only one verse to every other page and the rest of the paper is covered with prose. Then, you see, it would not matter so much."

"You should be an inventor, Gerry," commended Miss Ainsworth. "I think you are more ingenious than poetical."

"But I want to be a poet," he protested. "I've got such a lot of things that I dare not say to the girl herself. It's the only way to let them come out."

Nettie smiled. "Now, if it all comes out," she declared, "Who is the lady, Gerry?"

"I cannot tell you," said Goodsell, his face crimsoning. "You see, if I could get up the courage to say how I love her, I wouldn't have to write this stuff."

"Why don't you write her a proposal in rhyme?"

"Didn't I try?" he groaned. "I put in three weeks' time at it. Valentine's trying to find a rhyme for her name."

"Now," announced Miss Ainsworth triumphantly, "I know where one of my valentines came from."

"Rotten, wasn't it?" he asked despairingly.

"Well," she admitted, "you might have found a better rhyme for my name than 'let me.'"

"I worked four hours to get that," he asserted. "I've tried my best and how hard it is."

She went to the table and scribbled on the fly leaf of a book. Then she brought it to him.

Your name might be Eva or Grace
Or Agnes or Annie or Betty,
But it's not, and I'll make a bet on your face
Your name is Pauline or Lady Nettie.

"See how easy it is?" she demanded as he looked up.

"I can do it myself now," he announced as he in turn moved toward the table. Presently he returned to the fireplace. "Read this, please," he said as he handed her the sheet. On the other side of the paper she read:

Her hair may be black, black or red,
Her eyes may be blue or hazel,
But the girl I am anxious to wed
Is a beauty, and her name is Nettie.

"That's what I've been trying to say to you for most two years," he went on hastily. "It may be bad verse, but don't think I'll make a better husband than I will a poet. Say 'Yes,' dear," he urged.

And Nettie said, "Yes, dear," so softly that he had to kneel beside her, with his face close about her, to catch the whispered words.

Locomotive Fielded Ball.

In the baseball annals of Texas, that tiniest section of the Southeast which, whether an actual occurrence or not, has been repeated so often that it is invested with the flavor of fact.

On a hot Fourth of July back in the state, the rivalry between the two cities behind the bat without a mask, and the pitcher knew of no curve or toe in the state, was at its height. It was between the Texas Sluggers and the Tishomingan Little Potatoes, but that is not material. The game had got in some good stick work early in the game, and the visitors were just feeling the big Texas pitcher. It was the fifth inning, and the Little Potatoes had two men on the bases, one on second and the other on first, when one of their home runs hitters, who had been asleep on the first moment, struck the ball. It cleared the entire field and would have fallen on the railroad track, but just at that moment a train came along, and the ball disappeared in the smokestack of the engine. The train was going at a lively speed up grade, and the force of the puffs ejected the ball, which was carried by the train carried it until it fell in the third baseman's hands, and a double play was made. There was much kicking from the Little Potatoes as to whether the play was fair the side of a

HE SWITCHED BALLOTS.

Wondering House Saw Premier Gain Two and Borden Lose One—The Militia Bill Advanced.

Ottawa, July 12.—On motion of the House to go into supply, E. Gus Porter brought up the matter of the ballot box frauds and gave a demonstration. Mr. Blain of Peel was asked to mark three ballots for Mr. Borden, and Dr. Schaffner three for Sir Wilfrid. They were placed in the bogus ballot box in the usual way one by one. Then the box was opened and the ballot were taken out. They recorded this vote—Sir Wilfrid Laurier 5, Mr. Borden 1. Mr. Porter explained that by a special movement of the handle six ballots previously placed in the box had been substituted for the six marked before their eyes, the latter being switched into the secret compartment by the same movement. Mr. Fitzpatrick said everything had been done to bring the offenders to justice, and the matter dropped.

The militia bill to increase the permanent force of 8,000 was put through the committee stage and stands for third reading. Hon. Mr. Prefontaine severely criticised Sir Frederick Borden's militia policy, who defended it.

In supply, on the item of 134,000 for Dominion lands, the Opposition charged the land agents with partisanship. Mr. Foster moved that $2,700 be struck off the item for the salary of Thomas Young, and E. G. McAllum, who were alleged to have made themselves particularly offensive. The motion was lost by 17 to 89.

An hour's discussion of who was responsible for the long session made everybody tired, and at 12.30 a. m. they agreed to go home.

Another Dead Indemnity.

Ottawa, July 12.—Both parties met in caucus yesterday. The question of an increased indemnity came up at each meeting. It is understood that the matter was thrashed out fully. The round robin which was presented to the Government was for an increase to $2,500 for each member. The scheme involved also an increase of the Ministers' salaries, as well as $1,000 or more for the leader of the Opposition in addition to this there was to be an increase of the judges' salaries. The matter was discussed at length at the Liberal caucus, but no decision was reached. The question has been left in the hands of the Premier and R. L. Borden.

Major Sankey Was Drowned.

Was a Brother of Mrs. Col. Ponton, of This City.

With Two of His Party He Went Down In Manitou Lake After a Long Struggle on Overturned Canoe for Three Hours— "Good-bye, Fred," He Cried as He Went Down Beneath the Waters.

Winnipeg, July 12.—Major Villiers Sankey, divisional engineer of the Transcontinental Railway, with two of his party, were drowned Monday morning near Kenora, formerly Rat Portage, Ont.

Major Sankey, who had charge of the Transcontinental engineering party, left Kenora with three of his men, Hull, Beauchamp and Temple, for their camp on Clear Lake, 20 miles east of here. On reaching Manitou Lake the party experienced a heavy wind and the canoe took in water, with the result that a quarter of a mile from shore they were upset. All four, with presence of mind, clung to the upturned boat, but after clinging for over two hours they gradually sank from exhaustion — first Beauchamp, half an hour later Hull and finally the major, who had hung on for over three hours. With a "Good-bye, Fred," he sank to rise no more when within 200 yards of the shore. Temple half an hour later made shore and, covering three portages and two small lakes, reached camp at 11 o'clock and reported the party, who immediately set out to rescue the bodies. So far they had not been successful.

Two of the party came into Kenora at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon to report to the chief divisional engineer, Major Maclaine, who has wired Major Sankey's family in Toronto. Major Sankey has been taken up his residence here and expected his family in about three weeks.

Was Universally Respected.

Toronto, July 12.—Major Villiers Sankey was in the prime of life and was one of the most popular and well-liked of city officials.

On January 10 of this years he resigned his post as city surveyor, which he had held since 1889, to direct a large surveying party for the G. T. P. between Lake Nepigon and Winnipeg, and his retirement from civic employ was at that time generally regretted by all who were brought into business relations with him. He was widely known, not alone in municipal and military circles, but by the general public of the Province.

Major Sankey will be remembered as having had charge of some very important undertakings in his official capacity as city surveyor, among them the Don improvements and the Esplanade and waterfront works.

Of the military career of Major Sankey much might be said. For over twenty-seven years he has been connected with the militia and the military of this city in various capacities.

Col. Galloway who for years has been a close comrade of Major Sankey, when told the sad end last night, could not say too much in commendation of the man who had achieved so much in the circle of the military.

"Always painstaking and an ideal officer, Major Sankey was a friend of all who knew him.

"He was one of the most wonderful men I have known. In the annual field camps held at Niagara he would travel all over the peninsula in search of in formation. Always making maps and studying the geographical formation of that part of the County. I have no fear in saying that he knew more of that part of this Province than any other man in it."

News of his and taking off was received last night by Mrs. Sankey at the family residence, 385 Huron street.

Deckhand Falls Overboard.

Walkerville, July 12.—Louis Arbour of Montreal, a deckhand on the steamer City of Montreal, while scrubbing the side of the vessel lying at the dock here yesterday morning, fell overboard and was drowned.

Boy Accused Father in Prison.

Amsterdam, N. Y., July 12.—Harry Rotondi, aged 11 years, was drowned while bathing in the Erie Canal Monday night. The boy's father is in prison for shooting a man, and an application was made yesterday by Mrs. Higgins his pardon, inasmuch as he had only a month to serve.

Launch Cut in Two.

New York, July 12.—One man was fatally hurt and six others had a narrow escape from drowning early yesterday, when the tug Oneida ran down the 40-foot naphtha launch Edna, off 45th street, Brooklyn. The owner of the launch escaped injury. The launch was cut in two and sank.

Jail For Abusing Women.

Brampton, July 12.—Dick Shannigan of Port Credit was sentenced to one year in the Central Prison by Judge McCibbon yesterday. The prisoner was arrested on two charges of assault, one upon his wife, from whom he had agreed to separate, and the other upon Mrs. Shelly and her new-born child, who were living with his wife. Shannigan served eight months in Brampton jail for a former attack on his wife.

Defrauded Montreal Merchants.

Montreal, July 12.—James Powers and Frank Smith, under arrest on charges of defrauding a number of merchants, Mrs. Smith comes from St. Louis, Mo., where she is well-connected. The latter arrived here Monday night and yesterday settled all the claims. It is expected that she will now withdraw the suspended charges. Powers will fight.

Westwood Must Stand Trial.

Brantford, July 12.—Fred Westwood was arrested last week, charged with the murder of Miss Josephine Sears, 4th line, Oakland, and appeared before Magistrate Livingstone this morning. Evidence was taken and Westwood was committed for trial.

Glad It is Over.

Paris, July 12.—The correspondence by France of the invitation to take part in the International conference on Morocco was despatched by special messenger to the Sultan last night. The messenger is expected to arrive at Fez July 19.

ASKS FRANCE TO INTERVENE.

Baron D'Estrournelles Would Avoid Scandinavian Conflict.

Paris, July 12.—Baron d'Estrournelles de Constant, the French member of The Hague Peace Tribunal, has written a letter to Premier Rouvier urging French intermediation in the conflict between Norway and Sweden. The letter says, in part:

"Without thrusting ourselves into the conflict, we cannot remain indifferent to our duty to ourselves, and to all Europe to prevent the spread of a conflagration.

"The relations of France toward Sweden and Norway insure a sympathetic welcome to words of conciliation from you. I therefore ask in the name of a great number of French and foreign parliamentarians that you give authority to the pacific efforts which will receive an approving echo from the Governments of the country."

Lobsters Are Plentiful.

Halifax, July 12.—The lobster season in most of the fishing districts of the Maritime Provinces ended Monday. Reports from all districts are not yet available, but along the north shore of Nova Scotia lobsters were very plentiful, and most of the packers had secured the full output of the factories long before the legal period elapsed. It is expected that the catch in all the gulf factories will be the largest in recent years.

To Investigate Venezuela.

Oyster Bay, L. I., July 12.—Judge William Calhoun of Chicago has been appointed by President Roosevelt to be a special commissioner to Venezuela. Judge Calhoun will make a thorough investigation into the conditions in Venezuela, so far as they relate to the United States and its interests.

To Watch Ottawa Legislation.

Toronto, July 12.—Thomas Birket, ex-M. P. Ald. Champagne and R. G. Code of Ottawa were at the Parliament Buildings yesterday. Mr. Code has been appointed by the local Government to watch Ottawa legislation affecting Provincial interests.

Deadly Rioting in Havana.

Havana, July 12.—Further deaths have resulted from the conflicts here Monday night in the Cerro district, between Cuban anti-tyrannic and civil lans. Capt. Portunondos of the artillery was wounded and his condition is critical.

Pledged to Fight.

Edmonton, July 12.—The Conservatives of Edmonton in convension yesterday decided to pledge their candidate, if he be elected, to fight against separate schools in the new Legislature.

Appointment For Parent.

Ottawa, July 12.—The understanding now is that ex-Premier Parent of Quebec and Colin Mclaine will be appointed to the transcontinental railway commission after Parliament has prorogued.

LONG ago we realized that the baking and roasting qualities of the oven of a range are of greatest importance to the range user. We brought our knowledge, gained by years of experience, to bear on this one point. The result was the Imperial Oxford Diffusive Oven Flue. With this exclusive feature, the Imperial Oxford stands to-day the most perfect baking and roasting range on the market.

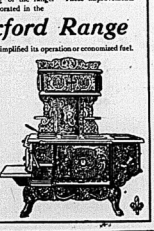

Altogether this most important feature of a range to such a point of perfection we naturally did not neglect any other improvement which could add to the working of the range. These improvements were incorporated in the became they added to the life of the range, simplified its operation or economized fuel.

Of these improvements the draw-out oven rack is one which will instantly appeal to the cook. The handle of this rack is outside the range—always cool enough to hold with the bare hand. By pulling this handle forward anything roasting in the oven may be drawn out onto the oven shelf to be basted, without touching the hot pan or reaching into the oven. The same applies to the testing of bread, cake or pies.

We would like you to see the Imperial Oxford Range. If your dealer doesn't handle it, write us for illustrated literature and the address of the nearest dealer who does.

New Coal Field in Nova Scotia.

The recent discovery of coal twenty miles south of Springhill is the most important mining event in many years in Nova Scotia. It is the direct result of deduction from palaeontological investigations of the geological conditions at Springhill. Dawson, who stood in the front rank of Canadian geologists and whose conclusions were generally accepted without reserve, judged that the conglomerate rock that appears at Springhill and extends south was deposited before the coal measures; hence, where the conglomerate appears at the surface no coal formation was that no coal existed. Coal prospectors have, since his day, generally accepted the conglomerate district as non-productive. Mr. Fletcher, of the geological survey of Canada, undertook a long and laborious examination of the surface indications and arrived at conclusions directly at variance with Dawson's, namely, that conglomerate was of a later age than the coal, and that there was no apparent reason why there were not coal seams at Springhill under the conglomerate. At no time history that a number of coal men formed an association to bore at a spot indicated by Mr. Fletcher. The work has resulted in the discovery of a fine coal field which, if not entirely new, is at least an extension of the Springhill field, embracing an area of 200 square miles or more. Mr. Fletcher assumed that coal would be reached at a depth of from 2,000 to 3,000 feet. Operations were commenced with that idea. The drill first pierced some 410 feet of reddish sandstone, etc., belonging to the upper Permian formation; then about 1,500 feet of conglomerate was met; then some ninety feet of sandstone, and then the coal was struck. The drill went through some twelve feet of coal, but it made no core, and as the pitch of the seam is unknown its exact thickness can not be determined as yet.

The Glorious Twelfth of July.

The bonniest flower that blooms to-day—the Orange Lily.

Welcome to our many visitors.

If the weather had been anything like this on the 12th July the Boyne was fought in 1690, King William would surely have descended from his prancing steed and taken a dip in the river to cool off.

By a singularly wise provision of nature, the orange lilies are in bloom by thousands on the 12th of July.

The weather conditions were decided-ly against the Orangemen, but they made a gallant show just the same. Good luck to them all.

Didn't it sound like old times to hear the classic old party tunes, such as "The Peeler and the Goat," etc. It brought back old times in Belleville, when they were played to an accompaniment of broken heads. Let's be thankful that better relations exist now-days.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody good. The rain put somewhat of a damper on the festivities, but it also prevented the farmers from working, so they came to town to enjoy themselves.

If Mr. Hurley could have only arranged for Hon. Mr. Tarte, Bourassa and a few others from Quebec to have been here to-day!

Universal sympathy will be expressed for the relatives of the late Major Villiers Sankey, an account of whose drowning appears in our telegraphic columns. The deceased gentleman was one of Canada's foremost engineers, and his death is a national loss. The Intelligencer tenders its sincere sympathy to Mrs. Col. Ponton, a sister of the deceased, and the other relatives in this city.

A vote on Separate Schools, taken in this city to-day, would have shown a majority of more than 81, probably.

In good King Edward's glorious rain The Orangeman walked with might and main.

A lot of Belleville real estate will be taken away on the number nines of our friends the Orangemen.

The Premier's smile must have faded a little when Hon. Mr. Lemieux Porter, M. P., showed how tailors could be switched by the Shibley-Lott ballot-boxes.

It is reported that the people of Kansas will not be satisfied unless Thomas Lawson paints the Standard Oil Trust in the most lurid red, with a double forked tail, triple eleven hoofs and quadruple horns. The Kansans need not be alarmed on that score. As an artist in that line Lawson would be shut Lewis Morrison look like a Titian painting.

A man has been discovered who has two hearts and he has refused an offer of shaving from the doctors to have one of them removed. If the offer had come from just the right female the man might be last she could have gotten both hearts without any cash payment.

During the fiscal year just closed over $33,000,000 worth of diamonds passed into the United States House. Americans must have the gems, even though some of them feel they can't afford to pay their grocery bills.

"Ah, how I love to hear your daughter sing" said Archie as he waltzed in the parlor. "She's practising her exercise now, isn't she? What a beautiful trombone!"

"No," replied the mamma scornfully. "She has had sore throat for three days. She's taking a gargle."

Maxfield Parrish, the illustrator, has a picturesque house in Vermont, and from this pleasant home he often makes excursions into the distant and most isolated parts of the State.

During a recent visit to New York, Mr. Parrish said:

"I stopped over night at a lonely Vermont farm last month. The house contained a barren and desolate landscape. It was anything but gay.

"I remember the brief conversation I had with the farmer as he showed me to my bed.

"'A very quiet place,' I said.

"'It is,' said he.

"'Does a newspaper ever find its way here?'

"'Seldom.'

"Then,' I said, 'you don't hear much of what is going on in New York, eh?'

"'No,' said the farmer, grimly; 'but then you see, they don't bear much in New York of what is going on here, either.'"

Congressman Morrell, of Philadelphia, in a discussion of the Dominick Rivers appropriations, mentioned a mean man.

"There are many mean men," he said, "but what, I ask, surely, was the meanest of them all. Besides being mean, he was also rich.

"To a poor young couple living near him a son was born, and they decided to name their son after the mean man, and to ask him to stand as his godfather.

"He consented. He was flattered. "Thereupon the joy of this poor young couple was great. They wondered what gift the rich godfather would give to his little godson. Perhaps a house and lot? Perhaps a half dozen government bonds? Perhaps a herd of cattle?

Senator Morrell paused and smiled.

"What do you suppose," he said, the mean man sent the youngster? He sent it, sir, a cup that one of his Cochin China hens had won at a poultry show."

DELIGHTFUL LETTER FROM PROF. DENYS, OF THE D. AND D. INSTITUTION STAFF, WHO IS "ENJOYING" A TASTE OF PURGATORY IN MONTREAL BEFORE REACHING HIS PARADISE IN THE LAURENTIAN HILLS.

Dear Mr. Editor,— When Pierre Lotin—an untrained spirit—wrote that he believed nobody, and nothing, he was unduly extravagant. There is honor yet in man and much can be consumed in one night—where he should. Not least amongst the various types of pleasure which life, misled, many engages, brings to its wayfarers, may be mentioned the joy of memory. What will be, however hopeful, is uncertain. What is, time, alas! must soon alter; but what was sweet recollection is free to cherish and live over again. Is it not thus that all of us, at years ripe for experience, are led to

OBITUARY.

HENRY B. LOWERY.

One of Moira's aged and respected citizens passed away on July 4, in the person of Henry B. Lowery, who died at the ripe old age of 81 years. The deceased had been in poor health about one year. On June 29 he was taken suddenly worse with paralysis of the brain. All was done that loving hands could do, but to no avail.

Mr. Lowery was born at Little Falls, New York State, on February 4th, 1824, and came to Canada when a young man, settling in Prince Edward Co., near Big Island. He married Miss Mary Ann Stoneburgh, and removed to Hastings Co., residing a number of years in Sidney, thence to Huntingdon, near Moira, where he ended this life. He leaves behind to mourn his loss a lonely widow, six sons and three daughters. They are Alva Lowery, of Millbridge; John, of Holloway; Mayme, of Peterboro; Hunter, of Trenton; Andrew, of Foxboro, and Edmund, at home. The daughters are Mrs. James McKee, Ivanhoe; Mrs. Alfred Mellowney, of Keene, and Miss Aydia, of Toronto. Much sympathy will be extended to the widow and family, in the loss of their husband and father.

At the funeral a very fine sermon was delivered by the Rev. Mr. Howard from the words, "Nothing in my know they must die," after which the remains were borne by the live sons and one son-in-law done on a hearse arrived and interred in Vantassels cemetery.

AT THE CHURCH FAIR.
(New York Herald.)

'Twas at a fancy fair,
Where generous souls repair
To aid the philanthropic greed
Of goods gains,
And secure charge a V
For a thimbleful of tea,
Having kissed the cup in charity's sweet name.

"Sir," said a star-eyed maid,
Where the flowers were displayed,
Holding up a passing victim with her glove;
"Won't you buy a nice bouquet
Of jacqueminots, to say
At the altar of the lady that you love?"

From meditations woke,
Jones, as the damsel spoke,
Stammered and absent-mindedly began:
"I'm 'fraid 'twould not look well"—
His vague ingorings fell—
"I wish I dared, but I'm a married man!"

"Hyperbole," said the Rev. Russell H. Conwell to a Temple College student, "means exaggeration. A country minister of a sarcastic turn once explained hyperbole to his congregation quaintly.

"He looked down from the pulpit over his spectacles and said;

"'Now, my friends, some of you may not understand the word hyper—hyperbolical. I'll explain it. Suppose I should say this congregation was all asleep. That would be speaking hyperbolically, for I don't believe that more than half of you are asleep.'"

Admiral Dickins, during the shore bombardment at Fort Monroe, smiled one morning as a sailor staggered past him with a bale of hay on his back.

"He makes me think," said the Admiral, of another sailor, a British one, whom I saw one day at Hollyhead.

"He, too, had a load of hay, and was toiling with it up from the little fishing village that lies at the foot of the great rock. I talked with him a little while, and, as we parted, I said:

"'Why be you, my man? What job do you hold here?'

"'Well,' the sailor answered, as he took up the hay again, 'I used to consider myself a British blue-jacket, but I'm dashed if I don't begin to think I'm a commissary mule.'"

The Earl of Dartmouth, during a recent visit to Dartmouth College, said, apropos of duelling: "Why it is I know not, but in Europe no duellist is so fearful as the American duellist. No duel is considered so deadly, so hopelessly deadly, as the American duel.

"The Parisian and the German speak with shudders over their frequent of American duels wherein combatants are locked into a room their left hand tied together, and huge pistols in their right hands. They think that in the Western States duels of this nature are fought daily.

"Well, I am going to tell you about a Parisian and the use that he made of the American duel. Being challenged, after a certain quarrel, it was his right to decide on the manner of the combat, and he said:

"'This shall be an American duel. The other principal and I will draw lots, and he to whom the lots fall shall retire to a secluded place and, within earshot of the seconds, shoot himself.'

"This horrible arrangement was agreed to, and on a still morning the combatants and their seconds met in the forest of Fontainebleau. Lots were drawn with a good deal of pallor and nervous trembling, and luck went against the man who proposed the American duel.

"He took his revolver, bade farewell to his seconds, shook his opponent by the hand, and retired behind a group of stunted oak trees. There was a moment of suspense, of silence, then the report of a revolver, and the waiting men ran around the clump of oaks with horror-stricken faces.

"There the duellist stood, erect, unhurt. His pistol still smoked in his hand. He smiled regretfully.

"'Good gracious, gentlemen, it is not unfortunate,' he said. 'I have missed myself.'"

THE FIRST STEPS.

When the Baby Begins to Stand and Attempts to Walk.

Children usually begin to stand on their feet about the tenth month and often attempt assistance take a step or two. By the twelfth month they learn to take a few steps alone, and two months later run about. This, however, depends a great deal on the child's strength, which in turn is gauged by the nutrition. Children nourished by patent foods are usually far behind the healthy breast fed infant. It is the muscular, not the fat, children, who are the most forward in this respect. Do not urge the child to stand on his feet nor encourage walking too soon. Let the child follow his own impulse. The majority of children are ambitious in this respect, and just as soon as they feel the muscles and bones strong enough to bear their weight they will naturally make the effort. If urged while the bones are soft, bow legs are the result.

Children who are slow to walk are generally late in teething too. Ordinarily the healthy breast fed infant will commence to cut his teeth at six months and in some cases a little earlier. Children brought up on patent foods are often as late as the twelfth or fourteenth month. The reason for this difference is that some of these foods do not nourish the bone matter, in other words, do not contain the bone making elements to such a degree as the mother's milk.—Marianna Wheeler in Harper's Bazar.

WASHING MADE EASY.

One Way to Get Your Clothes Clean Without Washing Them.

It is possible, it is claimed, to wash clothes, and to wash them well at that, without rubbing, no matter how soiled the garments may be. This is the method as described by one who has tested it:

Take half a bottle of household ammonia and put to it an equal part of spirits of turpentine. To a medium sized boiler of clothes you would want two or three cook spoons of this.

Fill the boiler nearly full with scarcely lay labor, is as follows. Put the clothes to soak overnight or not, but if possible, I do not. On the washing morning take the clothes just as they are if you have not soaked them. Wet them thoroughly and lay them in your boiler. Cover with cold water and add half a bar of soap shaved fine, three cook spoons of the ammonia and turpentine preparation, according to the size of the boiler. Let them come to a boil and boil for ten or possibly fifteen minutes, then take up and rinse them roughly and blue as usual. You will find that no rubbing is necessary. Even the dirtiest clothes will need scarcely a rub. I never use a washboard now. A few rubs between the hands will settle any extra soiled spots. The terrors of wash day will have departed. The clothes will wash themselves while you are at breakfast. —Boston Globe.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The white deposit in the tops of fruit jars can be removed by boiling the tops in strong soda water.

White spots may be removed from varnished furniture by the use of a polish consisting of equal parts of alcohol, olive oil and cider vinegar.

Warm plates and dishes by pouring boiling water over them. There is not the chance of their cracking and becoming brown as when they are put in the oven.

Alcohol sometimes causes bluish stains to appear on the lamp of a chafing dish or stove. Simply rubbing with a cloth moistened with ammonia is said to remove the discolorations.

Broken tablecloths are worn out beyond mending, cut square pieces from the best parts of them and hem them. They are very useful supplied for the children's school lunches or for the little ones to use at the table.

A Girl's Companion.

The skin of the ermine was once used to line the robes of judges and magistrates as an emblem of purity, perhaps because of the fact, which is also told, that the little animal which originally wears it will lie down and allow himself to be captured before it will go through the mud. If the purity of an ermine's fur is so precious to its possessor, surely we ought to take an equal care to keep their hearts and lives unspotted from the world. There are companions and ways of amusement which, while not absolutely bad, leave just a little stain on the snowy whiteness of a girl's character. There are small carelessnesses that take a little of the freshness from her good name. As you love the priceless purity of your sweet young girlhood shun these things. Resolutely refuse to pass through them, no matter what pathway of pleasure you may have to forsake.

Hollow Eyed Girls.

"For girls who are nervous and hollow eyed and irritable with insomnia," says an authority, "here is a cure. It is simple and never fails to work:

"It is this: Don't go to bed too early. Sit up and read or work around your room. Do anything and everything but go to bed to sleep. Nervous people do not need much sleep, and if you go to bed at 12 o'clock you will be tired out by 7. I never sleep more than seven hours, and I think I owe my shapely figure and my good features to the fact that I have never formed the habit of staying in bed ten and twelve hours. I would cry if I thought I were wasting half of my life in sleep. The years are too precious. Don't sleep too long unless you are exhausted. Be up and doing."

The first test of a truly great man is humility. No man can know what he never had.

Moran of the Lady Letty

By FRANK NORRIS,

Author of "The Octopus," "The Pit," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by S. S. McClure Company

CHAPTER I.

THIS is to be a story of a battle, at least one murder and several accidental deaths. But it must begin at the beginning. It begins with a plum tree and among the mingled odors of many delicate perfumes and the hale, frank smell of Caroline Testout roses.

There had been a great number of debutantes "coming out" that season in San Francisco by means of afternoon tea, pink, lavender and otherwise. This particular tea was well intended to celebrate the fact that Josie Herrick had arrived at that time of her life when she was to wear her hair high and her gowns long and to have a "day" of her own quite distinct from that of her mother.

Ross Wilbur presented himself at the Herrick house on Pacific avenue much too early upon the afternoon of Miss Herrick's tea. He made his way up the enameled stairs he was aware of a terrifying array of millinery and a disquieting accretion of well-to-do, nice voices in the parlors and reception rooms on either side of the hallway. A single high hat in the hall had been set apart for the men's use coming in, but, in his confusion,

"Might have known it would be a hen party till 4 anyhow," he muttered, swinging his hat in his hands. "Guess I don't know one girl in twenty down there now—all mamma's friends at this hour, and Josie Herrick's mother and Jo's schoolteachers and governesses and music teachers, and I don't know what all."

When he went down he found it precisely as he had left it. He went up to Miss Herrick, where she stood receiving with her mother and two of the other girls, and waited for them to chaff him on his forlornness.

"Mercy's sakes alive, my case," said Ross Wilbur to them, "but really I am very much frightened. I'm going to run away as soon as it is decently possible, even before, unless you feed me."

"I believe you had luncheon not two hours ago," said Miss Herrick. "Come along, though, and I'll give you some chocolate and perhaps, if you're good, a stuffed olive. I got them just because I knew you liked them. I ought to stay here and receive, so I can't look after you for long."

The two kept their way through the crowded rooms to the luncheon table, and Miss Herrick got Wilbur his chocolate and his stuffed olives. They sat down and talked in a window recess for a while, Wilbur feeling at his absurd fashion as he tried to make a lap for his plate.

"I thought," said Miss Herrick, "that you were going on the Ridgeways' yachting party, and I guess I'd have regretted it myself. And he grinned at her over his cup.

"Nice man," she said, adding on the instant, "I must go now, Ross."

"Wait till I eat the sugar out of my cup," he complained. "Tell me," he added, scraping vigorously at the bottom of the cup with the inadequate spoon—"tell me you're going to the hoedown tonight?"

"If you mean the assembly—yes, I do."

"Will you give me the first and last?"

"I'll give you the first, and you can ask for the last then."

"Let's put it down. I know you'll forget it." Wilbur drew a couple of cards from his case.

"Programmes are not good form any more," said Miss Herrick.

"Forgetting a dance is worse."

He made out the dance, putting on the one he kept for himself, "First waltz—Jo."

"I shall go back now," said Miss Herrick, getting up.

"In that case I shall run. I'm afraid of girls."

"It's a pity about you!"

"I am, too. I don't say, but girl in the aggregate, like this," and he pointed his chin toward the thronged parlors, "I'm not."

"Goodby, then!"

"Goodby, until tonight about!"

"About 9."

"About 9, then."

Ross Wilbur made his adieu to Mrs. Herrick and the girls who were receiving and took himself away. And so came out of the house and stood for a moment on the steps, settling his hat properly upon his hair so as not to disturb the parting, he was not by any means an ill looking chap. His good looks were helped out by his tow coat and his high silk hat, and there was plenty of color in the lower part of his face. Nor was his talker altogether answerable for his shoulders. Three years before this time Ross Wilbur had pulled at No. 5 in his varsity boat in an eastern college that was not accustomed to athletic discomfiture.

"I wonder what I'm going to do with myself until supper time," he muttered as he came down the steps, feeling for the middle of his stick. He found no immediate answer to his question. But the afternoon was fine, and he set off to walk in the direction of the town, with a half formed idea of looking in at his club.

The club he found a letter in his box from his particular chum, who had been spending a month shooting elk in Oregon. It read:

Dear Old Man—Will be back on the afternoon of the seventeenth. Will hit the town on the 7 o'clock boat. Get seats for the best show there is and have the chef range to assimilate nutriment at the Poodle Dog—also wine. I've got a million of talk in me that I've got to read off before I suffocate. Yours,

I've got a stack of horse for you, Ross, that are plenty ballistics.

"Well, I can't go," murmured Wilbur as he remembered the assembly that was to come off that night and his engaged dance with Jo Herrick. He decided that if worst came to worst Jerry he became of the boat and tell him how matters stood. Then he arrived, since no one that he knew was in the club and the installment of the Paris vaudeller had not arrived, that it would be advisable to go down to the waterfront and loaf among the shipping until it was time for Jerry's boat.

Wilbur spent an hour along the docks, watching the various sailings consigned to "Cack for orders" slowly getting themselves with whale hardware of various from the San Joaquin valley; lumber vessels for Durban and South African ports settling lower and lower in the water as the forests of pine and redwood stratified themselves along their decks and in their holds; coal barges discharging from Nanaimo; busy little tugs coughing and snuffling at the flanks of deep sea tramps, while bay barges and Italian whitebaits came and went at their ease.

Stockton river boat went by, her stern wheel churning along behind its a huge net ready to be dropped over the city centered about an Alaska commercial company's steamboat that would clear for Dawson in the morning.

No quarter of one of the most picturesque cities in the world had more interest for Wilbur than the water front. In the mile or so of docks that stretched from the docks where the China steamships landed down past the ferry slips and on to Meiggs' wharf every maritime nation in the world was represented. More than once Wilbur had railed to the loungers of the wharfs, stevedores out of work, sailors between voyages, cribers and ship chandlers' men looking—not too earnestly—for jobs, so that on this occasion when a little, undersized fellow in dirty brown sweater and clothes of Hickory cloth cut asked him for a match to light his pipe Wilbur offered a cigar and passed the time of day with him. The latter had not forgotten that he himself was dressed for an afternoon function. With the instinct of the landsman he was precisely what most amused him.

After a time the fellow suggested drinks. Wilbur hesitated for a moment. It would be something to tell about, however, so, "All right, I'll stand with you," he said.

The brown sweater led the way to "down" beneath the house hard by. The rear of the place was built upon piles a few feet above the mud in front on the ground floor was a barroom.

"Rum an' gum," announced the brown sweater as the two came in and took their places at the bar.

"Rum an' gum, Tuck. Wattle you have, eh?"

"Oh, I don't know," hesitated Wilbur. "Give me a Manhattan."

While the drinks were being mixed the brown sweater called Wilbur's attention to a fighting bantdress from the Marquesas that was hung on the wall over the free lunch counter and opposite the bar. Wilbur turned about to look at it and remained so, his back to the barkeeper, till the latter told them their drinks were ready.

"Well, mate, here's big blocks an' tinsel three pieces," said the brown sweater cordially.

"Your very good health, returned Wilbur.

The brown sweater wiped a thin mustache in the hollow of his upper lip and wiped that palm upon his trousers leg.

"You, sir," he continued, once more facing the Marquesas headress. "You, sir; they're queer guys down there."

"In the Marquesas islands, you mean?" said Wilbur.

"Yes, sir, they're queer game. When they ain't tattooin' themselves with Antipodes tea's the gal from the white slouries, they're pullin' out the hairs till every man's face with two clam shells. Hair by hair, you understan'."

"Pull'n out 'er hair!" said Wilbur, wondering what the matter with his tongue.

"They think it's elevenithink the women folk like it."

Wilbur had fancied that the little man had been a mere waiter when they first met. But now, strangely enough, he was not in the least surprised to see it discovered, like a puzzle's breast.

"I've been down 'Lat way?" he inquired the little man next.

Wilbur heard the words distinctly enough, somehow they refused to fit into the right places in his brain. He pulled himself together, frowning heavily.

"What—did—you—say?" he asked with great deliberation, biting off his words. Then he noticed that he and his companion were no longer in the barroom, but in a little room back of it. His personality divided itself. There was one Ross Wilbur, who could not make his hands go where he wanted them, who said one word when he meant another, whose legs below the knee were made of solid lead; then there was another Ross Wilbur—Ross Wilbur III., who was perfectly clear headed and who stood off to one side and watched the first Wilbur making a mashup of himself, without power and without even the desire to help.

This latter Wilbur heard the brown sweater say:

"Ain't you? Ye ain't quiffy, old man. Stand by a bit, an' we'll have a ball."

Then Wilbur III. spoke impressively—and the round table—pull out hats w' ta ciamah's," gabbled Wilbur's double. "Come on, now!" Wilbur the alert said to himself: "You're not drunk, Ross Wilbur; that's certain. What did they have in your cocktails?"

The iridescent sweater stamped twice and the "Lady Letty" shuddered away beneath Wilbur's feet like the drop at a gallows. With the eyes of hope not ready about him he had a glimpse of water below. His elbow struck the floor as he went down, and he felt feet thrust into a whitehall boat. He had life to observe two men at the bow and between the piles that supported the house above him and catch a glimpse of the bay and a glint of sunlight on the water. He was not in the least surprised at what had happened, and he said to his mind that it would be a good idea to lie down in the boat and go to sleep.

Instead, his long gone after his advent into the boat he could not tell, his wits began to return and settle themselves. He was in the King again after a scare. Before he took in the scene.

The blue waters of the bay around him, the deck of a schooner on which he was lying, the little boat alongside and an enormous man with a face like a setting moon wrangling with his mates in the bow—all had longer indecent.

"What do you call it?" shouted the red man. "I want side seamen. I don't figger on working this boat with shanghaied hands. I'll tell exactly during quantities on my quarter deck. If we don't look out we'll step on that bloke and he'll up and die. It ain't right to let around loose without its ma."

That stuff described the brown sweater. "I tell you he's one of the best sailor men on the front. If he don't know the forfeit the money. 'Come on, Captain Kitchell; we made show proper to keep away for us, and this daytime business ain't our line. D'you aim or not? Here's the advance note. I got the boy and we'll have the patrol boat after me."

"I'll sign this once," growled the other, and Wilbur felt the pen on the note. "But if this swab ain't up to sample before I get back to Frisco, an' I'll drop in on me dear friend Jim when we come back and give him a reel nice time, I'm sure you be that. Billy Trim." The brown sweater pocketed the note, went over the side and row, set off.

Wilbur stood in the waist of a schooner and looked at the stern and off Fisherman's wharf. In the—forward part of the schooner a Chinaman in brown duck was making paint. Wilbur was conscious that he still wore his high hat and long coat, but his stick was gone and one gray glove was all he had left. He looked at his hands. They towered the enormous red faced man. A pungent reek of some kind of rancid fat or oil assailed his nostrils. Once by Alcatraz a ferryboat whistled for the slip as it elbowed its way through the water.

Wilbur had himself fairly in hand by now and was more than sorry that but the situation was beyond him as yet.

"Git for'd," commanded the big man.

Wilbur drew himself up, angry in spite of himself, and said with dignity, "what's the meaning of this business? I know I've been drugged and mishandled by your people, and I want to know if you understand that?"

"Git for'd," whispered the big man. "Ah, you lilies of the vallee, you bright an' sunnis' star! I'm reely pleased to see it discovered, like a potgeek's breast.

"I've been down 'Lat way?" inquired the little man next.

Wilbur heard the words distinctly enough, somehow they refused to fit into the right places in his brain. He pulled himself together, frowning heavily.

"What—did—you—say?" he asked with great deliberation, biting off his words. Then he noticed that he and his companion were no longer in the barroom, but in a little room back of it. His personality divided itself. There was one Ross Wilbur, who could not make his hands go where he wanted them, who said one word when he meant another, whose legs below the knee were made of solid lead; then there was another Ross Wilbur—Ross Wilbur III., who was perfectly clear headed and who stood off to one side and watched the first Wilbur making a mashup of himself, without power and without even the desire to help.

This latter Wilbur heard the brown sweater say:

"Ain't you? Ye ain't quiffy, old man. Stand by a bit, an' we'll have a ball."

Then Wilbur III. spoke impressively—and the round table—pull out hats w' ta ciamah's," gabbled Wilbur's double. "Come on, now!" Wilbur the alert said to himself: "You're not drunk, Ross Wilbur; that's certain. What did they have in your cocktails?"

The iridescent sweater stamped twice and the "Lady Letty" shuddered away beneath Wilbur's feet like the drop at a gallows. With the eyes of hope not ready about him he had a glimpse of water below. His elbow struck the floor as he went down, and he felt feet thrust into a whitehall boat. He had life to observe two men at the bow and between the piles that supported the house above him and catch a glimpse of the bay and a glint of sunlight on the water. He was not in the least surprised at what had happened, and he said to his mind that it would be a good idea to lie down in the boat and go to sleep.

Instead, his long gone after his advent into the boat he could not tell, his wits began to return and settle themselves. He was in the King again after a scare. Before he took in the scene.

Eton and Harrow.

One of the Eton and Harrow school cricket matches was the most amusing incident. Eton had a monotonous series of wins for some years, and one day the Harrow captain received the following:

Oh, ye boys of Harrow school,
Of cricket you have no knowledge;
It is not cricket, but the fool,
To play with Eton college.

The Harrow school poet was hunted out and commanded to do something better, and he produced the following reply. The answer response made him famous:

If, as you say, we play the fool,
No wonder we were beaten.
For at Eton you've the cricket,
While we compete with Eton.

Dorothy in Dogs.

Will people who talk about dogs ever learn that writing, when people really mean docility—i. e., the gentleness of spirit that makes dogs lovable? Nowas in human beings, docility is likely to be an evidence of second rate intelligence. Docility in a dog's appearance is likely to appear when the animal is doing things on his own book. It is rather a great difference, but to the man who tries to think accurately the constant parade of docility is almost as one of exceptional mental ability is painful.—Joseph A. Graham in Outing.

Man's Vest.

Man has one piece of rudimentary garment. The coat and trousers yield to the ravages of toil and time, but the vest lasts through all its pristine freshness. The history of a man's clothes can be traced through the vests he wore away in his wardrobe. The coat he wore at graduation and his wedding appear in showers because he has can always show you the vests he wore upon those august occasions. The tailor who invents a vest that will stay will omit the vest has fortune and fame in store for him.

THE WEARING OF BEARDS.

At One Time a Tax Was Exacted for the Privilege.

In days gone by the wearing of a beard was a privilege that had to be paid for, the tax on every beard of a fortnight's growth being 3s. 4d. in the gracious days of Queen Elizabeth. For over half a century the monarchs of Russia made their male subjects who were bearded pay into the national exchequer. This tax was imposed by Peter the Great in 1705, the modern beard to disburse 100 rubles and the lower classes 1 kopeck. The tax on beards was kept up by all the succeeding rulers of the autocrat of all the Russias, and it was finally repealed in 1762 by Catherine II., Peter the Great having imposed a beard tax upon the clergy, which was also repealed by the same gifted lady, although the large majority had to yield to the razor's onslaught.

In the fourteenth century shaving was popular with young men, while the old men were attached to forked beards. Cardinal Wolsey objected to by Chaucer, who in describing an assembly says, "A merchant was there with a forked beard." Beards were worn in various shapes and forms during the reigns of Elizabeth, James I., and Charles I., as the poems, plays and other literary productions of those periods amply testify. In his "Anatomie of Abuses", Stubbs alludes to the barber who will not trim and dress his client whether he wished his beard "cut to look terrible to your enemy or amiable to your friends, or set them in countenance or pleasant and demure."

William Harrison, a clergyman from whom one gains many peops at the sixteenth century, refers to beards as "the ornaments of the bearded period. If a face happened to be "platter-like," a fine, shaved beard was thought to narrow. If it be wenzel beaked, then "much hear left on the cheekes will serve to make it seem the lowlied lad and so grim as a goose."—London Standard.

BUTTER WEIGHT.
What One Observer Learned From a Visit to a Grocery.
Live and learn and commit a respectable looking, motherly soul, making purchases for the family, say to the grocery. "He sure do give me butter weight, now, for I've been a long time customer of yours." "Certainly, Mrs. MacLaren," replied the grocery. "You are entitled to it if any one is." Yet she bought no butter.
"What is butter weight?" I inquired when she had gone. "Why, that's just a little way we have of making sure of our old customers," said the salesman. "Instead of making an exact pound of anything they buy we make it a fraction over, which tickles them nearly to death. And you'd be surprised to let them see they are getting more than their money's worth; hence we keep their trade."
I next asked how the store made up for this extra allowance. "That's dead easy," was the reply, "but as it is a trick of the trade I don't think we ought to tell everyone." Perhaps other customers receive short weight?"
"If they do, we don't let 'em know it." "Then why tell me?" I said. "Just a fraction over the market?" "Never! We sell cheaper than anybody." "Maybe your goods are better?" At that he quailed.
Reverting to a dictionary, I learned that butter weight is an allusion to a custom of exacting seventeen or eighteen ounces or even more to the pound of butter, possibly on the ground that the water in it would soon evaporate and that the shrinkage of the skeleton ounces. In Scotland iron weight (avenge) is one to twenty-eight ounces to the pound) was used in buying butter.

When Wagner Fled.

Richard Wagner, the composer, was an ardent republican and in the archives of Dresden there is a document setting forth the reasons for his crossing against the musician. He was accused of having written to a friend a letter proposing the overthrow of a republic. "But whom shall we make president?" he asked. "I see nobody competent to fill the office except our present sovereign, Frederick Augustus of Saxony." But the serious matter did not seem to have appreciated the humor of the suggestion that he should doff the royal and contemptible robes and the dignity of a republican president. For this flash of unconscious fun Wagner had to bolt to Switzerland.

Artificial Eyes.

The first false eye was a metal band which gripped the head and was fitted with a glass eye over the right eye, covered with leather on which an eye was painted. Then came shells, a concave eye piece of thin metal, silver or copper, enameled or painted to resemble an eye and inserted under the lid. Then came glass shell eyes these, artificial eyes were made of porcelain and at last of glass.

The New Secretary of The Canada Bible Society.

The Rev. Robert E. Welsh, the new Secretary of the Canada Bible Society, is a Canadian with Canadian birth, Canadian education and Canadian blood in his veins. He comes of a missionary family and was born at New, Cumnock, Ayrshire, the county where the ashes of the martyrs lie scattered over the "wine-red moors." Mr. Welsh studied at Ayr Academy, and then studied and graduated at Queens' University, afterwards taking his course in theology at Edinburgh. He was ordained in 1899 to the charge of the Scotch Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and went out as one of its missionaries to Japan there serious illness in his family compelled him to return after a short period of service. He then settled as minister of the English Presbyterian congregation at Harrogate, where he built a new church, leaving it practically free of debt, when he accepted a call to Breadsbury, a suburb in the northwest of London. Here Mr. Welsh began to gather what was a new congregation, and during his seven years' ministry at St. George's Church, a handsome and spacious edifice was built and paid for, a district mission established with two solicited agents, and a mission hall also erected. Since last year, Mr. Welsh has been in charge of the Presbyterian Church at Ilfrey, the western suburb of Bournemouth.

During his twenty-three years' service in the Presbyterian ministry Mr. Welsh has taken an important share in the ecclesiastical business of his own connection.

As author and journalist, Mr. Welsh has gained for himself a distinguished position.

Mr. Welsh has the wide horizon of the Christian traveller. A long visit to South Africa gave him insight into mission work throughout that section, Natal and the Transvaal. He has travelled over Canada from the Atlantic Coast and Vancouver.

The Committee of the Canadian Bible Society at their meeting in Toronto on June 15th approved of the appointment of Mr. Welsh and look forward to a period of successful work with him as the living link between themselves and the Parent Committee in London.

A FARMER'S EXPERIENCE WITH COWS

R. H. Marshall, West Barke, Vt., says: The farmers here think all keep Jerseys, are sure bred, but mostly grades. They all think the Jerseys are the only cattle worth looking at, and turn up their noses at the slightest mention of the Holstein. She may be good for milk, but the milk won't make butter. But one thing is strange—as we talk with these Jersey men most of them will complain that their dairy does not pay. I used to keep Jerseys the same as they, but others and still have some very good ones, but my herd of nearly one hundred head, forty-two of which are cows, the most of the Holstein persuasion, and my receipts for butter per cow have been on the increase each year since I began to breed and milk Holsteins. I say to my Jersey friends, if you only can get in keeping cows to get rich milk, keep Jerseys, for in fact you want cows that will give more milk and not so much or more butter from the same amount of feed. If you want more skim milk for your calves or pigs, if you want a calf that is worth one-third more to sell for veal, if you want a steer that is worth twice as much at two or three years old or an ox team that would weigh 1,600 pounds at four years old, if you want a cow that will sell for more money to go to our own butcher as a milk producer, and is worth 2c/100 more than what you are done with her in the dairy; in fact, if you want better paying cows all around keep Holsteins.

PAIN ABOUT THE HIPS.

It is a common complaint with women. The right treatment is Nerviline, which penetrates to the seat of the pain immediately. Nervilina warms and soothes the affected parts, draws out the irritation and pain, allows the patient ease after one rubbing. No liniment so economical and safe. Nearly fifty years in use, and the demand immensely greater every day! Nerviline must be good.

The God In the Hurdy Gurdy

By CASPAR JOHNSON

Copyright, 1905, by K. A. Whitehead

It was a narrow alley, running between the back yards. It was intended for the convenience of the butcher's boy and the grocer's boy and the ash man. Distinctively it was not intended for the parasite of Venetti's stamp. Indeed, a sign at either end announced this in no uncertain terms.

"Beggars, Peddlers and Street Musicians Keep Out," it read.

But to Pasquale Venetti warning signs in English had no terrors from the simple fact that written English was beyond him. Therefore as he came trundling the ancient hurdy gurdy up the street he looked into the alley, saw its possibilities—the ease with which coins could be tossed from the back windows—and, forsaking the asphalt pavements, where, to use his own expression, he could "no gets de nickel," he turned into the alley and, unlistening his musical battery, sent up the opening strains of "Lindy, Lindy, Yo' is Ma Ladyfove."

It is a hard, cold world. Pasquale found away quickly, and whenever a face appeared at any of the windows he smiled expansively, removed his battered hat and bowed profoundly and even essayed a joyful shuffling of his feet while he turned the crank. But, despite all these blandishments, to say nothing of the appeal made by a judicious assortment of selections, ranging from the classic to ragtime, no coins wrapped in white paper came tinkling to his feet. To be sure, one fat cook came out to the back gate and after he had played half through the hurdy gurdy's assortment gave him a penny, and an old gentleman had raised an upper window and, with a thundered "Get out of this!" had dung him a dime. But 11 cents from such a promising alley! Pasquale resented his ill treatment and moved farther up the alley.

No better success attended him here. He whistled, he danced, he sang. He smiled his best and bowed his lowest. He tried the intermezzo and "Ma Filipino Man" with an equal lack of success. He had his labor for his pains.

He moved to the far end of the alley, with a view to quitting it. He made one final stand, however, before the last door of an imposing house. He began slinking heart he set up the jerky hurdy of a march from a popular light opera. The house, like all the others, was unresponsive. Then he shifted to ragtime. He decided to play through his repertory anyway. If it failed, he would go back to the asphalt pavements and try his luck with passers-by. Such rule is entirely along musical lines.

SUDDENLY AT HIM FELT WAS A YELLOW ONE

The man had stuffed and straight in his chair and hit his jaw. The girl was seated on the love divan. Her face was flushed and her eyes glowed angrily.

"It is far too much to forgive this time," she was saying. "I have forgiven and forgiven—eternally forgiven—and now I am tired."

The man replied coldly.

"Perhaps you are right," he said in a strained voice.

"And the sooner it's over the better, now," said the girl, choking.

The man started up. Whatever remonstrance he was about to make he stifled.

"Very well," he said curtly.

The girl pulled a ring from her finger and laid it on the table beside the man. He took it without a word and put it in his pocket.

"I might say"—he began slowly.

"All you could say would make no difference," she said wearily.

The man rose and strode to the window. Pasquale was grinding away assiduously. At the sight of the man in the window he snirked and bowed and shuffled his feet. The man smiled bitterly.

"Lucky, happy devil!" he muttered.

Then he turned to the girl and drew himself up stiffly.

"I may as well say goodby," said he. She made no reply.

"Goodby," he said again.

"Goodby," she returned evenly.

The man hesitated a moment; then he strode to the door. In the alley Pasquale had come to the last piece in his repertory. It was a poor imitation of portions of Schubert's "Serenade." Just as the man reached the door the jingling notes floated in from the alley. The man paused. A look of pain came into his face.

These jerky notes brought memories with them—memories of a big, dark music room with two little spots of red in the gloom where the candles burned on the piano; of a girl beneath the candles—a girl with white neck and gleaming shoulders, playing the "Serenade very softly; of a few hesitating words whispered over her shoulder; of a pair of luminous eyes which flashed an answer that set his heart sounding madly. . . . And now a hurdy gurdy playing that accursed serenade in the alley—and this. It was heinous sacrilege.

"Lord, I cannot stand that," he muttered, and turned to the girl a face drawn and white.

"Evelyn," he said as if the words choked him.

But the girl's face had whitened also. She took a step forward.

"Robert," she said with wide, frightened eyes.

. . . . . .

In the alley Pasquale ground away hopelessly. Suddenly a window was raised and a coin dropped at his feet. It was a shining, yellow coin. Pasquale Venetti gasped, turned it over in his palm, and then whooped. In a burst of gratitude he began the opening air of the opera, and such was his elation that he essayed to heighten the effect by singing in a high, squeaky voice.

The organ was soon over, however, for a patrolman came down the alley and seized the exuberant musician. The thought of the yellow coin in his pocket enabled Pasquale to bear this ordeal with equanimity.

"A vile night, right," he protested mildly as he was hustled past the warning signs and dumped unceremoniously on the asphalt pavement.

The Ruling Passion.

The ruling passion is often very strong in death. A senator from Tennessee discovered this some years ago. Among his constituents was a certain man who came to him regularly twice a year for the purpose of obtaining a pass to Baltimore. The man and his family had served the senator when he was first making his way up the ladder of politics, and as a result of this he always obliged him, and had, moreover, a soft place in his heart for him. He obtained for him a position in one of the departments at Washington; but this did not seem to be enough, for regularly at the end of each six months he applied for his ticket to Baltimore. One day he sickened and was reported to be dying. The senator, very much grieved, immediately called upon him.

"Joe," he said, leaning over and speaking very softly, "is there anything I can do for you?"

The sick man looked up with a flash of recognition, and instantly replied in a whisper:

"Yes, senator; please get me a pass to Baltimore."—Harper's Weekly.

Shipshape an Land.

One of the quaintest charitable institutions in the world is the Royal Alfred Home For Aged Seamen, which houses 100 English mariners in the outskirts of London. It is supported entirely by voluntary contribution. Thanks to this it has been to make the place as home-like as possible, and to this end an effort has been made to preserve in large measure the environment to which the inmates are accustomed.

The dormitories are cut up into tiny cabins, as on shipboard, and in place of the familiar portholes these contain all of the sea turn in at night in hanks and stow their clothes and other belongings in lockers at the foot of the bunks. Prayers are said in the hall, and even in the mess room the atmosphere of the sea is retained as an aid to appetite. The home-governor is himself an old sea captain of forty years' experience in commanding men, and his rule is entirely along nautical lines.

The Land of Horseradish.

It almost makes the eyes water to read of the village of Meerrettich, in Bavaria, which is celebrated for producing the finest horseradish in Europe. On an area of moist ground, in the valley of the river Regnitz, covering about 100 acres, that trifling plant is practically the only thing raised, and the annual yield amounts to about 40,000,000 pounds. Horseradish requires a great deal of attention from the cultivator, for in midsummer the soil must be thoroughly drained from steam and the side roots rubbed off with a soft cloth, after which the stems are buried again. The plants spring up in March from the end roots, left in the soil the previous autumn, when the upper stems are cut off and packed in barrels for shipment.

Freaks of Lightning.

A noted astronomer and scientist in a recent lecture in Paris gave an account of some of the freaks of lightning. Lightning, however, he affirmed, were determined by causes which we have yet to learn. Sometimes it kills, sometimes it merely injures and sometimes it seems to be frolicking in a way which gives rise to the hypothesis that "it is a thought which, instead of being attached to a brain, is attached to an electric current." Sometimes it plays the physician, as in the case at Bonnilles, France, when it struck a man who had not been able to walk without a crutch on account of rheumatism. After the shock the rheumatism disappeared.

A SMOOTH YOUNG SKIN.

The Method by Which One Woman Preserves Her Complexion.

A professional beauty whose complexion is the envy of her friends, is to say about her smooth skin and its treatment:

"I suppose I ought to say that I owe my complexion to soap and water; but, to tell the actual truth, neither soap nor water touches my face. I wash it, but I seldom wash my face, vulgar as this may sound.

I am accustomed to taking a cold bath every day, which is a matter of habit. It is good for people—and bad for others, but it agrees perfectly with me. I feel invigorated by it.

"In the natural course of events my face gets its dash of cold water, but otherwise I do not wash it except for a light sponging with a little rose in awhile, say once in ten days or so.

"I find I cream my face freely with cold cream. I put it on in great layers. I let it remain on for a few minutes and then smear it with a soft cloth. I then apply another thick coating of cold cream, and this I leave on all night. The cream is sent into the pores and to supply the moisture which has been taken out of it during the day.

"You cannot expect to lavish smooth cold cream on your face and not to have cream on your face. You must experiment until you find the right kind of cold cream for you. If glycerin hurts your skin, do not use it. If you cannot use rose water without irritation, do not. It is best to omit them. Discover the kind of cream you can use and stick to it. That is the way I did."—Brooklyn Eagle.

WOMEN ARCHITECTS.

Why They Are Better Adapted to the Work Than Men.

In America we are on the highroad to perfection in domestic architecture owing, possibly, to the acknowledged supremacy of our women. There is a new architect, being a man and belonging most likely to some woman, makes it his pride to provide for her—or her set—which she represents—the most comfortable, convenient and pretty house that can be given with the least expense until she moves.

A woman is not masteful in small things, but a map is. Who, then, is so adapted to utilize the small space which is generally at her command? A house can be the visible expression of a woman's character, her temper, her taste and her common sense. It will give her an opportunity to be great in the minor aspirations.

When she builds a house she will put herself in the place of that other woman whose destiny it is to live there. She will warm that house comfortably before she leaves it. Her kitchen will be in just proportion to the size of the house and not of the family. And such a kitchen—even the beetles look lonely.—Mrs. John Lane in London Outlook.

JAPAN'S WAR ON DISEASE.

What Progressive Medical Methods Accomplished in the Army.

Typhoid, that dread scourge of soldiery, has been almost eliminated from the Japanese army in the present war. This is only one of a number of achievements in the prevention of disease and death which I observed while accompanying the Second Division of the army at Hiroshima, while on the hospital ship Kobe and the hospitals on the Yalu river, in Manchuria. At these and at other places I had exceptional opportunities for noting the medical, surgical and sanitary precautions which have produced such remarkable results.

In the three months following the battle of the Yalu (May, June, July) General Kuroki's army had only eighty-three cases of typhoid. There were only 193 cases reported in General Oku's army from its landing in Manchuria, May 6, to the end of the following January. Of the many thousands of patients treated at the great base hospital at Hiroshima, Japan, prior to the end of September there were only fifty deaths of men who had typhoid, and a large proportion of these deaths were actually due to beriberi, wounds or other complications. Contributory to these results are shown by the facts of the great attention paid to sanitation, of the daily consumption by every soldier of an ounce of lime-water, disinfecting creosote and of the isolation of every case of typhoid as soon as found as a contagious disease. Our own country showed a sad contrast to these figures at the time of the war with Spain. According to the board of experts who examined the sanitary condition of our army, about one-half the deaths in the camps of mobilization had suffered from typhoid, which had caused four times as many deaths as all other diseases combined.

It is a well known fact, shown by statistics of the last fifty years, that Russian soldiers suffer more from disease than soldiers of almost any other civilized army, and direct information which I received last autumn confirmed the opinion that General Kuropatkin had been seriously handicapped by the prevalence of disease in the ranks.—Anita Newcomb McGee in Century.

A Rolly Manuscript.

A slab found in a quarry near Nineveh, on which had been carved an inscription which covered about half of it, and the rude pictures of a cow, is proudly arrived in the port of New York. The collector of customs assessed the slab as "an inscribed stone or marble," subject to a duty of 50 per cent ad valorem. The importer insisted that it was a manuscript and had liable to duty. The board of general appraisers decided that the carving was a genuine script. Another department of the government would be sure to overrule that decision promptly if the importer carried the slab, 4 by 5 feet in size, to the New York postoffice and asked to have it sent, say, to Babylon, N. Y., at manuscript rates. The postal officials would deny the request with deserved celerity.—Youth's Companion.

Bee-keeping on a Small Scale.

Almost any one who has a yard, an empty attic or access to a roof is in a position to keep bees. Honey comes less from an honest, reliable, practical and up to date bee man.

Buy your first package in May in a double walled or chaff hive. A colony consists of a fertile queen, a number of workers, a queen and a few hundred drones, the latter living only during the summer months. A beginner in bee culture should invest about $15 to make a good start.

Besides the hive of bees he should have a good text book on the subject and should provide himself with several necessary accessories, such as a bee veil, a pair of gloves and a bee smoker for use in handling the bees.—Saturday Life.

Eyeglasses For Actors.

The enterprising optician has come to the rescue of stage folk who are afflicted with near sightedness. Eyeglasses fitted with tiny lenses are now made to the order of any actor or actress who in deference to the character he is portraying may not wear the requisite eyeglasses or spectacles. These special glasses fit close to the eyeball and are hardly distinguishable from the front of the house even when the footlights are at their highest pitch of illumination. The nose piece, or bridge, is concealed in the hair, covered with a flesh colored material, which aids the illusion.

Luminous Shrimps.

Luminous shrimps have been discovered by the Prince of Monaco in the course of his deep sea dredging in the Mediterranean. They live at a depth of from 1,100 to 1,650 fathoms. They are of the size of the prawns and are studded with small phosphorescent organs, which throw light freely in the gloom of the deep waters. Unfortunately the lights go out when the animals are brought to the surface, and are of no use for illuminating an aquarium.—London Telegraph.

A Big and Bitter Dose.

A Berlin physician has effected numerous cures of rheumatism with lemon juice. The method consists in swallowing the juice of one lemon on the first day, two on the second day, and so on progressively up to twenty-five lemons. When this limit is reached the number of lemons should be diminished in inverse ratio.

VARICOCELE CURED
BY NO MAMES USED WITHOUT WRITTEN CONSENT.
Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on a double varicocele. When I worked hard the aching would become unbearable. I was confined to my home for weeks at a time. I consulted doctors and tried all sorts of remedies, but none did me any good. I finally tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look for doctors as little better than rogues. One day my wife read to me about Dr. Kennedy's Method Treatment for Varicocele. I wrote to Dr. Kennedy, and he, himself, and no assistant, took treatment from them himself and knew they were honest. I received a reply by return mail. I followed his instructions carefully and got the greatest benefit from the first treatment. I continued for two months and was entirely cured. I would only care if I could be in a position to meet with a complete cure. I could only care if I could be in a position to meet with a complete cure. Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

Grand Celebration of The Glorious Twelfth.

Tremendous Crowd in the City, Though Rain Marred the Demonstration Somewhat—Bright and Early This Morning the Visitors Began to Arrive—Flags and Banners Galore—Bands and Fifes and Drums Made Joyous Music—The Procession a Mammoth Affair, Which, but for Rain and Threatening Weather, Would Have Broken All Records in Belleville—Those Who Had Charge of the Arrangements - Notes of the Day.

It would have gladdened the heart of King William himself could he have stepped on the streets of Belleville last night and saw "Carew" shine in honor of the "Glorious Twelfth."

It was splendid — magnificent—redhot, in more than one sense of the word.

It was a sight for sore eyes to see the pretty girls, decked out with knots of yellow and "all the backsplit" gentlemen from the country, gorgeous in their badges and regalia, every man of 'em keyed up to the occasion and as full of enthusiasm as an egg is full of meat.

It's a long time since Belleville had a Twelfth and celebration, but we had a "dandy" to-day. Don't let that escape from your recollection.

That energetic gentleman, Mr. F. M. Carew, aided by other enthusiasts, was hard at work last night putting up decorations and streamers, with the result that, when people set foot on our main side this morning they looked on hand-some mottoes strung across the street, bearing the following inscriptions:

"NO SURRENDER."

"THE LIBERTIES OF ENGLAND I WILL MAINTAIN."

"AUGHRIM, DERRY, ENSKILLEN, BOYNE."

When people rose this morning and ran to the dull and drippy eaves they felt somewhat blu-spirited. It would really have been too bad had the celebration been spoiled by rain, but the weather man relented, and by 9 o'clock the rain had cleared off, and the weather, though hot and murky, was not too bad for a holiday celebration.

Then after the procession and got well on their way to the Driving Park, the rain came down.

Bright and early this morning the visitors began to come in, in all sorts of conveyances. The outlying reming right up to our gates. By 10 o'clock Front street was crowded like it on circus day.

It was immense.

Smiling, fancy country girls, in their neat hats and turnout, with more or less yellow ribbon about them, ready for hurly, good-natured work, to spontaneous regalia, rags and gaily with "squawking" whistles, orgorn and peanuts; undone from the Reserve, full of ammunition and joy; all good for a day's fun or racing on Front street, all laughing, chatting and pulling each other, and for the time of their lives, and having it, too, between 9 and 10 the visiting lodges began to arrive, headed by their bands, playing the stirring and party tunes dear to the "old man" a splendid appearance, and the lads stepped out merrily, in spite of the mud.

Bless your heart, men whose occupations keep them indoors think nothing of an inch or two of hellcats made mud!

It was worth something to take a trip up and down Front street this morning. In front of many hotels bands were playing. Before others fifers and drummers were blowing and hammering away for dear life, getting their wind and muscles up for the big parade. Strong, indeed, must be the therapists he which could stand the resounding whacks some of those double-jointed drummers gave it!

And as it neared on 'till about one o'clock, when the procession began to form up for the parade.

Mr. John Taylor, a dashing figure on his horse, was marshal, with Mr. Arch. Collins as assistant. The procession formed up on Pinnacle street and the Market square, in the following order:

GRAND LODGE OFFICERS AND SPEAKERS.

The Procession.

Shortly after 1.30 the procession started up Pinnacle street from the intersection of Front street, down Front street to Bridge and along Bridge street west to the Driving Park, where a platform meeting is being held this afternoon.

The procession, to say common consent, one of the best, if not the best, ever seen in Belleville, and those who saw it will not soon forget it. The Twelfth or July celebration of 1905. It would be invidious to make comparison as to the appearance on the different bands and lodges will, indeed, all manfully and boys themselves bravely. Perhaps the Indian lodges came in for the largest share of attention, but that was only natural. The procession was a long one, and but for the threatening weather would have been longer. It is estimated that between three and four thousand men were in line.

A full report of the speeches made this afternoon will appear in The Intelligencer to-morrow.

Leaving out the weather considerations, which, of course, could neither be guided nor governed, the celebration was by everybody voted to be a tremendous success, credit for the same being due the following gentlemen:

Executive committee — W. C. Reid, chairman; F. M. Carew, treasurer; Robt. Duffin, secretary.

Chairmen of sub-committees — F. M. Clarke, transportation committee; Robt. Duffin, printing committee; J. W. Warham, grounds committee; R. Powell, hotels and billeting committee; J. C. Ash, music and bands committee; A. Bennett, decoration committee; James Carson, reception committee; Wm. Johnson, Grand Lodge officers and speakers.

NOTES OF THE DAY.

Reserve Lodge No. 99, composed of members of the Mohawk tribe, near Deseronto, turned out in goodly number under Master Isaac W. Green. They had a fife and drum band which played incessantly as they drove up front street in vehicles.

A large delegation from Trenton, consisting of the Trenton Prentice Boys, True Blues and Orange lodges, arrived here at 8.30. The Trenton brass band accompanied them.

The billeting arrangements were in capable hands and went well arranged. The various lodges, as they came in after parading the streets, were repaired to the places where they were to be provided with meals, etc.

A large number of lodges from the country drove into the city, some of them arriving here at 7 o'clock.

About 800 came from Madoc and other points along the line of the Madoc branch of the Grand Junction. Amongst the members was Bro. W. J. Allen, ex-M.P.P. for North Hastings.

Dr. Sproule, M.P., Worshipful Grand Master for British North America, arrived at noon from Ottawa. He was met at the station and escorted to Hotel Quinte.

Rev. Jas. Caine, of Toronto, who is styled "The Blind Man Eloquent," arrived here at noon in order to contribute an address this afternoon.

Much regret was felt that Sir Mackenzie Bowell was unable to be present owing to important business in the Senate.

The contingent from Kingston and Picton did not arrive here until after noon. They came to the city by boat and the contingent was large.

The steamer Niagara brought up a large party of excursionists from Picton, Bloomfield and adjacent ports. Many Orangemen were amongst the party.

The procession was forty minutes in passing a given point.

Some of the lodges returned to the city before reaching the Driving Park on account of the rain.

A much longer procession would have been seen but for the rain.

SWITCHED BALLOTS IN HOUSE AND PREMIER GAINED TWO.

MR. E. GUSS PORTER GIVES A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION OF THE SHIBLEY-LOTT FRAUD.

Ottawa, July 12.—On the motion of the House to-day to go into supply, Mr. E. Guss Porter brought up the matter of the bogus ballot-box frauds, and produced one of the bogus ballot boxes, observing that if the evidence before the courts were not sufficient to convince those at the examination of the boxes "would take the wisdom of the whole skin of the most hide-bound Grit." Mr. Porter proceeded to illustrate the working of the bogus ballot box in the Ash. Having opened it and showed that it was fairly empty, he closed and locked it. Then Mr. Blain of Peel rose and handed to three ballots for Mr. Borden and Dr. Sproule, to mark three for Sir Wilfrid Laurier. They did so, and the ballots were put, one by one, in the usual way, into the box. The box was then opened, and the six ballot papers were taken out. Mr. Blain called them off. They read five for Laurier and one for Mr. Borden. At this there was great laughter, and Mr. Porter explained that these six ballots had previously been put in the secret compartment of the box, and that by a special movement of the handle they were switched into the main bottom of the box, while the same movement switched the ballots selected by Messrs. Blain and Schaffner into the secret compartment, from which he then removed them and displayed them to the house.

The Minister of Justice said that the Government had shown due diligence in the matter. He had not yet a word of evidence to show that one of the ballot boxes had been used, and he read Col. Sherwood's opinion to that effect. Mr. Porter got back by quoting from the testimony of one of the deputy returning officers that the ballot box in this part was not one of the Government boxes, but in all respects like a Government box.

The Minister of Justice said that everything had been done to bring the matter to light, and he was severely denounced the employment of an attendant called Pelissa as a deputy returning officer.

After some further discussion the subject was dropped.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruby, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnesville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says; "and happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken one half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

COUNT SHUVALOFF SHOT

Assassin Fired Five Shots Through the Chief's Body.

Dead Official Was Prefect of Police at Moscow—His Assassin Was Dressed as a Peasant, and Entered His Audience Room With Petition to the Man He Slew—The Assassin Was Arrested.

Moscow, July 12.—Major-Gen. Count Shuvaloff, prefect of police here and formerly attached to the Ministry of the Interior, was assassinated yesterday morning, while receiving petitions. One of the petitioners drew a revolver and fired three shots at the prefect, who fell dead.

The assassin, who was dressed as a peasant, has not been identified. He was recently arrested as a political suspect, but escaped from the police-station before his examination.

The assassin walked in the anteroom of the prefecture till the other petitioners had been received, and then entering the audience room he advanced towards Count Shuvaloff, firing five shots at close range. The bullets passed through the body of the prefect.

The assassination is considered to be a purely personal crime, as the count was not yet 40 years old, and was regarded as being the best type of the Russian official. He came from one of the most prominent families in Russia. The count was a son of Count Peter Shuvaloff, the Russian who represented Russia at the Berlin conference.

Quiet Under Martial Law.

Tiflis, Caucasia, July 12.—The streets and squares are occupied by troops, but the city has been quiet since the proclamation of martial law. All Batum business is at a standstill. The shops and banks, with the exception of the Imperial Bank, are closed.

Fear Another Mutiny.

Kustenji, Roumania, July 12.—The Russian squadron seems to be delayed here, owing to the fear that another mutiny will break out should the vessels put to sea.

The fact that fifty-five sailors from the Kniaz Potemkin, who surrendered, have been imprisoned on board the different vessels of the squadron, awaiting trial for rebellion, has caused intense indignation among the crews, and as a consequence there are fears for another mutiny.

JAP ADMIRAL REPORTS.

Japanese Troops to the Number of 12,000 Land at Korsakovsk.

Tokio, July 12.—The Navy Department has received the following report from Admiral Kataoka: "The cruisers Asama, Iwate and Yakumo, and the torpedo boats Ikoi Korsakovsk, sunk July 8, with soldiers on board, for the purpose of landing and occupying Cape Notio. After some bombardment, the place was taken. The lighthouse and buildings were left undestroyed. Four prisoners were taken."

Nikolaivsk, Asiatic Russia, July 12.—The Japanese have already landed over 12,000 troops at Korsakovsk, Island of Sakhalin.

Betrayed Military Secrets.

Tokio, July 12.—The judgment in the case of Capt. A. E. Bonguin, the French resident who was sentenced Monday to 12 years' imprisonment at hard labor, on the charge of being a Russian spy, declares the accused was engaged in searching for and reporting artillery secrets.

The judgment recites that Bonguin sent Maki, a Japanese clerk, who acted as Bonguin's assistant, to Nagoya, to ascertain the movements of troops. Maki confessed his guilt.

The comment on the judgment says that the information covered by the counts related to the movement northward of the Port Arthur investing army after the capitulation of the fortress, previous to the battle of Mukden. Therefore the movements constituting important military secrets.

Japs Send News of Mutiny.

Shinghai, Manchuria, July 12.—The news of the mutiny in the Black Sea reached the Russian army through the Japanese, who fired night shells charged with proclamations covering the information into the Russian advanced posts, scattering the proclamations broadcast. Rain is falling in torrents and all activity on the front has ceased.

Oversubscribed Twelve Times.

Montreal, July 12.—The Bank of Montreal received a cable last evening stating that the £2,000,000 London allotment of the Japanese loan had been oversubscribed twelve times.

ENGINEER IS CHARGED.

Manslaughter Accusation Follows a Coroner's Jury Verdict.

Sault Ste. Marie, July 12.—William Tarp, an engineer on the Bruce Mines Railway, will face a charge of manslaughter at the next assizes. When the evidence was heard at the inquest following the accident, which resulted in the death of Engineer James Dumont on Saturday last, Crown Attorney Simpson had a warrant issued for Tarp's arrest.

He was brought to the Soo from Bruce Mines yesterday by Constable Rush, and appeared before Stipendiary Magistrate Quibell, waived examination, was committed for trial and released on $2,000 bail.

Hon. Adam Beck Chosen.

Toronto, July 12.—The Ontario power commissioners, Hon. Adam Beck, George Gibbons, M. P. P., and W. McKits, held their first meeting yesterday afternoon. In Mr. Beck's private office in the Parliament Buildings. Mr. Beck was elected chairman, and it was decided to meet again to-day, to complete the organization. A three-hours' conference was also held but the talk was not productive of action, and it will be some days yet before the real work of enquiry will be begun.

Fish Licenses Cancelled.

Toronto, July 12.—Hon. Dr. Beattie has cancelled the license of the Jessie Isbon Fish Co., between Sault Ste. Marie and Port Arthur Bay, a distance of 40 miles. This action was taken owing to complaints that the company was not supplying local demands, and that the bay was being depleted. The company is controlled by the Booths of Ottawa.

String of Prisoners.

Port Arthur, July 12.—Bailiff Ryan and Acting Chief Brandon left yesterday morning for the east with a gang of men sent by the Dominion Penitentiary and the Central Prison. Most of the men are under terms for forgery.

A young man named Swart, an employe of the Pigeon Mill, had his hand cut off yesterday.

SAVES TOM LAWSON'S SON.

Gilbert Johnson Intervenes in Quarrel and Loses His Life.

Denver, Col., July 12.—Rather than see his chum, Arnold Lawson, only son of Thomas William Lawson, killed, Gilbert Johnson of Denver sacrificed his own life. The tragedy occurred on the ranch of Arnold Lawson's father at Vrbpe, Mexico. The manager of the ranch and Arnold Lawson had started a row. Among them was Jesus Rocha, who demanded $2 more. The manager refused, angry words passed, and the two men were soon engaged in a gravel, Southern Mexican style. Rocha drew a long knife. Lawson and Johnson ran to the manager's assistance. The Mexican aimed a blow at Rein, but Young Lawson pulled the manager out of the way. Then Rocha, fairly wild with rage, tried to stab Lawson. John-son attempted to disarm the man. Just as the Mexican's arm was raised to strike Lawson, Johnson attempted to catch his wrist but missed and the knife was plunged into his breast.

Rocha was overpowered, disarmed and taken away by angry miners, who, it is said, lynched him.

SURVEYORS' SUPPLIES BURN.

Forest Fire in Temagami Will Set Their Work Back.

New Liskeard, July 12.—The surveyors of the T. & N. O. Railway, who are engaged in Township 48, north of Ingwall Conie, 70 miles north from here, have had their supplies at Camp burned out in a recent fire which has been raging for some time to the north. They lost all of their supplies, and saved their lives with difficulty. The transcontinental party, it is said, succeeded in saving their supplies, but only by the most heroic efforts. Owing to the difficulties of transportation are enormous. It sometimes happens that there are as many as fifty portages, and it will take nearly the rest of the summer to get in the supplies.

Drank Half Pint of Acid.

Niagara Falls, July 12.—Geo. Kast, an employe from Hamilton, committed suicide at Niagara Falls Monday night by drinking half a pint of carbolic acid. Jealousy is said to have been the cause of the deed. Kast worked in Hamilton, but his wife lived at Niagara Falls, N. Y. He came down every Saturday and stayed till Monday. Last night he went up to his room and then called his wife. She found him lying on the bed, and as she entered the room he took up a pint bottle of carbolic acid and drank half the contents. Death followed quickly. Kast was 27 years of age.

FIRE DAMP EXPLOSION

126 Lives Believed to Be Lost in a Welsh Pit.

Disaster Is the Worst in the Collieries There Since 1894—Heroic Efforts Have Succeeded in Recovering 68 Bodies—Hundreds of Women and Children Make Pitiful Scenes Around the Pit's Mouth.

Cardiff, Wales, July 11.—An explosion of fire damp in No. 2 pit in the United National Colliery Co. at Wattstown, in the Rhondda Valley, 20 miles to the west of the great Welsh coal fields, yesterday, is believed to have resulted in the loss of at least 126 lives. The first indication of the explosion was a loud report, immediately followed by belching of clouds of smoke and dust from the pit shaft, in which 150 men were wrecked the machinery at the mouth of the pit.

All communication with the doomed men in this direction is completely severed. No. 1 shaft, which has one ordinarily afforded communication with No. 2. The 450 men in No. 1 and the few who escaped from No. 2 were drawn up. A rescue party descended, but its work was materially impeded by the foul air and falling masses of earth dislodged by the explosion.

Altogether sixty-eight bodies have been rescued. Heroic efforts have been made for hours to reach the entombed miners. Up to the present the absence of all sound from the interior of the mine leads to the fear of the worst disaster that has taken place in South Wales since 1894.

The force of the explosion spread rapidly and hundreds of women and children, frantic with grief, met them-selves at the head of the pit seeking information. The mountain roads were crowded all the afternoon and there are now scenes of great grief in the neighborhood of the mine all contributing to the pitiful scene.

Efforts at rescue were still in progress at midnight, and currents of fresh air were being driven down into the shaft, but the rescuers are now working without hope of reducing the list of fatalities.

All Have Perished.

Dortmund, Prussia, July 12.—Efforts to rescue the thirty-nine men who were in the mine here by the fire in the Hansa colliery have been without success, and it is believed they have perished.

Gored By a Bull.

Ottawa, July 12.—John Burns, aged 65, was gored to death by a bull at the farm of J. G. Clarke, Westborough. He was standing in the stable when the bull attacked him and punctured him in the abdomen.

Fell In Front of Mower.

Niagara Falls, July 12.—A two-year old son of Stanley Gilmore, Stamford Township fell from a mowing machine while his father's team was turning and his feet cut in two by the knives.

Killed by the Wheels.

Halifax, July 12.—The body of a young man who met death by shocking way was found in the north-east quay.

Stood In Front of Revolver.

Garden Hill, July 12.—As William Jackson, who lives east of the village in Hamilton Township, was working at a revolver with his brother-in-law and crew driver to force the cylinder to the barrel, the latter ordered Jackson to stand directly in front of the barrel. The result was the revolver went off, and the ball struck Jackson in the side, bullet in his leg about 4 inches above her knee. Up to the present time he has not been extracted.

Found Dead In Depth.

Montreal, July 12.—Locked up in a freight car and carried to death was evidently the fate of an unknown man whose body was found in a car on a siding by C. H. Lyall, car examiner. The odor of decomposition led to the discovery. There was nothing about the man to lead to identification, and it is supposed he got into the car to steal a ride.

IS OFFERED A THRONE.

Prince Charles of Denmark Is Wanted By Norwegians.

London, July 12.—The Associated Press is in a position to confirm the report that an offer of the Norwegian throne has been made to Prince Charles of Denmark.

The matter is still under consideration. It is understood that King Edward and the British Government are favorable to the project, but much depends on the Danish attitude on the subject. Consultations are now going on.

Prince Charles' mother was a daughter of the late King of Sweden.

Wedding to Accept.

Copenhagen, July 12.—It is understood that Prince Charles of Denmark will be willing to accept the crown of Norway if King Christian and the Danish Government consent.

STILL AT LARGE.

Joe Bennett, the Alleged Indian Murderer, Eludes Police.

Brantford, July 12.—No authentic report of an arrest has reached this city from the Indian reservation, where Joe Bennett, charged with murder, is supposed to be in hiding. High Constable Montgomery, who is directing the man hunt, still maintains that Bennett has not got away, but that he will be caught.

Long Identification Journey.

New Liskeard, July 12.—A. E. Watts, barrister, of Brantford, is in Liskeard organizing a search party which will leave here in a few days to recover and bring back the body of Huron Dallas, the young Brantford solicitor who lost his life last spring. The body was only recovered about a month ago and was buried near the spot where it was found. Some question has been raised by the insurance parties concerned, and Dr. Frank Britton, a dentist of Brantford, has been sent up to identify the body. This he proposes to do by the filling he had put in deceased's teeth shortly prior to his leaving Brantford.

Senate and Autonomy Bill.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Moves the Six Months Holst.

Hon. Mr. Scott Moves Second Reading, and Debate Continued Till Midnight When it Was Adjourned — Fight to a Finish — Commons Work for the Day—Names of North Atlantic Trading Co. Promoters Kept Secret.

Ottawa, July 12—In the Senate yesterday Hon. Mr. Scott moved the second reading of the bill to establish the Province of Alberta.

At midnight the Senate adjourned the debate until to-day, when Senator David of Montreal will resume.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell moved the six months' holst for the bill last night, but Hon. Mr. Scott moved the second reading. The debate went on. A fight to a finish, and the division and the second reading may be prolonged indefinitely.

In the House.

Ottawa, July 13—The House of Commons yesterday began its morning session and heard complaints from Toronto members concerning the noisy forhorn. The Minister of Marine said experiments had to be made. The horns were manufactured in Toronto and must be tested. The experiments would go on for two or three weeks more.

Not After I. C. R.

Mr. Fitzpatrick introduced a bill to amend the act respecting arbitration between His Majesty and the Grand Trunk Railway. A bill was passed last session allowing the arbitrators to examine witnesses under oath. The present bill is to permit separate awards being made on different points, and also to permit the chairman of the Railway Commission to continue as one of the arbitrators.

W. F. Maclean asked if there was any proposition by the Grand Trunk to purchase the International Railway.

Mr. Fielding: No such negotiations.

Mr. Emmerson: And no proposals.

planning that the expenditure on canals this year would be $800,000, an increase of $100,000 over the expenditure of two years ago.

More Estimates.

Mr. Fielding created somewhat of a sensation by bringing down "further supplementary estimates."

The total amount of the estimates brought down last night is $794,830, of which $500,800 is for the new departmental buildings at Ottawa, and $224,480 for expenses in connection with the Government of the Northwest Territories. There is also an item of $4,000 to provide a consulting engineer for the Department of Railways and Canals.

It is generally understood that the position is slated for Collingwood Schreiber, the present Deputy Minister.

Millions Away.

There was quite a breeze over the item of $100,000, under the heading of "Trent Canal, improvements on the east branch of Holland River to Newmarket."

Hon. Mr. Emmerson explained that the total cost would be $200,000, although he appeared to be very much formed as to the exact facts of the case. There was a great deal of opposition to the vote on the part of Messrs. Oster, Bennett and R. L. Borden, while the vote was supported by the Minister of Railways and Archie Campbell.

Mr. Oster thought there was never a more absurd proposition made in Parliament. There surely was enough water for the boys to bathe in.

Mr. Bennett explained that Newmarket is rolling in prosperity, and that the Postmaster-General, and that it was merely a vote for that riding without regard to the feasibility of the scheme. It was a waste of money. The vote finally passed on division.

Hills Balk Oster.

Ottawa, July 13.—The Victoria, Vancouver and Eastern Railway bill was called at the Senate committee and the bill was passed without any opposition. Senator Ferguson asked if the opposition to the bill was withdrawn, and he got the reply that it was.

Fished Within the Limit.

Vancouver, July 12.—The Canadian Government steamer Kestrel has arrived at port with the American fishing schooner North of Seattle in tow as a prize. The schooner was seized by Mr. Kestrel off Quadra Sound, Vancouver Island, on Monday, July 3, for fishing well within the territorial limit.

Government Dredge Launched.

Hamilton, July 12.—The Hamilton Bridgebuilding Co. at their Toronto shipyard launched a Government dredge, recently finished the Government steel dipper dredge which has been under construction at this yard for the past year. There was no special ceremony attended the launching.

Starting Tragedy is Reported in the South Seas.

New Orleans, July 13.—The Norwegian steamer Brunen, Cape Heinz, from Celba, Honduras, reports a startling tragedy on the usual trading grounds of Olympia, bound from Utila for Trujillo via Ruatan, to purchase cattle.

The crew and passengers, twelve in all, were all murdered by a negro named Robert Metgil, except one passenger, a young woman, who escaped by swimming ashore, after having been struck on the head with an oar.

Metgil is a resident of Utila. He shot all of his victims. He forced one of the crew of the schooner to scuttle her. Metgil then shot him and escaped in a dory. He was subsequently captured at El Porvenir, Honduras.

The captain of the Olympia had $1,400 in his cable.

FOG SPOILS THE TEST.

Turbiner Virginian and Cruiser Canada Fail to Meet.

Montreal, July 12.—The Allan Steamship Line officials have given up all hope of the turbiner Virginian and the cruiser Canada breaking the cross-Atlantic record for Canadian mails.

Despatches received at the head office yesterday indicate that a very heavy fog has prevailed for some days about the mouth of the gulf, and as a result of which the Virginian passed Cape Rouge only yesterday morning. Her earliest time off Sydney is now thought to be 4 a.m. Thursday. At this rate the liner will be very little ahead of the record to Rimouski.

The officers expect another trial will be made. The outcoming turbiner Victorian has been detained by fog for 48 hours in the lower gulf.

TO GRAPPLE FOR BODIES.

Major Hodgins and Party Have Begun the Sad Work.

Kenora, July 12.—Major A. Hodgins, chief of transcontinental staff, left with a party yesterday morning for the scene of Tuesday's drowning accident, taking with him more grappling irons and 1,500 feet of line, on one end of the lake being so deep.

News came in last evening that no bodies had been recovered, but that Major Hodgins was much touted, and one belonging to one of the other men.

Young Temple is fairly well recovered, and Mr. Sankey's brother is expected here from Toronto by imperial Limited to-day.

Want Public-Owned Lines.

Ottawa, July 12.—E. Trowern, representing the Retail Merchants' Association of Toronto, was heard before the Telephone Committee yesterday. He complained that the rates were too high for their business, and the association favored the Government owning the trunk line. Mr. Beaudry, representing the Retail Merchants' Association, wanted cheaper 'phones. The association was in favor of the Government regulating the trunk lines so as to give connection to independent companies.

Mr. Schreiber's Successor

Mr. Collingwood Schreiber, who has since 1892 held the position of deputy minister of Railways and Chief engineer of railways and canals, retires from these positions to become consulting engineer and adviser of the department in respect to the location of the Grand Trunk Pacific railway. Mr. Schreiber is not without experience in that sort of duty. Succeeding Mr. Fleming in 1880 as chief engineer of surveys for the Canadian Pacific Railway, he was the adviser of the Government in the matter of the location and charakter of that railway until its completion six years later. When Mr. Schreiber took up that task he was not yet fifty years old, though he had been sixteen years in Government positions of large trust. Now he is in his seventy-fourth year and in the forty-second of his career as a Government officer. He has been chief engineer of Government railways in operation for thirty-two years, or since the Intercolonial as originally designed was approaching completion. For thirteen years he has been chief engineer and deputy head of the Department of Railways and Canals. As he has held this joint office until now it may be presumed that he does not yet feel the infirmities of age pressing heavily upon him.

Mr. Schreiber, says the St. John Sun, has enjoyed in a remarkable degree the confidence of the Conservative ministers under whom he served. Mr. Blair and Mr. Emmerson appear to have had a due regard for him. He is without doubt a competent engineer. He was usually described in early days as a vigilant, careful engineer officer, exceedingly careful in matters of detail and a foe to extravagance. But under Mr. Haggart he permitted the great railway fraud to take place before his eyes. It can hardly be said that he held his own with Mr. Hays in the various recent deals between the Intercolonial and the Grand Trunk, or that he has been successful in keeping down the Intercolonial expenses under a Mr. Emmerson, or that he has always protected the country in dealings with unscrupulous contractors or dishonest officials. On this point the Auditor-General has occasionally given pathetic testimony. It may be said, however, that in all Parliamentary investigations in which blundering or boodling has been suggested Mr. Schreiber has taken more than his full share of responsibility for the departmental errors, invariably shielding the minister when he could. This may partly account for the kindly feeling the ministers always had for him, for it is convenient to have the deputy testify that he advised every action which is proved to have been wrong. The latest act is never performed by Collingwood Schreiber. If there is a gap he is always ready to take the place of the minister in it.

It is interesting, particularly, to note that in place of Mr. Schreiber as deputy minister, as chief engineer of canals, and probably as chief engineer of railways in operation, the country is to have a Boy of Quinte boy, who is said to be a brilliant engineer and who is a great all-round railway man, Mr. M. J. Butler, says a contemporary, who has been the principal consulting engineer on the eastern section of the new transcontinental railway, destined to be the duties large enthusiasm and great energy in executing engineering therefore, him is the management and policy of the Intercolonial railway. If Mr. Butler has been the deputy head of the department with the intention of performing the operation of Mr. Government read he has a fine chance to do the country a great service. But if Deputy Minister Butler undertakes to reorun the Intercolonial from the grafters and sportsmen he will find himself engaged in the largest contract that he has yet undertaken in the course of a busy life.

Lamp Explosion.

On Tuesday night a lamp exploded at the home of Mr. John Green, in Madoc township, and considerable damage was done to my room before the blaze was extinguished. Loss covered by insurance.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Old Jupiter Pluvius soaked the Orangemen on Front St. yesterday afternoon, but Rev. Mr. Coburn got even by soaking the Pope on the market square afterwards.

Now that the last visitor has gone home and the big drums are laid up for another year, it seems to be in order to tender congratulations to the gentlemen who organized yesterday's demonstration. There is no doubt at all that, had the day been fine, we would have seen about the best celebration of the Glorious Twelfth ever witnessed in this city. Even under the discouraging conditions which prevailed the demonstration was an eye-opener to many people, who did not know what Orangemen could do when they set about anything in earnest. Congratulations to the gentlemen who projected and carried out Belleville's Twelfth of July celebration of 1905. May they have better weather next time.

* * *

A fellow was riding his bike on the sidewalk, and a well-known lawyer yelled at him: "Two dollars and costs."

"What's the matter," said a bystander, "has Johnny Flint lost his job?"

* * *

It is said that many of the bands which were in attendance yesterday offer to come to the Old Boys' Reunion if their expenses are paid, and their well-meant advances are said to be looked on favorably by the Chairman of the Entertainment Committee. It is hard to see why. You can't have too much music on an occasion of that kind. Most of the bands yesterday bandied out a very fair article of music. Their presence at the parade on the Reunion day would certainly add to the eclat of the occasion. Give the lads a chance to distinguish and enjoy whoop things up. They're all Boy of Quinte boys like ourselves. The more the merrier. A patriotic selection or two played on the march out would not be, by any means, the worst feature of the Reunion.

* * *

The spirit of one Mark Tapley, immortalized by Charles Dickens, must have been with the Orange men in this district yesterday, for assuredly they were jolly under exceedingly unfavorable circumstances. And that's no idle warm weather joke.

* * *

If this moist weather keeps on the faces of the farmers will soon be as long as the woods in West Belleville.

* * *

A Toronto man is alleged to have gone to Kingston and blown out the gas. The quiet of the place probably depressed him.

Lord Roberts says the British army is unfit for national defence. What would he say if he knew the Fifteenth's drill shed had not been started yet!

Why is it that life is held so cheap across line 45? The Brooklyn Eagle tells that ten years ago murders in the United States averaged about five a day. Last year the average was about fourteen. This is an appalling record, but it is not all. Ten years ago capital punishment was meted out to one in each sixteen of the murderers. Last year the proportion was only one in seventy-five. Evidently life is cheaply held across the border and is growing cheaper while crime is not taken seriously or is punished with such severity as will give it a serious check.

DISMAL DICK IS SPEECHLESS NOW.

(Brockville Times.)

We suppose that Sir Richard Cartwright is simply speechless with indignation at the present expenditure of $81,000,000 under the Laurier Government. At any rate, Dismal Dick is as silent as the grave and yet—and yet—ten short years ago Sir Richard de Blue Ruin was roaring like a bull of Bashan against the sinful extravagance of the Tories who were spending thirty-seven millions—think of it; $37,000,000 — per year! Wow, wow! How he bellowed.

As our country correspondents would say, "The Prince of Wales is wearing a happy smile. It's a woodchopper again." Another little son was born to the Princess of Wales yesterday, making the sixth child, five sons and one daughter. Prince George does not believe in race suicide.

Everybody seems to be anxious to lend the Japs money. London is in a share of the new Japanese loan was twelve times over-subscribed. The little brown men have plenty of friends among the money lenders nowadays, Russia would have hard work to borrow enough to buy a new rattle for the Czar's royal kiddies.

Hamilton Spectator; The Grits were quietly giving E. Guss Porter the laugh while he was showering the bogus ballot box work. They know all about it long ago.

Nonsense, man! Why, Mr. O'Flynn believed all the time it was "an election dodge."

* * *

Loose-tongued Yankees, who come over to Canada looking for trouble, generally find it. Those loud-mouthed chaps in London yesterday probably got more than they bargained for, but the verdict must be "served 'em right." But it is lucky they were not trampled on, instead of Old Glory.

* * *

Belleville got off lucky yesterday, compared to some places. In Brantford five people were struck by lightning during the procession.

The Japs are beginning to advance, and it is about time for Linevitch to take the back trail.

Two hundred and twenty pounds of dynamite were found in a potato cellar near Moscow, where the Czar was to take up his residence. The Little Father was due for a rise in land, eh?

* * *

In answer to several enquiries The Intelligencer can say that people who purpose coming to Belleville from outside places for the Old Boys' Reunion need no certificate when they buy their ticket. But their tickets, before they return home, must be signed and O.K'd by Mr. Arthur McGinnis, secretary of the O. B. R., of this city.

G. T. R. WILL SORELY MISS MR. JOHN BELL'S COUNSEL.

SO SAYS GENERAL MANAGER HAYS IN A GRACEFUL LETTER TO COL. PONTON.

The following letter, which explains itself, has been received by Col. Ponton:

Montreal, Quc., July 10, 1905.

My Dear Sir, — Thank you very much for yours of July 8th, conveying me copy of resolution passed unanimously by your County Law Association relative to the late Mr. John Bell, General Solicitor and Counsel of this company.

I feel quite sure it fittingly expresses the esteem and regard in which Mr. Bell was held generally throughout Canada. His life and achievements may well be the admiration of all his family and friends.

Speaking for the Grand Trunk Railway, we shall miss sorely his valued counsel and advice. It is, however, a gratification to us to know that we are to have as his successor one who was associated with him for so many years, and who also has earned your regard and esteem.

Yours truly,
(Sgd.) CHAS. M. HAYS,
2nd Vice-Pres. and Gen'l. Mgr.

W. N. Ponton, Esq., President County Hastings Law Association, Belleville, Ont.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

WINNIPEG GENTLEMAN CAPTURED A BELLEVILLE GIRL THIS AFTERNOON.

A quiet but pretty home wedding took place at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the residence of Mr. Richard McCrudden, Catherine street. The bride was Miss Annie McCrudden, a popular young Belleville girl, and the groom Mr. F. B. Climo, of Winnipeg, who was at one time a student in this city. The young couple were unattended. Rev. H. H. Leitch, pastor of Holloway St. Church, performed the ceremony. The bride was becomingly attired in a travelling suit of mahogany silk. After the nuptial knot had been tied and the young couple congratulated by those present, the wedding repast was partaken of. The bride's popularity was evidenced by the many beautiful and useful gifts which she received, amongst them being a handsome present from the choir and Epworth League of Holloway Church, of which she was a member. The groom's present to the bride was a sunburst of pearls. Mr. and Mrs. Climo left on the evening train for the west and before reaching their future home in Winnipeg will visit Chicago, St. Paul and other places. The Intelligencer joins with their numerous friends in wishing them a happy and prosperous wedded life.

LITTLE GIRL'S ACCIDENT.

MISS MARJORIE WARDHAUGH HAD A PAINFUL EXPERIENCE WITH CARBOLIC ACID.

Marjorie Wardhaugh, a little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wardhaugh, last evening was the victim of an accident which was of a painful nature. It appears that some person left a bottle containing carbolic acid in a room at the Hastings House, which is conducted by Mr. Wardhaugh and the little one took it and pulled out the cork. This caused the acid to fly over a portion of her face and about her right arm, causing bad burns. As soon as possible medical aid was summoned and the young sufferer was attended to. No serious results are anticipated, it was fortunate that the child did not attempt to drink the contents.

VERANDAH COLLAPSED.

EXCITING INCIDENT AT THE HASTINGS HOUSE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Owing to an unusually large number of persons congregating yesterday afternoon on a verandah in rear of the Hastings House, this city, it collapsed, and fortunate it was that no person was killed or even seriously injured, as a number fell to the ground some 12 feet below. Mr. Geo. Clement, of this city, sustained a fall upon the head which required to be sewed up, and two other parties, one had his left arm broken, the arms and legs hurt, but were subsequently able to go home. Some others who went down with the crash sustained bruises about the body. The affair naturally created considerable excitement for a few minutes.

Lost Watch — Blamed Women.

Between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock this morning, Thomas Oliver, who resides at Belleview, called at the police station and reported that he had been relieved of a watch. The timepiece had a gold filled case and Waltham movement. Thomas was unable to state who took it, but had suspicion that two women, whom he met with during the evening knew something about it. He could not tell who the women were.

DANGEROUS GERMS IN SUMMER.

STRENGTHEN THE STOMACH WITH MI-O-NA AND KEEP WELL.

A wealthy philanthropist in New York spends thousands of dollars every summer providing milk for the babies, with the result that the mortality is greatly decreased. He appreciates the fact that disease germs are common in the summer and that the stomach must be kept healthy to resist their attacks.

Older people do not live on a milk diet to insure health, but they can so strengthen the stomach and digestive organs by the use of Mi-o-na that they too, will be free from sickness in the summer season.

Mi-o-na restores complete health to the whole system and cures headaches, heartburn, sleeplessness, pains and distress after eating, vertigo, heart-burn, and the general debility which result from a weak stomach and imperfect digestion.

A guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na does not show help, is given with every 50 cent box. Ask J. S. McKeown to show you the guarantee.

Why furnaces crack in Summer

In the old fashioned hot-water heaters with coke, flat surface, the soot finds a splendid resting place. The scraper and brush jams soot into the interstices between the water sections. There it cakes and hardens, absorbs moisture, then it expands, and you have a cracked waterpost. If you have a "Sioux" hotwater heater you won't have any furnace troubles. There are no flat sections for soot to collect in. The "Sioux"—no crevices where soot can lodge; there will be no cracked waterposts, no delays, no money, no phoning bills.

PAIN ABOUT THE HIPS.

It is a common complaint with women. The right treatment is Nervilline, which penetrates to the seat of the pain immediately. Nervilline warms and soothes the affected parts, draws out the irritation and pain, allows the patient ease after one rubbing. No liniment so economical and safe. Nearly fifty years in use, and the demand immensely greater every day! Nervilline must be good.

considerable color to the crowds on Front street in the afternoon. Many of the men were South African medals.

The importance of the demonstration may be judged by the fact that the Orange Sentinel sent down its assistant editor, Mr. Alexander M. Hull, who found it hard, owing to the weather, to get about as he would have liked to.

Not since Joe Prince and Princess of Wales' band at our Grand Trunk station were such throngs seen there as yesterday evening between 5.30 and 8.45. And what a happy crowd they were! The long march from the Grand Trunk station, and back, which was an extra, they had not expected, but the heavy rain which soaked many of them did not dampen their spirits. It was the "Glorious Twelfth" that sufficed.

That half-hour's delay in starting the procession was caused by waiting for the eight hundred from Kingston getting to their dinner, as the Americus, on which they arrived, did not get away from the dock until 4 p.m.

The "no-a-yo-please" style of regalia was still conspicuous in the absence of aprons. Sashes were performed, and how much better they looked! But as compared with any other immense procession that ever took place in Belleville yesterday was incomparably the best.

The ladies at every turn were heard to say: "Isn't it fine looking?" "What stalwarts!" and "How well they keep step, don't they, considering the mud!" As so many Orangemen become to the militia their military training.

Banners seem to be taking the place of the old "wild-fires" we used to be heard to say: "Banners, bunph! William the Red didn't have a thing shaped like that when he landed at Carrickfergus!" Be that as it may, and flags ought never to be replaced by banners.

Benjamin Lodge, 274, kept open house all day, and through a courtesy for which Mr. George A. Dewett was chairman, served refreshments to the numerous visitors.

All eight addresses should have been delivered at the meeting, which had been arranged to hold at the Agricultural Park, but owing to the weather the meeting commenced on the market square the following gentlemen, slated to do so, were unable to speak: Rev. R. B. Leitch; Mr. H. H. Holland, Past Provincial Grand Master; Mr. Fred Rider, Mr. Robert Cunningham, Grand Treasurer of Ontario and Mr. Thomas Worrell, Grand Master of the True Blue Association; Mr. R. Richards, Lindsay, Grand Master of the Sons of Boyne; Rev. K. S. White, Napanee, Deputy Grand Chaplain.

The Most Worshipful Grand Master, Dr. Sproule, commenced the day by meeting in L.O.L. 274, in a brake, at 6.00 a.m. He entertained it a good deal, and had the first lodge organized in Canada.

HAIR SOFT AS SILK.

New Scientific Treatment Kills Dandruff Germs, and Makes Hair Soft.

It is an accepted fact, a proven fact, that dandruff is a germ disease, and it is also a demonstrated fact that Newbro's Herpicide kills the dandruff germ. Without dandruff falling hair would stop, and thin hair will thicken. Herpicide not only kills the dandruff germ, but it also makes hair as soft as silk. It is the most delightful hair dressing made. It cleanses the scalp from dandruff and keeps it clean and healthy. Itching and irritation are instantly relieved and permanently cured. There's nothing "just as good." Take no substitute. Ask for "Herpicide." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. E. McKeown, special agent.

Yesterday the Glorious 12th would have been one of the greatest opportunities to advertise a new business. And we did our best to be prepared to do it in advertising space, but unfortunately, but every person in Belleville is too busy on coal dealers just now to be quizzed, papered and relitted, and simply had to let the matter rest. However we believe at time of writing that we will be able to place our goods and open up for business right on a carload of KAHN PIANOS and Organs and Bicycles. We hope to have a staff of assistants sufficient to entertain you all in the near future. Our 30 day special Factory Sale commences with our opening. Every piano sold guaranteed for 10 years. 11,13,15,17,18

COULDN'T FRIGHTEN GAMEY.

HE WAS WARNED THAT IT WAS NOT SAFE FOR HIM TO GO TO PETERBORO — BUT HE DID NOT MIND THAT.

A despatch from Peterboro says that a fake story was told about Mr. Gamey, who spoke at the young Conservative picnic on Saturday, was approached by no less than four civil servants in Peterboro, who were friends of his, confidently advised him not to come to Peterboro, as it was reported there would be trouble and he would not be given a hearing. Mr. Gamey heeded not the warning, and during his hour and a half address was not the slightest evidence of intimidation of antagonism.

Over 50 p.m. and Provincial constables on the exhibition grounds to quell any disturbance that might be created. There was no trouble, which it was freely rumored would take place, failed to materialize.

PUBLIC SWIMMING BATHS.

FOR "BROCKVILLE" IN THE FOLLOWING ARTICLE PLEASE READ "BELLEVILLE."

Brockville Times: While complaints are being made against boys for bathing in prohibited places at unseasonable times it should be remembered that there are no public swimming baths in Brockville as there should be by right. A comparatively few people have convenient boat-houses of their own from which they can go into the water, but in the matter of a refreshing swim the great majority of people in town have to go a considerable distance. This is not as it should be. A town of the size and situation of Brockville ought to have commodious public swimming baths for the benefit of the public. The little boys and girls could be taught to swim there and so relieve their parents of a great deal of anxiety.

It is hardly fair to blame lads for going in swimming anywhere and in any place in these hot summer days, with the water so many degrees cooler. They would not be human if they did not take a dip regardless of statutory regulations or town by-laws or any restrictions.

Brockville is away behind the times in not having public swimming baths such as either by private or public funds.

We Want More Workmen—

Painters and Paperhangers

but we must have good men.

It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen three times larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work caught up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and refitted Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 23rd inst., we commence in the exterior and interior decoration of the Moira Baptist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us, and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon, a number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

THE ash-pit of the Oxford Hot Water Boiler high base gives great depth for accumulated ashes, and, when ordered, is fitted with an ash-sifter, separates the good coal from the dead ashes, thus, without any trouble, saving much fuel that is ordinarily thrown away.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The diameter of the fire-pot is greater at the top than at the bottom, preventing an accumulation of ashes around the most active part of the boiler.

The triangular revolving grate is hollow, allowing immense air space without permitting live coals to drop through. Ashes, clinkers, etc., are sharply cut off by a turn of the grate. Write for our free book and see our book? It's free. 1909

HEAVEN.

There was an old woman who always was tired,
For she lived in a house where help was not hired;
Her last words on earth were;
Dear friends, I am going
Where sweeping ain't done, nor churning, nor sewing;
I will be where loud anthems forever are ringing,
But having no voice, I will get rid of the singing,
And everything there will be just to my wishes;
For where they don't eat there's no washing of dishes.
Don't mourn for me now, don't mourn for me never,
I am going to do nothing for ever and ever.

F. Augustus Heinze, the young copper magnate, was describing a somewhat unseemly quarrel that had waged between two copper men.

"The thing reminded me," he said "of an accident that occurred in my boyhood in a little Brooklyn church.

"There was a rough and ready, abrupt sort of a preacher, preaching in this church one winter evening, when the door opened, and a drunken tramp thrust in his head.

"Everybody turned and looked at the tramp. His unkempt head was all was visible. It wagged and leered.

"'Come in,' said the preacher in his abrupt way. 'Come in and hear the Gospel.'

"The tramp grinned awkwardly, and in silence accepted that invitation. He lurched down the aisle between the rows of clean and quiet people, and took a seat in the nearest corner, beside the big, redfaced, old-clothes store.

"There he sat, a picture of wretchedness and depravity, and the minister preached eloquently on.

"As bad luck would have it, the stove soon proved too much for the tramp. It made him ill. This illness outraged the preacher.

"'Put him out,' he shouted. 'Deacon Brodie, put that swine out at once.'

"The tramp did not wait to be put out. He rose at once, and staggered to the door. In the doorway he paused, clapped on his hat, warned his hand to the congregation, and said:

"'Such preachin' as that is enough to make a dog sick.'"

Two actors were dining together in a New York restaurant. They had ordered, for their salad course, artichokes. The waiter came and said:

"Gentlemen, I regret that we are out of artichokes."

"Then snow brown," said one of the actors, "In other words, send to the nearest orchestra and get some artichokes for us."

The waiter bowed and withdrew, and the other actor asked:

"What did you mean by snowing brown? You told the waiter to snow brown. What did you mean by it?"

"I meant 'Don't give up. Persevere. Don't fail. Do something or other,' said the first actor. "Snow brown was the most that ever some the first year of Sir Henry Irving's management of the Lyceum Theatre.

"Sir Henry was producing a drama that demanded, in one scene, large quantities of snow. White paper, cut fine and packed in a number of large sacks, was given to two men perched up aloft, and they were told to snow hard and fast from the scene's beginning till the curtain dropped.

"The man obeyed this order too well. They snowed too hard and fast. Before the scene's end they found their white paper running out. They snow-storm became feebler and feebler, and finally it ceased altogether.

"The hero's meat speech was, 'I cannot see your face, dear heart, for those blinding flakes of snow.'

"And no snow, not a drop was falling.

DO YOU GET BILIOUS?

No remedy could be more prompt and agreeable than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. No matter where you go you'll hear of the grand cures they make. Writing from Ottawa Mrs. M. E. Legere says: "For people inclined to biliousness and sick headache I don't think there is a remedy to compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I formerly had bilious attacks about once a month—used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and obtained grand results. My stomach has been put in good order and my health greatly improved." No medicine better for men, women and children. Try Dr. Hamilton's Pills, — 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00 at all druggists.

FEW PENNIES IN BUTTE.

No One Likes Them, and They All Drift to the Postoffice.

A twelve quart pail will hold all the pennies in Butte.

In the money drawer or cash register of nearly every business house in Butte there is a tin box back in one corner, and in it are pennies. When the box is full the merchant puts it away in his safe and climbs in till the new postoffice, unlocks his accumulation and carries home stamps for it.

When a child comes into a store and buys and proffers pennies in payment the pennies are forthwith cast into the little box.

As a general thing the pennies given out in change in the postoffice windows get outside the building. Before leaving the building the owner of the pennies decides that he or she would rather have stamps for them, and the exchange is made.

So the pennies in circulation in Butte hover about the postoffice. Once in a while an arrival from the east scatters them among several stores, but eventually the little disks find their way to the postoffice. The stores do not make change in pennies in Butte. Some use postage stamps.

It has not been so long since pennies have been given out in change at the postoffice. Two or three years ago a man bought a money order at the Butte postoffice. He had 2 cents in change coming to him, but there were no pennies with which to pay it. He complained to the postoffice department at Washington, and then came an order directing that a supply of pennies be obtained and change made. Since then there has been pennies in Butte, Helena and most of the larger offices in Montana. But the pennies as a general thing has little use for pennies, and it will probably be a long time before they come into circulation in that part of the northwest.

There are no penny newspapers in Montana. Children always have a nickel to buy candy, sometimes more. There are no penny values shown for sale in dirt city.

The merchants think the pennies a nuisance. The public look at the matter in the same light, and if it had not been for a disgruntled buyer of a money order who failed to appreciate that if the 2 cents had been coming the other way nothing would have been said about it the probabilities are that pennies would be fewer in Butte and other Montana cities than they are today.—Butte Letter in New York Herald.

New Terror For the Fourth.

Such is the degree of personal liberty in this great republic that a man may manufacture what he will, except distilled spirits, and in some states cigarettes, even to instruments for the torture of his fellow citizens. Thus the head of the physics department of Lehigh university, elderly with intent to join the increasing band of millionaires, has invented and will put on the Fourth of July market a cannon which may be fired 5,000 times at a cost of but 5 cents. A peculiarity of the instrument is that however careless may be the sufferings of those who cannot get beyond reach of the sound, the boy who does the firing is in no danger of death or injury save at the hands of his distracted neighbors.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Splitting the Germs.

"Nerve splitting" is no longer a term to be exclusively applied to New York street gamins or women's headaches. It has a fixed place in the new surgery, and progressive surgeons do not scruple at splitting a nerve than some writers do of splitting an infinitive. Nerve splitting is one of the accessories to nerve suturing and nerve grafting. It has been practiced with varying success in the old world and in Germany and England, but is new in this country. Five successful cases have been reported within a month—three in New York one in Baltimore and one in Philadelphia.—New York Herald.

A Blast Against Tobacco.

Frederic Harrison in the Bystander has a counter blast against tobacco and the cigarette especially in the Spectator English. He regards the use of the weed Sir Walter Raleigh introduced in Europe as "the most degrading, as it is the most diffused and most needless, aesthetic and medical" and as "repellent for it is degrading and "loathsome to most women and decent men and unworthy of a gentleman." All of which is strong language, whether too strong depends upon the individual's views of the administrations of "My Lady Nicotine."

The Last Boer Prisoner.

Robert Rogers, one of the two remaining Boer prisoners in Ceylon, left for Holland last month, having been four and a half years on the island. The British government has warned him that this permission does not imply that the abolition of his return to South Africa will be canceled, as he has not yet taken the oath of allegiance. Rogers' departure from Ceylon leaves only one Boer prisoner, a man named Engelbrecht, in the custody of Great Britain. Engelbrecht is still in Ceylon.

A House Built of Granitoid Blocks.

Clarence W. Finnie began the erection of a home in Louisville, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, which will be one of the most unique residences in the city when completed. It will be built entirely of granitoid blocks, which are being made on the lot where the house is going up. It will have the appearance of a stone building, and it is claimed that it will be as substantial, but the material is said to be cheaper than that which is required for a frame house.

CHAPTER I.

THIS is to be a story of a battle, at least of a murder and several sudden deaths. For that matter, it begins with a pistol shot and among the mingled odors of many delicate perfumes and the hale, frank smell of Caroline Testout roses.

There had been a great number of debutantes "coming out" that season in San Francisco by means of afternoon teas, pink, lavender and otherwise. This particular tea was well intended to celebrate the fact that Josie Herrick had arrived at that time of her life when she was to wear her hair high and her gowns long and to have a "day" of her own quite distinct from that of her mother.

Ross Wilbur presented himself at the Herrick house on Pacific avenue at about two-forty in the afternoon of Miss Herrick's tea. As he made his way up the steps of the entrance he was aware of a terrifying army of millinery and a disquieting staccato chatter of feminine voices in the parlors and reception rooms on either side of the hallway. A single high hat in the room that had been set apart for the men's use confirmed him in his suspicions.

"Might have known it would be a hen party, till'd anyhow," he muttered, swearing out of his overcoat. "Don't know any of them, either. They'd be there now—all mamma's friends at this hour, and pappa's maiden sisters and his schoolteachers and governesses and music teachers, and I don't know what all."

When he went down he found it precisely as he expected. He went up to Miss Herrick, where she stood receiving with her mother and two of the other girls, and followed them to chat with on the conclusion.

"Maybe I seem at my ease," said Ross Wilbur to himself, "but I'm very much frightened. I'm going to run away as soon as it is decently possible, unless I can find some one to lead me."

"I believe you had luncheon not two hours ago," said Miss Herrick, as he came along, though, and I'll give you some chocolate presently, if you'll be good, a stuffed olive. I got them just because I knew you liked them. I ought to stay here if I'm positive, so I can look after you for long."

The two fought their way through the crowded rooms to the luncheon table, and Miss Herrick got Wilbur his chocolate and stuffed olives. Then they sat down and talked in a window recess for a moment. Wilbur tried to make a large for his plate.

"I thought," said Miss Herrick, "that you were going on the Ridgeways' yachting party this afternoon. Mrs. Ridgeways' note was addressed to me, you. They were going out with the Petrel."

"She didn't count above a hundred, though," answered Wilbur. "I got your note, did it, and I resented the yachting party, and I guess I'd have regretted it anyhow." And he grinned at her over his cup.

"Nice man," she said, adding on the instant, "I must go now, Ross."

"Not till it set the sugar out of my cup," complained Wilbur. "Tell me," he added, glancing at the bottom of the cup with the inadequate spoon—"tell me—you're going to the Goodwin ball tonight?"

"If you mean the assembly—yes, I am."

"Will you give me the first and last?"

"I'll give you the first, and you can ask for the last, Ross."

"Let's put it down. I know you'll forget it." Wilbur drew a couple of cards from his case.

"Programmes are not good form any more," said Miss Herrick.

"Forgetting a dance is worse."

He made out the cards, writing on the one he got for himself, "Supper—Ida."

"I must go back now," said Miss Herrick, getting up.

"In that case I shall run. I'm afraid of girls."

"It's a pity about you!"

"I am. One girl, I don't say, but girl in the plural, like this," and he pointed his chin toward the thronged parlors, "it demans me."

"Goodby, then!"

"Goodby until tonight about"—

"About 9, then."

Ross Wilbur made his adieu to Mrs. Herrick and the girls who were receiving and took himself away. As he came out of the house and stood for a moment on the steps, settling his hat gingerly upon his hair so as not to disturb it, a footman in livery put many means an ill looking chap. His good height was helped out by his long coat and his high silk hat, and there was plenty of jaw in the lower part of his face that met his tailor. Great muscles answerable for his shoulders. Three years before this time Ross Wilbur had pulled at No. 5 in his varsity boat in an eastern college that was not accustomed to athletic discomfiture.

"I wonder what I'm going to do with myself until supper time," he muttered as he came down the steps, feeling for the middle of his stick. He found no immediate answer to his question. But the afternoon was fine, and he set off to walk in the direction of the town, with a half formed idea of looking in at his club.

But his club he found a letter in his box from his particular chum, who had been spending a month shooting elk in Oregon. It read:

Dear Old Man—Will be back on the afternoon you receive this. Will hit it on the head about 5 o'clock. Get some tea in the boat and have it ready. Don't bother about any substantial nutriment at the Pacific Club. Can't even get coffee at that place. Take that I've got to rod up before tonight. Yours, HARRY.

"I've got a stand of horns for you, Ross, that are dead in the alabaster.

"Wait, I can't go," murmured Wilbur as he remembered the assembly that was to come off that night and to be engaged dance with Jo Herrick. He decided that if would be best to meet Harry, as to come off the boat and tell him how matters stood. Then he received, since no one that he knew in the city was in the installment of the Pacific weeklies had not arrived, that it would be amusing to go down to the waterfront and loaf among the shipping until it was time for Jerry's boat.

Wilbur spent an hour along the wharfs, watching the great grain ships consigned to "Queer orders" slowly forging themselves with whale backs, barges of wheat from the San Joaquin valley; lumber vessels for Durban and South Africa ports settling lower and lower to the water's edge as more piles and redwood stratified themselves along their decks and in their holds; coal barges from Nanaimo; hay from Nanaimo; busy little tugs coughing and nuzzling at the docks; and deep sea tramps while bay barges and Italian whitesails came and went at every turn. A little excited by the wait by, her stern wheel churning along behind like a huge net trap, the masterpiece of activity centered about an Alaska commercial company's steamboat that would clear for Dawson in the morning.

No quarter of one of the most picturesque cities in the world had more interest for Wilbur than the water front. In the mile or so that the boat stretched from the docks where the China steamships landed down past the ferry slips and on to Meiggs' wharf every maritime nation in the world was represented. More than once Wilbur had toiled to the bungers of the wharfs, stevedores out of work, sailors between voyages, cafiers and ship chandlers' men looking—not too earnestly—for jobs, so that on this occasion when a little, undersized fellow in dirty brown sweater and clothes of Barbary coast cut sauted into the patch to fight his pipe Wilbur offered a cigar and passed the time of day with him. Wilbur had not forgotten that he himself was dressed for an afternoon function. But the lieungnity of the human was precisely the most amused him.

The little man the fellow suggested drinks. Wilbur hesitated for a moment. It would be something to tell about, however, so, "All right, I'll drink with you," he said.

The brown sweater led the way to a "Silver" Dooley's house in Hinckley alley. One of the place was built upon piles over the water, but in front on the ground floor was a barroom.

"Iiims an' gum," announced the brown sweater as the two came in and took their places at the bar.

"Iiims an' gum, Tuck. Wattle you have, sir?"

"Oh, I don't know," hesitated Wilbur. "Give me a whisky and soda."

While the drinks were being mixed the brown sweater called Wilbur's attention to a fighting headdress from the Marquesas that was hung on the wall over the free lunch counter and above the bar. Wilbur turned about to look at it and remained so, his back to the barkeeper, till the latter told them their drinks were ready.

"Well, mate, here's big blocks an' hauf three pipes," said the brown sweater cordially.

"Very very good health," returned Wilbur.

The brown sweater wiped a thin mustache in the hollow of his palm and wiped that palm upon his trousers leg.

"Yes, sir," he continued, once more facing the Marquesan headdress. "Yes, sir; they're queer game down there."

"In the Marquesas Islands, you mean?" said Wilbur.

"Yes, sir, they're queer game. When they ain't cutting themselves with Scripture text's they git from the missionaries, they're pullin' out the hairs all over their bodies with two'clam shells. Hair by hair, you understan'."

"Pulls out 'er hair with clam shells," wondering what was the matter with his tongue.

"They think it's clever—think the women folk like it."

Wilbur had fancied that the little man had worn a brown sweater when they first met. But now, strangely enough, he was not in the least surprised to see it iridescent, like a pigeon's breast.

"I' ever been down Lat way?" inquired the little man next.

Wilbur heard the words distinctly enough, but somehow they refused to fit into the right places in his brain. He pulled himself together, however, heavily.

"What—dit—you—say?" he asked with great deliberation, biting off his words. Then he noticed that he and the brown sweater were no longer in the barroom, but in a little room back of it. His personality divided itself. There was the part of him that he could not make his hands go where he wanted them, who was there, and another part—a sneaker and whose legs below the knee were made of solid lead; this latter resented the familiarity of Ross Wilbur the alert, who was perfectly clear headed and who stood off to one side and watched the drama of his own life and the actors in it.

This latter Wilbur heard the irides-cent sweater say:

"Bust me, if y' ain't squiffy, old man. Stand by a bit, an' we'll have a hail." Wilbur heard the return—exceptionally—and the round table—pull out hairs in the hall again," grabbed Wilbur's stupefied double, and Wilbur the alert said to himself: "You're not drunk, you know, that's certain. What could they have put in your cocktail?"

The brown sweater returned twice upon the floor, and a trapdoor fell away beneath Wilbur's feet like the drop of a gallows. With the eyes of his undrugged self Wilbur had a glimpse of water below. Then there was a splash as he went down, and he felt feet first into a whitetail boat. He was conscious of a pain as much at the oars and to look between the piles that supported the house above him and saw the face of the fellow he had left at the bottom of the cocktail shore. He was not in the least surprised at what had happened and made up his mind that it would be a good idea to lie down in the boat and go to sleep.

Suddenly, but how long after his ad vent into the boat he could not tell, he found himself in the open water. Sea swirls threw him about, and he felt the oars being taken from his hands. It was Wilbur, and yet not Wilbur. In two minutes more the boat was in the lee of a steamer, and Wilbur, the alert, was once again. The only traces of his former self were the patent leather pumps, which retained their first gloss and shine, that showed with grim incongruity below the vast compass of the brown sweater.

As Wilbur came up deck he saw the name of the steamer—Benicia—forward, aft of them. Chinamen every one, in brown jeans and black felt hats. On the quarter deck stood the captain barking his orders.

"Consider the Lilies of the Valley," he heard him say in bitter as his eye fell upon Wilbur's transformed. "Clap on that starboard windlass brake, sonny."

Wilbur saw the Chinamen ranging themselves about what he guessed was the windlass in the schooner's bow. He followed and took his place among them, grasping one of the bars.

"Break down!" came the next order. Wilbur and the Chinamen obeyed, bearing up and down upon the bars till the slack of the anchor chain came home and stretched taut and dripping from the bawse holes.

"Vast heavin'!"

And then as Wilbur released the brake and turned about for the next order he cast his glance not upon the bay, and there, not 150 yards away, her spotless sails furled, her cordage humming, her fantastic and delicate rigging easily showing the ways, the water blessing and churning under her forefoot, clean, gleaming, stately and aristocratic, the Ridgeways' yacht Petrel passed like a thing of life. Without a doubt Ridgeway himself at the wheel. Girls in smart gowns and white fellows in white duck and yachting caps—all friends of his—crowded the decks. A little orchestra of musicians were playing off a quick-step.

The popping of a cork and a gale of talk and laughter came to his ears. Wilbur stared at the picture, his face devoid of emotion. The Petrel came on, drew nearer, was not a hundred feet away from the schooner's stern. A dreamy swimmer, as was Wilbur, could cover the distance in a few strokes. Two minutes ago Wilbur might have—

"Set your mains'l!" came the bellow of Captain Kitchel. "Cap on to your throat and peak halyards!"

The Chinamen hurried aft.

Wilbur followed.

CHAPTER II.

IN the course of the next few months, while the little vessel was being got under way and while the Ridgeways' Petrel gleamed off into the blue distance, Wilbur made certain observations.

The name of the boat on which he found himself was the Bertha Milliner. She was a two topmast, twenty-eight ton keel schooner. Her hull, long, carrying a large spread of sail—mainsail, foresail, jib, flying jib, two gaff topsails and a staysail. She was very dirty and smelled abominably of some kind of cargo that had been carried in guanes—there was no mate—but the cook, himself a Chinaman, who appeared from out the door in the side of the galley, a potato masher in his hand, seemed to have some sort of faith in his own abilities. He acted in a manner as a go-between for the captain and the crew, and Wilbur noted that the former's orders and occasionally giving one of his own.

The cook was a Mandarin address him as Charlie. He spoke pigeon English fairly. He was known to the crew as Joe Chinaman. Wilbur could make nothing. They never spoke, neither to each other, and for all the notice they took of Wilbur he might easily have been a sea gull. Wilbur felt that his advent on the Bertha Milliner was by its very nature a disagreeable event, but the absolute indifference of these brown suited Mongols, the blank-ness of their faces, the stolidity of their slanting, pebble eyes that never met his own or even wandered in his direction, was uneasy disquieting. In what strange venture was he now to be involved, toward what unknown vortex was this new current setting, this current that had so suddenly snatched him from the very portals of Society's Most Popular Members."

"That's well, y' throat halyards. Here, Lilies of the Valley, a couple of pulls on y'r peak halyard purchase." Wilbur stared at the captain helplessly.

"You, sir, he!" inquired Charlie from the galley, "Pullum dis lopesabe?"

Wilbur tugged at the rope the cook indicated.

"That's well, y'r peak halyard purchase," chanted Captain Kitchel.

"Now, then, all hands haul. The mainsail was set and hung slatting and flopping in the wind. The forsail was set in much the same manner, and Wilbur was ordered to "lay out an the flying jib boom" to help hoist the jib." He "lay out" as best he could and cast off the gaskets—he knew barely enough of sailing to understand an order here and there—and by the time the jib was hoisted he found that the Chinamen were at the jib halyard and holding away.

"That's well, y'r jib halyards."

The Bertha Milliner veered round and played off to the wind, tugging at her anchor.

"Man y'r windlass."

Wilbur and the crew jumped once more to the brakes.

"Brake down, heave y'r anchor to the catheads."

The anchor chain, already taut, vibrated and then came home. Wilbur and the crew stood as the hands rose and fell at the brakes. The anchor came home dripping and, as it was hoisted, was wiped clear of the schooner's sails; a strong cbb tide caught her under foot.

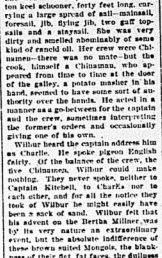

"We're off to sea!" Wilbur as the Bertha Milliner heeled to the first gust.

But strangely the schooner was not bound up the bay.

"Must be Vallejo or Benicia then," marveled Wilbur as the sails grew tenser and the water rippled ever harder under the schooner's forefoot. Maybe they're going after hay or wheat."

The schooner was tacking, headed directly for Meiggs' wharf. She came in closer and closer—so close that Wilbur could hear the talk of the fishermen sitting on the stringpieces. He had just made up his mind that they were to make a landing there when—friend Jim makes a present of and no charge, because he loves you so. You're allowed two minutes to change, an' it is to be hoped you'll find room for it and to come for to assist."

It would have been interesting to have followed, step by step, the mental process that now took place in Ross Wilbur's brain. He would have given him two minutes in which to change. The time was short enough, but even in that Wilbur could have done it by clothes during the two minutes he was left to "go and get his clothes from the schooner's forcastle." It was more than a change—it was a revolution. What he made up his mind to do, precisely what mental attitude he decided to adopt, first and last upon the street car he intended to set his feet, it is difficult to say. Only by results could the change be guessed at. He went down the forward hatch at the top of Kitchel's boot-ink hatted, molton overcoated, polished and gloved to the suedes. Two minutes later there emerged upon the deck a "Lilie in dis skins" and a sou'wester. There was blood upon the face of him and the strength of a bull in the muscles that his hands. It was Wilbur, and yet not Wilbur. In two minutes he had changed his skin again. The only traces of his former self were the patent leather pumps, which retained their first gloss and shine, that showed with grim incongruity below the vast compass of the brown sweater.

As Wilbur came up deck he saw the name of the steamer—Benicia—forward, aft of them. Chinamen every one, in brown jeans and black felt hats. On the quarter deck stood the captain barking his orders.

"Consider the Lilies of the Valley," he heard him say in bitter as his eye fell upon Wilbur's transformed. "Clap on that starboard windlass brake, sonny."

Wilbur saw the Chinamen ranging themselves about what he guessed was the windlass in the schooner's bow. He followed and took his place among them, grasping one of the bars.

"Break down!" came the next order. Wilbur and the Chinamen obeyed, bearing up and down upon the bars till the slack of the anchor chain came home and stretched taut and dripping from the bawse holes.

"Vast heavin'!"

And then as Wilbur released the brake and turned about for the next order he cast his glance not upon the bay, and there, not 150 yards away, her spotless sails furled, her cordage humming, her fantastic and delicate rigging easily showing the ways, the water blessing and churning under her forefoot, clean, gleaming, stately and aristocratic, the Ridgeways' yacht Petrel passed like a thing of life. Without a doubt Ridgeway himself at the wheel. Girls in smart gowns and white fellows in white duck and yachting caps—all friends of his—crowded the decks. A little orchestra of musicians were playing off a quick-step.

The popping of a cork and a gale of talk and laughter came to his ears. Wilbur stared at the picture, his face devoid of emotion. The Petrel came on, drew nearer, was not a hundred feet away from the schooner's stern. A dreamy swimmer, as was Wilbur, could cover the distance in a few strokes. Two minutes ago Wilbur might have—

"Set your mains'l!" came the bellow of Captain Kitchel. "Cap on to your throat and peak halyards!"

The Chinamen hurried aft.

Wilbur followed.

CHAPTER II.

IN the course of the next few months, while the little vessel was being got under way and while the Ridgeways' Petrel gleamed off into the blue distance, Wilbur made certain observations.

The name of the boat on which he found himself was the Bertha Milliner. She was a two topmast, twenty-eight ton keel schooner. Her hull, long, carrying a large spread of sail—mainsail, foresail, jib, flying jib, two gaff topsails and a staysail. She was very dirty and smelled abominably of some kind of cargo that had been carried in guanes—there was no mate—but the cook, himself a Chinaman, who appeared from out the door in the side of the galley, a potato masher in his hand, seemed to have some sort of faith in his own abilities. He acted in a manner as a go-between for the captain and the crew, and Wilbur noted that the former's orders and occasionally giving one of his own.

The cook was a Mandarin address him as Charlie. He spoke pigeon English fairly. He was known to the crew as Joe Chinaman. Wilbur could make nothing. They never spoke, neither to each other, and for all the notice they took of Wilbur he might easily have been a sea gull. Wilbur felt that his advent on the Bertha Milliner was by its very nature a disagreeable event, but the absolute indifference of these brown suited Mongols, the blank-ness of their faces, the stolidity of their slanting, pebble eyes that never met his own or even wandered in his direction, was uneasy disquieting. In what strange venture was he now to be involved, toward what unknown vortex was this new current setting, this current that had so suddenly snatched him from the very portals of Society's Most Popular Members."

"That's well, y'r throat halyards. Here, Lilies of the Valley, a couple of pulls on y'r peak halyard purchase." Wilbur stared at the captain helplessly.

"You, sir, he!" inquired Charlie from the galley, "Pullum dis lopesabe?"

Wilbur tugged at the rope the cook indicated.

"That's well, y'r peak halyard purchase," chanted Captain Kitchel.

"Now, then, all hands haul. The mainsail was set and hung slatting and flopping in the wind. The forsail was set in much the same manner, and Wilbur was ordered to "lay out an the flying jib boom" to help hoist the jib." sodden lit—and the Chinamen ate it in silence with their chopsticks and from tin plates. A liquid that bore a distant resemblance to coffee was served. Wilbur learned afterward to like the stuff as black jack and to relish it very much indeed. The rice was steamed with molasses. A single reeking lamp swung with the settings of the schooner over the center of the group, and long after-ward Wilbur could remember the grisly scene—the punk sticks, the bread pan full of hunks of meat, the bowls of rice and oily smell and the chicle of silent, preoccupied Chinese, each sitting on his bunk ledge, devouring his part, and holding in pandalia of black jack between his feet against the roll and pitch of the boat.

Wilbur looked fearfully at the mess in the pan, recalling the chocolate and stuffed olives that had been his last luncheon.

"Well," he muttered, clinching his teeth, "I've got to come to it sooner or later." His pocketrife was in the pocket of his waistcoat, underneath his silk-stain coat. He counted the big blade, bargained a cake of pork and dependent on the cook, and, after a little study and with savage determination. But the black jack was more than he could bear.

"I'm not hungry enough for that just now," he told himself. "Say, Jim," he added, turning to the Chinaman next him on the bunk ledge—"say, what kind of boat is this? What you do—where you go?"

When Wilbur came on deck again he was glad that the Bertha Milliner had already left the whistling buoy astern. To the east, across the bay, showed above the waves, was a pilot boat with the number 7 on her mainsail. The morning was cool and fine. Chinamen were in plain sight dead ahead. Far ahead there were low hills and just below them the sky, he could make out a few twinkling lights—San Francisco.

Half an hour later Kitchel came on deck from his skipper in cabin aft. He glanced in the direction of the mainland, saw where they were, and then took the wheel from one of the Chinamen and ordered him to "go and confere an' main sheets." The hands eased away, and the schooner played off before the wind.

The staysail was set. The Bertha Milliner headed to southward, heeled over, and, running at a good, right knot breeze.

Just came the order, "All hands aft," and Wilbur and his mates betook themselves to the quarter deck. Charlie took the wheel, and he and Kitchel began to choose the men for their watches, just as Wilbur remembered he had chosen sides for baseball during his school days.

"Say, Jim," Wilbur was you. You're on my watch," said the captain to Wilbur, "and I will assign the re-sponsibility of your watch, understand.

"I may as well tell you at once," began Wilbur, "that I'm no sailor."

"But you will be soon," answered the captain, at once soothing and threatening. "You will be, believe me, Lilies of the Vallee. You kin lay to it as how you will be one of the best harbor men up the fresh in, as our dear friend Jim says. Before I git thoo with you you'll be a sailor and no mistake, I can promise ye. You're on my watch. Step over here, son."

The watches were divided, Charlie and three other Chinamen on the port, Kitchell, Wilbur and two Chinamen on the starboard. The men trooped forward again.

The tiny world of the schooner had lapsed to quiet. The Bertha Milliner was now clear of the land, that lay like a bar of faintest purple smoke, ever growing fainter, low in the east. The

WOMAN'S WORLD

MISS FLORENCE RHETT.

Household Manager and Social Secretary For J. P. Morgan.

Miss Florence Mason Rhett of New York is household secretary of the great financier J. Pierpont Morgan and is one of the highest salaried as well as one of the hardest worked women in the United States. Those who ought to know say her salary is $10,000 a year.

Miss Rhett has been in Mr. Morgan's employ as household manager and social secretary to the family for six years. She relieves Mrs. Morgan, who dislikes household responsibility, of the care of her magnificent homes in New York, West Point and London. Her travel is absolute in each establishment. She engages and discharges the servants and purchases all the supplies. She is not restricted as to expenses.

Miss Rhett is said to be a relative of Mrs. Morgan. She is a descendant of the old Rhett family of South Carolina, the members of which have long been socially prominent in Charleston. She is a tall, large, distinguished looking woman, like Mrs. Morgan and Miss Anne Morgan.

MISS FLORENCE MASON RHETT.

Managing the household affairs is the least of Miss Rhett's duties. She takes charge of all the correspondence of the Morgan home, including all letter-dealing with Mr. Morgan's multifarious charitable affairs in connection with churches and hospitals, his relations with the Metropolitan Museum and other institutions of art and learning, his personal correspondence about his yachting interests and the various clubs with which he is connected. All appeals for aid come under Miss Rhett's eye, and her decision upon them is usually final, as that decision is only tendered after she has made a rigid investigation as to the worthiness of the cause.

Mrs. Morgan and Miss Morgan receive almost as many begging letters as Mr. Morgan does. These also are turned over to Miss Rhett. She also acts as social secretary, replying to and sending out invitations.

As a connoisseur in art Miss Rhett is nearly if not as engaged in looking up something in connection with Mr. Morgan's purchases in that field. If some body writes offering to sell him a rare piece of china or a painting he sends Miss Rhett the look at it. Her judgment goes a long way with him in such matters. This will give an idea of the work of Miss Rhett's duties, and though her salary is large, she earns it. —New York Press.

Feeding the Baby.

This is a matter of vital importance and much concern to every mother. The time comes when something besides a purely milk diet is desirable, but what, that the little stomach can digest, will furnish proper nourishment? It is often necessary to change from an entire milk diet when, during the teething period, baby refuses food or does not seem to relish what is taken as formerly.

The old fashioned oat flake, properly cooked, is one of the first things to be given with safety, and the little ones enjoy this. In lieu of a double boiler, if yours is too large, get a small handled basin that will sit in the top of your teakettle, using the cover of the latter for the dish. To a cup of boiling water add a pinch of salt and one tablespoonful of oat flake. Cook over your boiling kettle one hour or more (a thorough cooking is very essential). You will have a jelly with very little solid matter. Add milk, and it is ready for baby. A little sugar may be used, but do not add the common mistaken of thinking everything for baby must be sweetened and later wonder why when he is given plain bread and butter without a sugar dressing is not acceptable. Gradually increase the amount of oat used until you have accustomed the little stomach to taking it as ordinarily prepared for breakfast.

Bread and milk is readily assimilated and easy to prepare. Use the entire bread loaf if you can get it. Place a slice in a saucer and pour over it the warmed milk. Crushing between the tines of a fork does away with chunks and will not make the bread sticky, as crumbling between the fingers is apt to do.

Saving Irons.

Many housekeepers are annoyed by their flatirons becoming rusty from dampness in the cupboard. This may be easily prevented. Before putting the irons away after the ironing is finished rub them with a little warm grease on a piece of soft paper and wrap them in thick brown paper. When they are to be used again dip them into very hot water with a little soda dissolved in it and wipe them dry before putting them over the fire to heat. When taken from the fire for the ironing have some brown paper on the table with a little powdered bath brick on it and rub the iron on this. Have a piece of paraffin tied in a muslin bag; rub this lightly over the iron and then polish it on a soft cloth. This almost takes longer in the telling than the actual work does, but the preparation makes the iron delightfully smooth and easy to use, and consequently one may get over the clothes more quickly. The irons frequently receive very little care, and smoky white clothes too often are spoiled by them. They should always be immaculately clean.—Housekeeper.

A Day in Bed.

To spend a day in bed when one is not ill seems at first mention rather a waste of time, yet there is profit in it for a tired woman. The large majority of women, who must study economy very closely, cannot make a change of climate at will. For them the rest must be secured at home. Every one knows that the sequence of a brief illness is often a great gain in strength. This is because the patient has had the rest afforded by staying for a short period in bed. Just one day every week or every fortnight thus spent by a tired woman, who is only tired, not really ill, will prove very profitable to her. Try it. Let yourself be waited on and a little missed downstairs.

A Young Wife's Duties.

Perhaps there is nothing more important to a young wife or more calculated to make home happy than a proper knowledge of her duties and a due regard for household expenditure. Yet many a young girl entering upon life is wholly unqualified for her duties and has to pick up, as it were, her knowledge instead of exercising it. A thorough knowledge therefore under the influence of the heat and raises it slightly, but the water with which the eggs have been wet prevents its escape, and the glass, no longer resting directly upon the marble, but upon a thin film of water, slides down the incline of the slab.

CAKE SHOP.

A Good Game, With Plenty of Fun, to Play in the House.

Did you ever play the game of "cake shop?" It is a good game to play in the house on a rainy afternoon or in the evening when you have a party of your little friends present. There is plenty of fun in it too.

When some one calls out, "Let's play cake shop!" somebody else is sure to cry, "I'll be buyer!" and to run out of the room at once. Having the door behind her, for the buyer must not know about the cake in the shop until she comes in after it. While she is gone the other children decide what sorts of cake they will represent, one crying "I'll be chocolate!" another "Jelly!" and the rest whatever they choose.

When this is done they form a circle and call in the buyer. She, not knowing which child will represent each sort, perhaps, "I want some jelly cake" and the one in the circle who is "jelly cake" runs from her place and tries to get to a part of the room that has been named the "cake box." If the buyer can catch her, she does so, and "jelly cake" then stands aside until the leader is put out and a new game is formed.

There is often in the "box" remain there, but have the right to run back to the circle at any time. If, on the buyer, one is caught in the act, she at once becomes "buyer."

A Boy's Conscience.

Every boy knows no matter how hasty or wrong headed he may seem, has in his heart a teacher who can always show him the way to do right if he will listen to what it tells him. Where the voice comes from or who gave it power to speak to the boy's heart no one cannot say here. But it is there, and although it may refuse to listen to the voice of his mother or to any outside voice telling him of the right and wrong of his actions, he cannot altogether disregard the still, small voice which is always with him and which sometimes he cannot refuse to hear. Perhaps the voice may be very faint at first, but if we try to listen it will surely come and speak louder and clearer in the heart of every boy who wishes to find it. Never, better way than he has ever known before.

Origin of Turkey.

The original name of turkey was Oocoocoo, by which it was known to the Cherokee Indians, says the Boston Globe. The pilgrim fathers in rounding through the woods in search of Thanksgiving game for their first Thanksgiving spread heard the Oocoocoo calling in the familiar tones of our domesticated fowl, "Turk, turk, turk." These first Yankee huntsmen, mistaking this frightened cry of the bird for its real song, immediately labeled it "turkey," and turkey it is to this day.

This is one explanation of the name turkey. But some will try to think to-day that a bird by any other name would taste as sweet.

Place an inverted glass upon a marble top table that is slightly inclined by putting a couple of blocks under two of the legs. Before doing this the edges of the glass should be thoroughly wet. The glass will then remain motionless on the table whose inclination is but slight.

Now allow the flame of a candle to come against the glass, and the latter

BREVITIES

THE HALL OF FAME.

R. L. Clemens and family have taken a house for the summer in Dublin, N. H., returning to New York in the fall.

Philip Hale, a well known Boston musical critic, formerly was a lawyer. Later he studied music in Berlin and Paris.

The king of Siam, who is a connoisseur of precious stones, has one of the finest collections of jewelry in the world.

Anson Phelps Stokes, Jr., secretary of the Yale corporation, will be absent in Europe during a considerable portion of the next college year.

Paul Charton, who has been appointed law officer of the insular bureau, lives in Omaha and was a classmate of Secretary Taft at Yale. He is a lawyer of excellent reputation.

Wu Ting Fang, former Chinese minister to this country, was responsible for the recent abolition of the custom of death by slicing and the substitution of immediate decapitation.

Without permission from Washington Governor Ferguson cannot go outside of Oklahoma. "There are a good many prisoners in the territory," says the governor, "including old Geronimo and myself."

Mr. Cleveland still serves as consulting counsel in late cases, and his experience in the office of president may be supposed to have given him special qualifications for such advice. His fees in such cases are large.

E. R. Colvin, general manager of the Southern Pacific railroad, rose to his present rank from the bottom, having begun working as a boy at the age of fifteen in the capacity of telegraph operator on the Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Lafayette road.

The keynote of Admiral Rojestvensky's life is work. He was once asked what his favorite pastime was. "Work," replied the admiral, with his customary brevity. "Then what do you consider your least work?" "Eating, I fear," came the response.

Sir Richard Douglas Powell, M. D., who has been elected president of the British Royal College of Physicians, succeeds Sir Dyce Duckworth. He was one of the physicians extraordinary to the queen, and he is now physician extraordinary to the king.

ENGLISH ETCHINGS.

In London the sale of Bibles distances the combined sales of all the popular novels of the day.

There are not enough qualified dentists in Great Britain to meet the demand for them, according to a London medical journal.

There are 80,000 consumptives in London. Eight thousand persons die there every year from it and the same number from other forms of tuberculosis.

As a means of preventing the catching of foreign fishes, it has been suggested in London that the banks resort to the finger print system, at least for checks for large amounts.

The British admiralty has just made its first dental appointment. A dental surgeon has been appointed to the sailors and marines at Portsmouth. He will rank as a civil servant and so will not wear a uniform.

RUSSIAN BRIEFS.

Nearly all the shoes sold in Russia are manufactured by nine firms in Petersburg. It is one of the most prosperous stock companies in the world.

Japan has been subjected to a stern censorship in some continental countries. In Russia those bearing the portrait of the mikado are not allowed.

The crown jewels of Russia comprise 30,000,000 acres belonging to the czar and 305,000,000 farmed by the estates and exempt. The czar employs 27,000 wood police, who cut 13,000,000 tons a year, chiefly for firewood.

JAPANESE JOTTINGS.

Tokyo is a few degrees colder than London in January and fifteen degrees warmer in July.

Japan has two commercial museums in which foreigners are allowed to display goods free of charge.

From letters received from the Church Missionary society from Japan it is seen that the severe trial through which the island empire is passing is finding expression in greater earnestness in the performance of heathen rites.

PLAYS AND PLAYERS.

John Hare has made up his mind to revive next season Mr. Grundy's "An Old Jew," which so excited the wrath of the London critics.

There are rumors, not well substantiated as yet, of a possible coming revival at the Solis theater, in London, of "Diplomacy," with Forbes Robertson, John Hare and Lady Bancroft in the cast.

"John Chilcote, M. P.," the play founded upon Mrs. Thurston's novel, which has just been produced at the London St. James' theatre by George Alexander, seems to have disappointed expectation.

Most of us remember Jennie Bartlett Davis best in the green dandelion and hose of Alan-a-Dale in "Robin Hood." Like most women in such disguise, she did not look the least like a man, but she was comely to see and always refreshing.

"Romeo and Juliet" has had an uninterrupted run of fourteen weeks in Manchester, England, and is now going on a tour through the British provinces. And yet there are wiseacres who maintain that the modern theater goer has not read Shakespeare.

In talk the other day with an American friend in London Irving spoke of another tour in this country as a "good possibility," adding quickly: "For American playgoers I have the kindliest feeling. They have always given me the warmest of welcomes."

Smart Dressers

Copyright 1905 by Hart Schaffner & Marx.

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

STRAW HATS

When the summer sun settles on your head, your comfort demands a Hat of Straw.

"A cool head" cultivates a calm, contented mind.

You can have both by wearing one of our new STRAW HATS.

We think we have every block that's desirable.

The young smart dresser will find his ideal, while the business man will find exactly what he wants for summer comfort.

We've a hat made specially for you.

Come and try it on.

COOL UNDERWEAR

We've Summer Underwear so comfortable that it's cooler to wear it than to go without.

Grand Master Sproule Roasts Lukewarm "Compromisers."

Too Many, He Says, Put Party Before Principle — Messrs. Emmerson, Talbot and Haggart Had to Scorn—Too Many Weak-Kneed People Are Looking for a Compromi e — Fight Only Begun on School Question, Says the Grand Master—Rev. Mr. Coburn's Fierce Arraignment of Papal Principles—Redhot Protestant Speech by the Blind Orator—Notes of the Closing Features of Belleville's Mammoth Demonstration.

Let people say what they like about Belleville's big Twelfth of July demonstration, nobody could say it was dry. There was something doing nearly all the time yesterday, but it was the rain which put a damper on the proceedings. Had there been fine weather, there is no doubt that Belleville's celebration of 1905 would have gone down in history as the best on record. Even as it was, the procession was one which would "take a lot beating," as the Englishmen say, and one's heart could not help but warm to the men who tramped so sturdily through mud and rain. A great deal of credit is due and is hereby accorded to them for the spirit they found only a couple of hundred people there; the rest had gone down town again. By this time the rain had ceased, and it was quickly resolved to go down to the market square and hold the meeting there. No sooner said than done. Arrived on the square, which is the old Market square now, the platform on the east side of the Victoria market was utilized as a stage, and the following celebrities soon mounted it: T. S. Sproule, M. P., Worshipful Grand Master of British North America; Wm. White, Past G. D. of H. N. A.; F. M. Clarke, G.S. of G. E.; Wm. Johnson, P.G.M.O.E.; Jas. Birney, D. G. M. E. O.; Rev. G. White, P.G.C. of E.; Rev. Jas. Coburn, of Toronto; Capt. Hall, Sons of Kingston. Past the Master; Robt. Gordon, of Tweed, G.T. O.E.; Rev. R. N. Leitch, P. G. C. of E.; Jas. Worrell, of Picton, Grand Master of the True Blues; R. S. Holland, of Port Hope, P.G.M. O.E., and many others.

The first speaker called on was the Doxology, led by the band, Rev. Mr. Leitch made a brief but appropriate prayer, invoking God for the Royne and the Reformation, and prayed that the principles of the Orange flower might be upheld.

Mr. F. M. Clarke, of this city, made a few brief remarks, complimenting the members of the Order on their fine appearance in the procession and the excellent weather. He then called on Mr. Sandy Grant, of Tweed, to sing "Auld Lang Syne," which the old man did, and called on Mr. William Johnson for a speech.

ORANGEMEN USED TO WATER, SAID MR. JOHNSON.

Mr. Johnson said he would be brief, as he knew the crowd was anxious to hear Dr. Sproule. It was unfortunate in some respects that the weather was so inclement, but the orangemen were not afraid of water. Their forefathers went through the Boyne water and they could, if need be, stand a little comfort in that. (Laughter). Mr. Johnson concluded by wishing the Sproules success to wear their handkerchiefs and the men to give three hearty cheers for Dr. Sproule, which were given with a will, the big guns of Orangeism being given a splendid reception.

"THE GRAND MASTER'S SPEECH."

Dr. Sproule thanked the audience for their warm reception, which he felt was not for his personality, but owing to his holding the office of Grand Master. He had always heard that Belleville was a loyal community, people on the Bay of Quinte district, but never saw so much water in a crowd before. (Laughter). Speaking of his visit to Belleville in 1890, he said it was the cradle of Orangeism in Canada. It had a historic nest, a stopping ground, and the grand father, the lay of Quinte district had given two grand sons to the Orange order—Sir Mackenzie Bowell and the late Gen. Benjamin. (Cheers). The speaker regretted very much that Sir Mackenzie was unable to be present to-day. He had intended to come, but the second reading of the Autonomy Bills was on in the Senate to-day, and Sir Mackenzie felt that his duty called him to stay in Ottawa and fight for the right. (Cheers). Dr. Sproule said he had received a letter from Sir Mackenzie in relation to the matter, which he would read to them. He then read the letter, as follows:

Ottawa, July 11, 1905.

My Dear Sproule,—

You will have seen by the report of the Senate proceedings that the Autonomy Bills are set down for a second reading on Wednesday, the 12th inst.

The debate, as you know will follow immediately after, and probably last for a day or two after which the Committee stage.

Under the circumstances it will not be possible for me to accompany you to Belleville. Upon this point I know you fully agree with me. As leader of the Opposition I would not, under present circumstances, do for me to be absent during the struggle for Northwest freedom.

Trusting you may have a pleasant and profitable 12th.

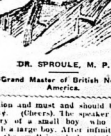

I am, Dear Sir and Brother,

Yours very truly,

MACKENZIE BOWELL.

Thos. S. Sproule, M.P., W. G. M. B.N.A.

The reading of the letter was received with hearty cheers, following which Dr. Sproule congratulated the Orangemen on the parade, which, he said, was a splendid one. He was proud to see so many well dressed and respectable men in it. Over a hundred and fifteen years ago the battle of the Boyne was fought, and since then, every year, celebrations of that event had been held, which was right and proper. Such events were the school books of the nation and must and should be kept alive. (Cheers). The speaker told a story of a small boy who started with a large boy. After infinite trouble the small boy had got the large boy down. Summoning all his pluck he jumped with both feet on him, and fought him up and fight over again. "Oh!" he said the small boy, "I'll not let him up. I had too much trouble to get him down." (Laughter and cheers). So it was with the Orangemen and Popery. Orangemen wished Roman Catholics no harm, but their church must never ride rough shod over Canada, as it did over other people of other countries. (Cheers). Our fathers did their duty nobly, would their sons do the same? He would be sadly mistaken if they did not. (Cheers). Reverting again to the prize of liberty. The speaker claimed that they could say where Rome had held sway, that country was behind the times. France had lately driven out the Jesuits and annulled the concordat. In only two countries, he said, he would say were the Jesuits tolerated—in England and Canada. Only in these two countries had they an asylum to-day. The Jesuits had been interviewed in any country in which they were allowed, and would do the same here. They would use the powers which were being given them in the North-West Territories to further their ends ahead. The Autonomy Bills were a disgrace. The opposition to the school clauses of those Bills the followers of Mr. Bourassa had made the strongest fight ever known in a Canadian Parliament, but had been voted down by a majority of 48. They were also voted down by Roman Catholics alone, which would have, perhaps, been natural, but many prominent Orangemen had voted against them. (Cries of "Shame.") The speaker mentioned Hon. W. H. Emmerson, of Westmoreland, and Peter Talbot, of Strathroy, as Orangemen who had voted for party in preference to principle. Many supposed good. Protestants had also voted against them. The petitions of Orangemen had been received with contemptuous disregard and sneers. The speaker said he wanted his hearers to know this, so that they might know how, in future, to treat the candidates of Laurier. The members for Hastings County, he was glad to say, had done their duty nobly and stood by Mr. Borden manfully. (Cheers). Dr. Sproule said he was not thin-skinned. He had been too long in public life to feel words hurt him, but he could not fail remember how a French-Canadian Liberal newspaper, Le Canada, had called Orangemen "yellow dogs," and he felt indignant when he recollected that 500,000 Orangemen in Canada to-day, good citizens and God-fearing, respectable men, were insulted by that epithet, "yellow dog." The battle over the Autonomy Bills was not over yet, the speaker said; it was only beginning. The gauntlet had been thrown down, and it would be accepted by a free people who had never yet backed out of a fight. (Cheers.) The great aim of the Church of Rome was to secure the education of children that she might get them under her influence. If the children came under the influence of Rome then they would say good-by to Protestant freedom in Canada. The speaker claimed that non-sectarian schools were the best for any country, but the R. C. Church was not satisfied with them. The speaker gave an historic data in regard to separate schools since Confederation, and declared that the Autonomy Bill was the worst bill ever introduced in Parliament. Laurier once thought he would be called provincial rights. To-day he was talking against provincial rights, and trying to throw the iron band of Rome around the schools of the Northwest. The Autonomy Bill, if passed, could not be restricted except by the Imperial Parliament. The Doctor waxed sarcastic at the expense of Laurier in claiming to be a Protestants, who wanted a compromise. He would remind Orangemen that ground to no one under heaven. Not for party. To-day three-quarters of the Dominion of Canada was under the Dominion of the Church of Rome in regard to separate schools, and this was owing to the supineness of Protestants and their desire or compromise.

DR. SPROULE, M. P.,

Grand Master of British North America.

Dr. Sproule claimed that the details of the Autonomy Bills were all arranged before Parliament was called together, and said that Laurier and Fitzpatrick had made a secret deal with the Church of Rome. If Monsignor Sbaretti had been successful in wedding the Manitoba Ministers he would have gone home to Rome in triumph and been made a saint. He would tell Laurier, Dr. Sproule said the Orangemen of Canada had made a spontaneous response to the appeal he had made to them, and had upheld his hands nobly. In conclusion the speaker claimed that there was less much partyism in Canada, too many men who placed party before principle. He urged Orangemen to stand by their order and drop those men who were afraid to speak and vote for their principles. Such a man was Hon. John Haggart, who represented an Orange constituency and yet was not man enough to say a word for the principles of the men he represented. Finally the speaker urged his hearers to stand by the golden links of Orangeism, and to set an example for all the benighted, and show that Orange principles stood for true freedom and true Christianity.

The Doctor was heartily cheered at the conclusion of his speech, and the band played the "Protestant Boys."

A BLIND BUT FIERY ORATOR.

The Chairman then called on Rev. Jas. Coburn, the blind orator, of Toronto, who responded by making a fiery Protestant speech. He said that he would not lie to please either the Pope or the Devil. A leading Roman Catholic, Cardinal Manning, had said that the Pope had the power and right to depose Kings. The Pope himself had said: "In Christ's right I am vested and acknowledge no civil superior. I claim to be the last resort and highest judge upon every that is right and what is wrong." The speaker quoted from the canon law of the Romish Church, which, he said, gave the Pope right to excommunicate, authority without regard to the civil power." Thanks to the Orangemen, this section of the canon law could not be carried out. The speaker claimed that a large percentage of Roman Catholic priests send their children to public schools and by a large trail of evidence proved his statement. He again quoted from the canon law, which, he said, alleged that the Roman Catholic Church had the right to require the state to exterminate any form of religion. How much for what Catholic authorities said of the guards's power, would he would tell them what leading Protestants thought of it. Dr. Wylie, the eminent Scottish historian, said Roman Catholics are subjects of a foreign prince, by whom they are absolutely ruled. Here was what Lord Brougham, William Ewart Gladstone, said: "Rome requires the consent to forfeit his mental and moral freedom." With these statements back him up, the speaker asked if he was to be called a fanatic if he said, which he did say, that, never would he cast a vote to make a Roman Catholic to the Parliaments at either Toronto or Ottawa. The speaker then referred to the school clauses of the Autonomy Bill in unmeasured terms, and said he was no prophet, he was not able to foresee the future, but he believed the time was coming when the school clauses would be smashed. Nothing was settled till it was settled right. He closed with a fervent poetical peroration.

That concluded the speechmaking. The audience sang the National Anthem, led by the band, cheers were given for the King and Dr. Sproule, and the audience dispersed.

Notes of the Day.

Between four and five o'clock the crowds upon the street commenced to thin out, and an hour later thousands were on their homeward journey.

At 6.30 the Madoc train left with upwards of 1000 on board, and the trains going east and west shortly before it surveyed a large number to their homes.

At 7 o'clock the steamers Niagara and Varuna left for various bay ports, and both steamers were filled with passengers. By this time front street seemed deserted, after being thronged all day.

The merchants generally report having had an exceptionally good day. Umbrellas were especially in demand, one firm we heard of disposing of more than 100.

Although there were many thousands of visitors in the city yesterday, the police report that the day was of an exceptionally quiet nature. No disturbance of any moment occurred, and only one arrest was made, a drunken Indian, who was subsequently taken by relatives to his home on the Reserve.

A few cases of pockets being relieved of purses were reported and in one case a good haul was made. Mr. J. W. Seeley, butcher, who resides in Thurlow, had his wallet taken from his trousers pocket. It contained $60 in cash and some papers, which were worth to him $50 more. The affair was reported to the police, but there was no clue as to the thief. A lady also informed the police that her pocket book had been taken, but the loss has not been made public. It was announced that two or three other persons had been relieved of their money, although the police were not notified of the facts.

The carriages in the parade yesterday contained noted men of the order. The Grand Master contained veterans of the Orange society, Bro. Daniel Cerow, 93 years old, for seventy-two years a member of the association, Brother Thomas Wills, Past County Master of Hastings, and member of Benjamin Lodge, 274, for over fifty years, and Bro. Hamilton, of Enterprise Lodge, eighty years old. Past and present Masters of Frontenac-Kingston: Mr. Sandy Grant, County Master of South Hastings; Mr. Jas. Worrell, Picton, Grand Master of the True Blue Association; Mr. H. H. Hetherington, Lindsay, Grand Master of the Prentice Boys Association.

Past and present Masters of S. White, Past Deputy Grand Chaplain, Napanee, Rev. T. Coburn, Deputy Grand Chaplain, Toronto; Mr. Robert Gordon, Grand Treasurer of Ontario East; Col. Allan, Grand Deputy Grand Master of Ontario East.

4th carriage—Rev. R. H. Leitch, Deputy Grand Chaplain; Mr. F. M. Clarke, Grand Secretary of Ontario East; Mr. Wm. Johnson, Past Provincial Grand Master; J. T. Sproule, M.D., Most Worshipful Grand Master of the Orange Association of British America.

The carriages were a subject of favorable comment. They were bedecked with streamers of orange ribbon and orange lilies, the horses were fine and were kept well in hand by experienced drivers.

A run through the business houses found our merchants in gala dress. They had by all odds, in most cases, the best day's business this year.

When that torrent of rain came one enterprising firm sent all its clerks to the door to sell umbrellas, and the stock, not by any means a small one, was cleaned out.

The Grand Master of British America, Dr. Sproule, was busy all morning receiving deputations, and in the afternoon attended to arrangements to the nearest perfection he had ever seen.

He also had a bunch of bouquets for the Provincial Grand Secretary of Ontario East, Bro. F. M. Clarke, and Grand Chaplain Rev. Clarke was the maid behind the gun! Everything went off like arranging for the successful affair, and Chairman Coburn I find him the best Provincial Secretary in the Association that ever he undertakes is done well."

This was the first official visit to Belleville in daylight for many many years. He was charmed with its beauties, the avenues of maples, good roadways, well kept lawns and flowers, and even with spacious grounds around them.

The Grand Master was seen going home to but happier at seeing the sights of the greatest crowd in the city during the past twelve years on the force and the most orderly, and he believes you could not find one arrest, and not a complaint of any disturbance was reached us. There were several of the Belleville men's gentry in town, but they must have arrested for "Orange" quite unfashionable about it he added, "I am glad I believe you could get the like of it in the world, so many thousands, and the police have so little to do."

That the day been fine, it is estimated that at an audience at least six thousand people would have listened to the speeches on the Driving Park.

The Lady True Blues in the procession were the subject of much admiring comment. Threatening weather kept them at home. They came from Trenton and Gananoque.

The handsome banners gained in the procession, bands being present from Deseronto, Madoc, Trenton, Marmora, Kingston, Odessa, Napanee, Picton, Tweed, Napanee and Belleville, besides the massed drummers and fifers who headed their lodges.

To the credit of the Grand Trunk authorities, be it said that the regular fast mail special trains were all on time getting in and leaving, and while the accommodation might have been better had more cars been available, still people expect some crowding on such days.

Orange Demonstration at Renfrew Almost Marred by Calamity.

Renfrew, July 12.—Thousands of people and nearly 30 Orange lodges were here yesterday. Rain commenced just as the procession was formed, and before the last of the nearly two miles of lodges had passed the head of Main street there was a downpour, and shortly after getting back to the park the worst thunderstorm of the season came up.

During its course a bolt of lightning descended a tree and five of the visitors were struck by it. The victims were Samuel Adams and a Mr. New of Ottawa, Peter Phillips, wife and son, of Douglas. They were all rendered unconscious, and remained so for a time, but were resuscitated. A team of horses was knocked flat, and the band of Ottawa Lodge, No. 227, was torn to shreds and part of it embedded in the tree against which it was standing.

A grist and sawmill at the other end of the town was fired, but the blaze was quenched. Speaking in the park was abandoned.

"OLD GLORY" TRAILED IN MUD.

London Has Flag Incident Over Visiting Yankee's Nasty Remark.

London, July 12.—The American flag was torn from its pole at the head of Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 67, of Port Huron, Mich., yesterday by a throng of angry Canadians and trailed in the dust. There had been the best of good-fellowship shown between the Canadian and Canadian Orangemen all day, until an American, his name is not known, suddenly shouted, "To — with Victoria."

"It's only a country for suckers anyway," some one else offered in retort.

Then a crowd gathered. Canadian flags were shaken under American noses and anyone wearing an American emblem immediately became the centre of an excited and argumentative crowd.

The Port Huron lodge marched down the street. At the head flew a replica of Stars and Stripes.

"We will show you!" shouted a Canadian patriot, and he led a rush for the flag. In a moment it was ripped from the street, splattered with mud and marked with the imprint of heels.

The police interfered and restored order.

The Americans show no animosity whatever over the affair. They regard it as an answer to insult such as they themselves would make.

ORANGE HOSTS ELSEWHERE.

Processions Take Hours to Pass Given Points.

Omemee, July 12.—Over 5,000 visitors gathered this evening to witness the parade of 16 lodges yesterday. Speeches were delivered by prominent members of the order.

Watford, July 12.—Nine lodges took part in the celebration of Boyne Victory yesterday, and here were 2,000 visitors in addition.

Meaford, July 12.—The Orange parade passed at 12 o'clock, about 40 lodges took part. William Galbraith, of Deerhurst, was the principal speaker.

Clinton, July 12.—Local clergymen were the chief speakers at the Orange demonstration here yesterday. There were thousands of visitors present.

Kemptville, July 12.—Local people celebrated the Battle of the Boyne here yesterday. Mr. Carey was the principal attraction.

Midland, July 12.—In this town there were over 9,000 people to celebrate the day. There were 29 bands of colors and twelve bands.

St. Catharines, July 12.—Kiwi William's day was celebrated here by the local Orangemen and hundreds from Hamilton and Toronto. The Buffalo men brought the 65th Regiment band to lend along.

Stratford, July 12.—In the afternoon there were speeches in the park by prominent Orangemen, and there were between 2,000 and 3,000 strangers present.

Wiarton, July 12.—This town had its largest parade yesterday. The colors of 21 lodges were displayed in the procession, and there was an immense number of people present.

Smithamton, July 12.—This town saw one of the largest crowds in its history yesterday, brought to witness the Orange parade. Centre Bruce Orangemen marched to Seattle No. 5 hall with a gold-headed cane.

Toronto, July 12.—Despite the heavy downpour of rain, 2,000 Orangemen walked in memory of the Boyne yesterday. The procession took an hour and a quarter to pass the City Hall.

London, July 12.—The 12th of July parade here was over a mile in length, and several new ones were made. Victoria Park is now Orangemen.

Ottawa, July 12.—Eight Carleton lodges, numbering about 2,000 celebrated yesterday at Stittsville. The Pembroke lodges gathered at Mount in the number of about 1,500.

Walkerton, July 12.—Yesterday there were 28 West Lambton and North and South Kent lodges in line.

Caledon East, July 12.—The "Orange Twelfth" was celebrated here with great eclat. There were 21 lodges listed up in the procession.

HOLDS EMPIRE OF THE SEAS.

Ex-Minister Delcasse Explains Why British Alliance Is Desired.

Paris, July 13.—Former Foreign Minister Delcasse, in the course of an interview published by The Gaulois yesterday upon the British and French naval armaments at Brest, was bolder in his views on general policy relative to Great Britain and Germany. He said:

"The policy of nations nowadays is not based on sentiment or antipathy, but upon their material interests. As between Germany and Great Britain the commercial balance shows where our interests lie. Britain is always the purchaser, while Germany buys almost nothing of us and tries to sell us all she can. Moreover it is evident that we could not leave open irritating controversies with Great Britain which might precipitate an armed struggle, for Great Britain holds indisputably the empire of the seas.

"Ever ready we build she builds four or five. It is therefore well to accept these manifest facts and consider the value which British co-operation would give us in certain eventualities. The greatest intrinsic value of such co-operation would be the virtual impossibility that it would place Germany of making war upon us.

"It is to me which it is necessary to command to-day, and the war in the Far East has conclusively demonstrated that."

In conclusion Minister Delcasse was asked for his opinion of France's participating a conference on Morocco, to which he made the following textual response: "To go to a conference is a mistake—and such a mistake——!"

Left 180 Men Dead.

Tangier, July 12.—Mulai Hamed El Torres, the commercial delegate of the Sultan here for foreign affairs, has received information to the effect that Imperial forces have won a victory over the Moorish Pretender near Uzan, 30 miles northeast of Morocco. The Pretender escaped, leaving 180 men dead. The Sultan's troops captured many prisoners.

Railwayman Killed.

Hamilton, July 12.—Mrs. Charles Bristol received a telegram yesterday morning stating that her husband had been killed in Indiana in a railway wreck, caused by a cyclone. Bristol was formerly an engineer on the T. H. & B. here and was well known. He leaves a widow and one child.

River Thames Rising.

London, July 12.—The River Thames is again causing the residents of West London some uneasiness. Since 6 o'clock last evening the stream has risen a foot and a half and it gives every indication of continuing.

Suicides In Police Cell.

Espoo, Finland, July 12.—Mustasi, aged about 55, committed suicide, yesterday morning by hanging himself in the police cell. Deceased had been drinking the last few days, and Tuesday night was arrested. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning he appeared to be quite sober and wanted to get out. He was told he would be let out in the morning. Shortly afterward it took a rope off his bed tent lying in the cell, hitched it to the window and hanged himself. He leaves a widow and large family.

PRINCE OF ORANGE.

Son Was Born to the Princess of Orange on the 12th July, 1905.

London, July 13.—A son was born to the Princess of Wales yesterday. The Prince of Wales is now just turned 40 years of age, and Her Royal Highness is two years his junior. They were married on July 6, 1892, the ceremony then being Princess Victoria Mary ("May") of Teck. Their family now consists of five sons and one daughter, as follows.

Edward, born June 23, 1894.
Albert, born December 14, 1895.
Victoria, born April 25, 1897.
Henry, born March 31, 1900.
George, born December 20, 1902.
John, born July 12, 1905.

Electrocuted In Mid-Air.

Kingston, July 12.—Fireman John Hall had a narrow escape from death Tuesday evening. There was a cross current in the alarm system. Just as Hall fixed it, his hand came in contact with a live wire, which burned through to the bone. The fireman cleared the wire by raising himself up and standing on the ladder. He dropped the top of the pole, fifty feet in all. The hook and ladder wagon came down on a mad gallop, and the firemen effected the rescue of their comrade.

WILL REASSURE JAPAN

Muravieff Has Resigned and Witte to Take His Place.

Peace Party in Russia Wins a Decided Triumph in Effecting Change In Plan[potentiaries—Emperor's Significant Rescript to Birileff's Appointment—Russian Navy to Be Rebuilt —Will Let the Mutineers Go.

St. Petersburg, July 12.—M. Muravieff has resigned his position as chief peace plenipotentiary. It may be regarded as practically certain that he will be replaced by M. Witte, president of the Committee of Ministers, who all along has been considered the Russian statesman pre-eminently qualified to undertake the difficult task of negotiating peace with Japan.

However, though the Emperor, who, on two previous occasions, flatly declined to accept M. Witte, has now bollented his readiness to make the appointment, the commissioners will not be actually signed until Foreign Minister Lamsdorff, who throughout has been M. Witte's warm supporter, has had an audience with the Emperor to-day. To that extent only the matter may be regarded as unsettled, but the feeling certain in Russia, as a prominent diplomat remarked last night, until the Emperor's signature has been affixed.

M. SERGIUS DE WITTE.

Will Inspire Confidence.

The conduct of the negotiations by M. Witte, it is felt by the peace party here, would inspire instant confidence in Japan.

Muravieff's retirement, ostensibly owing to reasons of ill-health, is a reality due to the fact that the Emperor became convinced that the negotiations could be satisfactorily carried if he went to Washington. M. Muravieff, despite his consideration, was frankly recognized his lack of diplomatic training and his want of address in dealing with the questions involved and with equal frankness expressed satisfaction that he had been relieved.

The change in the chief of the plenipotentiaries does not involve any postponement in the setting out of the peace mission for Washington.

To Rebuild the Navy.

The announcement of the appointment of Vice-Admiral Birileff as Minister of Marine in succession to Admiral Avelan, which was asserted this morning, is couple with a highly significant remark, in which it is stated that changes the new Minister not only with the task of rebuilding the navy, but also with that of reforming and reorganizing the whole system. The Emperor is instructed to remedy the faults which have developed under the present system and to remedy the conditions which led to the recent mutinies.

Officers and Men Calmed.

Speaking of the "revolting events in the Black Sea," the Emperor says the officers and men of the fleet equally deserve censure. The officers during events displayed a complete lack of discipline among the crews and neglect of duty on the part of the officers. The Emperor insists on a full and careful inquiry into the mutinies among the sailors of the Black Sea fleet and that the most severe punishment be meted out to the guilty ones.

Will Let Them Go.

Russia has abandoned the idea of trying a court martial the leaders of the men of the battleship Kniaz Potemkine, who mutinied.

COURT MARTIAL FOR KRUGER.

Gen. Stoessel Is Under Arrest at Port Arthur Awaiting Trial.

St. Petersburg, July 13.—The Nashvonian says that Lieut.-General Kruger will leave the service on account of alleged incapacity in connection with the treatment of the capitulation accepted by the mutiny aboard the Kniaz Potemkine and Sissoi. The admiral will probably be court-martialled. At the Admiralty he is known as "the man of the court admiralty."

The Nashvonian prints a report that Lieut-Gen. Stoessel has been placed under arrest at the Pigeon Rocks, in consequence of the revelations made by the commission which has been investigating the defence and the capitulation of Port Arthur, and that the arrest of some dozens of the principal of French admirers of Gen. Stoessel will not be prevented.

In Town.

Sebastopol, July 13.—In pursuance of instructions from the Russian Admiralty the Kniaz Potemkine's crew left this way here, having left Kustenji, Roumania, during the night in tow of the battleship Tchesma.

One of Them.

Vladivostock, July 13.—Capt. Rousplne has left Vladivostock for Washington, where he will participate in the peace negotiations.

BENNETT CAUGHT.

Nabbed by a County Constable at Sapper In Dunn Township.

Dunnville, July 14.—Joseph Bennett, the supposed murderer of Betsy Jacobs, in Brant Indian Reservation, was arrested here last evening.

Chief County Constable Farrel of Cayuga tracked Bennett down and located him yesterday morning at the farm of Watson Murdock, in Dunn Township, with whom he had hired to assist in haying.

Farrell came to Dunnville and, securing the assistance of the local police, who know Bennett, returned and arranged to secure their prisoner when he came in from the hay fields last evening.

Bennett sat down to the supper table with the other men and was seized from behind.

He was not armed and made no resistance, and did not deny his identity.

He will be taken to Brantford this morning.

PRACTICAL FARMERS GRADUATED.

Toronto, July 14.—At the meeting of the Ontario Agricultural College have been suspended. They were implicated in an alleged joke in which Miss W. Powell was injured. They turned the hose on the young woman and in her attempt to escape she fell and was badly hurt.

Jap Troops Want Peace.

Field Marshal Oyama Forced to Appeal to Patriotism

Plague and Cholera is Reported Among Japanese in Manchuria — Capture of Karsavorsk Effected After Exchange of Very Few Shots — Communication Severed Between Newchwang and Harbin and Western Towns.

Shinghai, Manchuria, July 14.—Quiet continues along the front, but the Japanese are still moving in force. The Russian trains move as far as Changtafu. Information from the Japanese base indicates that the rank and file are exceedingly anxious for peace. To counteract this feeling Field Marshal Oyama is continually issuing glowing appeals to the patriotism of his armies.

The Chinese says that decaying corpses buried in shallow graves in frozen ground after the battle of Mukden have created a terrible condition.

Plague and cholera are said to have appeared among the Japanese.

Capture of Karsavorsk.

Tokio, July 14.—An eye-witness of the Japanese capture of Karsavorsk writes that the Russian forts were silenced on July 7, after the exchange of a very few shots. The piers, warehouses and other buildings were set on fire and the conflagration was reflected by the foggy atmosphere, converting the sky into a mass of blood and color. The Japanese army landed amidst the fire, which was fast spreading to the forts. The infantry quickly captured the forts, from the logs of which the bewildered inhabitants were seen fleeing in every direction, carrying what property they could remove. The fire was not subdued for over 48 hours.

Communication Severed.

Shanghai, July 14.—Chinese post-office officials here learned today that communication has been stopped between Newchwang and all towns including Manchurian Court, to and including Harbin.

M. Witte Appointed.

St. Petersburg, July 14.—Emperor Nicholas has signed the appointment of M. Witte, president of the Committee of Ministers, to be chief plenipotentiary representing the Russian Government in the peace negotiations to be opened next month in the United States. appointment clothes M. Witte with plenipotentiary powers. Notification of the designation of M. Witte to head the mission was forwarded to Washington yesterday morning. M. Witte will take passage on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which sails from Cherbourg July 26.

TREPOFF DOOMED TO DIE.

Terrorists Warn Him That He Will Die in His Own Room.

St. Petersburg, July 14.—The resignation of M. Bouligouin as Minister of the interior is expected daily. Gen. Trepoff, the Assistant Minister of the interior, probably will be his successor.

The terrorists have recently renewed their warnings against Gen. Trepoff with ominous persistence. The General is constantly in receipt of letters signed by the executive committee of the fighting organization, informing him that his hour has come. A remarkable feature of all the communications is that the writers take pains to say that no measures will avail of avert his impending doom. At the same time they tell him he need not be afraid to go abroad in the streets. They add:—"Your sentence will be executed in your own room. You will lie in your bed."

The terrorist seem to take pride in issuing a challenge involving a demonstration of their power and resource to penetrate the armour of the police. Moreover, Gen. Trepoff knows enough of their resources and desperateness of the organization to firmly believe the terrorists are able to execute their threat. He makes no concealment of the fact that he expects to be killed, but his nerve is unshaken. He says:—"I will at least die at the post of duty."

Twenty-Four Hanged.

Odessa, July 14.—Twenty-four leaders of the recent disturbance here were hanged yesterday in various prisons. Another batch of 17 will be publicly executed upon the arrival here of Gen. Ignatieff. The battleship Georgi Pobedonosets has arrived here with a fresh crew for the purpose of taking 67 mutineers to debarkcado for trial by court-martial.

Of 202 persons arrested and charged with robbery or incendiarism during the recent riots, 74 were acquitted yesterday owing to lack of evidence and 28 were sentenced to six weeks' imprisonment, the time to include the two weeks which they have already passed in prison.

Killing in Strike Riot.

New York, July 14.—Yesterday Isaac Newman, proprietor of a clothing factory was fatally shot in the back of the hands of a striker and received a fracture of the skull. More than a score were slightly hurt and hundreds were injured in the rioting. A large number of strikers called at the factory and attempted to induce a score or more employes who had continued at work to leave. Newman protested against their action, and a pitched battle with the strikers on one side and Newman and his employes on the other followed.

Welcomed In Paris.

Paris, July 14.—Over 100 British naval officers from the visiting squadron at Brest arrived here at noon yesterday and were met at the Invalides railroad station by representatives of the Ministry of Marine and a large party of French officers. President Loubet will give a reception in honor of the British officers today. The boulevards display many British flags.

Newspaper Man Did It.

London, July 14.—H. H. Fallan, local journalist, was the man who tore the American flag belonging to the Port Huron Orangemen, Wednesday night.

TRYING TO BEAT RECORD.

Special Train Left North Sydney Thursday With Virginian Mail.

North Sydney, N. S., July 14.—The Allan line steamer Virginian arrived off Sydney Harbor at 7.20 o'clock yesterday morning having made the run from Moville in five days, 20 hours, and 25 minutes, being the quickest time on record from mail agent to mail station across the Atlantic. She has 1,247 passengers on board, 1,047 of whom are for Canada, and the rest for the United States. The transfer of mails took place about 14 miles off Sydney, the time occupied being one hour and 45 minutes. After the mails had been transferred, the Virginian proceeded to Montreal with passengers. The special train carrying the mails left Sydney at 10.47 o'clock.

Race Against Train.

The race is now between a special train, with a clear road to Montreal, and the Allan liner, proceeding full steam up the Gulf. The race is to determine the merits of Sydney as a port of call. The Virginian expects to make the trip in thirty hours, but the intercolonial anticipates doing it in less time. The Virginian had 748 bags of mail and 198 bags of parcel post. These include all the Canada mails for this week and those for the Western States. There were no Canadian mails sent by New York this week. The parcel post includes mail matter for China and Japan.

Man of Good Family Suicides.

Toronto, July 14.—Heart broken at his failure to live down his past, and worried out in an attempt to make a livelihood in a country that seemed to offer him nothing but rebuffs, Henry Mervyn Martin, an Englishman of excellent family, committed suicide by shooting near Elgin Park on Monday night. Martin's story, as well as it can be gain from the letters found in his pocket, has been a pathetic one. He was a man of about 35 years of age, and had but recently come to Toronto. His reformation followed the fact he has been the nephew of the late Sir Martin Hedbourg, and a grandson of the late Capt. Marryat, R. N. From 1898 until 1901 he was connected with The London Globe.

Conscription Impossible.

London, July 14.—In the House of Commons last night, Premier Balfour refused in the speech of Field Marshal Lord Roberts, and said we could never be led to believe that conscription could be successfully adopted in England. He maintained that the Government's scheme of army reform was the best solution of the problem.

Rev. Dr. Young Is Dead.

Winnipeg, July 14.—News was received this morning of the death of Rev. Dr. Young, Bishop of Athabasca, at Southworth, England.

Rt. Rev. Richard Young, D. C. L., D. D., was born in Lincolnshire in 1843 and was ordained in 1866. He was incumbent of St. Andrew's parish, Manitoba, from 1875 to 1884 and Bishop of Athabasca from 1884 until 1903.

Something Like Grit Tactics in North Hastings in Bygone Days.

The following from the Winnipeg Telegram would remind one somewhat of the doings in North Hastings in days gone by, when Mr. Byron O. Ketcl, for some time the stock candidate of the Grit party in this district, carried thing with a high hand and did pretty much as he pleased "out north," knowing that the Government for which he was a worker would back up and shield him. The Telegram says:

"The startling revelations as to the manner in which Liberal workers caused certain foreign immigrants to make false affidavits under the Naturalization Act, for the purpose of entitling them to register, casts a lurid light over the artificial agitation organized by the local organ in regard to the recent Provincial registration. During the sittings of the Court of Revision, some curious circumstances were brought to the attention of Judge Walker, and it is also stated in the report of this Judge that the Attorney-General has caused information to be laid against one J. J. Goodman, at that time an official in the office of the Dominion Immigration Department, but since then promoted to the Customs.

"The actions complained of appear to have been as follows: The Dominion Government went out of its way to appoint some of its agents as commissioners to take oaths under the Naturalization Act, among those being the man Goodman. Under that Act, three years residence in Canada is required before an alien can become a British subject. It seems that Dominion agents enjoled a party of Austrians, who had been but nine months in the Dominion, to make affidavits to the effect that they were entitled to their naturalization papers, and these in this specific case were then attested by Goodman and were presented at the County Court, the naturalization papers being then issued in the ordinary way. On the strength of these naturalization papers these men in question recited their claim to register.

"A letter which we publish in another column signed by Dr. J. A. Mc-Arthur, President of the Liberal Association, conclusively proves the connection of the local Liberal machine with the scheme. In this letter the prospective voters are told that before obtaining his naturalization certificate and get his name placed on the list at one and the same time he appears personally in the Court of Revision. Further comment is unnecessary.

"Under the Dominion Naturalization act one must have a residence in Canada of three years is required before naturalization papers can be issued. Many earnest political students are of the opinion that that period is too short, for not only does it not give sufficient time for assimilation and for the proper dissemination of Anglo-Saxon ideals among the foreign immigrants, but it is also calculated to set too light a value on naturalization, and the responsibility attaching to the voter. In Great Britain, the period of probation is five years, while the same time must elapse in the United States before an alien can become a citizen. Apparently the Liberal machine is endeavoring to foist on to the voters' lists men who cannot speak a word of English, but who can be relied upon to cast their ballots for its nominee. It is notorious that officials employed by the Department of the Interior are constantly at work, proselytizing in the Liberal interest among foreign immigrants. Apparently that work has not been considered sufficiently expeditious and the result has been this barefaced attempt to put men on the voters' lists who, in the ordinary course, would have no vote for two years or more. The registration booths were evidently blocked by men who had no right to be there.

"There is every reason to believe that the cases now under judicial examination, and which were discovered by accident, are by no means isolated, and that hundreds of unqualified names have been put on the lists throughout the Province. A searching investigation will be demanded by the people of Manitoba, irrespective of their party leanings. The Provincial Attorney-General's Department may be relied on to probe this outrageous attempt to the bottom."

Congratulating to the boys and girls who have passed their entrance exams. And our sympathy to those who didn't pass, they'll have another chance next year.

Some misunderstanding still appears to exist in regard to the excursion rates for the Old Boys' Reunion. In reply to enquiries it was stated in last night's paper that no excursion tickets will be sold to outside points but their return ticket for this city to attend the Reunion. That was correct, and answered the question of people who asked, "Do our friends, in order to obtain the cheap rates, need a certificate from anyone in Belleville showing that they are bona fide Belleville old boys or girls? Again it may be stated that such a certificate is not needed. Anyone can buy a single class ticket to Belleville for the Reunion, but, in order to obtain the excursion rate, he must obtain from the party who sells him the ticket a certificate showing that the said ticket was purchased for the express purpose of attending the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion. Those certificates then, must be presented to Mr Arthur McIlmiss, the this city, who will endorse them as they come in, and the said certificates, providing more than 300 of them are found, will entitle the holders to whatever reduction in rates are granted by the railroads issuing them, plus 25 cents for validating certificate. The point to all this is: People buying tickets to Belleville for the Reunion need no credentials to prove their bona fides at the purchasing end, but they must obtain a certificate from the ticket seller to prove their bona fides at this end. If you have friends coming write them and tell them this. The railroads all say they will make no reduction in the case of people who do not obtain the ticket seller's certificate spoken of.

KINGSTON PAPER PRAISES EVERYTHING CONNECTED WITH TWELFTH OF JULY CELEBRATION.

Kingston Whig: In spite of the heavy downpour of rain, the celebration on Wednesday, at Bellevile, participated in by the local Orangemen, was a grand success. The procession was the largest ever seen in that city, and the visitors extended the members thereof on any previous occasion. And not only that, but in respectable and orderly gathering did honor to the glorious Twelfth. Not a single person, it is said, either with or without regalia, was to be seen on the streets under the influence of liquor. In the parade were some still dozen brass bands, and about five hundred and seven lodges, each lodge being represented by individuals of any brass band. It took fifty-five minutes for those in line to pass a given point, and they did get march in long, strung-out order either.

Just when the procession began to move, the rain came down in torrents, but failed to, in any way, cool the ardour of the sons of Erin. The lodges marched from down town to the market, to the tune of music. When the heads arrived there, it was discovered that the rear of the procession had decided to call off the speech-making. The order was to be "fall back to shelter and the celebration seemed at an end. However, on reaching the market it began once more, the weather had ceased smashed on it and the procession halted and stirred up the enthusiasm, or shall we say drooping spirits, of the show ardour the weather man had put a damper on.

Capt. Gaskin was to speak at the celebration, as well, had not the rain prevented. The fraternal brother, however, refused to let him go without a few words and in response to cries for "Gaskin," he mounted the platform and—hoped that arrangements are to be made for the capture to visit Belleville again in the near future, when he will be given his address in full, so keen are his lay of Quinte friends to hear his words.

The local lodge, accompanied by the fife and drum band, took 425 people out of Kingston to Belleville on the steamer America at seven o'clock yesterday morning. At Stella some 125 more were taken on. Belleville was reached before one o'clock, and the Kingstonians took part in the parade and celebration. Returning the steamer left at twenty minutes past six and reached here again shortly after half past twelve.

THREE MONTHS IN JAIL.

WILLIAM HENDERSON, OF STOCO, PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGE OF THEFT — MAGISTRATES IMPOSE A SENTENCE OF THREE MONTHS IN JAIL.

Tweed News: Wm. Henderson, of Stoco, was up before Magistrates Newton and McIlmoyle on Friday afternoon last to answer to a charge of theft of grain on Saturday, June 24, from the barrels of Geo. Cassidy and Phillips Parks, two patrons of the hog pens of the Stoco cheese factory. The information was sworn out by Harry Chapman, of Head. The case was to have been heard on Thursday afternoon, but as Mr. Henderson did not put in an appearance it was laid over until the following day. Mr. Henderson, it appears, notified a number of the witnesses that a meeting of the directors of the factory had been held, that the matter had been settled and that their presence would not be required. A warrant was therefore issued for his arrest, but as he guaranteed to appear on Friday afternoon the warrant was not executed. When the charge was read Mr. Henderson was asked if he was guilty or not guilty. "Guilty," he replied; "what's the use of saying anything else? They'd swear me into it. They'll swear a hole through a shanker." As the information did not give any idea of the value of the grain stolen, Harry Chapman was sworn. He testified that the amount of grain taken was a six-quart pail from each barrel. The only penalty provided by the statutes for such a crime is imprisonment, and the magistrates, after considering the case, imposed a sentence of three months in jail at hard labor.

Mr. Henderson was placed in the lockup and taken to Belleville the following morning. He has since, through his solicitors, Messrs. Willa & Wright, appealed to the General Sessions against the sentence and was yesterday allowed his liberty on bail.

A YOUTHFUL WANDERER.

TRAVELLED OUT TO THE COAST BUT NOW WANTS TO GO HOME.

Toronto Globe: Gordon Bayle is only fourteen years of age, but has seen a good deal of the world for one so young. He left his home in Belleville some weeks ago, and since his departure he is said to have travelled as far as the coast. He is a fine, sturdy little chap, and says that in his wanderings conductors sometimes helped him along. He has, however, seen enough of the world for the present, and is willing to go back home. At the Children's Court yesterday morning, when he was charged with vagrancy, he was remanded to the Shelter, where his parents to be communicated with.

We Want More Workmen—

Painters and Paperhangers

but we must have good men.

It will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen several times larger than any other similar house in this city, we are determined to keep our work equal to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and rebuilt Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

Our decorative and painting department is certainly booming. On Monday, 20th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the West Bellevill Methodist Church, and we will do it right. You watch us and we will prove every remark made.

We have other churches to do soon—number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

A Great Game, This.

Neither the Mullane-Gumbert nor the Waddell-Young battle can claim the honor of being the longest one ever played." Almost a year before the Cincinnati tie, Fargo and Grand Forks, in North Dakota, had gone out twenty-five innings to a nothing nothing tie, with only twenty-six hits in a total of 191 turns at bat, and with only eleven but of 220 fielding chances so refused, one of which was a bungle by a bushel-basket boy. Now here's one. This remarkable game might have gone thirty rounds had not Umpire Walker called it by reason of the teams catch a train. It was seen by what for that region was a large crowd, and excitement was at fever heat from the first to the last. One of the most remarkable feature, of course, was that not a single man got around in all those twenty-five innings. Even in interest, doubtless, were the ten double plays that blockened the diamond dustine. Thirty-one men were left on the bases. Only three balls were used in the whole game, for the umpire breaking the seals on all three," said the baseball description published at that time.

The twenty-five inning tie was played on July 18, 1891. Rayner pitched for Fargo and Gibbs handled the hide for Grand Forks. Only once did a Fargo team appears to have become dissatisfied with the work of the umpire, baseman because that luckless wight committed one error. Anyway he called Carman in from right to cover the getaway bag and sent Lobo from the bench to right. No man made more than two clips, which was pretty good for that day. Fargo had the second baseman took advantage of thirty-three chances in a third base man of twenty-one and the shortstop of twenty. Twenty-five Fargo batsmen struck out. How many Grand Forks leaned lifters did the same be not stated, for the score showing to the swap in positions between Fargo's first baseman and right fielder. Forty-five outs went to the credit of the backstops, thirty-seven of which were strike-outs. Nineteen, counting both teams, made two hits or more. Four batters didn't rap safely even once.

An Umpire Who Knew His Business.

Buffalo, July 13. — In the second innings of the game between Buffalo at Olympic Park between Buffalo and Jersey City, with the score 1 to 1 Umpire Hassett called a strike on Shortstop Nattress of the Buffalo nines. Nattress made imperticent remark and the umpire promptly ordered him off the field. Nattress retorted by grasping the umpire's mask, pulled it forward and let it snap back on the umpire's face. The umpire tore off his mask and protester, and made for the player. The members of the Buffalo team then jumped into the row, and the umpire went down in the crowd. Someone either kicked him or smashed him in the head, for he was bleeding profusely when he arose.

The manager of the Buffalo Club ordered the police to remove the umpire from the grounds, which was done, and then beckoned Nattress to the players' bench.

There was a hubbub of argument over the proposal to continue the game with two players as umpires. Jersey City would not play with Nattress in the field, so he had been removed for cause by the official umpire. Stallings insisted that Nattress would play. While the argument was at its height, back came Umpire Hassett, with the blood washed from his face. He walked to the home plate, swept it clean, and called, "Come on, boys, get busy; play ball."

The umpire was ordering his protector when he noticed Nattress on the bench.

"I told you to get out of the game," he cried, and motioned to the player to remove to the clubhouse. Manager Stallings again ordered the player into the dugout.

Both teams swarmed up to the umpire, the Jersey City men urging him to stick out for the rights and the Buffalo players threatening violence. The police forced through the mass and surrounded the umpire, so that there would be no further rowdyism before the spectators, many of whom were Elks and their women friends, visitors to the city. The umpire was being forced to the exit, when he took down the flag. He called the game forfeited to Jersey City by a score of 9 to 0.

That hit Manager Stallings and the Buffalo players all of a heap. They ran to the clubhouse with drastic action. Of course, with the game called in the third innings, everybody would demand entrance money back, and that the Buffalo management went right where it lived, for there were 4,000 paid admissions at least.

There was a hitch to it, however, and until after 6 o'clock the box office was closed to the hard money.

The crowd were, in a large proportion, strangers from Canada, and they were disgusted with the Buffalo team and its manager. The men expressed their disgust when they applauded the umpire for the stand he had taken.

The officers elected were: President, C. Wilmot; Secretary, Wm. Carsew, Belleville, who also occupy the same offices in the Eastern Ontario Trotting Association.

SPORTING NOTES.

Detroit Exchange: Odd Nero, who is alleged to have fiddled while Rome burned, has at last a rival. In the eleventh inning of to-day's thirteenth game with the Saint Louis Standard, with that commanding gesture which is a mixture of baseball umpires and political spellbinders, raised his hand to command silence. When silence obtained he announced: "Left on Reed in the stand! He's wanted at home, as his house is burning." Reed was located, and replied: "Let her burn, I couldn't get there in time, anyhow." He got there, though.

Messrs. J. H. Mills, S. W. Vermilyea and H. F. Ketchenon went to Stanlings to-day on a fishing excursion.

JEKYLL AND HYDE CASE IN PHILADELPHIA.

HEAD OF AN OLD ENGLISH FAMILY SAID TO HAVE INDULGED IN WHOLESALE ARSON.

Philadelphia, July 14.—John Wesley Priestley, head of an old Philadelphia family which for half a century has been known throughout the country on account of its connection with the textile industry, is in a Camden, N. J., jail, said to have been hiding for years a secret worthy of Robert Hyde existence. Priestley is accused of having supported his family in luxurious style on the proceeds of money obtained through burning properties which previously had been insured, and to have perpetrated frauds on the part of the corporations with which he connection with the death of his brother.

Priestley's means of support have been a mystery for a number of years. Though possessed of large interests of the old Priestley family were wanting, and the head of the corporations with which would bring him in an income sufficient to live as family traditions dictated, he continued to spend money lavishly.

He maintained an expensive establishment in a fashionable suburb. But so old and respected was the Priestley name, that, despite apparent incongruity, no suspicion attached to the man head to-day.

The specific charge on which Priestley is held is that he set fire to the woolen mill of George Shimer & Co., in Camden, on June 5. It is alleged he logged it that he did so to permit a settlement of insurance to be reached. Through insurance the amount of the firm's indebtedness to Priestley, the creditor accused of having done this is a very wealthy woollen man.

The Shimer firm has the support, not incident in the host of revelations that have come to light since the arrest of Priestley. The Fire Underwriters' Association, of which Charles Heebner is Prosecutor Lloyd, has a list of seven manufacturing concerns destroyed by fire but which Priestley had an interest, all of which were supposedly burned, insurance being collected.

LIVING ON $1.27 A WEEK.

EASY FOR TWO YOUNG MEN AT WABASH COLLEGE.

Can a man subsist on $1.27 worth of food per week and retain his full vigor and efficiency? Two young students have tried to ascertain just how little a person requires to keep in a healthy condition and have succeeded. Facts adduced reveal many of our most glaring food faults. They tend to show that the most nutritious foods, such as meat, eggs, bread, butter and cheapest, while many of the luxuries that are considered necessities are nothing or strength-giving elements are the most costly.

Hugh Gifford and A. C. Payne two lads who had to "work their way" through Wabash College, Crawfordville, Indiana, solved this question in a practical way. They made up for adopting a cheap but nutritious diet but from into by-paths of dietetic research. They discarded most entirely, using pecan nuts which they purchased by the bushel at a cost of 25c a pound. They also avoided white flour products, using instead that of whole wheat foods, rolled oats, milk, oysters, vegetables, eggs and fruit. They found and A. C. Payne for two lads who had to "work their way" through Wabash College, Crawfordville, Indiana, solved this question in a practical way. They made up for adopting a cheap but nutritious diet fed them

TIMELY TOPICS.

YOU BET, HE WILL!

In almost ev'ry business place
It quickly can be gleaned
The slender clerk with pallid face,
Who looks like a dyspeptic case,
Is called the Weak Air Fiend.

It matters not how cold it be,
This chap is 'cross quite clear,
Will say: "It really seems to me
Those windows should be up, b'goy;
It's awful warm in here."

And if you dig to warm your toes,
And rub such frost-bit ear,
This slender fellow he just goes
And lets in air until you're frozen,
And says: "It's warm in here."

And when he dies and goes to Hades,
This Fresh Air Fiend so queer,
To Satan he will boldly yell,
"Say, Sate, let's raise that lid a spell,
It's too dumned warm in here."

BEING A DOCTOR.

An American woman asked Conan Doyle one day why he had given up the practice of medicine.

"Because the work was too hard," Doyle answered.

"Oh, it can't be hard to be a doctor," said the woman.

"It is both hard and unpleasant. And for private life," said the novelist, "I'll tell you about my first case.

"My first case came to me in the middle of the night. It was January, and a cold rain was falling. The jangle of the doorbell awoke me from a sound sleep, and, shivering and yawning, I put my head out of the window and said, 'Who's there?'

"'Doctor,'" said a voice, "can you come to Peter Smith's house at once?'

"'What's the trouble?' I asked.

"Smith's youngest girl has took a dose of laudanum in mistake for peppermint, and we're afraid she'll die.'

"'And right! I'll come,' said I.

"I dressed, and I jammed three rubies through the cold and the rain to Smith's. Twice, on the way, I fell on the icy pavement, and once my hat blew off, and in the darkness I was nearly lost a hour finding it.

"Finally, though, I reached Smith's. But the house was dark—shutters all closed—not a light. I rang the bell. No answer.

"But at last a head stuck itself gingerly out of a third story window.

"'Is you Dr. Doyle?' it said.

"'Yes,' said I. 'Let me in.'

"'Oh, no need to come in, doctor,' said the head. 'The child's all right now. Sleeping very quiet.'

"'But how much laudanum did you give it?' said I.

"'Only two drops doctor, not enough to hurt a cat. I guess I'd better take my head in now. The night air is cold. Good-night. Sorry to have troubled you.'

"I buttoned up my coat and turned homeward, trying to best I could to stifle my mortification and anger. But suddenly the window was raised again, and the same voice cried;

"'Doctor! Say, doctor! Hi!'

"I hurried back. I thought the child had suddenly taken a turn for the worse. 'Well, what do you want?' I said.

"The voice made answer;

"'Ye won't charge nothin' for this visit, will ye?'

FRENCH PAINTINGS FOR FAIR.

President McNaught Makes Good Use of Visit to Paris.

Paris, July 14.—(C. A. P.)—The Paris Council received the Canadians yesterday afternoon, when speeches were made by three councillors. All spoke in French.

Mr. Wilkins of Montreal replied in French. He reviewed the tour and was glad it ended at Paris, a visit most appreciated and profitable.

Though the council was in session it rose to receive the Canadians. A banquet was given by the Chamber of Commerce, and the latter presided. George is invited to occupy President Loubet's box at the review of the troops to-day.

The foreign Minister of Fine Arts, after an interview with Mr. McNaught, promised to send five of the finest paintings in the Louvre Exhibition to Canada.

Moran of the Lady Letty

Partitions showed but their abutments above the horizon. The schooner was standing well out from shore, even between the track of the coasters and passenger steamers, to escape the glare from the northern sky. The sun was setting royally, and the floor of the ocean shimmered like mosaic. The sea had gone down and the fury of the bar was a thing forgotten. It was perceptibly warmer.

On board, the two watches mingled forward, smoking pipes and playing a game that looked like checkers. Three of them were washing down the decks with bitter enemas. For the first time since he had come on board Wilbur heard the sound of their voices.

The evening was magnificent. Never to Wilbur's eyes had the Pacific appeared so vast, so radiant, so divinely beautiful. A star or two burned slowly through that part of the sky where the pink began to fade into the blue. Charlie went forward and set the side lights—red on the port quarter, green on the starboard. As he passed Wilbur, who was leaning over the rail and watching the phosphorus flashing just under the surface, he said:

"Hey, you go tukee-talk one piecey boss, savvy boss—chin chin."

Wilbur went aft and came up on the poop, where Kitchell stood at the wheel, smoking an inverted clay pipe.

"Now, see," began Kitchell, "I notch" by low water on the 'Golden Gate' to you a reel favor, do you twig? I'm goin' to allow you to berth aft in the cabin, 'long with Charlie, an', the sides, you can make free of my quarter deck. I guess you'll find it's the best ways of sailer men just yet, but you can lay it to that those two are rest considerable rough. I ain't a 'long head, like mee dear friend Jim. You ain't no water front swine; I can guess that right off the bat. Nothin' offen you. You're a swell, that's what you are, an' your finest line is the kind for a feller a bit. But mind, now, you get gay once, sonny, or try to flimflam me, or forget that I'm the boss of the bath tub, an' strike me blind, I'll cut you open, an' throw you to the boat, see? Now, then, here's the game: You work this boat 'long with the coolies an' take your regular watch chalk, an' I'll teach you navigation an' make this cruise as easy as how-do-you-do. You don't owe me a thing—not till yr' boom come throo yr' hide."

"I've no claims in the matter," said Wilbur. "I've got to make the best of a bad situation."

"I reckoned as how you had brains," muttered the captain.

"But there's one thing," continued Wilbur, "if I'm to have my head a little, as you say, you'll find we can get along far more easily if you put me to work about this whole business. Why was I brought aboard, why are there only Chinese on board, where are we going, what are we going to do, and how are we going to be gone?"

Kitchell turned the side and then sucked the nicotine from his moustache.

"Well," he said, after a while, "I guess it's like this, son: This ship belongs to one of the Chinese trading companies of San Francisco. I guess he is one of the shareholders in the business. We go down here twice a year off Cape Saint Lucas, Lower California, an' fish for blue sharks, or white, if we kin ketch 'em. We do the livers of these cod liver oil, savvy? An' it pays like a nitrate bed. I count in because it's a common boat—regulation—that only can take a boat out of Frisco."

"And how do I come in?" asked Wilbur.

"Mee dear friend Jim put a knockme-out down in Frisco, an' shanghaied tail. It's a cayuse filled with a drug. You was shanghaied, see," said the captain blandly.

• • • • • •

About an hour later Wilbur turned in. Kitchell showed him his bunk with its "donkey's breakfast" and single ill smelling blanket. It was located under the companionway that led down into the cabin. Kitchell bunked on one side, Charlie on the other. A backed deal table, covered with oilcloth and bound in brass, a swinging lamp, two chairs, a rack of books, a chest or two and a flaring picture cut from the advertisement of a "fashion" in the room's investory in the matter of furniture and decoration.

Wilbur sat on the edge of his bunk before undressing, reviewing the extraordinary events of the day. For a moment he was aware of a movement in one of the other two bunks and presently Charlie Ivins's head lifted on his side and holding in the dame of an almond like eye. Charlie Ivins was brown and sticky stuff boiled and slizzled. He transferred the stuff to the bowl of a huge pipe and drew on it noisily once or twice. In another moment he had sunk back in his bunk in nearly senseless, but with a long breath of an almost blissful contentment.

"Head!" muttered Wilbur, with profound disgust.

He threw off his oilskin coat and felt in the pocket of his waistcoat, which he had retained when he had changed his clothes in the fo'c'sle for his watch. He drew it out. It was just 6 o'clock. All at once an idea occurred to him. He fumbled in another pocket for his watch and brought out one of his calling cards.

For a moment Wilbur remained motionless, seated on the bunk ledge, smiling grimly, while his glance wandered over to the sordid cabin of the Bertha Milliner and the opium drugged cooly sprawled on the "donkey's breakfast" and over to the card in his hand on which a few hours ago he had written:

"First waltz—Jo."

CHAPTER III

ANOTHER day passed, then two. Before Wilbur knew it he had settled himself to his new life upon the schooner. Each morning to the realization that he was positively enjoying himself. Daily the weather grew warmer. The fifth day out from San Francisco it was actually hot. The sea was smooth as the in Bertha Milliner's deck seams; the masts sweated resin. The Chinamen went about in slacks wearing but their jeans and bloomers. Kitchell had long since abandoned his coat and vest. Wilbur's clothing became intolerable, and he was at last constrained to trade his pocketful of "Jacks" for a suit of jeans and wicker sandals such as the coolies wore, and odd enough he looked in them.

The captain instructed him in steering and even in navigation, but when the use of the sextant and how to take an observation in the fake short and near coasting of the schooner. Furthermore, he showed him how to read the log and in the manner of keeping the dead reckoning.

During most of the watches Wilbur was engaged in painting the deck of the cabin, floor panels, lintels and the low scuttles in the waist of the vessel. In the middle of the first week out, when the Bertha Milliner was in the latitude of Point Concepcion, the whole of the crew, men, under Kitchell's direction, rattled down the fore rigging and affixed the crow's nest more firmly. That same afternoon during Charlie's watch below a distance was swept up into the crow's nest, and from that time on there was always a lookout stationed there the masthead.

More than once Wilbur looked around him at the empty ocean and laughed to the ocean floor, wondering at the necessity of the lookout, and finally expressed his curiosity to Kitchell. The captain had by now taken not a little to Wilbur, at first for the sake of a white man's company and then because he began to place a certain vague reliance upon Wilbur's judgment. Kitchell had remained as how he had brains.

"Well, you see, son," Kitchell had explained to Wilbur, "considerable of us after shark, live oil, an' so we are, but also we are on any lay that turns up. I'm ready for some straw for wrecking to barratry. Strike me, if I haven't known a schooner to be burned for her insurance. There's regular trade, son, to be done in ships, an' then again there's the chance of a derelict. Look! The ocean's rich with pickin's. You just watch the million acres or so of the day-bree and refuse of a big city? How about an ocean's day-bree? Best close watch there is, son. It ain't as fur a lookout, jemmee tell you, son, cept your eye out yup." And he added, with a sudden fit of caution: "Keithie, hey? So it looks, but lemmee tell you, son, there's no one aloud on board of the hull of dirt where you're likely to run up afoul of so many things—unexpected-like—as here. Why, a whacker! I cleare'd long lay to this here pree-cept. 'A million to one on the unexpected.'"

The next day fell almost dead calm. The hale, lusty lunged nor'wester that had been blowing them from the Golden Gate had lapsed to a zephyr. The schooner rolled lazily southward with the steady southerly undercurrent of the granite ox. At noon, just after dinner, a few cat's paws curdled the milky lids of the ocean's face. The sun reflected from the glass of the barometer, but the mercury began to talk beneath the sun-spots. It was very hot. The sun spun silently like a spinning brass discus over the mainmast. On the fo'c'sle deck the Chinamen were asleep or smoking opium. It was Charlie's watch. Kitchell dozed in his bunk with his pipe still alight in the bowl. The stillness was profound. It was the stillness of the summer sea at high noon.

The lookout in the crow's nest broke the quiet.

"Ship, ho, ay-hah!" he cried, leaning from the barrel and calling through an open hatch in the deck, "ship, ahoy, ay, many kettle, topside watch! Ay-yah, all same bottle!"

"Hello, hello!" called the captain, rolling from his hammock. "Turtle? Where away?"

"I tinkum boat quillish mile, medbee, four piece bottle all same wrekkie boat."

"Turtle, hey? Down yr' wheel, Jim; haul yr' bib to wind'ward," he commanded the man at the wheel; then to the lookout forward: "Get the dory overboard. Bee, Charlie and yee, Wing, tumble in. Wake up now and see you stay so."

The dory was swung over the side, and the men dropped into her and took their places at the oars. "Give way," cried the captain, settling himself in the bow, "an' I'll put a pin his hand. "Hey, Jim!" he shouted to the lookout above. "Hey, lay one course for us, an'." The lookout nodded, the oars fell, and the dory shot forward in the direction indicated by the lookout.

"Kin you row, son?" asked Kitchell, with sudden suspicion. Wilbur smiled. "You an' Charlie, you'll oblige to ship their oars and give me a pair." The captain crossed the stern sheets.

"Now, what," he said grimly—"now, what do you think you're going to do, son?"

"I'm going to show you the Bob Stroke of Oxford is one to beat 'em," he answered Wilbur.

Kitchell gazed doubtfully at the first few strokes, then with growing interest watched the tremendous reach, the powerful "drive" and the swing, the easy catch and the perfect recover. The dory shot through the water like a gasoline launch, and between strokes there was the least possible diminishing of speed.

"I'm a bit out of form just now," remarked Wilbur, "and I'm used to the sliding seat, but I mean still do."

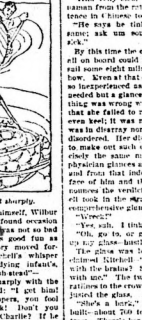

Kitchell glanced at the human machine that rose to No. 5 in the first boat and then at the water blazing from the dory's bows. He spat over the bow and sucked the alcohol from his mustache thoughtfully.

"I reo-narked," he observed, "as how you had brains, son."

A few minutes later the captain, who was standing in the dory's bow and alternately conning the ocean's surface and looking back to the Chinaman's direction, lifted a hand. "Easy, all," he commanded. Silence fell upon the water, and he gestured with one free hand. Looking out over the bow from his seat on the gun'l, Wilbur could make out a round greenish mass like a patch of floating seaweed not under the surface some sixty yards ahead.

"Easy, ah-board," whispered the captain under his elbow. "Go ahead, port. Ee-easy all! Steady! Steady!"

The dory lost its way, under the intensity of a little drama—a fight between

He lunged forward sharply.

mid-ocean. In spite of himself, Wilbur became interested. He found occasion to observe that the life was not so bad after all. This was as good fun as stalking deer. The dory moved forward by inches. Kitchell's whisper was as plain as if using infantry. "Steady all, a-stroke, ah-steady!"

He lunged forward sharply with the gaff and shouted aloud: "I got him! Grab loft his tail flippers, you fool make-yeah tail quick! Don't you forgo! Got him there, Charlie? If he gets away, you swine, I'll rip yr' open with the gaff! Have now—have now there—there—son, stand clear his slip—easy, easy! Here's a whacker! I thought he was going to get away. Saw me just as I swung the gaff an' landed him."

Over the side, bundled without ceremony into the boat, cawing, thrashing, clattered and bumped like the exhaust of a donkey engine, tumbled the great green turtle, his wet green shield of shell three feet long. Side to side the gaff grimly transfixed in his body just under the fore flipper. Kitchell under his shell protruded his snakelike head and neck, withered like that of an old man. Every few moments he bent from side to side, the jaws snapping like a trap set for a rabbit. Kitchell, his oil thrust him away with a paddle. The turtle craned his neck and, catching a bit of the wood in his jaw, bit it in two in a single grip.

"I tol' you so—I tol' you to stand clear, sangrey! Now, you'll have your abin now, eh? Hello! What's that?"

Plainly enough, on the surface a prolonged bellowing from the schooner. Kitchell stood up in the dory, shading his eyes with one hand.

"What's bitin' 'em now?" he muttered, with the uneasiness of a captain away from his ship. "Oughta left Charlie on board, or you, son. Who's aboard that yellin'? I can't make out."

"Up in the crow's nest," exclaimed Wilbur. "It's Jim. See; he's waving his arms."

"Well, whadux he wave his blasted arms for?" growled Kitchell, angry because something was going forward he did not understand.

"There, he's shouting again. Listen—I can't make out what he's yelling."

"He'll yell to a different pipe when I get my grip of him. I'll twist the head of that swab till he'll have to walk back'ard to see where he's goin'. Whadus be wave bit'n'da 'or'—what be us will be a-ship-loo fore 'ee?' What's him say, Charlie?"

"Him keep sing, no can tell. Mebbee him have got him hawk chop-chop."

"Well see. Oars out, neow; give way. Now, son, just a little of that Yale stingo in the stroke."

In the crow's nest Jim still yelled and waved his arms discrazedly, while the dory returned at a smart clip toward the schooner. Kitchell lathered with fury.

"Oh," he murmured softly through his gritting teeth, "when I get my two hands afoul of you wunst, you gibbering, yellow philly-loo bird! Believe me, you'll think that you've got hazed. Shut up, you crazy do-do, ain't we comin' fast as we can?"

The dory drew alongside, and the captain was over the rail like quicksilver, the boat-hook in one hand and the bow looking and pointing to the west. Jim slid down the rattlins, bubbling excitedly, apparently out of breath. He had not touched the deck Kitchell had kicked him into the stays again, for very much like a parrot.

"Fleet!" he shouted as the Chinaman found his voice. "Fleet, fleet, fleet! Nine a little more! I would if I were you. Why don't you sing out when you find fleet, you fool?"

"Yes, sah," answered the cooly.

"What's that you say?" Charlie, ark him whaffo him sing?"

"I tinkum ship," answered Charlie calmly, looking over the starboard quarter.

"Ship!"

Him velly sick," hazarded the Chinaman from the rattlins, adding a sentence in a tone of apology.

"He says he tinkum ship sick, all same; ask um something—ship velly sick."

By this time the captain, Wilbur and all on board could plainly make out a sail some eight miles off the starboard bow. Keen at that distance and to eyes inexperienced in those of Wilbur, it needed but a glance to know that something was wrong with her. It was not a fake that she was in distress, but even keel; it was not that her rigging was in disarray nor that her sails were disordered, but a look of utter helplessness and dismay.

"Ah, sah, I tinkum velly sick."

"Oh, go to, or go below and fetch up my glass—hustle!"

The glass was brought. "Son," exclaimed Kitchell "where is that man with the fleet boat—some sailor-like with me? The two clambered up the rattlins to the crow's nest. Kitchell adjusted the glass.

"She's a hark," he muttered, "iron built—about 700 tons, I guess—in distress. Her mizzen mast is shot square at the mizzen-head—looks like Norway—an' no answering signals to ensign staff. Take a blink at her, son—what do you make her out? Bird, she's sinkin' fast."

Wilbur took the glass, catching the stranger after several clumsy attempts. "She was, as Kitchell had said, unmanned, a hark, and, to judge by her flag, an English vessel.

"How she rolls!" muttered Wilbur.

"That's what I can't make out," answered Kitchell. "There's such a sea she ain't ought to roll thata way; her bal-last 'd steady her."

"Where's the flag on her boom aft? Ora's red and white and square sloped, with a blue ball in the same color, only swallowtail in shape."

"That's it B, meanin' 'I am in need of assistance.'"

"Well, where's the crew? I don't see anybody on board."

"Mebbee all there eight enough."

Then they're pretty well concealed from the passing steamers," Wilbur said, as he passed the glass to the captain.

"She does seem kinda empty," said the latter after a long look, and with a sudden show of interest that Wilbur failed to understand.

"An' where's her boats?" continued Kitchell. "I don't just quite make out any boats at all." There was a long silence.

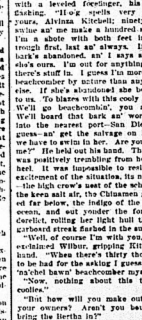

"Seems to me I sort of hase ever seen her," discovered Wilbur.

"I noticed that—sir kinda quivers all to under-neath, don't you? Don't see anybody aboard." Suddenly Kitchell lowered the glass and turned to Wilbur. He was a new man altogether. There was a new shine in his eyes; a wicked line appeared over the nose, the jaw grew salient, pronathonos.

"Son," he exclaimed, finishing Wilbur with his contracted eyes, "I have pre-marked as how you had brains. I'm a fool the coolies, but I can't fool you. It looks to me as if that hark yonder was a derelict. An' you, you know what that means to us? Chase on it a turn."

"A derelict!"

"If there's a crew on board, they're concealed from the public gaze, an' there are the boats then? I figure she's an abandoned derelict. Do you know what that means for us—for me and I? It means"—and, gripping Wilbur by the shoulders, he spoke the word into his face with a savage intensity—"it means salvage, do you savvy? Salvage, salvage! Jim, you forgo! what salvage on a 700 tonner

"Well, of course I'm with you, cap."

would come to? Well, just lemme drop it into your think tank, an' lay to what I say. It's all the ways from fifty to seventy thousand dollars, whatever her cargo be. Call it sixty thousand—thirty those apiece. Oh, I don't know!" he exclaimed, lapsing to landman's slang. "What I say mainly is, there's no one on the unexpected at sea?"

"Thirty thousand!" exclaimed Wilbur, without thinking. "Great Scott!"

"Now yr' jingle' songs," cried the captain. "Listen to me. Now you right throughs." He emphasized the words with a leveled forefinger, his eyes fixed on Wilbur's. "Now you right yours, Alvinia Kitchell; ninety-nine per cent. sure. I'm a single man, see? I'm a shote with both feet in the trough first, last an' always. If that hark's abandoned, an' I say she is, she's ours, I'm out for anything that there's stuff in. I guess I'm more of a man remember by action than anything else. If she's abandoned she belongs to us. To-night we'll spell an' sleep. We'll go beachcombin', you an' I. We'll board that bark an' work her into the nearest port before Diego. I guess—an' get the salvage on her if she's abandoned, an' I say she is, she's ours.

DRY SHAMPOOS.

Pregnant Puzzles That Will Cleanse the Hair and Scalp.

Dry shampoos are efficacious in cleaning both the scalp and hair, and the following powders for this purpose are fragrant and delicious.

Take white cornmeal as fine as can be ground. Perfume with a little powdered orris root and rub a quantity of it dry into the hair near the scalp. Massage well and bring the powder through the long part. Then with a long comb remove all the meal. This is not a difficult thing to do if the brush has long fibers. The strokes need be but few, and, indeed, should not be, or the hair will be pulled out. The best way of brushing is to hold the hair out in one hand and brush through each strand, beginning near the hand and working down close to the head.

A powder that is delicious for the same purpose is made of one-fourth of a pound of powdered orris root, one and one-third dessertspoonfuls of bergamot rind, the same of cassie flowers and one-quarter of a dram of coarsely ground cloves. Mingle and put through a fine sieve. The best way of using is to rub into the hair at night and let it remain until morning. Then brush out. This will perfume the bend delicately. Another dry absorption mask in the same way is composed of a half pound of cornstarch, the same of orris root powdered and five drops of oil of rhodium. These three are specially suited to oily hair, as the powders will absorb much of the moisture.

A GRACEFUL CARRIAGE.

Practice Correct Sitting and Rising Become a Habit.

To rise gracefully draw one foot back a little and rise with the chest and the crown of the head leading upward, not forward. Practice sitting and rising before a mirror, using a straight backed chair. Do not turn to extremes and sit bolt upright on the edge of the chair, but the upper body be supple and ready to sway in any direction—led always by the chest. If you want to rest against the back of the chair there can be no harm in you doing so, provided that you sit in such a way as to allow the "small of the back" to rest against the back of the chair.

Do not lean shoulder blades against the chair back and hollow the "small of the back" while sitting. Such a position is injurious to health and fatal to beauty. If persisted in it will result in prominent shoulder blades and a narrow contour of the spine.

If you would avoid round shoulders and a flat appearance of the neck do not use a high pillow when lying down. It is better to sleep without a pillow. If custom has rendered a pillow necessary you can gradually decrease its size until it becomes a very small one. Then you will cease to wonder how you ever slept comfortably in the awkward position necessitated by a high pillow, and you will be pleased to find that your prominent shoulder blades are retreating and that your back and neck are assuming symmetrical lines.

LAUNDRY LINES.

Save your tired feet on ironing day by standing on a cushion.

In hanging clothes to dry always hang the stockings by the toes, night-dresses from the shoulders and shirts from the hem.

When hanging wet blankets or white spreads on the line to dry put a small square of cloth under each clothespin to make sure there will be no stain from a dusty pin.

Carbonate of lime, better known as Spanish chalk, used in the proportion of two to one of starch, will render all light stuffs such as muslin incombustible yet not hurt the material itself in any way.

To give linen a glossy pour a pint of boiling water to one ounce of gum arabic, cover till next day, then strain it carefully and put it in a clean bottle. Two teaspoonfuls of this stirred into a pint of ordinary starch will give collars and cuffs an appearance of newness.

To Test Tea.

To test tea put a pinch in a glass, pour upon it a little cold water, and shake it well up. Pure tea will only slightly color the water, while a strong infusion will be got from the dust of adulterated leaf. Now boil both separately and let them stand till cool, and the difference between them will be most marked. The false tea will become still more strong after long standing, but will remain transparent, whereas the pure tea will become muddy or milky. This last appearance arises from the tannic acid, which is a natural property in pure tea, but which in artificial tea is entirely absent.

Thin Silks and Laces.

A good gum arabic mixture to keep on hand for stiffening thin silk or laces is made by putting one ounce of gum arabic in a wide mouthed bottle and covering it with a cup of cold water. Place the bottle in a kettle of cold water over the fire until the gum arabic is dissolved. Strain through a piece of cheesecloth. If this is to be all used within a few days it needs no preservative, but if to be kept some time add a cup of alcohol and cork tightly.

New Women in the South.

The southern woman of affairs really antedates the "new woman" of America, about whom we have heard so much in recent years. The training of southern women for the practical supervision of large undertakings began during the war of 1861-65, when they were left in entire charge of a very considerable percentage of the southern plantations.—Macon Telegraph.

THE SHABBY BATHTUB.

It May Easily Be Made Bright, Fresh and Inviting.

Among the crusses many housewives have to sunny them is a bathtub of unattractive appearance in a room that otherwise looks fresh and clean. The tarnished surface may refuse to become bright, no matter what cleaning mixtures are employed.

By being your own workman you may at a trifling expense make the tub quite desirable. Procure a small can of common paint of any light color desired, a can of enamel paint of the same color and a good sized brush. Cut eight or ten inch pieces of cheese cloth into bits and put it over the fire to dissolve in a couple of quarts of water. Put the bathtub full hot water and throw in a generous handful of powdered borax and the dissolved soap. When the water becomes cool enough to put the hands in it scrub the surface with a brush, letting the water run off as the work is done. Again partly fill the tub with hot water and scrub it with the brush and sand soap to make sure that all greasy particles have been removed. Then rinse it in clear hot water and thoroughly dry.

Cover it with two coatings of the common paint, letting one thoroughly dry before putting on the second coat. Then give it several coats of the enamel paint. This paint will dry more quickly than the other, and the bath will no longer be an unsightly object. Care must be used to run hot water into the bath alone until the paint has hardened.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE CARE OF HER GOWNS.

This Woman's Method is Worthy of Being Widely Copied.

A time saver is the plan which a woman who has much of her dressmaking done in the house has evolved in the care of her gowns. She keeps all of her waists for each gown if not the whole gown itself in the wardrobe. If she puts the little bunch of silk or scraps of lace and ribbon that were left. She also puts in the bottom a bunch of ruching that she has selected for wearing with it so that in case of a fresh piece being needed or any little change being thought of she has everything at hand ready when she takes down the dress.

As may be imagined, she is one who can add a touch here and make a change there in her collar or belt arrangements, little improvements which in true feminine fashion she often makes a few minutes before she puts the dress on. For this and for any accident which happens to the gown the scraps already at hand are invaluable.

The same plan applies in keeping the veils which go with it in the box with each hat, where they have more room than is a common veil box and where the time is saved which it takes to get out two boxes.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

DRESS HINTS.

Don't wear big sleeves and big hats if you are short.

Don't jump into your clothes and expect to look dressed.

Tight gloves will go on more easily if warmed before putting on the hands than if put on when cold.

In sewing on buttons have the knot of the thread on the right side directly under the button and sew if the button does not stay on longer.

It never may be the shape of her foot a woman should be particularly careful to be well shod, and the ugliest the foot the more careful she ought to be.

Never have the top of the boots tight, as it interferes with the action of the calf muscles, makes one walk badly and spoils the shape of the ankle.

In making buttonholes in goods that fray easily it is a great help to stitch twice around on the sewing machine before the hole is cut, as a firmer foundation is secured and no fraying results.

Physical Training.

A physician points out in a contemporary that there is not the slightest need of girls to engage in elaborate gymnastic exercises or to practice beauty culture in order to obtain good complexions and healthy physiques. The very best training for the muscles is to be found in ordinary housework, and when the body is perfectly healthy the skin will be cleared and the eyes brightened. It is not given to all girls to be able to indulge in outdoor sports, which is, of course, the ideal way of getting exercise, but all can practice simple household duties, and these, if done with open windows and in a brisk way, will do far more for those who perform them, says this doctor, than ordinary drilling.

The Tale of the Mouth.

It is the mouth which tells the tale of a fretful and irritable disposition. It is this feature which acts as a giveaway when a woman wishes to appear something that she isn't. A woman may possess a small fortune in cosmetics and massage, but if she doesn't watch her mouth and keep it wreet her money is wasted, for she cannot be good looking. A perpetually sniffing woman is an offense against good taste, but a woman with a sweet, expressive mouth is the loveliest thing in the world, but there are very few of them.

The Improved Feminine Physique.

Mrs. Stannard declares that the modern woman is not athletic, but that she is tall, finely developed young creature of the day owes her appearance to the fact that she is no longer scourged by tuberculosis and that she has been brought up more by her mother and more in the dining room instead of by governesses of lower class London attthe top of the house.—London Post.

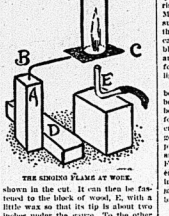

SINGING FLAMES.

Two Little Experiments That Are Simple and Interesting.

Did you ever hear of "singing" flames? Here are two little experiments showing how sensitive a flame may be to sharp sounds and how it may be made to "sing."

Nail together two blocks of wood, A and B, as shown in the picture, and at the top of A fasten a piece of wire, B, with a ring about five inches in diameter at its other end. Then cling fast place a piece of wire gauze, C.

Get a piece of glass tubing about a quarter of an inch in its outside diameter and have a jet made at one end, as shown in the cut. It can then be fastened to the block of wood, E, with a little wax so that its tip is about two inches under the gauze. To the other end of the glass tubing fasten a piece of rubber tubing and connect it with a gas jet.

Turn on the gas and light it above the wire gauze, and it should burn there with a thin conical flame about four inches long. Let it burn a moment without any sound, and then make a hissing sound the flame is so sensitive that it will shrink at once to a small blue flame.

Again let it burn up quietly and then suddenly whistle or clap your hands or jingle some coins or make a rapping noise. Again the flame will shrink, but will act in the same way at any sudden loud noise.

Now get a glass tube, T, if possible, two inches long and an inch and a quarter in diameter, but any size will do from seven inches to two feet in length and from three-quarters of an inch to an inch and a half in diameter.

Rest the tube lightly on the gauze, covering the flame with it. If now you whistle at the gauze and the tube from the ring and raise them very carefully the flame will shorten and then suddenly begin to "sing." Now lower the gauze and tube to just the point where the flame ceases to sing, and it will be so sensitive that the slightest, high, sharp sound will set it to singing, but it will cease the moment the sound stops.

The flame responds very quickly, so you may prove by saying a word like "seconde" or "sensitive." The flame will sing twice in each case—in the first and for the hissing of the s and c, in the second for each s.

Make these experiments. They are very curious and interesting.

Game of Castle King.

Choose your king by some counting out rhyme. Then he must stand on a chair and call out short defiance to his foes. He taunts them with abusive epithets as:

"I'm the king of the castle;

Get down, you cowardly rascal!

He is then assailed by the other players, every one a claimant for his position of eminence, and alone he must try to maintain it.

Fair pulls and pushes are allowed, but the clothes must not be pulled under penalty of being set aside as a prisoner of war, which really means expulsion from the game.

Sometimes the king is permitted to have an ally, who merely stands by, to see that no foul play or capture any occurs in breaking the rules.

The odds against the king, beset by so many enemies, are so great that he does not long retain his position, and then one who dethrones him takes his place and possession of the "castle."

Conundrums.

Why should a housekeeper never put the letter M into her refrigerator? Answer—Because it spoils cheese by mold into mice.

How many soft boiled eggs could a giant eat on an empty stomach? Answer—One, for after that his stomach wouldn't be empty.

Which would you rather, that a lion ate you or a tiger? Answer—Why, you would rather that the lion ate the tiger, of course.

Your Doll's Head.

If the new head of the doll is filled with cotton before being attached to the body the eyes will not fall in, and the danger of breakage from falls will be reduced.

Good Hints.

Here is a hint for every girl
Who hopes to be a belle:
Don't let your tongue too loudly ring
And learn to chime in well.

Small boys who think that some fine day
They will be rich and wise
Must read their book and must not spend
Their cents for cakes and pies.

WHIPPING EGGS.

An Art With Which Many Expert Cooks Are Not Familiar.

Whipping eggs is an art with which even many experienced cooks are not familiar. Wire egg beaters are the right sort to use for angel food, meringues or anything in which the cells are to be coarse, as this will beat the air in to inflate them. Wheel egg beaters are better for the cake that is to have a fine grain.

For better puddings and popovers beat the eggs little. Pour cream puffs do not beat them at all. For omelets (unless it is a souffle) and German pancake try beating the eggs a little more. Put the whites in the bowl and beat them light. Turn the yolks into the whites and beat only enough to thin through it.

Beat the whites and yolks together and not to a light consistency for custard either boiled or baked and all custard puddings. Simply stir the yolk a few times with a fork for mayonnaise before beginning to drop the oil into it.

For soufflet, spanish cream and tapioca puddings beat the whites separately and as light as possible, so they will rise to the top after being incorporated. Mix the whites of the eggs into the sugar and beaten yolks before adding the flour and baking powder for sponge cake. Add to the mixture as many tablespoonfuls of boiling water as there are eggs in the cake. For delicate cake fold in the whites the last thing as lightly as possible.

To mix white of eggs with cream beat light and add to the cream and beaten stiff a short time before it is to be used. This is a delightful mixture for anything which demands whipped cream, as it is less rich and is also a good substitute for the old fashioned pudding sauce in which the egg whites are beaten up with sugar and nutmeg. Flavored in this way or simply sweetened with the addition of a few grains of nutmeg, this combination makes a delicious sauce for little baked batter puddings.

THE ICE CREAM FREEZER.

A Convenient Place in Which to Keep and Operate It.

As nearly all people do who get an ice cream freezer, we found its use entailed much labor and care, especially when it has to be operated in the cellar, necessitating several journeys up and down stairs. Into the end of one of the set tubs I fitted a frame which could not move. This I made of a crate in which furniture had been sent.

THE FREEZER IN THE STATIONARY TUB.

By cutting a notch in the crosspiece of wood and screwing a small piece of wood (A) to the freezer the machine is held from twisting around and is in a comfortable position to turn. The drain water merely runs off into the tubs, and when frozen the cream is convenient to serve, and there is no large amount of dishes to wash. Afterwards, as the refrigerator is usually filled for some days, the tubs may also be kept in the tubs and removed only when they are used for other purposes. —Good Housekeeping.

How the Teacher Was Stung to Rhyme.

The parent of a child of fine complained to his teacher that the little boy was progressing in his studies. It was hinted that the money paid justified expectations not met with. The teacher had occasion to punish the little chap asleep in the middle of his studies, and when not asleep he was an inveterate joker. The teacher ventured to ask at what hour the child went to bed every evening.

"With Be," said the father. "He doesn't like 14 go to bed alone, so he takes him with me every evening."

"And that is?" ventured a physician standing by.

"Eleven o'clock; sometimes 10:30," said the father. "But that is not the point," he added. "How are the boy's progress in his studies? What is the sense of my paying my money?"

The teacher and the physician looked at each other. What was the use?

Of course the school and the teacher were to blame. Who else?—Ladies' Home Journal.

Bath Bags.

It is claimed that soap baths rub off the skin and that soap should not be frequent. So bath bags made of oatmeal or bran or almond meal are a substitute of soap. A good substitution is oatmeal in a cheesecloth bag, just large enough to make easily, for the bag should that comes from it when wet is soft and much like soap. It makes the skin white and smooth and is said to nourish it in a small degree. It is best to make two bags in this fashion at once and empty them directly after using. If the oats dry the task is harder. As the bags are used like a sponge they need to be washed and boiled in the general wash. Bran is cheaper than soap, so the matter of expense can be dismissed.

Bath Mitts and Towels.

Bath mitts and towels admirably adapted to massaging the flesh and producing a pleasant glow are made of a wool braid an eighth of an inch in width. These are very loosely woven and in such a manner that each row represents a series of small cubes, thus giving the desired texture.

DO YOU GET BILIOUS?

No remedy could be more prompt and agreeable than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. No matter where you go you'll hear of the grand cures they make. Writing from Ottawa Mrs. M. R. Legge says: "Dr. Hamilton's Pills are a household word and each headache I don't think there is a remedy to compare with Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I formerly had bilious attacks about once a month—used Dr. Hamilton's Pills and obtained grand results. My stomach has been put in good order and my health greatly improved." No medicine better for men, women and children than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c per box or five boxes for $1.00 at all druggists.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the well young man.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

FORMER BELLEVILLE LADY MARRIED IN PETERBORO.

NUPTIALS OF MISS MABEL ROY AND MR. A. M. SIMMONS ON WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The Peterboro Review gives the following account of a wedding in that city, the bride being a former popular resident of Belleville. "A very quiet wedding was celebrated in St. John's church, this afternoon, at three o'clock, when the rector, Rev. J. C. Davidson, united in marriage Miss Mabel Roy, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Roy, No. 1, Hamilton street, to Mr. Alfred Munro Simmons, of Toronto. Only the immediate relatives were in attendance, and the bridal couple were unattended. Miss Roy was attractively attired in a gown of pale blue shot taffeta silk, and wore a hat of white lace trimmed with blue and pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left on the 5.10 C.P.R. express on a wedding trip to Banff and the Coast. They will return to Toronto about the middle of August, where they will reside. Many friends will join in wishing them every happiness and prosperity."

In the Justice Shop.

Four prisoners graced the dock at the police court this morning, but no serious offences were charged, in fact the use of intoxicants was the cause of all being there.

DRUNK.

Robert Smith was charged with drunkenness, and was allowed to go.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

John Malpes, an old offender, was charged with these offences. As he had been released from Gaol only for some time and promised to leave again within an hour he was given the opportunity, but a suspended sentence of four months in the Central was hung over his head if he remains here.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY.

Patrick Keegan and John McCann answered to these charges. The Magistrate allowed him to go as they desired to leave the city in order to secure employment.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to another, but cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the five-daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewsville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

SACRED CONCERT AT JOHN ST.

There was, considering the warm weather, a very fair audience (with the accent on the fair) at John St. Church last night to listen to a second concert in aid of the choir fund of the church. The programme, of course, was delightful, given as it was by ladies and gentlemen favormost in vocal and musical circles in this city, assisted by Mrs. Leo Riggs, who, since the occasion of her first appearance, has always been a favorite in Belleville. All the artists were in fine voice, and were listened to with keen appreciation. The organ numbers by Mr. Lockridge were not by any means the weakest numbers of a highly enjoyable programme. Mrs. Lockridge also played accompaniments in a way which left nothing to be desired. The programme follows:

Organ—"William Tell" (arranged by Dudley Buck) ..... Rossini
Mrs. (Dr.) Lockridge.
"There is a Green Hill" ..... Gounod
Mrs. A. G. Parker.
"Hosannah" ..... Grenier
Mr. M. C. Gordon.
"Lead Me, O Lord" ..... Gates
Miss Hattie M. Gowsell.
"Fear Ye Not, O Israel," Dudley Buck
Mr. Dan A. Cameron.
"My Redeemer and My Lord" (Gladden Legend) ..... Dudley Buck
Miss Nora Lasier.
"Thy Will be Done" ..... Dana
Mr. M. C. Gordon.
Recit.—"O People Meet Your Hearts," Air—"If with All Your Hearts," (Elijah) ..... Mendelssohn
Mrs. A. G. Parker.
"O Divine Redeemer" ..... Gounod
Miss Gowsell, Mr. Cameron.
"I Will Extol Thee, O Lord" ..... Costa
Mrs. Leo Riggs.
Organ—"Processional" .....
Mrs. (Dr.) Lockridge.

A CORRESPONDENT GROWS EN.

THURSATIC OVER LAST NIGHT'S CONCERT.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—Whatever is attempted by Mr. Dan A. Cameron in the musical line is sure to be a success, and last night's concert in John St. Church was no exception. For such a splendid purpose as the church fund, a larger audience would have been encouraging. Mr. Lockridge's location organist of the church, presented in a most satisfactory manner "Hosannah" and the "Processional." Mrs. Lockridge also played the accompaniments for the various selections. As an accompanist, she possesses the rare faculty of not only following one's singing, but of bringing out the many, small, unheard beauties occurs so frequently. Mrs. A. G. Parker, with her charming voice, was always heard to great advantage in three beautiful selections, "There is a Green Hill," "O People Rend Your Hearts," and "If With All Your Hearts" Mrs. Parker's training like unto charm her hearers. Miss Nora Lasier rendered "My Redeemer and My Lord" in her usually pleasing manner. Her voice is very sweet and melodious. Miss Gowsell sang "Lead me, O Lord" as a solo—and with Mr. Cameron—Gounod's sweet piece, "O Divine Redeemer." This only is rapidly forging to the front rank as a vocalist. She possesses very great power and volume, accompanied by many sweet notes. Mr. Alfred Munro Simmons, of Toronto Only the immediate relatives were in attendance, and the bridal couple were unattended. Miss Roy was attractively attired in a gown of pale blue shot taffeta silk, and wore a hat of white lace trimmed with blue and pink roses. Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left on the 5.10 C.P.R. express on a wedding trip to Banff and the Coast. They will return to Toronto about the middle of August, where they will reside. Many friends will join in wishing them every happiness and prosperity."

Old Boys' Reunion.

EVERYTHING BOOMING IN PREPARATION FOR THIS BIG EVENT WHICH STARTS A WEEK FROM TO-MORROW—A GRATIFYING LETTER FROM AN EX-MAYOR.

Preparations for the Old Boys' Reunion are booming, and there is every indication that the unique event which starts a week from to-morrow will form a bright page in Belleville's history.

Mr. Arthur McGinnis, the secretary, is casting about for a staff of bright young men and boys who will, when the influx of visitors comes, keep a register of the same.

It looks as though everything possible was being done to make the Reunion a great success. With good weather—that dubious matter—there seems no doubt but Belleviliians and their visitors will have the time of their lives when the old boys and girls come home.

Dr. Cronhyatekha has written Mr. Arthur McGinnis, informing him that the tent on Dufferin Island will, during the Reunion, be placed at the disposal of visitors from this city.

The president of the Old Boys' Reunion organization informs us that the offer of every outside band which wanted to come here for the Reunion has been accepted. The correspondence of the chairman of the Entertainment Committee, too, is cordially welcomed to the cercumcises at the Island, and to the procession of that day.

The proposition to make Sunday, July 23, "Hospital Sunday," has not been accepted by some of the churches, and it is understood that the proposed pending the action of the old boys and girls themselves.

Bridge St. Church, with its usual commendable enterprise, has decided to issue a souvenir booklet for the Reunion. It has also been decided to have the back of the church at the disposal of visitors on Sunday, July 23.

The following letter, which speaks eloquently for itself, has been received by the secretary of the Reunion:

Oil State St., Bridgport, Conn.,
July 10th, 1905.

Arthur McGinnis, Esq., Secretary of the Old Boys' Reunion, Belleville, Ontario.

My Dear Sir,—I have deferred answering your very kind invitation to participate in the Old Boys' Reunion until this date, fully hoping that a change in my affairs so as to be present and meet some of the old boys of fifty years ago, but regret my inability to do so.

I think of dear old Belleville and the influence that was thrown around me when a boy and young days. Whatever of success I may have achieved in after life, I attribute more than any other to the wholesome training I received while there. I owe your beautiful city, State of industry and economy, respect for authority, the ample life which gave me a strong body, the memory and the higher life, etc.

My dear mother (who I am pleased to know will be in your city and will be present) was a lady much delighted by these things, and was supported by the same sentiment which pervaded your city in those days.

I have always maintained that Canada and Belleville especially is the best training ground for boys and has been the best nursery for young men mutually known to be found in America.

Wishing everything you in advance us the success it so richly deserves and thanking you for your kind invitation, I am,

Very respectfully yours,

HENRY VONES.

Ex-Mayor of the City of Bridgeport, Conn., U.S.A.

A FEW POINTERS.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—Permit a few pointers.

1.—Societies will kindly reply to invitations extended.

2.—Will the young ladies supply one float and the Bugle Band another?

3.—Will fifty young girls on decorated bicycles lead the procession?

4.—All carriages, hacks and vehicles which are decorated are earnestly requested to take part in the procession.

5.—Citizens on Front street, Victoria avenue to Charles, Charles to Bridge street, Bridge to Market Square, kindly decorate?

6.—It is probable the procession will proceed from Bridge to Hawk & Heathern's foundry, down Pinnacle to Victoria Avenue, up the avenue to Charles, then down Charles to Bridge, Bridge to the Market Square.

North Front street citizens insist that the procession shall go north to upper bridge. If a shorter route is adopted there is danger of overlapping. All cannot be suited as to route. Executive must be trusted to do the best under circumstances.

My hope is that all who can to give us a grand procession will do so. Such an opportunity for showing ourselves to the world will not again presented for a long time.

I am, yours,

JOHN J. B. FLINT.

AUDITOR-GENERAL RETIRES.

Allegation Against Mr. Collingwood Schreiber Publicly Withdrawn.

Ottawa, July 14.—The Public Accounts Committee held its final meeting for the session yesterday. Mr. J. L. Macdougall publicly withdrew his statement, made a week ago, that Mr. Collingwood Schreiber took his estimate of what the Sorel bridge cost from the Government. "I withdraw that altogether," he said. "When Mr. Schreiber tells me he did not, that is the end of it, so far as I am concerned."

Mr. Schreiber was again questioned by Mr. Barker as to the payments for the Sorel bridge subsidy, and admitted that the Auditor-General's refusal to obey the order-in-council had saved the country $14,103 so far, although he understood the company was not satisfied with the $14,735 received. The sum was paid five years ago.

Col. L. P. Pinault, Deputy Minister of Militia, was examined again with reference to the contract with Woods, Limited, Ottawa, for tents.

Hansard Staff Get More Pay.

Ottawa, July 14.—The Internal economy commission of the House have increased the salaries of the Hansard reporters from $2,000 to $2,500 per annum. At the same time they require the Hansard staff to do all the reporting connected with departments and the Railway commission without any extra remuneration. At the present time the Hansard staff are paid extra for any reporting outside of the debates of the House. The commission have also made Albert Horton chief of the Hansard staff, with the stipulation that he is only to do a reasonable amount of work.

"He's got to be quiet, the way we're playing," replied Ella. "We're papa coming home late and I'm pun."

Plenty of Servants.

"Does your wife have a great deal of trouble getting servants?"

"Well, that depends upon what you mean by trouble." She always has three servants—one at the house, one going and one coming."

KILLS TRADING STAMPS

Text of the New Legislation Ready For Third Reading.

Goes Into Force November 1, 1905, and Provides Heavy Penalties If Third Reading Is Passed — Immigration Amendment Lost — House Supports Contract For $6 Per Head Immigrants—Grain Inspection Bill.

Ottawa, July 14.—In the House of Commons yesterday morning the bill from the Senate amending the grain inspection act asked by the Board of Trade of Winnipeg and the Grain Growers' Association, were considered, and Hon. Thomas Greenway offered another amendment, as being in the interest of the grain grower. He did not see much necessity for the standard board. The established standards were fixed and should remain as. It would be a good thing for the trade if all below No. 2 northern were thrown into one grade of milling wheat. There was a great difficulty now as to the spread in price of wheat, which amounted to 17 1-2c between No. 2 and No. 3. He asked why farmers could not sell wheat the same as any other produce. The amendments to the grain act suggested had all been in the line of the direction of giving greater facilities to the farmer to market his wheat. The crop last year was 60,000,000 bushels and that year there were 30,000,000 bushels was No. 2 northern, so that the loss to the farmer on No. 2 alone was half a million dollars. He proposed an amendment for the appointment of an officer in the interests of the shipper, who would have access to all elevators, and inspect the weighing records, etc.

Mr. Fisher said that this could be done by order-in-council, and the Government had agreed to do so.

Mr. Lake replied that the difficulty mentioned might arise from the opposition markets in Winnipeg and Toronto. No. 3 northern could not be delivered under contract.

Immigration Amendment.

When the House was moved into supply, Mr. Oster (West Toronto) moved an amendment condemning the contract made by the Government with that nebulous concern known as the North Atlantic Trading Co., whereby the company gets $5 per head for ten years for every man, woman and child it brings from Great Europe. The resolution also scoffed upon the Government to give Dodos territory on the contract, which cannot be done within four years. It was time the quality, rather than quantity, of our immigrants should be regarded, a policy which could not be pursued under the arrangement, which looked solely to the earning of the bonus.

R. L. Borden thought that efforts should be made to direct rewards securing immigrants from the British Isles.

Mr. Fielding said the reason why the North Atlantic Trading Co. received $5 per head for immigrants, while only $1.25 per head was paid for bringing settlers from Great Britain, was because the company did all their own booking and had to bear all the expense connected with the work.

Mr. William Gartwright replied that the steamship companies in Great Britain spent large sums in advertising and making Canada known to the British people. It should be the duty of one of the company to show how many persons were brought to Canada by their agencies and how. When we criticised the laxity of the Government in failing to deport undesirable immigrants who reach Canada.

The amendment was lost by 40 to 78.

To Kill Trading Stamps.

In the afternoon, after a long discussion in committee of the whole, reported the trading stamps bill, with several important amendments. The bill, which is to be incorporated in the criminal code, now stands for a third reading, and will read that there be put forth:

(1) The expression "trading stamps" includes, besides trading stamps commonly so called, any form of cash or receipt, coupon, premium ticket or other device, designed or intended to be given to purchasers by any person by the vendor thereof, or his employe or agent, and to represent a discount on the price of such goods or a premium to the purchaser thereof, which is redeemable either (1) by any person other than the vendor or the person from whom he purchases such goods or the manufacturer of the goods, or (2) by the vendor or the person from whom he purchased the goods, in cash or goods not his property or not his exclusive property; or (3) by the vendor elsewhere than in the premises where such goods are purchased, or at which does not show upon its face the place of its delivery and the merchandable value thereof, or is not redeemable at any time.

When Is Not a Violation.

(b) An offer, printed or marked by the manufacturer upon any wrapper, box or receptacle in which the goods are sold, of a premium or reward for the return of such wrapper, box or receptacle is not a trading stamp within the meaning of the section.

(c) The expression "goods" means anything which is merchandise or the product of land or manufactures.

(d) The expressions "every one," "vendor," "purchaser," "merchant," "agent" or "person" includes any partnership or company or body corporate.

Heavy Punishment.

(2) Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to one year's imprisonment and to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars who by himself or his employe or agent, directly or indirectly, issues, gives or sells or otherwise disposes of or offers to issue, give, sell or otherwise dispose of trading stamps to a merchant or dealer in goods for use in his business.

(3) Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to six months' imprisonment and to a fine not exceeding two hundred dollars who, being a merchant or dealer in goods, by himself or his employe or agent, directly or indirectly, gives or in any way disposes of or offers to give or in any way dispose of trading stamps to a purchaser from him of any such goods.

Begins in November.

Section 4 imposes a maximum fine of $20 upon a person who receives stamps. The next clause applies the penalties of subsections 2 or 3 to any executive officer of a corporation or company who aids or abets in the offences named. The last clause provides that "That this act shall not apply to any trading stamps issued by a manufacturer or vendor on or before the 1st day of November, 1905."

In Supply.

The House in supply passed the Intercolonial votes and rose at 1 o'clock.

In the Senate.

The Autonomy bill was debated in the Senate until one o'clock this morning.

Caught In the Carriers Which Carry the Sawdust to the Incinerator and Was Cremated—His Charred Body Taken Out at the Bottom Where the Ashes Are Removed—Other Accidents and Deaths.

Ottawa, July 14.—Frank Elliott, aged about 16 years, met a horrible death last night.

He was engaged at J. R. Booth's big mill at the Chaudiere Falls, and was caught in the carriers which carry the sawdust to the incinerator. The unfortunate fellow was carried to the top and hurled into the fiery furnace.

His charred body was taken out at the bottom where the ashes are removed.

Killed by Iron Bar.

Toronto, July 14.—Frank Brant, 66 Albert street, was instantly killed by a 300-lb. bar of iron, which he was unloading from a truck, falling upon his head and crushing his skull. The accident occurred just north of King on Bay street, and was caused by Brant slipping on the curb. His brother, living near Dundas, has been notified.

BOY DROWNS; MOTHER SAVED.

Another Pitiful Drowning Accident at Kenora, Ontario.

Kenora, July 14.—Another drowning accident occurred here yesterday at Rat Portage, when Frank Hughes, Eli Law, the 7-year-old son of Conductor Law, and the C. P. R. boss driver, Mrs. Law and young Law, along with another young friend, got into a raft, and were being pushed along by bathers close to the shore, when the raft shot into deep water and they fell into the water.

The mother, to save her boy, jumped in after him, but the lad never rose again. Hughes brought Mrs. Law back from his cottage, who plunged in and with difficulty rescued Mrs. Law, who had gone down a second time. Other people arriving, they got the body up after 15 minutes, but all efforts at resuscitation were unavailing.

TO GET A

PEANUT "right to your taste" is to get something which goes to the spot as nothing else can, but a peanut in order to be roasted right must retain just enough of the natural oil to make it tasty, and yet must not be overdone. Peanuts have been roasted to suit the public's taste for years past in this store, and we still have the knack of roasting a peanut just right. Try them and be convinced. Something new is our Coney Island fatty. Try it.

PASSION MAKES HIM MURDERER.

Worsted in Fight, Hired Man Struck Farmer With Stick.

Moscouin, July 15.—Geo. Steen, a respected young farmer, living six miles north of here, got into an altercation with his hired man, George Summers.

Steen got the best of the fight, Summers throwing up the sponge. Steen then let him go and turned and walked away, when Summers grabbed a stick and hit Steen on the back of the head, knocking him senseless.

Realizing what he had done he notified Steen's brother, and came to Moscouin for a doctor, but despite every effort, Steen never recovered consciousness and expired last night at 9 o'clock.

Summers came in Thursday night and gave himself up to the police.

George Steen was one of the leading farmers north of Moscouin and highly respected. He was to be married shortly.

Hundreds of Boats Fired.

New York, July 15.—"San Juan Hill," the district bounded by Amsterdam and West 72nd avenues and Sixty-first and Sixty-third streets, so called because of its notoriety as a battleground, was the scene last night of a furious race riot, which required the reserves of no less than 12 police precincts, numbering more than 250 men, to quell after many shots had been fired and several persons had been seriously injured. No one was killed.

Canadians Won Kolapore Cup.

They Get the Coveted Trophy by a Score of 758.

Duke of Connaught Visits the Canadians and Makes Some Remarks Pleasant to Hear—What the Kolapore Match is—Each Member of the Team of Eight Gets Commemorative Silver Bowl — The Scores.

Bisley Camp, July 15.—(C. A. P.)—Canada has won the Ralah of Kolapore's Challenge Cup with a total of 758 points.

The shooting in the Kolapore Cup yesterday morning at 200 yards was fairly steady, the scoring being as follows:

Staff-Sergeant C. R. Crowe.
Ghelph	35454545—38
Captain A. Elliott, 12th, Toronto	45454535—34
Captain W. H. Pearce, 6th, Vancouver	34555535—33
Staff-Sergt. H. Kerr, 48th Highlanders	55445535—32
Sergt. W. H. Smith, 43rd, Peterboro	43554554—32
Sergt. G. W. Tennant, G.G.F.G., Ottawa	54555545—32
Corp. J. Duff Stuart, 6th, Vancouver	44543545—32
Pte. A. Wilson, 43rd, Ottawa	34545555—31

The team totals were:

Canada	500
Trenvaal	366
New Zealand	351
Mother country	352
Guernsey	344

Zone yards.

At 500 yards the scores were:

Crowe	4554555—34
Elliott	5555555—35
Forrest	1545535—32
Kerr	4555555—34
Moore	4455545—30
Russell	4555555—34
Stuart	4455545—31
Wilson	5445354—30

The team totals were:

Canada	247
Mother country	249
Guernsey	246

New Zealand	241

The grand totals were:

Canada	758
Transvaal	756
Mother country	752
New Zealand	732
Guernsey	734

What the Match Is.

The Ralah of Kolapore's Imperial Challenge Cup is the most desired team trophy of the Bisley meet. It is open to teams of eight volunteers as follows: One team from the mother country, one team from each British colony or dependency and one team from the Indian Empire to compete annually.

The Duke of Connaught asked Capt. Stuart to convey his kindest messages to the officers and members of his regiment, and hoped on some day in the near future to have the pleasure of meeting them in Canada.

The Royal visitor also congratulated Staff-Sergt. H. Kerr of the 48th Highlanders on his splendid score of nine straight bulls in the Gregory competition.

The Team Looked Smart.

To the commandant of the team, Lieut.-Col. A. C. Hesketh of the Halifax Artillery, he remarked that the team had adopted khaki, and he considered that the men looked very smart. On looking round after entering the pavilion the duke noticed a number of postographs.

"If you don't mind, Col. Hesketh," he remarked, "I will send you a photograph of myself to hang here."

Major W. W. Davidson, adjutant of the team, was complimented on the smart appearance of his team.

The Duke of Connaught during his visit particularly enquired whether there were any French-Canadians on the team.

SYDNEY DISCARDED.

Test Failed to Prove Its Usefulness For Fast Mail.

Montreal, July 15.—The mails from the steamship Virginian, brought from Sydney by an I. C. R. special, reached Montreal at 4.15 o'clock yesterday morning, and the officials of the Canada Line-ship that did the steamer come right through Belle Isle Straits and have landed the mails at Rimouski Wharf, would have reached Montreal slightly before six o'clock in the morning. The experiment among the leading steamship officials is that the trial has practically shown that during the fine summer months at least, much better time can be made for the mails by taking the short course right through the Straits. It is not known that any further trial will be made via Sydney.

Halifax Next.

Halifax, July 15.—The mail turbine steamer Virginian is to give a fast mail trip to Halifax. She will probably call here on her next trip with mails and passengers and mails to be forwarded to Montreal.

RIDDLE HIM WITH BULLETS.

Summary Vengeance Meted to Whole-sale Murderer McGill.

New York, July 15.—Special Cable Service despatch to The Times says: From Belize, British Honduras, comes the news from Honduras that Robert McGill, the Honduran who murdered persons on an English vessel recently, was lynched in Puerto Cortez.

President Bonilla had declared that he wanted no lynching, as McGill was a British subject, but the citizens were wrought to a frenzy against the executive of Miss Morgan, who has recovered to tell the happenings on the schooner. The Jail was surrounded at nightfall, the guard quickly overpowered and McGill, raving and cursing, dragged from his cell.

It was proposed to burn him in front of the house of Miss Morgan. The mob went so far as to build the fire, but the pleadings of the British consul-general finally persuaded the mob to put the negro in a "safe" place. He was bound, and still pro-esting and begging for mercy, was tied to the verandah at Morgan house and riddled with bullets.

LIVELY FIRE AT WINDSOR, N. S.

Historic Hotel is Gutted—Town Was in Danger.

Halifax, July 15.—Fire started in the Hotbrella Hall at Windsor, N. S., about 10.30 o'clock yesterday morning and gained great headway in a few minutes. All the firemen could do was to keep the fire from spreading to the buildings on the left, Bennett, Smith & Sons' block, and other buildings in the vicinity. The failing of burning timbers caused great danger. The hotel was built in 1848, the year the Prince of Wales visited Windsor.

The citizens worked with buckets to put out fires on buildings caused by sparks. The new station was in great danger, and at once the wood house and freight shed were on fire. It was impossible to stand on Upper Water street on account of the terrific heat.

At 2.30 the fire was about out. The Dufferin building is a perfect wreck. The D. A. R. station was on fire at the time, and the train going west was delayed three hours. There is about $12,000 insurance on the Dufferin.

STABBED WIFE TO DEATH.

Former London, Ontario, Man's Terrible Crime in Detroit.

Detroit, July 15.—Quarreling with his wife Jennie, Daniel V. Gray, who occupied the flat with the family at 181 Michigan avenue, as a residence, stabbed her seven times in the breast at 7 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Gray died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital, where she died half an hour later. Gray, immediately after stabbing his wife, but was arrested two hours later by police. He expressed the keenest contrition for his action.

Gray and his wife were married 29 years of age. Both came from London, Ont., Gray's father is a well-to-do farmer.

Gray and his wife were devoted to each other until his mind became somewhat unbalanced. He was out of work at Dearborn until about two weeks ago. Recently his brother took him out at Mrs. Gray's request, to attend the funeral of Mr. Smith, Mrs. Gray's father, at London.

Help For Indigent Insane.

Toronto, July 15.—Premier Whitney yesterday listened to a plan outlined by a delegation of doctors by which they hope to avert the ever-increasing number of the insane. The plan suggested to the Government is to practically train the doctors and nurses who come in contact with such cases that a proper treatment should be, and also the sending of patients to wards established in hospitals, instead of placing them under the harsh care of a common jail. The establishment of such a ward established in the new hospital at Toronto is certainly was advocated. Dr. Pyne, who, with the Premier, formed one of the delegation, was warmly in favor of the proposition. The Premier was not prepared to say how the proposals of the delegation would be dealt with, but assured those present that the Government was alive to the gravity of the situation and were pleased to have suggestions made.

Struck By a Train.

Toronto, July 17—James Leighton, a young machinist employed at the C.P.R. shops at Toronto Junction, was walking along the C. P. R. tracks outside of the city limits last evening when he was struck by a train. He sustained a fatal fracture of the skull. His condition is not serious.

The Question of Men in the Two Political Parties.

Various Grit papers have of late been shedding crocodile tears over what they claim as the absence of able men from the ranks of Conservatives. This, of course, is a matter worth the consideration of everybody, because a country that does not prosper or suffer as it is well or misgoverned, and the quality of its public men determines the character of its government. We feel assured that the standard of quality required by the Conservative party of its leaders is high. It has always been so and it is not likely to be changed. On the other hand the Grit party, among its leaders many men who could not find a place or be allowed to retain any high position in the Conservative party. The poverty of the Grit party in that respect is the strongest of the reasons for the injury which always results to the Dominion or to any Province in which the Grits are in power. We naturally find in the Conservative party, the men of position; the men of leading rank in commerce, and the professions; the men of solid qualities; the men who respect authority, and who favor stability and permanency. On the other hand are to be found in the Grit ranks the men of disturbing elements which are naturally in opposition to the safe classes, to the good friends of order and respect for the rights of others, who make up the Conservative party.

A case in point is pointed out by the Halifax Herald, which says: "One has only to regard the rank and file of the Grit party in Dominion and Provincial politics to find illustrations of this truth as far as this South Shore is in question. Hon. Mr. Fielding is, we presume, the flower and choice of Grit political novelty in the Lower Provinces. He is the man whom it is the delight and pleasant service of Grit organs and speakers in every province, free from debt, when he began to take a part in its government. He has been instrumental in introducing a system of over-expenditure, under which the Provinces, as a whole, existing liabilities have been met, have a gross debt or liability of about $19,000,000. In the capital of the luminous finances the same gratification has added some four millions to the debt of Canada and has got rid of alleged surpluses of nearly $60,000,000 in addition. So that in the matter of a right to profess the highest grade leading to an embarrassed financial position Hon. Mr. Fielding is a conspicuous example. The Grit statesmen (?) whose pleasure it is to scatter what more prudent managers have accumulated.

"But to realize to the full the really dangerous characteristics which prove Hon. Mr. Fielding to be the man who could not by any effort of imagination be conceived as a prominent man in the Conservative party we must consider him as a repealer. In this role, practically a rebel against the constituted order of things in Canada, it is now easy to see that he followed a most reprehensible course solely for personal and party advantage. He led an agitation of most dangerous character and with possibilities of the greatest danger to every one in our Province, and against public interest, without sincerity and without conviction. It is true that he was absolutely insincere and neither believed in repeal, nor wished for it, and that the members of the Grit party who supported him in the matter, following on the course, were his dupes. That consideration cannot secure from Conservatives forgiveness for the wrongdoing, nor can it affect their judgment that he is of the class of men to whom politicians, and not in any sense a statesman, but it should with the Grits save him the position in their organization which he attained by tactics so cautious that they might well be called even timid. Can it be conceived that even the Grit party would retain in the position which he occupies Mr. Fielding, were it not that they are compelled to that choice by the positive want of a more respectable figure in that party? Yet this is the party which professes to doubt the existence of able men among the Conservatives.

"If one example does not suffice to show the poverty of material which forces the Grit party to use very poor timber in its work of Cabinet construction we can find another in the former The second choice of the Grit party in Nova Scotia fell upon Sir Frederick Borden, the present Minister of Militia of Emergency Ration renown. Could any reasonable man imagine that Sir Frederick Borden could be accepted as a member of the Conservative party as a matter of choice? Could Sir Frederick, after any reasonable man conceive that Conservatives, following Frederick Borden as the second minister from Nova Scotia, were "not far otherwise than a mere despicable person"?

Bad as the liberal makes things out to be in Nova Scotia, they are even worse in Ontario. Leaving out Laurier, they have had "nowhere to stand" of what is the Government composed? Of a lot of solemn nonentities, who have had "accidents" thrust upon them" owing to a lucky turn of fortune's wheel. And with this example of organized mediocrity

What's all this talk about "floats" in the parade? Does that mean that a section of the line will skate, containing some of Mr. Hurley's gaily celebrated whitefish fry, will be in the procession?

Alas! for the mutability of mundane things! No one seems to think that any of the old boys and girls will want to visit the old haunts and celebrated spot, the old dance hall, and gaze on a place which, a few years ago, was justly celebrated. A pilgrimage of the old residents up Dundas street on Monday morning, July 24, would be strictly in order.

Oh! for a man of mighty deeds, Who'll go out and cut down the weeds.

The Montreal Gazette calls attention to an important matter thus: Ad. advertisements are difficult to obtain. The newspapers rolling for qualified school teachers for the county districts at salaries ranging from $15 to $22.50. And this will only be paid for from eight to ten months, the teacher being compelled to support herself for the balance of the year out of her savings during the vacation. It is easy to understand why the complaint is so general that qualified teachers are difficult to obtain. Unqualified ones would be cheap at the prices named.

RUN OUT OF OFFICE.

(Toronto Telegram)

Certainly to-day full of Liberals who are wondering where are the McMullens and the Cartwrights now that the new John Casgrain Government is being virtually run out of office because he still throws the search light upon the spurious virtues of modern Liberals.

The risks of taking refuge under a tree in a thunder storm were shown in Brooklyn on Saturday when twelve teams played, building together a total of 24 home runs, prostrated, and two seriously hurt. These and some thirty others year by year are stunned and hurt, but still as if dead. The moisture in a tall tree of any kind is a sure electrical conductor.

A machine that will sew direct from the reels of thread, slashing and winding of spools and threading of the shuttles, has been invented by a Lancashire mechanic, and is to be quoted to the effect that if the invention is put on the market in a few months it will result in a revolution the sewing-machine trade of the world.

Some extraordinary lots have been made on the Japanese-Russian war. A number of Japanese officers have bet that they would be killed in battle. The money was to go to their widows. One officer, on starting for the front, made the following wager; If he were killed with-in a month he was to receive twelve $500. After that date he was to pay his opponent 10 yen (5) a day until he had survived 100 days, after which the bet was to cease. He undertook to expose himself to danger only when military conditions demanded; in other words, he would not wilfully let himself be killed.

They were from up the country, and were newly wed. The start of the bridal tour included a visit to the museum. The fish hatchery exhibit interested the bride, who was of frugal disposition. After watching the embryo water denizens in various stages of development, she said:

"John, dear, you know we agreed to raise our own poultry to save expense. Don't you think it would be a good idea to do the same with fishes? Suppose you see that man in charge here and buy a dozen trout eggs. That will be enough for a start, and you can ask him for directions for raising them. We might put a pan of water in the kitchenette with the eggs. It looks easy and I'm awfully fond of fish."

A SOUTHERN BULL.

"When I was a student at the University of Virginia," said Surgeon General Rixey, of the Navy, "there used to be an old man named Tom Crabbe who cleaned my boots and ran my errands.

"Tom, one morning came into my room in an excited and gay mood.

"'My daughter, sir,' he said, 'has a little baby. A fine child. Twelve pounds in weight.'

"'When was it born?' said I.

"'This morning, sah,' answered Tom. 'Is it a boy or a girl?'

"'Do you know, sir,' he said, 'I forget in the excitement, to find out whether I was a grandfather or a grandmother!'"

A. H. Hummel, the well-known New York jeweler, has associated with a group of actors at the Waldorf.

Apropos of a certain breath of premiere zeal, one of the actors exclaimed:

"I can't understand how an honorable woman can flit a man and at the same time keep the engagement ring he gave her."

"That is very simple," said Mr. Hummel. "The woman has changed her opinion of the man, but she still admires the ring as much as ever."

CLEVER AND SUCCESSFUL BAY OF QUINTE BOY.

MR. M. J. RUDELHUBER, WHO SUCCEEDS MR. CLARKE AS DOMINION, HAD A VARIED CAREER.

The following sketch will be read with interest by many in Belleville, although as it does of a gentleman well-known here, he being a brother of Mr. E. J. Butler, of this city:

"M. J. Butler, who becomes Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals and Chief Engineer of the Department, is a civil engineer, who has a rather oddly diversified career. He was born in Prince Edward County, and was almost all his life in the employ of the Dominion Government, rising to a high level in its services, and on his has spent a considerable portion of his working life the same establishment. He was educated in the public school and in the Belleville Institute, Toronto. He left that school in 1871 to enter the engineering course in Toronto University, finishing in 1874. For the next two years he articled with Evans & Bolger, Belleville, a firm doing a general engineering, surveying and architectural business. He became assistant to the surveyor in 1878, and a Dominion land surveyor in 1879, and practised miscellaneous surveying work for many years before he began engineering work. His first work of this kind was the building of the docks and yards of the Rathbun company at Deseronto. The first railway work was about this time, when he was appointed to the building of the Kingston and Pembroke Railway.

"In 1882 Mr. Butler went to Gananoque and built the Thousand Island Railway. In the autumn of 1883 he was in charge of the Napanee, Tamworth & Quebec Railway—Rathbun interests—and for several years he did general engineering work for the Rathbuns, professionally looking after government surveys. In 1886 he went to the Canadian Pacific as Assistant Engineer, having charge of the bridges and water service department in Kansas, Colorado, Missouri and Indian Territory. His employment here lasted to 1887 to engage in the pulp mills at Three Rivers. He put these up and spent three years, incidentally carrying along the route now followed by the Temiskaming & Northern. In 1892 Mr. Butler was back again to the Rathbuns, this time as their chief engineer. As such he erected the buildings of the Chaudiere Pulp and Lumber Company, and the Rathbun interests in addition to the Napanee & Tamworth Railway. At the same time he was interested in constructing practice, acting for various firms in establishing concerns.

"In 1900 Mr. Butler went east again, becoming R. L. Haney's right hand man on the contract for the great Hillsborough bridge in Prince Edward Island. He organized the plant for this work in 1901 and 1902. Then, in the autumn of 1902 he went to Montreal as Assistant Engineer and built the huge shops of the Locomotive & Machine Company. He was the chief engineer of this work, and it was a big undertaking. The plant, shops, are being remarkably well designed. In September, 1904, he joined the Transcontinental Commission, where he is good work now is marked.

"As a side issue Mr. Butler studied law, and, after taking the degree of LL. B., from the College of Ottawa in 1900, his purpose being to fit himself for a professional side of his profession, in regard to such matters as the Railway Commission, etc. He is an M.T.C.E. and also a member of the Association of Canadian Civil Engineering Societies."

TO RAISE LAURIER'S PAY

INCREASE FOR PREMIER, MINISTERS AND MEMBERS IS ADVOCATED.

Ottawa, July 14.—Indications point to an increased sessional indemnity for members being one of the "certain resolutions," of which Sir William Laurier referred in the House as to be brought down next session. Another of the resolutions will be as to granting of pensions to ex-Cabinet Ministers, such as, for example, Sir Adolphe Caron, Sir Hector Langevin and Mr. Haggart. Many politicians favor this proposition. In addition to raising the sessional indemnity there is a suggestion that the salary of the Prime Minister should be increased to $15,000 a year, that of Cabinet Ministers to $10,000, and that a stipend of $5,000 should be given of the leader of the Opposition.

The salary increases thus proposed are approximately $615,000 yearly.

Patronize the Home Merchant.

The practise of some people who send their money to the large stores in cities and neglect the merchants in their own town, when they make their money, is not a fair one. It is not fair to the manufacturer, importer or local merchant. The following from the Signal-of-Goderich, of June 22nd, is well to the point: Every mail that comes to town brings numerous catalogues, and many of them beautifully illustrated, artistically illustrated, from the large wholesale and retail stores of the cities. They are received by the housekeeper and by the farmer. As you gaze through these catalogues you will find that almost everything you want at home. Remember your home merchant helps to build your school houses, your churches, helps to make your streets, your sidewalks, your business house helps to beautify the town; he is present when your town wants water works, lights, sewerage, etc.; he is present with a donation when you are sick and gives you credit when you are in need; and in numerous other ways is indispensable to your town. Look at the question fairly and you will give him the first chance, at least, to supply you. The large city stores may be all right—but if you think so—but what do they do to earn a portion of your money? Do they pay any county taxes; do they own worthwhile one cent in the building of your town in any way? If they never do, who helps you in sickness or offer you credit if in need? Stick to your home merchant. Heed his advertisement for his trade.

A Queer Incident.

There are many ups and downs in life. On Independence Day, July 4th, another child was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hoyt, of Lansingburg, N. Y. "Royal Household" Flour

Gives Stomach Less Work and Body More Strength.

No flour in the world is so nourishing, so vitalizing, so rich in all the elements of body, bone and brain building as pure, well-balanced, white flour.

Bran in bread is just so much wood fibre—so much extra work for the stomach—there is no nourishment in it for man. Cattle digest it and get nourishment from it because nature has given them a fermenting plant and double chewing facilities.

But man masticates once and digests once. For that reason he gets nothing whatever out of anything but the gluten portion of wheat—the inside of the grain—the part which yields 'proteine.' And he gets more out of Royal Household Flour because more of the branny and waste portions are removed in making it than from any other flour.

The Royal Household Mills eliminate more bran and snorts than any other mill—therefore Royal Household Flour is the most nourishing flour in the world.

THE HANDS.

Don't cut the nails in points, but carefully arched.

Don't cut the cuticle or any part of the flesh around the nails.

Don't cut the nails without first holding them in wax to soften them.

Don't wear rings that are too small. The inevitable result is red and swollen hands and knuckles.

Don't wear bracelets tight enough to affect the circulation or so that they rub on the joints of the wrists.

Don't wear gloves every night or the hands will become yellow. Occasional use of gloves, however, is advisable.

Don't forget to pinch the ends of the fingers now and then. This will do a good deal toward making the fingers taper.

Don't dry the hands carelessly after washing. Use a soft damask towel or a silk handkerchief and dry thoroughly.

Sample Only.

The "Anticipation Box."

A fad among young society people is the "anticipation box." This is really a revival of the old custom of our grandmothers of collecting things, useful and beautiful, for the wedding trousseau or for the new home which is also anticipated. Into this box go various gifts that come to a girl from time to time during the year to appropriate at the time of her wedding. Pretty handkerchiefs, bits of rare lace, silver pieces, pictures, fine china, fine table linen, pieces of hand embroidery, pieces of pretty lingerie, drawn work, soda pillow covers and a host of other things find their way into the "anticipation box." As all these things will doubtless come into use some day, this is really a sensible fad after all.

BARONESS MACDONALD OF EARNSCLIFFE

The Widow of Canada's Great Statesman

The study of the lives of great men reveals so many instances that their inspiration, stimulus, and constant source of new strength, was the love and companionship of a devoted woman. The debt of helpfulness that the late Sir John A. Macdonald, Canada's great Premier and statesman, owed to Lady Macdonald, his second wife, cannot be overestimated, according to the testimony of those who knew them both. "All that Lady Beaconsfield was to the Conservative Premier of England," says one, "Lady Macdonald was to the Conservative Premier of Canada. Their understanding of each other was complete."

On the island of Jamaica, the birthplace of two other brilliant women of the Empire—Josephine de Beauharnais and Lady Hillsdon—Lady Macdonald, daughter of Hon. T. J. Bernard, a member of the Privy Council, was born in 1836. The death of her father, while she was still a child, made it necessary to take Bernard for her education. When she was eighteen, she came to Canada with her mother for a visit, her two brothers, Richard and Edward Bernard, having gone on the legal profession. Here she met Sir John Macdonald. Thirteen years later, in 1867, they were married in London—the twelfth year of the reign of Victoria—and from then on the history of Canada, for it was the year in which the British North America Act, the United Empire Loyalists' charter, the "Magna Charta" governing the New Dominion through its trying first years.

Lady Macdonald accompanied her husband to Washington, and was with him during the long deliberations of the Joint High Commission which led to the Treaty of Washington in 1871. She was with him, too, on that trip over the new Canadian Pacific Railway, whose very existence, so largely due to him, and the steel rails of which bonded and united Canada into one great dominion as no bonds of law could ever do.

On the death of Sir John, in 1891, recognizing his splendid services to the Empire, and the noiseless devotion of his widow to all the public events, Queen Victoria was graciously pleased to raise her to the peerage, making her a Baroness in her own right—the only Colonial thus honored with the title Baroness Macdonald of Earnscliffe. Besides her social and philanthropic work, Lady Macdonald has written frequently for the magazines on Canadian topics near to her heart. Since 1896, when she disposed of Earnscliffe, her beautiful home in Ottawa, she has resided chiefly in London.

Rock of Ages.

In the book of Isaiah the Lord Jehovah is termed "the Rock of ages."

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,"
Thoughtlessly the maiden sung;
Full the words unconsciously
From her girlish, gleeful tongue;
Sang as sings the birds in June;
Full the words like light leaves down
On the cotter and the throne:
"Rock of ages, cleft for me,"
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Let me hide myself in Thee"—
Felt her soul no need to hide—
So set the song as song would be
And she had no thought beside;
All the words unheeding!

Fell from lips untouched by care,
Dreaming not they might be true
On some other lips a prayer:
"Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,"
'Twas a woman sang them now,
Pleadingly and prayerfully;
Every word her heart did know.
Rose the song as storm-tossed bird
Beats with weary wings the air,
Every note with sorrow stirred,
Every syllable a prayer—
"Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,"
Lips grown aged sang the hymn,
Trustingly and tenderly,
Voice grown weak and eyes grown dim,—
Let me hide myself in Thee,"
Trembling though the voice and low;
Rose the sweet strain peacefully,
Like a river in its flow;
Sang as only they can sing
Who life's journey pain have passed;
Sang as only they can sing
Who behold the promised rest.
"Rock of ages, cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee."

"Rock of ages, cleft for me,"
Sung above a coffin lid;
Undisturbed, all restfully,
All life's joys and sorrows hid.
Nevermore, O storm-tossed soul!
Nevermore from wind of ills,
Nevermore, from billows roll,
Will thou need thyself to hide.
Could the sightless, sunken eyes
Closed beneath the soft clay hair,
Could the mute and stiffened lips
Move again in pleading prayer,
Still, say still, the words would be—
"Let me hide myself in Thee."

SELECTIONS

A ROYAL DETECTIVE.

How a Danish Professor Trapped the French "Yellow Book."

It is not very often that a princess of the blood royal plays detective, but that is just what Princess Valdemar of Denmark, née Marie of Orleans, has done, and, what is more, she has proved to the French postal authorities guilty of opening, and, perhaps, tampering with and resealing them.

For some time there have been rumors that the French authorities, like Russia, have maintained a "cabinet noir"—that is to say, a secret department, whose letters suspected of containing political secrets are opened and read before they are allowed to reach the person to whom they are addressed.

Princess Valdemar, the confidante of the late Empress Eugenie, has had a reputation of dabbling in grand politics, unknown for what reason, but a suspicion that her letters to her mother, the Duchess of Chartres, were opened and read. To make sure she laid a trap for the French authorities.

At the bottom of a letter to her mother she added the following postscript:

"Dear Mother—I send you the first Danish violets of the season. Keep them and think of me every time you look at them." And intentionally she then forgot to inclose the violets.

Some days afterward she received a letter from the Princess of Chartres, in which she thanked her daughter for the little Danish flowers. The trap had worked to perfection.

It is easy to guess what happened. One of the articles of the "cabinet noir" opened the letter and read it through, and when he did not see any violets he thought that he must have dropped them and replaced them with French violets.

Whether the princess will make a complaint or not is not known, but she declares that after this her letters go to her safely, inclosed in envelopes bearing the imprint of the Danish royal coat of arms.—Paris Cor. Kansas City Star.

The Telephone Barometer.

In Paris a new use has been discovered for the telephone. When one can't do anything else with it one can turn his telephone to account as a barometer. Having planted two iron rods in the garden at a distance of about twenty feet one from the other, connect both with the wire of the telephone. The soil in which the rods stand must be well soaked every night or ten days with a solution of hydrochlorate of ammonia. Then by listening at the telephone one will be able to forecast the weather at least twelve hours in advance more accurately than with any barometer. If a crackling or pattering noise, like that of hailstones on a roof, is heard, rain may be set down. A low, murmuring sound, described as like the "hum of distant twittering of birds," foretells a sudden change in the temperature.

Municipalization of Medicine.

The town of Zerbst has taken a step toward the municipalization of medicine and surgery. Last year all the population over sixteen years old suffered to make an income of £100,000 to pay the doctors. Forty doctors will get £2,500 each per year, and they must give all needed attention to all citizens of the commune, young or old. The last account of the plan is not ahead. This is getting medical service on a cheap plan. The other nations look sidelong at it. The attention of Chicago is called to the experiment.

The Yazoo Valley.

What is known as the Yazoo valley is a tract of river bottom 4,000,000 acres in extent, lying between the bluffs below Memphis and running about 200 miles southward to Vicksburg. Here it is about sixty-five miles wide at its widest part, its bounded on the west by the Mississippi river and on the east by the Yazoo. The natural yield of this region is not surpassed in any where in the world. No fertilizers are ever needed. It will produce every crop known to the temperate zone and the labor expended than any other section in the United States.—Boston Transcript.

The Great Cities of the Future.

Chicago and St. Louis will live in the first history as the two greatest cities of the world, Professor J. Paul Goode of the University of Chicago told his students in a recent lecture. "In the near future the ocean steamships will come straight to Chicago by means of the St. Lawrence river and the great lakes, and will continue to go to St. Louis by means of the Mississippi, and Chicago will become the second largest city of the world because of its commerce."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Colored Men Buy Flats.

Negroes have become the extensive property owners in New York city. They have incorporated the Afro-American Realty company, which in six months has acquired on five year leases fifteen flat buildings capable of accommodating 100 families. It also owns a four hundred tenement flat. The capital stock is $500,000, one-fifth of which was immediately paid in by the colored incorporators.

Sunlight Soap is recommended, by those who have investigated the different kind of soaps, as being the best and purest on the market. Those who have gone still further and tried the different methods state that the Sunlight way of washing is greatly superior to ordinary methods because it requires much less work and makes the clothes whiter and cleaner. Because Sunlight Soap is quite pure and free from adulteration it will not injure delicate fabrics or the user's hands.

Good Casters ON Ives' Brass Beds

The caster on a metal or brass bed is important. An imperfect caster is liable to injure carpets or rugs while on polished floors it mars leaves marks.

Ives' Brass Beds have a double wheel ball bearing caster. The double wheel divides the weight and its wide face does not mark the floor, while it turns so easily to the motion of the bed that it never injures carpets.

It is attention to important small things that makes Ives' beds the finest in America.

Ask to see an Ives Brass Bed and examine it closely.

We Want More Workmen—

Painters and Paperhangers

but we must have good men. We will be useless for inexperienced men to make application.

TO OUR CUSTOMERS

We would say that although now we are carrying a staff of workmen, three times larger than any other similar house in the city, we are determined to keep our work straight up to the satisfaction of our customers. We will not, however, flood our work with inferior workmen.

We have just completed the decorating of the beautifully remodelled and refitted Methodist Church in Deseronto. It is a credit to the Deseronto Methodists and to this house.

. . . . .

Our decorative and painting department is rapidly booming. On Monday, 26th inst., we commence the exterior and interior decorating of the 20th Belleville Methodist Church, and we will do it right. Not surpassed as said we will prove every remark made.

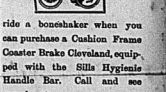

We have other churches to do soon—a number of them. We make a specialty of church decorating because we know how.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Hooray! for the weather man. Wasn't the temperature delightful this morning?

* * *

If we'd only had a day like this on the Glorious Twelfth!

At last we have found out why some men don't go to church. A gentleman said last night: "I always like to be the minister when I go to church, but right in front of me, whenever I do, sits a strawberry, blonde with a hat nearly as big as a family umbrella. I rubber around that hat till I get a pain in my neck and temper, and go home declaring I won't go to church any more till big hats are tabooed in church." Here, perhaps, is a hint for the good people who are trying to solve the great moral problem, "Why don't men go to church?"

* * *

Certain members of the Board of Education objected last night to the old-fashioned way in which teachers were asked for the re-classifying of a certain school. No wonder. If the board is going to revert to the system practised by our great grandfathers the least it can do is to hire a bellman. The proper way is to advertise such matters in the newspapers. Economy which smacks of unfairness is very false economy, indeed.

* * *

It will be seen that, in future, the matter of discipline in the schools will be entirely in the hands of the teachers, unhampered by any restrictions on the part of the Board of Education. This is as it should be. The pedagogues have laws laid down for their guidance. When they break those laws it is time enough for the Board to interfere.

* * *

Col. Ponton, we understand, his asked Mr. W. H. Northrup, M. P., to bring up in Parliament the matter of the drowning of Major Stanley and others, and move that, in some manner, steps be taken to safeguard the valuable lives of men who do the surveying for enterprises such as the G. T. P. It would appear that, in matters of this kind, life is held much too cheaply in Canada. A frail canoe was a poor thing in which to risk the lives of such men as Major Stanley, especially when large bodies of water were to be crossed. Accidents like the one in question have been all too common recently. Other surveyors have been drowned, and one poor fellow lost his reason owing to hardships encountered. They do things differently across the line, as witness the case of the Panama Canal, where the first three years are to be occupied solely in bettering natural conditions so that the men who work on the canal can do so without being subjected to deadly fevers and plagues. Three years of this, without any work on the canal at all. Contrast this with the way things are done in Canada! Certainly the Federal Government should take some action to safeguard the lives of pioneers who go out to blaze the way for civilization. There should surely be some way to stop this apparent wanton waste of valuable human lives.

Premier Balfour will introduce redistribution proposals in the Imperial Parliament which, providing they are carried out, will cause Ireland's representations to be reduced 22. There will be some warm talk in the Green Isle over that.

SOME HARD KNOX.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

Those grand fighting Japs, Togo, Oyim, Kuroki, Oku and Oyama, are Presbyterians. But there is another kind of Presbyterians, of which his reverend nibs of the Toronto Globe is a fair sample.

A SLIGHT MISTAKE.

(Brockville Times.)

Yankee earnings, riflemen and golfers have been badly beaten in England this summer. But a little Yankee girl from California, Miss Sutton, has beaten the best of the English tennis players. Hamilton Times.

The "little Yankee girl" happens to be an English girl, the daughter of an English captain who settled in California.

A HOWLING SUCCESS.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Mr. E. Guss Porter sought to cast reflections on the Ontario and Ottawa Liberal ministers by his gaitery play with a bogus ballot box in the House last night. His effort was a howling failure, as he proved to be to show his animus. The net result was to produce the impression that Mr. Porter had been more eager to play party politics than to engage in a violation of the law. — Hamilton Times.

On the contrary Mr. Porter's performance with the ballot box was a howling success, especially when he inserted three votes each for Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr Borden and produced five votes for Sir Wilfrid and one for Mr. Borden. By-the-by such an ingenious and effective invironment could not have been obtained for use by the Liberal party except at considerable expenditure of a great deal of money. Perhaps the party would have to be paid to keep the secret as well as for the use of the design. Where did Hon. Mr. Graham get from?

Adrian Fairley, the noted portrait painter, was talking in his New York studio about "delicacy."

"I was very poor in my youth," he said, "but, despite my poverty, I always managed to be fastidious and polite. I often had to put off creditors, I often had to do many disagreeable things, but I always did them in a delicate way.

"Once, for instance, I ordered a five-cent plate of soup in a Bowery restaurant. When the waitress brought this soup to me, its condition was such that I felt called upon to rebuke her. I touched my rubber to deliver terms.

"Emma," I said, taking some thing out of the soup and holding it up before the girl, "I am grateful to you for this remembrance, but next time kindly give it to me in a locket."

JUDKINS MOWED THE LAWN.

Young Judkins bought a cottage once,
It had a big front yard;
To keep it weeds free complete
He labored long and hard.
The grass and weeds all ruthly grew,
And every day at dawn,
And every night, when work was through
Young Judkins mowed the lawn.

And when he'd worked across the lot
With arms and ankles sore,
The side where he began had got
As shaggy as before.
The neighbors watched the struggle grim
'Twixt grass and human brawn,
They sometimes sought to comfort him,
But Judkins mowed the lawn.

When to his office he would go,
That grass was on his mind,
In dreams he oft could see it grow,
His lonely wife repined
And thought of scythes and toss
Where other wives had gone;
She yearned for simple joys like those,
But Judkins mowed the lawn.

LANDED HIS FISH.

STURGEON WEIGHING 101 POUNDS FOUGHT WITH CAPTOR.

Watertown, N. Y., July 14. — The most exciting fish story, that is to be authenticated, heard so far this season, comes from Massena, where Orville A. Hubrock, a famous fisherman of that section, had a battle royal the other night with a monster sturgeon. A few night ago Orville, who was passing near the rocks of one of the Massena canal power-houses, saw a sturgeon of gigantic proportions in the foaming waters near the rocks. Orville took a rope and, after a half-hour's trial, succeeded in getting a noose over the sturgeon's tail.

For another half hour he fought to tire the fish out, and finally, when it lay quiet against the rocks, he got down, rested one knee on the girt of the gate-house wall, and, with his shoulder against the rocks, reached down into the water to pull the sturgeon out. After hauling the fish well up out of the water, he found that he was unable to secure a hold lower down on the slimy monster, on account of having to cling to the girt with one hand. He got a firm grip with his teeth on the tail of the fish, but the demon of the deep gave a flop and tore loose, leaving a pair of tail between Orville's jaws. After another twenty minutes' wrestle, the noose was slipped over the head of the fish, and Orville hauled him out. He tipped the beam at 101 pounds.

HAIR NATURALLY ABUNDANT.

When It Is Free of Dandruff, Itching and Scurf.

Hair preparations and dandruff cures, as a rule, are sticky or irritating affairs that do not quickly good. Hair, when not diseased, grows naturally, luxuriantly. Dandruff is the cause of nine-tenths of all hair troubles, and dandruff is caused by a germ. The only way to cure dandruff is to kill the germ, and, as far as I know, hair preparation that will positively destroy the germ is Newbro's Herpicide—absolutely harmless, free from grease, sediment, dye stuff or deleterious drugs. It allays itching instantly; makes hair glossy and soft as silk. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect" is my leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. The Red Rose Flavor and Strength

NO Ceylon tea nor Indian tea alone can have the "rich fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea, because neither variety in itself possesses all the qualities of strength, richness, delicacy, and fragrance. Each has its own peculiar qualities, but each has its weaknesses.

By combining the two in the Red Rose proportions, I produce a tea with the "rich fruity flavor" and strength of Red Rose Tea, a flavor and strength found in no brand of Ceylon alone.

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

ABOUT THE ACACIA.

THE BUMP HAS FLATTENED OUT A LOT SINCE THE FOURTH OF JULY.

Kingston Whig: The fast-named schooner Acacia with Capt. Payne in command returned last evening from her first trip to Charlotte, after the regrettable affair of July 4th. Everything went nice this time, however, and no "Bumps" were recorded. Captain Simmons got his clearance papers without any words. Collector Bump was present at the office, but neither spoke. On the return trip as the schooner was leaving her mooring a few little shavers did some cheering, but no attention was paid them. The captain stated that he had mailed a report of the affair that last night, addressing it to the Minister of Marine, and that was all the affair. The former letter had never reached the department, and an investigation into the cause will be made. With regard to the appointment of Captain Fitzgerald, calling the whole affair a fiasco, Captain Simmons had little to say. He however, had this morning received a copy of the latest volume on flags, ensigns, etc., from an English officer at Ottawa, who expressed the pleasure he hoped some days to have of meeting the man who stuck to his colors. He would have preferred that Acacia had been taken down, however, but Capt. Simmons thinks he would enjoy under the circumstances. The Acacia left here on Tuesday for Charlotte, and returned last evening. She starts on her next trip to-morrow evening. All on board seem pleased at the Gatling gun fire our friend Bump is being subjected to by the press of his own country.

An Interesting Find.

Workmen are at present engaged in remodelling the residence of Ald. Gordon, on Church St., this morning, in tearing down a...wall, they found, in a hollow space in the wall, a copy of The Christian Guardian of Aug. 31, 1836. The paper, though it shows signs of age, is quite free from the fair state of repair, and will doubtless be found to contain matter of interest to many old-time Methodists.

Praise for Mr. Crothers.

Picton Gazette: Mr. Thomas Crothers, of Consort, President of the Prince Edward F. L. Association, who has always acknowledged her several months in placing immigrants from Great Britain among the farmers of this county, has had his work endorsed by high authority. A deputation from London, Eng., has visited him for the purpose of learning his methods and Secretary acquainted Mr. Crothers with Edward's...and said J. H. Richardson, the former father secretary of Shaftesbury Society, and the latter editor of the Daily Telegraph, of London, two gentlemen well qualified to understand the system that has been adopted by Mr. Crothers. These three called on Mr. Crothers and he explained to the immigrants have been placed by the Association and said that Mr. Crothers would have the preference as regards the boys that will come to this county in the future. This speaks highly for Mr. Crothers, who has been characterized with commendable judgment.

But se some men linger look climb die shut stream up Hill.

KEATS.

Dandy Keates he is all Scotty bust,
Always writing something new.
He has flirt with Highland Mary
And with plenty odors to.
His writing lots of lines to women
And to simple little tings.
But dey used to eat about him,
"Twogs look bright yes Bobbie Burns."

Bob not never save no pangs;
No he knowed him true.
He he say veh night, "My jimmy,
I'll see you again in the morning."
But se some songs of Bobbie's
Everywear a fellow sings.
And his songs dey all has different—
God made your weather.

Effect of Discussion.

Wife—Some of the positively disgusting people we meet at dinner parties are those who are always discussing language you are in good condition of your office.

Husband—What have I done now, dear?

Wife—Why, when Mr. Snodgrass asked you to say grace at the table to-day you commenced with "Our Father Lord" and ended with "Very respectfully yours."—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

"Too Sensitive an Organ.

"How do ye get out o' here?" asked a prisoner from beyond the seas, who had lost himself in the department store.

"You asked me that a few minutes ago," replied the floorwalker, "and I told you to go down in the lift and ask to be left."

"Well," replied Cholly, "when I finally do make up my mind I stick to it. There's consistency, at any rate."

"Yes, the consistency of mush."—Philadelphia Press.

GEORGE W. PERKINS

To Be Alleged to Be the Smartest Man in the Business.

J. P. Morgan is not a director of many companies. His name appears only twelve times, but he is representative in the directorates of other corporations by his partners and even by clerks in his offices. George W. Perkins, one of these partners, is a director in twenty-two corporations, and Frank Bacon, another partner, in thirty-six.

Mr. Perkins is becoming one of the big men of this country. He is called the smartest man in New York. He was born in Chester, Ill., in 1862, and got his education in the public schools of that place. When he was fifteen years old he got a job as errand boy in the Chester office of the New York Life Insurance company and was promoted from time to time to messenger, bookkeeper, cashier, inspector of agencies, superintendent of division, third term president, and second vice president, reaching the latter responsibility in 1892, when he resigned from the office to take charge of the agency force throughout the country. In 1901 he called upon J. P. Morgan to ask for a subscription to a fund to preserve the Palisades of the Hudson river and was introduced to him by Mr. Bacon, for the two had met years before. Mr. Morgan had written his name for a generous sum on the subscription book if he returned it to Mr. Perkins, and, pointing to the chair on the other side of his desk, he said:

"I'll give you $100,000 a year, Perkins, if you'll come over here and accept that seat."

"Are you jokin'?" inquired Mr. Perkins.

"Certainly not," said Mr. Morgan. "If you can give me a dollar's worth, young man in this office and have had my eye on you for years."

After further conversation Mr. Perkins agreed to take the matter under consideration, but finally declined it at the request of the directors of the New York Life Insurance company, who increased his salary to the amount offered by Mr. Morgan. A few weeks later Mr. Morgan renewed the proposition and offered him a partnership in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., which pays him $100,000 a year and $900 a year.—W. E. Curtis in Chicago Record-Herald.

When His Hat Yet Lost.

Last summer, after a bet, Captain Ilusky, a St. Petersburg dragoon officer, laundered his hat himself in Kuropatkin's headquarters at Liaoyang, dash through the Russian lines, breaking Port Arthur, enter the town, break through the naval brigade and reach Chefu. He was to get $50,000 if he succeeded, but to pay nothing if he failed. Disguised as a Chinaman he ran the gauntlet through the Japanese army in broad daylight. He succeeded and reached the fortress. Three nights later, carrying dispatches, he left Chefu in a vessel that he had succeeded, he sailed through the Japanese fleet and reached Chefu. The journey took him six weeks. After risking his life Ilusky never got the money. When, reach three months after starting, he returned to St. Petersburg he found the layer of the $50,000 a bankrupt.

Going Alert Inside the Mast.

The duty of the man in the mast-head the lofty altitude of the crow's nest would strike a deep water sailor as a most perilous one, but the mastheads are the part of any one who suggested that the duty of the man in the mast-head is just what the man on lookout duty does on all the ships that sail the seas, and that is the steel masts.

The man who has ever observed one of these bare poles with shrouds ending a long distance below the crow's perch and with nothing but the crow's perch was simply put there for looks, and that the only possible means of access was by the rigging to the lookout. And no one who has ever tried to reach it by "shinning up" the mast.

As a matter of fact, the crow's nest is not there for looks, but rather that is fastened inside the hollow tube of the mast, entrance to which is by a steel door just above the deck on one side of the mast.—New York Press.

Expected a Savage.

Colonel Bunyea, Bolivian charge d'affaires in London, tells this story: "It is the custom in Bolivia for a man going to a country house in England, and there are no railroads to reach it, to indies of the house party. They were all startled to see a big savage step out what was the reason. But soon I discovered that he was the footman of the house party brought me her album and asked me to write my name down and my address. I wrote it in full, and so, and after having written 'Bolivia' after my name I added in brackets, as is the custom, 'Indian.' Something else? I said, 'Mouth drawing and a big savage asked is what we want.' And then the lady of the house told me they had been discussing at length whether I was or was not a savage. Some said it was in South Africa and others in Bolivia, but they were all sure this I found out they expected to see me dressed in feathers."

A Feast and a Theory.

Mexico has an institute of medicine and has lately issued a book of designs thereof to the state of Michoacan to investigate the properties of a plant which grows there and being bark a specimen. According to the Mexicans, the perfume of this plant produce a bewilderment of the senses, and persons thus affected lose their way in the woods where it grows, and rescue parties have to be sent out after them. The institute will investigate the properties of this perfume and if the customary is successful in bringing back a specimen. But if he does without losing his way the authorities in regard to the west should be somewhat interested.

Try Gin Pills at our expense

We want every man and woman in Canada who suffers from Kidney and Bladder Troubles, to write us for free sample of Gin Pills.

We want everyone who has sick friends to send us their names and addresses, that we may mail them, free of charge, a sample box of Gin Pills.

100,000 Sample Boxes Given Away.

There are hundreds who are martyrs to Kidney Trouble, having tried everything else without relief. There are dozens in every town who may have Kidney Trouble without knowing it. If your ache—aching Back—can't sleep—no appetite—if you constantly desire to urinate—if the urine is scanty, burning or highly colored—if the feet and hands are swollen—if the eyesight is dimmed—if there are frequent pains in the back, through the hips and legs—then you have the most positive symptoms of Kidney Trouble.

There are the people, we hope, who will send in their names that Gin Pills may cure them.

What They Are

Each Gin Pill contains the medicinal properties of one and one-half ounces of best Juniper Berries, the Vitriol purified to the extent of 98 per cent., and the alcohol-spirit left out. These medicinal principles are compounded with several other remedies of correctional value—and the whole made up in the form of a small, pleasant pill. These are the Gin Pills you have heard about, the greatest number of cures in their history. Send them a postal card.

What They Do

Gin Pills cure "Cold on the Kidneys," Inflammation of the Kidneys, Uric Acid, causing Gout and Rheumatism, Ulceration and Inflammation of the Bladder, Painful and suppressed Urine, constant desire to urinate, Gravel or Stone in the Bladder, Diabetes, Bright's Disease of the Kidneys and Bladder. They never fail to relieve the worst cases of Backache, Rheumatism, sore, strained and lame muscles, straighten the organs, and effect a speedy and permanent cure.

Won't you try Gin Pills at our expense? It costs nothing. Simply a post card. Ask us to send a sample box free. Say in what paper you saw this advertisement and sign your name and address. Do it to-day—NOW.

Moran of the Lady Letty

By FRANK NORRIS, Author of "The Octopus," "The Pit," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by D. L. McCLURE Company

lovingly over the polished brass of the instruments. "There's a thousand dollars' worth of stuff right here. The chronometer's worth five hundred alone. Bennett & Bone' own make." He turned to the secretary.

"Now!" he exclaimed, with a long breath.

What followed thrilled Wilbur with alternate excitement, contempt and a vivid sense of desecration and sacrilege. For the life of him he could not make the thing seem right or legal in his eyes, and yet he had neither the wish nor the power to stay his hand or interfere with what Kitchell was doing.

The captain put the blade of the axe in the chinks of the secretary's door and wrenched it free. It opened down to form a sort of desk and disclosed an array of cubbyholes and two small doors, both locked. These latter Kitchell smashed in with the axe head. Then he seated himself in the swivel chair and began to ride them open expeditiously, Wilbur leaning over his shoulder.

The best from the cost below them was almost unbearable. In the cabin the six doors kept up a continuous and shocking fusillade, as though half a dozen men were fighting with revolvers. From without, down the open skylight, came the eloquent talk of the Chinamen and the wash and ripple of the two vessels, now side by side. The air, foul beyond expression, reeked of brass. Their heads swam and ached to bursting; but, absorbed in their work, they had no thought of the lapse of time nor of the discomfort of their surroundings. Twice during the examination of the lady's papers Kitchell sent Wilbur out into the cabin for the whisky decanter in the swinging racks.

"That's how. I'm the boss."

"Here's the charter papers," said Kitchell, unfolding and spreading them out one by one, "and here's the clearance papers from the Port of England. This yere's the insurances, and here, this yere's the—that's about the papers for the crew; no use to us."

In a separate envelope, carefully sealed and bound, they came upon the captain's private papers. A marriage certificate setting forth the union between Elliott Sternersen of Prahalmen, Norway, and Sarah Lord of some unimport town (the name was indecipherable) of the north of England. Next came a birth certificate of a daughter named Moran, dated ninety-two years back, and a bill of sale of the bark Lady Letty whereby a two-thirds interest was conveyed from the two previous owners, a shipbuilding firm of Christiania, to Captain Elliott Sternersen.

"The old man was his own boss," commented Mr. Kitchell. "Sailor" he remarked. "Look here." A yellowed photograph was in his hand, the picture of a stout, fair lady in the full bloom of sheet forty, wearing enormous pendent earrings in the style of the early sixties. Below was written: "S. Moran Sternersen, ob. 1867."

"Old woman copped off," said Kitchell. "So much the better for us. He heirs to put in their gab, an'—held hard, steady all—here's the will, s'help me."

The only items of importance in the will were the confirmation of the wife's death and the expressly stated bequest of the bark known as and sailing under the name of the Lady Letty to my only and beloved daughter, Moran."

"Well," said Kitchell.

The captain sucked his mustache fitfully, striking the desk with his fist.

"The bark's ours!" There was a certain ring of defiance in his voice. "Hang the will! I ain't so cockaire about the law, but I'll make sure."

"As how?" said Wilbur.

Kitchell slung the will out of the open port into the sea.

"That's how," he remarked. "I'm the heirs, I found the will, I destroyed it. Now mine she stays—yours an' mine, that is."

But Wilbur had not even the time to thoroughly enjoy the satisfaction that the captain's words gave him. Already an idea suddenly presented itself to his mind. The girl he had found on board of the bark, the ruddy, fair haired girl of the blue and white striped dress—she was the daughter, of course; that was "Moran." Instantly the situation adjusted itself in his mind. Between the two inseparables, father and daughter, neither both, their lives joined together on shipboard, and the Lady Letty their dream, their ambition, it was clear that at last they could call their own.

Then this disastrous voyage, the tragic first fact in the case—the sudden destruction, in the cost, the panic-terror of the crew and Moran' desertion of the bark, and the sturdy resolution of the father and daughter to bring the bark in—to work her into port alone. They had failed. The father had died from gas. The girl, at least for the moment, was crazed from the effects. But the bark had not been abandoned. The owner was on board. Kitchell was wrong. She was no derelict. Not a penny could they gain by her salvage.

For an instant a wave of bitterest disappointment passed over Wilbur as he saw his $50,000 dwindling to nothing. Then the instincts of habit reasserted themselves. The salvager in him was stronger than the freebooter after all. He felt that it was his duty to see to it that the girl had her rights, that Kitchell must be made aware of the situation—must be told that Moran, the daughter, the captain's heir, was on board the schooner; that the schooner was not a derelict, that was a girl. But on second thoughts that would never do. Above all things the captain could must not be shown that a girl was aboard the schooner on which he had absolute command, nor, setting the question of Moran's sex aside, must Kitchell know her even at the dead captain's bedside. There was a difference in the men here, and Wilbur recognized it. Wilbur, the law abiding taxpayer, was a wreckmaking in comparison with Kitchell, the freebooter and beachcomber, in sight of the prize.

He said to the captain, making a bundle of all the papers, "take these over to my bunk and slide 'em under the donkey's breakfast. Stop a bit," he added as Kitchell turned away, "I'll go with you. We'll have to bury the old man."

Throughout all the afternoon the captain had been drinking the whisky from the decanter found in the cabin. Now he stood up unsteadily, and, raising his glass, announced:—

"Sonny, here's to Kitchell, Wilbur & Co., beachcombers, to-limited. What do you say, hey?"

"I only want to be sure that we're a right in the bark," answered Wilbur.

Right to 'er—t-bight to 'er!" hiccoughed the captain. "Strike me blind, I'd like to see any one try an' take her away from Alvina Kitchell now!" And he thrust out his chin at Wilbur.

"Well, so much the better, then," said Wilbur, pocketing the papers. The pair ascended to the deck.

The burial of Captain Sternersen was a dreadful business. Kitchell, far gone in whisky, stood on the bowsprit using his orders, drinking from one of the decanters he had brought up with him. His liquor already ruled the dead man's pockets and had even taken away the boots and for final cap Clothes were cut from the spanker and rolled around the body. Then Kitchell ordered the peak halyards unrove and used as lashings to tie the canvas around the corpse. The red and white flags, the distress signals, were still bound on the halyards.

"Leave 'em on! Leave 'em on!" commanded Kitchell. "Do 'em up in shrouds; All ready now; stan' by to let go!"

Wilbur looked over at the schooner and noted, with immense relief, that Moran was not in sight. Suddenly an abrupt reaction took place in the captain's addled brain.

"Can't bury 'um 'thout 'is teeth," he gabbled solemnly. He laid back the canvas and replaced the set. "Ole man 'd never f'r I lef' 'e teeth. Birtie, look a' that! I put 'em in upside down. Nev' min', spat' Gawn' Gawnsat' up, what odds, all one with ole Bill. Hey, ole Bill, all same with you, hey?" Suddenly he began to howl with laughter. "T' think o' bein' buried with your teeth spat' down! Oh, me, but that's a good grind! Stan' by to heave 'em Uncle Bill over board. Now, sir, an' away she goes!" He ran to the side, waving his hat and hooting ere, "Gon'by, ole, by by! There you go, an' the signal o' distress from your ole Bill! I'm in need of assistance.' Lord, here comes the Chinamen! Look! Look at the fight! Look at 'em takin' ole Bill! 'I'm in need of assistance.' I shd'd say I was, when Bill's gone!"

Wilbur looked anew over the side in the direction of the landing water, then drew back, sick to vomiting. But in less than a minute the boiling water was quiet. Not a shark was in sight.

"Get over to the Berths with those papers, sir," ordered Kitchell. "I'll bide here and dig up ah' more loot. I'll get this ole Bill over board before he can point 'fore I'll leave. I won't leave a penny, not a bit. Bill, you're not to do p' bear!" he shouted, his face purple, his eyes bloodshot.

Wilbur returned to the schooner with the two Chinamen, leaving Kitchell alone in the bark. He found the girl sitting by the rudderhead almost as he had left her, having shaken off her fit of vague, unseeing eyes.

"Your name is Moran, isn't it," he asked—"Moran Sternersen?"

"Yes," she said after a pause, then looked curiously at a bit of turned rope on the deck. Nothing more could be got out of her. Wilbur talked to her at length and tried to make her understand the situation, but it was evident she did not follow. However, at each mention of her name she would answer "Yes."

"Yes, yes; I'm Moran."

Wilbur turned away from her, biting his nether lip in perplexity.

"I see that am I going to do?" he muttered. "What a situation! If I tell the captain, it's all over with the girl. If he don't kill her, he'd do worse—might be both. He'd—he'd, tell you, there's a girl on board, and she alone in the world. It's begun to go already," he added, listening to the sounds that came from the bark. Kitchell was raging in his cabin. He was in a frenzy of drink; an in hand, smashing glassware, hacking into the woodwork with the axe. Wilbur at the top of his voice.

LEAKING joints are the natural outcome of the old style of boiler connection—a screwed steam or water pipe. This joint is a short time because dried out and left a leaky joint.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

Nothing but iron and steel enters into the construction of the Oxford Hot Water Boiler—no rubber or composition washers are used.

Smooth, machined steel nipples present into smooth, tapered holes make an absolutely indestructible joint. We would like to tell you the many other advantages of the Oxford Boiler. Our illustrated catalogue, "The Gurney Oxford Book of Steam and Hot Water Heating Apparatus," tells the whole story. Let us forward you a copy to-day.

THREATENED WITH PARALYSIS.

Before Treatment. After Treatment.

Mr. John Hoffman, Kalamazoo, Mich., says: "For many years I suffered terribly from nervous debility. I had a constant drain, was extremely nervous and had a bad case of kidney trouble. I worked a few days and then was compelled to lay off for weeks. I was treated by several doctors, but got no relief. I then decided to go to Dr. Kennedy & Kergan, and after taking their treatment for a short time I was entirely cured. I have gained in flesh, my nerves are strong, my kidney trouble has entirely disappeared, and I feel like a new man. I cheerfully recommend them to all sufferers from nervous debility."

NERVOUS TREATMENT $10. Includes all medicines necessary to cure any case. Cures guaranteed or no pay. Write for question blank for home treatment.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the shrewd young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

FREE HAND TO TEACHERS IN SCHOOL DISCIPLINE.

BOARD OF EDUCATION PASSED MOTION TO THAT EFFECT LAST NIGHT — VARIOUS SCHOOLS TO BE REPAIRED — OLD-FASHIONED WAY OF ASKING FOR TENDERS — SCHOOLS TO BE OPEN FOR OLD BOYS' REUNION.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last evening, at which the following members were present; Messrs. J. F. Wills, chairman; J. H. Anderson, G. A. Bennett, T. F. Hudson, E. P. Hudson, A. F. Lewis, W. S. Morden, H. Naylor, W. N. Ponton, R. Taylor, W. Tennent, J. Wright, W. Johnson and Rev. A. L. Geen.

After the reading and confirming of the minutes of last meeting the following communications, etc., were read:

From Rev. Dr. Dyer, Principal of Albert College, in reference to the teaching of domestic science in the college to the scholars of the Belleville schools. The examination held was exceedingly gratifying.

From Miss Lansborough, of this city, applying for a position on the teaching staff when a vacancy occurred.

From all the teachers in the city applying to be re-appointed upon the teaching staff. — Referred to the School Management Committee.

REPORTS.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

T. S. Carman	$ 4.50
H. McCoy	2.00
H. M. Yeo	2.00
G. N. W. Tel. Co.	.50
County of Hastings	18.00
Albert College	300.00
C. S. Dickson	37.50
F. U. Clarke	37.25
Geo. Madole	2.00

The Committee recommended that insurance expiring on the Public School be placed in the Ottawa Fire Insurance Company, at 65 cents, being the lowest rate.

The Cities, Building and Repairs Committee presented a report stating that tenders for the repairing of kalsomining, etc., in the various schoolrooms had been received as were as follows:

C. B. Scantlebury	$174.00
J. Carmichael	140.00
W. A. Lanier	120.00
Geo. Madole	110.00

The Committee recommended that the tender of Geo. Madole be accepted.

The Committee received but one tender for the re-shingling of No. 1 School and the Caretaker's dwelling, namely; from Mr. J. A. Moon, for $.250. The Committee recommended that Mr. Moon's tender be accepted.

The Committee stated that the matter of changing from soft coal to hard coal at Queen Victoria School was referred to by Messrs. Northrup & Roberts, as was also the whitewashing.

On motion the Board went into Committee of the Whole on Reports, etc., Col. Ponton in the chair.

The accounts as presented by the Finance Committee were passed without discussion.

MR. ROGERS SIDETRACKED.

A letter was read from Mr. E. J. Rogers, asking what the matter of repairing the Queen Victoria School Board, asking that the matter of paying for the repairing of the tenant examinations be left over for the time being, as there was some error or mistake, as Mr. Rogers, a representative of the Separate School, had not been notified to be an examiner when he was so appointed.

The Board was informed that the matter over until the next meeting.

The tender of Mr. Moon for re-shingling the schools above mentioned was read and received.

Mr. Lewis asked who had been asked to tender for the work.

Mr. Bennett stated that the Inspector of Buildings had taken the leaders to different parties in the city who did such work.

Mr. Anderson was in favor of having the tenders asked for again.

Mr. A. E. Lewis said that tenders for such work should be advertised, those parties who do such work had complained to him that they had not been asked to tender.

Mr. Bennett said the Inspector of Buildings had given the specifications to five different parties and only one had sent in the papers, and did not think it right to ask for tend. ers again, when the time of the first offer was known. He had measured the roofs of the buildings and it would require upwards of 45,000 No. 1 quality. His estimate was about the same as that of Mr. Moon.

A motion prevailed that the tender of Mr. Moon be accepted.

The Sites, Building and Repairs Committee's recommendation that Mr. Jas. Carmichael, for painting, kalsomining, etc., of the various school rooms, be accepted was adopted.

AS TO DISCIPLINE.

The Special Committee appointed at the last meeting reported in reference to changes in discipline, in the schools. The report simply recommended that the teachers be left full power to enforce discipline within the limit imposed by the rules, but that sedimg corporal restrictions remain in force.

The report was briefly spoken to by Mr. Morden who moved that it be thought it should be adopted.

The matter of discipline now rose again in the notice of motion given at the last meeting would, if adopted, cover the matter.

On motion the Committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

MOTIONS.

Mr. Morden moved, seconded by Rev. A. L. Geen, that the Inspector or by-laws whatsoever passed by the Board some time ago, in the matter of keeping, restricting, limiting or calling boys to task of the Board, and that in matters of discipline he and the teachers have full power to enforce discipline within the limits imposed by the rules now standing any resolution or by-law passed by this Board since April 1st, 1905.

Col. Ponton said he would be sorry to revert to the old system of detention in schools as an unreasonable hour, which might be done.

Mr. Johnson stated that he would not favor detention for any lengthy time after regular hours.

Mr. Morden would be in favor of giving the teachers a free hand in reference to detention. The school hours, including all recesses, he therefore was.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Morden stated that he had written to parties in reference to electric light for the schools, but was not in a position to report at present.

Col. Ponton suggested that the School Board should to represented in the Old Boys' parade in the Old Boys' Reunion procession. He also thought that the schools should be kept open and a register provided, and the old boys might register their names and present addresses. The schools should be decorated.

Mr. Johnson said the schools should be open and with his class of boys would visit the places where they received their early training. Every boy and girl in the city would be open during the day for the inquiry of an old scholar to revisit them.

After some further discussion, it was moved by Col. Ponton, seconded by Mr. Wright, that the schools be decorated and kept open during the Old Boys' Reunion, and a register be placed in the schools; that the teachers of the schools be in attendance, and that the chairmen of the various Standing committees and the members of the Finance Committee to carry out these arrangements.—Carried.

The Board adjourned.

GREW THIS HAIR

VICTORIA SUTHERLAND

This lady is but one among the thousands who have used the Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower. Her hair was but a few inches long when one of the 7 Sutherland Sisters, well known, became interested in her case and gave her one of the wonderful preparations by the use of which, combined with the magnetic treatment, the Sutherland Sisters have grown hair for themselves.

The 7 Sutherland Sisters have devoted years to the study of the hair, and have discovered that the hair must be preserved or restored in all its original beauty by the use of a preparation that will feed the nourishment to the roots, and the magnetic treatment of the scalp, which will stimulate the hair to grow. Both of these are necessary, and are combined in the 7 Sutherland Sisters' Hair Grower and Scalp Treatment. Call at our parlors and get FREE BOOK telling how to CURE DANDRUFF, STOP FALLING HAIR, and GROW LONG HAIR. Consultation free. If you cannot call, write for blank for self-measurement. Mail orders promptly filled. Hair Grower by mail, 50c and $1.00. Scalp Treatment, 25c and 50c. Sold by druggists, or direct by express or mail on receipt of price. Mention this paper when writing. "THE SUFFERING SAVIOUR" IS THE TOPIC — THE DESPISED, REJECTED, SORROWFUL ONE — CHRIST IS CLOSEST KIN TO HUMANITY.

(By William T. Ellis.)

The highest mountain peak of ancient Hebrew thought is this majestic and oft-quoted passage from the prophet Isaiah. It embodies the profoundest desire and dream of the race for a Deliverer; and the thought is true whether it relates to the new spirit or to a Hero, who should come to person. The conception of success through service, of victory through surrender, of joy through suffering, of exaltation through humiliation, was a great one to grasp. Strangely all people seem to have caught it more or less vaguely in the development of their thought. To-day it is the accepted philosophy of the greatest teachers and of the best men and women.

Of course the Christian world sees in the old prophetic picture of the Servant who should come an exact portrait of Jesus. The passage from the Hebrew Scriptures is the serious literature, because of its clinging beauty of language and its noble elevation of thought, the Old Testament prophecy best known and quoted in connection with the Saviour—

"He was Despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief; and as one from whom men hide their face he was despised and we esteemed him not.

"Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way; and Jehovah hath laid on him the iniquity of us all.

He was oppressed, yet when he was afflicted he opened not his mouth; as a lamb that is led to the slaughter, and as a sheep that before her shearers is dumb, so he opened not his mouth. By oppression and judgment he was taken away; and as for his generation, who among them considered that he was cut off out of the land of the living for the transgression of my people to whom the stroke was due? And they made his grave with the wicked, and with a rich man in his death; although he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth."

FOR THE OTHER MAN.

There is a great deal said in present day philosophy and ethics about "altruism." That is well. But the greatest Altruist, who alone fulfills the conditions laid down by the ancient Hebrew seer, is the Man of Nazareth. His life when He poured out his soul unto death." Sinless himself, yet His heart broke for the sins of others. Saint and infidel alike see in him the ideal Brother.

Life for the sake of other lives is to-day the supreme ideal of Christendom. Some minds it no. He put Himself in the place of the sinner and bore his punishment. To-day the noble man is the man who most greatly serves and surrenders. He whose sorrows are greatest for others' sins and sufferings is following in the train of Christ. I once saw a struggling, big, unlettered, self-operating sailor in a field hospital, who had his arm amputated and was kicking so that it required four men to hold him; yet I confess to sharing the sailor's selfishness and their assistants, because the operation was most trifling; and the man was making all this ballyhoo over a little physical pain. But I took upon a minister I know, who is breathing his heart in a magnificent service of an unsympathetic people, and the contrast between his devotion and admiration are stirred. Yet admiration for such a man should not need pity, for he is most blessed whose troubles chiefly concern others of other people; who is more concerned for the welfare of the flock than for his own personal prosperity. Indeed, this is the test of the reality of one's religion. What have you suffered on behalf of your neighbor? Examine the scars of battle in your heart. Are they the marks of the Lord Jesus?

A little child has a fine chance and is quick to pity. A short-sighted person is sometimes so sympathetic about the child will suffer in life, because he is unprepared to meet it, lost by contact with the hard world. The world's way, which rewards the prudent, the self-seeking, the calculating, the cautious, the self-centered, is not God's way, which blesses the generous, the self-forgetful, the sympathetic, the self-sacrificing. The soul enters into life through the gateway of self-denial, and finds its own through losing it. Jesus said, "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." Jesus was the Servant of all. He was the Minister of all. He was the Sufferer for all. He was the Saviour of all. He was the Brother of all. He was the Lover of all. He was the Friend of all. He was the Redeemer of all. He was the Lord of all.

THE UNIVERSAL NOTE.

Everybody understands sorrow, if he has suffered. It is the "touch of nature," that "makes the whole world kin." There is no fellowship like the fellowship of suffering; it is a Man of Sorrows that Jesus is best understood by the race. Man and with are made perfect after they have waited hand in hand through the fires of affliction. Christianity is unlike that of the soldiers who have "endured hardness" as a good fighter against a common foe; and the real, and closeness and comfort of the comradeship of Christ is never learned in fellowship until one goes to him in heart-break and finds the healing of his wounds.

"Always have some word of comfort for the sorrowing in your sermons or prayer," said an old minister to a young preacher, "it is really possible to face congregations that are happy and free from especial happiness, but you will probably not be invited again to preach if you people whose hearts are free from trouble." Sorrow is the "touch-stone," rejected, sorrowing and smitten Jesus is the Master of humanity. He was "forsaken of men" that he might have fellowship with men; he waived the solitary way that he might lead his disciples in every other traveller therein.

WHILE A CROWD THINKS.

One of the tragedies of time is the way in which the race rejects its true friends. Jesus of Nazareth was "despised and rejected of men—and we esteemed him not." Just as Jesus it was written, "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." Herein was incarnated all the blindness and disappointment and suffering of the world's unappreciated ones.

"Man looketh on the outward appearance," says the wise Book, and he is detected. Human judgment is being reversed by history. "At we like sheep have gone astray," in foolish, unreasoning fashion, with our backs turned to our Shepherd. The world's first verdicts are usually wrong. Jesus was the idol of the crowd, and of superficial seeming to-day the noble ideal of Christ, because person needs more to learn than a narrow and partisan, or distorted clamor. "They say," is a poor basis for the man who would really know. It will wrong. It is well to use one's judgment and not spun in few-sided contentions, independently of what "they say" and what "everybody knows."

The ideal servant, such as Isaiah portrayed, must be considered of no crowd, except to serve them. Only the constant quest is the approval of "The Father which seeth in secret," and the desire to sustain one in a life of unselfishness.

Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will bless thee, some will smite;
Once from man, and look above thee,
Learn to read thy work aright.

Only Mary of Bethany was able to discern the real significance of Christ's life, prior to his resurrection. Even those nearest to him misunderstood the way he should be betrayed, Blessed are they who have learned, that in the life of sacrifice, worth and nobility where the world sees failure and folly, the love of God, the heaven and you will have a foretaste of the "Well done" of Columbus or Louis and Clark or any other explorer or conqueror who has died on the battlefield of duty.

Every man's life is a plan of God's.
Every man's life is a fleet of ships,
Across the ocean of Time to the ports
Of Eternity sailing with different ships.
And only the Master shall say
How much depends on each.
How great the loss in the sight of God
Of the touch that did not reach.

The only is vicariousness possible. Jesus is the Saviour of the world, because he is the Sufferer for the world. Jesus is the Brother of all, because he is the Sufferer for all. Jesus is the Lover of all, because he is the Sufferer for all. Jesus is the Redeemer of all, because he is the Sufferer for all. Jesus is the Lord of all, because he is the Sufferer for all.

A PARABLE OF POWER.

How is it that electricity to the amount of a hundred thousand horsepower is secured from a single plant at Niagara? The secret is in the simple, but wonderful principle of the New Testament application, "To die that we might live." We can only profitably man; and he shall bear their iniquities." Jesus is the Lamb of God, because he is the Sufferer for the sin of the world, and made intercession for the transgressors. The same principle is wonderfully expressed in few lines earlier, "By the knowledge of himself shall my righteous servant justify many;"

DEATHS BY LIGHTNING

Bolt Struck Ons Girl Going Home From Sarny Picking

Instantly Killed When About 60 Rods From Her Home—Toronto Girl is Killed by Lightning Post Which is Falling in Michigan—Lights Across Shoes From Her Feet, but Body Was Unscarred.

Forestor, July 14.—Miss Madie Dinnel, aged 18, daughter of Ed. Dinnel in Dunwich, was instantly killed in the yesterday's storm and instantly killed.

The unfortunate girl was at her home in Longbottom for a visit, and in company with a number of girls was picking fruit, etc., in the absence of her mother, who was undergoing treatment in the hospital at Chatham.

Yesterday she and her cousin, Miss Davis, were picking berry patches when the storm approached. The girls started for the cousin's two homes. Miss Davis reached her's in safety, but strike her home. Miss Dinnel was walking along the highway the storm overtook her, and lightning struck her when within about 60 rods of her own house.

While Watching at Window.

Wilkesport, Ont., July 15.—Miss Elizabeth Dodds, aged 23 years, whose home is in Toronto, was killed by a bolt in the school teacher, was struck and instantly killed by lightning while at the window.

While Watching at Window.

Wilkesport, Ont., July 15.—Miss Elizabeth Dodds, aged 23 years, whose home is in Toronto, was killed by a bolt in the school teacher, was struck and instantly killed by lightning while at the window.

The lightning burned the shoes effectively from her feet, but the body was unscarred.

Mrs. McDonald was also severely shocked, but will recover.

Toronto, July 15.—There is no Miss Elizabeth Dodds in the city directory, so one by that name a teacher in the Toronto schools.

PRECEDENT DANGEROUS

Dominion Will Not Begin Making Provincial Grants.

Trading Stamp Bill Passed — Much Money Goes to Nova Scotia and Local Works There Pass Well — Estimates Go Through Friday With a Rush — Senate Debates Autonomy Till 12; Rises Without Division.

Ottawa, July 14.—When the House met yesterday morning Hon. Sydney Fisher moved the adoption of the report of the Tuberculosis Committee, stating that the whole recommendation that a certain amount would be paid from the Dominion Treasury to the Provinces to defray the cost of dispensaries, hospitals, etc., for the care and maintenance of sanitaria, etc., was to be struck out.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that this was a matter of very far reaching and convincing consequence. He objected to the Committee being bound by any finding in the way of contributions to the Provinces. If these recommendations were made ought to be done and considered by the Government.

Mr. Borden said that his view was pretty well the same as those as expressed by the Premier. The Dominion ought not to be bound, but left free to use its own institutions.

The Trading Stamp Bill Passed.

The trading stamp bill was read the third time.

Mr. Oliver's bill respecting roads and allowances for Statutes and Alberta was read a second time.

Mr. Lennox introduced a bill respecting the question of a report adopted by the Telephone Committee, which had been adopted at a meeting earlier in the day, which the Government would legislation this session. Mr. Maclean mentioned that legislation should be introduced at once providing for the interchange of traffic and the connection of telephones to all railway stations.

Mr. Bimmerman called the House to order for referring in a report not before the House, and the point being sustained by the Speaker, Mr. Maclean deftly laughed his remarks on the judgment of the Railway Commission on the Port Arthur case. He went on to say that Independent telephone development in the United States had been very great.

"How does my hon. friend know that?" asked Mr. Alex. Haudow.

"Does my hon. friend want me to say I heard that in committee? Is that his idea of statesmanship?" asked Mr. Maclean, amidst laughter. He went on to argue that the Bell Co. had become more arrogant than ever and entrenched in their monopoly in Canada.

Mr. Fielding replied briefly.

The House went into Committee of Supply and passed $184,000, mainly in favor of the items of public buildings at Ottawa. Mr. Borden, in reply, suggested that an extension of the House of Commons westward would be made to the extent of 112 feet, to provide better accommodation for the members. He also announced in reply to question that the Senate would be asked to afford better ventilation in the chamber.

Much Money Voted.

The vote of $178,000 was discussed and passed for surveys of proposed Georgian Bay and Ottawa River Canals. The surveys to be completed in September. Hon. Sydney Fisher said $43,000 for public works, chiefly for repairs and maintenance, were also discussed and passed through.

Estimates for harbors and rivers for Nova Scotia, amounting to $257,000, were also taken up. These are known as "rank-vote" estimates by those whose political strength is not affected at the shrine of Fielding. They are for wharves and breakwaters, largely chiefly at small fishing villages.

Mr. Fielding held that the Government was going too far in these local works. The many calls on the public should be left to the Provincial authorities.

But seconds were passed.

The Works estimates of $265,000 were all disposed of, the new Minister from London having a comparatively easy time. Many unimportant appropriations were also taken up.

The bill respecting the South Shore and Quebec Southern Railways, providing for the transfer of the road to the order of the Exchequer Court, was read the third time and passed.

The House sits again this morning, when Senate bills are taken up.

The debate on the autonomy bill was resumed in the Senate yesterday, and was continued until after midnight. The Senate sits again to-day.

GENERAL SALARY INCREASE.

House of Commons Will Likely Pass on the Question To-day.

Ottawa, July 15.—It is practically assured that an all-round increase will be put through this session. The salaries of Judges, the sessional indemnity of members of the Commons and the salary of the Premier and Cabinet Ministers, the latter, which has been the sole topic in the lobbies last night, will be increased. On the other hand, it is said, resolutions will be introduced fixing the salary of the Governor General at $25,000, that of Cabinet Ministers at $7,000, the Speaker at $5,000, and members at $1,000.

Diphtheria Quarantine Raised.

Toronto, July 15.—The diphtheria quarantine at Riverdale Hospital has been raised, the patients have been returned to their homes cured, and the tents and equipment have been returned to the military stores in proper condition.

Big Action For Debt.

Quebec, July 15.—An action of debt has been issued against the Lewis Publishing Co. for $1,000,000, by the plaintiffs in the case being the New York Trust Co., representing the bond holders.

WITTE CONFERS WITH CZAR.

Plenipotentiary Will Be Guided by the Emperor's Views.

St. Petersburg, July 15.—M. Witte's appointment as chief of the Japanese peace plenipotentiary was announced yesterday in the Official Messenger, in the following words:

"Owing to the serious illness which overtook M. Muravieff on his arrival in St. Petersburg, which made it impossible for him to fulfil duties himself, the Emperor has graciously appointed Count Witte to act in his place."

Count Lamsdorff, Minister of Foreign Affairs, will assist the plenipotentiary.

M. Witte had a prolonged audience with the Emperor at Peterhof yesterday afternoon, at which the whole subject of the peace negotiations was gone over in detail. The difficulties of the situation were freely discussed, and instructions were given His Excellency by which he will be guided.

M. Muravieff Leaves.

M. Muravieff, who formerly deferred for Rome, to resume his post as Ambassador.

Regiment Murders Officers.

Tiflis, Caucasus, July 15.—A regiment of Russian Sappers stationed at a small village in Kutais province, has mutinied, murdered all its officers and it is rumored that the Governor is implicated.

Band of Terrorists Caught.

St. Petersburg, July 15.—A band of terrorists fully equipped to manufacture bombs and fire arms, has been arrested and captured in a house near the Finnish canal last night. Several of the policemen were wounded.

MAY CAUSE MAN'S DEATH.

James Shackleton Hurled Pinkeye at Man Who Disappeared.

Hamilton, July 15.—At the new brickyard, yesterday morning, between 7 and 8 o'clock, Peter Vanderlip, of George street, was laid out with a blow from a brick that Jas. Shackleton, 376 West Jackson street, a south African veteran threw the plug at him. A sad feature of the case is that Vanderlip was married only a few days ago. He is an Englishman, and has been in Canada only ten months. From what the police have learned they are of the opinion that the two had quarrelled and that a quarrel started. Shackleton threw the brick and hit the left temple. Vanderlip dropped his clothes and disappeared. He told some of his fellow workmen that he did not intend to let the Englishman.

There was little change in the condition of Williams last night. An operation was performed on the injured man, and he has regained consciousness. Shackleton remained in the city all day, but on arrival that they decided to lay an information against him. Mr. Crerar, Acting Crown Attorney, and Detective Hall were sent to the hospital for that purpose. There is still no illness of Shackleton.

ALL APPROVE OF CHARLES.

Rests With King Oscar to Name Him Norway's King.

Copenhagen, July 15.—At yesterday's meeting of the Storthing it appeared that the Ministers were in full agreement that Prince Charles of Denmark should accept the crown of Norway if King Oscar and the other courts were duly concerned expressed "their approval. King Christian and the other members of the Danish royal family are also favorable to the Prince becoming King of Norway.

NEW CAMP GROUND.

Six Miles Square Near Alliston Has Been Secured.

Ottawa, July 15.—The new camping ground for the militia at Alliston, Ont., on Ontario has been definitely chosen. Niagara, it was stated, is fresh Carling's Heights will be abandoned as camping ground after this year. There will be 10,000 Canadian soldiers under canvas at Alliston during on 30,000 acres of various kinds of country which is now being purchased. The site is north of Alliston, the ground selected is a tract, about 6 miles square, lying 2 miles north of Alliston and three miles east of the line of the Toronto Railway. It is mostly a sandy tract, with considerable bush, of which was owned by the Government.

LET US BURY SECTARIANISM.

Independent Session of Ulster Orangemen Plead for Peace in Ireland.

Belfast, July 15.—An independent session of Ulster Orangemen, headed by Commoner Bloid, has issued a manifesto declaring that the time is now ripe for the burial of sectarianism. Colonel Saunderson, leader of the Conservative, and favoring the co-operation of all sections of the community in the national welfare.

The manifesto expresses distrust of the Irish Parliamentary party, because all English parties, which will not support Home Rule, and says, again, the past to play off Conservatives and Liberals against each other in the prejudice of the country's interests.

The manifesto too long has been neglected, and the time has arrived for a new departure to be constituted, and there now is found in the constitutional changes in the Liberal party and the domination of imperialistic ideas, a favorable opportunity and to recognize the desired redress.

C. M. A. Program is Ended.

Paris, July 14.—(C. A. P.)—The Canadian Manufacturers' Association will provide here, some going to Liege Exposition and other to Switzerland and Italy. The party will be back in London the 20th and many sail for Canada on the 20th. President George and others on August 1.

Commercials to Stand Trial.

From New York to the Pole.

New York, July 17.—The Roosevelt, in which Capt. Robert E. Peary hopes to reach the north pole, started on her long voyage at 3.10 p. m. Saturday. Capt. Peary and a party of guests were on board at the start, and remained with the ship on her trip down the bay, but they left her at the Narrows, returning to the city on a navy tug. Capt. Peary started last night by rail for Sydney, C. B., where he will join the ship.

"Jackies" at the Unveiling.

Quebec, July 17.—The soldiers' monument on the esplanade will be unveiled during the visit of the British squadron, under the Prince of Battenburg, between the 16th and 29th of August. The Governor-General requested that the unveiling be held over until the arrival of the fleet. Many of the members of 'bred-of-war were present with the Canadians at Ladysmith

Has Foreign Syndicate Bought.

London, July 17.—Rumors have been in circulation during the last few days that a foreign syndicate has bought a large part of the Welsh coal fields which the British navy practically is dependent for its steam coal. German engineers recently have been examining the property carefully. It is understood the development of the coal seams will entail an expenditure of £500,000.

Nurses' Memorial Home.

Toronto, July 17.—John Ross Robertson has given $75,000 to erect and equip a nurses' home in connection with the Sick Children's Hospital. It is a memorial to his first wife and an only daughter. The home will be 50 feet deep and 150 feet in length, and will have about 80 bedrooms.

Burglars Chloroform Woman.

New York, July 17.—With a sponge soaked in chloroform, two burglars secured $1,000 worth of diamonds from Mrs. Bertha Cohn Saturday, putting Mrs. Cohn under the influence of the anaesthetic while she slept.

Throws Wife From Window.

New York, July 17.—Mrs. Kate Morris was thrown out of a fifth story window Saturday night at her home in West 49th street, by her husband. She was picked up unconscious and died. Her husband was arrested.

Shah of Persia is in Paris.

Paris, July 17.—The Shah of Persia arrived here last evening with an imposing party, included in which are several of his sons and their instructors. The Shah was received with military honors.

Four Lives Crushed Out.

Seven Others Injured in Winnipeg's Wind Storm Calamity.

Only Two Victims of the Storm in Manitoba Outside of Winnipeg — Tornado Damaged the Wheat Very Little, as its Full Force Was Confined to Eastern Parts Where There is Little Wheat.

Winnipeg, July 17.—Reports from the Province generally show that the damage done by the storm Friday night was not nearly as serious as was indicated by the destruction wrought in Winnipeg and the immediate vicinity, the full force being practically confined to eastern parts, where there is little wheat, though some of this was knocked down. So far as is known at present there were only two victims to the fury of the tornado outside Winnipeg.

Cost Four Lives.

The collapse of the Hoover building cost four lives, Wm. Steinhoff, Bert White and two sisters, named Riley, were killed in the wreckage and the injured were F. Bennett of Acton, Ont., Ivey (crushed); John Reinhoff, badly crushed; Dugald Ferguson, William Daly, Bert Gledhill, A. McCloomb and Kate Dow.

One of the most marvelous escapes was that of five men besides the 12th Field Battery camp on exhibition grounds. A new plaster portico erected last year was blown down. The men were only found to be missing at roll call in the morning. Miraculously less they were rescued from the debris a most unscratched.

Mud Bank Derails Train.

Friday night a storm also caused an accident in the Rainy River district that night have been far more disastrous. At 2.25 o'clock Saturday morning the westbound steamship limited on the C.N.R. from Port Arthur to Winnipeg ran into a mud bank at a point between Nickle Lake and Rocky Inlet, near Fort Frances, Ont. The engine and baggage car were derailed, and Engineer Marcy and Fireman Higham, both of Rainy River, slightly scalded. None of the passengers were injured.

Killed by Bolt.

Sanford, Man., July 17.—A young farmer named Robert Burns was found on the roadside by a neighbor Saturday morning. He had been struck by lightning and instantly killed.

TWO DROWNINGS AT KINGSVILLE

One a Boy in Bathing and the Other a Sailor Named McFadden.

Kingston, July 17.—A drowning accident occurred at Camp Essex, Cedar Beach, about three miles west of here, Friday afternoon, when Orley Hyatt, 18 years of age, was bathing. He got beyond his depth, and, not being able to swim, was drowned before help could reach him. He was with the Baptist Church picnic when the accident occurred.

A sailor named McFadden, one of the crew of the Canadian fishery protection cruiser Vigilant, was hoisting a boat from the water when the tackling gave way and he fell into the lake and was drowned. He was a respected member of the crew, and his home was at Comber, Ont.

Six Drownings at New York.

New York, July 17.—Six persons lost their lives while bathing in the waters about New York yesterday. John Smith, a life guard at the Washington Heights baths, perished in a brave but vain attempt to rescue Norman Flanner, a boy who was unable to swim.

TWO MEN SCALDED TO DEATH.

Boiler Explosion at Hawkesbury Has Fatal Results.

Montreal, July 17.—Eugene Renaud and Joseph Severin are dead at the Royal Victoria Hospital as the result of injuries received from a boiler explosion at Hawkesbury, Ont., Friday afternoon, by Hordes Paper mills.

Severin, who was 30 years of age, expired shortly after his admission to the institution, and Renaud, who was 21 years of age, died at the same companion by several hours.

An inquest will be held.

Stepped on Rusty Nail.

Chatham, July 17.—Hubert, the 10 year-old son of A. Mearns, township of Harwich "Township, died Saturday morning in the hospital here, as the result of blood poisoning, caused by stepping on a rusty nail some three weeks ago.

Struck by Stray Bullet.

Peterboro, July 17.—Mrs. J. Audley Farce, of McKeesport, Pa., while in a boat with her husband above Burleigh Falls, Stoney Lake, Saturday afternoon, was struck, though not dangerously wounded, by a stray bullet from a rifle in the hands of some person as yet unknown. With all possible speed Mrs. Pierce was brought to Peterboro and placed in Nicholls Hospital.

Stone Falls On a Man.

Port Arthur, July 17.—H. Hunston of London, Ont., is in a hospital here in a critical condition. He was working on a Macdonald cement works a large piece of stone fell from the top of the building, striking on his head. It is not expected he will live.

Her Neck Broken.

Buffalo, July 17.—Mrs. J. A. Bowser of Bridgeburg, Ont., jumped from a rapidly moving trolley car here Saturday night and was instantly killed, her neck being broken.

Error Costs Lives of Four.

Mount Vernon, Ind., July 17.—In a head-on collision between two freight trains on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad near Upton, Ind., Saturday night four persons were killed and many injured. One of the injured will die. A train despatcher mistook the number of the trains.

EARTHQUAKE IN NEW ENGLAND.

Dishes and Stove Lids Rattled and Noise Like Far-Off Thunder.

Portland, Maine, July 17.—A slight earthquake shock was felt at 5.10 p. m. Saturday, followed in a few seconds by a heavier one. No damage was reported.

The shocks are said to be heavier than those experienced March 21, 1904. They were reported very severe at Augusta, Bangor, Lewiston, Rockland and Brunswick. Reports from Thomaston say that one shock was felt there shortly after 5 o'clock, of about 15 seconds duration.

The State prison at Thomaston was shaken noticeably and dishes and stove covers rattled.

At Bangor there was one long rumble which rattled dishes and shook windows.

At Biddeford, Saco, and Old Orchard, the earth trembled, and there was a roar that sounded like distant thunder.

Diamond Thief Arrested.

Christiania, July 17.—At the request of the New York police, Edward Park, an American, charged with being a diamond thief, was arrested on landing at Christiansand yesterday from the Scandinavian-American line steamer United States. He will be wanted for the theft of $20,000 in diamonds from Tiffany's.

Accept Conference Invitation.

Tangier, July 17.—The Governments of Great Britain and Spain have accepted the invitation of the Sultan of Morocco to attend the international conference on Moroccan reform on condition that the contents of the program to be discussed by the conference be communicated to them beforehand.

RUSSIA'S CROP PROSPECTS.

St. Petersburg, July 17.—The crop report does not support the predictions that a famine is coming in Russia.

Rub an extinguisher upon your irony if you are unhappily blessed with a vein of it.—Lamb.

The Militia Expenditure.

Canada is not a country in danger of becoming militarist. The cry of a year ago raised by some public men and some newspapers against Lord Dundonald was about as ridiculous as it was unjust to a capable officer. There is danger, though, remarks the Montreal Gazette, of Canada spending too much on its military as on its other public services. The danger, too, is close at hand. The propositions of the Government laid before Parliament this year, carry the cost of the militia as of all the other public services beyond what is within the power of the country to bear. Here is what the estimates provide for in connection with the militia:

Ordinary administration and works	$4,196,090
Arms, rifles, ranges, etc.	1,225,606
Reserve annuitants	75,093
Armories and military build. ings	783,533
Departmental expenses at Ottawa	69,150
	$6,350,591

This is over a dollar a head of the population, a very considerable burden in itself. Worse than that, if the revenue does not this year show a larger increase than it did last year, may become awkward to carry. More than this, Sir Frederick Borden seems to have the idea that this large outlay may be exceeded. The bill to amend the Militia Act of which he is the political father, provides for an increase of the permanent force to five thousand men, a strength, in proportion, of the two countries looking considered, relatively as large as the United States finds it necessary to provide for, and the United States as an "empire" abroad where its subjects have to be kept in order by armed strength. The Minister of Militia has even indicated that he has thought of requiring all young men between 18 and 21 to undergo three years' training in the militia, an undertaking that would probably add some five millions a year to the charge on the treasury. This sort of thing is clearly out of the question in every way. It would not be militarism but foolishness, because it would be beyond the reasonable power of the people to bear. The fact seems to be that the Minister of Militia has fallen under influences that are not politically wholesome, and the loose, jointed system of the Laurier Government does not provide a check on the excessive zeal of its members, especially when the zeal leads to higher expenditures. It will have to be outside opinion that will check the inclination to go beyond what is reasonable and vote this as in other branches of the public service.

Nickel Coins for Canada.

The proposition that Canada shall have coins made of pure nickel has much to commend it. Canada is a source of the world's supply of this metal, the material for fifty, twenty-five or ten-cent pieces would cost perhaps one-fifth as much as that in the silver coins now used. In fact the nickel coins would be as much tokens as the bronze coins are now. But that does not seem to be an objection. On the contrary, it has the advantage of giving larger profit to the Government. Silver coin is not a legal tender in Canada except for small amounts, and it is not held for reserves in the Government treasury or in banks. It can be circulated only in limited quantities. Silver coinage now tokens to the extent of more than half their face value. There is no point in insisting that they shall represent intrinsic values to the extent that they do now. Formerly our silver coinage represented a bullion value much nearer the face value than it does at present. No great calamity has resulted from the depreciation except that when the Government, which has issued the coins and made one hundred per cent. out of the transaction, dishonestly refuses to accept them when they are slightly worn, the holder suffers a loss. It would seem to be worth while for the Government to consider whether silver should not be replaced by pure nickel, the coins when worn to be redeemed by new ones at the face value. But it would be a long time before they would be much worn.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Delightfully cool in church yesterday, wasn't it?

* * *

It grieves us to see the hot weather coming on again. Another spot must have developed on the sun.

* * *

Queer, isn't it. Spots on the sun make things hot in this world, and spots on a man's character are likely to make him hot in the next world.

* * *

The old boys and girls are coming in fast. Isn't it about time the O. B. R. committee started its visitors' book?

* * *

Shiver our timbers, but about the finest nautical spectacle we have seen in a month of Sundays hove into sight on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. O'Flynn's battleship, with every ounce of gasoline set, stood boldly out of the harbor. Admiral Togo O'Flynn himself was at the helm, two big Union Jacks flew fore and aft, and the gallant craft sped on at a rate of something less than 30 nautical miles an hour, it was a spectacle to cause Clark Russell himself to sit up.

* * *

"Rain or no rain," says the man who lives on the next block, "I don't think the Old Boys' Reunion will be a dry affair." What does he mean by that?

* * *

Residents of one street in West Belleville are quite "stuck up" because they have more than eight different varieties of weeds growing on that thoroughfare. There are burdocks, thistles, catnip, wild horse radish, sweet clover, wild peas, golden rod and Jamestown weed. Now many other varieties. A few muck oranges is all that is needed to give the place a tropical appearance.

* * *

A despatch says that the prorogation of Parliament is looked for on Wednesday. This will be pleasant news to people who had begun to fear that Laurier and his crowd had made up their minds to keep The House in session all the time here, after, and vote themselves all the money in the country as pay.

* * *

"Justice" writes: "If there is one spectacle more than another which is calculated to make the angels weep it is that of a public servant (not master, mind you), who is filled with the smugness of office, and who has so long been enjoying government pay that he has grown to think that the country was not go on without him. That Bump who held up a Canadian sea captain on the Fourth of July was not more impudent than some of the Ontario Government officials in this locality who for a generation have lived on the fat of the land simply because they were members of the provincial government which held power for thirty years. Many people are asking, How long is this to be tolerated? I was greatly pleased to read, the other day, your remarks about "A little bit off the top." They were very much to the point. It may be true that the new government has its dragnet out for offensive partisans in this locality. If so it has, so far, caught nothing but little fishes. What a pity. But all the same know that there are many big fish who are more worthy of punishment than the sardines who have so far been caught. "A little bit off the top" is a good start, and perhaps the present Government never heard it sung."

A popular speech — "Ice cream for two."

Saturday last was St. Swithin's day, on which, the old legend says, it rain falls it will rain for forty days. Luckily, rain did not fall on Saturday. Forty days more rain in this district would surely put farmers on their knees. St. Swithin died in 862, and was buried as he desired to be buried, not with the other Bishops of Winchester in the chancel, but in the open. "That sweet rain from heaven might fall upon his grave." Afterward, however, one of the monks with a desire to do him honor, exhumed the body ,to give it a pompous burial within the church on July 15. But a terrific flood of rain marked the event, and for forty days afterward it rained daily as the monks replaced the body in the grave, and built a church over it, where many miracles are said to have been performed. On this legend is founded the old weather saw about St. Swithin's day.

The Ottawa Citizen comes near to hitting the nail on the head when it says: "What we can't understand about that London flag incident is why the Londoners turn down the poor, unoffending piece of bunting instead of resenting the insults to Canada on the faces of the men who uttered them."

A STRIKING COINCIDENCE.

(Toronto News.)

Sir Mackenzie Bowell celebrated the Twelfth of July by moving the six months' boist of the Autonomy bills in the Senate. The coincidence of the debate in the Upper House commencing on the Orangemen's holiday was peculiar, but not more so than the fact that the motion for the "boist" was seconded by Senator De Boucherville, an ex-Premier of Quebec, and one of the most sturdy Conservatives in Canada. His association with Sir Mackenzie but emphasized the attitude later assumed by Senator Landry to prove that the Catholic Conservatives are just as dissatisfied with the legislation as are the Protestants of Ontario.

Peterboro people are agitating for a change in the method of electing the Board of Education for that city. It is claimed that the Board should be elected by popular vote, like the Council is, and consist of ten members. Many arguments can be adduced in favor of the plan, which would also be profitably adopted in this city. Why should the ward system of election prevail in our civic body, when it has been abolished, with excellent results, in another?

Peary has sailed for the north pole. He couldn't have chosen a more favorable moment, if the weather in Yankeeland is anything like it is here.

A TIMELY RHYME.

Ice cream he bought his darling
And she ate, and ate, and ate;
Till at last her heart she gave him,
Then he couldn't eat no more.

* * *

It's close to-day," said the man who lives on the next block. Early training kept him from naming the place it felt as though it were close to.

* * *

The Terrorists threw a bomb at Trepoff yesterday. They can't even hit the man have his Sunday in peace.

* * *

Sir Mackenzie Bowell's motion for the six months' boist of the Autonomy Bill was defeated by 33 to 17. The Grit members of the Senate are not straining themselves hoisting things this hot weather.

* * *

Another thousand dollars per for the Parliamentarians. They should be able to afford fans and ice cream galore.

An instance of the awful hold smoking has on its victims is shown in the case of those poor Japanese sailormen, who sang and smoked as their cruiser went down. The Takasago might well have been called the Takasmoke.

HOT TIME IN LONDON

SUMMER IN METROPOLIS MOST OPPRESSIVE IN YEARS.

London, July 16. — The great heat which, according to cables received here, is being experienced on the other side, is as bad in London, if not worse, for the reason that here the heat is much more moist, therefore more oppressive. It has been a blazing rather than a stewing week, spreading lethargy and oppression among all classes.

Street vendors, whose usual stock in trade is boot laces and rubber shoes for tennis, are doing a great trade in Japanese paper fans. Fruit has gone up in price, the great has been the demand for it, and to add to other troubles in many localities ice has given out quite early in the evening. Cases of heat stroke have been numerous, different being among the sufferers. Strange enough they have not yet been served with white sun helmets for the present summer.

Showing how unusual this heat has been for London, a traveller over many continents, giving his impressions on Friday, said: "I've travelled in north, south, east and west and in Central Africa, and have experienced extremes of African heat with all its attendant unpleasantness, but I never have been so affected by tropical heat as I have been by the heat in London this week. It has sapped my energy, mental and physical, and made me feel that it is impossible to live here.

"Heat produces on me effects which, I dare say, it does on thousands of others. My eyes are weary, the backs of my hands ache, and there is an unpleasant heaviness through my head which does not quite reach the point of headache. This is the worst heat I ever experienced. I much prefer the tropics."

"SMARTEST IN NEW YORK."

GEORGE W. PERKINS FILLS THIS BILL.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

J. P. Morgan is not a director of many companies. His name appears only twelve times, but he is represented on the boards of many other corporations by his partners and even by cocks in his office. George W. Perkins, one of those partners, is a director in twenty-two corporations, and Mr. Bacon, another partner, in thirty-one.

Mr. Perkins is booming one of the big men of this country. He is called the smartest man in New York. He was born in Evanston, Ill., in 1862, and got his education in the public schools at that place. When he was fifteen years old he got a job as errand boy in the Chicago office of the New York Life Insurance company, and was promoted from time to time to messenger, bookkeeper, cashier, inspector of agencies, superintendent of division, third vice-president and second vice-president, reaching the latter responsibility in 1892, when he removed to New York to take charge of the agency force throughout the country. In 1901 he called upon Mr. Morgan to ask for a subscription to a fund to preserve the Palisades of the Hudson river, and was introduced to him by Mr. Bacon, for the two had never met. After Mr. Morgan had written his name for a generous sum in the subscription book he returned it to Mr. Perkins, and, pointing to the chair on the other side of his desk he said:

"I'll give you $100,000 a year, Perkins, if you'll move over here and occupy that seat."

"Are you joking?" enquired Mr. Perkins.

"Certainly not," said Mr. Morgan. "I feel the need of an energetic young man in this office and have had my eye on you for some time."

After further conversation Mr. Perkins agreed to take the offer under consideration, but finally declined it at the request of the directors of the New York Life insurance company, who increased his salary to the amount offered by Mr. Morgan. A few weeks later Mr. Morgan renewed the proposition and offered him a partnership in the banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., which pays him from $250,000 to $500,000 a year.

The Mad Dog Fallacy

In all my own experience with dogs I have not only never seen a "mad dog," but have never known a dog owner—and by that I mean a man who has had experience in keeping dogs—who has seen one. If, then, rabies is so exceedingly scarce hydrophobia becomes really an impossibility, and the fear of it should be dismissed without a thought. A person may get dog bitten, but in the language of the New York tough, "For gosh, it," it is a bad bite it may quitch later on, and you may begin worrying, so it is a good plan to get rid of the twitching or throbbing in order to forget. I have been bitten so often that I think no more of it than a mosquito bite, and this is what I do. If it is on the hand I put it under the faucet and wash it thoroughly, which is the right cleansing the wound and preventing inflammation from any dirt or foreign substance. While doing this some one is getting the bicarbonate of soda and some clean rags of lint. With water a cream paste of the soda is made sufficient to plaster the wound well, and then putting some on a rag it is applied to the wound and bound up. If in the course of an hour or more the application seems to be drying, a little water is poured on the bandage to make it moist to the soda, or the hand dipped in water.—Country Life in America.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. Not every issue of any paper is complemented in its completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect lay out of the whole. Nothing has seemingly been left out—nothing which has been included or could very well have been left out; "complete and perfect" best describe it. Already we are hearing from old Bellevillians 10; other places, in words of unstinted praise. You should have it—keep yourself and some one for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great reunion, and so we have planned. It is a fountain pen—that daily companion—and is appropriately named "The City of Belleville." 10 k fine, regular $3.00 pen, fully guaranteed. We only have a gross—144 customers will secure a bargain. They will not be on sale until Saturday, and then for three days only—Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. We place them on sale at half-price—$1.50 pen for $1.50.

"A married man," says the man who lives on the next block, "is seldom older than he looks."

An exchange, with good reason, asks: What is the cause of the lamentable decay of Canada's marine? While the marine of the world has advanced from 20 1-2 million tons to 35 3-4 million tons, Canada's marine has decreased to one-half what it was in 1879. In 1904 one ton in every eight was Canadian, of the tonnage that was sea-going. With more than double the tonnage in the ports delivering and receiving cargo, it is plain that the cause of the decay of our marine is not the lack of cargoes. It is not for want of material to fetch and carry that our shipping has decreased by about 600,000 tons while the general shipping of the world has increased by 15 million tons. Then, what is the cause?

The musical editor of the Mail and Empire makes a large-sized thrill in the following: "Why is concert-giving such an unprofitable business? Because the players and singers usually repel music-lovers by their programmes. They give them artificial, long-winded sonatas, symphonies, and concertos, when shorter, lighter, and generally more inspired music would be infinitely more relished. For many years this point has pleaded for Strauss waltzes and similar gems; but in vain. The London Truth has now taken up this matter and given us the host of concert-givers who disappoint themselves and their hearers in London some wholesome advice. Too often, the writer remarks, "the error is committed of offering the public not what they really like, but what the performer thinks they ought to like. . . . There is a quantity of light music in existence from the pens of the bigger composers which is usually ignored. . . . Think, too, of the charming music by the lesser men, which might be performed, but, in fact, never gets a hearing. In a word, there is need of more variety, more brightness, and more lightness in our concert programmes."

A Peterboro young man, says the Review, has a well developed love for vocal music, and this love has placed him in disgrace with the mother of a young lady to whom he has been paying his attentions. One evening last week he was a caller at the home of the young lady of his affections, and the recipient of his admirations was content at the piano singing several popular airs, as the young man would roll them. After she had finished a selection the young man innocently asked, "Will you please sing, 'Always in the Way.'" The young lady's mother was seated in the room and rising said, "I guess I don't need any such broad hint as that," and bounced out.

"I have never seen a girl that was unfaithful to her mother that ever came to be worth a one-eyed button to her husband," says a Missouri philosopher. It is the law of God; it isn't exactly in the Bible, but it is written large and solid in the natural history of many unfit homes. I'm speaking for the boys this time. If one of you chaps comes across a girl that's got a face full of roses, says to you as she comes to the door, 'I can't go for thirty minutes, for the dishes are not washed yet,' you wait for the girl, because some other fellow may come along and carry her off, and right there you lose an angel. Wait for that girl and stick to her like a burr to a woolly dog."

The Dominion of Canada closed the fiscal year at the end of last month with a net debt of $281,062,000, which was $5,954,450 in excess of the debt of the year before. There is an increase of $8,0,800 in revenue for the year, an advance of $6,550,000 on the current expenditure, and $6,550,000 in the capital expenditure. But the expenditure accounts are not all in, and something will be added to these enormous figures.

These goods are being sold much below their regular worth and are all this season's productions.

Uncle Silas Gives Advice

He Tells How the Lazy Man is a Drawback to the Hustler.

"SIT ON THE SHADY PORCH OF A GROCERY STORE."

My son, I take it that you have arrived at an age when you have ceased to hanker for gum drops and begun to understand that life includes pork and potatoes and that you can't have them unless you earn them, said Uncle Silas.

This being true, I have a few remarks to make. I don't expect they will sink into your hide half as far as didn't take them all day to sort over Reader's grocery every evening, but I'm in a talking mood, and I won't hurt you any if I don't lay you.

To give the sloth and the tortoise their due, they haven't got a lazy hair in their heads. If they weren't always hard at it they would never get anywhere. There isn't a lazy animal to be found in the whole realm of natural history, and the same holds good right down to the tumblebug and the skeeter. Even the hibernating bear is sharpening his claws as he sleeps.

It's only when you ascend the sliding scale to man that you find specimens with legs that can sit on the shady porch of a grocery all day and tell lies and talk politics and then go home to supper and wish he was rich.

There may be a thriller or a sheep dog or a liar in your community, but none of them is as great a public nuisance as the lazy man. Twenty-six or eight men are gathered together you will hear some lying, but the lazy man is the lay for certain any one of the seven a-lie.

Now and then he might furnish a bit of information—if least, as far as telling whom he has seen pass the store within the last hour—but it is too much of an effort or he is too busy cussing the fate that made him the son of a poor man.

A lightning rod man is satisfied with beating you out of a dollar if times are slow, but the lazy man feels slighted if you don't waste $10 worth of time on him during each month. The more work you have to do the more time he wants. Now and then from some cause that no one can solve he throws off his lethargy and begins to talk. It is always about his grandfather's bulls, his grandmother's rheumatism or he was interviewed last fall by a man who won't listen to him till the last moment is not counted a friend of his."

Once in a great while the lazy man rouses to the fact that he gets no credit for being lazy. Then he tells how the crows scratched up all his corn, how the hogs devoured his early potatoes, how somebody's bull tore down his fences and trampled his grass under by the roots, how it rained just a day or too little and how a score of other things calculated to discourage the greatest hustler on earth. If he gets along to where his oldest girl died with measles while he was away and in his hay and he had to stop work and his hay was rained on and spoiled he will tell you about it. But if he doesn't get that far he is content to ask some one for a chew of tobacco and tell you the whole thing.

In my time as a young man our community was overrun for a year or two by peddlers. You could smell our township for five miles. The price of real estate went down 30 per cent, and many families had to move away, but yet it was calculated that our one lazy man did more damage than the cuts.

Read of Cato, Pliny, Socrates, Alexander, Julius and the rest of the old boys, my son. There was no beef trust nor Standard Oil to push a man along in those days. If he wasn't up at daylight and hustling about he got left. Daylight sat on the head of a cracker barrel and drove a nation with his eloquence or lick the enemy with his tongue.

Read of Napoleon, Washington, Grant and Lincoln. You didn't find them sitting around in the morning, wondering what was good for a issue lack or if next winter was going to be colder than last. They might quit hoeing corn for a few minutes to rest a crick in the back, with the possibility of the last camel from Sahara down went their hoes again and the sweet started afresh.

The man who invented the steam engine, the steamboat, the telegraph, the telephone, the sewing machine, the cotton gin, the steam plow, the reaper, who gave us gas and electric lighting, who first hollowed through a telephone, do you imagine that any one of them spent a day looking at a dead horse in the pasture and wondering whether he died of the botts or a broken heart? Some of them might have gone fishing some day, but they didn't sit on a log and go to sleep while a hollering ate up their bait. No, sir. They went fishing for fish, and they caught them, and if they lied about the big ones that got away they lied and had it over and got back to their work again.

It is said that about twenty capitalists own America. I reckon the statement is true, and I also reckon it took some hustling to make those dollars. Nearly every one of the men started out poor. It would have bothered them to have raised the money for a basswood cow, and they had to keep tenderfoots behind them as much as possible to hide the patches. You didn't find them sprawled out in the shade of an apple tree, wondering why crows and canary birds can't sing alike, and it didn't take them all day to sort over a barrel of potatoes down cellar. They probably had their misfortunes, but you can't run across human nature without 'em, but they were hustlers, and Snyder's never saw them.

There was a time in the history of our country, my son, when a man could lean on his hoe half the time with his mouth open and yet be sure of johnnycake and fried pork for almost every meal. We were so well satisfied with our splint bottomed chairs and sanded floors and pudding and milk that we didn't feel called upon even to go to the polls early or save a year's time in courtship. They tell you those old time people lived the longer for the way they lived, but don't you believe it. Just take a walk through the country graveyards, and you will learn that they didn't. Anybody can say that they were even happier.

That time has gone by, however, be the case what it may. The procession has struck its gait, and it's either keep up with it or find yourself lost. You have either got to be a lazy man or one of the specs of the big wheel. No doubt you might take a step of comfort sitting around on a soap box and wrinkling a honeybee trying to extract sweet from a whetstone, but what the old woman will have for supper when you get home is another thing.

Whichever you decide to go into, my son, make up your mind to push it for all you're worth. If it's trapping muskrats, don't set out until you have cleared the marsh. If it's preaching, pound the Bible now and then and show your earnestness. Don't expect to find a preacher hanging on for the hundred dollars a year he gets don't believe he'll. If it's the law, there is probably more than he is worth. You may prefer the burglar business to anything else. If so, don't be an hour doing a fifteen minute job, and don't be content until you have a new head of the procession. Fifty years ago you couldn't tell the American eagle from the Australian crane when he was dying high. Today the eagle is getting there and back as fast as possible. He has to do it to keep up with the number of stars on the American flag.

You can't call all the lazy men in the country together and set a wood saw going machine at work to saw up wood for them, and there is no law by which they can be killed off one by one. They are of the world moving up and we have got to go on enduring them. Perhaps it is better so. If we didn't have them the hustler wouldn't get the credit he deserves, and the soap boxes and cracker barrels would go on lasting forever. M. QUAD.

The Sweet Girl Graduate.

With sparkling eyes and witnessed smile,
A confidence in knowledge great—
Diploma, too, with ribbon pink—
We welcome you, sweet graduate!

Your gown of white, your wavy hair,
Your pose of graceful ease sedate—
Alas, vain hope! Mere man's a bore,
And love is naught, sweet graduate!

In years to come, when love has won
And knowledge finds it has no mate,
You then the world will sue for joy
And love will reign, sweet graduate!

Moran of the Lady Letty

By FRANK NORRIS, Author of "The Octopus," "The Pit," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by S. S. M'Clure Company

"That's the kind of man I have to deal with," muttered Wilbur. "It's encouraging, and there's no one to talk to. Not much help in a Chinaman and a crazy girl in a man's clothing, if he's about the biggest attaché you ever faced, Miss Kitchell, and you're all alone. What are you going to do?"

He acknowledged with considerable humility that he could not get the better of Kitchell either physically or mentally. Kitchell was a more powerful man than he and cleverer. The captain was in his element now, and he was the more dangerous. Indeed he would have been vastly different. The city bred fellow, with a policeman's ways in call, would have known better than to act.

"I simply can't stand by and see that hog plundering everything she's got. What's to be done?"

And suddenly, while the words were yet in his mouth, the sun was wiped from the sky like writing from a slate, the horizon blackened, vanished, a long white line of froth whipped across the sea and came on blowing. A hollow tide boomed out, boomed, swelled and grew rapidly to a roar.

An icy wind smashed the air. Then the small swooped and struck, and the sky shut down over the troubled ocean like a pall in the twinkling of an eye. The schooner's fore and main sheets, that had not been quite close hauled, took first gust and began to slat wildly in the wind. The Chinamen cowered to the decks, and, scrambling, clung to the mastsmasts. They were helpless, paralyzed with fear. Charlie clung to a stay, one arm over his head, his face to the blow. Wilbur gripped the rail with his hands when the squall struck him, and his eyes wide, waiting for the foundering of the schooner, his only thought being that the end had come. And he heard the suddenness of tropical squalls, but this had come with the abruptness of a cannon shot or a pistol. The schooner veered broad on to the waves, it was like a cockleshell in the sea. And the rail to the leeward like the last and the Pacific would come aboard.

"And you call yourselves sailor men! Are you going to drown like rats on a plank? . . . Where's Kitchell? I do not know went ringing through that horrid shouting of sail and wind like the call of a bugle. He turned to see Moran, the girl of the Lady Letty, standing erect, one hand on the spoke that ran down the schooner's wheel. The confusion of that dreadful moment, that had paralyzed the crew, had apparently brought back hers. She was herself again—as splendid a specimen of feminine superb in her wrath at their weakness—their cowardice.

Her heavy brows were knotted over her flaming eyes, her hat was gone, and her thick bands of yellow hair whipped across her face. She looked out in the wild like streamers of the northern lights. As the squall grew, turning furiously to the men, the loose skin of the classic coat fell back and showed her arms, strong, round and white as coral, the hand and wrist so tanned as to look almost like a glove. And all the while she shouted shrill, furious with indignation, raging against the supineness of the Kitchell crew.

"Stand by, men! Stand by! Look alive, now! Make fast the stays'l halyards to the rail. Now, you, Kitchell, unreeve yr' halyards! All clear there! Pass the end forard outside the rigging,—outside, you fools! Make fast to the bits for'ard! Let go yr' line! Stand by, all. Bob—sch. There, she's coming up."

The dory had been towing astern, and the men were ordered to haul swamped her. Moran had been inspired to use the swamped boat as a sea anchor, fastening her to the schooner's bow instead of to the stern. The Bertha's bow veered to the wind. She veered around. The Bertha stood head to the seas, riding out the squall. It was a masterpiece of seamanship, conceived and executed in the very thick of peril, and it saved the schooner.

But there was little time to think of themselves. On board the bark the sails were still set. She could scarcely strand the Lady Letty squared aback. She heeled over upon the instant, then, as the top hamper caught the wind, she increased back a moment upon an even keel. But her carry had shifted. The bark was doomed. Through the flying spray and scud and rain Wilbur had a momentary glimpse of Richard backing at the lanyards with his ax. Then the Lady Letty capsized, going over till her masts were flat upon the water, and in another second rolled bottom up. For a moment her keel and red iron bottom were visible in the midst of driving spoondrift. Suddenly they sank from sight. She was gone.

And then, like the rolling up of a scroll, the squall passed, the sun returned, the sky lifted and cleared, the ruggedness was smoothed from the ocean, and the warmth of the tropics closed down upon it. The whole thing once more rolling easily on the swell of the ocean.

Of the Lady Letty and the drunken beachcombing captain not a trace remained. Kitchell had gone down with his prize. The Bertha Miller's Chinese crew huddled forward, talking wildly, pointing and looking in a bewildered fashion over the sides.

"Wilbur and Moran were left alone on the open Pacific.

CHAPTER V.

WHEN Wilbur came on deck the morning after the sinking of the bark he was surprised to find the schooner under way again. Wilbur and Charlie had berthed forward since that night, Charlie with the hands, Wilbur in the captain's hammock. The reason for this change of quarters had been found in a peremptory order from Moran during the dog watch the preceding evening.

She had looked squarely at Wilbur from under her scowl and had said briefly and in a fine contralto voice that he had for the first time noted: "I berth aft in the cabin; you and the Chinaman forward. Understand?"

Moran had still another Machiavellian intention, while after her almost miraculous piece of seamanship in the rescue of the schooner's hands and the Chinese crew accorded her a respect that was almost superstitious.

Wilbur met her again at breakfast. She was still wearing man's clothing—part of Kitchell's outfit—and was booted to the knee. Flat now she wore no hat, and her enormous mane of rye colored hair, twisted behind in long strands near to the thickness of a cable's end, fell almost to the waist. She gave a startling effect to her pale blue eyes and smoky, heavy eyebrows that easily showed up a frown. She ate with her knife, and after pushing away her plate Wilbur observed that she drank but a single cup of coffee and water.

The conversation between the two was tame enough. There was no common ground upon which they could meet. Wilbur, however, was curious to an old antiter even before her reasons she made no allusion. Her attitude toward Wilbur was one of cold and silent suspicion. Only once did she relax.

"I suppose you'll want to be aboard here with these rat eaters? You're no sailor," she said abruptly.

"I'm not," returned Wilbur airthlessly.

"Huh! I was shanghaied."

Moran smote the table with a red fist, so that the dishes rang. "Shanghaied! Shanghaied—you! Now, that is really good! And what are you going to do now?"

"What are you going to do?"

"Signal the first home bound vessel and be taken into Frisco. I've got to report the loss of [illegible] Wilbur had given her the Letty's papers] and the disaster to myself."

"Well, I'm not keen on shark hunting myself," said Wilbur. But Moran looked so fiercely at him that he added hastily: "But I will."

However, they soon found that they were not the only ones interested in the news on the same day the schooner sighted a steamship's smoke on the horizon and began to move rapidly. Moran immediately bound on the ensign, union down, and broke it out at the peak. Charlie, who was at the wheel, spoke a sentence in Chinese, and one of the hands ran aloft to the foremast head, yards and brought the distress signal to the deck. Moran turned upon Charlie with an oath. He never knew aught.

"No, no!" sang Charlie, closing his eyes and wagging his head. "No! You remember time! no can do. You! You come down side cabin; you an' you piece boss. No. 2 (this was Wilbur) have side cabin, bimeby."

The odd conclave assembled about Kitchell's table in the cabin, the half masculine girl in men's clothes and the Chinaman. The conference was an argument. Charlie and Moran insisting that they be put aboard the steamship. Charlie refusing with considerable vigor.

"I have no chinchilla wi' Chinee boys ice' aloft. Chinn boy keep full more coal—bimeby, bimeby full too much bikee—piece; no stop; go full now; go fish chop-chop; ice' heap time. Me savvy sail on this schooner. Chinn boy no savvy sail um boat. I talkum you savvy (and he pointed to the man). I talkum you savvy plenty heap much dis bay. Boss No. 2 no savvy sail um boat, but him savvy plenty many all same."

"And we're to stop on board your dead-and-alive navigator for you?" shouted Moran, her face blazing.

Charlie nodded blandly. "I talkum yass."

"And when we get back to port," exclaimed Wilbur, "you think perhaps we won't make it interesting for you?"

Charlie smiled.

"I thinkum ship company heap rich."

"Well, get along," ordered Moran, as though the schooner was her property. "Before we'll talk to you."

"Chinn boy like you heap pretty big." Charlie turned to Wilbur. "You savvy sail um boat all light; wants you fo' captain. But," he added, suddenly dropping his bland pomposity as though it were a mask and for an instant allowing the wicked malevolent Cantonese to come to the surface, "Chinn boy no likee funnee business. Savvy?" Then, with the smile of a Talleyrand, he disappeared.

Moran and Wilbur were helpless for the present. They were but two against seven Chinamen. They must stay on board if the coolies wished it, and if they were to stay it was a matter of life or their personal safety that the Bertha Miller should be properly navigated.

"I'll captain her," concluded Moran sullenly at the end of their talk. "You stand act as mate, Mr. Wilbur. But don't get any mistaken ideas into your head that because I'm a young girl and alone you are going to run things your way. I don't like funny business any better than Charlie."

"Look here," said Wilbur, complaining. "don't think I'm altogether a villain. I think you're a ripping fine girl. You're different from any kind of girl I ever met, of course, but, by Jingo,

She was herself again.

you're—you're splendid! There in the squall last evening, when you stood at the wheel, with your hair—"

"Oh, drop it," said the girl contemptuously, and went up on deck. Wilbur followed, scratching his ear.

Charlie was called aft and their decision announced. Moran would navigate the Bertha Miller, Wilbur and she taking the watches. Charlie promised that he would answer for the obedience of the men.

Their first concern now was to shape their course for Magdalena bay. Moran and Wilbur looked over Kitchell's charts and logbook, but the girl flung them aside disdainfully.

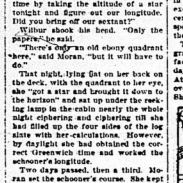

"He's been sailing by the dead reckoning, and his navigation is drivel. Why, a cabin boy would know better, and, to end with, the chronometer is run down. I'll have to get Greenwich time by taking the altitude of a star tonight and figure out our longitude. Did you bring off our sextant?"

Wilbur shook his head. "Only the papers," he said.

"There's Kitchell's old ebony quadrant there," said Moran, "but it will have to do."

That night, lying flat on her back on the deck, with the quadrant to her eye, she "got a line" on Fomalhaut and on the horizon" and sat up under the reckling lamp in the cabin nearly the whole night figuring and figuring till she had filled up the four sides of the log slate with her calculations. However, by daylight she had obtained the correct Greenwich time and worked the schooner's longitude.

Two days passed, then a third. Moran set the schooner's course. She kept him at it strictly to the work, and was not at the wheel or taking the sun or getting up her log glowing out to the northeast. Wilbur had been with the girl like this. So accustomed had she been to the rough give and take, direct associations of a seafaring life, that she misinterpreted well meant politeness, but by degrees he knew how not to pay her, to mean fastidious advances. She was suspicious of him, distrusted him utterly and openly ridiculed his shortlive seamanship. Pretty like was Spanish boy, began to have a certain amount of attraction for Wilbur. He liked her splendid ropes of hair, her heavy contralto voice, her fine animal strength of bone and muscle definitely greater than his own). He admired her indomitable courage and self reliance, while her positive genius in the matter of seamanship and navigation filled him with speechless wonder. The girls he had been with in his time, not only in the way knowledge of the amenities of an affair of the soul or the formalities of a paper gentleman.

A girl of two and twenty who could entertain thoughts of the attitude of a star was outside his experience. The more he saw of her the more he knew himself to have been right in his first estimate. She drank whisky after her meals, and when angry which was often, swore like a buccaneer. As yet she was discreet, as one might say, without sex—savage, unconquered, untamed, glorying in her own independence, her sullen isolation. Her neck was thick, strong and very white, her hands roughened and calloused. In her man's clothes she looked tall, vigorous and unrestrained, and on more than one occasion as Wilbur passed close to her he was made aware that her hair, her neck, her entire personality, exhaled a fine, sweet, natural fragrance that reminded of the ocean and great winds.

One day as he saw her handling a heavy water barrel by the chines only with a strength he knew to be greater than his own, he was suddenly attracted with the effort, her hair curling about her thick neck, her large, round arms bare to the elbow, a sudden flush of enthusiasm smote through him, and between his teeth he exclaimed to himself:

"By Jove, you're a woman!"

The Bertha Miller continued to the southward, gliding quietly over the oil smoothness of the ocean under airs so light as to barely ruffle the surface. Sometimes at high noon the shimmer of the ocean floor bloated into the shimmer of heat at the horizon, and then it was no longer water and blue heavens. The little craft seemed to be poised in a vast crystalline sphere where there was neither weight nor depth—palpable emptiness in warm, coruscating, opalescent space, alone with the sun.

At length one morning the schooner, which for the preceding twenty-four hours had been heading eastward, raised the land and at the middle of the afternoon had come up to within a mile of a low, sandy shore, quivering with heat, and had tied up to the kelp in Magdalena bay.

Charlie now took over entire charge of operations. For two days previous the Chinese hands had been getting out the deck tubs, tackles, gaffs, spades and the other shark fishing gear that had been stowed forward. The sails were lowered and gasketed, the decks cleared of all impedimenta, hogsheads and huge vats stood ready in the waist, and the huge carcasses of the previous week was replaced by an extraordinary activity.

Early after their arrival in the bay was occupied by all hands in catching fish for bait. Charlie had the use of a beautiful red gold color and about the size of an ordinary cod. They baited promptly, but the first catch they looked three were taken off the lines by the sharks before they could be hauled aboard. Further experience by in the fact that, either because of the excessive heat in the bay or the percentage of alkali in the water, they spoiled almost immediately if left in the air.

Turtle were everywhere—floating gray green disks just under the surface, like scales in clouds clustered all day long about the shore and sand pits. At long intervals flying fish skittered over the water like skipping stones. Shoals of porpoises came in from outside, leaping clumsily along the edges of the kelp. Bewildered land birds perched on the schooner's rigging and in the early morning the whistling of quail could be heard on shore near where a little pool of water stood run down to meet the ocean.

"Heave!" she cried.

It was Wilbur who caught the first shark, on the second morning of the Bertha's advent in Magdalena bay. A fish of about 150 pounds, Charlie's gaff and halved into chunks for the shark hooks, and Wilbur, baiting one of the huge hooks with a piece of pork up on deck the evening before, flung it overboard and watched the glimmer of the white bait sink through the water. In a very green as it sank down among the kelp. Almost instantly a long, curving shadow, just darker than the blue green mass of the water, identified itself at a little distance.

Enormous fishes proceeded from either side, an erect dorsal fin, like an enormous sickle, cutting the water astern. Wilbur, who had been sitting on the rail, threw himself backward on the deck with a cry. Moran, who was at the wheel, ran to the rail and looked down. Charlie, who was forward, dropped his knife and ran aft.

"Heave!" she cried, laughing with the excitement of the moment. "Heave all!" She began the chant of sailors hauling at the ropes. Together and bracing their feet against the schooner's rail, they fought out the fight with the great fish. In a swirl of lather the head and shoulders appeared on the surface, the flukes churning the water that fell pulled and helpless.

Charlie came up with the cutting-in spade and as the fish hung still over the side cut him open from gill to belly with a single downward movement. Another Chinaman stood by with a long handled gaff. Moran, who had cleaned the liver, bought it over the side and dropped it into one of the deck tubs. The shark thrashed and writhed, his flukes quivering and his gills distended. Wilbur could not restrain an exclamation.

"Brutal business," he muttered.

"Huh," exclaimed Moran scornfully; "cutting-in is too good for him. Sailor folk are no friends of such carrion as that."

Other lines were baited and dropped overboard, and the hands settled themselves to the business of waiting for a position. There was no skill in the matter. Sharks, drawn by the scent, and soon swarmed about the schooner in hundreds. Hardly a half minute passed that one of the Chinamen on deck that were fishing did not signal a catch and Charlie and Moran kept busy with spade and gaff. By noon the deck tubs were filled. The lines were hauled in, and the hands set the tubs in the waist by the fore hatch. Under the tropical heat the shark livers almost visibly melted away, and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon the tubs were full of a thick, yellow oil, the reek of which instantly revealed to Wilbur's mind the rancid smell of the schooner on the day when he had first come aboard and the Chinese had been unpitied into a hogshead and vats that stood in the waist of the Bertha, the tubs covered and the lines and long shark hooks overhauled. Charlie disappeared into the galley, which was rocked and eaten upon deck under the conflagration of the sunset, the lights were set, the Chinamen disappeared in the fo'c'sstle head smoking opium, and by 8 o'clock the routine of the day was at an end.

So the time passed. In a short time Wilbur lost count of the days, thinking the day was Wednesday or Sunday. He soon tired of the unspeakable work of shark fishing in the afternoon and turned aboard to relieve the monotony of the succeeding days. He and Moran were left much to look after their own devices. Charlie was the master of the schooner. Moran and Moran to Wilbur one day after a dinner of turtle steaks and fish eaten in the cockpit, as they sat on deck—"mate, this is slow work, and the schooner smells terribly foul. We'll have to clean her bottom soon. We can trundle a cask into her and get some water. The butt's three-quarters empty. Let's see how it feels to be in Mexico."

"Mexico?" said Wilbur. "That's so —Lower California is Mexico. I'd forgotten that!"

They went ashore and spent the afternoon in filling the water cask from the fresh water stream and in gathering a quantity of the small, purple grapes were delicious eating, from the rocks left there by the Mexicans. Nothing could have exceeded the loneliness of that shore and back land, palpitating under the flaming sun of midsummer. Low hills of sand covered with brush stretched back from the shore. On the eastern horizon, inspired by the heat, masses of mountains striated with purple and brown in the sunlight.

The sand was like fire to the touch. Far out in the bay the schooner hung motionless, her sails slatting idly, apparently upon her inverted shadow only. And that was all—the fast, boat hidden land, the sand, the silence, the schooner's waist, starting at each other, the smell of punk came to their nostrils. Forward the coolies were already burning jess sticks on the fo'c'sstle head, lowering their foreheads to the fumes.

Moran went forward and kicked them in their feet and hurled their joss sticks into the sea.

"Fang shui! Fang shui!" they exclaimed with fear. "Fang shui bimeby. "The Fang shui no like we."

Low in the east the horizon began to blacken against the sky. It was early morning. A watch was set, the Chinamen sent below, and until daybreak, when Charlie began to make a clattering of tins in the galley as he set about preparing breakfast, Wilbur paced the rounds of the schooner, looking, listening and waiting again for that slow, horrifying lift. But the rest of the night was without incident.

After breakfast the strangely assorted trio—Charlie, Moran and Wilbur—held another conference in the cabin. It was decided to move the schooner to the other side of the bay.

"Fang shui in dias place. No likee we," announced Charlie.

"Fang shui—who are they?"

Charlie promptly became incoherent on this subject, and Moran and Wilbut could only guess that the Fang shui were the tutelary deities that presided over that portion of Magdalena bay. At any rate, there were evidently hidden shark to be caught in that fishing ground. So sail was made, and by soon the Bertha Miller tied up to the kelp on the opposite side of the inlet, about half a mile from the shore.

The shark were plentiful here, and the fishing was resumed with a will before. Certain of those shark were hauled aboard, secured by a bow on the nose and their fins cut off. The Chinamen packed these fins away in separate bags, eventually they would be sent to China.

Two or three days passed. The hands kept steadily at their work. Nothing more occurred to disturb the monotony of the scorching days and the moonlight nights. The schooner sat as easily on the unbroken water as though she floated in a pond. No one kept watch was discontinued. During these days the three officers lived high. Turtle steaks, turtle eggs, fish, the white meaks and soups, the fried chelones, the sea fish, the really delicious shark

THE LIGHTNING'S FLASH

TYPIFIES SUDDENNESS OF THE COMING OF CHRIST.

IT IS A GLORIOUS SPECTACLE

Not As a Babe in a Manger Will thy Master's Next Coming Be, But He Shall Come In All the Splendour of the Kings of Old—The First and the Second Comings of Christ Vividly Contrasted.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Rev. Dr. Talmage, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 16.—In these midsummer days of frequent electrical display the preacher finds a lesson in the lightning's flash, which he likens to the suddenness of Christ's promised appearance on earth. The text is Matthew xxiv, 27, "As the lightning cometh out of the east."

The misfortune of being terrorized by the lightnings has never come to me. Some of the bravest and noblest men and women tremble like an aspen when flashes in the small hours of the wind whenever the lightnings flash and the thunders peal; because years ago they lived through some awful hour or of an electric storm. They can never come to me before their shadow of that danger. Like Paul on the road to Damascus, blinded and dazed they were flung into the dirt by an electric thunderbolt, or by it their and their horses shattered and burned, or they had a dead friend one killed by a bolt aside. To be frightened by a storm under such circumstances is not necessarily cowardly.

The raging of a thunderstorm has always interested me; a good deal as it did my only brother. A few weeks before his death there was a terrific electric storm in Brooklyn. Crash, crash, crash, went the thunder. It seemed then as though all parts of the heavens became at times great granite cathedrals, great rifts of fire, great cataracts and shooting javelins of fire. Father and mother became nervous about the storm. They wanted their children all about them. So father went upstairs to my brother and sister who were in their room was empty. He began to call: "De Witt! De Witt! Where are you?" After awhile I said: "Father, I think he heard a voice calling: "Here, father! Well did you want?" And then my father went up into the cupola, which stood upon the top of our house. There he found my brother. "What are you doing here?" said father. Brother came down with the rest of the family. We might get struck here." "No," answered my brother, "there is no danger. Let us stay up here and watch them. Is it not wonderful? Father, is not that play of lightning glorious?" Yes, the lightning is glorious if you have never been frightened by the tones in the fingers of fire. It has always been to me a serious spectacle. I am thrilled by its grandeur as I dread it as the symbol of "the coming Christ" in the "lightning which cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west." May God help me in this sermon to impress upon you the ever present nearness of our Saviour and our divine King.

Christ's second advent, in the first place, shall be a glorious spectacle. He shall come not as a babe to be born in a stable and cradled in a stone crib; he shall come as a mighty king in his mother's arms upon the back of a humble beast of burden, fleeing into Egypt; he shall come not as a carpenter, with the soiled garments of toil; he shall come not as an outcast, condemned culprit, staggering toward Calvary's hillside under the cross of the crucifix upon which he has to be crucified. But he shall come in all the splendor of the kings of old. The glittering spears shall be by his side. The burnished helmets and the flashing shields and the waving swords shall be reflecting the lights of his millennial approach. The white steeds of victory shall be champing their bits and stamping their golden hoofs. The rumbling wheels of myriads of chariots and the vociferating cheers of the charioteers and horsemen shall be making the welkin ring with their hallelujahs of joy. The clouds shall be his chariots. The wings of the wind shall be his brightly caparisoned charger. The arches of the heavens shall follow him clothed in fine linen. And on his head shall be written, "King of kings and Lords of lords." The sublime glories of the flashing lightnings of my text symbolize it.

Could we find a more resplendent pageantry for the second coming of Christ than in the chariots of clouds, with the flashing lights of dazzling lightnings? "Gird the sword upon thy thigh, O most mighty, with thy glory and thy majesty!" cries the psalmist. Yes! we have seen Christ in symbol girding on his sword and clothing himself in the glory and in the majesty of the sword.

Some years ago I took a hour driver of some fifty miles over the Michigan hills. There we got back to our summer cottage an awful storm overtook us. The skies boiled in. The black clouds eclipsed for us the light of everything as black as the plague of darkness in Egypt. From an adjacent farmhouse we borrowed a lantern. The way became so dark that even the horses could not see the road. The little children in the stage crept up close to their mothers in fear. The silence became as still as the famous half hour of silence in heaven when the celestial hosts, horror struck, could not utter a whisper immediately after the dying agonies of the tragedy on Calvary. Then came the rushing of mighty winds. It seemed as though all the spirits demoniac as well as celestial were sweeping past me and meeting in mighty contest. Then the whole heavens became sheets of fire. North, south, east and west, everywhere the heavens were ablaze. The flames seemed to touch and kiss each other, as though they were climbing up a thousand story building. Then it seemed as though the clouds with their mighty Niagaras rushed toward them and poured out those blazing furnaces of Nebuchadnezzar, seven times, aye, seventy times heated. Then the huge trees alongside the road would bend and groan like shuddering Lazarus in the grip of huge monsters. Ahead of the horses I watched with the lantern to show the way. Now I could see the big stage following after me. Now, after the thunders had rolled and swelled and died away, I could hear the faint cry of a child or the soothing tones of a mother crying to quiet her babe, nine, the mother, just as frightened as the child. Then suddenly every tree, every rock, every hillside would come out as clear in outline as during the day. Then midnoon in an instant would be changed into midnight. Power, power, omnipotent, infinite power! Do you wonder that the glory and the majesty of the coming Christ was symbolized by Jesus himself in the sublime pictures of one of "the lightnings coming out of the east and shining even unto the west?"

I fear that our artists and poets and religious teachers have too often dwelt upon the humanity and the humility and the helplessness of Christ and have not emphasized enough his glory and majesty and power as symbolized in the lightnings and the chariots of clouds of his second coming. It is right and just that we should represent upon our hearers and scholars the helplessness of Christ incarnated in the form of a little child. The master artists drew a true lesson for us when he made Mary and the divine infant sleep between the great paws of the old Egyptian sphinx. There was the mother hovering over the silent, bleak desert as the omniscient eye of Deity. Pathos watching his only begotten Son. There was deepth, the serpent's grim and silent as a sentinel, keeping guard. There in the background rises the huge statue, half man, half beast, planted and anchored to its foundations thousands of years before Christ was born and still there watching, watching, watching, millions of thousands of years after Christ is dead. Christ, the helpless Christ there, became helpless in sympathy with us. But under than the oldest rocks of the pyramids was the same life of that divine Christ. Longer than those rocks shall ever exist shall the omnipotence, the omniscient and omnipresent God. Christ's next coming shall be visible to all people as he is girded with glory and majesty. By the flaming swords of the lightnings may that is symbol and by the glorious, a sublime, a resplendent, a celestial panorama. Let no regret for you the glorious message of my text. That hour shall be the hour of the millennial day echoes down the halls of time, "As the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth into the west, so shall the coming of the Son of man."

But the glory of the lightning does not impress me any more than the suddenness of its flash. Before you can comment it is here, the next it is gone. Instantaneous! It seems to far away the next it seems to be blazing at your feet. One moment it seems to be starting a forest fire in yonder mountains, a second later and the whole globe and come back to the place from which it started. It is so swift in its motions that the swiftest moving object on the earth seen by the gleam of the blazing lightnings always appear to be standing still. For the light last year's flashing across the heavens only appears before your eyes as a part of the present part of a second.

When Christ shall come to earth the second time he will not only come with the glory of the lightning, but with the velocity of the lightning. He will come quicker than the winds, quicker than the gaze of your breath. He will not come as an ordinary human visitor. He will never break you as an electric spark. Could the suddenness of Christ's coming be pictured more vividly? Many years ago I was standing upon the bridge of a Mississippi steamboat. I was watching a magnificent thunderstorm. Suddenly a great ball of fire seemed to alight upon the cutwater at the end of the porch. With a bump I leaped clear across the porch and into the balcony of the hotel. Then, with a nervous laugh, I ventured the ball a second time out again upon the piazza. "Why," I said to myself, "if that lightning had ever hit me it would have struck me before I knew it. In an instant I would have been dead." There was no more need of my jumping than there would need of the soldier boy in the full civil war squirming behind the trenches when he heard the shell singing over his head. If that shell was to kill him it would kill him before he could hear it sing. The lightning comes in a flash, in a flash "shall the second coming of the son of man be."

The glory of the lightning is overpowering. The suddenness of its appearance is startling. But the universality of Christ's second appearance excites and currents is just as suggestive to its divine significance. How this electric power gets into the atmosphere no scientist has ever yet been able to explain. There are many theories, but theories are not necessarily facts. The scientists cannot positively tell us why the electric substances are in the atmosphere any more than they can positively state what causes an earthquake or why Mount Vesuvius or why gigantic Kilauea, the greatest of all volcanoes, have their vomiting spells. But this fact we do know: everywhere in the atmosphere are these electric forces. Thus, when two great storm clouds drift toward one another one seems to be filled with the positive forces of electricity and the other seems to be filled with the negative forces of electricity. Then these two clouds come together on account of their affinities. Then the flash comes, and the explosion soon follows. Thus we find the centers of electricity everywhere. When the divine lightning shall appear at the second advent, it will not be Christ coming to any one place or to any one people.

Away up in the Arctics among the polar bears and the spouting whales and the obelisks of ice the Eskimo in the unfanned skies shall see him. Down among the beautiful flowers of the tropics, amid the seven-air air winds sound of the prima donnas of the woods, the black . . . of the African forests shall see him. In the temperate zone the king shall see him at his palace door and the poor man in his hut. Then "the glory of the Lord shall cover the earth, even as the waters cover the seas." Yes, yes; the second coming of Jesus Christ will not be hemmed in by any one race or by any one people or by any one climate. Christ, like the electric forces in the air, shall be seen everywhere at once. Christ shall come as a universal ruler, for God has "given him a name, which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow of things in heaven and things in earth and things under the earth, that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Christ will come to earth. No doubt is there about the second advent. But why is Christ to come to earth? Why us ask the lightning and ask Christ their missions. I look up and say: "O lightning, what is thy mission?" I hear it say: "My mission is to empty the clouds of their moisture, and see strike. See the rain beating down into the valleys below. See how I am purifying and clarifying the atmosphere." So when I cry, "Oh, Christ, for what purpose art thou coming to earth?" I hear Jesus say:—"I am coming to calm my own. Yes, as the lightning shines out of the darkness of the midnight and the black cloud of the day, so out of the blackness of your sins, O man, I am coming to bring salvation and eternal life." "What," I say, "Christ, save me out of the very darkness of my sins?" Yes, he can, he will if we will only let him save us.

Cannot you and I take Christ at his word and prepare to let him save us? Are we going to power at and ridicule the statements of the divine authority, as Frederick the Great and a lot his French court and the Royal Society of London at first ridiculed and buffooned the statements of the great sage of Philadelphia, when he declared that he claimed that with a kite string he had drawn electricity out of a storm cloud? Are we going to flee the miraculous and divine saving power of Jesus Christ, the power to save us from sin, as the Athenian philosophers did on the side of the scientist, Herr Werner Siemen, when they were caught in a thunderstorm on the top of the Egyptian pyramids? There, in the midst of that awful storm, Siemen drew forth electric sparks from his metallic water gourd and the light of those sparks in imitation of the Bedouin guides that away they ran and never came back. Also, do we not deride our fine Christ's salvation? Let us take Christ at his word. Instead of fleeing from him as the scientist he is going to-heaven for a little while to prepare a place for us. Then who does he say? "I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." Will you believe that? Will you do it?

Christ never breaks his word. He would no more break it with us than he would intentionally break a promise he made with your little child. Many years ago when the Duke of Wellington was crossing one of the London bridges with his little son. He placed him in a certain seat and said: "Now wait here, my boy, and I will come back. I have a very important errand I wish to do, and then I will come and get you." After awhile the duke left the child all about his son. But late in the afternoon he remembered that he had done and the promise he had made. The father came further hurried back to the bridge, and there he found his boy. "Where you little one," said the duke, "did you wait so patiently?" "Well," said the boy, "I got tired, father, but I waited and waited." "Why," said the father, "you have never yet broken a promise to your father, my boy. You must have forgotten his promise that he would return to his son, but you would never break the promise he has made to the Saviour. He is coming. He is surely coming. I am convinced that he will come to claim his own. The glory of the lightning flash out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be.

Christ will surely come. There is no doubt about that. He may come any minute of any hour of any day. There is also no doubt about that Christ said it. He is not only coming personally, but in many other ways besides time. In Matthew we read: "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." Now, if the Son of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Therefore this is the great practical application of this sermon: When Christ does come, shall we be prepared to meet him. When he does come, where do you think he intends to find you. When Christ comes, as come he may at any minute, I think he would like to find us in our ordinary working apparel doing the christian work he has given us to do. He wants to find us trustworthy, prayerfully, faithfully doing the work of Christian ministers, Christian workers, Christian business men and Christian mechanics. Christ was not ashamed to work in a carpenter shop. Should we be ashamed to steer clear as common Christian workmen and workwomen?

Should we were as faithful in the tasks Christ has given to us as was that noble Christian statesman of many years ago. It was during the time when many were prophesying the speedy termination of the world. The Connecticut Legislature was in session, of which this Christian was a member. Suddenly in the broad daylight the sun darkened somewhat, and there was darkness upon the face of the earth like that awful hour of Calvary when Christ was crucified. Some of the members were greatly alarmed and moved to adjourn. With that life noble Puritan arose and spoke as follows: "Mr. Chairman, we are told that this world is soon always imminent and obligatory. Some in this house are afraid that the last day of the world has come. It may be they are right. But as our duties never cease, instead of adjourning this assembly I move that the candles be brought in and that we proceed with the work of the day. If Christ is to come to-day I want him to find me at my post of duty." If Christ comes to-day will he find us at our post of duty? Are we faithful Christian disciples of many hours? Are we true Christian business men and true Christian church members? Oh, friend, if Christ comes to-day he wants to find us doing the Christian work for which we were sent. Are we at our posts of Christian duty and prepared to answer "Here am I, Lord," when he comes?

SEAWEED AS FOOD.

When Dry It is Richer Than Oatmeal or Indian Corn.

Seaweed is eaten on the coasts of Scotland and Ireland in vast quantities and, though unpalatable to the uninitiated, is at times the chief food of the poorer.

When dry it is richer than oatmeal or Indian corn in nitrogenous constituents and takes rank among the most nutritious of vegetable foods.

To prepare seaweed for the table it should be steeped in water to get rid of the salt with which it is impregnated, and a little carbonate of soda removes the tartaric acid, which in large quantities is most disagreeable. It should then be boiled for an hour in fresh water, vinegar and is best flavored with vinegar or pepper.

Fungi are almost everywhere largely eaten, though in England less attention is paid to them than they deserve, and the kinds eaten are few.

A curious error is to suppose that fungi are eatable and toadstools poisonous. As such line of demarcation exists nor, strictly speaking, has the name toadstool—by-the-bye—meaning.

Very many fungi are edible, and the common agaric usually eaten in England is not the most palatable and wholesome. Few foods are more savory, and none are greater favorites than well-cooked fungi, and the sorts of vegetarians years for them.

THE PIE HABIT.

It Is Mainly Confined to Those Born in This Country.

Pie is customarily chiefly by the native Americans. Foreigners eat very little of it. A German, for example, might eat one pie in a year, and the same Yankee would consume as many in a week. The English, the Italians and the Swedes rarely touch pie. Even the English eat plum pudding, and the Italians like a cake. The Scandinavian and the middle states constitute the area of greatest consumption, but the pie belt extends over the whole of the most intensively eaten all through the west. Pie is eaten much more generally in the north than in the south. Chicago is a great pie center. St. Louis is not so good. Milwaukee also ranks low. One would think that the pie habit was good for ascertaining the facts in regard to the consumption of pie, but there are no statistics on the subject during the last two years which enable me to compute with reasonable correctness the consumption of pies in every state in the Union. Pies are made in greater variety than doughnuts. Pie ingredients are brought from greater distances—in fact, from all parts of the world. The pie crust has been known since the days of Homer

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

PATENT MEDICINES AND RACE SUICIDE.

PETERBORO CORRESPONDENT MAKES A POSSIBLY PERTINENT QUERY AS TO THE USE OF ONE AND THE PREVALENCE OF THE OTHER.

The doctors of Peterboro have banded together for mutual protection and adopted a schedule of fees which some of their patients appear to think exorbitant. In this connection a correspondent writes the following rather striking letter to the Review:

"Sir,—I believe there is such a thing in Ridgetown as having your prayers bill 'taxed.' This is a protection to the client, but about a doctor's bill—no matter how high—I am told it is simply a case of pay no matter how excessive the amount or unjust the charge. Well, sir! the present situation in their rates is simply an illustration of the old maxim that self preservation is the first law of nature, and the doctors, who are on their 'ear' in this city, just like fairly tumbling over one another, have at last resolved a scheme to protect their interests and the public will be made to pay sweetly for it all. I am told further that every physician must toe the mark, and if he is deterred reducing the schedule, he will to use a Judge expression be 'blackballed.' Well I have lived in Peterboro for forty-one years and have been blessed with such good health that I have never yet had to consult a doctor, although I have paid dues into a fraternal organization for the medical attendance for seventeen years. What of others who are always under the weather,' Their doctoring, according to the new schedule of fees, will be considerably more each year, and the burden of raising a large family increased.

"Do we wonder at people flocking to the United States for a cure in private hospitals, patent medicines and nostrums of ever kind, that are guaranteed to cure or give relief. They will do so more modest sum and in fact it is the old ordinary ailments and affections. Do we stand amazed at the tendency toward race suicide? Primarily, I believe, the cause can be traced back to these conditions. But so it is the business that when they do receive a call they charge each first class opportunity to run up a large bill, instead of making a moderate charge.

"Why, according to the new tariff, you cannot call a doctor in consultation over the telephone but you are liable to be asked to shark up a fee for advice. Pretty soon you will be supposed to pay for a chair in his waiting room."

BROTHER STABBED BROTHER

DEPLORABLE AFFAIR AT CORRYVILLE ON WEDNESDAY LAST — FOUND OVER TO KEEP THE PEACE

On Wednesday last two brothers named Arthur and Clayton Sheffield got into an altercation and in the melee Arthur stabbed his brother in the arm with a knife. The affray took place near Corbyville. The wound made was not of a serious nature. As a result of the affair Arthur was arrested, but has been allowed out after being bound over to keep the peace. Suitable and substantial sureties were secured.

A Cement Question.

In answer to a question regarding the number of barrels of cement required to be made of one barrel of cement, the Family Herald and Weekly Star replies as follows:

One barrel of Portland cement mixed with four times the same bulk of sand will make twelve solid blocks of the same size as those made of one and instead of sand, from 6 to 8 parts can be used, in one of cement, which would reduce the cost almost one half. If a large number of blocks are required to be made in a day the concrete must be mixed four to one and the moulds must be filled to overflowing when taken out of the mould. The mixture will let lie on for a few hours the 6 to 8 to one mixture may be used. Hollow blocks make a handy shed or out-house of blocks. Even with hollow blocks the wall should be stripped before being lathed and plastered in order to have a thoroughly dry house.

Tramp Was Innocent.

Mr. W. Kelleher, who resides in the Grove, on Saturday thought he had been robbed of a watch and chain. It appears that a tramp called at his house and shortly after the stranger left Mr. Kelleher missed his jewellery. He reported the affair to the police but the missing articles turned up all right, having been taken by a boy out of Mr. Kelleher's for temporary use.

CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLE'S DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Bridge Street.

"A Disastrous Choice" was the subject discussed by the Pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A., at Bridge Street Church last evening. His text was from Genesis, 13th chapter and 12th verse.

"Abram dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelled in the cities of the plain, and pitched his tent before Sodom."

During the services Mr. O. H. Day, of Winnipeg, rendered a solo entitled "Rest of Eternity." It was sung with pleasing effect. A quartette, composed of Misses Vermilyea and Sine, and Messrs. Burns and Vermilyea, sang a selection entitled "I Know My Heavenly Father Knows."

Presbyterian.

The congregations of St. Andrew's and the John Street Presbyterian churches yesterday worshipped together at the latter church. Rev. A. H. Drummond was the preacher of the day. In the evening he took as text from First Epistle of John, 4th chapter and latter portion of the 1st verse:

"God is love."

During the service Mr. B. A. Cameron sang a solo entitled, "God of Our Fathers."

Tabernacle.

Rev. Geo. Brown preached at both services to large congregations. In the morning his subject was "Servants Be Loyal Unto Your Masters," and the deliverance of the Lord's delivery to Israel was from Joshua, 11th chapter and 20th verse.

"Hebrew literature became the inheritance of Cabul, the son of Ephun the Seventh, and the Lord's day, because that he boldly followed the Lord God of Israel."

The evening address was taken from Revelations, 22nd chapter, 12th verse.

Holloway Street.

Services were well attended in the pleasant Sunday school room. The pastor preached at both services, in the evening taking for his text James 3, 17, 18:

"But the wisdom that is from above is first pure, then peaceable, gentle and easy to be intreated, full of mercy and good fruits. And the fruit of righteousness is sown in peace."

The choir sang "O, All Ye Saints," Mrs. Gordon gave a solo, which was much appreciated.

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

"Youth's Choice" was the subject of the sermon at last night's service. The Rector, Rev. A. M. Huddy, exorted the young people of his flocksters to sustain from worldly amusements which would keep them from Christian privileges, and implored them, under no circumstance, to be merely "nominal Christians."

Bethel Hall Evangelistic.

The services continue nightly with interest. On Sunday at 3 p.m. Mr. Irving addressed an appreciative audience from 2 Sam., 14, 11. He went on to speak of reality and the possibility of death, its certainty, so all needs die, urging upon his hearers the necessity of being ready for one. Said though man was at an enmity with God, God had in love devised a means, through the person and work of the Lord Jesus Christ, whereby He could be, and is, just and justifier. Adam had fallen from Him, but brought to Him by the Blessed Christ, as was Pinches, who spoke chiefly of Jonathan and David, and Jonathan was a type of a sinner who had been delivered from the power of the Devil, who said man was held captive by the devil at his will, but Christ had been sent amongst us to undo the work of the Devil. He also made clear how no man can love God by nature. Love begets love, and as Jonathan, whose love went out to David because he first loved him, so God in love to deliverance from Goliath. Man now must accept the love of God in Christ Jesus, to love in return, or perish for want of necessity perish eternally.

In the Justice Shop.

ASSAULT CASE.

On Saturday John Goodfellow, who was charged with using abusive language towards James Little, was found guilty and, between fine and costs, had to contribute $5.00 to the city treasury. Little was also charged with assaulting Goodfellow and was proven guilty. The total fine and costs amounted to $9.50

Flower Thieves Tried

The two boys who were arrested for stealing flowers from Mr. S. Potter's place of business on the Market Square were tried before the Magistrate on Saturday afternoon. One of the lads, who was the ringleader, and who had been before the Magistrate before on similar charges, was given a month in jail, and his companion was allowed to go after being lectured by the Magistrate.

CONSTABLE COOK CAPTURED CAMPEAU.

AFTERMATH OF A ROBBERY WHICH TOOK PLACE IN TRENTON IN MAY.

Some time in May a general store in Trenton was burglarized and suspicion rested upon two parties who immediately after left that town. John Campeau, a young man, was one of the suspects, and, as the police here had been notified to be on the look-out for him and his companion, when he put in an appearance here on Saturday Officer Cook arrested the Chief of Police Coleman, of Trenton, was notified of the arrest and on Saturday evening came here and took Campeau back to Trenton for trial. We understand that the considerable booty was taken from the place entered.

OLD BOYS' REUNION.

MANY VISITORS ALREADY ARRIVING—PARADE NEXT MONDAY WILL BE AN ELABORATE AFFAIR.

Already a number of visitors have arrived in the city for the Old Boys' Reunion and many more are now en route to the scene of their childhood's days. The prospects are that from Saturday to Tuesday next many thousands of Old Boys and Old Girls will gather here to participate in the Reunion.

The decoration committee are desirous that all citizens should decorate for the occasion. The general committee are looking after some suitable places on the city, and will also provide some suitable streamers. It is the desire of the committee that, on the evening of band concerts at the park, all parties who have decorated, shades, streamers, etc., should have the same decorated, so that all may see the effect produced of the visitors and present a pretty appearance.

The parade on Monday afternoon promises to be an elaborate affair and it is to be hoped that the feature of the demonstration are doing all in their power to make it a success, and are being assisted by manufacturers, merchants and others.

A report has become quite freely circulated in Peterboro and other places that the concerts on Victoria Park were to be the Reunion Band during the Old Boys' Reunion next week, free, but that a fee will be charged for the use of the concert stand. This is free and as will be the case when the band plays in the park. One thousand extra chairs will be placed upon the park and for these a small fee will be charged. They will be reserved for those who desire to secure a seat before the entertainment begin.

THIS JOKE MUST HAVE FILLED BRIDE WITH JOY.

HOW A TORONTO COUPLE WERE STARTED OVER THE SEA OF MATRIMONY BY THEIR FRIENDS

There is nothing like getting a good start when you launch out a troubled sea of matrimony. A Toronto couple wedded there on Friday afternoon found this out on the day they boarded the train for Buffalo on their wedding trip. In every seat in the car reposed a printed dodger bearing this inscription:

SPECIAL NOTICE.

The kind attention of the passengers on this train is particularly directed to the newly married couple in the Buffalo car.

The Bride is a brunette of medium height, and is wearing a grey travelling costume.

The Groom

is about the same height, but not such good looking. He is slightly bald, with a faint indication of a moustache. He has not been married before, and is going as far as Buffalo, and will be glad to receive the congratulations of all on board.

Borrowed His Bicycle

Stanley Littlewood reported to the police that on Saturday evening, whilst he was in a store on Front street, some one took his bicycle. The wheel was subsequently recovered, but by whom he took it could not be ascertained.

A Sad Death

A sad death was that of Miss Bessie Empey, of Madoc Township. The young lady was only 18 years and a few months old, and had only been ailing for two weeks. Drs. Harper and Dafoe were attending her and on Friday evening Dr. Gibson was called in, but to no avail. She passed peacefully away on Monday morning, July 10th. She left a mother, Mrs. Empey, Madoc Township, four sisters and three brothers. The sisters are Mrs. Fred Ferris, Mrs. Jas. E. Ketcheson, Mrs. Annie Bennett and Miss Nellie, at home. The brothers are Will and Fred, at home, and Stuart of Madoc. —Com.

THE VOTE A PARTY ONE

Senate' Carries the Autonomy Bill by 33 to 17.

Hon. Mr. Fielding Will Accept Resignation of J. Lorne Macdougall, Auditor-General of Canada—Made Three Quite Clear In Discussing Resignation Before the House of Commons —No Amendment: to the Audit Act.

Ottawa, July 17.—Shortly before 6 o'clock Saturday the Senate took a vote on the second reading of the Alberta bill. The vote stood 33 for and 17 against. Senators Poirier and Bullman (Kingston) voted with Govern ment. The Senate will take up the bill in committee to-day. It was a strict party vote.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell moved an amendment for a three months' holst of the Alberta bill and the division showed:

Yeas—Bernier Belduc, Debouchervllle, Bowell, Dobson, Ferguson, Landry, McDonald (P. E. I.), McKeown, Macdonald (Cape Breton), McKay, McLaren, McMillan, Mercer, Miller, Montgomery—17.

Nays—Blaine, Black, Cascrain, Delanaudiere Church, Clornn, Coffey, Cox, Dandurand, Davis, Derbyshire, Edwards, Ellis, Fiset, Frost, Godbout, Kerr, Lovitt, Lessard, McGregor, McHugh, McInnes, Mitchell, Porter, Robertson, Ross, Ross, Scott, Sullivan, Templeman Thompson, Gibson, Tessier, Young—23.

The second reading was carried on the same division reversed.

The Auditor-General.

Ottawa, July 17.—There were 47 members present when the House rose at 11 o'clock for its first Saturday sitting this session. On motion to go into supply, Mr. Lennox urged that, even at this late hour, some readjustment might be made of the differences between the Government and the Auditor-General, whereby his services might be retained to the country. Mr. Lennox wanted a committee appointed to go over the Audit Act and collect information in order that next session a system of improvement in financial methods of Canadian affairs might be evolved.

In reply, Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he could not agree. Taking the whole of the Audit Act, there was no reason for doubting its efficiency. It might not be perfect in every detail, but it was generally satisfying for the purposes for which it was created. Sir Wilfrid, speaking to the Auditor-General, said his duty was simply to see that the money voted by Parliament was expended as directed by Parliament. Sometimes the Government had accepted the improvements suggested by Mr. Macdougall; sometimes it had not. In the latter event he thought he was perfectly correct in saying that the action of the Government had never been challenged. The Auditor-General should be the auditor, not the revisor, of the will of Parliament.

Made His Bed, Must Lie On It.

Regarding his resignation, Sir Wilfrid declared it was of his own free will, and not due to any action of the Government. He had made his bed, so to speak, and must have to abide by it.

Mr. Fisher said that, during his term of office as Finance Minister, he always found Mr. Macdougall a reasonable man, with a single eye to performance.

Mr. Fielding said he had no objection to put on record the reasons for the resignation of the Auditor-General. He was convinced that improvements to the Audit Act should be made. Mr. Foster went on to say that, after all he had heard, and known of the Auditor-General, he had never, in his knowledge, tried to revise the policy of the Government. The Auditor-General wanted a treasury board that was fair. He also wanted reasons given when his recommendations were overruled. The Finance Minister had agreed that this request was reasonable. This opened, in Mr. Foster's opinion, the door to a reconciliation.

Resignation To Be Accepted.

In reply, Mr. Fielding prefaced his remarks by saying: "The resignation of the Auditor-General will be accepted, the appointment cancelled, and the public business will go on." Mr. Fielding, with some heat, declared that Mr. Macdougall had treated the Government with scant courtesy. It had been the wish that he should go to the end of the time had come when the position of the Government in the matter must be indicated. Statements such as had been made could not go on further without explanation. All the suggestions made by the Auditor-General could be carried out within the four corners of the Audit Act. Mr. Macdougall was, in the opinion of Mr. Fielding, an honorable man, but, in the opinion of the Government, he had an entire wrong conception of the Audit Act. He wanted to be the educator and controller, and desired to boss the public business of the country.

Mr. Fielding was particularly severe on Mr. Macdougall's conduct, before the public accounts committee, of the two pet questions, the Seed bridge and the Sandwich bridge. Mr. Mellroy declared that in neither of these cases was any improvement to the Audit Act necessary.

Fielding Is Bitter.

When the House met after luncheon, Mr. Fielding continued his diatribe against Mr. Macdougall. He cited numerous cases in which, in his opinion, the Auditor-General had exceeded the law in the matter of duties. Mr. Fielding was followed by making a warm defence of the action of the Government in the differences with the Auditor-General.

R. L. Borden said it would be only right to, in view of the sterling honesty and long service of the man, treat him with the utmost consideration. And he spoke the small matters of the difference between Messrs. Macdougall and Fielding. These were very small and insignificant, to say the least. Mr. Borden thought the Government had treated the matchless of Mr. Macdougall in a very unfriendly manner.

Mr. Lemieux, Mr. Bourassa and Mr. Monk also spoke.

Are Still Naval Bases.

The Minister of Militia, in reply to R. L. Borden, said the rumors that the Imperial authorities had decided to abandon Halifax and Esquimalt as naval bases were unfounded. He had received assurance from the Admiralty that such was not the intention in regard to Halifax. To make sure, he would make further enquiries to Esquimalt.

GET THE ADDED INDEMNITY.

Government Bill Provides $1,000 Increase For the Session.

Ottawa, July 17.—It has been definitely decided that the sessional indemnity of members of Parliament is to be raised to $2,500. The notice of the Government's resolution to that effect was laid on the table of the House during Saturday's sitting. The increase will apply of course to Senators as well as members of the House. Provision will be operative for the present session, as members will go home each a thousand to the good.

SHOOTING AT BISLEY.

Conditions Were Good Saturday For Graphic and Telegraph Matches.

Bisley Camp, July 17.—Shooting conditions were good Saturday. In both The Graphic and Daily Graphic competitions, final scorings have been made.

Lieut. G. A. Boult of Vancouver, with forty-seven others, will shoot for first place in The Daily Graphic match. The first prize is a cup and £25 (or $125).

In The Daily Telegraph competition, Staff Sergt. Ayles made 24 and Capt. Mitchell 24.

In the "Alexander Martin," ten shots at 800 yards, Pte. Morfice made 46.

In the "Windsor Cup," ten shots at 600 yard, Capt. Elliott made 48, and Pte. Eastcott the same.

Sergt. Pugh made 48 in the "Alexander Martin" and 48 in "Armourer's Company," ten shots at 800 yards.

There are three scores of 49 in the "Wimbledon Challenge Cup." Capt. Elliott and Pte. Eastcott are the only Canadians who will figure in the prize list.

BENNETT WILL MAKE A DEFENCE

Family Property May Be Sacrificed In His Favor.

Brantford, July 17.—Joseph Bennett, who is charged with murder, is a prisoner in the County Jail. Saturday morning Miles Lelith remanded the preliminary hearing of the case till Thursday of this week, when the prisoner will be brought up to answer his first charge. The preliminary hearing will be held in the local Court House, and not at Ohsweken, as anticipated.

The most interesting development in the case is the coroner's inquest, which opened on Monday night at the Council House at Ohsweken. It is not expected that the inquest will last very long. The jury, however, may seek to fix the responsibility upon some party in their verdict.

The prisoner has expressed a desire to see his mother before the trend. A defence will be put up. The family have some property, and it is likely it will be sacrificed in the effort to save Bennett from the penalty of the law.

JAPS CLEARING COREA

Big Force of Russians From Vladivostock to Stop Them.

Clash to Come North of Tumen River —Russians Hold Only Two Positions South of That Water—South Sakhalin Is in Complete Possession by the Japanese After a Brisk Fight at Dalizna—China's Role.

Tokio, July 16.—(2 p.m.)—It is officially announced that the Russian forces under Caribsky and Kashtalinsky attacked July 11, and offered stubborn resistance. The attack was renewed at dawn of July 12, when the Japanese dislodged the Russians, driving them in the direction of Mauka. This victory ensures complete occupation of South Sakhalin by the Japanese.

Eighty prisoners were taken by the Japanese, including Lieut.-Col. Kuzmin, Lieut. Maximts. Four field pieces, one machine gun and the ammunition wagons, houses were captured. The Japanese loss was about 70 men killed or wounded. The Russians lost some 160 men.

Definite information has been received here that the Russian forces in Northern Korea have gradually been driven northward since last month, and now hold only two positions south of the Tumen River.

The latest information from the front, however, reports the advance south of the Tumen River of considerable force. It is believed the Russians will halt at Kainkeyo, or Hoiryong, and concentrate their forces to make a resolute stand there against the Japanese advance.

The fighting season has set in in Manchuria, and preparations on a large scale.

Prepared a Coup?

Admiral Yamada, commanding a squadron of the Japanese fleet in advance, reports that the Russian cruiser Admiral Ushakoff is ashore at Dalizna; there is no hope of refloating her. The vessel has been dismantled and her guns sent on the northern point of the southern entrance to Vladimir Bay, about 100 miles northeast of Dalizna Bay.

Premier Katsura, on the authority of Reuter's correspondent, has signed a decree for Captain A. E. Bongouin and Maj. his Japanese clerk, for espionage. Includes freedom from police surveillance.

Captain Bongouin, a prominent French resident of Tokio, and formerly attached to the French legation here, was arrested July 10, and is now under hard labor, on the general charge of being a spy.

Taking Soundings.

Nikolaiefsk, Asiatic Russia, July 16.—Four Japanese torpedo boat destroyers are constantly cruising in the entrance to the northeast of Vladivostok July 13 and July 15. They made soundings and sighted the mouth of the river, evidently investigating the possibilities of landing troops.

They examined the wreck of the Russian steamer Rossia, by means of divers.

Warships to the North.

St. Petersburg, July 16.—Japanese warships have appeared in the northward of the island of Sakhalin and are presumably facilitating a descent on the island.

Quiet at Gunsha Pass.

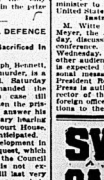

Gunsha Pass, July 16.—(Special.)—All the lowering clouds of a great battle situation appear to be without foundation. Investigations made by correspondents on the field of operations that neither flank has been turned, and that in fact the Japanese wings are more advanced than the centre. The Japanese centre is strongly fortified. Many siege guns have been employed since the battle began on July 10, and there is a triple ring of forts commanding the Manchurian road. The Japanese are using novel elephant-trap type of entrenchments, and the ditches covered with platforms, which are hinged in the middle, and which tilt into vertical positions under the feet of the enemy.

China's Role.

St. Petersburg, July 16.—Chinese possible role in the Russo-Japanese peace negotiations is the subject of much discussion. The foreign office intimates that China's position will be a peculiar one, unless assent was previously given to the Japanese proposal to include in the peace conference, to consider the Washington proposal, the affairs of Corea affecting Chinese territory does not appear probable. Assent on the part of the powers in the form of a circular to Washington, according to the foreign office, sent no reply to Pekin, but it may be significant that the powers to which occasionally have official inquiries, Pekin, Washington, Tokio and Belgrade, took with complaisance, if not satisfaction, the suggestion that China may try to have a voice in the terms of peace.

The Shanghai correspondent of a news agency reports that China has already selected Wu Ling Fang, former minister to Washington, to go from the United States to watch the proceedings. Minister Rockhill will act for China.

M. Witte spent an hour with Mr. Meyer, the United States ambassador, today, discussing the forthcoming peace conference, which opens in the city Wednesday. M. Witte will have still another conference with the emperor. It is expected to be the bearer of a personal message from the emperor to President Roosevelt. The Associated Press is authorized by M. Harting, director of the first department of the foreign office, to state that the reports relative to the Russian plenipotentiaries cover is placed. They are very detailed, being especially specific as to the leveling of the fortifications of Vladivostok.

Story Was Untrue.

Admiral Wirenius, chief of the general staff of the navy, says that the report of a mutiny on board and the sinking of the battleship Catharine II. circulated in Vienna and printed in the United States, is without foundation.

An examination of the battleship Kniaz Potemkine, which is at Sebastopol, shows that her boilers are in a bad condition owing to neglect, but that there is no damage to her machinery aside from that done by water in the engine compartment.

Slaughter Goes On.

Lodz, July 16.—Three persons were killed and six wounded by a volley fired by Cossacks during an anti-government demonstration in Kamienna-street Saturday.

Rose in Poland Again.

Warsaw, July 16.—General Maximovich, the governor-general, has issued an order forbidding illegal assemblies, processions and gatherings in the streets throughout Poland. The government now feels strong enough to enforce the latest and most drastic measures against all manifestants.

Liberties Gets Busy.

Tokio, July 16.—It is officially reported that Gen. Linievitch's force numbers 400,000, and it is reported that he is extensively using water transportation on bring forward men, supplies and ammunition.

An officer who recently returned from Manchuria expresses the opinion that Linevitch plans a great demonstration in the direction of Mukden in the beginning of the plenipotentiaries, but that he does not intend real aggressive work.

Two Bombs Thrown.

Kutais, Caucasus, July 16.—During the rendition of a musical program in the theatre here last night, two bombs were thrown. No one was killed.

BOMB THROWN AT TREPOFF.

Terrorists Again at Work and Police Precautions Doubled.

St. Petersburg, July 17.—The terrorists are again at work in the city, with the result that the police precautions have been doubled. Guards are posted about all of the prominent buildings. Two bombs have already been unearthed within the last twelve days, and at an attempt to end the life of Governor-General Trepoff failed by the narrowest of margins.

The Governor-General had just left his carriage and entered his office, when some one unknown threw a bomb which exploded on top of the coupe, killing the coachman and injuring the driver and horse.

The excitement created in the confusion, but left behind some papers, through which it is hoped that his arrest may be accomplished.

The larger of the bomb factories discovered was in the Department of Railways and in it were concealed some twenty-four bombs and fifty pounds of dynamite. There were also found copies of a proclamation summoning the Duma deputies to commemorate on July 22 the blood-bath given them on January 22 by blowing up all soldiers and barracks."

French Submarine Is at Last Raised —How the Crew Perished.

Bizerte, Tunis, July 17.—The submarine boat Farfadet, which sank at the entrance to the Port of Bizerte on July 6, was lowered into drydock Saturday after ten days' incessant effort to raise her.

Five separate efforts to raise the vessel had proved unsuccessful.

When the door of the Farfadet was opened, there were found the unnecessaries from the decomposing bodies of seven of the crew. Officers and men fled in fear, and great emotion prevailed among the naval officers and the men who had assisted in raising the vessel.

An inspection of the Farfadet shows that she is completely over-turned, and all device in their attempts to escape. The authorities have decided to make complete disinfection of the marine before turning the bodies.

Irish Will Fight Redistribution.

London, July 17.—The Government's proposal in regard to the redistribution of Parliamentary seats which was received with the greatest bitterness by the Irish party. It is said the Opposition is coming in for considerable criticism from its own party. The scheme provides for the abolition of the Irish Parliamentary borough, which shall return a member. The new scheme provides the minimum at 18,000 and the standard unit to 45,000. As a result England will gain 17 seats, Wales 1 and Scotland 5, while Ireland loses 12. The Irish hostility to the new proposal does not need explanation.

Ex-Mayor Blain of Galt Dead.

Galt, July 17.—The death occurred Saturday morning of Richard Blain, ex-mayor of Galt, a resident here for 63 years. He was a native of Bowness-on-Solway, Cumberland, England, and came to this country in 1830. For many years he was associated with the milling industry, his large flour mills, now occupied as power house by the Galt Electric Light Co., serving the district from lake to lake. He retired from active business over 20 years ago. His death at the age of 84 was not due to organic disease. Preserving his faculties up to the last, he simply fell into the sleep that knows no waking. Mrs. Blain died in 1899.

Troops to Protect Murderer.

Montgomery, Ala., July 17.—Upon the request of the sheriff of Cordelia, Ala., the Governor has wired the captain of the military company there to be in readiness to protect five negroes in jail there charged with assaulting and murdering a white woman.

The jail is said to be surrounded by an angry mob.

Norway to Raise the Tariff.

Stockholm, July 17.—The Norwegian Storthing yesterday voted to increase the duty on pork from 2½ cents to 3½ cents. This indicates that the Storthing will pass the Government bill considerably raising the entire tariff.

Increases Cost Canada $573,277

Past Cabinet Ministers to Get Half-Pay Pensions.

Features of the Increased Indemnity Resolution Introduced by Government and Carried Unanimously—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Will Draw $14,500, Ministers $9,500 and the Leader of the Opposition to Get $7,000 Per Year—Judges Liberally Treated Ottawa, July 18.—At yesterday morning's session of the House of Commons, the Government introduced the expected resolutions concerning increases in Indemnities to members of Parliament and of the Senate and in the salaries of the judges. At noon the House reached the resolutions. It was announced that the Governor-General had been pleased to approve of these resolutions, whereupon the House carried them without any discussion whatever.

The Increases In General.

The resolutions provided for an increase in the Prime Minister's salary from $8,000 to $12,000; an increase in members' sessional indemnity from $1,000 to $2,500, and an annuity to every member of the Privy Council who has served consecutively for five years as a Cabinet Minister and head of a Department, equal to one-half of the salary he received at the time of his retirement. A salary of $7,000 is also given to the leader of the Opposition. No increases are given to Cabinet Ministers.

Under the new scale of pay Sir Wilfrid Laurier will receive $14,500 per annum; Cabinet Ministers, $9,500; members and Senators, $2,500; ex-Cabinet Ministers, $2,500. The ex-Cabinet Ministers who will benefit by this are: Sir Charles Tupper, Sir C. H. Tupper, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir H. Lemieux, Sir Adolphe Caron, Sir John Carling, Messrs. Tarte, Blair, Sifton, Costigan, Foster, and Haggart.

The Absence of Members.

Members are now permitted to draw $7 a day as the sessions proceed to a maximum of $1,200. Fifteen days are allowed for absences from the House, and for any period of time exceeding 15 days $7 per working day is deducted. A future member will be allowed to draw $20 a day up to the maximum of $1,200. In case the session lasts less than 21 days there is to be no sessional indemnity. If a person is a member for only part of a session for any cause whatsoever, he is to be entitled to the sessional allowance, provided he has been a member for upwards of thirty days. For a less period he will receive $20 a day. The deduction for non-attendance after the time allowed for absences is raised from $5 to $15.

The mileage allowance of 20 cents a mile is discontinued, and in lieu thereof each member or Senator is allowed his actual morning and transportation expenses between his place of residence and Ottawa, going and coming once each way, but no such allowance is to be made for traveling outside of Canada, except from one point in Canada to another by any direct route.

Judges Get $2,000 More.

Salaries of Judges of the Supreme Court, the Exchequer Court and the Superior Courts throughout Canada have been increased by $2,000, and County Court Judges are given varying increases. Following is the new scale of salaries for Ontario judges compared with the old:—

The Chief Justice of Ontario—New rate per annum, $8,000; old, $6,000. Four Justices of appeal—New rate, $7,000; old, $5,000. The Chancellor, the Chief Justice of King's Bench, the Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, the Chief Justice of the Exchequer Division, each—New rate, $5,000; old, $4,000. The Puisne Judges of each division of the High Court of Justice, the Chancery, King's Bench, Common Pleas and Exchequer Divisions, each—New rate, $7,000; old, $5,000.

The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court will get $10,000; the old rate, $8,000. Each of the Puisne judges $7,000; old rate, $7,000.

The Exchequer Court judges, by the new rate, get $8,000; old rate, $6,000 per annum.

County Court Judges.

The salaries of the judges of the County Courts shall be as follows:

Ontario—The senior Judge of the County Court of the County of York, $2,900 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,800 per annum. His successor after judges of other county courts and district courts, each $2,500 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,000 per annum.

Nova Scotia—The judge of the County Court of the County of Halifax, $2,000 per annum. The Judge of the County Court of district No. 2, $2,000. Five Judges, County Court Judges, each $2,500 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,000 per annum.

New Brunswick—The Judges of St. John, $2,000 per annum. Five other County Court Judges, each $2,500 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,000 per annum.

Prince Edward Island—The Judge of the County Court of Queen's County, $2,500 per annum. Two other County Court Judges, each $2,500 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,000 per annum.

Manitoba—Six County Court Judges, each $2,500 per annum during the first three years of service, and after three years of service, each $2,000 per annum.

British Columbia—The Judges of the County Courts of Cariboo, Westminster, Yale, Nanaimo, Kamloops, Victoria and Atlin, and the Judge and Junior Judge of the County Court of Cowichay, each, $2,000 per annum.

What It Costs.

The total increase in salaries to the Judiciary is $212,877. Adding $360,400 for pensions, it results in a total addition to the annual charge of $573,277.

The increases to judges are distributed as follows:—

	Increase.
Ontario	$ 94,400
Quebec	72,000
Nova Scotia	16,250

No Telephone Legislation.

The Premier-Minister laid on the table correspondence containing Mr. Rider Haggard's report on the colonization scheme in Canada.

Mr. Maclean asked whether it was the intention of the Government to deal with the report of the Telephone Committee this session.

Sir Wilfrid replied in the negative.

Bills Passed.

Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick's bill respecting the Superintendent of Insurance and the Director-General of Public Health was put through its various stages and passed.

The Senate amendments to the act to incorporate the International Railway and Terminal Co. are agreed to. They prevent the company from giving stock in payment for services.

The House then went through models of motion, and carried all those that were not contentious.

Mr. Porter's bill to amend the criminal code passed, and Mr. Bureau's clause in amendment thereto was struck out. This clause was to make it clear that betting on an incorporated race course should not be unlawful. Mr. Bureau withdrew this clause.

Mr. Logan's bill respecting false representations to induce or deter immigration was passed.

Gave Details of Figures.

Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick made a statement regarding the expropriation of the rifle range property at Kentville, N.S. The statement gave the details of the figures in the transaction.

Sir Frederick Borden took advantage of opportunity to deny the charge that Mr. Dodge, when purchasing the property previous to the expropriation, had had any inside knowledge of the Government's intentions. The inference that Col. Irving had given information to Mr. Dodge was also absolutely without foundation.

Mr. Foster said the Minister should not feel sore if the peculiarities of the case gave rise to suspicions.

Partizan Officials.

The first business of the afternoon was the consideration of the motion offered by Mr. Lake of Qu'Appelle, that civil servants should be allowed to exercise the franchise, but should not be partisan workers.

Mr. Lake complained especially of the violation of this rule in the west and demanded that the Minister of the Interior should make a clear declaration of policy.

R. L. Borden pointed out that the difficulty in the west was with the foreign element, which regarded Government officials as persons of especial importance.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier agreed with the motion, and even thought it would be well if the principle were extended so as to include Provincial as well as Dominion employes. Civil servants should give undivided attention to their duties. The motion was carried.

The Premier, in answer to Mr. Foster, said that the Government had endeavored to secure the services of Isaac Campbell of Winnipeg, in connection with the enquiry into half-breed scrip transactions, but Mr. Campbell was not in a position to take the case.

Canada's Shame!

Under the above heading the St. John, N. B., Sun, thus discusses the bogus ballot-box disaster, a full report of the discussion on which in Parliament begins in this issue. It is an undoubted fact that the Sun's conclusions, namely, that frauds such as the one in question would not be so common if the perpetrators thought they would be properly punished if apprehended, are correct. The Sun's remarks follow:

"The Hastings and Frontenac ballot-box frauds discussed in Parliament the other day, are a disgrace to the party responsible for them, and it would have been creditable to the leaders to have confessed that much. No more impudent attempt was ever made in any country to swindle the people out of their electors' votes. It was a carefully arranged plan, apparently discussed beforehand at Toronto, Ottawa, Kingston and the local centres. The principals were men of sufficiently high standing in the Liberal party to be the candidates at a Federal election, both are now fugitives from justice, living in the country from which the bogus ballot-boxes were procured. If they had succeeded and escaped detection they would to-day be high in the councils of the party at Ottawa.

It is a striking fact that the machinery of the party and the election machinery worked beautifully together in this business. Deputy returning officers were required who were not too good to operate bogus ballot-boxes. Incidentally they were expected to commit perjury and several criminal offences. It was also necessary to procure bogus ballots, and this involved collusion with the officials. The importation of Hawkey, a professional wrestler, brought from the States and given the charge of a poll in the County of Frontenac, where the bogus ballot-box was to be used, implies a conspiracy of an extensive character. All the persons concerned in this appointment must have known that this man was there for a bad purpose.

This bogus ballot-box conspiracy follows several plots in recent elections, all intended to reach the same result by somewhat different methods. Stealing of ballots, shifting of ballots, false counting, the wholesale importation of personators, and various other devices have made the Laurier and Ross machine in Ontario notorious throughout the country. These scandals have discredit by election returns following campaigns in which the machine participated. They cast doubt on the recent election of Mr. Pugsley, for London is the home of some of the experts who have become notorious.

Not all the performers in these election scandals are in open disgrace. Some have been rewarded with office and are moving in high society. Very few have received the punishment they deserved, and some who have fled are known to have been in receipt of an allowance from their party while they were out of work. To-day an active campaign manager in the west is holding a public office, though he was shown to have been guilty of misdemeanor in the most difficult form and you get about twice as much of it for your money as of other brands. You also get the package of "Celery King" absolutely without charge for the use of other brand of Cocoa offers this advantage, because no other firm can give you the "Celery King." That is the only way to procure the full value of your Cocoa purchase. "Solution of Ozone (the coupon kind)" is fifty cents and one dollar at your druggists, and if he hasn't it the Public Drug Company, Bridgeburg, Ont., will see that you are supplied. For sale by H. F. Curry, Belleville, Ont.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Cheer up. If you can't sleep upstairs, try the cellar.

If this weather keeps up, the Reunion will surely be a warm affair.

The temperature last night varied greatly, according to the imagination and veracity of the man you were talking to. One fellow said it was 119, by the watch, in his bedroom. The chances are, however, that he tacked on a point or two.

Anyhow, it was, by common consent, the hottest night experienced in this city for many years. People got up this morning with eyes, to use a time-honored expression, looking like "two burnt holes in a blanket."

But even this hot weather has its compensations. It's worth many a roasting to see the pretty girls, these days tripping along on the shady side of the street, hatless, clothed in white and looking like a daily bill from the north pole. A sweet smile and a sunshade completes the costume. What a pity the men couldn't wear some such a rig as that.

Talk about your "tropical growth." What do you think of hardocks seven, feet high and still growing like a poor man's taxes. They've got 'em in West Belleville.

The man on the next block has a great scheme. It is a hammock with kite attachment, which will gently float over the roofs of the houses all night. All that is needed now is a gramaphone attachment, which will lull the inmate to sleep with "Bluebell," and the inventor's fortune is as good as made.

"Say," said the Belleville Old Boy, as he shook hands with the friend he hadn't seen for twenty years, "is this hot enough for you?"

"My favorite form of exercise in hot weather," says the fat man, "is the next block, "is shovelling snow."

He was an unpretending man
Who with comfort liked to flirt,
So he said "A bus is fashion"
And Put on a flannel shirt.

His Worship the Mayor is certainly a gentleman of great versatility. Now they say he is going to umpire the coming game of water baseball to be played in the harbor. Of course he will wear the celebrated diving suit.

Is there any truth in the rumor that the fountain on the market is going to run lemonade during the Old B. H.? It would surely be a great ade to many thirsty and worthy people.

What surprises us is that the Chairman of Gas and Piper McIntosh don't appear in kilts these hot days. That picturesque attire should be a swell warm weather costume.

Have you begun to practise up on "Home, Sweet Home" yet? That beautiful ballad should be greatly in demand in a day or two.

What will fill a long-felt want these days is an electric fan which can be installed and operated at a cost of about 15 cents per day. The man who can invent such a thing will be hailed as a bigger benefactor than even Rockefeller, Jerry Hurley and Mayor Sullman rolled into one.

Cheer up. It's snowing somewhere.

Here to-day and gone to-morrow—your ice supply.

Strawberry shortcake this year seems to have lived up to its name. It was extremely short in most mansions.

One hundred thousand school children in England are being taught to play the violin at a cost of six cents per week. Are the men of Merry England to become a nation of fiddlers?

Walking on the shady side of the street helps to make a man sunny these days.

THE BOLD THING!

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

"I have heard," stammered her timid admirer, "that you are engaged. Is it—er—true?"

"I'm not engaged yet," replied the fair girl, "but I hope to be soon."

"Er—how soon?" he asked.

"In a few minutes," she replied with shining eyes.

Many people think it would be better all round if the shade trees were liberally trimmed. At present they, in many places, encourage dampness by keeping out the sunshine, and also encourage heat by keeping away the cooling breezes from bedroom windows which sadly need them.

The Kingston News and Times publishes the following cutting bit of sarcasm:

"Belleville has not yet risen to congratulate Kingston on the resumption of her street car service. Probably they are busy meditating on the difference between Belleville and Kingston, that is, when our cars stop they go again, but in Belleville they stop never to go again."

But Belleville does not want street cars under the conditions which prevail in Kingston, where the Whig publishes the following touching appeal:

"When you have a five-cent bit to spare after giving to church and charity, give it to the street cars."

The Grits have passed a bill to pay the leader of the Opposition $7000 per year. They know it won't be very long before there will be a new leader of the Opposition, and he will be a Grit.

Peterboro people are agitating for earlier closing on Saturday evening. The plea is one which should be favorably acted on everywhere.

John Ross Robertson, he of O. H. A. fame, has just given $75,000 to the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto, the same to be expended in building a home for nurses. People may differ with the views of the President of the O. H. A. sometimes, but no one can help but admire his largeness of heart. Toronto is to be congratulated on having such a citizen as the proprietor of the Telegram.

HARD ON THE TIMES.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Canadian newspapers are on the whole pretty decent affairs. The Hamilton Times is the chief exception to the rule.

The Globe to-day has a bitter editorial against many of the measures passed by Parliament. The editor of The Globe must feel sore because he has not been given an increase.

In future, in case the session lasts less than 40 days, there is to be no sessional indemnity for members of Parliament. In fancy we can see those Quebec M. P.'s going home empty-handed, after Parliament has completed its labors in 30 days!

Fire in a Bakeshop.

Convenient Dish Drainer.

Dishwashing is one of the greatest trials of the housekeeper, and any convivance that will relieve this tri-daily task and make it easier is eagerly sought. The particular housewife in mind upon a thorough rinsing of the dishes after they have been washed, and for this purpose the Ishpanas are usually employed, thus necessitating a double thrusting of the hands into hot water and cold. One of the valuable features of the whole operation. A St. Louis housewife has adopted a dish drainer consisting of a supporting frame for the kitchen sink. It is a wire framework, with transverse strands to give rigidity and strength, the ends of which members are bent or turned downward to form supporting legs. When the dishes have been washed, instead of being placed in a second pan and so rebandled they are placed on this wire frame and rinsed, either by turning on the hot water spigot or by being drenched by means of a dipper.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. In every home it is complimented on the completeness of the book of style and finish and the perfect lay out of the book. Nothing has seemingly been left out—nothing which has been included could well have been left out; "complete and perfect" best describe it. Already we are hearing from old Bellevillians in other places, in words of unstinted praise. You should have it—a copy for yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great reunion, and so we have planned that fountain pen combination that daily companion—and is appropriately named "The City of Belleville." MR. E. GOSS PORTER, M.P., BRINGS UP THE MATTER, WHICH IS THOROUGHLY VENTILATED — REPORT OF THE DISCUSSION, AS IT APPEARED IN HANSARD.

Mr. E. Goss Porter (West Huntingdon). Mr. Speaker, I desire to call the attention of the House to a matter which to my mind requires some explanation, and I am somewhat sorry I had hoped to bring this matter to the attention of the House at an earlier stage of its sittings, but have not found an opportunity of doing so without interfering to some extent with the regular proceedings of the House, but the matter is of such importance that I feel warranted, even at this late stage, in calling attention to it. I have heard since I have been in this House many charges of very serious irregularities, of fraudulent or I might say criminal conduct on the part of those supporting the Government in the endeavor to maintain themselves in power in this Parliament. Corrupt as these charges have been in the past, I believe I am safe in saying that during the last Federal election held on November 3rd last an attempt was made which was certainly successful to commit a greater fraud, a greater crime politically, than had ever been successfully attempted by those on the other side of the House, or in fact by anybody, I refer to what is commonly known as the bogus ballot-box fraud.

Prior to November 3rd, when the last Federal elections were held, and just after the Premier had come into power by the force of those behind him his famous Transcontinental Railway Bill, and the not less iniquitous gerrymander Bill, a number of which I am safe in saying found very much favor in the Province of Ontario, every effort activity was displayed on the part of the then Premier of the Province, of Ontario in his visits to the Capital at Ottawa. It was not an infrequent thing in the latter days of last session and prior to the elections to see the then Premier of Ontario visiting Ottawa, but prior to that time it had been a rather rare occurrence. As the result of the frequent visits and his association with the members of the Government a rumor became quite rife in the country that some bargain had been entered into by the leaders of standing arrived at between the Premier of the Dominion and the late Premier of Ontario by which it was stated, in the coming Federal elections on the 3rd of November, the goods of the Province of Ontario were to be delivered by Sir Hgn. G. W. Ross to the Premier of the Dominion. The report was published in newspapers throughout the Dominion, it was repeated, and while of course I was unable to say and would not undertake to say whether such an agreement was actually entered into or not, I am safe in saying that which I followed the reports in the public press in that matter very carefully, I have never yet seen a statement from any authentic source that such a bargain did exist. The public declaration of policy and of principles so frequently made in the country by the leaders of the Liberal party, and I do not mistaken by the right hon. the Prime Minister, that on provincial politics should be kept entirely distinct from Federal politics, that there should be no intermingling of one with the other, it is hard to believe that such an arrangement or attempt as that to which I have referred and which was given expression to in the public press would be contemplated, much less entered into between the right hon. gentleman and the late Premier of Ontario. But, Sir, the circumstances which has come to hand since that rumor became current is such, to my mind, as to do more any doubt that might exist as to an arrangement of that kind having been made. I do not know whether it was knowledge of the disfavor with which the Transcontinental Railway Bill was received in Ontario, or the feeling of resentment against the unfairness and injustice dealt out to them by his famous gerrymander Bill that caused the right hon. gentleman to make an appeal to the Province of Ontario for help in the last Federal election. It is impossible for me to say that, in fact, I do not believe now in view of have been the force of habit on the part of the right hon. gentleman, because, if I am not incorrectly informed, this is not the first occasion on which the right hon. gentleman has turned his attention to the provincial premiers for help. It may be as to the case to which I refer, the price that has been paid is altogether too high for the shop worn goods that he has received, but nevertheless, the facts remain that on this occasion there appeared to be a very strong understanding between the two premiers. I hesitate in believing that such an agreement existed because of the high character of the gentlemen ed, I believe, that the right hon. gentleman at the head of the Government is one of the keenest observers of political events perhaps in this country to-day, and I do not think he would feel overflattered if I observed, the keenest observer of the Liberal party.

That being the case surely the right hon. gentleman could not have failed to know the fact that at the time when this arrangement is said to have been entered into, the ex-premier of the Province of Ontario was practically discredited by the people of his own province. Evidence was given of that—sufficient, ample evidence—on January 25, last. I would remind the House and, in the face of that, the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) could expect the ex-premier of the Province of Ontario to carry out such an arrangement with any honor or honesty as such means as those to which I am referred. I, Mr. Prime Minister, Sir Wilfrid Laurier could hardly have placed him in the position in which the ex-premier of Ontario stood, no doubt he recognized the fact that that ex-premier had run many political races in that province and had been defeated in every one of them except that in which he was known as the "old war horse," as he was called, by the time he had finished the race with some blemish, which very materially lessened the race ability—such blemishes as the blemish of Mr. Whitney, the blemish of Mr. Hendrie, the blemish of Monsieur Bourassa, and the "Mosaic M," and others although numerous to mention but, while the Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) may have noticed these blemishes upon the "old war horse," no doubt he also noticed some of the defects which in the past he had in Ontario as had attained, a certain notoriety by the records of that courts that the Liberal party in the Province of Ontario, in the matter of switching ballots on the matter of stealing ballots, in the matter of stuffing ballots, had reached a state of perfection. They had even gone further and had arrived at a state of perfection in the manufacture of the ballot-box itself. So, while the right hon. Prime Minister (Sir Wilfrid Laurier) may have noticed the defects in the race horse on hand, he may have noticed these perfections in the ballot box. Am it is to the perfection attained in the manufacture and use of bogus ballot-box. Mr. Speaker, I desire to address my remarks this afternoon.

Now, the matters to which I have referred, to the extent that they have been made in the Province of Ontario and as reported in Hansard, ment, more particularly concern the Province of Ontario. But that to which I would call attention to-day, is the actual use of the bogus ballot-box by the candidates supporting the Government in the last Federal election, in which efforts the Liberal Parliament and this Dominion as a whole, are affected. I speak not from rumour, not from imagination, but from the positive testimony which I hold in my hand, given in the courts of the province in the investigation of the petition of Wilfrid Laur, I am by the book. The evidence which I have before me is the only evidence of the perpetration of the bogus ballot fraud upon the electors, during the last election. I have here another piece of evidence—the bogus ballot-box itself. And, if the House resists many is not sufficient to remove all doubt as to the fraud, an inspection of this article will be sufficient to put the wrinkles out of the skin of the most skeptical individual.

Just prior to the last Federal general election—about three days before polling day—I came to my attention that a conspiracy had been entered into between certain Liberal candidates at the then approaching election to steal, by means of this bogus ballot-box, certain of the ridings in the Province of Ontario. When that information came to me, naturally I felt more or less alarmed, for I was told that the ridings I had the honor to represent, the riding of West Hastings was one of those selected to be plundered by means of the bogus ballot-box. I am not at all surprised that West Hastings was one of those selected for plunder. It would be perfectly easy to depend upon the operation of such a machine as this Liberal. It could only work to its fullest advantage in such a riding as that of West Hastings, the riding of my hon. friend from Prontenac (Mr. Edwards), and always—or at least for many years—consistently returned a Liberal-Conservative to

GERM DISEASES OF SUMMER.

NO ONE NEED FEAR SICK NESS IF MI-O-NA IS USED.

People with strong stomachs and natural digestion are ordinarily not subject to bowel troubles, diarrhoea and other germ diseases that are so common and dangerous in the summer months.

A Mi-o-na tablet taken before each meal will give such health and strength to the weakest stomach that the whole system will become strong and well, and so clean and sweet that there will be no chance for disease germs to become effective.

A great many people imagine that their headaches, dizziness, heartburn, or general despondency and weakness is a sign of fatal illness, when a whole trouble is the direct result of a stomach and and imperfect digestion. A 50-cent box of Mi-o-na tablets will show by the great gain in health that the stomach is the cause of the poor health, and that Mi-o-na is the only remedy that will drive out all weakness, debility, and disease.

Mi-o-na is so nearly infallible in curing the diseases resulting from a weakened stomach, excepting cancer that it remains for C. B. McEwen's guarantees to refund the money should the remedy not give perfect satisfaction.

A box of Zotoo Tablets carried in the pocket or purse, or kept in the office or home, and used when required, will ward off a headache or cold—and do it every time.

Take two of the tablets just as soon as you feel a headache coming on, or feel you have been exposed to a cold.

In nine cases in ten relief will come in twenty minutes. If your case is exceptional take two more tablets. They are purely vegetable and cannot hurt you.

They will cure your headache, nip the cold in the bud—and make you feel fresh and vigorous in mind and body.

You can try Zotoo for nothing. Samples are free for the asking.

this House. Such ridings would be particularly suitable for the use of a machine of the kind. Upon being informed that this fraud would be perpetrated, I put myself in communication with different persons and employed every means I could to ascertain the facts; with the result, that two days before the election I succeeded in having divulged to another gentleman and myself the whole plan. Fortunately, that was given to me, I may say, by an official of this Government. Perhaps I should explain exactly what I mean when I speak of this gentleman as an "official." The Government, of course, have the right to provide the machinery by which elections should be carried on, and the man who drafted this conspiracy was one of the deputy returning officers of that election—part of this election machinery. Now, I think, I may, in fairness, give the House the statement of that gentleman showing the scheme as divulged to me, himself, as it is all repeated and sworn to in evidence I have here.

HUMOR

A TRUSTING SOUL.

There Were Several Things to Settle, but All Were Adjusted.

"No, Jack," the pretty young woman said, sluding his arm; "not yet!"

"What's the matter, Lulu?" he asked.

"I haven't said I'd marry you. There's something else to be settled first."

"What is it, sweetheart?"

"Why, there's a cigar once in awhile."

"You will have to give that up."

"All right, dear. What else?"

"Why, you have tobacco!"

"Not habitually. Once in a great while I take a chew."

"I can't marry a tobacco chewer."

"Well, I'll promise to quit it. Anything else?"

"Yes. Do you drink?"

"Occasionally I take a glass of beer—nothing stronger, upon my word."

"Will you promise to give that up too?"

"Sure. I don't care anything about it, anyhow."

"Do you play cards?"

"Occasionally, just for fun."

"I can't marry a card player."

"Then I'll cut out playing altogether. "Do you bet on horse races?"

"Sometimes."

"That's just as bad as any other kind of gambling, Jack. You'll have to promise to drop it."

"Well, I'll quit that too. And now"—

"Hold on, Jack. Are you in debt?"

"Why, no; not even to anybody on earth. Does that"—

"Not quite. Wait a minute, Jack. Will you agree to pay your own expenses at home?"

Jack's poor heart, Lulu, I'll tire you to death staying at home of evening? So, now"—

"No, not yet, Jack! One thing more. Will you promise to go to church with me every time I ask you to go?"

"Er—yes. I will promise even that."

With a contented little sigh she laid her head on his broad shoulder.

"There, there, Jack!" she said, she said, "to reform a man before marrying him than to try to do it afterward, as so many foolish girls do!"—Chicago Tribune.

Why He Was Caught.

"I notice," said the tired citizen, "that a man was arrested yesterday in New York for stealing a 10 pound clock in broad daylight. He was carrying the clock under his coat when a policeman's attention was attracted to him."

"Probably thought he was taking too much time to get away"—began the cheerful idiot.

But everybody left the room.—Baltimore American.

Foresight.

Mrs. Nextdoor—Of course my daughter plays the piano very well by ear, but she wants to take lessons from a musical professor.

Mrs. Peppery—That's natural enough. Mrs. Nextdoor—Oh, yes!

Mrs. Peppery—Well, I suppose she's wise to want somebody else to blame besides herself.—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Simple Matter.

"Does a dentist have much trouble with women?" asked Jack.

"No," answered the expert in teeth. "A man usually sees that his last actress is provided before he has anything done. He takes no chances on an unfriendly disposition."—Washington Star.

Inspired by Torture.

"Isn't your accuser a fool?" thundered the lawyer.

"Why?" asked the witness.

"Because you answered the witness," "not when I'm on the witness stand."—New York Press.

We have the best assortment of above lines we have ever shown, and we guarantee our prices to be as low as same quality of goods are sold for any place in Canada. Mr. Brown gives personal attention to making and hanging Window Shades, and with over twenty years experience in shade work, and best cloth and rollers manufactured, satisfaction is a sure result. Having only business premises—we sell we need a liberal portion of your trade, and the same will be much appreciated.

EXPERIENCE.

(Chicago Chronicle.)

I've bent the chutes and bumped the bumps,
And had the measles and the mumps—
Experience!
And also signed some notes for clumps,
Experience!

I've hit the pike and looped the loop,
And had toothpicks and the croup—
Experience!
And also floundered in the soup—
Experience!

To friends I've loaned my hard-earned cash,
For breakfast I have eaten hash—
Experience!
I've had the lumps, the grip and rash—
Experience!

In cable cars I've suffered pain,
And dodged a million auto cars—
Experience!
And through a brick I've witnessed stars—
Experience!

I've had a lot of dopy dreams,
Been up against the gold-brick scheme—
Experience!
I've heard a cracked soprano scream—
Experience!

I've heard a lot of vaudeville,
And smoked cigars that made me ill—
I've written verse—am it still—
Experience!

Toronto Globe: The Winnipeg Tribune says that professional lacrosse will pay in that town, will draw the crowd, will revive the game, and rid amateur lacrosse of the spurious element. Professional lacrosse will at least be honest. What destroys public confidence is the professional lacrosse that masquerades as amateur.

Yet the Globe, a year or two ago, turned handsprings, and shouted itself hoarse in support of professional hockey which masqueraded as amateur.

A strange story comes from Wales, where it is said that, since the great religious revival, it has become impossible to get a proper amount of work out of the mine mules because the drivers refuse to swear at them any more and they can understand no language except profanity. This is by no means the first evidence that the mule is an emissary of the devil.

A Canadian Pacific magnate is reported as saying that the North-west will require thirty thousand men this year to assist in putting what promises to be the greatest crop in its history. Of this thousands who will go in response to this call a goodly percentage will be added to the permanent population of the Northwest, and the remainder will get an idea of what a great country Canada is. Then come back and tell their friends.

Dr. William Osler, in one of his Baltimore lectures, recited a quaint old cure for goul—a cure from a seventeenth century medical work, that was designed to show gnat's lungs uselessness: "First pick," said this old cure, "a handkerchief from the pocket of a spinster of thirty-five, who has worked a seed; second, wash the handkerchief in an honest miller's pond; third, dry it on the hedge of a parson who never was overtaxed; fourth, seek it in the shop of a physician who never killed a patient; fifth, mark it with a lawyer's ink who never cheated a client; and, sixth, apply it, hot, to the gout-tormented part. A speedy cure must follow."

WHY MEN DIE FAST.

(Kansas City Journal.)

Col. Bent. Murdock, who is a good liver himself, hasn't any sympathy with the kind of lives the goes to rack. So-called big men—statesmen, warriors, professional and business men go all to pieces in an hour, says he. And this is why and the wherefore! They know. We know. Everybody knows and yet nobody cares. The world says, let them die, there are plenty left. The man who stuffs like a pig, drinks like a fish and loafs like a hobo will collapse. The man who lives fast dies fast. No getting over that proposition. While the one who lives rationally, sanely, lives long and dies slowly and peacefully. Too many people are burning the candle at both ends. But then why preach, why prate, why refer to it? They are not missed and there would be no place for them should they come back.

...fess that the quiet feast Charlie and Wilbur enjoyed above the shore, the trio had nothing to wish for in the way of noble luxuries.

The affair was absolutely deserted as well as the back country—as untracked and desert by man. Half edges itself a dozen times Wilbur, recurring of his insection aboard the schooner. To the north stretched the bay from point to point. Standing on one of the latter projections and looking out to the south, the Pacific appeared as empty of life as the land. Never a reed out those waters, never a sail broke the edge of the horizon, never a feather of smoke spotted the sky where it undertook to meet the sea. Everything was empty—vast, unspeakably desolate—palpitating with heat.

Another reason existed. Charlie began to complain that the sharks were growing scarce again.

"I think I'll settle him go way, once or mo'."

That same night Wilbur, lying in his hammock, was awakened by a touch on his arm. He woke to see Moran bending him on the deck.

"Did you hear anything?" she said in a low voice, looking at him under her scowl.

"No, no!" he exclaimed, getting up, reaching for his wicker sandals. "Did you?"

"I thought so—something. Did you feel anything?"

"I've been asleep; I haven't noticed anything. Is it beginning again?"

The schooner lifted again just now, very gently. It happened to be awake or I wouldn't have noticed it." They were talking in low voices, as is the custom of people speaking in the dark.

"There, it's just!" exclaimed Wilbur under his breath. A gentle vibration, barely perceptible, thrilled through the schooner. Under his hand that was clasped upon the rail Wilbur could feel a faint trembling in her frame. It stopped, began again and died slowly away.

"Well, what's the device is it?" he muttered impatiently, trying to master the returning creep of dread.

Moran drew her head, biting her lips.

"It's beyond me," she said, frowning. "Can you see anything?" The sky, sea and land were unbroken reaches of solitude. There was no sound—nothing.

"Listen," said Moran. Far off to landward came the faint, sleepy clucking of a quail and the stridulating of unnumbered crickets. A long ripple licked the slope of the beach and broke back into the ocean. Wilbur shook his head.

"Don't hear anything," he whispered. "Sh—there's something again."

Once more a prolonged but faint quivering ran through the Bertha Millner from stem to stern and from keel to masthead. There was a barely audible creaking of joints and panels. The oil in the deck tubs trembled. The vibration was so fine and rapid that it resembled a shiver. Wilbur felt as he stood on the deck.

"I'd give my fingers to know what it all means," murmured Moran in a low voice. "I've been to sea for"—Then suddenly she cried aloud: "Steady, all! She's lifting again!"

The schooner heaved slowly under them, this time by the stern. Up she went, up and up, while Wilbur gripped at what he could to keep his place and tried to choke down his heart, that seemed to beat against his palate.

"Forward!" exclaimed Moran, her eyes blazing. "This thing is"— The Bertha came suddenly down to an easy keel, resting in that glassy sea as if in a tide rip. The deck was awash fore and aft. For the bay the ripples widening from the schooner blurred the reflections of the stars. The Chinaman's lantern, the latter battery, visible and shelf. Again the Bertha Millner lifted and sank; the tube sifting on the masts uttering a dismal, like reeds, the timbers groaning aloud with the strain. In the stern something cracked and smashed. Then the trouble died away, the ripples faded into the ocean and the schooner settled to her keel, quite motionless.

"Look," said Moran, her face toward the Bertha's stern. "The rudder is out of the gudgeons." It was true—the Bertha Millner's helm was unshipped.

There was no more sleep for any one on board that night. Wilbur tramped the quarter deck, sick with a feeling he dared not put a name to. Moran sat by the wrecked rudder head, a needle in her hand, sewing canvas to the leather straps that had held the rudder in place. Charlie appeared at the edge of the deck, attracted by the sound of Wilbur and Moran with wide open eyes, and then took himself away. On the forward deck the coolies pasted strips of red paper inscribed with mottoes upon the mast and filled the air with the reek of their joss sticks.

"If one could only see what it was," growled Moran between her clinched teeth. "But this—this' heaving and trembling, it—it's queer."

"That's it, that's it," said Wilbur quickly, facing her. "What are we going to do, Moran?"

"Stick it out!" she exclaimed, striking her knee with her fist. "We can't leave the schooner—I won't leave her. I'll stay by this dough dish as long as two planks in her hold together. Are you thinking of cutting away?" She fixed him with her frown.

Wilbur looked at her, sitting erect by the disabled rudder, her head bare, her braids of golden hair hanging over her breast, sitting there in man's clothes and man's boots, the pistol at her side. He shook his head.

"I'm not leaving the Bertha till you do," he answered, adding, "I'll stand by you, mate, until we're"—

"Feel that?" said Moran, holding up a hand.

A dull quivering tremble was thrilling through every beam of the schooner, vibrating each rope like a harp string. It passed away, but before either Wilbur or Moran could comment upon it recommenced, this time much more perceptibly. Charlie dashed aft, his eyes goring.

"What makum beap shake?" he shouted. "What for him shake? No savvy, no likee, pretty much long face! Ale-yah, ale-yah!"

Slowly the schooner heaved up as though upon the crest of some huge wave, slowly it settled and again gradually lifted, till Wilbur had to catch at the rail to steady his footing. The quivering sensation increased so that they very teeth shattered with it. Below in the cabin they could hear small objects falling from the shelves and table. Then, with a sudden drop, the Bertha fell back to her keel again, and settled all quivering. The sea appears, the masts rocking, the water churning and splashing from her sides.

And that was all. There was no sound—nothing was in sight. There was only the frightened trembling of the little schooner and that long, slow heave and lift.

Morning came, and breakfast was had in silence and grim perplexity. It was too late to think of getting away now that the rudder was disabled. Then Bertha Millner must bide where she was.

"And a little more of this dancing," exclaimed Moran, "and we'll have the planks swinging apart underneath."

Wilbur nodded solemnly. He said nothing—his activity had returned. Below the glare of the tropical sun, with the Bertha Millner sitting the sea as placidly as a brooding gull, he was half stupefied with heat.

"I reckon you," he said vaguely.

"Well, I think we had better rig and fit the rudder and get back to Frisco," said Moran. "You're making no money this way. There are no whales to be caught. Something's wrong. They're gone away somewhere. The crew are eating their heads off and not earning enough money to pay for their keep. What do you think?"

"I reckon you."

"Then we'll go back. Is that it?"

"I reckon the—knowin'."

"Tomorrow?"

"Yas."

"That's settled then," persisted Moran, surprised at his ready acquiescence. "We start home tomorrow?"

Charlie nodded.

"Tomolla," he said.

The rudder was not so badly damaged as they had at first supposed. The break was easily mended, but it was found necessary for one of the men to go over the side.

"Get over the side here, Jim," commanded Moran. "Charlie, tell him what's wanted. We can't work the pintle in from the deck."

But Charlie shook his head.

"Him no likee go; him plenty much fatid."

Moran ripped out an oath.

"What do I care if he's afraid! I want him to shove the pintle into the lower gudgeon. What carrion!" she exclaimed. "I'd sooner work at boat with six monkeys. My Wilbur, I shall have to ask you to go over. I thought I was captain here, but it all depends on whether these rats are afraid or not."

"Plenty many shark," expostulated Charlie. "Him fatid shark come back, catchum chop-chop."

"Stand by here with a couple of cutting-in spades," cried Moran, "and head off if you see any sharks. Now, then, are you ready, mate?"

Wilbur took his determination in both hands, threw off his coat and sandals and went over the stern rail.

"Put your ear to the water," called Moran from above. "Sometimes you can hear their fulves."

It took but a minute to adjust the pintle, and Wilbur regained the deck dripping and a little pale. He knew not what horrid form of death might have been lurking for him down below there underneath the kelp. As he started forward for dry clothes he was surprised to observe that Moran was sailing at him, holding out her hand.

"That was well done," she said, "and thank you. I've seen older sailor men than you who wouldn't have taken the risk." Never before had she appeared more splendid in his eyes than at this moment. After changing his clothes in the forecastle he met for a long time, his chin in his hands, very thoughtful. Then at length, as though voicing the conclusion of his reflections, he said aloud as he rose to his feet:

"But of course that is out of the question."

He remembered that they were going home on the next day. Within a fortnight he would be in San Francisco again, a taxpayer, a voter, protected within reach of the law. It had been good fun, after all, this three weeks' life on the Bertha Millner, a strange episode cut out from the normal circle of his conventional life. He ran over the incidents of the cruise—Kitchell, the turtle hunt, the finding of the derelict, the dead captain, the squall and the awful night of the sinking hark, Moran at the wheel, the gruesome business at the shark fishing, and, last of all, the last inexplicable lifting and quivering of the schooner. He told himself that now he would probably never know the explanation of that mystery.

The day passed in preparations to get to sea again. The deck tubs and hogsheads were stowed below and the tackle cleared away. By evening all was ready; they would be under way by daybreak the next morning. There was a possibility of their being forced to tow the schooner out by means of the dory, so light were the airs inside. Once beyond the heads, however, they were sure of a breeze.

About 10 o'clock that night the same unnamed trembling ran through the schooner again, and about half an hour later she lifted gently once or twice. But after that she was undisturbed.

Later on in the night, or, rather, early in the morning, Wilbur woke suddenly in his hammock without knowing why and got up and stood listening. The Bertha Millner was absolutely quiet. The night was hot and still. The new moon, casting down from a sinking gallon, was low over the horizon. Wilbur but listened intently, for now at last he heard something.

Between the schooner and the shore a gentle sound of splashing came to his ears and an occasional crack as of oars in their locks. Was it possible that a boat was there between the schooner and the land? What boat, and manned by whom?

"Put your ear to the water."

The creaking of oarlocks and the dip of paddles were unmistakable.

Suddenly Wilbur raised his voice in a great shout:

"Boat ahoy!"

There was no answer. The noise of oars grew fainter. Moran came running out of her cabin, swinging into her coat as she ran.

"What is it? What is it?"

"A boat, I think, right off the schooner here. Hark—there—did you hear the oars?"

"You're right. Call the hands. Get the dory over. We'll follow that boat right up. Hello, forward there! Charlie, all hands, tumble out!"

Then Wilbur and Moran caught themselves looking into each other's eyes. At once something—perhaps the great silence of the schooner—told them there was to be no answer. The two ran forward. Moran swung herself into the forwhile hatch and without taking the trouble to descend to the deck below. In an instant her voice came up to the hatch:

"The bunks are empty—they're gone—abandoned us!" She came up the hatch again.

"Look," said Wilbur as she regained the deck. "The dory's gone. They've taken it. It was our only boat. We can't get ashore."

"Certainly, superstitious rats. I should have expected this. They would be chopped in bits before they would stay longer on board this boat—they and their Feng shui."

When morning came the deserters could be made out ramped on the beach at a distance of four miles, and their intentions were could not be conjectured. Hidden with all manner of fantastic celestial superstitions, it was evident that the Chinamen preferred any hazard of fortune to remaining aboard the schooner.

"Well, can we get along without them?" said Moran. "Can we two work the schooner back to port ourselves?"

"I'll try it on anyhow, mate," said Moran. "We might get her into San Diego anyhow."

The Chinamen had left plenty of provision on board, and Moran cooked breakfast. Fortunately, they had also a very light westerly breeze came up. Moran and Wilbur cast off the gaskets and set the fore and main sails.

Wilbur was busy at the forward bitts preparing to cast loose from the anchor and bend on the cable to her position at the wheel when suddenly she exclaimed:

"Tell her! And in God's name what kind of a sail do you call it?"

In fact, a strange looking craft had just made her appearance at the entrance of Magdalena bay.

CHAPTER VII.

WILBUR returned aft and looked. Inland from the water deck. She was already studying the stranger through the glass.

"That's a new build of boat to me," she muttered at last. "Look at her, Wilbur! looked long and carefully. The newcomer was of the wise and much the same model as the Bertha, only of fifteenth century—high as to bow and stern, and to all appearances as seaworthy as a sea gull. Wilbur knew that in the old pirate had Wilbur seen such an extraordinary boat. She carried a single mast, which latted forward; her lugsail was stretched upon dozens of bamboo yards, and she was drawing little water. Two enormous red eyes were painted upon either side of her high, bluff bow, while just aft the stem was projected an enormous oar, or sweep, full forty feet in length, which was, in fact, than the vessel herself. It acted partly as a propeller, partly as a rudder.

"They're heading for us," commented Wilbur as Moran took the glass again.

"Right," she answered, adding upon the moment: "Chinamen, Chinamen. The thing is alive with coolies. She's a junk."

The exclaimed Wilbur, recollecting some talk of Charlie's he had overheard. "I know."

"You know?"

"Yes. These are real beachcombers, then," said Moran. "I've often and often heard our Chinamen speak of them. They beach their junk every night and camp on shore. They're solitary and so nimbleness that made Wilbur sick at his stomach. They were unlike any Chinamen he had ever seen before, to a degree that he had imagined impossible in a race so much alike. Vast occasions a fight developed, and in an instant the little hatchets were flashing, the yells of battle were heard. Toward the end of the day one of them returned to the junk screaming like a little dog, a bit of his ear bitten off.

Moran and Wilbur kept to the quarter deck, always within reach of the huge cutting-in spades, but the Chinamen beachcombers never visited over their prize to pay them much attention.

And indeed the dead monster proved a veritable treasure trove. By the end of the day's work the junk lay on her foremast, and all hands, straining at the windlass, had raised the mighty head out of the water. The Chinamen descended upon the smooth, black body, their bare feet sliding and slipping at every step. They held on by jobbing their knives into the hide as glacier climbers do their ice picks. The head yielded barrel after barrel of oil and a fair quantity of bone. The blubber was taken aboard the junk, minced up with hatchets and run into casks.

BRIGHT EYES.

Land an Irresistible Charm to Every Face.

Clear, sparkling eyes make the plainest face beautiful. The eyes cannot be bright if the body is suffering from illness or poisoning. Soot is a non-conductor of heat.

If soot coats the surface of a hot water heater, half the heat from the fire is lost, half the coal is wasted.

That is why some furnaces do not heat well, their flat surfaces and sections collect soot.

In the "Bison" hot water heater, there are no flat surfaces in there is no non-conducting blanket of soot—you get all the heat in the coal direct on the water surfaces and you get it quickly.

The two stood there facing each other, passed to the Bertha Millner, the junk put out its sweep, and to a wailing, lateen chanting the two vessels was towed out of the bay.

No wonder what Charlie and our China boys will think of this!" said Wilbur, looking shorewards, where the coolies were could be seen gathered together in a silent, observing group.

"We're well shot of them," growled Moran, her thumbs in her belt. "Only now we'll never know what was the matter with the schooner these last few nights. "Hoh!" she exclaimed under her breath, her scowl thickening. "Sometimes I don't wonder the beasts quit."

The dead whale was lying four miles out of the entrance of Magdalena bay, and as the junk and the schooner drew near they sensed that huge black boat floating bottom up. Over it and upon it swarmed and clamored thousands of sea birds, while all around and below the water was thick with gorging sharks. Dreadful, strangling decay fouled all the air.

The whole was a sperm whale and fully twice the length of the Bertha Millner. The work of tricing him up occupied the beachcombers throughout the whole of the next day. It was the notion to keep them off the schooner, and Wilbur and Moran worked with great activity. They swarmed the forward deck and rigging like a plague of unclean monkeys. Why Tea Quality Varies

YOU know how the quality of strawberries from the same patch will sometimes vary from one day to another.

One day sweet, compact, well ripened, well colored, richly flavored—next day it rains, is cloudy,—following picking is soggy, sour, green, coarsely-flavored, poor.

Tea, also, on account of its volatility of flavor, after picking and during the curing process is very susceptible to weather changes. A few hours of sunshine or bad weather after picking may make the difference between good and poor tea.

So that while one picking may be first class, the next from the same garden may be very poor.

I select only the pickings which come up to the Red Rose standards of richness and strength in Indian, and delicacy and fragrance in Ceylon teas, and thus that "rich, fruity flavor" of Red Rose Tea is produced and maintained.

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Timely Hints Which Will Be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

RAISING POULTRY FOR MARKET.

The best kind of chicken for the market is plump fowl with yellow skin, such as the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Light Brahma, Leghorn, or, in fact, almost any chicken with light feathers. Stock of this kind dresses out yellow and always will bring the top of the market. Dark-feathered fowls, which dress out with a dark skin, and always sell at a lower price than light-colored stock.

Broilers.

The best breed of chickens for broilers are Plymouth Rock, Rhode Island Reds, Wyandotte and Light Brahma. The chicks should be hatched in January and February.

It is hard to get hens to set in winter and is almost necessary for the farmer to use incubators to raise broilers in time to bring the best prices. The incubator on the farm is being brought to more profitable use every year. There is no doubt that the incubator and brooder method of raising chicks is a wonderful improvement on the hen method. It is cheaper and a greater number of fowls can be raised from the same number of eggs. Hens can be made to lay nearly double as many eggs if they are not required to set, and it is a good plan to use incubators instead of taking the hens from their work. The incubator is no longer an experiment. There are several first-class machines on the market, and no mistake can be made in buying any one of half a dozen leading machines, which are guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Turkeys, Ducks and Geese.

The breed of turkeys raised does not make so much difference as the breed of chickens. Any kind of turkey will bring the market price if it is plump and fat, although the Bronz seems to be the best all-round breed, and the blooded stock will fatten more quickly and at less expense than the common run of fowls.

For raising geese keep anything but white-feathered stock. The Pekin duck is the best and always brings the top of the market.

With geese only the largest breeds should be kept. The Toulouse, African, or any other large breed is all right, and it costs no more to raise a large bird than a small one. The market is never over-stocked on large, fat geese.

RAISING EARLY CHICKENS.

Having had long experience, though on a limited scale, in raising early chickens, I will give my method. If possible, I set two hens at the same time, so as to hatch about the middle of April or first of May, and if their progeny is not too numerous, we give them to one hen. I place the hen in a grass plot, one after theroughly dusting her with Persian powder, so as to destroy, if possible, the traces of vermin before they reach the young chicks, as the same nearly all the ailments that afflict the hen family. For the first few weeks I feed fragments from the table, anything — pieces of bread slightly soft, cooked, cold potatoes, cooked vegetable, etc., but no raw Indian meal, neither cracked corn nor wheat until they are six weeks old, and then let some other softened food be added to their bill of fare.

For some time I feed the chicks four times a day and as they will consume, and keep fresh water before them at all times; move the coop to a clean place as often as they become foul, as sanitary conditions are nearly full-grown, getting their living by roaming over the grass fields. Select a plump, healthy of a prize at any chicken show. As a warning, I will say here, beware of corn meal fed to young chicks; if fed at all, let it first be baked like bread.

COOKING WITHOUT EGGS.

When eggs are dear and scarce, it stands the prudent housekeeper in hand to try some of the various receipts now in use for compounding her cake without eggs. Where eggs are an important adjunct for certain kinds of cake, one egg with the proper knowledge now fills the bill for two or three with very satisfactory results.

Surprise Cake.

One cupful of sugar, half a cupful of butter, one cupful of sweet milk, one cupful of flour, two cupfuls of baking powder, sifted with the flour, and any extract you prefer. Stir all together and sift in flour to the consistency of pound cake. Bake quickly in a well-heated oven, and you will need no surprise to tell its bake and quality.

THE VETERINARIAN.

Answers to Correspondents.

Teats Obstructed. — A cow with third calf this spring gives milk from only two teats. I handled the milk before she calved, so do not know whether she was that way before or not. Can anything be done to get milk from the other teats? Is giving about 12 quarts a day now. (If there is secretion of milk but occlusion of the teats, you may open the latter by the use of a teat bistoury and safety milking instrument.

Danger of Abortion. — Is a cow served by a bull that has served cows which have aborted, more likely to abort than she would if the bull had never served cows? Do you refer to spirochetic abortion, there is probably no more way of communicating it. If a cow aborts as a result of an accident, or from sporadic cause, and is served by a bull, that bull subsequently serves other cows, there is practically no danger.)

Worms. — Kindly suggest best remedy for worms in horse. My roads. ter has just required a practice of tail-switching on the road, and generally only when within half an hour of starting. Has it any connection with the worm trouble? (Tail-switching may be due to nervous habit, or other causes, such as irritation from a sore, rough harness, etc. Feed worm powders; use tobacco tea as an injection into the rectum, and see that no galled sores exist. Improper condition of harness exist. If this does not remedy the trouble, you may have to resort to a patent creamer to carry the tail steadily.)

Lameness — Horse 10 years old out of condition some time; neck broken out in small pimples. Has went lame in left hind leg, sheath swelled up, and hard; swelled some in front of sheath, along belly. What is the best remedy for this? (Poor condition, and is the trouble likely to return? (Have the teeth put in order if they need it. Mix a feed an ounce of the following twice a day: Iodide of potass, 4 oz.; water, 3 pts.; mix. Clip all of his legs, or at least the lame one. Give 3 oz. spirits of turpentine and 8 oz. linseed oil, mixed together as a drench, and repeat next day. Skip two days, and give two more doses at same interval. Report in 10 days, and refer to this page. Yes; this sort of lame. ness is apt to appear at any time, unless every vestige of the first attack is removed.)

Cow fed hay and grain—ground feed, rye, hominy and corn, mixed — and potatoes, is in good flesh and seems to be doing well. For drink she is driven to a brook 20 rods distant. About two weeks before calving she favored one hind leg slightly and about twelve days after, when I turned her out to drink, she was taken violently lame while walking on a smooth road. Could scarcely get her to the stable. After that I left her in the stable two days. She appeared all right, and I let her out to drink, and she went all right as to it I got her nearly to the stable, when she was again taken so lame I could not get her to the stable for some time. The foot seems all right, and there is no swelling about the leg, but when she is attacked with the lameness, she will hold that foot up and the leg trembles. (Apply blister to front, inside and outside of stifle about 4 inches in length up and down. Do not get any more on the blister on the udder than you can help; therefore rub in well that which you apply inside of stifle. Wash off on third day with soap and hot water. Cow should be watked as fit. ta as possible for a week)

Itching Skin. — Horse has a skin disease, hair is off on neck and shoulders, and skin is very rough, resembling elephant's hide. He is in poverty, especially after work, rubbing and biting himself, has been treated more or less for a long time. Veterinarian did him no good. Have tried many things, which give temporary relief but do not effect a permanent cure. (A chronic case of this sort requires time to cure. Give a physic ball in two day begin to feed the powder, as below: Powdered tartar, 1 lb.; sulphur, 1 lb.; powdered nitrate of potash, 8 oz.; mix. Give two tablespoonfuls in feed night and morning. With a scrub brush apply to all diseased skin lard made by adding 25 parts of water to one part of sheep dip. Apply this every day for three days, then twice a week.

Barrenness — Injured Quarter. — A two-year-old Jersey heifer, last milk since October, has been bred several times without results. Comes in heat regularly. What shall be done for her? Another of the same age was injured in one quarter last winter. Was bathed with alcohol and liniment of lodine, and cow is with milk alone. She improved until a month ago, when a lump began to form, which is now as large as a hen's egg. She gives but little milk out of that quarter, and that is stringy. What shall I do for her? Both heifers are fed sendings, hay, dried grains, middlings and ground oats. (Use injection vaginae powder. Give 1 tablespoon salts. Rub that quarter after each milking with some of the following: Spirits turpentine 2 oz., linseed oil 4 oz., liquid ammonia 2 oz., vinegar 1 qt.; mix.

Shoulder Lame. — Last May was plowing with three-horse team, with sandy loam soil in furrow. Noticed she had difficulty in touring round short at end of furrows, and seemed to drag one foot, as if shoulder was hurt. Looked her over several times, but could find nothing, and as she worked as well as usual otherwise, continued to work all day. At noon I found muscles of one shoulder were swelled, and showed signs of sickness after put in harn, and I sent for veterinarian, who pronounced it sabotage. After a week or so she was able to work again. A few days after shoulder began to go down and developed a bad sweeny, with symptoms of lameness, difficulty in turning round short, and refusing to could walk straight ahead as well as ever. Cow is 7 years old, and has been kept on hay, cake, until September, when, after being turned on pasture, and Have used liniments and rubbing until it was difficult to put it on. Has been idle for several months, and did nothing all winter, but below is still somewhat lameness and difficulty in turning are gone. (If you can get another veterinarian to put a rope on the whole length of the shoulder, do so. If you cannot seton the shoulder, apply golden blister over the top of the fourth day; then in two weeks more seton and further advice will be given.)

HOME DRESSMAKER.

The home dressmaker will find that a few little tricks of the trade are a marvellous aid in cutting and altering clothes. There is always a right way and a wrong way in doing even the simplest bit of dressmaking. Here are a few right ways:

Make the under part of the skirt double, so that it can be darned, as this part wears out sooner than the upper.

Don't forget to do plenty of tacking and pressing. To neglect these two points stamps a garment 'home-made' at once.

Always shrink a new braid before sewing on a skirt, otherwise the bottom of the skirt will become puckered the first time of wearing in shower of rain.

In shortening a skirt pattern, always fold a plait across the bottom of the pattern; never shorten from the top or bottom of the skirt, or the shape will be spoiled.

Home dressmakers who have difficulty in pressing curved seams will find a rolling-pin a very good pressing-board. If it stans easily be encased around it.

When putting steel or whalebone into a bodice, bend them slightly at the waist before putting into casing. You will find the bodice fit into the figure much better.

When using a sewing machine the last way to finish off neatly and easily is to turn the work round, and work back again a dozen stitches, so that the stitches will be double.

When new evening gowns are for and far between, nothing is so useful as either black or white, which by change of flowers or trimming may be altered out of all knowledge.

When putting on a collar, make neck of bodice or blouse slightly small. ler than that of collar band, and notch bodice here and there while putting collar on. By so doing you avoid wrinkles.

When cutting out sleeves, to avoid

WONDERFUL ISLANDS.

There Are Many of Them Scattered Over the Globe.

"Which ocean," writes a reader, "contains the most important islands?"

Australia, Tierra del Fuego, Cuba, that in the Atlantic ocean, as is Puerto Rico, so is Santo Domingo and so is Haiti. There are also many islands in the Newfoundland, where we get the dogs, is in the Atlantic, and so are the British isles, including such large ones as Ireland, England, Scotland and Wales.

Manhattan Island, on which little old New York is located, is in the Atlantic. The Azores belong to Portugal, and hats come from and where this skinned Americans go to spend the winter, are in the Atlantic.

Then there's Madagascar in the Indian ocean. Don't overlook that. It is a thousand miles long. And there are Australia in the Pacific, which is all lived on by land, but is made one small for a continent. And there's New Zealand, also in the Pacific, where they have municipal ownership and no strikes. And there's Long Island in the Atlantic, the site of oyster Bay and the home of the two Teddys. And are the Philippines, which Dewey put 'the kibosh' on when he went to Manila and sunk which Islands, where sandwiches are unknown, and there's Juan Fernandez, in the Pacific, where Robinson Crusoe lived, and there's Sicily in the Mediterranean, where they raise the biggest oranges in the world, and Corsica, near by, where Napoleon was born. And there's Borneo in the Pacific, where the wild man was born.

And while you are looking for islands don't forget Iceland. It's an empire of Islands. There are 3,850 of them. Go and count 'em for yourself.

Another Sea cruiser is our own Chesley Island, in the Mississippi river, which is an arm of the Atlantic ocean. —St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Cruel "Reaper."

There would appear to be no season of the year in which calamity in some form does not visit the unfortunate left to shift for themselves on the great plains. In winter they slowly perish from being confined and shut off from food. In the spring storms destroy the young and the fine watering of the older stock. Later they fall victims to summer and autumnal droughts. The Indian knows that the struggle for existence is a similarly perverse way. With him goes the cowboy, to be succeeded by the settler, the harbinger of the spectacle of cattle perishing in thousands as the result of a similar system will have become a thing of the past. "Every homesteader man" will have become a farmer.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy - The Best

In Existence.

T. M. Wood, manager of the White County News, Beebe, Ark., is a representative southern business man, who does not hesitate in expressing his good opinion of a well known remedy. He says, "It gives me pleasure to recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the best results. In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of the kind in existence." Sold by all druggists.

THE PEPPERS.

An Opinion on the White, the Black and the Snappy Cayenne.

The so called white pepper is an abomination. Give me the old fashioned black pepper of our daddies. It has both flavor and odor and is most appetizing, while the white is nauseating. For real snap and go give me cayenne. None of your imported. Did you ever sift pepper in your soup and notice the peculiar behavior? The black kind concentrates, the cayenne rushes to a common center. The red smatters, as it usually does, or as a comity with every other. Try the experiment. It means probably that black pepper is astringent, while red is laxative. The people of the tropics consume large quantities of cayenne and are immune from dyspepsia. I never heard of one suffering from impaired or imperfect digestion.

Let us approach these things understandingly. The medical term for black pepper is "rubefacient," and this same piper is regarded as a stomachic. A stomachic is a stimulant for the stomach. Red, or cayenne, pepper is "vapsicum" and is an irritant as well as a stomachic. If a person afflicted with endless morbus takes thirty drops of the tincture of capsicum in water the entire alimentary tract will immediately be congested, which simply proves that red pepper is not a laxative. And this looks like a contradiction.

THE SMOKER'S PARADISE.

A Continual Use of Tobacco In the Tropical Island.

Holland is the smoker's paradise. Not only is the climate one which almost compels indulgence in tobacco, but the fragrant leaf may be had in abundance and at small cost.

The humidity of the climate leads naturally to continual smoking, and so common is the habit that instead of measuring distances by miles it is customary for the boatmen to declare a place to be so many pipes distant.

On entering the house of a friend a cigar is offered you, the host sees that you are kept supplied during your visit, and a fresh cigar upon leaving is an unwonted act of politeness. You are not permitted to depart until these cases have been refilled, and the necessity for their continuous supply may be known that a smoker usually lights his fresh cigar from the stump of the previous one, keeping one in his mouth continually.

Well, workers are largely devoted to their habit, taking their pipe to bed with them and only laying it down when they fall asleep, and when they awake during the night they indulge in a short smoke before going to sleep again and they always light their pipes before getting out of bed in the morning.

MONDAY AS WASH DAY.

It May Be a Legacy to Us From the Mayflower Pilgrims.

Did you ever stop to reflect about that in our country all families think they must do their washing on Monday?

The Mayflower drifted into Massachusetts bay and lay at anchor outside in a little harbor for a month. Children had gone ashore to see if there was a place suitable for landing. The morning was Monday, and the mother said that the old fashioned desire to tidy up the children for church had caused housekeeping women of the little band.

The women were roused to shore, and the first washing ever done in New England was on Monday in November, 1620, the first families in America washed and scrubbed in the good Knickerbocker fashion. Trees were built, water heated and clothes scrubbed on the new ships and stown. When all was finished to the satisfaction of the women they sighed with pleasure and said, "cleanliness is akin to godliness."

Do you know this is history? Yes, it be, though not as big as history sometimes is. Anything is history that shows the spirit of the times, and this wash day is pictures skewed the spirit of the first arrivals.

Well Guarded Girls.

In New Guinea parents send their daughters to bed in a little house on the top of a tree every night, and when the girls have gone up the ladder is removed, so that there is no coming down till the parents allow it. Elopements under these circumstances must be difficult, and young people find a stop the sounder for knowing that their parents are keeping a watchful watch abroad until their elders see fit for them to do so.

The Mantle of Charity.

The lady was making some remarks about the kind of clothing some other ladies at church had on.

"The standard of dress a woman can wear," said her husband, "is the mantle of charity."

"Fiddle!" snapped, "and it is about the only dress, judging by the fuss they make over the bills, that some husbands want their wives to wear."

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance — characteristic of our excellent Tailor Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $8, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

Old Boys' Reunion.

FULLY 8,000 PEOPLE ARE EXPECTED FROM ONTARIO ALONE A BIG CONTINGENT FROM ROCHESTER.

Judging from reports, there will be an exceptionally large influx of visitors here from Saturday until Tuesday of next week. It is estimated that at least 4,000 will come from Toronto alone, whilst many will come from further west in Ontario. These contingents will arrive here at noon, or soon after, on Saturday.

At an early hour on Sunday morning a contingent from Rochester, N.Y., of between 500 and 600, are expected. A steamer has been specially engaged for the occasion. The Fifty-fourth Band, 40 strong in addition, will accompany the delegation from the Flower City. It is safe to say there will have a jolly time on their trip.

From various parts of the United States it is now certain that many will come for the purpose of visiting their childhood scenes and joining in the festivities of the Reunion.

The members of the Committee on Decoration are anxious to impress on the citizens the necessity of decorating their premises for the Reunion. Every little helps. Don't imagine that your own little flags or Chinese lanterns will not be missed. They will. Everybody should do his utmost to add to the decorations. The cost will be trifling and the effect tasteful and pretty.

The Grand Trunk Railway employees will build an arch on Bishop street, near Mrs. Dester's hotel, which will be pretty, you may be sure. The Grand, trunkers never do things by halves.

THE HOT WAVE

MADE MANY PEOPLE GO BREEZE HUNTING ON VICTORIA PARK LAST NIGHT.

The heat of yesterday and last evening had the effect of making many citizens congregate at Victoria Park, in the hope of obtaining a fresh breeze from off the bay. During the early part of the evening hundreds of cars were run out, and it certainly a delightful place to be. That the heat was no end of a good business in the evening, the hustling, being "platformed" with ice boats.

ST. MICHAEL'S CHURCH.

WORK OF RESTORATION PROCEEDING RAPIDLY — EDIFICE WILL BE EVEN GRANDER THAN BEFORE.

The work of restoration on St. Michael's Church is progressing rapidly. The mason work is about completed, and roofers for the slate work are in position. In the interior the lathers are at work, and in a few days the plasterers will commence. The work has certainly been carried on in an energetic manner. When completed the edifice will be even grander than before.

Want Local Option.

A convention of the temperance people of Prince Edward County has been called for July 25, when arrangements for submitting a local option by-law for the whole county. They claim they can easily carry the measure, owing to that in the referendum vote in 1902, 2,250 people voted for prohibition, and only 550 against it. The county has a population of 17,000, so there are thirteen licenses issued, eight being in the town of Picton.

THE MEN'S DANGER.

He can't resist disease germs—that's why he's such a mark for consumption. In this land of plenty, there is weakness, especially when it's so easily overcome with Ferrozone. This remarkable tissue builder makes fat quickly—it does so by forming blood that's rich, nourishing and healthy. Ferrozone supplies the nutriment needed by worn-out nerves, rapidly constructs muscle, fat and tissue. Soon it fills out, the cheeks redden, prosiest that weight is added. To be well and stay well, use Ferrozone. 50c.—500 tablets in a box for fifty cents, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

Jail Notes.

There are at present confined in the county jail 7 males and 1 female. The latter is Mrs. Diamond, who is accused of causing the death of her daughter-in-law.

John Thompson has been remanded to jail until Friday, on the charge of barratrying a store in Trenton.

AGED MARINER DEAD.

CAPT. HENRY SMITH, WHO SAILED THE LAKES FOR HALF A CENTURY, HAS DROPPED ANCHOR IN STILL WATERS.

Capt. Henry Smith, who resided on South George Street, died this morning. Deceased had been ill for some time and for the past few days his demise had been anticipated. In the year 1826 Capt. Smith was born in Prince Edward County, being thus 80 years of age. All his life had been spent in the lakes. For over half a century he had followed his occupation as a sailor, being one of the oldest navigators of the lakes in this section of the country. The late Capt. Smith was in the militia for some time and did duty during the Fenian Raid, 1866. On the 29th day of April, 1859, he received an honorable discharge. He was then connected with a company whose headquarters were at Brighton, Ont. For the past 35 years the deceased had been a resident of this city. He was an honorable citizen, respected by all who knew him. He was a member of the Anglican Church. Mrs. Smith preceded her husband to the grave some years ago. The surviving members of the family are one son, Joseph H., who resides here, and three daughters, namely, Mrs. John Thompson, of Bath; Mrs. Geo. Canales, and Miss Sarah Ann, who live here.

GOOD ADVICE THIS.

NORTH OXFORD LICENSE COMMISSIONERS GIVE LICENSE-HOLDERS SOME WHOLESOME COUNSEL.

The License Commissioners for North Oxford have addressed to licensed-holders a circular which is decorously praised by the Woodstock Sentinel-Review. The circular to the bookkeepers to observe the law, not only in the letter, but in spirit. Their business is "keep hotels," to maintain a temporary home for travellers, clean, inviting, comfortable, moderate. The bar is a mere accessory of such a hotel. If it is allowed to run for the sale of liquor instead of the law is decated. "The law now is that you must not sell to minors, order or no order. Do not break this. Do not sell to weak men, men who you know are injuring themselves and beggaring their families through drink. You must know these men, and you should refuse them drink and so instruct your help. Do not suffer any loafing around your place outside or in. If a man is seen coming out of your place or loafing in the neighborhood of your place drunk, it gives cause for your license to be taken away. Close promptly at the hour of closing and keep closed tight till the hour of opening. Pain your premises for nothing or nobody during prohibited hours. Keep the law strictly as to Saturday nights and Sundays. Keep your premises tidy and allow no unseemly conduct about."

The Outspoken Doctor.

Peterboro Review: In the course of his sermon yesterday morning in St. George St. Church Rev. Dr. Crothers, in speaking on the topic tureden-bearing, referred to the burdens which the poor have to carry, especially by reason of the existence of the great saloons and distilleries on the other side. He said in connection with Rockefeller's great gifts to the church it was really the users of coal oil who were bearing the burden, for the head of the great trust had so cornered the price of this commodity that from the poorest to the rich, widows carried, the preacher said he knew what that meant, Rockefeller had had sufficient independence to refuse all to ask him for one cent toward the erection of a public library.

A Good Run.

Brockville Times: Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Peck and family, of Buffalo, N.Y., reached here last night in a large, handsome automobile, in which they are making a tour to Montreal and eastern points, returning home via Syracuse, N.Y. They left Belleville at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, stopped two hours in Kingston, and reached here shortly after 6 in the evening. This makes a run of 240 miles to Montreal. Mr. Fisk manages to take the 1,500-mile auto race next summer and this is one of them.

Along The Docks.

A very pretty steam yacht from Chicago passed down here bay yesterday.

The steamer Aletha this morning took a large excursion party to Glenora and Picton.

The work of repairing the old ferry slip is progressing nicely, and will probably be completed by Friday.

MAJOR SANKEY'S BODY HAS BEEN RECOVERED.

LOCATED IN DEEP WATER IN MANITOU LAKE WILL HAVE MILITARY FUNERAL.

Kenora, Ont., July 17.—The body of Major Villiers Sankey, of the Transcontinental survey party, who was drowned in Manitou Lake last Monday, with two assistants, was recovered Sunday it. 75 feet of water and only 150 feet from shore, within a yard or so of the spot where the people, the only survivor, was washed ashore. The party located the body late Saturday night with long grappling apparatus, but in dragging to the surface it got away from them. Yesterday they started again, and in single irons. The bottom was covered with large boulders. Their efforts were rewarded with the greater prize.

A. M. Sankey, a brother, and A. D. Armour, of Toronto, a nephew of the deceased, were with the party. The body was brought in last night and shipped to Toronto.

Toronto, July 18.— The funeral of the late Major Sankey will take place on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock from the family residence, 60 Howard street, and will be conducted with military honors. The body will arrive on Wednesday afternoon. Brigadier-Gen. Otter, commanding military district No. 2, yesterday afternoon issued an order to the Toronto garrison, inviting all officers, non-commissioned officers and men to parade in review order at the Armories on Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock to take part in the funeral. The Queen's Own Rifles will furnish the band, and the firing party will be composed of 200 of the rank and file. The 9th Field Battery will man the gun carriage on which the body will be conveyed to its last resting place. The pall bearers will be selected from the militia, but have not as yet been chosen. Rev. Rev. Williams, D.D., of the Church of St. John the Evangelist, Portland street, has been asked to take charge of the services, and the interment will take place in St. James' Cemetery. It has not yet been decided if there will be any firing party, as the wishes of the family will be followed in this respect.

The Veterans of '85 Association will also attend the funeral, although no order has yet been issued. There will also be a large representation of other officials, although no official action will probably be taken by the city, deceased not having been the head of a department.

Mr. Porter's Bill.

Mr. E. Guss Porter's Bill for the amendment of the Criminal Code passed through the Commons to-day. It will be remembered that by an amendment to this bill, moved when Mr. Porter was not present in the House, the clause legalizing betting on an incorporated race track was introduced. Mr. Porter to-day moved the adoption of the Bill, excluding the clause in regard to race betting, which he was unwilling to sanction, but with the clause stripped out, Mr. Porter's Bill passed with the unanimous consent of the House. This is a Bill which provides for a cheap and expeditious appeal from the decision of a Police Magistrate or Justice of the Peace to the Judge of the nearest division Court, with out giving security for costs, thus doing away with the cost of printing which required an appeal to the quarter sessions, involving long delay and heavy expense. Mr. Porter said he seldom that was paid a lawyer sufficient fee to make professional costs for the public, but in this case Mr. Porter has done so and deserves the commendation of the public.

HUMOR

A FORTUNATE ACCIDENT.

Key to Her Perplexity Was Discovered by Marcel Chance.

"My sister sent me a hat from New York a few weeks ago," said a Georgia town woman. "It was a very smart hat, but no directions came with it. The brim was narrow in one place and wide exactly opposite it. I naturally wore the narrow side over the back. Hats always have been made that way since I can remember. It didn't look well when I put it on that way, for the wide side turned up.

"I made up my mind that the wide place must be the side instead of the front. It was a dreadful puzzle, that hat. I put it on with the turned up place at the left side. It made me look queer, but new hats always do that way at first. I wore it downtown to meet my husband and do a little shopping with him. He fussed about the hat all the while we were buying things. Finally in one store I showed him how much worse it looked set on the other way, and he stopped fussing and said it was a fool hat anyway it was fixed.

"Coming home the car was jammed. A man fell over me and knocked my hat down in the low far out of plumb. I was too mad at the thing to straighten it. When I got home my husband said, 'That's a mighty pretty hat.' He looked in the glass. It was. The man had knocked it round the way it was. It was meant to go. It's wide and turned up in the back and narrow and turned down in the front, and if the man hadn't knocked it that way I'd have worn it all spring without finding out how it was intended to be worn."—Washington Post.

Hospitality Up to Date.

One member of a certain woman's club was leving the Sunday afternoon reception when she met another just coming in.

"You're a cordial hostess," remarked the first. "Why don't you come early and entertain your company? The guest you invited has been waiting and waiting for you a solid hour."

"Heavens!" exclaimed the other, much annoyed. "Hasn't she gone yet?"—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Brilliant Scheme.

"Yes, the matrimonial bureau made a great success. It collected a lot of homely men and married them off to the most beautiful women."

"How in the world did it attract the beautiful women?"

"Easy. It just stated that it had special bargain days in husbands."—Detroit Tribune.

Garrison Change September 1.

Ottawa, July 18.—A despatch has been received from the Imperial authorities stating that they will hand over the care of the defences at Halifax to the Canadian Government on September 1 next. The withdrawal of the British troops from Esquimalt will not take place until next year.

WITTE FEARS FAILURE

Russia's Chief Envoy Not an "Any Price" Peace Man.

Says Japanese Will Prohibit an Accord Being Reached—Everything Rests With Czar—Defends His Country's Condition and Predicts Successful Passing of Crisis—Sakhalin Is Invested, Japs Say Government.

St. Petersburg, July 18.—M. Witte, the senior Russian peace plenipotentiary, yesterday received the correspondent of the Associated Press at his villa at Yalagin Island, M. Witte spoke in French. After greetings, the conversation gravitated quickly to the high mission with which the Russian statesman is charged, and the disposition of the foreign press to interpret his appointment as an indication that Russia had decided to make peace at any price.

"No, no!" said His Excellency straightening up in his chair and speaking slowly and distinctly, as if weighing the value of each word. "In the first place I have been designated by the Emperor as his ambassador extraordinary for our parleys with the Japanese plenipotentiaries is, ascertain whether it is possible to conclude a treaty of peace. My personal views are of secondary importance, but my views are in entire accord with those of my friend, Count Lamsdorff, Foreign Minister. In serving my Emperor, I have received precise instructions from His Majesty and shall follow them.

"The ultimate decision remains in the hands of the Emperor, and it is for him to decide the destinies of Russia. The Emperor is the friend of peace and I very much fear that the Japanese terms will be such that it will not be able to reach an accord.

"Nevertheless the world should disabuse its mind that Russia wants peace at any price.

"Briefly, Russia is not crushed, as the French press has led the world to believe. From the interior situation is serious I do not deny, but in Europe and America the true significance of what is happening is not understood. Russia is not on the verge of dissolution as a great power and is not obliged to accept any conditions offered in spite of the military reverses she has sustained.

"We are passing through an internal crisis, which has been marked by many grave errors and which, among other others still in store, but the crisis will pass and in a few years Russia will again take her place as a preponderant power in the European concert."

Sakhalin is Invested.

London, July 18.—The correspondent of The Daily Mail at Hokodate says that the Japanese have practically completed the occupation of the island of Sakhalin and are organizing a Government.

The Shanghai correspondent of The Standard says that the Japanese have landed on Sakhalin 125 miles of light railway and 2,000 coolies.

GLOVER DEFEATS GRAHAM.

In the Swimming Race in Lower Niagara Whirlpool Rapids.

Niagara Falls, July 18.—After a struggle of 28 minutes in the turbulent waters of the lower whirlpool rapids at Niagara, William G. Glover, jr., of Baltimore, 32 years old, defeated George D. Graham, 21 years old, in a race from the whirlpool to the dock of the Niagara River Navigation Company at Lewiston, a distance of about four miles, yesterday afternoon.

Glover accomplished the feat in waters that extremely few swimmers and entirely new to him? While Graham had the advantage of study in the rapids for the last fifteen years and knows every dangerous eddy and swirl in the entire stretch of wild waters, it was Grahams age that stood against him. It also maintains that he became caught in a swirl in the comparatively smooth water just below the Lewiston-Queenston Bridge and was unable to make any headway towards the shore.

Glover has made long swims in the ocean and he can work in the surf without effort, but he was very nearly exhausted when he reached the Lewiston dock, and when about 100 feet from the landing could not shout but he had cramps in his stomach and wanted great air. Immediately he received soon after he struck the dock, but admitted that the swim was one of the worst he had ever attempted and he wanted no more of it.

Fatal Swimming.

Peterboro, July 18.—H. F. Strickland of Toronto established a Canadian record for long distance swimming yesterday morning when he did the distance of nearly 11 miles between Lakefield and the liftlock, at Peterboro. He was accompanied by Mr. George H. Corson, also of Toronto, who left the water at the beginning of the last mile. Both men were in splendid condition at the finish, and Strickland says he could have done four or five miles more had it been necessary. The men entered the Trent Canal below lock No. 1 at Lakefield at 8.10 and arrived at the liftlock at 1.16. Strickland swimming. He had been in the water five hours and five minutes.

Premier Balfour Withdraws Bill.

London, July 18.—On the Speaker, Mr. Gully, agreeing on the motion of John Redmond, the Irish leader, that each clause of the redistribution of seats bill must be debated separately, Premier Balfour in the House of Commons yesterday withdrew the bill, saying he would proceed with it at the session of Parliament, after the hur.

"This course was taken as His Majesty's Government is not prepared to concede so much time during the present session."

Bridge Is Burned Away.

St. John, N. B., July 18.—A Fredericton, N. B., special says that two spans and a pier of the wooden highway bridge spanning the St. John River between there and Marysville were destroyed by fire Sunday, a circumstance probably causing the disaster. The damage will be about $6,000, and there will be great inconvenience pending repairs.

INCREASES COST TO CANADA $573,277

The formal bill to amend the Customs Act in conformity with the tariff changes announced in the budget speech was introduced and amended to allow importations of dry white lead until September 1, under the old tariff.

House Divides.

The House having gone into conference on the estimates, Mr. Foster moved to strike out the item of $1,000 salary to Postmaster Doble of Shediac, who had been dismissed by the Falconbridge, which he blamed upon his politics, and was subsequently reappointed after the quality of the Conservative action in the Federal elections of November, 1903, and the Provincial elections following. The motion was defeated by 54 to 35, the same division as defeated the motion to strike out the salary of Nixon, the defaulting sub land agent of McLeod, N. W. T.

Mr. Prefontaine promised to give Mr. Foster a definite reply to-day as to whether or not the meteorological bureau is to be removed from Toronto to Ottawa.

Mr. Borden was informed that the Government had not yet decided upon a successor to Mr. Macdougall as Auditor-General.

The House adjourned at 9.30 a. m.

End Comes Tuesday.

The indications now are that prorogation will take place on Wednesday, afternoon.

PHOTOGRAPHED DEFENCES.

American Doctor Is Under Arrest On Serious Suspicion.

Kingston, July 18.—Dr. Franklin Clarke, an American, was arrested yesterday by branch of the official Secret Service.

Some days ago, Dr. Clarke was discovered taking photographs of the forts protecting Port Royal and Kingston. The police found the photographs on him. The prisoner, who is a graduate of Harvard, has been a resident here four months.

Before the court a local lawyer, on the prisoner's behalf, pointed out that Dr. Clarke's action was without significance. He was held in $1,000 bail for enquiry into the case.

HEROINES MEET DEATH

Woman and Girl Give Their Lives For Others.

Mrs. John Reid of Ormston, Que., Plunges Into River to Save Life of a Niece—Vera Schneider Drowned in Attempting to Rescue Her Sister—A Brave Little 10-Year Old Girl Who Leaves Her Home Happy.

Montreal, July 18.—News of one of the saddest tragedies comes from Ormston, where Mrs. John Reid, the wife of a well known farmers, heroically gave up her life to save that of her niece, Miss Elliott, who was her guest. Miss Elliott, with Mrs. Reid's young daughter, had rowed to the village, a short distance away. On returning, little Miss Reid sprang from the skiff, but failed to secure the boat which rapidly drifted out into the river. Miss Elliott, unable to manage the boat, jumped into the water and sank. Mrs. Reid saw her go down, rushed to the river bank, and she, too, jumped into the water. She could not swim and was soon beyond her depth. Fennel, a neighbor, came to the rescue and saved Miss Elliott, but, when Mrs. Reid's body was recovered, life was extinct.

Her Life For Her Sister's

New Hamburg, July 18.—Another drowning accident occured here yesterday afternoon in the river. Only Three Schneider children, Edith, Vera and Florence, visitors from Strathroy, were at the home of Mrs. Roth's farm, east of the village. Edith aged 2, and Florence, aged 5, were apparently drowning, and Vera, aged 10, went in to save her sisters. Mrs. Roth, aged 8 years, pulled Edith and Florence out, but Vera was drowned.

Drowns While Bathing.

Gretna, Man., July 18.—Frank Josephson was drowned in Pembina River here while bathing Sunday.

Boy Drowned.

Quebec, July 18.—A boy named Grenier, son of Modeste Grenier, was drowned in the St. Charles River.

Help Arrived Too Late.

Toronto, July 18.—Another drowning victim was added to the list of summer fatalities yesterday afternoon, when Richard Bennington, an eight-year-old boy, lost his life while paddling on a raft in the lagoon at Hanlan's Point. Help arrived too late, and the boy was pound ald when the body was recovered.

Electrocuted While Swimming.

Hamilton, July 18.—Samuel Dougan Hildreth, a seven-year-old son of John Hildreth, Fruitland, was instantly killed by an electric wire while bathing in a creek at his father's farm. A guard wire on the G. & H. Railway broke, fell over an electric feed wire, and dropped into the creek. The lad took hold of it and received several thousand volts, the water making a short circuit. He was badly burned. An inquest will be held.

Fatalities at Frank.

Frank, Man., July 18.—William Chalmicks was killed in the Canadian-American coal mine here Sunday by the bursting of a coal chute which buried him under 100 tons of coal.

At Lille collieries, eight miles east of here, Joseph Sherin, aged 45, was lighting a dynamite fuse, returned to examine it and was instantly killed by the explosion.

Hamilton Teamster Killed.

Hamilton, July 18.—Charles Wright, 74 West Canon street, a teamster, was run over and fatally injured yesterday afternoon at Armstrong's quarry pit, at the west end of the city. He stepped out on the tongue of the wagon to do something about the harness and fell between the horses. They moved on, drawing a heavy wagon load of gravel over him. He died a few hours after. He was about 30 years of age and unmarried.

BARRISTER DRINKS CARBOLIC.

Charged With Serious Offence, Eludes Vigilance of Guards.

Gananoque, July 18.—About 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon Daniel E. Sheppard, barrister, committed suicide by taking carbolic acid.

The deceased was under surveillance at his home, charged with a serious offence. About the hour named he eluded the vigilance of those watching him and, going into his sister's room, found a bottle of carbolic acid, the contents of which he drank.

The deceased was 27 years of age, and had been prominent in public affairs, Mayor Sheppard is a brother.

He graduated from the law osgoll school in Ottawa, Hamilton and Carleton Place.

Killed By the Heat.

Toronto, July 18.—The weather mat places the extreme heat at 91 in the shade yesterday. The excessive heat killed Edward Tyrell, an elderly gentleman, at his home, 39 Bloomfield avenue. Mr. Tyrell was an agent, and went down town in the morning to attend to his business. A few hours later he returned and was passing through the kitchen when he was seized with illness and fell to the floor. He was 68 years of age.

Bail For Alleged Murderer.

Toronto, July 18.—Justice Magee yesterday fixed the bail of Patrick McAuliffe, charged with murder at Peterboro, at $7,000. McAuliffe will answer for the death of a hotelkeeper at Peterboro, who he is accused of striking on the Dominion brawl. The evidence showed that the man had suffered from a diseased liver.

Almost Lynched Him.

Quebec, July 18.—Dominico Mongbatti, an Italian from Montreal, stabbed William Perkins, a Q. R. L. & P. Co. employee, yesterday, and only the prompt action of a couple of municipal policemen saved Mongbatti from being lynched. Perkins is not dangerously injured

No Objections Were Offered Thereto by Anybody.

The Business of the Session Ends in the Commons—Waiting for the Senate to Finish Passing on Important Bills—Sydney Route Satisfactory—Maritime Provinces Pleased — Statement to be Prepared

Ottawa, July 19.—The new North Sydney mail route was discussed in the House yesterday morning. D. A. McKenzie, of North Cape Breton and Victoria, asserting that the recent test with the Virginian's mails was a satisfactory one. On Mr. McKenzie's showing the Maritime Provinces got their mails two days ahead of the usual time.

Hon. W. S. Fielding suggested that as there was a benefit at least to the lower Provinces, the mails might be landed at North Sydney when the steamers took the route south of Cape Race. During the time when the route was through Belle Isle the mails could hardly be carried back to North Sydney. The cost, however, would have to be taken into consideration.

The Minister of Railways told the House that a final statement was being prepared of the result of the test.

Mr. Emmerson also announced that the Transcontinental Railway Commission expected to be in contracts before the end of this year.

Many Bills Passed.

The bill respecting the salary of the First Minister and respecting the Senate and House of Commons were passed through the final stages.

The only comments on the latter were by Mr. J. J. Hughes (King's, P.E.I.) and Mr. Bergeron. Mr. Hughes said a longer period for absence than fifteen days should be allowed members from the far west and Mr. Bergeron said that while he only a week to come to Ottawa and a week to go home.

Mr. Bergeron asked that the widows or relatives of members who died this session should be given an increased amount of indemnity as if the members had been here they would have got $2,500.

"We will have to consider that in consultation with the leader of the Opposition," replied Mr. Fitzpatrick. "And if we decide to do it, it will be dealt with in another way."

Privy Councillors' Annuities.

The bill respecting annuities for certain Privy Councillors was also put through and some progress made on the bill respecting the Judges of Provincial courts.

End of the Session.

The House of Commons yesterday completed the business of the session. On motion to adjourn shortly after 4 o'clock Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that the time of prorogation could not be announced definitely, because the Senate had not completed their consideration of certain important measures.

The bill providing for the salaries of judges was amended so as to provide that the chief justice of the supreme court of the Northwest Territories shall receive $7,000 annually, and each of the puisne judges $6,000 a year.

Resolutions were carried, and the supply bill based thereon was introduced, given its third reading and passed.

Yesterday's was the 127th sitting of the present session. Sir Wilfrid announced that the Governor-General would reach Ottawa at noon to-day.

Senate and the Schools.

Ottawa, July 19.—The Senate yesterday morning defeated Senator Perley's amendment, providing for religious instruction in schools of both the majority and minority in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The vote stood 3 yeas to 47 nays.

Senator Bolduc's amendment to apply to section 93 of the B. N. A. was lost on a vote of 8 yeas to 36 nays.

An amendment by Senator Landry, applying the provisions of the Act of 1875 met a like fate.

Peering into the Future.

In connection with the consideration of the bill to increase the permanent force, Sir Mackenzie Bowell expressed the opinion that the idea of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, back of the proposal, was to prepare for the time when Canada would be separated from Great Britain Sir Richard Cartwright, who replied, ridiculed the idea of Sir Mackenzie.

DRAGS ON UNTIL AUGUST.

Premier Balfour Says Early Dissolution Is Undesirable.

London, July 18.—Premier Balfour has dissipated the hopes of his opponents of an early dissolution of Parliament.

At a meeting of Unionists yesterday, the Premier urged his supporters to be regular in their attendance at the House of Commons, so as to prevent the defeat of the Government as the result of a small division. He pointed out that a dissolution in August would be inconvenient to the House and to the country. The Government did not anticipate any trouble in bringing the session to a close during the ensuing August 12.

Joseph Chamberlain, in a brief speech, said that while he formerly differed with Mr. Balfour in opinion, he there should be an early dissolution, he now thought there was no good reason why Parliament should be dissolved so soon.

SAVED AFTER HOPE GONE.

Within One Inch of Death Down 1,000 Feet in a Mine.

Denver, Col., July 19.—To face death by inches at the bottom of a 1,000 foot open 1,000 feet under ground, to feel a narrow strip of ground affording the only safety crumbling away inch by inch into the black waters lapping at their feet, to see hope of rescue just an inch above their outstretched hands and, fear, to be rescued after hope was gone, was the experience of Howard Hoynham and his companion, Sir George Berkeley, of London, in the Mohegan mine in Victor last Friday.

The visitors went to Victor to inspect the Mohegan mine and were being lowered in the shaft when they saw water, or below them. The jerked the bell rope to signal the engineer, and broke it. The cage continued downward and when the water was up to their chins they jumped for a ledge and reached it.

The engineer, puzzled by the one bell he had heard before the rope broke, began hoisting slowly, and the cage left the ledge. Then they discovered that the clay ledge they were standing upon was breaking down. Barely in time to save them, the cage was lowered again and stopped where they could reach it, and they were hoisted to safety.

The shaft had filled to a depth of thirty feet or more from seepage.

Boy in Swimming Drowns.

St. Catharines, July 19—A 13-year-old boy, Stanley McNulty, son of John McNulty, worker of the Mansion House at Merritton, was drowned in Lock 14, Old Canal, yesterday afternoon about 4.30. The boy was swimming in the lake and suddenly disappeared from sight. All efforts to find the body up to 7 last evening have been unavailing.

Boy Falls From Raft.

Owen Sound, July 19.—Harry Christie, aged 15, son of Robert Christie, barrister, of Owen Sound, was accidentally drowned at Sydney Beach, where the family are summering. The young fellow was playing on a raft 100 distance from the shore, and accidentally fell off. The body was recovered shortly afterwards.

Boy's Body Recovered.

Peterboro, July 19.—The body of Joseph Bickra, the 14-year-old son of Michael Bickra, was found about 2.30 last evening near the spot in the Otonabee where he was drowned Monday night. A discharge of dynamite was made in the water, and this brought the body to the surface.

Jumped From Canoe.

Montreal, July 19.—Lingford Higgins, 19 years old, was drowned near Lake View, Que. He was canoeing with four other Montreal boys, when he jumped from the canoe, thinking it was about to sink, and before he had gone twenty rods he cried for help.

PULP WOOD EXPORTS STOPPED.

Quebec Traders Face an Added U. S. Duty of 20 Per Cent.

Quebec, July 19.—The pulpwood export trade to the United States has received a black eye in the district of Quebec where the trade has grown to be a big business.

The American Government has imposed another duty of twenty per cent. on all "rose" wood imported into the United States, which goes into effect immediately. It appears that pressure has been brought to bear on the American Government by certain interests in the United States against "pitsed" or barked wood. They want the barking to be performed in the United States, and consequently have induced the Government to impose the 20 per cent. duty.

The pulpwood export trade is growing very fast in Quebec, and no less than $50,000 worth is shipped weekly from the port of Quebec, twenty thousand dollars worth going in barges via Lake Champlain.

IN THE MANTLE ROOM

Our word to-day is of two special lines that should be most interesting, because of their timeliness. True the garments are worth much more than we ask, but nearing the end of the season and the well-known fact that we never carry goods from one season to another, accounts for these clearing prices.

THE air in an ordinary oven is stagnant. It becomes tainted with the odors of the different dishes cooking—the strongest odor impregnates all. That is why you sometimes get pie with a flavor of onions and roast beef with a taste of fish.

The air in the oven of the

is constantly changing. Fresh air is drawn in from outside the range by our patent oven flue, superheated and forced into the top of the oven. It circulates throughout the oven, keeping every part at a steady, even temperature. The air is then drawn off through the oven ventilators carrying with it the fumes of the cooking dishes.

The Imperial Oxford Range cooks your food with pure, fresh, dry heat. Would you like to see this range? Call at your dealers. If he can't show you the Imperial Oxford, write to us and we'll send you full particulars and tell you where you can see it.

Daily Intelligencer.

A Severe Indictment.

The Montreal Gazette is not unamazed of the increases in salary passed by Parliament, and delivers itself of the following trenchant criticism of the majority and its methods:

"In spite of protests from every part of the country, it appears to have been determined to increase the sessional indemnity of members of Parliament from $1,500 to $2,500. Whatever justification there may seem for this step, this was a bad session to take it. Those who have closely followed the proceedings of the last six months are agreed that the present House of Commons is inferior to that which went out of existence at the time of the last dissolution. The records bear out the unsatisfactory theory. The long debate on the Autonomy Bills was marked by speeches calculated to make this chief and nothing else. The other business of the session was conducted in a reckless and slipshod way. The soberer members felt this. The spectacle was presented of the Minister of Justice saying about a bill: 'This is foolish legislation; I dislike it; but you want it and there it is. The rebuke was unheeded. Scandal after scandal raised further thought and involved business was almost sure to be unheeded. The gravest scandal—not the less a grave scandal—was the absence from their places of members. Not dozens, but scores, deserted Ottawa for weeks and even months. Important bills and vote questions went into millions were discussed and passed with two or three dozen members in the chamber. The absentees will benefit by the proposed increase. To them the thing is a grab. To all it is unjustified, as a permanent increase. The country should, and it is believed will, resent the action of its representatives, who in little as in great things have forgotten their duty to safeguard the finances and apply business rules to the business of the country which is their care."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Doesn't it beat everything how the ice cream weather keeps up!

At last the hot weather is explained. It's owing to the new heating apparatus lately put in at Jim Jenkinsfontein.

Decorate, good people. Put out your flags in the day and Chinese lanterns at night. Many of the old boys and girls are here already. So them see that we appreciate their coming. Decorations around private houses and in the windows of merchants are strictly in order just now.

We are going to have the biggest time in the history of this good old town, and don't you forget it. So it is up to everybody to get in the game and help things along. All together, now, ladies and gentlemen. It is likely that most of us will have a wooden overcoat by the time the next Old Boys' Reunion takes place. Therefore let us get gay while we can.

Some of the old-timers were talking last night about the changes which must be apparent to one who has been absent from Belleville for 40 years. It seems that the number of men in business here now, who were here 40 years ago, can be counted on the fingers of one hand. The old order changeth everywhere, and Belleville is no exception to the rule.

One thing the old-timers will probably admit, namely, that Belleville is a far prettier place to-day than it was in 1865. There is hardly any chance for an argument on that point. The trees nowadays, of course, a certain "liveliness" which prevailed in the late 60's and the early 70's. With all the sawmills running full blast, and work for everybody who wanted it, Belleville was rather a warmus place on a summer evening in those days.

Thirteen pupils who tried for promotion failed to pass. It will be easy to convince those youngsters that 13 is an unlucky number.

The chances are that every farmer's hired man is earning every cent of his pay these days.

A Philadelphia girl killed a threatening dog with a golf stick. That's more humane than a hat pin, anyhow.

A London man has invented a machine which folds, wraps and addresses magazines. The suffering reader must still cut the leaves.

A New York woman has ordered a drug store to give a certain newsboy two glasses of soda water a day as long as he wants them.

That reads like a warm weather story.

Keep cool. There is said to be ice enough in Greenland to bury the whole area of Canada a quarter of a mile deep.

A flash of lightning frightened a woman in a merry-go-round at Salem, Mass., and she fell off her hobby horse. It would take more than a flash of lightning to frighten some women from their hobbies.

The Japanese soldiers of the front sent news of the Black Sea mutiny to Russians in the trenches by putting notes in bombs which they fired at the enemy. Think what would happen to a newspaper publisher who distributed news in that way!

A Cleveland judge heard a prisoner in an adjoining police station singing and immediately ordered his release without asking any questions as to who he was or what he was in for. You can bet the price of your next meal's real that that fellow had the "wobble." The wonder is that the judge didn't order him shot.

If the hot wave keeps up long enough it may make the laundrymen rich. There should be many collars in the wash these hot days.

There is no indication that Britannia means to surrender her dearly won position as ruler of the waves. Britain's monster new battleship, to which frequent reference has recently been made, is to be christened the Indefatigable, and is to take the water at Portsmouth dockyard in sixteen months from the laying of the Keel to the launching of the vessel. Her armament will be equal to two of the heaviest battleships now afloat, and her striking power to those ordinary battleships will be as three to one. Britannia rules the waves—and that at which the battle of the Sea of Japan began. The wreath Nelson won does not seem to be withering, neither will the star of his gory grow dim, while John Bull and his sons are in their present frame of mind.

A lot of English cavalrymen at Aldershot got excited over a mock fight and rode down their opponents, smashing them with their swords. That was a regular old-time battle, but Bingo Bull's way of sham fighting—back to back—is safer.

Excuse those tears, which are shed for our esteemed friend, Mr. Jerry Hurley. The seasonal allowance is now $2,500, and he ought to get back to the "lamentations of Jeremiah," up to date.

When Byron Lott and Shabby hear that the sessional allowance has been increased they'll be more than ever that the bogus boys didn't work in Hastings and Frontenac.

Where is the man who used to sing at the good old summer time?
He's fanning himself and uttering words
That I can't use in this rhyme.
He crammed down the electrical snow
And longed for a warmer clime—
Just now he sees all sorts of charm
In the good old winter time.

There are no flies to vex you then,
No dust to fill your eyes,
No nails stick up in the wooden walks
To make you utter sighs.
The mosquitoes raise no bumps on you
And life is in its prime
Show me the jay wouldn't swap this day
For the good old winter time!

DOES TRANSIENT TRADERS' BY-LAW WORK INJUSTICE?

MR. W. H. RUSE DOES NOT THINK HE IS GETTING A SQUARE DEAL IN THIS CITY.

Mr. W. H. Ruse, a recent addition to Belleville's merchants, thinks he is not being treated exactly square by the authorities of this city. The fact, to be exact, it seems, are these: A short time ago Mr. Ruse came here and started a music store, selling musical instruments and acting as agent for a certain make of piano. He secured a six months lease of premises on Bridge St., the reason the said premises were not satisfactory for a year, he says, being that he wished to locate on Front St., and hoped to find suitable premises by the time his six months lease had expired. In addition to his six months lease, Mr. Ruse has advertising contracts with city papers, and a contract with a reputable firm of piano makers, empowering him to act as their agent in this territory. These facts, Mr. Ruse thinks, are sufficient to show his bona fides. Naturally, then, he was somewhat surprised when an information was laid against him by a rival musical instrument dealer, and he was told by the local authorities that he must forthwith pay the Transient Traders' tax, amounting to $25.00, or at once give up business in Belleville. It seems that, according to the terms of the Transient Traders' By-law, everyone who starts in business must, unless he has been on the city assessment roll for two years, pay the Transient Traders' tax.

In conversation with Mr. Ruse, The Intelligencer asked him if it was not a fact that, previously, a merchant paid the Transient Traders' tax, and continued in business here, the amount paid would be returned to him.

Mr. Ruse admitted that such was the case, but said the sum paid would be returned through rebate of city taxes. "In my case," he said, "on the stock I carry my taxes will be about $25.50 per year. You can see how long it will take, at that rate, to pay back my $250."

Mr. Ruse thinks an injustice is being done him. He is paying rent, paying employees and spending his money for necessaries of life in Belleville. Why he should be compelled to allow $25.00 of his money to be tied up for years he cannot see. He will not submit to it, he says, but will, if the tax is insisted on, move to some near-by village and still be in a position to cover the surrounding territory quite as well as at present.

DEATH OF MR. ALEX. HAROLD THIS MORNING.

WELL-KNOWN AND RESPECTED CITIZEN WHO HAD LIVED IN BELLEVILLE FOR 45 YEARS.

Mr. Alexander Harold, a well-known and respected citizen, passed away at an early hour this morning at the family residence, Dunbar St. For seven years the deceased had been an invalid, suffering from paralysis of the nerves. Mr. Harold, who was 73 years of age, was born at Ronaldsbay, Orkney Islands, Scotland. He came to Canada when about 30 years of age, and for the past 45 years had resided in this city. He was by profession a cooper, and for years worked with his brother, the late Mr. Thomas Harold. He was a member of St. Andrew's Church, and for over 30 years, a member of the St. Andrew's Society. Deceased was a quiet, industrious man, respected by all who knew him. An aged widow and a family of four sons survive, they are Donald, of Toledo, O.; Wm., of Minneapolis; Alexander, of Santiago, Cal., and James, at home.

Little Boy Drowned.

On the 23rd of June Willie Robertson, three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Robertson, was drowned at Carman, Man., falling in a creek. Mrs. Robertson was a former resident of this city, being a daughter of Mr. James Falconer.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

DEATH BY SUNSTROKE.

SUDDEN SUMMONS OF AN ENGLISHMAN IN HUNGERFORD TOWNSHIP.

Tweed, July 17. — (Special) — An Englishman named William H. Pattfield, who had been but seven weeks in Canada, died suddenly to-day on the farm of Robert H. Johnston, lot 5, concession 3, Hungerford, where he was assisting in harvesting. While pitching hay on a waggon in the field about 9 a.m. he was seen to fall. He arose and went to the barn and died shortly afterward. Coroner Parrell, of Tweed, was notified, but on viewing the remains deemed an inquest unnecessary.

Since coming to this country the deceased had been three weeks in Kingston and had been employed for three weeks in Tweed in the foundry of the Tweed Steel Trough and Machine Co., working at his trade of machinist. He was 29 years of age and hailed from Liverpool, where his relatives live. The remains were prepared for burial by Undertaker McNair, and will be buried at Tweed to-morrow.

TAMWORTH MAN WAS KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

DESTRUCTIVE FLUID'S DEADLY WORK THIS MORNING — JOHN DAFOE THE VICTIM.

Tamworth, July 19. — (Special) — About 7 a.m. to-day lightning struck a cow belonging to W. M. Dafoe, one mile from here, burning it with its contents, and burning John Dafoe, who was in the barn, to death. The remains were found about twelve o'clock.

For man or beast, Nerviline is a panacea for all pain and costs only 25c per bottle. Buy Nerviline to-day from your druggist.

A Traveller Returns.

Gordon Boyle, the lad who is accused of entering and purloining articles from No. 2 school, and who left the city some weeks ago, went out bost, returned home last evening. He will be brought up before the Magistrate to-morrow morning and in the meantime will, owing to his age, be allowed to remain at his home. Before leaving the city the lad went as far west as Vancouver, B.C.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her medicine but not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says. "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Bags "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. In every hand we are compliments on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect fit of the book. Nothing like seemingly been left out—nothing which has been included could very well have been "left out;" "complete and perfect" best describe it. Already we are hearing from its delivery in Belleville in places, in words of unstint- ed praise. We should have it—a copy for yourself and a copy for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great Reunion, and so we have planned. (Continued)

The facts brought out in the evidence and by the official of this Government are these: The Liberal candidates in West Hastings, one Byron O. Lott, and the Liberal candidate in Frontenac, one Thomas Pebbler, with others had entered into a conspiracy by which certain ballot-boxes were not delivered to these two—were to be stolen in the night and destroyed. The ballot-box subsequently delivered to this deputy returning officer by Byron O. Lott, Liberal candidate, was not given to him of certain deputy returning officers throughout the ridings who were to manipulate these bogus ballot-boxes. Our information is further stated, and I know it to be a fact, that this brother—for the deputy returning officer who pleaded this scheme was the brother of Byron O. Lott himself—Byron O. Lott had, on three occasions before this been the Liberal candidate for the Provincial Legislature of Ontario, for North Hastings, each time meeting with defeat. It was well-known fact in that part of the country that during the interval between these elections he was almost constantly at the seat of Government in the City of Toronto; he could be seen almost any day of the week in the corridors of the Parliament there, and hobnobbing with them around the House of Assembly. His attendance were not confined to Ministers, but he was bound to keep in good company, and on many occasions he might be seen with those men, and members of the Ontario Government, Mr. Ross, Mr. Sullivan, and no doubt received from them a part of the education which enabled him to perfect this scheme. At any rate, it is sworn to by his brother that he received such information as led him to perfect this box, he received that information from Mr. Ross and Mr. Sullivan, Ministers of the Province of Ontario. The ballot-box that was devised was certainly a timesaver in its way. It was worked with a catch on the side of the box, and by pressing it down the spring was released and the false compartment of the box would either one way or the other. That did not work well; it made too much noise, and it was too suspicious an article altogether. So they concluded that they would improve upon the plan, and the result of their improvements was the box which I produce to-day.

That box was produced in the following manner. Mr. Lott and Mr. Pebbler, of Victoria, in the County of Northumberland, in the Province of Ontario, and there entered into a bargain with a tinsmith to manufacture a certain ballot-box according to a design which they would furnish. They furnished a design, but the mechanic was unable to perfect the machine owing to the not having seen a genuine Canadian ballot-box. He desired that before he could perfect the machine. Accordingly these two worthies visited the Sheriff of the City of Kingston, who was the returning officer for the parliament, and procured from him one of the genuine ballot-boxes, and then came to Watertown and put into the hands of this mechanic. This ballot-box was exhibited in many places, in wards of smithies, and the tinsmith should have it—a copy for yourself and a copy for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

He thought that the ballot-box was "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. In every hand we are compliments on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect fit of the book. Nothing like seemingly been left out—nothing which has been included could very well have been "left out;" "complete and perfect" best describe it. Already we are hearing from its delivery in Belleville in places, in words of unstint- ed praise. We should have it—a copy for yourself and a copy for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Mr. Lott and Mr. Pebbler, of Victoria, in the County of Northumberland, in the Province of Ontario, and there entered into a bargain with a tinsmith to manufacture a certain ballot-box according to a design which they would furnish. They furnished a design, but the mechanic was unable to perfect the machine owing to the not having seen a genuine Canadian ballot-box. He desired that before he could perfect the machine. Accordingly these two worthies visited the Sheriff of the City of Kingston, who was the returning officer for the parliament, and procured from him one of the genuine ballot-boxes, and then came to Watertown and put into the hands of this mechanic. This ballot-box was exhibited in many places, in wards of smithies, and it took more than passing attention from me in regard to its remarks at that time, and the case in the Globe newspaper, after denouncing me, after saying that I was a blackguard and whomever might be guilty and after the newspaper had thus started in me for criminal libel and the evidence was coming out day after day, that newspaper suddenly turned up question that the whole scheme originated with the Liberal party, that it had been worked out by the Liberal party and that the Conservative party had nothing to do with it; except to discover the crime, bring it to light and bring to its punishments which it had been making efforts to do for years.

An hon. member. That's characteristic of the Globe.

Mr. Foster. Yes, it is characteristic of the Globe. It very frequently does that—say one thing and then back the next. But, after the newspaper had started me as to showing that the cross-over was nearly six inches from the centre, I was in at an angle of 2 degrees, and that the cross-over was at an angle of 14 degrees; and the length of the slope and the length of top is the same on every box, 2½ inches. The cross-over of her box was 2½ inches, and mine often been counselled upon by those who knew how to use the knife.

Mr. Jordan found by actual measurement that the cross-over was nearly six inches from the centre. I was in at an angle of 2 degrees, and that the cross-over was at an angle of 14 degrees. Mr. Jordan has made some experiments for the purpose of correcting faulty or defective action, and from an analysis of Lou Dillon's mile trotting at Readville and prints in the experiments at San Jose he has made some interesting deductions. She was moving at a 2.10 gait.

AFTERWARDS.

They carried him softly off the train
And into the ambulance,
While on his face dwelt a look of pain
With misery in each glance.

The skilful surgeon felt his pulse,
And then he shook his head;
Another such experience,
He said, and he'd be dead.

With wide-eyed wonder at the sight
The passing crowd stood still,
Who was this poor, unlucky wight
Who seemed so weak and ill?

They told us, sir, a man enquired at last,
Unto the surgeon there,
Why are your services required?
What ails the young man there?

Why gasps he painfully for breath?
Has he been wounded sore?
Has he been stricken unto death
In some fierce, bloody war?

Or has he by some fell disease
Been laid upon this couch?
Has he been cut by sundry knives,
Or has he got a grouch?

Has some one broken all his bones,
As to his work he went,
That makes him vent such hollow groans,
And sook so weak and spent?

Well, when they paused to catch their breath
They heard that surgeon say:
"At any rate, they tired to death;
He's had a holiday."

The young lady who was out walking almost as ill dropped into an ice cream saloon with her young man.
"Yes," said she, "a dish of ice cream relaxes the heart of my heart, but two dishes-oh, two dishes! makes me feel as though I could love on and on for ever!"

A cool customer—the iceman.

When the heat is intense and you feel like a rag,
When all energy's gone and you're weary;
You'll find much relief by imagining that You're sailing far northward again, Deary.

It now turns out that the Twelfth of July flag incident in London was greatly exaggerated. According to the Advertiser the incident consisted merely in a drunken man grabbing at an American flag which was hanging from a hotel balcony. He was punched by a bystander and thereupon desisted. There was no crowd, no disturbance, and the flag was not molested. "Flag intolerance," says the London Advertiser, "is the last offence that can be charged against the London people and the citizens of London are grossly libelled by the story given currency."

"Sometimes," says the man who lives on the next block, "the preachers of to-day expose the family skeleton."

Canada has another lot of highly undesirable immigrants on its hands in the Molokans, who reached Winnipeg lately, clad in long coats, long tunics streaming down under their vests, and long boots. These picturesque trainps were on their way to Los Angeles, where a colony of their countrymen has been established for two years, and are now stranded in Winnipeg. The Canadians are the followers of a religion unique to themselves, whose their name, and in many ways they are a relation of the Doukhobors though lacking some of the good points of the latter. They come from Kars, in Russia, near Siberia and adjacent to the native land of Peter Veregin's people. For centuries they lived a barbarous existence, like the Russian moujiks and Cossacks. Their transformation was effected by the missionary labors of a single man, Simon Dentenko, who introduced The Bible among them about 100 years ago. The Bible is their religion, complete and entire. There are no priests, no clergymen, no churches. They unite for service in the best house in the village and the exercises consist only in the singing of hymns.

Forged Money Order.

Toronto, July 19.—After several months of waiting and inquiry on the part of Inspector Henderson of the local service, George Clennells was arrested yesterday on a charge of stealing a money order and forging a name thereto. In March last, Clennells, who is an Englishman, was boarding at 228 West Richmond with a chum, B. Langdon. After the latter had gone, a money for £1 10s arrived from England. It is claimed that Clennells opened the letter and forged Langdon's name, securing the amount the order called for.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Make Healthy Women.

Upon being taken into the stomach, the various ingredients are absorbed by the blood, and then find their way to every organ and tissue.

Some reach the uterine system. These allay inflammation, stop all drains on the system, and make the women regular.

Some strengthen the stomach. They help digestion and increase the appetite.

Others get on the bowels. They cure constipation.

Other ingredients stimulate the liver and kidneys in carrying off impurities from the system.

Others reach the nerves. These tone up the nervous system and supply vital energy; thereby curing the nervousness, irritability, and melancholy, to which so many women are subject.

The full effect of all the medicaments in the tablets is to arouse the entire female system to recovered life and vigor.

Improvement is noticed the first week.

Moran of the Lady Letty

By FRANK NORRIS,

Author of "The Octopus," "The Pit," Etc.

Copyright, 1898, by S. S. M'Clure Company

Last of all, a Chinaman cut a hole through the "core" and, actually decending into the hold of the ship, stripped away the spermaceti, clear as crystal, and packed it into buckets, which were hauled up on the junk's deck. The work occupied some two or three days. During this time the Dutch Milliner was keeled over to nearly twenty degrees by the weight of the dead monster. However, neither Wilbur nor Moran made protest. The Chinamen would do as they pleased. That was said and signed. And they did not release the schooner until the whole had been emptied of all sunken blubber, spermaceti and bone.

At length, on the afternoon of the third day, the exploits of the junk, whose name was Hoang, presented himself upon the quarter deck. He was naked to the waist, and his light brown torso was gleaming with oily real sweat. His cue was coiled like a snake around his neck, his kitchen knife forty feet distant. The beachcombers were bolstering the log sail. Hoang was at the steering oar.

"Get that stuff aboard," she commanded quietly.

"That!" exclaimed Wilbur, pointing to the lump.

Moran's blue eyes were beginning to gleam.

"Yes, and do it before the Chinamen see you."

"But—but I don't understand."

Moran stepped to the quarter deck, unslung the hammock in which Wilbur slept and tossed it to him.

"Heave it up in that. I'll pass you a line, and we'll haul it aboard. Godsend, those certain powder have got smells enough of their own without noticing this. Hurry, mate. I'll talk afterward."

Wilbur went over the side and, standing as best he could upon the slippery carcass, dug out the lump and hoisted it up in the hammock.

"Hoh!" exclaimed Moran, with sudden exultation. "There's a lot of it. That's the biggest lump yet. I'll be damned. Is that all there is, Wilbur? Look carefully." Her voice had dropped to a whisper.

"Yes, yes; that's all. Careful now when you haul up. Hoang has got his eye on you, and so have the rest of them. What do you call it anyhow? Why are you so particular about it? Is it worth anything?"

"I don't know—perhaps. We'll have a look at it anyway."

Moran leaned over stuff aboard, and Wilbur followed.

"Never!" he exclaimed with half closed eyes. "It's like the story of Samson and the dead lion—the sweet coming from the strong."

The schooner seemed to swim in a bath of perfumed air. The membrane of the nostril fairly reveled in the sensation. Moran unleased the hammock and, going down upon one knee, examined the lump attentively.

"It didn't seem possible," Wilbur heard her saying to herself, "but there can't be any mistake. It's the stuff, right enough. I've heard of such things, but this—this is the first rose to her feet, tossing back her hair.

"Well," said Wilbur, "what do you call it?"

"The thing to do now," returned Moran, "is to get clear of here as quickly as we possibly can and take this stuff with us. I can't stop to explain now, but it's big, big, mate. It's big as the Bank of England."

Those beachcombers are right on to the game, I'll be bound," said Wilbur. "Look, they're weighing us. This stuff would smell across the ocean."

"But the Dutch Milliner. There's a bit of wind, thank heaven, and we can do four knots to their one, just let us get clear once."

Moran drawed the hammock back into the cabin and, returning to the deck, helped Wilbur to get away the last trifling tackle. The schooner righted slowly to an even keel. Meanwhile the log sail had set its one big sail and its crew had run out the sweeps. Hoang took the steering sweep into the crook of his arm, and Moran rested sight across the Bertha's bows some fifty feet ahead.

"They're watching us, right enough," said Wilbur.

"Up sail, mate—all!" ordered Moran. The pair set the fore and main sails with great difficulty. Moran took the wheel, and Wilbur eased off the log-sail cast off the line by which the schooner had been tied up to one of the whale's flukes.

"Cut it!" cried the girl—"Don't stop to coax cut!"

There was a ball from the beachcombers, the port sweeps dipped and the junk bore up nearer.

"Hurry!" shouted Moran. "Don't mind them! We are after bigger fish—what's the trouble? Something's boiling her." The schooner listed slowly to starboard and settled by the head.

"All clear!" cried Wilbur.

"There's something wrong!" exclaimed Moran. "She's settling forard." Hoang hailed the schooner a second time.

"We're still settling," called Wilbur from the bows. "What's the matter?"

"Matter that she's taking water," answered Moran wrathfully. "She's started something below, what with all that lifting and dashing and tricing up."

Wilbur ran back to the quarter deck.

"This is a bad fix," he said to Moran. "These chaps are coming aboard again. They're on to something, alsi, of course, at just this moment she begins to leak."

"They are after that ambergris," said Moran between her teeth. "Smelt it, of course—the wrinkles!"

"Ambergris?"

"The stuff we found in the whale. That's ambergris."

"Well?"

"Well!" shouted Moran, exasperated. "Do you know that we have found a lump that will weigh close to 250 pounds, and do you know that ambergris is selling in San Francisco at $40 an ounce? Do you know that we have picked up nearly $150,000 right out here in the ocean and are in a fair way to lose it all?"

"Can we run for it?"

"Run for it in a boat that's taking water like a sieve! Our duty's gone. Suppose we got clear of the junk and the Bertha sank? Then what? If we only had our crews aboard; if we only were ten to their dozen—if we were only six—by Jupiter, I'd fight them for it!"

The two enormous red eyes of the junk loomed alongside and stood over into the Bertha's waist. Hoang and seven of the coolies swarmed aboard.

"What now?" shouted Moran, coming forward to meet them, her sword knotting her flashing eyes together. "Is this ship yours or mine? We've done your dirty work for you. I want you clear of my deck." Wilbur stood at her side, uncertain what to do, but ready for anything she should attempt.

"I think you catchum something, smellum pretty big," said Hoang, his fierce grin showing white teeth. Hoang and seven of the coolies swarmed aboard.

"I catchum nothing—nothing but plenty bad stink," said Moran, "No, you don't!" she exclaimed, putting herself in Hoang's way as he made for the cabin. The other beachcombers came crowding up. Wilbur even thought he saw one of them loosening his hatchet in his belt.

"This ship's mine!" cried Moran, backing to the cabin door. Wilbur followed her, and the Chinamen closed down upon the pair.

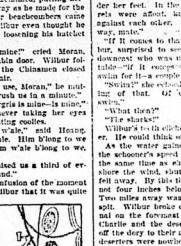

"It's not catch now, Moran," he said, tersely. "They'll rush us in a minute."

"But the ambergris is mine—is mine," she answered, never taking her eyes from the confronting coolies.

"We findum whale," said Hoang. "You no find whale. Him b'long to we. Everything in um whale b'long to we, savey?"

"No; you promised us a third of everything you found."

At the confirmation of the moment it occurred to Wilbur that it was quite possible that at least two-thirds of the ambergris did belong to the beachcombers by right of salvage. After all, it was the beachcombers who had found the whole. But he never remembered afterward whether or no he said as much to Moran at the time. If he did, she had been fired to it, in a fury of wrath and desperation suddenly blazed in her blue eyes. Standing at her side, Wilbur could hear her teeth grinding upon each other. She was filled to all danger, animated only by a sense of injustice and imposition.

Hoang uttered a sustence in Cantonese. One of the coolies jumped forward, and Moran's fat met him in the face and brought him to his knees. Then came an rush Wilbur had foreseen. He had just time to catch a glint of Moran at grapples with Hoang when a little hatchet glinted over his head. He struck out savagely into the dark of the cabin—and then opened his eyes to find Moran washing the blood from his hair. He lay on the deck with his head in the hollow of her arm. Everything was quiet. The beachcombers were gone.

"Hello! What—what—what is it?" he asked, springing to his feet, his head swimming and smarting. "We had a row, didn't we? Did they hurt you? Oh, I remember. I got a cut over the head—one of the hatchet men. Did they hurt you?"

"They got the loot," she growled. "Filthy vermin! And, just to make everything pleasant, the schooner's sinking."

CHAPTER VIII.

"SINKING?" exclaimed Wilbur.

Moran was already on her feet. "We'll have to beach her," she cried, "and we're six miles out! Up, you lib, mate!" The two set the jib, flying jib and staysails.

The fore and main sails were already drawing, and these all the special of her canvas the Bertha raced back toward the shore.

But by the time she was within the head of the bay her stern had settled down to an extent that the first mate of clear of the water, the low-spirit pulling high into the heavens. Moran was at the wheel, Wilbur crouched close beside her, ever and anon testing the strength of water that lay between the schooner and the shore.

"She'll never make it in the world," she shouted to Wilbur, as the first wash of the water in the cabin under her feet. In the hold empty beer kegs were afloat, knocking loose against each other. "We're in a bad way, mate."

"If it comes to that," returned Wilbur, surprised to see her thus easily surrendering to circumstances, "we'll take—if it comes to that, we can swim for it—a couple of planks."

"Swim!" she cried, with a little blaze of fire in her eyes. "Of course we could swim."

"What then?"

"He sharks!"

Wilbur made no clicked empty teeth. He could think of nothing to say.

As the water gained between decks the schooner settled accordingly, and at the same time as she proceeded the shore she wind, shut off by the land, fell away. Then, as the sea rose, it was not four inches below the stern sill. Two miles away the Bertha was hard aplit. Wilbur broke out a distress signal on the foremast in the hope that Charlie and the Dutch Milliner would put off the duty to their assistance, but the deserters were nowhere in sight.

"What became of them?" he demanded suddenly of Moran. She was crouched to the steward with her head. "Still lying outside."

Twenty minutes passed. Once only Moran spoke.

"When she begins to go," she said, "we'll go with a rush. Jump ready with a life buoy for me. I'll be right behind you."

The two had given up all hope. Moran held grimly to the wheel as a mere matter of form. Wilbur stood at her side, his hands deep down into his pockets. The eyes of both were fixed on the yellow line of the distant beach. Up and up the water rose. There was an odd smile.

"We've a strange pair to die together," she said. Wilbur met her eyes an instant, but, finding no reply, put his chin down to his chest. He could not have told her she might well say that.

"A strange pair to die together." Moran rose suddenly to her height in the excitation.

"Now, you confess you have lived together," she finished and smiled again.

"And yet," said Wilbur, "these last few days—these last few days—since we have been through a good deal—together. I don't know," he went on slowly, "that I knew myself that I've been white. I've had—I've been impatient, perhaps, and I've been sorry. I've had let her slight well say that.

"A strange pair to die together," she repeated, and, with her hands still in her pockets, she finished and smiled again.

"And yet," said Wilbur, "

FLESH EATING BIRDS.

They Find Their Prey by Sight, Not by Sense of Smell.

A study of the habits of flesh eating birds shows that if they possess the sense of smell at all it is not sufficiently acute to enable them to use it in finding food.

All observers are agreed that when a carcass is hidden by never so slight a screen it is safe from the attacks of vultures and other carrion seekers, but the most remarkable proof of the ineffectiveness of the sense (if it exists at all) is afforded by experiences which Dr. Guillemard was good enough to relate to me. Many times it has happened, he tells me, that, having shot a wild beast or other game, which was too heavy to carry home, he has disemboweled it and hidden the carcass in the hole of an "ant heap."

On returning with natives to carry it to camp he has found a circle of vultures standing round the spot where the offal had been thrown, completely unaware of the carcass within a few yards of their beaks. Of observations proving the possession of the sense I know none unless we are willing to accept as evidence the belief which is very general among fanciers that birds are attached to the smell of anise and the similar belief of gamekeepers in some parts of the country that they are attracted by valerian. It is said that pigeons may be prevented from deserting the dovecot by smearing their bases with oil of anise. Poachers are supposed to lure hen pheasants from a wood by moistening gutpercha with tincture of valerian.—Nature.

WAIT FOR AN APPETITE.

Do Not Eat a Meal Unless You Are Really Hungry.

It is not wise to eat unless there is a real, natural hunger. It is far better to miss a meal than to eat without an appetite.

A prolific cause of chronic indigestion is the habit of eating at all simply because it is mealtime. To eat when not hungry is to eat without relish, and food taken without relish is worse than wasted. Without relish the salivary glands do not act, the gastric fluids are not freely secreted and the best of foods will not be digested. Many perfectly harmless dishes are gleefully condemned for no other reason than they were eaten without relish and due lunaliversity.

Hunger makes the plainest food enjoyable. It rouses sympathetic attention and co-operation of all the digestive fluids—the sources of ptyalin, pepsin, trypsin, etc.—without a plentiful supply of which no foods can be perfectly digested.

Wait for an appetite if it takes a week. Fasting is one of the saving graces. It has a spiritual significance only, and is a great physical and physiologic importance. If breakfast is a bore or lunch a matter of indifference eat one or both of them out. Wait for distinct and unmistakable hunger and then eat and eat. If you do not you need ask few questions as to the propriety and digestibility of what you eat, and it need not be prodigested.

Baltimore Crabs.

The price of a deviled crab in Baltimore runs quite a scale. Beginning with 15 cents in the fashionable hotels, it drops to 10 at the ordinary restaurant and then to 5 when bought from the greasy basket of the odd mustered crab man. In the tiny Italian cook shops deviled crabs can be enjoyed at the rate of 3 cents each, and in the saloons the water front front they are often stacked up in a huge dish on the free lunch counter. With all these opportunities for feasting on the well seasoned "delshi" it is little wonder that Baltimoreans are considered the crab connoisseurs of the nation.

Honest Retrievement.

Let the touch of misfortune offered to those who stumble be freighted with such buoyancy, strength and encouragement that it will prove an impetus. It is often in the establishing of one's footing that the balance is lost—for the lack of poise or some indefinable something there is infinitely more credit in honest retrievement than in the event of natural being and continuance.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Perfectly Safe.

"Bridget, I have to go out this evening, and I want you to see that your mistress gets this note without fail as soon as she comes in."

"Yiss, sor, I'll just leave it in the pocket of the trousers ye've taken off. She is sure to go through them."—London Tatler.

Man's Nerves.

Not so very long ago a man who admitted the possession of nerves would have been regarded as an effeminate milksop. Nowadays, however, he is a much more manly sufferer from the complaint than is womankind.—Country Modes.

Friendly Encouragement.

Pearl—All of their friends advised them to elope instead of being married in the regular way. Ruby—I don't see why their friends should care. Pearl—Oh, yes! Elopers never expect wedding presents.

The Real Difficulty.

Flushy—It must take remarkable skill to raise a check. Hardup—Oh, I don't know! It's how to get hold of it is the first place that I can't see through.

You cannot dream yourself into a character. You must hammer and forge one for yourself.

TICKLE THE TROUT.

Do It Cleverly, and You Can Gather Them in Easily.

I once spent my vacation in the little village of Schoenwald, in the Black forest. One day the son of the proprietor of the inn at which I was staying said that he was going out to catch some trout and asked me if I would accompany him. He was in his bare feet, his trousers rolled up, and he had a small, very much elongated bag slung by a string over his shoulder instead of a creel.

The bag had a square opening on the top side, and he said that he would show me how to catch trout without tackle. We went down to a small brook running through a meadow near the house. He partly filled the bag with water, then, wading a few yards up stream, stooped down and carefully felt under the long grass which hung over the bank. After awhile he lifted a nice brook trout out of the water and put it into the bag and then wading a little farther repeated the operation and took in all some twenty trout out of the brook.

He told me that he caught the fish by feeling carefully around under the grass at the edge of the bank, and when he felt one he tickled and stroked it until by a quick movement he could insert his thumb and forefinger into the fish's gills and then lift it out of the water. I went with him and saw him catch fish in this way several times.

THE CHEEK BONE.

It Is Said to Be the Most Sensitive Part of Our Anatomy.

"What is the most sensitive part of our anatomy?" asked an hungry convert.

"The tip of the tongue," said one.

"The finger tips," said another.

"Wrong; both wrong. It is the small patch of skin over the cheek bone that is our most sensitive part," said the wory convert, "and in smoothing it out we always test our work on that patch of skin."

He took up a large ball en wh.n he had been working.

"Here," he said. "Try this. Is it smooth?"

The two visitors tossed the ball in the air and declared it to be smoother than satin or cream.

"Now," said the carver, "test it with your finger tips and your tongue."

These tests were made, and the verdict was given, "still smooth."

"Now test it with your cheek bone."

The visitors in turn rubbed the ivory ball delicately over their cheek bones and uttered exclamations of amazement.

"By Jove, it feels rough!" they said. "The cheek bone must be sensitive."

"Sensitive?" echoed the ivory cutter. "Why, the cheek bone is the only part of us that can lay claim to any sensitiveness at all."

CHEWING THE HOP.

It First Causes Exhilaration and Then Drowsiness.

"Where hops are raised hop cheweys exist," said a farmer. "The habit of hop chewing produces first a pleasant exhilaration and afterward a delicious drowsiness. It is impossible to get drunk on hops, no matter how many you chew.

"In hop growing countries the pickers are forbidden to chew the hops. The pickers, indeed, working piecework, are sensible enough not to chew them, for the drowsiness and jollity that hops bring on make fast picking impossible.

"I have been told that there are tramps who know various herbs that, being chewed in quantities, produce a have no doubt this is correct. I have myself seen tramps drink alcohol out of alcohol stoves, browse on a lot of cans and gasoline out of street lamps. Even cologne, were it not so hard to get, would be eagerly consumed by the tramp, for cologne will produce intoxication.

"If the same foolish conceit and jollity and afterward the same stupor and the same horrible sickness are caused by cologne or gasoline as by whisky, what is the difference which of them we drink?"—Exchange.

Theft of the Gainsborough Picture.

Adam Worth was one of the few men who ever eluded the Pinkertons. Worth stole millions on both sides of the Atlantic, ending his career for years and died in poverty in London. One of his famous exploits was the stealing of the famous picture of the Duchess of Devonshire, by Gainsborough, valued at $50,000. He carried the picture in a false bottom of a trunk for years and finally gave it up after some negotiations with the owners.

When Love Was Young.

She (with emotion)—Do you really care for me just as much as when we were first engaged? He (with cool deliberation)—Yes, lovey, every single bit as much.

And at the first this conversation took place they had been engaged just fourteen hours, eight minutes and twenty-five seconds.

Very Green.

"He certainly seems likely to live to a green old age."

"Why, he has already attained it. He's just married a girl twenty-five years his junior, and he thinks she loves him for himself alone."

Known by the Money He Keeps.

A fool and a balance in bank soon part company.—Memphis News-Scimitar.

KEEP COOL, GOOD PEOPLE.

DON'T OVEREAT, DON'T OVERDRINK, DON'T OVERWORK, AND, ABOVE ALL, DON'T WORRY.

Keep cool.

Very good advice, to repeat, but not easily to be followed at this season of the year, when the mercury threatens to lift the thermometer off the hook, and just what can do more to aid moderating his or her personal discomfort. Not only is such course possible; it is one's duty to do so.

Don't overwork. Don't overplay. And above and beyond all things, don't worry.

Overwork, overplay and worry, all tax your already hard worked heart, and it it tells you what shall profit us in your pecuniary gains or aesthetic triumphs? What will you have to worry about?

The task of work performed by the heart varies according to age, on the healthy lines, may be set to perform 70 complete beats a minute from the time you are born to the time you cease to be. Figure it out, seventy beats a minute, 4,200 an hour, 100,800 a day, 36,792,000 a year, or in the 40 sixty years 2,207,520,000 beats. Suppose your lungs supply through the oxygenators, the lungs, and through your system every half minute all the oxygen necessary to do so a fierce about atmospheric pressure equal to that exerted by a column of mercury, from 29.9 to 7.87 inches in height. And it does this work without cessation, and if it does not do it well you suffer; if it does not do it, you die.

Severe exertion, physical or mental shocks, nerve tension, fretting, anxiety, all tell on the heart. The best weather does not assist its work closely, and you help it.

Don't fuss. Of course you don't do not suppose don't try to do what days work in one day. Work is not the end of life. Don't make work part of your play. Don't wear wrinkles into your brow, and scowlness into your tongue because there's no room in the cook stove, or a chair out of the parlor has got another leg. Keep them all winter. Eat sparingly of flesh foods; avoid stimulants, and don't eat too much of anything. Don't exercise too much comfort to style. Don't tax yourself out by keeping the children from enjoying life that they always have as if they had gas connection or a piano key.

Don't spoil your appetite. Most of us overeat, especially in the hot weather. Don't overdress. Be sensible; wear the same, and try simple ways of living. Don't digest a lot of hot or poisonous foods. They are worse than wasted. They spoil your digestion and cause you discomfort. Keep them till

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $6, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

BAKESHOP FIRE DID $300 WORTH OF DAMAGE.

GOOD WORK OF FIRE BRIGADE IN BLAZE YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

The blaze at the bakeshop of Mr. F. B. Harris, yesterday afternoon, did considerable damage before it was extinguished. It is thought to have originated from a stove which was used during the day in the shop, and not to burn out. The fire department of a firm hold upon the roof, which had to be cut away considerably, on the west side especially, before they could be subdued. The loss will be in the neighborhood of $300, which is covered by insurance in the London Mutual. The firemen were called to the scene after the alarm and did good work in saving the building.

FORMER BELLEVILLE BOY WAS BADLY INJURED.

CHARLES FLYNN, A TRICK SWIMMER, MET WITH A PROBABLY FATAL ACCIDENT IN NEW YORK SWIMMING BATHS.

(The New York Herald gives the following particulars of an accident which befel a former Belleville boy, who left here seven years ago, being a son of the late Frank Flynn, a former popular resident of this city. The accident is all the more regrettable owing to the fact that the injured young man, in company with five brothers and sisters, was formerly one of the Old Boys' Reunion. Friends of the family tell us that, under present circumstances, it is very unlikely that any of the family will come to the Reunion this year.)

Charles Flynn, of No. 1,199 Third avenue, is in J. Hood Wright Hospital, suffering from total paralysis of his legs and arms. His condition is considered very critical.

"Flynn, an expert swimmer, was trying to outdo his friends in aerobatic feats from a springboard in baths at 155th street and the Hudson River last evening. After executing many difficult tricks, he attempted to turn a back double somersault from the board. He struck on one corner of it, and when pulled out of the water was unconscious.

"James R. Vinson was drowned in the same baths an hour earlier. It is believed he struck his head in a deep dive.

JAPS ARE NOT ANGELS

Baron Hayashi Says They Will Not Moderate Terms.

Heaps of Money in the Treasury and War Program Is Being Carried Out Just as Always Planned—Vladivostock Closer Than in Sight — Japanese Army Is Now Prepared to Encompass It—White Sisters Protected.

London, July 19.—Baron Hayashi, the Japanese Minister here, said to the representative of the Associated Press yesterday that Russia had appointed good men as peace plenipotentiaries. Nevertheless M. White and Baron Rosen had not inspired Japan with confidence in a favorable outcome of the negotiations.

"We do not know," the Minister added, "what powers have been delegated to them, and after the events of the past eighteen months Japan puts faith only in accomplished facts. Tiny terms will be communicated only at the conference. Then we will discover what powers the Russian plenipotentiaries possess."

The Associated Press correspondent suggested that the general opinion prevailed that Japan's terms will be moderate.

"I cannot see where people get such an idea," replied the Minister, "the public evidently misjudges the Japanese temper."

Minister Hayashi intimated that Japan was ready to continue the war unless the necessary suitable terms. He pointed to the fact that practically the entire sum realized by the Loan Bonds was unexpended, and said the capture of the Island of Sakhalin was not precipitated by the approach of the conference, but was a natural sequence of the Japanese campaign, the plans for which had not been altered since Russia acceded to a conference.

Vladivostock's Doom In Sight.

London, July 19.—The Tokio correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says that a Japanese army has been landed north of Vladivostock, and that a complete encirclement of the fortress is imminent.

White Is Incensed.

St. Petersburg, July 19.—Evidence of the Government's consternation over internal conditions is found yesterday in a slight recession from the position it assumed in respect of the Allied claims against the congress. It practically was decided yesterday morning to let the reactionists in Moscow with their serious moderation.

Apparently made Monday to satisfy M. M. White, chief peace plenipotentiary, the definitions decided by the grand ducal party, which would prevent the statesmen from obtaining a cessation of hostilities in the Far East save on terms impossibly advantageous to Russia.

M. White lent himself to the project reprovingly. That is, he offered in with the position that no peace proposal injurious to Russian national pride would be considered for a moment by the representatives of Emperor Nicholas.

Shortly after getting utterance to his statement, M. White, it is reported on credible authority, criticised bitterly in private the heads of the faction who had brought to pass him in a false position. He saw the hopelessness of

It impossible for him to retain a peace treaty. He forced interviews with Emperor Nicholas this Sunday and told them in plain words they must keep their hands off his policies.

It is asserted confidently M. White knew that warning to men in high places, and even that he did not stop short of the Emperor himself in his public interviews. M. White said bluntly he was the servant of the Czar, and would obey orders; privately, he virtually told Emperor Nicholas there must be no hopeful Interference with his purpose, since he was to be held chiefly responsible for the outcome of the Washington conference.

FELL TO HIS DEATH.

William Summerfield Killed at Niagara Falls—Knocked Off a Scaffold By Plank and Drops 150 Feet.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 19.—William Summerfield, a carpenter, who lived on Perry street, met with an awful death yesterday. He was working on a scaffold near the top of the cliff, and after men were hoisting planks to him with ropes. One plank slipped from the rope and struck him, knocking him off the scaffold. He fell a hundred and fifty feet, landed on his head, and was instantly killed. He leaves a widow and an infant child.

THE WEATHER.

Hot All Over Ontario — Some Former Hot Spells Recalled.

Toronto, July 19.—Yesterday "Old Prime," August of the Observatory, reported 92 degrees in the shade as the highest temperature here of the day.

The temperature has never been 100 degrees in Canada, yet, but it came mighty near it fifty-one years ago. On August 1st, 1854, the mercury soared to 99.62, but there is nobody handy who recollects it. To-day, however, was exceptionally warm weather, even at a registration of 92 degrees. It doesn't happen every year. Looking back through the weatherman's cook book, however, it is discovered that July 14 last year was warmer than yesterday, for it was 93 degrees; in 1901 and 1902 there was a temperature of 91 and 94. In 1901 we had a sizzler on June 27, with 91, and it was the same on September 12, 1894. For ten years before that the mercury kept out of the 90's, but in 1902, on July 28, it registered 93. Other high temperatures above are July 16, 1887, 97 degrees; July 1, 1875, 96 degrees; July 12, 1868, 93 degrees; August 3, 1864, 94 degrees; July 6, 1862, 95 degrees; July 17, 1856, 96 degrees.

Hot All Over Ontario.

We are not the only people getting a little thinner. Windsor singed a bit at 94 yesterday and was the warmest place in Canada. All over Ontario it was hot. They had it at 90 in Guelph, in the Eastern States and all along the Atlantic coast the warm weather was very busy. It was 88 in Washington, 90 in Harvard, 86 in New York, 96 Boston 94, Chicago 94 and these are some of the places Toronto people go to escape the heat. As usual, Northwest Canada has something to distinguish itself. In Winnipeg the people were comfortably awaiting another heat wave with the temperature at 78. In Calgary it was only 74, 87 ordinary summer weather in the Territories.

Many Prostrations and Deaths.

New York, July 19—Following are the maximum temperatures officially recorded in the large cities, with the known cases of prostrations:

	Deaths.	Prostrations.
New York..... 96	190	26
Philadelphia.. 93	59	5
Baltimore 92	6	..
Washington .. 97	6	..
Boston 94	9	1
Pittsburg..... 93	18	5
Buffalo 88	3	1

In the table the total prostrations reported in the large cities, with the known deaths, are:

These figures by no means represent the sum of human suffering, for perhaps many victims who collapsed at their homes, office or workshop were privately attended.

WOMAN SHOOTS TO KILL

Obnoxious Toronto Man Persisted in Coming to Her Home.

Mrs. Kyle of Ingersoll Uses Revolver With Deadly Effect on David McGee — First Shot Missed But Two Others Took Effect — McGee Ran Ten Yards and Died on the Sidewalk a Moment Later.

Ingersoll, July 19.—Because he persisted in coming to her home and attempting to interrupt the happiness of her life, Mrs. Emilton Kyle, wife of Robert Kyle, an employe of the Ingersoll Condensing factory, shot and killed David McGee just outside her house at 7.30 this morning. Three shots were fired from her revolver. The first missed, the other took effect. McGee dropped on the sidewalk after running ten yards and died a moment later.

"I've Shot a Man."

Mrs. Kyle immediately walked to police headquarters, half a mile from her home, and gave herself up. "I've shot a man," was her exclamation, as she rushed into Chief Wright's office. She is now lying dead on the road near my house. I'm sorry, but I had to do it. He would not stay away from my home and to protect myself I was forced to do it."

The chief promptly placed her under arrest, and, accompanied by Detective Corner, set out for the scene of the tragedy. Arriving there they viewed the remains of McGee lying on the sidewalk. He had a bullet in his head and another in the shoulder. Death was practically instantaneous. The body was taken to Harvard's undertaking rooms and prepared for burial. A jury of inquest viewed them, and adjourned to meet last evening.

Victim a Toronto Man.

The murdered man is a son of Mr. and Mrs. John McGee, of Toronto, who lived in Ingersoll for ten years ago. His family are highly respected but his life was not. For a time after leaving here he was sent to Woodstock Jail for assaulting Policeman McConnell here. Since that year he has been in the employ of the Toronto Electric Light Company. He was captured in Toronto a few days ago, sentenced to a term in prison. One month ago he escaped from prison and has been there ever since. He was not working, and was frequently to be seen around the Kyle home.

Robert Kyle, husband of the woman who stands accused of murder, when interviewed, yesterday, said:— "Three weeks ago Wednesday came to my home. I didn't want him around, but, seeing the state of affairs, I gave him food for two weeks. Then he began drinking and I ordered him away. He left, but was not at work in the factory. My wife was afraid of him, and he was wont to break in and smash our windows if she did not let him in the house.

Kept Doors Locked.

"For the last three days she had kept the doors locked, to keep him out. This morning she opened the doors to wash, and he (McGee) came in before I left for work. Mollie appeared. My wife tells me she told him to leave. He didn't go. She then went upstairs to the dresser and fired at him as he entered the door. The bullet missed him and he ran out on the walk. My wife went to the door and told him to go on. He began to return. She fired twice again and he dropped. I followed the revolver last Wednesday from Superintendent Knight, of our factory, that my wife might protect herself. I feared the fellow, as he had threatened me.

Both Kyle and his wife are well thought of. They have no family. The scene of the tragedy is a neatly kept frame house on the outskirts of the town. At noon Mrs. Kyle was remanded on the charge of murder. Both the accused and the murdered man were about 35 years of age.

Did Not Wilfully Kill.

The coroner's jury was out one hour and five minutes, and returned a verdict that David Magee came to his death from a wound in his head, caused by a bullet fired from a revolver in the hands of Mrs. E. Kyle, and that the said Mrs. E. Kyle did not wilfully kill the said David Magee, but fired the revolver in order to frighten him away."

Subsequently Mrs. Kyle was brought before Police Magistrate Morrison, when the charge of murder was altered, but on advice of her counsel, Mr. J. H. Hegler, she did not plead, and was remanded to Woodstock Jail until Monday, July 24th, at 10 a.m., when she will appear for preliminary hearing.

STRIKES BROTHER WITH SPADE.

Skull is Fractured and Assailant is In Jail at Stratford.

Stratford, July 19.—During a quarrel between two brothers, Richard and John Stewart, who reside in Logan, about two miles from Fullarton, the former, it is alleged, struck the latter on the forehead over the right eye with a spade, inflicting an ugly wound about three inches long and fracturing the skull.

The wounded man was able to walk to town, but is now in a precarious condition in the Stratford Hospital.

Richard Stewart was arrested and arraigned on the charge of committing the assault, and remanded to Stratford Jail pending the result of the injuries. The two brothers live on adjoining farms, all bachelors, lived together on a small farm.

The accused is 45 years of age, and is said to be somewhat weak-minded.

May Have Been Murdered.

Portage la Prairie, July 19.—The body of an old resident, Andrew Mc-Kay, aged 75, was found on Saturday in a condition which would indicate a violent death. He was in town on Saturday, and bought a new buggy, and in the evening left town with a man named Taylor, formerly a policeman, but who had been dismissed on charge of a criminal nature. Sunday morning Taylor called on C. Sinclair, and stated he had found the body of an old man in a hot stope. Sinclair investigated and found Henry's body, horribly battered.

Child Swallows Poison.

Essex, July 20.—A sad death occurred on the Middle road yesterday whereby Fred Eldridge lost his only child, Ola, a little girl of 18 months. Mrs. Eldridge, not being well on Tuesday, sent for Dr. Jenner of Essex, and while he was in the sick room, the little girl, in another room, climbed up to the table, on which was the doctor's medicine case. She took a vial containing morphine tablets, and at once took them to her playhouse outdoors, and when found, had put over two dozen in her mouth. Death resulted soon after.

Five Miners Blown to Pieces.

Des Moines, Ia., July 20.—Five miners were literally blown to pieces by the explosion of 25 pounds of dynamite in a storage powder house at the West Riverside coal mine yesterday morning. Heads, arms and legs were scattered around for a distance of 200 feet. No one knew of the explosion until the day shift came to work. Lightning is thought to have caused the explosion.

Collision at Frank.

Frank, N. W. T., July 20.—A collision occurred between two construction trains seven miles west of Cowley, on the Crow's Nest Railroad, near here, whereby E. Brown, one of the engineers, lost his life by the engine leaving the track.

Hurricane Destroys Harvest.

Madrid, July 20.—A hurricane has almost entirely destroyed the harvest in the Provinces of Saragossa and Caceres, thus adding immensely to the general distress.

Assembly Should Have Direct Relations With Czar.

Attempt on Procurator-General of the Holy Synod With a Revolver —Vice-Governor of Finland Target for Bomb-Thrower — Was Blown Off His Feet—Vladivostock Is Besieged and Sensational News Is Expected.

Moscow, July 20.—The zemstvo congress opened at midday yesterday in the residence of Prince Dolgorukoff.

The congress was attended by 225 delegates. Count Heyden, leader of the deputation, representing the congress recently received by the Emperor, presided.

M. Polovine, president of the organizing committee, had barely started a statement dealing with the obstacles placed in the way of the congress, announcing that Governor-General Kasloff had promised that there would be no recourse to exreme measures, when the chief of police with numerous commissaries and officials entered the room. The chief announced that the prefect had prohibited the meeting of the congress and ordered the seizure of the documents. Count Heyden protested against the proceedings, but the chief of police began taking the names of the delegates. Then cries were raised of: "Write down the whole of Russia." Many persons present who were not delegates to the congress requested that their names also be taken. The police then departed in order to draw up summonses and the sitting was resumed.

Bouligin Scheme Inadequate.

The sitting was resumed, and the scheme of a national assembly on the basis outlined by Bouligin, was decided over by M. Bouligin, Minister of the Interior, was minutely and critically discussed and announced as totally inadequate to remove Russian internal grievances.

Numerous resolutions embodying the foregoing points were adopted unanimously, as were also resolutions complaining of excessive administrative and police control of elections, and insisting that publicity be given to the proceedings of the proposed assembly, which should be in direct relations with the Emperor, without interference from the council of empire.

Attempt on Procurator General.

St. Petersburg, July 20—A circumstantial report of an attempt on the life of Constantine Petrovich Pobledonostseff, chief procurator of the Holy Synod, was current in St. Petersburg last night, but the Associated Press is unable to obtain confirmation of it. The authorities and even the police at the Tsarskoe-Selo Railway Station here, where the attempt is reported to have been made, disclaim al knowledge of any such happening. According to the report, as M. Pobledonostseff stepped from one of the coaches on the train from Tsarskoe-Selo, a man about 28 years old, rushed up with a revolver in his hand, but he was seized before he could shoot.

Governor Escapes Bomb.

Helsingfors, Finland, July 20.—Late yesterday afternoon an attempt was made to assassinate Vice-Governor Deutrich as he was leaving the Senate. The Vice-Governor had walked across the square, when suddenly, as he neared the police master's office, a man on the curb threw a bomb from a distance of 12 paces. The bomb fell short, but the Vice-Governor was blown off his feet by the terrific force of the explosion, which shattered the windows in the neighborhood for a distance of hundreds of yards. Vice-Governor Deutrich was hastily assisted to the police station. He was burned and otherwise injured about the legs and bled profusely, but his wounds are declared to be not fatal. The bomb-thrower was pursued by naval cadets, but escaped.

Vladivostock Is Besieged.

Tokio, July 20.—Sensational news is expected generally in consequence of a report that started Tuesday night as a rumor and gained weight steadily to the point of semi-official confirmation, the report being that the fall of Vladivostock was in sight and that a siege of that city had been begun by a new Japanese army. The war office this morning was non-committal as to the rumor, but it was commented on widely that the authorities did not deem it proper to utter a denial.

M. Witte's Departure.

St. Petersburg, July 20.—M. Witte's departure for Paris by the Northern Express yesterday, while a very demonstrative affair, nevertheless was the occasion for a remarkable demonstration in his honor. The compartment occupied by Russia's chief plenipotentiary was filled with flowers and the platform of the station was crowded by friends who bade him farewell and good luck in the great mission before him. The whole affair was a testimonial of the strength of M. Witte's personal following. Mme. Witte accompanied her husband.

TORPEDO FLOTILLA SHELLED.

Russians Attack Japs, But Were Forced to Retire Under Fire.

Tokio, July 20.—Vice-Admiral Kamimura reports that his flotilla of torpedo destroyers was shelled by the Russians at Yaliwan, the attacking force numbering about 200. The flotilla steamed and engaged the enemy after which cavalry was discovered retreating and was also shelled.

The flotilla also discovered a Russian cavalry patrol at Sunshin, and turned its guns upon them. The cruiser Chihaya shelled the Russian guard and signal station posted on a hill north of Geka, in the western extremity of Lashihpao, in northwestern Corea.

FOR THE KING'S PRIZE.

Shooting Was Good at 200 Yards, But There Was Falling Off at 500 and 600 Yard Ranges.

Bisley Camp, July 20.—(C. A. P.)—Shooting at 200 yards in the first stage of the King's Prize was good. Forty-seven competitors made possible, and 125 made thirty-fours. The 500 and 600-yards ranges of the first stage were shot off yesterday. The first two hundred in the first stage are entitled to fire at the 500-yards range in the second stage. The first hundred in the second stage proceed to the stage of 800, 900 and 1,000 yards.

In the King's Prize at 200 yards, Sergt. Simpson Tuesday made 31.

In the first stage of the King's Prize there are 16 scores of 100. Out of 102. The top score is 102, out of a possible 105.

King's Prize.

In the King's Prize at 500 yards the scoring yesterday morning was:

MORE heat from less fuel is what is looked for in a good boiler.

In the Oxford we have taken advantage of every scientific point that would add power and save fuel.

The ash pit is particularly spacious in our high base and is provided with an ash sifter which removes all dead ashes and leaves the coal so it can be shovelled back into the fire with the least trouble and no dust.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

Flues are made bell-shaped in first water section, and the upper walls of the fire pot are inclined inwards so as to give a large surface to the action of the fire. Write for our free book illustrating and explaining the Gurney Oxford steam and hot water apparatus. 1003

The Best Conditions for Hot Weather

How to avoid sunstroke and heat prostration is a very useful thing to know at times of tropical heat like the present. The main thing, scientific sharps say, is to maintain proper skin evaporation. In this connection some valuable hot weather advice, prepared by a medical expert, is given by the New York Herald, as follows:

Obviously, the more chance the skin has of disposing of excretory products and of maintaining a proper evaporation of perspiration the better will the surface be protected against external heat. Nature indicates this by increasing the activity of the sweat glands during warm weather. It is one of the most effective methods of protection against sunstroke. The moment this function is arrested there is danger. The victim of heat prostration always has a dry, hot skin. It has been shown by scientific experiment that during perspiration the body parts with three times as much of its internal heat as when the surface is comparatively dry.

It need not be said that clothing has very much to do with the comfort and safety of the individual under the varied conditions of outside temperature.

In hot weather the great point is to protect the body from external heat by light coverings and at the same time to favor rapid dispersion of internally caused temperature. Experience and experiment have quite effectually settled these points.

Not only the texture but the color of the fabric is taken into account. Cotton clothing is perhaps the most desirable for summer wear in this climate, loose and woollen coverings being next in efficiency. The lighter the weight of the material the better. Starched underwear is always uncomfortable, as it prevents exhalation. The wilted shirt is the every-day argument against stiffened and impermeable coverings. Tight clothing is an abomination at any time and a special source of danger in summer weather, the corset being a conspicuously defiant offender along these lines.

Colors differ in their power to absorb and reflect the heat of the sun's rays. White materials are always the coolest. Then come the colors in the order of their different cooling relations—yellow, red, green and blue, while black is at the end of the list.

Frequent bathing, and especially the frequent hygienic wash of the body with soap, will have much to do with keeping the skin in good condition, as also the regular and systematic change of underclothing, the regular airing of bed linen and the like. Above all, the man who wishes to be as cool as possible tries to do so by shunning all extra exertion.

The necessity for lighter diet in summer is another thing that is not sufficiently considered. During the torrid spell of last year a day should be enough for any healthy man, and as for water, the more he can satisfy his thirst by it the better can he supply the needs of his skin, and the safer will he be from sunstroke. All alcoholic drinks have this great drawback, that those who are most addicted to their use are the most frequent subjects of sunstroke.

Fielding's Slurs.

Hon. Mr. Fielding will have few supporters throughout the country in his recent attempt to belittle and deride the Jubilee demonstration on the occasion of the latter's retirement.

Since Mr. McDougall was bent on going out, it would have been the part of grace and decency, and more becoming the dignity of the Ministry, to have accepted his resignation and fixed the amount of his allowance without endeavoring to disparage his services, which, if over-zealous at times, were so in behalf of the people even if it did not please the party in power, the one to which Mr. McDougall belonged, and which appointed him.

Mr. Fielding, however, made no attempt to restrain his tongue in an effort to give the retiring official a "black eye." He called him by the pet names in departmental usage, described his efforts to save money and keep things straight as mere "flasheries," distortion, obstructing, etc.

Mr. McDougall would not honor cheques after the appropriations had been exhausted—mean, old curmudgeon! He called attention to the demand for extra allowances by "higher officials," and to payment for holidays of two and three months—he is too particular! He saves the country half a million dollars on a bridge contract by looking sharply into its details—fussy busy-body!

Mr. Fielding mistakes the sense of the country if he imagines that the auditor who is appointed by Parliament to do his full duty regarding the outgoes is blamed for being particular in its discharge. It may suit easy-going legislators having friends as contractors to have in the audit office a man-pleaser, who studies to give satisfaction to ministers, and save himself from cares. But the people outside of Parliament are better satisfied with a martinet of Mr. McDougall's temperament and feel they are better served.

TIMELY TOPICS.

It is claimed in some places that asphalt can now be laid at 65 cents per yard. That's cheaper than mud maradam.

One day more, and they will be here. A chord in G, professor, please. All together now:

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood," etc.

"The whole matter now," says Mr. Arthur McInnis, "is in the hands of providence." And providence never yet made a mistake. Put out your flags.

The whole affair, so far, has been a little shy on poetry, so here goes for a small splurge—

They come, they come, from far and near
The dear old boys are coming
Just one and all, from reader dear
The old town will be humming.
There'll be lads who left in '79
Some thinking "Will she find me?"
Good gracious, will I ever see
The girl I left behind me?
There'll be lads who left in later years,
Full many, I am thinking
When again they see the dear old spires
Their eyes will be blinking;
Down street they'll come, with cheer on cheer
They'll say "Well, mercy save us,
If old Tom Downs ain't still a cop,
Oh! many a face we'll miss
And Purdy Cook, well, 'pon my word
A sight this is for sore eyes
And there's Pat Hayes, Chief Newton, too
Well! well! Ain't they the dear boys.

Oh! Glory be, Jim Cummins, well
Are you still fighting fire?
By Jingo there's the Quinte, well
A fine boat that is, I'll bet."
And so they'll run from morn till night
Those old boys who are coming—
Just take my tip—in a day or two
This old town will be humming.

The man who lives on the next block is going to have eighteen visitors for the Reunion. He's hoping it doesn't rain, so some of them can sleep on the roof.

Don't those cool nights make you feel glad you're alive?

Put out your flags and decorations, good people. The visitors are coming in by every train and boat. Don't keep the glad rags for the last minute.

As our mutual friend, the late W. Shakespeare said, "Hang out your banners on the outer walls. The cry is 'Still they come.'"

Said an old-timer this morning: "The Reunion cannot possibly be a success unless 'Slithery Mac' comes." Slithery Mac, in more euphonious cognomen, it may be stated, was quite a character in this city in early days. He is now a resident of Australia, and is believed to be coming by freight.

The dredge Sir Wilfrid Laurier has been found in Lake Ontario, in 78 feet of water. Like its celebrated namesake, the dredge has been getting into deep water lately.

Many a man will sympathize with that chap Ernest Hagler, who ran away from the jail because he had to run a lawn mower. Extenuating circumstances, sure!

Many complaints have been made lately of the nuisance of offensive cow stables within the main portions of our city. This seems to be a matter which calls for the attention of the Board of Health and City Council. It is a fact that, even in the well-to-do parts of certain quarter, the guests of our leading hotel are annoyed by a smell, caused by such an offence as the one spoken of. It can well be understood what this means, especially in hot weather.

In some places conditions of this kind are met by prohibiting people from stabling their cows within a certain distance of anyone else's house. Such a drastic measure as this might not be possible in Belleville, though many people would like to see it, but one thing is possible, and such a rule should be put in force at once, namely, the placing of power in the hands of the Medical Health Officer to order people owning cow stables to have them cleaned at any time he deems necessary, and, in case his orders are not obeyed, to have the premises cleaned by an employee of the city, who should be at all times at the service of the Medical Health Officer. The latter official is poorly enough paid, goodness knows, and to compel him to go through a lot of red tape before he can get a nuisance abated is the rankest kind of nonsense. The authorities should place a scavenger at the disposal of the Medical Health Officer at once. When they get time they should look into this matter of private cow stabling, which, though it may not be an offence against the law, is certainly an offence against delicacy, if not against decency.

A Toronto woman threw a pail of water over a minister who had called to see a sick man. That was giving him a cool reception, sure.

They had a big storm in Brockville yesterday, and the sceptre of justice on the county building was knocked from the hand of the female figure. Nature knows.

Several papers throughout Canada are agitating for the abolition of Hansard, saying that it would be apt to shorten the session of Parliament. The plan is said to have worked well in the Toronto Legislature, perhaps it would in the big body at Ottawa.

Note the awful number of drowning accidents in to-day's paper. How many valuable lives are thrown away because people have not learned to swim! What about that public bath!

The Mail and Empire hands Hon. Mr. Sifton the following sarcastic uppercut: "Mr. Sifton is to receive a pension of $5,000 per annum, in addition to his indemnity of $2,500. He will draw $6,000 a year while in Parliament, and should he be unable to hold a seat, his emoluments from the public treasury will drop to $5,000 yearly, which he will enjoy so long as he lives. This is how the new age treats out. It is very satisfactory to know that a statesman who has grown poor in the public service, as Mr. Sifton has done, is thus looked after by a grateful people."

A Conservative, talking to The Intelligencer to-day said, "Your little bit of cut and cut article in the other night was good. There are Ontario Government officials in this city who have openly fought the Conservative party and are still draw'ng public money, and others who for this and other reasons sought in the public interest to be dismissed. Why punish the petty office holders while those at the top go free? If these office holders 'at the top' have any loyal Conservative let us have a public confession. One of them in the past has publicly confessed his change of front. This is not a question of turning out competent officials who have kept out of politics, but the public, as well as the Conservative party, demand that officials whose moral conduct has been objectionable or whose acts have been partisan, should go."

Discomfort After Eating

Feeling oppressed with a sensation of fullness, and finding the food to distend and painfully hang like a heavy weight at the pit of the stomach, are symptoms of indigestion. With these the sufferer will often have constipation, fullness of the blood in the head, acidity of the stomach, nausea, heartburn, headache, disgust of food, gaseous eructations, sinking or fluttering of the heart, choking or suffocating sensation when lying down, dizziness on rising suddenly, dots or webs before the sight, fever and dull pain in the head, yellowness of the skin and eyes, pain in the side. A few doses of Hood's Tablets will free the system of all the above mentioned disorders. Purely vegetable; acts without pain. Small and easy to take. One after each meal.

Bogus Ballot-Boxes in House of Commons.

Mr. Sam Hughes. Did the Globe tell suggest how Shibley could escape.

Mr. Porter. I believe it did. The scheme, as further divulged to me and as was shown in the further investigation of the matter, was that by the simple manipulation of the handle of the ballot box just as many Liberal votes could be cast—without leaving the ballots such as those which are supplied by the Government for the purpose of holding Dominion elections. As to the first objection, let me answer it in this way: It cannot be used without the aid of a dishonest deputy returning officer and the sworn evidence shows that there were dishonest deputy returning officers on the Liberal party who were willing to use it and who did operate it.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. Would the honourable gentleman (Mr. Porter) be good enough to read the sections of the Act or deputy returning officer who did use this box?

Mr. Porter. Yes, this name is Hawkeye.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. Any one else?

Mr. Porter. The evidence does not show any one else. I think I have answered it. There are the other deputy returning officers whose names I have given. Lott says that the box was given to him, that he was instructed how to use it and that he entered into the conspiracy with regard to the supply of the ballots, the evidence showing that at polling sub-division No. 1, in the Township of Clarendon, Pontiac County, when the deputy returning officer was absent the agent for Lott had 65 more ballots than he had been charged with, and it is a strange coincidence that the 25 extra ballots should be furnished at the very poll at which the ballot-box was used. There is another little piece of evidence in connection with the supply of ballots, and I would like to call attention to it. If reference is had to the revised Hansard, page 1199, some very pertinent questions will be found to be there put by my late friend from East Grey (Mr. Sproule) and which were answered by the right hon. the Minister (now Sir Wilfrid Laurier). The questions asked by the hon. member for East Grey were these:

1. What is the custom of the Department of Public Printing and Stationery in issuing the blank ballots used in Dominion elections? How many ballots are contained on each sheet of paper?

2. Is the paper on which the ballots are printed issued direct from the Printing Bureau to the deputy returning officers throughout Canada, or does it go through the hands of the Crown in Chancery?

3. Are the blank ballot papers carefully counted before being sent out, and a record kept of the number of sheets sent to each returning officer? If so, under whose supervision is this done?

4. After the issue of the sheets of ballot paper to the several returning officers for the last Dominion elections, was any complaint made by the Department of Public Printing and Stationery, or to the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, by any returning officer, or by his subscribing agent, or by any printing establishment, that the requisite number of sheets of paper for such contingent requirements had not been furnished, or that the actual number of sheets sent was less than that which the returning officer was entitled with having received?

5. If so, in what constituency or constituencies did this occur, and what action was taken on such complaint?

Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Prime Minister).

1. The main principles are: (a) To deal with no one but the returning officers. (b) To keep the broken packages. The ballots are issued in sheets of four each, according to the size of sample which I lay on the table.

2. The sheets are issued direct from the Printing Bureau to the returning officers throughout Canada without the intervention of the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery.

3. The sheets are carefully counted before being packed. They are sent out in sealed packages of three sizes only, viz.: Packages of 25 sheets in fours and of 1,000 and 500 in twos. The packages are not opened after being counted. The smaller packages are never uneven or between thousands. The counting is done in the bindery, after cutting, by skilled hands and under the supervision of the foreman of the bindery. The packages are then finally closed and posted up.

4. After the issue of the ballots, application was made by the King's Printer from time to time for the return of unused ballots, but I am not aware that any complaint was made by the returning officers that the supply was insufficient. In all such cases the additional ballots were sent by telegraph, always in the whole package. No ballots whatever were sent to the returning office. And they were sent out in sealed packages registered to the returning officers. No communications from others than returning officers were entertained.

5. Two complaints were made that the count of the ballot papers was wrong. One was from South Lanark, the other was from Ontario. In the case of South Lanark no additional supply was asked for. It was a question of count. In the case of Ottawa, an additional quantity of 2,000 ballots was delivered to the returning officer.

Then I find by a further reference at page 1199 of the revised Hansard, this question by the hon. member for East Grey:

Mr. Sproule asked:

1. Are you able to answer given by the First Minister on Monday, February 13th, regarding the method of issuing the ballot papers to returning officers, what was the date of the resolution recently from the returning officer in South Lanark?

2. What was the date of the complaint received from the returning officer in the city of Ottawa?

3. Were any additional thousand ballots sent to him?

Right Hon. Sir Wilfrid Laurier (Prime Minister):

1. The letter making the complaint in relation to South Lanark was dated October 29, 1904.

2. The complaint of shortage made at Ottawa was by telephone on the days before October 31.

3. The number of additional ballots was made on October 31, and the additional 2,000 was sent on that date.

In that connection I want to refer to the evidence; I shall not read it, but I will be pleased to hand it to the hon. gentleman to do so. Philip Lott swore in the investigation before the courts, that his brother Byron Lott had endeavoured to persuade Shibley for use in the election, and to have them printed at the printing office of the Bancroft Reporter at Bancroft, in his own county; that he had tried to have them printed elsewhere, but that they could not print the ballots in such a way that detection would not be easy, and that on the 25th day of October he left his home, telling his brother he was going to Ottawa to procure the ballots here. It will be noticed that the answer of the right hon. Prime Minister is that a request was made for ballots two or three days before the 31st of October, which would be along about the 28th of October. I too will take the trouble to turn to the register of Hansard House, Ottawa, you still find it has published the name of H. P. Lott, Stirling, registered on the very day of the 28th October. There can be nothing in it, but it is a very amusing coincidence that this man Lott, who would procure the ballots in his own county, stated that he was coming to Ottawa for the purpose of procuring these ballots, and that on the very day he arrived here the request is made, and that 2,000 extra ballots is furnished to the returning officer here on the Liberal side in his way. That is practically the history of the spurious ballot-box and of its attempted use in the County of Hastings, and its actual use in poll No. 1, Clarendon, in the County of Pontenac. I am happy to be able to refer to the efforts that were made to steal these elections were entirely unsuccessful. I have been solid—reiterating to a large extent what Globe said—that the persons who were guilty of these nefarious transaction were not of the letter electorate of the Liberal party, they were a few of the lower scum, so to speak. Now, just for fear that that opinion should not be entertained by any one, let me make a short reference to some of the individuals who, according to their own sworn testimony, were implicated in this affair, and I will leave it to the country to judge whether they were of the better elements of the Liberal party or not. Take the first one, Byron O. Lott, who was the Liberal candidate in the Local Legislature and finally the Liberal candidate for the Dominion House. Mr. W. A. Shibley, Liberal candidate in the interests of the Conservative party in the county of Frontenac. Joseph Hawkins, the returning officer poll No. 1, Clarendon—Miller, who was a part of the machinery supplied by this Government to carry on the election. Philip Lott, another deputy returning officer, and Archibald Campbell, of the County of Hastings. John Bremner, editor and proprietor of the Bancroft Reporter, and Conservative agent for North Hastings. Samuel Harryett, the police magistrate of North Hastings, appointed by the Ontario Government and also Liberal organizer for that portion of the province. R. H. Harpell, school teacher, general agent of one of the leading insurance companies of the province. Frank Shibley, graduate Toronto College, Kingston. Edward Button, the Liberal agent and confidential friend of W. J. Shibley, the Liberal candidate. Thomas Whalen, the man who was employed by the King's Printer from returning officers when where he reply was insufficient. In all such cases the additional ballots were sent by the returning officers were sent to him, and always in the whole package. No ballots whatever were sent to the returning office. And they were sent out in sealed packages registered to the returning officers. No communications from others than returning officers were entertained.

GUARD AGAINST GERMS

KEEP WELL BY STRENGTHENING THE STOMACH IN SUMMER WITH MI-O-NA.

Everyone with weak digestion should use Mi-o-na at this season and so strengthen the stomach that disease germs can have no effect whatever. This remarkable remedy puts the whole digestive system in so healthy, clean and sweet a state that fermentation of the food cannot exist, that any disease germs which may enter the stomach will be destroyed, and food will be so readily assimilated that a rapid and healthy increase in flesh will result.

Nervousness and sleeplessness come more often from a weak stomach than from any other cause; headache, backache, and rheumatic pains are directly caused by an acid condition of the stomach. Mi-o-na corrects all this, prevents the formation of acids, and nervousness, kidney trouble, or rheumatism, is quickly cured.

Ask J. D. McKeown to show you the guarantee under which he sells Mi-o-na. Price 50 cents. It costs nothing unless it cures.

SPORTING NOTES.

At lacrosse yesterday, Toronto Tecumseths beat Toronto Chippewas 5 to 4.

The Scawanlaka cup races are booked to begin to-day on Lake St. Clair. There will be a 10-mile contest for the cup. The challenger is the Canadian Club of the Walkerville Yacht Club, and the defender the Alerion, of the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club.

Playing cricket against Scotland, Australia made 542 runs in the second innings, Scotland's first for nine wickets. The match was drawn. The totals are: Australia, first innings, 246; Scotland, first, 158; second 311.

"Iron Man" McGinnity is the "Iron Man" no more, judging from his recent performance. Very likely some game McGinnity has pitched lately for the Giants he had to be taken out and Matheson or some other pitcher have to be substituted in the second to no pitcher in the country. A DOUBLE WEDDING.

TWO BROTHERS MARRY TWO SISTERS.

An event of unusual interest took place at Newbrook, Point Prince Edward Co. on Wednesday afternoon, July 12th, the occasion being the double wedding of Mr. Charles G. Rowe to Mr. Charles G. Hambly, and Mr. Samuel M. Rowe to Mr. John Elmore Hambly, the brides being daughters of the late Mr. Geo. Rowe. The ceremony was performed by Rev. E. Farnsworth, of Yarker, in the presence of a large gathering of friends and relatives. The grooms were attended by Mr. Wm. Denike and Mr. A. E. Hambly, and the brides were attended by Miss Mabel Rowe and Miss Ella Rowe, bridal party stood under an arch of evergreens. The brides were both charmingly attired in cream and carried bouquets of white roses. After the ceremony the company sat down to a sumptuous repast. The grounds were artistically and neatly, betokening the great esteem in which the brides are held. The happy couples left for their homes in North Fredericksburgh, followed by the well wishes of their numerous friends.

MISCALLED "HAIR TONICS."

Most Hair Preparations Are Merely Scalp Irritants, of No Value.

Most hair preparations are merely scalp irritants, of no value to baldness. When hair is brittle, lusterless and seems to fall out, the dandruff germ is getting in its deadly work at the roots, sapping their vitality. Wise science discovered that the dandruff germ disease there has been only one preparation of known potency that will actually destroy the dandruff germ, and that is Newbro's Herpicide. It quickly reduces scalp fever, destroys the germ; and the falling hair stops, and a new growth appears. Ask your druggist for Herpicide. It allays itching instantly, and permits the hair to grow. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

THE WORST OF A COLD.

Is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the doctor, for every moment, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it's too late. Don't neglect your cold—it kills today instantly. Something magical about Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup for coughs, sore throat, bronchitis. Catarrhoozone is the best remedy because it cures in the easiest way. It heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket; use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

A WOMAN'S WISH.

Would I were lying in a field of clover
Of clover cool and soft, and soft and sweet,
With dewy clouds on deep skies hanging over,
And scented silence at my head and feet.

Just for one hour to slip the leash of Worry,
In eager haste, from Thought's impatient neck,
And watch it coursing in its heedless hurry,
Disdaining Wisdom's call or Duty's beck.

Ah! it were sweet, where clover clumps are meeting
And daisies nding, so to hide and rest;
No sound except my own heart's steady beating,
Rocking itself to sleep within my breast.

Just to lie there, filled with the deep or breathing
That comes of listening to a wild bird's song;
Our souls require at times this full unabashing
All awards will rust if sealband kept too long.

And I am tired—so tired of rigid duty
So tired of all my tired handfuls to do!
I yearn, I'm faint for some of life's free beauty,
Its loose beads strung through.

Ay! laugh, if you will, at my crude speech;
But women sometimes die of such a great
Die for the small joys held beyond their reach,
And the assurance they have all they need!

—Mary Ashley Townsend.

That great man, Sir William Mulock, displays an intense longing to carry American mails by Canadian steamer; but, it would subsidize initially increase the subsidy. And yet our American cousins fail to appreciate these efforts. Sir William would meet with more encouragement were he to give some of his valuable attention to improving the inland postal service, for the benefit of country parts. He need not adopt a rural free delivery all at once, but more locality in mail carriers and country postmasters would not be amiss. A few more dollars spent in Belleville, for the betterment of conditions here, would also be greatly appreciated.

There is surely more truth than poetry in the following, from the St. Joseph Gazette: "It is well for us to mind the fact that nothing of any moment in this life is attained without labor. One may be ever so well prepared, by education and physical equipment, to accomplish things, but if he does not work he will succeed at nothing. One may be as honest as the day is long, but honesty will not earn him a livelihood; opportunities galore may present themselves, but without the energy to take advantage of them they will avail us nothing. The secret in bending all things to our's advantage is to work at it. When you don't work things don't bend—that is, your way—and there isn't any one to blame for that but yourself. The art of compensation may equalize things but it is noticeable that the more one works the more his compensation, which is that compensation be measured in dollars and cents or in remuneration of other character. The young man who thoroughly learns this wholesome truth during his school days has gotten himself well started on a successful career."

The city of Toronto is importing a weed cutting machine from England. Belleville might profitably get one if it doesn't cost too much.

There is food for thought in the fact that Ontario's revenue for the first six months of the year shows an increase of $50,000 despite the fact that there has been a falling off in the receipts from the sale of these valuable provincial assets, the timber limits. This rather knocks out the prevailing Liberal opinion that an expanding revenue is a peculiarly Liberal perquisite. Even the hidebound Grit papers will soon have to admit that there is merit in Mr. Whitney's Government.

Released and Re-Arrested.

Toronto, July 19.—Samuel Hall, the Victoria street lawyer, was before Judge Morgan yesterday on the charge of stealing the money and a ring, valued at £150 from George C. Briggs, a young Englishman. Hall was defended by W. H. Dewart, and Mr. Drayton prosecuted. The case was dismissed, but a charge against Hall, remarking that he could not find the accused guilty of theft on the evidence, but thought there were ample reasons for the charge being laid against him. Hall was immediately re-arrested by Detective Duncan, at the request of the Attorney-General's Department of British Columbia. He is wanted in Vancouver on the charge of defrauding Sylvester G. Faulkner of $75 by a worthless cheque on July 20, 1903. There is also another charge of giving false evidence for him to answer.

Crops in Temiskaming.

Toronto, July 20.—Prof. C. A. Zavitz of the Agricultural College, Guelph, who has been in the Temiskaming district, reports immense crops of potatoes and clover in. Potatoes are looking well, and barley, oats and wheat flourish in the proper manner. The spring was very dry. Traffic, says Mr. Zavitz, has been heavy on the Government road, the Cobalt district attracting many numbers. Prospects for the Temiskaming district are bright, and the advantages of the country have not been overstimated.

Begins His Rule.

Gotha, Duchy of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, July 20.—Duke Charles Edward of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha assumed the reins of government yesterday on attaining his majority. The formal ceremony of taking the oath of installation occurred in the presence of Emperor William and King Edward and others, the Cabinet Ministers, and a brilliant assemblage of officials and deputations from various parts of the duchy.

Moran of the Lady Letty

By FRANK NORRIS, Author of "The Octopus," "The Pit," Etc.

Copyright, 1904, by S. S. McClure Company.

"Seen anything of Charlie and the others?"

"They've cruised on the other side of the bay. But look yonder," she added. The junk had come to everything and was about a mile and a half from shore.

"The deuce!" exclaimed Wilbur. "What are they after?"

"Fresh water, I guess," said Moran, knotting the end of a braid. "We'd better have breakfast in a hurry and turn in on the Bertha. The tide is going out fast."

While they breakfasted they kept an eye on the schooner, watching her sides and flanks as the water fell slowly away.

"That's see anything very bad yet," said Wilbur.

"It's somewhere in her stern," remarked Moran.

It an hour's time the Bertha Millner was high and dry, and they could then sauise her at their leisure. It was Moran who found the leak.

"Pshaw!" she exclaimed, with a half laugh. "We can stick that up in half an hour."

A single junk had started away from the steamspot; that was all. Otherwise the schooner was as sound as the day she left San Francisco. Moran and Wilbur had the damage repaired by noon, nailing the plank to its place and covering the seam with lamp wick. Nor could their utmost careful search discover any further injury.

"We're ready to go," said Moran, "so soon as she'll float. We can dig away around the bows here, and, fast a line to that rock out yonder and warp her off at next high tide. Hello! Who's that?"

It was Charlie. While the two had been at work he had come around the shore unperceived and now stood at some little distance, smiling at them calmly.

"Well, what do you want?" cried Moran angrily. "If you had your rights, my friend, you'd be keelhauled."

"I tinkum velly hot day."

"You didn't come here to say that. What do you want?"

"I come hab talkee-talk."

"We don't want to have any talkee-talk with such vermin as you. Get out!"

Charlie sat down on the beach and wiped his forehead.

"I tinkee one piece bacon. China boy no hab got."

"We aren't selling bacon to deserters," cried Moran. "And I'll tell you this, you filthy little monkey! Mr. Wilbur and I are going homeback to Frisco—this afternoon, and we're going to leave you and the rest of your vipers to rot on this beach or be murdered by beachcombers." And she pointed out toward the junk. Charlie did not even follow the direction of her gestures, and from this very indifference Wilbur guessed that it was precisely because all the beachcombers that the Machiavellian Chinaman had wished to treat with Moran.

"No hab got bacon?" he queried, lifting his eyebrows in surprise.

"Plenty hab got bacon," said Moran.

Charlie took a buckskin bag from his blouse and counted out a handful of silver and copper coins.

"I buy um aisi two piece tobacco."

"Look here," said Wilbur deliberately, "don't you try to flimflam us, Charlie. We know you too well. You don't want bacon and you don't want tobacco."

"China boy hab plenty much sick. Two boy velly sick. I tinkum dig pretty soon tomolla. Tinkum catchee clop chest; you gib me five, seven flour pill; bake!"

"I'll tell you what you want!" cried Moran, aiming a forefinger at him, pistol fashion. "You've got a blue funk because those Kai-gingh beachcombers have come into the bay and you're more frightened of them than you are of the schooner, and now you want us to take you home."

"How muchee?"

CANADA FLAKES
The Food, of Quality and Quantity

"A thousand dollars."

Wilbur looked at her in surprise. He had expected a refusal.

"You no hab got silver Hill?" still quired Charlie blandly.

Moran turned her back on him. She and Wilbur conferred in a low tone.

"We'd better take them back if we decently can," said Moran. "The schooner is known of course in Frisco. Once we went out with Kitchell and a crew of cooties, and she came back with you and I aboard, and if we tell the truth about it, it will sound like a lie, and we'll have no end of trouble. Then, again, can just you and I work the Bertha into port? The best hand of any kite's plain work, but suppose the Kai-gingh overhauls I'm not so sure."

"I gib you two dollah fo' ten liver pill," said Charlie.

"Will you give us $1,000 to set you down in San Francisco?"

Charlie rose. "I go back, I tell um China boy no hab got. Pretty soon I come pill. Bimeby I come back."

"That means he'll take our offer back to his friends," said Wilbur in a low voice. "You bet hurry chopchop they'll be called over. Charlie, we go home pretty soon."

"He knows very well we can't get away from the schooner," said Moran. "He'll take his time."

Later on in the afternoon Wilbur and Moran and Wilbur had the damage repaired by noon, nailing the plank to its place and covering the seam with lamp wick. Nor could their utmost careful search discover any further injury.

"We're ready to go," said Moran, "so soon as she'll float. We can dig away around the bows here, and, fast a line to that rock out yonder and warp her off at next high tide. Hello! Who's that?"

It was Charlie. While the two had been at work he had come around the shore unperceived and now stood at some little distance, smiling at them calmly.

"We don't want to have any talkee-talk with such vermin as you. Get out!"

Charlie sat down on the beach and wiped his forehead.

"I tinkee one piece bacon. China boy no hab got."

"We aren't selling bacon to deserters," cried Moran. "And I'll tell you this, you filthy little monkey! Mr. Wilbur and I are going homeback to Frisco—this afternoon, and we're going to leave you and the rest of your vipers to rot on this beach or be murdered by beachcombers." And she pointed out toward the junk. Charlie did not even follow the direction of her gestures, and from this very indifference Wilbur guessed that it was precisely because all the beachcombers that the Machiavellian Chinaman had wished to treat with Moran.

"No hab got bacon?" he queried, lifting his eyebrows in surprise.

"Plenty hab got bacon," said Moran.

Charlie took a buckskin bag from his blouse and counted out a handful of silver and copper coins.

"I buy um aisi two piece tobacco."

"Look here," said Wilbur deliberately, "don't you try to flimflam us, Charlie. We know you too well. You don't want bacon and you don't want tobacco."

"China boy hab got plenty much sick. Two boy velly sick. I tinkum dig pretty soon tomolla. I tinkee catchee clop chest; you gib me five, seven flour pill; bake!"

"I'll tell you what you want!" cried Moran, aiming a forefinger at him, pistol fashion. "You've got a blue funk because those Kai-gingh beachcombers have come into the bay and you're more frightened of them than you are of the schooner, and now you want us to take you home."

"How muchee?"

METAL PENS.

One of Ancient Rowan Make Has the Distinctive Slit.

Some curious one has collected a mass of interesting facts concerning metallic pens. Some of these references run back as far as the fourteenth and even the thirteenth century, and, curiously enough, in the case of the Romans, the ancestor of Arctois, the forger scribe, is said to have used a bronze pen in order to disguise his writing and make his conveyance more safe. A bronze metal pen is said to have been found at Aosta, not a mere stylus, but a bronze pen slit, and there is more evidence of a pen or reed of bronze nearly as early as the invention of printing in the fifteenth century. More than a hundred years ago some steel pens were made in Birmingham for Dr. Priestly, and some of these placed into the hands of Sir Joshua Mason in his early days with Mr. Harrison, but all were to have been lost. The first pen of metal of a definite date, beyond all question, is one in the British Museum of 1717. At about the same time a polite ode of Pope's refers to a "steel and golden pen," but these were evidently luxuries only, and it was not until about the end of the first quarter of the last century that metallic pens became more generally in use. In the "Local Notes and Queries" in the Birmingham Weekly Post definite evidence has been given of steel pens as early as 1806 and more commonly in 1811, but it was about 1823 and 1824 that the great revolution came by which pens were made of a cheaper material—the hand screw press which pierced the nibs from steel rolled into form by position and the joint formed the slit, but these required considerable labor to shape into a pen form. The use of the screw press belongs to the period of John Mitchell, Joseph Gillot and Josiah Mason, but on a careful review of the facts it seems to be clear that John Mitchell has the best claim to be considered as the original introducer of press made pens.

PITH AND POINT.

Being worthless pays no dividends.

Keeping a diary is nearly as hard work as keeping a dairy.

Being favorably impressed is the cheapest way we know of being a good fellow.

Nothing makes people so mad as to have people say, "What made you do it?"

It is terribly hard to impress people with the importance of aiding in a good cause.

Every one realizes when he goes to a photographer's that he is not looking his natural best.

It is all right to do things for your town, but don't do things for your home and family.

We are all pretty easily pleased when we consider that three or four times a day we see exactly how we look in the looking glass.

Antiquity of Cheating.

False weights were found in the ruins of the oldest city that has yet been exhumed. And false weights will probably be consumed when the earth drops into the sun and the heavens are rolled together like a scroll. Ancient records and ancient statute books are full of evidence that every modern practical decree down to adulterations and crooked scales was familiar to our ancestors in the plains of Shinar before the migrations. Vice is the old inhabitant; virtue is the newcomer, the immigrant, received with reluctance and compelled to fight for every inch of ground he gains.

A Great Lack of Love.

There is a current story being told just now of an Irish priest who, taking leave of his congregation, gave his reasons for "First, you do not love me, for you have contributed nothing to my support second, you do not love each other, for I have not celebrated a marriage since I arrived; third, the good God does not love you, for he has not taken one of you to himself; I have not had a single funeral."—London Telegraph.

Why She Loved Her.

Mrs. Cummins—So you love your grandmamma, do you, Gracie? And why do you love her? Gracie—Because she used to punish mamma when mamma was a little girl. I hope she used to spank mamma as hard as mamma spanks me.

The Flight of Birds.

One of the few men to recover sight after being blind from the birth of recollection was reported to have remarked at nothing so much as the flight of the birds. "Why do not people make more fuss about them?" he said.—London Outlook.

Faulty Theory.

Gus de Smythe—Those new boots of yours squeak awfully. Perhaps they're not paid for yet. Johnny—That's all nonsense. If there is anything in that, why don't my coat and vest and my trousers and my hat squeak too?

Old Enough to Notice.

"Are your papa and mamma at home?" asked the caller.

"No," replied little Marguerite; "one of them may be here, but they never are both at home at the same time."

Generous.

"Some men say," remarked the beneficent heiress, "that I have no heart."

"Oh, that doesn't matter," replied the poor but willing to be honest youth; "I'll give you mine."

JUST TEA LEAVES.

The Spectacle They Present Under a Powerful Microscope.

"Have a look," said the histologist. And he rose from the beautiful, delicate microscope, and his companion took his place.

There was a little fiddling and adjusting of tiny screws. Then the tyro said:

"Ugh! Ghastly! What have we here a railroad wreck?"

"You are looking," answered the histologist, "at a part of the remains of a Ceylonese caterpillar."

He withdrew that slide and put another in its place.

"Another tragedy?" the tyro asked.

"The remnants of a beetle," the histologist replied.

A third slide was placed beneath the lens.

"This," said the tyro, "should be a battlefield."

"It is only," returned the scientist, "a commingling of the desiccated fragments of a fly, a centiped, a moth and a slug."

The tyro yawned.

"Histology is fascinating," he said in a bored voice. "Where did you get these specimens?"

"Out of a packet of tea."

"A packet of tea? What kind of tea?"

"Ordinary tea."

"Heavens! I am a tea drinker. Explain yourself."

The histologist, smiling, said:

"Tea grows on bushes. The leaves are picked by hand. Imagine yourself stripping rosebush after rosebush, miles on miles, of their leaves. Well, that is what tea picking is like.

"The native pickers work fast. They pick as many as twenty-five pounds of leaves a day—a bundle bigger than a man.

"Now, the tea plant is the prey of a hundred insects, and the picker in his haste doesn't pause to brush off each leaf or to wash it, for he works, as we say, by piece work.

"The picked leaves are dried on charcoal fires. They shrivel under the heat and the insect, larvae and chrysalids among them are ready to dust. This also looks to the ordinary eye like leaf fragments, but under the microscope it shows, as pictured, like an insect, a railroad wreck or a pygmy battlefield. It tastes like—but you know as well as I do what it tastes like."

"Tomorrow," said the other, "I am going to bring some of my wife's tea here to examine with you."

An Amended Quotation.

Miss Ida Tarbell's first journalistic experience was as editor of the Chautauqua. Her predecessor on the journal, once editor of the Oil City Derrick, had established the custom of heading with a quotation the column in which he made brief mention of the news of the day. Miss Tarbell followed his habit and bent her mind to the task of supplying suitable quotations. Once upon a time she set down, as plain as pen could set it:

"The meek eyed morn appears, mother of dews."

Then she went home, pardonably proud of knowing her Thomson so well, and at the head of the column next day she read:

"The weak eyed worm appears."

A Lack of Firmness.

A very matter of fact Scandinavian called to see a neighbor, an old Irishwoman, who had been ailing for some time, when the following conversation took place at the door:

"And how do you find yourself today, Bridget?"

"Sure, your honor, I'm mighty bad. This shocking weather'll be the end of me. I'll be a dead woman before long."

"Hoots, woman, woman! Ye've been saying that for the last twenty years! I'll tell ye what it is—ye want firmness o' mind. That's the way for ye—dieing and stick tae it!"

When Hats Were Unknown.

In ancient days hats were unknown, men having hoods attached to their outer garments, which they wore or discarded at pleasure. Stow, the old historian, says that in the reign of Richard II. hats were first worn, and that he thinks they were brought into fashion from Flanders, for the wind would be master over them."

Death by Lottery.

Among other compliments of Chinese law and its execution is a unique and rather new method of dealing with prisoners by lottery. Once a year the vermilion pencil of imperial authority is waved over a chart on which the names of convicted criminals are written, and those whose lot includes it, a haphazard sweep are executed forthwith. The rest are either reprieved altogether or their executions are postponed for another year.

Something Wrong.

"Dear Pop," wrote the boy from the art school, "don't send me any more money. I have saved half that which you sent me last month." "Come home," wired the old man; "you'll never make an artist."

Encouragement.

De Laye—I'm a mum-mum man who mum-mum never says dud-dud die, dud-dud don't you know? Mrs. Good—Well, never mind; you certainly try hard enough to do so.—Life.

Pay as you go and quit going so much.—Dallas (Tex.) News.

THE VALUE OF OKRA

AN IMPORTANT FOOD PLANT THAT IS MUCH NEGLECTED.

Its Nutritive Properties Are Very High and It Is Particularly Beneficial in Cases of Chronic Indigestion—Some Simple Recipes.

Okra is a very important and useful plant, with numerous uses, the most important being for the table. The green pods without doubt make the finest soup vegetable supplied by the garden. Cooked whole they also furnish a palatable side dish. The nutritive properties of okra are very high and it has the additional advantage of being an exceedingly wholesome article of food. It is erroneously called gumbo in many cook books and even in some encyclopedias. The name of the plant and its fruit is okra. Gumbo is a general term for various kinds of soup made of it. Okra, in fact, is an excellent food much neglected.

A very important consideration from the alimentary point of view is the unusually high percentage of digestible matter. That fact had been established by common experience long before any analysis of the pod had been thought of, for wherever the vegetable is in use it is well known that the soup is highly beneficial to persons with weak stomachs. Often it will be retained when nothing else can be taken, and it has in many cases restored tone to digestive organs that seemed hopelessly disordered. It is a particularly beneficial food in cases of dysentery and chronic indigestion.

The dried seeds, parched and ground, are said to make an excellent substitute for coffee. A substitute for arrowroot can be made from the roots. The leaves, green or dry, are used, decocted, for their demulcent properties. The inner bark, soft and white, contains a strong fiber resembling flax. The outer bark is also fibrous and, together with the woody part of the plant, furnishes excellent paper stock. As okra is easily raised, it can be cultivated with profit.

For table use the pods must be cut while tender, generally when about three inches long. They grow rapidly and soon become woody. The plant is very prolific, and it will continue to bear until nipped by frost. A small patch will more than meet the requirements of an ordinary family, and the surplus may be preserved for winter use by two convenient methods. The easier is by drying. Slice the pods crossways, into sections a quarter of an inch thick, spread thin on large dishes or trays and expose to the sun from day to day until thoroughly dried. Put in jars or close cans and keep from dampness. The other method of preservation is by canning, which will be explained later on. The plant is fabulous and ornamental enough for the flower garden. The leaves are large and palmatisected, and the blossoms, which in form resemble those of the hollyhock, are at first a brilliant gold, with a purple disk. After the first day the gold also takes a purplish hue.

Here are some of the best recipes for cooking okra: Okra soup—Take a piece of beef or a narrow bone, put on in cold water and boil until cooked. Slice one quart of okra pods crossways into thin sections and add, with enough stemmed ripe tomatoes to give the soup a rich color. Continue to boil until the okra is thoroughly cooked, which will take about fifteen minutes. A green pepper, from which the seeds have been removed, sliced and cooked will improve the flavor. The various gumbos, chicken, fish or crab, are made in the same manner.

An excellent soup can be made without meat by boiling the okra, sliced as above, and adding when cooked a good sized piece of butter. Other vegetables, such as carrots, onions and celery, may also be used, but lovers of okra prefer it straight. Soup made as above will keep in a cool place for several days and improve with age.

A savory dish for lunch or dinner is made in the following manner: Butter a pudding dish, put in a layer of cooked or half cooked rice, a layer of sliced okra, a layer of ripe sliced tomatoes, butter, pepper, salt and a little sugar to the acid of the tomatoes, if objectionable; repeat the layers until the dish is filled; grate breadcrumbs on top, with pieces of butter; pour in a small boiling water as the dish will hold; bake long enough to cook; serve hot.

Okra also makes a palatable vegetable dish, but in this form it is not always acceptable on first acquaintance. Its substance is viscous, and for that reason probably does not at once captivate the taste. Put the pods, whole, into boiling water with salt; boil about fifteen minutes or until cooked; pour off the water, place in a hot dish, add pepper and plenty of good butter; serve hot. Cooked in this way, treated with good vinegar and served cold, it makes a good salad.

Any housewife can do her own canning of okra. Slice and boil the okra until two-thirds cooked; put in a hot jar, fill full, seal tight and place in a dark closet; if desired, add stemmed tomatoes and boil until the okra is thoroughly cooked, but be careful in this case to omit salt; put up in jars as above. By following this method okra soup may be had throughout the winter.

In the south the taste for okra is universal, possibly an inheritance. Elsewhere it may, like that for the olive, have to be cultivated. But the taste does not require much cultivation, and, once acquired, it is a permanent possession.

To the honest mind the best perquisites of a place are the advantages it gives for doing good.—Addison.

You have No Reason for Not Using Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of using them.

Well, we'll admit that the drug cure do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo.

Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach. Another is Rock headache. And there is nothing better.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It went hurt you any more than will the soda.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will warn off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time.

If you are using a drug remedy, why not discard it?

Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all many sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain.

If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again.

Know Your Own Mind.

The great majority of people need to know their own minds. They want to be reassured. They do not know their own minds. They are not sure of themselves. The man, therefore, the man who can rule others, must be master of his art. Encouragement is to many men what flattery is to some women.—Success.

How He Avoided It.

"Have you ever been kissed off the stage?" asked the girl who was thrilled at having met a real actor.

"Often," he replied. "When I'm off the stage I always try to be among friends as much as possible."

AN EVARTS FEE.

Showing How It May Sometimes Pay to Be a Poor Writer.

Not many lawyers write legibly, and the late William M. Evarts was no such an execrable hand that it was very often difficult to read it. This caused a mistake at one time which resulted in the eminent lawyer receiving a reminder of his times that the account be requested. The late William Allen Butler, an eminent member of the New York bar, was counsel for one of the legatees in the celebrated Stokes will case years ago, in which the late Dr. Henry M. Field was also interested as chief witness. Something like $15,000,00 was involved, and Mr. Butler told his client that he would like an associate in the conduct of the case. He was asked whom he would suggest, and he said he thought Mr. Evarts would be the best man owing to his superior knowledge of the law and his great reputation as an advocate. The client agreed, and Mr. Butler was instructed to see if Mr. Evarts would come into the case.

Accordingly Mr. Butler wrote to Mr. Evarts and invited him to be associated in the case and name his retaining fee. In due time Mr. Evarts sent a reply, which he saw at a glance was in the affirmative and, without stopping to read further, he opened another envelope and mailed it to his client. It was not until a year later that Mr. Butler, who inquired what sort of a man his brother lawyer's client was.

"Didn't you know him either? I never sent your letter to him?" queried Mr. Butler.

"Why," replied Mr. Evarts, "but he sent me a check for $25,000, and I only asked him for $2,500."

It was apparent that Mr. Evarts' chirography misled the client. This is the story as told by a man who is said to be familiar with the facts, but it is not known whether Mr. Evarts returned the difference of $22,500 or whether he worked it out.

THE KALLIMA BUTTERFLY.

An Insect That Perfectly Imitates a Dead Tree Leaf.

A moth usually rests with his fore wings drawn over the hind. The peculiar pattern of his hind wings, says Waldemar H. Kaempffert in the Booklovers Magazine. In any other circumstances would inevitably meet a swift death. A butterfly, on the contrary, rests usually with his wings folded upright and pressed together. Otherwise, the gaudy upper surface would be conspicuous to one as the black ink on this white paper—a signal for attack by rebodied insectivorous fauna. In order to hide himself the butterfly has, therefore, lavished all the resources of his genius upon the under surfaces of his wings. By far the most astonishing instance of this kind is afforded by the Indian Kallima butterfly, the blue upper surface of which is only a sub-conspicuous purple with a stripe of orange, but the under surface of which bears a truly staggering likeness to a dead leaf, even to the veins drawn together. Here we have an insect that apes not merely the approximate shape and color of a dead leaf, but also the midrib with the delicate veining, the sharp point and the short stem common to many tropical leaves.

It might be supposed that this imitation of an ordinary object is sufficiently minute to protect the Kallima from its enemies. But experience and observation demands not merely a dead leaf simulated, but in touches even more exquisite, for the resemblance has been so craftily carried out that the lightest colored varieties of the imitated leaf decked with parasitic growths, stained and spotted to give the appearance of holes eaten by caterpillars.

How Owls Catch Chickens.

When I was a small boy I shot a horned owl, the spread of whose wings was four and one-half feet, and, to the surprise of the boys who had carried it for several miles, the weight was only two pounds. Owls were rather numerous at that time in that section of the country and were troublesome enough carrying off chickens, which mostly roosted in apple trees about the farm buildings. The belief that they could not carry off a grown hen was a common one. It was also commonly believed that the owl could picked a chicken off the roost, but, alighting on the limb, crowded the chicken off, and it fell to the ground caught it on the wing.—Forest and Stream.

Bacon and the Fishers.

In "Aubrey's Letters" an amusant story is told of Lord Bacon: "His lordship, being in the garden looking on fishers as they were drawing their nets, asked them what they would take for their catch. They answered so much. His lordship would needs give them more but so much. They drew up their nett, and in it were only two or three little fishes. The fishers said they had much better for them to have taken his offer. They replied they hoped to get more draft, but said his lordship, 'Hope is a good breakfast, but an ill supper.'"

A Paper House.

"Only think," exclaimed Penderson, "of the author who wrote 'Paper Boat' now put!"

"I know," replid Hasi. "I was at the theater the other night, and I was told it was all paper, and it was a fine, substantial looking structure too."

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $8, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

THE OLD BOYS' REUNION.

FINE REPORTS PRESENTED AT COMMITTEE MEETINGS HELD LAST NIGHT — EVERYTHING IN APPLE PIE ORDER—REGISTRATION OF VISITORS.

It is now an assured fact that, barring an earthquake, the Reunion of the Belleville Old Boys and Girls will be a huge success. Many visitors have already arrived, large numbers more of the "early birds" are expected to-morrow, and by Saturday the city will be coming in by thousands. The Grand Trunk, we are told will run no less than five special trains to accommodate the visitors to Belleville's Reunion.

An excellent meeting of the various committees was held at the committee rooms, Front St., last night, and the reports presented were all of the most encouraging nature. Everything was reported to be in first-class condition. Mr. J. J. H. Bird, marshal of the parade, reported that the outlook could hardly be brighter for a successful procession. The committee rooms on Front St. were being gaily decorated this morning, and now present a charming appearance.

Many visitors have already registered at the rooms, as will be seen by the list in another part of this paper, but the committee request that their friends may know they are in town.

It is the intention of The Intelligencer, so far as possible, to print each day a list of the visitors who register, together with their present address and the quarters they occupy while in this city. This will be an aid to those who wish to meet the old-timers, and furnish a valuable directory as to the different parts of the world in which Belleville boys and girls are now resident.

Many changes have been made as to the official programme. We'll here it is, corrected up to date:

ODDFELLOWS' RELIEF

MEETING AT KINGSTON CLOSED —A PROSPEROUS YEAR — DIRECTORS ELECTED.

Kingston, July 19.—The Oddfellows' Relief Association completed their work this afternoon. Reports showed the year was most prosperous. There were 2,361 new applications, making the total now 18,400. There was growth in all the Provinces, with mortality 1/4 over the normal, the rate being 5.88 per thousand. There was a substantial increase in revenue, $50,000 being added to the reserve, which is now $350,000. The Finance Committee reported no insurance society on this continent could show more careful economical management. The Committee on Laws and Amendments recommended a rating according to occupation, without distinction as to age, be prepared for next year. The directors elected were John Donogh, Toronto; C. H. White, Fort Hope; and S. Oxendorffer, Kingston.

ERNEST FLAGLER MADE HIS ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

WAS OUT IN PRISON YARD, RUNNING A LAWN MOWER, AND SUDDENLY MADE UP HIS MIND NOT TO WAIT FOR THE OLD BOYS' REUNION.

Readers of Police Court annals will remember the case of Ernest Flagler, who about two months ago was arrested in this city for housebreaking and stealing articles, which at the time of his arrest, were found in his possession. Flagler was tried, pleaded guilty and received a sentence of six months in the County Prison. That was on the 2nd of June. Since then Ernest remained in the County jail here, waiting for an official from the Central Prison to come after him. That, we are told, is the usual procedure in all Central Prison cases. Inasmuch as Flagler was about the only able-bodied prisoner in the jail he was generally given outdoor work to do, which necessitated considerable latitude being given him. Yesterday he was cutting the grass in the jail yard with a lawn mower. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Ernest was making the grass fly in great style. At 4.20 he was missing. The lawn mower was still there, but Mr. Flagler had disappeared, and hasn't been seen by the jail authorities since. Whether the work was considered too strenuous, or the lawn mower dull has not yet transpired. Anyhow, something caused Ernest to make up his mind not to wait for the Old Boys' Reunion. Search was of course, made for the missing prisoner, but so far he has not been located.

FEARFUL TRAGEDY AT WELLINGTON ON SUNDAY

IRA CHADSEY'S DELIBERATE ACT OF SELF-DESTRUCTION — CREMATED IN HIS OWN BARN.

The Picton Gazette gives the following additional particulars of the awful death of Mr. Ira Chadsey, of Wellington, which was at the time reported in The Intelligencer:

A very tragic affair occurred near Wellington Sunday morning, when Mr. Ira Chadsey, a farmer who resided just above the village was found cremated in a barn on the rear of his farm.

Some of the neighbors saw the barn burning about six o'clock in the morning, and on going to Mr. Chadsey's house could not find anything of him. Upon investigation a letter was found stating that he intended to take his final exit from this earth, and that his body would be found cremated. After the fire had subsided a few bones were found among the ashes.

Mr. Chadsey was the owner of the finest orchard in Prince Edward County, but for a number of years he has not been considered mentally sound on all subjects.

Hundreds of the curiously inclined visited the scene of the tragedy during Sunday.

The following notice, written by the deceased was found in Mr. Chadsey's house, which led to the finding of some bones, supposed to be those of his remains, in the basement of the burned barn on his farm. The letter was supposed to have been written about 12 o'clock on Saturday night and was addressed to Mr. G. W. Hunt:

"G. W. Hunt,—

Dear Sir,—It is now between eleven and twelve o'clock, and I have to go to the rear and return with the buggy. Have some work to do to finish readiness for my exit, then I shall bid farewell to the rear farm as has long been prepared for my cremation.

"I have no faltering feelings as yet and have hopes that I will have time to the last moment. After the fire is well started, I hope to lodge a revolver ball in my brain, which I hope will lessen my pains of death, but it will not take long to cause sufferings. As to the present, I have no faltering feelings. My whole desire is that you must let me be disappointed in the state of my writing, but I have done the best that I could, as the pickpocket said to me, 'that is the best any man can do.'"

"IRA CHADSEY."

(Wrote this while eating my last meal.)

In connection with the above, upon investigation, as above stated, a few bones were found on top of a charred pile of wood, in the basement of the barn which was burned on Sunday morning on the rear of Chadsey's farm.

In the barn was piled about five cords of dry wood, evidently for the purpose of making cremation doubly sure. This wood had evidently been thoroughly saturated with coal oil, as the empty oil can was in the basement. The supposition is that after piling the dry wood with oil, he got on top of the pile, fired the material, and shot himself in the head. The burned remains were found in the debris.

Double Drowning At Glen Island.

YOUNG MAN AND WOMAN, BOTH OF DESERONTO, FIND WATERY GRAVE — A SAD AFFAIR.

A double drowning accident occurred last evening at the southeast end of Glen Island. It appears that four young people, two ladies and two gentlemen, Misses Flossie Rogers and Bowen, Masters Jimmy Pigeon and J. MacIlroy, all residents of Deseronto, were at the island and about 6 o'clock they ventured out in a dinghy, the centre-board of which was out. Master Pigeon commenced to fill after being out a few feet from the shore. The parties made an effort to get the dinghy to shore, but instead it drifted farther out into deep water and soon filled and turned over. The occupants were thrown into the water and but one of them could swim, namely, one of the young men. At one time he had the other three clinging to him, but, becoming exhausted, was compelled to make two from their number while he swam to shore with one of the young ladies. The other two, Mr. J. MacIlroy and Miss Rogers, sank and were drowned. An effort was made last evening to recover the bodies before dark, but the proper appliances were not at hand. Word was sent to Deseronto and at an early hour this morning parties with grappling irons went to the scene of the disaster.

The unfortunate affair has cast a gloom over the town. Miss Rogers, one of the victims, is well known in Deseronto, but we understand that Mr. MacIlroy did not long lease a resident of the town.

HAPPY PICNICKERS.

TWO CITY CHURCHES HELD SUCCESSFUL PICNICS YESTERDAY

The excursions out of the city yesterday were largely attended, both during the day and in the evening.

The Tabernacle and Holloway St. Church Sunday Schools went to Forrester's Island, where a most enjoyable time was spent. In the evening the steamer Niagara also conveyed a large crowd down the bay. The I.O. O.F. Band was on board.

Christ Church Sunday School visited 12 o'Clock Point and also Presqu'ile. Many were in attendance. In the evening the steamer Aletha conveyed the excursionists up the bay. The band from Meyle was in attendance. The committee during the day received the following message:

Belleville, Ont., July 19.

Convey to S. S. best wishes for happy day.

W. R. HEGNEY.

Nothing occurred to mar the proceedings of either picnic.

MARRIED IN CALGARY.

FORMER RESIDENT OF THIS CITY BECOMES THE BRIDE OF A WESTERN GENTLEMAN.

A wedding took place yesterday at Calgary, N.W.T., in which a former resident of the city was one of the principals. The groom was Mr. Fred J. McKeage, of Calgary, and the bride Miss Ethel E. Allan Brown, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Brown, on resident of the city, Town Line. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Archdeacon Webb. Many friends in this city will wish the couple much happiness in her wedded life.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy—The Best in Existence.

T. M. Wood, manager of the Weitz County News, Manchester, Ark., in reply to a representative southern business man, who had written him concerning Chamberlain's cough remedy, among other things, says, "It gives me pleasure to say that Chamberlain's colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the most satisfactory results, I believe it to be the best remedy of the kind in existence." Sold by all druggists.

Relic of Prince Charlie

Cornwall, July 19. — Mrs. (Rev.) Clark, of Morrisburg, is possessor of a relic of great historic value and still present usefulness. It is a large 200 quart iron kettle, in which for the last 200 years has been in the Cameron clan of Scotland, of which Mrs. Clarke is a direct descendant, the relic having been sent to her family and brought by her to Canada. Its historic importance is due to the fact that it was used by Prince Charles in his flight from Great Britain in 1745. The chest is massively constructed and is strongly bound with iron clasps. It is about five feet long, and wide in proportion.

THE THIN MAN'S DANGER.

He can't resist disease germs—that's why he's such a mark for consumption. In this kind of thinness is wickedness, especially when it's any way associated with hoarseness. This remarkable tissue builder knows you fat quickly; it does so by forming blood that's rich, nourishing and health-giving. Torrezone supplies the nutriment needed by worn-out nerves, rapidly constructs muscle and fatty tissue. The form fills out, the cheeks redden, proving that weight is being added. To be well you must stay well, use Torrezone. Fifty chocolate coated tablets in a box for fifty cents, or six boxes for $2.50, at all dealers.

LIGHTNING WAS WICKED.

Joshua Goodwin of Hintonburg Killed by Bolt While in Bed—John Dafoe Killed at Tamworth.

Ottawa, July 20.—Joshua Goodwin, a market gardener, who lived at Seventh avenue, Hintonburg, was killed by lightning in his bed at 1.30 yesterday morning. His son was lying alongside of him and was injured. The lightning came through the roof. The old man called for a drink of water as soon as he was struck, and his son was able to bring it to him. He lived for about 15 minutes, but died before a doctor arrived.

Man Killed and Barn Burned.

Kingston, July 20.—Lightning killed John Dafoe of Trenton while in a barn near Tamworth yesterday morning. The barn was burned. Dafoe was visiting the farmer's house. The hail-storm was very severe throughout the country.

75 Deaths in New York.

New York, July 20.—Yesterday's death roll from heat reached 75, being nearly half of those prostrated. This was almost entirely due to the collapse of young children and aged persons. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon came the long-awaited relief, when a north-east current and a deluge of rain burst over Brooklyn and the lower part of Manhattan and sections of New Jersey. Brooklyn, as usual, was severe struck by lightning and seriously hurt, and in Jersey City one man was killed.

Worst in 30 Years.

Cornwall, July 20.—The worst thunderstorm of 20 years visited this section last night. The Cecil Hotel plant was obliged to close down about 2 a.m. Three houses in town were struck by lightning and in one Mrs. John Hoch was stunned by the lightning and suffered a severe shock.

Hail Destroys Green House.

Kingston, July 20.—The severe hail-storm yesterday morning broke 400 feet of glass in Johnson's greenhouses. This is the worst break through hail he has had in 25 years.

Season's Hay Crop Burned.

Deloro, July 20.—During a severe thunderstorm yesterday afternoon the barn of John Boughners on the 11th concession, North Wallaghan, was struck by lightning and burned to the ground. All this season's hay crop was consumed, along with farm implements. The house is heavy, partly covered by insurance.

Barn Burned.

Brockville, July 20.—Following Tuesday's storm, which struck from the northeast, another violent disturbance took place yesterday morning about seven o'clock, extending over a wide area of this section. Very little damage was done in Brockville beyond the blowing down of shade trees, but throughout the country district barns were struck by lightning and burned in a wholesale manner. Several horses and cattle are also reported killed in the river Tuesday night. The gale caught numerous pleasure boats, many of which upset, but the occupants were all rescued, in some cases with difficulty.

Four Barns Burned.

Chester, July 20.—One of the fiercest electrical storms visited this town and surrounding country Tuesday evening that the oldest inhabitant ever witnessed. Four barns were burned to the ground.

"Where light and air cannot come the doctor must." is more true than most people suppose.

FIVE PRIESTS DROWNED

Father Cusack and Four Brothers Perish in Lake Aylmer.

Man and Girl Drowned Near Deseronto—Only Swimmer in Boating Party of Four Rescues One Girl—Sailing Canoe Capsized at Rondeau Provincial Park and G. H. Kindler, Manager Standard Theatre, Drowned.

Montreal, July 20.—An exceedingly and fatality occurred yesterday at Lake Aylmer, some thirty miles from Sherbrooke.

Rev. Father Cusack, administrator of the diocese of St. Hyacinthe, and two brothers named Murphy and two named Codden went out boating and, their boat upsetting, all five were drowned.

The bodies have not yet been recovered.

Sailing Canoe Capsized.

Ridgetown, July 20.—G. H. Kindler, 23 years old and manager of a Cleveland orchestra, who has been camping at Rondeau Provincial Park for the past two weeks was drowned yesterday afternoon. He and another young fellow went out on the bay in a canoe and Kindler was in the act of climbing up a small sail when the canoe capsized. The boy managed to hold on to the canoe until rescued.

Fell On Wharf.

London, July 20.—Maurice, the 9-year-old son of Chauncey Smith, a wholesale fruiter, was drowned at Port Stanley Harbor yesterday. It is supposed that he fell on the wharf. His body was found floating in the water.

Tried to Swim Ashore.

Hamilton, July 20.—Fred Hazer, 157 Caroline street, and David Harrowed, 846 East Main street, started out yesterday morning to row to the beach to find refuge from the heat. Hager did not know how to handle the oars and he upset the boat about 100 yards from the foot of Macnab street. His companion rescued all but Hazer with difficulty. The dead man had been living at 157 Princess street, but had been ordered away on account of his illness and his people are all right, unless family in either New York or China.

Drowned in Digby Gut.

Halifax, July 20.—A drowning accident occurred in Digby Gut about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. A small fishing boat, containing two brothers, Thomas and Richard Hardwick of Parker's Cove, was coming into the gut. A stiff breeze was blowing at the time, but the boat was seen to suddenly capsize, hurling its occupants into the water. Thomas was drowned, but Richard was rescued by boatmen from Victoria Beach.

Pittsburg Man Drowned.

Washago, July 20.—Mr. Grover Cleveland Cranford, No. 1 Wilkins place, hanged himself yesterday afternoon. Mr. Cranford and his wife and children went to the St. Bartholomew Mission in Washago. When they returned at 8 o'clock they did not find their husband and father waiting for them as had expected. They went home to him in the basement, hanging from a beam. Deceased had written a note and on his life. Crawford had been employed as a stationary engineer by the Rheinhardt Brewery Co. He was 26 years of age and came to Toronto from Pickering, Ont. There will not be an Inquest.

The British House of Peers.

Of the British house of peers, embracing dukes, marquises, earls, viscounts and barons, numbering over 500 persons, not one can trace his title and arms back further than the year 1351. The peers are nearly all of recent creation, especially those of the higher ranks. The barons go furthest back, in the English peerage but one—Zouche of Haryngworth—goes back as far as 1308, but most baronies are creations of the nineteenth century, and but twenty-six date as far back as the seventeenth century. The Scotch peers average older dates of creation than the English, the East of Sutherland dating back to 1235, which has one issue who got his title in 1274 and another, Michael C. DeCourcy, whose date is 1181.

Monnet-Sully Overcome.

This is a story of M. Monnet-Sully, the popular actor of United Greece, and when he saw the Parthenon he was overcome with emotion. Surrounded by poets, artists and archaeologists, he suddenly dropped upon his knees and then lay full length, kissed the dust below and cried: "Holy ground! Holy ground!" His companions gazed at him respectfully, much impressed by this homage to the soil. As they were about to quit the scene M. Monnet-Sully declared them by a gesture. They thought he was going to make a speech; but, to their surprise, he dropped to earth again and kissed it fervently anew. Then he rose and uttered the same words, "That is for my brother!"—London Chronicle.

Popularity of Ostrich Tips.

The demand for ostrich tips is undoubtedly on the increase, and in many cases they are now chosen to trim the under side of the brim and the flowers of large hats, whereas hitherto the contrary has been the case. Much of the ostrich used is very little curled. An arrangement of such tips attached to the side of an upturned brim and sweeping downward is called the "willow plume." One model is trimmed at the side in this way with dull yellow tips, and at the other, white among the crown, and at the back are arranged pansies in different shades of mauve, violet and purple brown mixed with their leaves.—Paris Cor. Millinery Trade Review.

QUITS AS A SENATE LEADER

Sir Mackenzie Bowell Announces His Retirement—Trading Stamp Bill Passed—Prorogation To-day.

Ottawa, July 20.—Sir Mackenzie Bowell sprang a sensation on the Senate last midnight, when, on the motion to adjourn, he announced that when the Senate met again next session he would not occupy the post of leader of the Opposition. Sir Mackenzie said he would devote his time and attention to the business of the Senate, but declined to be relieved of the duties which fell upon a leader.

Senator Scott expressed keen regret at the announcement. There were few men, he said, who were so familiar with the history of the Dominion.

Referring to a remark made by Sir Mackenzie in regard to his own superannuated retirement, Senator Scott said it was the first he had heard of it. It was merely newspaper talk, and it was not the intention to resign unless it was the desire of the Government that he should do so. He hoped to lead the Government in the Senate for at least another year.

Prorogation at 5 p. m.

The Senate adjourned till 2 o'clock to-day, and prorogation is expected to take place about 5 this afternoon.

The trading stamp bill was read a third time. Senator Landry moved a push up his opposition to the anti-trading stamp bill in the Senate at the end of the season. Shortly after the up-town meeting at 11 o'clock, Senator Landry took the floor against the measure. He talked until 4 o'clock, and then announced that he would resume at 8 o'clock and repeat his observations in French.

There was some doubt expressed as to the form of that clause of the bill which brings the bill into effect on November 1, but Senator Landry had been induced to close off at 9 o'clock, Sir Mackenzie Bowell arose and said he had received the assurance of the promoter of the bill in Commons that he would be in his position and effect of the cause was that the act should come into force on the date named, and he considered this satisfactory.

Moreover, it was intimated to Mr. Landry that the Government was determined to put the bill at the end. Then Mr. Landry might count upon having to hold the fort all night unaided.

Brief Commons Session.

Ottawa, July 20.—There was a certain solid satisfaction in sitting around here this morning while the Senate is working. So said Mr. R. L. Borden yesterday morning after the House had had forty minutes of Hon. Richard Jaffray without any definite word as to when the Senate would be ready for prorogation.

It will not take place to-day, but I hope it will be to-morrow," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, provoking Mr. Borden's remark above quoted.

Members received the news with some disappointment.

The House adjourned till 11 o'clock to-day, when it will receive a couple of papers as well as the measures from the Senate.

At 3 o'clock to-day the first session of the tenth Parliament of Canada will be duly prorogued.

The session has lasted ten days over six months.

SHUT OUT BY 5 YEAR LIMIT.

Twelve Ex-Cabinet Ministers Who Cannot Draw Pension.

Ottawa, July 20.—The provision in the pension law which makes only those Ministers who have served five years eligible to a pension excludes a very large number of former members of the Cabinet. Deceased are: Sir John A. Macdonald, Hon. W. B. Montague, A. Archibald, G. E. Foster, Q. Tupper, David Tisdale and Hugh John Macdonald, all of whom served less than one year.

Sir Henri Joly, now Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, was a Cabinet Minister for nearly three years.

Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., was a Minister for slightly less than two years.

Hon. A. R. Angers served about four years, and J. C. Patterson served three and a half years.

Sir Louis Davies served over five years, but under the provisions of the law, he cannot draw a pension while he is drawing salary as a Judge.

Grand Lodge A. F. & A. M.

Hamilton, July 20.—Nearly 1,200 delegates are attending the Grand Lodge meeting of the A. F. & A. M., which opened in the Drill Hall yesterday morning. Extensive preparations are being made to receive about 200 more. Mayor Biggar was welcomed by Alf. Malo and Dickson, extended the civic welcome to the lodge yesterday morning. The most important matter to come before the annual address referred to the material progress of the order, progress which has been summered by disaster or any untoward circumstance.

Send 100 Miles For Doctor.

Meeteetse, Wyo., July 20.—Three miners were killed yesterday by an explosion in the Kirwin coal mine near here. There was no doctor within 100 miles of the scene. Physicians 100 miles to the southeast, but Dr. Richards, at the Elk Basin, across the mountainous distance in a little less than eleven hours. Four relays were used by Dr. Richards, the last a horseback along the route supplying the horses.

Chinese Boycott is On.

Washington, July 20.—A cablegram received in the state department from Shanghai says the boycott against American goods commenced yesterday. Every effort was made to allay the agitation, which, it is stated, is a part of the retaliation of the Chinese against the exclusion laws of the United States.

Nine Months Sentence.

Toronto, July 20.—George Chapelle pleaded guilty in the Police Court yesterday to stealing a money order for £1 10s from H. F. Langdon. He was sent to the Central for nine months.

Force of Habit.

"A thousand stars are boiling down on you this night!" said the poetical young man to the girl.

And she unconsciously put her hands up to arrange the position of her hat.

HAD RUN FOR HIS MONEY

Railway Superintendent Little Favored With Buckshot.

Was Carrying $17,000 to Pay the Men When He Was Held Up by Italian Highwaymen Near Sherbrooke, Quebec—Bandits Mixed Booty As a Result of Bad Shooting and the Nerve of the Manitou.

Montreal, July 20.—By a superb exhibition of pluck Mr. A. C. Lytle of this city managed to defeat two Italian highwaymen near Sherbrooke and get away with $17,000 they tried to rob him of. He returned to Montreal yesterday morning with a number of buckshot in various parts of his body, but no serious wounds.

Mr. Lytle is superintendent of the Orford Mountain Railway. Tuesday afternoon he started out in a rig with a foreman to pay the men, having $17,000 with them.

Held Up Italian Bandits.

On a quiet stretch of road between Kingsbury and Windsor Mills he was suddenly stopped by Italians with shotguns who demanded his money. One of the Italians shot the horse. Mr. Lytle jumped out of the rig and only one got to face them and seizing the satchel of money made for the bush. The robbers fired at him as he made the attack with shot, slightly wounding Mr. Lytle, who in turn jumped up and ran after them. Three times more the highwaymen fired after Mr. Lytle, each time wounding the pluckshot in his body, but failed to disable him.

Highwaymen Heard Shots.

By this time Italian laborers heard the shots and the fact that the highwaymen made off, having failed in their object. Mr. Lytle was taken to the storekeeper and his wounds dressed, and he then came to Montreal, where the wounds were treated. It was only by good luck and bad shooting that he escaped with his life. The Italian highwaymen were arrested, and it is expected that the other two will soon be captured.

An Italian foreman, who accompanied Mr. Lytle, had a ball shot in the leg. Mr. Lytle was shot in the leg, arm and shoulder.

What They Overlooked.

They carried $17,000 in all, but $10,000 was in the bank at Windsor Mills, which the robbers overlooked, when the cashier made off with the $7,000 which contained $7,000 notes.

Mr. Lytle was brought into Montreal at noon yesterday and taken to the hospital. His wounds are serious, but it is not thought they will prove fatal. He was too weak on arriving to give any account of the affair.

SELECTIONS

THE "GREEN PERIL."

Abdath's Fearful Hold Upon the People of France.

Writers are quite agreed that the French public against what is termed the "green peril," in other words, absinth. Its consumption has led to a fearful rise in the increase in France. In Belgium an interdict has been placed on the terrible drink, and its manufacture and sale are now forbidden in that country. Statistics show that of the annual consumption of 100,000,000 hectoliters, or 2,020,000 gallons, in which wines, beers and spirits are annually absorbed by French people, men and women, for the women have also learned to drink the fiery liquor, 36 per cent is absinth. Fifty years ago only 735 hectoliters of absinth were consumed in France. The increase of luxury is attributed to the deleterious drink. Sixty years back there were only 10,000 registered taverns, and now there are 500,000. The increase in crime is also traced to the love of absinth among the masses.

Dr. Garnier in his "Folie a Paris" and his "Criminal Psychiatry" gives numerous cases in proof of this, but he says that if absinthism and alcoholism are the sole creators of moral perversion they may, in his opinion, be considered the predominating causes of the same. Doctor Forbet further says that in a family addicted to alcoholic drinks absinth is taken in the first soup, and also "alcoholism, lunacy and crime form a somber trilogy closely united and interlaced."

M. Talmeyr, who quotes Dr. Garnier, is more emphatic than the medical man is. He accordingly calls upon the government to do something, but he is doubtful if the example of Belgium with regard to absinth will be imitated in France.—London Telegraph.

The Toothpick In Indianapolis.

"Indianapolis women have the toothpick habit," said an observing visitor. "I went to one place where hundreds of them eat at noon, and you could track it by the toothpicks on the pavements, while the halls of the lighting hotels literally sowed with toothpicks. Most of the women you meet coming away from the place are chewing toothpicks. At the public cafes and private boarding houses most women stop and take toothpicks the same as the men. I rode downtown in a car which passes through a residence street every morning this week I was in Indianapolis, and in one of the most beautiful homes sat a daintily dressed elderly woman in the front window using her toothpick. To live up to the Indianapolis reputation for culture its women will have to give up the toothpick habit."—Indianapolis News.

VOL. 39 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JULY 21, 1905. NO. 69

IN PRISON IN CANADA.

Son of Former Mormon Leader is Charged With Forgery.

Salt Lake, Utah, July 21.—John Quayle Cannon, son of George Q. Cannon, and a man who has been prominent in public life in Utah for many years, is in custody at Lethbridge, Northwest Territory, where he was arrested on request of Chief of Police Lynch of Salt Lake City.

Cannon is charged with forgery and uttering fraudulent checks while acting as secretary of Utah's Louisiana Purchase Exposition commission last year.

The affairs of the commission were subjected to an investigation by the Utah Legislature last February, it became apparent that there was something wrong with the accounts, but a shortage of almost $2,100 was made good and the matter was closed so far as the Legislature was concerned.

Mormons and Gentiles are working in the interest of John Q. Cannon, and it is intimated that Gov. Cutler of Utah, as a result of the great pressure that has been brought on him from various sources, will refuse to issue a requisition for Cannon.

Masonic Officers Elected.

Hamilton, July 21.—Before the Grand Lodge A. F. & A. M. closed yesterday these officers were elected: R. W. Bro James H. Burritt, K. C., Pembroke, Grand Master; R. W. Bro. A. T. Freel, Hamilton, Deputy Grand Master; R. W. Bro. F. J. Howell, Hamilton, Grand Senior Warden; W. Bro. H. T. White, Toronto, Grand Junior Warden; R. W. Bro. E. T. Malone, Toronto, Grand Treasurer; M. W. Bro. Hugh Murray, Hamilton, Grand Secretary; W. Bro. John Lawson, London, Grand Registrar; W. Bro. H. Hewitt, Brantford, Grand Chaplain. These five members of the board of general purposes were elected: R. W. Bro. A. F. Webster, Toronto; R. W. Bro. J. C. Morgan, Barrie; R. W. Bro. G. S. May, Ottawa; R. W. Bro. D. Cann, Hamilton; R. W. Bro. J. A. McFadden, Stratford. The next Grand Lodge meeting will be held in Toronto.

Penitentiary and Lash.

Montreal, July 21.—Goldsberry, the employe of Lemon Bros' circus, held at Roberval in connection with the disgusting outrage recently reported by a number of the circus men on a fourteen-year-old girl of that place, was on Wednesday sentenced to a year in penitentiary at Quebec with ten stripes of the cat-o'-nine tails fifteen days after his entry to the penitentiary, and ten more fifteen days before his free-dom.

Parliament Was Wound Up.

Earl Grey Congratulates Members and They Go Home.

Passage of Measures Erecting the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan Into the Confederation Excites His Excellency's Hearty Approval — Close of a Very Long and Laborious Session — Final House Proceedings.

Ottawa, July 21.—The tenth Parliament of the Dominion was closed at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Lord Grey. There were the usual pomp ceremonials. The Governor-General's Foot Guards furnished a guard of honor, and the Princess Louise Dragoon Guards supplied the escort to His Excellency the Governor-General to and from Rideau Hall.

A Royal salute was fired both on arrival and departure of Earl Grey, and a large concourse of people were present on the hill. The total proceedings only lasted forty minutes. There was a very slim attendance of members of the Commons and Senate, and by 3:40 the session had died. Parliament was opened on January 11, and closed on July 20. The total number of working days was 129.

In the Senate, Lord Grey delivered the following speech from the Throne:

Speech From the Throne.

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In relieving you from this laborious and long-protracted session, I desire to express my hearty congratulations on the passage of the two important measures providing for the entry into the Confederacy of the Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The unparalleled increase in the population during the last three years of the areas the new Provinces embrace affords the strongest evidence that at no distant date they will be the homes of many millions of prosperous and contented people.

The fair prospects of an unusually abundant harvest, no alone in the above prairie Provinces, but also in other parts of this wide Dominion, will, I trust, under a kind Providence, be fully realized, justifying the hope that the stream of immigration now flowing into the Dominion will continue for many years to come, adding wealth to this highly-favored land.

The addition to the number of the Provinces from which you have authorized will enable my relieving the taxpayers of the United Kingdom from the burden of keeping up the garrisons at Esquimalt and at Halifax.

It is very gratifying to note that the revenue of the Dominion continues to maintain the high level it had reached two years ago, thus enabling my Government to meet the increased expenditure chargeable against consolidated revenue, leaving a surplus to apply on capital account.

The numerous private bills for industrial objects to which I have assented point to the existence of many new enterprises.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I thank you in His Majesty's name for the supplies you have so liberally voted.

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

In returning to your several homes I allow me to express the hope that you will find abundant evidences of the growing prosperity, and that before we meet again at another session some progress may have been made in the work of constructing the national transcontinental railway soon to become a necessity for the transportation of the annually increasing products of the west.

In the House.

The Commons met yesterday at 11 o'clock. Mr. W. F. Maclean read a letter from a commercial gentleman in Toronto complaining of the tax upon commercial travelers in Quebec.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that he had no complaints against it. He had not even seen the statute.

Mr. E. B. Borden asked the Government to consider the election law during recess with a view of making certain amendments. He said that in the United States there was a provision in the law that did not permit persons who were members of Parliament practising that profession in the Departments.

Sir Wilfrid said he would consider the matter. He could see that abuses might arise from members of Parliament practising in the direction just mentioned.

Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, replying to a question put by Hon. Geo. Foster a few days ago, said that it was not finally decided yet whether or not to remove the meteorological observatory from Toronto to Ottawa. The University of Toronto had offered a site on Bloor street, but the Government had not yet decided what was to be done.

Mr. Lamont (Saskatchewan) asked the Minister of Railways if it were correct that the Grand Trunk Pacific had located its line west of Winnipeg in connect with the Regina & Prince Albert road and had commenced work at Portage la Prairie.

Mr. Emerson said that so far the map showing the location had not been presented to his Department for approval.

The order paper was cleaned up and the Commons adjourned, waiting prorogation.

Indian Education.

Ottawa, July 21.—Representatives of the Methodist, Anglican and Presbyterian Churches and Messrs. Macdonald and Inkster waited upon the Hon. Frank Oliver, yesterday. Dr. Sutherland represented the Methodists, H. Hall, K. C., the Anglicans, and Dr. McKay, Rev. Mr. Martin and Mr. R. Hay, K. C., of Toronto, the Presbyterians.

Fixing Up Quebec Citadel.

Quebec, July 21.—The Citadel forthwith in the city has been closed to visitors on account of a large force of workmen now engaged in repairs. In the meantime the garrison will go into camp at Levis, leaving only a small detachment in the fortress for guard duty.

Calling the Strike Off.

Chicago, July 21.—The strike of lumber drivers in the city has been declared off.

YOUNG MOTHER HANGS HERSELF

Found Dead by Her Husband—A Winnipeg Coincidence

Winnipeg, July 21.—An extraordinary coincidence occurred here yesterday when William Richardson, an employee of the city quarry, was found dead in his bed and Mrs. Richardson, wife of another William Richardson, was found dead, suspended by the neck. The former apparently died from natural causes, heart disease being attributed, but the latter was a clear case of suicide. An additional odd circumstance is her husband is also a civic employe.

She was broken-hearted, according to her husband's story, because her mother had taken her child from her care. Richardson discovered the body of his wife when he came home to dinner at 12.15 o'clock noon. She had attached a rope to the knob of the door at the top of the stairs leading to the first floor of the house and swung the rope around to the other side of the door and over the top of it, thus making the rope short enough to suspend her body six inches from the floor.

Mrs. Richardson was 18 years of age.

SUING C. P. R. FOR $29,000.

Refusal to Take Laborers Got Italian Into Trouble.

Montreal, July 21.—Antonio Cordasco, known as king of the Italian colony, and who has figured in court at various times, has taken an action for $29,000 against the Canadian Pacific.

He alleges that the C. P. R. failed to carry out its contract with him, in so much as the railway employed him to furnish them in, the spring of 1904 4,000 laborers and that afterward the C. P. R. failed to take the men.

He further alleges that the men hoofed about Montreal to their own and his detriment, and that he got in trouble with the Government in consequence of the men not being employed and further that his own reputation suffered.

Foley Bros. Get Contract.

Montreal, July 21.—At the C. P. R. headquarters yesterday William Whyte, vice-president, and other powers, was decided to give the contract for the double tracking of the road from Fort William to Winnipeg, 424 miles, to Foley Bros. Three years are allowed for completion. Rapid work will be started at once east and west of Fort Portage.

Bectisman Killed.

St. Catharines, July 21.—William Wiley, a sectionman on the G. T. R., was run down yesterday afternoon on the track just west of the city, when a fast freight train came along. Wiley stepped off the track to let it pass. He stood too close, however, and was killed. He was 63 years of age. He leaves a widow, five daughters and two sons.

Two Young Men Drown.

St. John, N. B., July 21.—Two brothers, Roy and Howard Wayne, of Fairville, near here, were drowned in the Bay of Fundy, yesterday while fishing. The boat was run down by the Eastern Steamship Co's steamer Pentagoet and cut in two in the fog.

Worn Silver Coins.

A Toronto church, on Sunday last, found that it had taken in, on the collection plates, no less than $40.00 worth of worn silver coins which were worthless, so far as their nominal currency was concerned. Such instances as this are apt to make people ask when the Government is going to take action in this matter. Much old silver coin is stored now in vaults of street railway companies, in church treasuries, and by the trade generally, awaiting some authoritative announcement. It does not seem to be prudent to sell out to junk dealers at one-third or one-fourth of the face value, when there is a prospect that the purchaser may pass the coin over to the Government at a profit of two or three hundred per cent. As the quantity of worn coins offered to street railways, to small shops, to church collections, to newsboys and other receivers of small change, continues to be large, there is a suspicion that old coin already sold at bullion prices to dealers have found their way back into circulation.

It is time that an authoritative statement were made so that the owners of these goods would know what to do with them. If there is to be no reduction it would be well for those who are selling their supply as old silver to take care that it shall be fit for nothing else when it leaves their hands.

At this moment we are supposed, as a country, to be trying to get rid of United States silver coins. Yet a worn American coin is taken everywhere in Canada at its face value while one of Canadian silver is promptly refused. This appears to be a premium for the use of foreign coinage.

There is one right thing to do in this matter. The Canadian Government, which makes a clear profit of more than a hundred per cent. on all the silver coin for Canada, ought to redeem the worn Canadian silver. The loss would only be the amount of wear and the cost of coinage, or say, five per cent. on the face value of the money. As the coins condemned in any one year would be a small per-centage of the total circulation, the Government would still make a large profit out of silver coinage.

Rather we should say the Government would have continued to make such a handsome profit if Mr. Fielding had not been persuaded to build a Canadian mint. As the interest alone on the cost of this mint, to say nothing of the expense of operation, will be several times the annual cost of all the coin hitherto done for Canada, the profits will be largely thrown away.

Why Not Do "a Partner's" Duty?

The Minister of Militia bounds that Canada, as a partner nation of Great Britain, is alive to her responsibilities in regard to all-round defensive measures. He believes that a chain of forts stretching from the Atlantic to the Pacific will meet the case. Sir Frederick forgets, says the London Free Press, that Canada is not only an inland country, but marine as well, and inter-oceanic at that. She does more than fish and carry on lake and river. Her agencies are now on every water-stretch throughout the world, for is she not seventh on the list of the shipping powers? Logic is wrong; she was seventh, but has fallen a notch, and become eighth, under the present regime. Still that is high up in the scale of marine countries. Well, what protects the ships of Canada thus poking about wherever there is a bit of damp earth? Will the chain of forts do it? Heggly. What is the work of a navy. Has Canada a navy? Can Sir Frederick point to one effective gunboat in the Dominion ocean service in which the crew has not recently been in mutiny? He would be hard put to do it. What, then, is the duty of Canada toward extensive ocean shipping? What is Canada to do when a sealing ship gets overhauled by a power like Uruguay, for instance, her cargo seized, and her captain and crew put in the dungeon keep? Can we get any redress of our own efforts for such an insult to our flag and such injury to our fellow-subjects? We must rely upon battleships and cruisers in an grave an emergency. But if we do not provide them, where do we look for their help in time of need? As Sir Frederick knows full well, it is to Old England that we must appeal. Yet what claim have we upon the services of the British navy if we do not give something for its support? None. If that is so, ought Canada not do that something, and do it promptly? Should she not build and equip at least one ship of the line for the British navy? That would be the act of a friendly national offshoot—a faithful, generous partner. After the fit of generosity just witnessed in the House, members might take thought of Canada's responsibilities beyond the provision of forts chained together landward, and large areas of inland territory devoted to field manoeuvres. They might reflect that we have a very extensive marine interest looking far abroad on business bent. How this interest fares in its battle with the world should be a matter of deep legislative concern.

It felt, this morning, as though the moth balls were nearly due to make their escape from the overcoat.

Put out your flags, good people
You can let your surplus tin
There'll be doings to-morrow morning
When that Toronto train comes in.

A subscriber wants to know if the hay crop is safe yet. Likely. It has been great hay weather lately.

Is the steam roller going to be in the procession on Monday. Field Marshal Fine should be mount one guns on it and call it a battleship on wheels.

That procession, according to all accounts, is going to be the warmest thing that ever happened in Belleville. There will be seventeen bands, counting the rubber bands the aldermen wear round their cheets, to keep them from sticking out too far.

Some of the old boys will think Belleville is in a state of widowhood, judging by the weeds she wears.

Notice how the decorations are going up? The old town will look gay to-morrow.

Some gratifying wireless messages are alleged to have been received, as follows:

Premier Laurier: "Would like to be with you, but can't. It will take all my time to spend my salary now."

Capt. Paul Boynton: "I haven't had a diving suit on for years, but I'll be there to do stunts in the harbor with your Mayor."

Admiral Kingsmill: "Can't see me, sure. Regards to Mr. O'Flynn. Hope the battleship is all right."

Marshal Foch: "Hope to be there, and, in company with Belleville military men, inaugurate a turning movement in the direction of the Quinte."

Sir William Mulock: "Your kind invitation declined with thanks. Afraid I'd get too many boquets in Belleville for the beautiful way I've "improved" your post office."

President Roosevelt: "Thanks for inviting, but think I'll send Collector Bump to take my place."

Earl Grey: "I'll be there sure. Minto told me of the dandy "plug" hats your people wear."

Hon. Sydney Fisher: "Can't possibly come. Two busy driving politics out of the militia."

"The Auditor General: "Count on me. I have long wished to meet Mr. Hurley, and find out his plan of making all census accounts."

Hon. Chas. Hyman: "Don't think I'll come. I see nothing on programme about pigs' feet and beer."

Sir Gilbert Parker: "I would climb "A Ladder of Swords" to come, but really I'm all behind in my correspondence."

Wrestler Hawkey: "What's the use of inviting me? Plenty of people in your neighborhood can show how to use the trick ballot-boxes."

Byron O. Lott: "Not on your life. I had hard enough work getting ball the last time I was in Belleville."

A streamer at the foot of the steps leading to the County Jail says "Welcome to our guests." That ought to coax Ernest Flagler back again.

A gentleman tells us a story in connection with the big Twelfth of July procession in this city. Two old gentlemen, he says, were standing on Front street, watching the parade as it passed down. At last one of them grew tired and said to the other, "Come on, Mike, let's go."

Mike demurred. "No, no," he said, "I'll stay here till I see the end of it."

"The end of it!" said the one who wanted to move, "bogorra, you'll not see that to-day; sure, as fast as them Orangemen leave the market square they do be making new ones."

It's a pity that some of the Dumps across the line, who foam at the mouth when they see a British flag, could not come here just now and see the Stars and Stripes which, on many buildings, form part of the decorations. It might open the eyes, even if it did not broaden the minds, of those small-souled people.

The problem when confronts many housewives in this city at present is: "How can you earn bacon when you can't get them to earn?"

The sale of "hair-restorers" by baldheaded barbers goes on. Vanity and the fight against wrinkles, dandruff, feet, obesity, undue attenuation, too prominent noses and even ungainly feet, line the pockets of a small class of the community upon the weaknesses of their fellows. In an American city a "beauty doctor" has just been arrested for obtaining money under false pretences. A wrinkled woman went all the way from Denver to New York in order to have the foot prints of Miss —— removed from her face. She paid for six weeks' "treatment." At the expiration of that period the lady arrived at her and children were affrighted when they gazed upon the "doctor's" handiwork. She complained to the district attorney. The publicity attending the case brought in complaints from many others. When the "doctor's" office was raided a number of other men—"patients" — were discovered. The men were not so young or so handsome as they would like to be and they were paying the face moulder to make them more attractive. The "doctor" had attracted custom of this sort by advertising that he had replaced a man's ear and a woman's finger by grafting. He was a "grafter," as to speak. Human vanity and gullibility evidently, are not on the wane.

The utterances of Mr. Avery, M.P., as reported in Hansard at the time of the ballot-box discussion in Parliament, are worth a perusal for this issue, in connection with Mr. Porter's speech are worthy the attention of all honest and honorable electors. Mr. Avery makes out an exceedingly strong case. What is the Government going to do about it? Nothing.

Parliament has prorogued. Sing the doxology.

MR. SIMON SANFORD PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY AFTER-NOON.

Mr. Simon Sanford died yesterday afternoon at the residence of his son, Mr. R. A. Sanford, of this city. Deceased, who was 83 years of age, was born in Jefferson County, N.Y. The greater portion of his life was spent in this country. During the Fenian Raid Mr. Sanford was on duty at Prescott, He was connected with the militia for many years. Of late years the deceased had been in failing health. Mrs. Sanford preceded her husband to the tomb some years since. Two surviving members of the family are five sons and four daughters. The sons are George, M. Sow Ford, of Phoenix, Ariz.; R. A., Randall and Knowlton of this city, and the daughters are Mrs. Moodie, of Toronto; Mrs. J. Perkins, of this city; Mrs. T. Todd and Mrs. G. Abrahams, of Phoenix, N.Y.

Capt. Hicks' Ailment.

Picton Times: Capt. Hicks of the Varuna is suffering with a cancer on his lip. It is a singular incident that Capt. Hicks should be the third one on the Varuna to be afflicted with cancer. Capt. Porte had cancer in the stomach, Engineer Norcross had cancer of the liver and now Capt. Hicks has one on the lip. Capt. Anderson will be in charge of the boat during Capt. Hicks' treatment.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Ruth, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey of Agnewville, Va., was seriously ill of cholera infantum in the summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says "I happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In five hours I saw a change for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. On every hand we are complimented on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect fac-simile of the book. Nothing has seemingly been left out—anything which has been included could very well have been "left" complete and perfect "as best" describe it. Already we have sold over 1,000 Bellevillians in other places, in words of unstinted praise about what we have it—3 copy for yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great Reunion, and we have planned it. It is a fountain pen—that daily companion—and is appropriately named after City of Belleville." It is a regular $2.50 pen, fully guaranteed. We only have a gross—14 customers for it seems a bargain. They will not be on sale until Saturday, and then for three days only—Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. We plant them on sale at half-price—$1.00 pen for $1.50.

Bogus Ballot-Boxes in House of Commons.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Mr. Graham was not a Minister at that time.

Mr. Porter. I stand corrected; it was later, but because Mr. Minister. He was a member of the Cabinet Legislature and he was the leader in the first portion of the province where that fraud was perpetrated. It is a strange thing that he should be occupying the position with the knowledge he did. I am pleased that he should be filling that position, unless the explanation be that he got him there in order that the arrangement between the Premier of Ontario, Sir Oliver Mowat, and the Prime Minister of Canada, and he was called in to help to perform the bargain. I cannot account for it in any other way. But there is one thing which I think he should explain, and that is this: The evidence discloses that on the last trial made in Waterdown, when those boxes were paid for, and when the arrangements with regard to shipping and smuggling them across the river were completed, when Shibley and Healy were on their way home, instead of going directly to Kingston in the usual way, they went down to Ogdensburg, crossed the river to Prescott, took the train going west, and stepped off at Brockville. Mr. Graham swore that they were strangers to him. They called on him, first the one and then the other, on Sunday, got him out of bed, and held a conversation with him, occupying between three-quarters of an hour and an hour, and he swore that the only material part of the conversation which he could repeat was that he advised them to carry on the election honestly and fairly. Now, it is a little singular that he did not mention that fact when the statement was suggested that they were going to carry it on in a dishonest manner, because if they wished to punish such a crime as has been shown to have been committed but, without any suggestion of that kind at all, this man, gentlemen, swears that these two men to carry on the election in the part of the country they were going to, the honest and straightforward way. I think these two circumstances are very much to the explanation from Mr. Graham, and I hope he will take it the first opportunity that is offered to make the explanation. Now, I will take the liberty of showing the House, so far as I can from the description that was given of the boxes, how easy these fraudulent ballot-boxes is operated. The instruction given to the deputy returning officer, after opening his poll, is to display the box, as I am about to show that there is nothing in it. Then he proceeds to lock the box and put the key where he is ready for business. Now, I will hand three ballots to an hon. member [Mr. Porter] and I will ask him to hold them up as it he were going to vote. He takes the three ballots for Borden. They are put into the box. I hand three ballots to another hon. member [Mr. Graham] for Laurier and they are put into the box. Now, I will hand three ballots to me for Borden and three for Laurier. Now, I open the box, and take out six ballots, which I find marked, five for Laurier and one for Borden. That is

TIMELY TOPICS.

WHEN FATHER SHAVES.

When father shaves his stubby face,
At dawn on Sunday morn,
There always steals upon the place
A solemn pall forlorn.
An awful silence settles down
On all the human race;
It's like a funeral in the town
When father shaves his face.

He gets his razor from the shelf,
And strops it up and down,
And mutters loudly to himself,
And throws us all a frown.
We dare not look to right or left,
Or breathe in any case;
Even mother has to tip-toe quite,
When father shaves his face.

He plasters father everywhere,
And spots the window pane;
But mother says she doesn't care,
She'll clean it off again.
She tries to please him all she can,
To save us from disgrace;
For it's an awful nervous man,
When father shaves his face.

We try to sit like mummies there,
And live the ordeal through;
And hear that razor rip and tear,
And likewise father, too.
And if it slips and nicks his chin,
We duck and quit the place:
No power on earth can keep us in,
If father cuts his face.

The fad of going barcheaded in summer, so largely practised by Indies in this city, is up for newspaper discussion. Some think it condemns to good health, but hair, not health, is the motive of the judicious faddists, who think the way to the best hair restorer known to science. The founder of the Bluecoat school in England made this discovery many years ago, and one of the privileges of his endowment was that the pupils of that school must eschew headgear at all times.

A recent regulation issued by the Postal Department is worth bearing in mind by those having boxes. As all the postal clerks are liable to make mistakes in putting small matter into wrong boxes, this new regulation requires people to examine their mail before leaving the office and should they find a piece not addressed to them they must return it at once or be liable to a fine of $200. That it is the fault of the post-office staff makes no difference. This is merely a timely matter for Belleville people.

It is indicated, says a contemporary, in papers which often foreshadow Government action, that Mr. Scott, the Secretary of State, and Sir Richard Cartwright, the Minister of Trade and Commerce, will, shortly have successors in the Laurier Cabinet. The present ministers will take examinerships' positions, and get out, to be succeeded by Mr. Scott's case by a younger man, and in Sir Richard Cartwright's by, it is hoped, a man who in addition will be less of a reproach to public life. The pension scheme was apparently a Laurier plan for getting rid of two men who have done with their party, but whose usefulness thereto is gone. It is about Sir Wilfrid Laurier's political size also.

Here is a suggestion which may be of use to farmers and gardeners at this season. The Philadelphia Bulletin says: The farmer's scarecrows were all garbed in blue. "A new scarecrow stands out the sun, does more good than ten ordinary ones, for birds hat and fear blue as you and I do snakes and consumption. A professor pointed out to me that blue was the thing for birds. At first I was unbelieving, but I experimented, and found that professor to be right."

Extra fat cows sold at $3.65 to $3.85. As will be seen by the sales reported, the supply was limited, but plenty for the demand.

Butchers.

Choice picked lots sold around $4.20 to $4.25, and one lot of 11 cattle for Metz sold at $4.35. Loads of good at $4.00 to $4.10; medium, $3.75 to $3.90; common, $3 to $3.25; canners, $2.75 to $2.75 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

There were a few lots of feeders and stockers reported, but the bulk sold on the market, principally for lots of short keeps, 1200 lbs each, said at $4.00.

Stockers, 600 to 800 lbs each, were reported at $3.50 to $3.75.

Milkers and springers sold, each, at $2.75 to $3.40 per cwt.

Milch Cows.

About 15 milch cows and springers sold at the way markets to-day, each, at $45 to $55, with only two reported at the latter price.

Veal Calves.

Prices remained about steady at $3.50 to $5.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Receipts were light, but supply of lambs was not one bit it been good for several weeks, as would be expected. Prices were a little easier. But bad drovers left the city at $4.25 to $4.50 per cwt., while choice sold here at $4.75 to $5 per cwt. Farmers should keep their sheep for the fall fairs, as they will get more money.

Export ewes, $3.75 to $4 per cwt.; bucks, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $4 to $5.50 per cwt. The market was inclined to be dull.

Hogs.

Deliveries light, with prices unchanged at $5.30 per cwt., fed and watered, for choice lots.

Distress Disorders in Spain.

Madrid, July 21.—Serious disorders have occurred at Seville and Salamanca, arising from the general distress. Four hundred farm laborers invaded Seville, looted the bakeries and shops and committed other depredations until they were dispersed by a large force of police. A mob paraded the city hall at Salamanca, broke into the building and sacked it and members of the Municipal Council, fleeing from the disorders, escaped. One policeman was killed. The Government fears a spread of the disorders and is taking prompt repressive measures.

Soldiers as Immigrants.

London, July 21.—(C. A. P.)—In two weeks' time some 1,000 time-expired men of good character, all under 35, will be discharge from Horsham Barracks, Sussex. The emigration commissioner is in communication with the authorities here for permission to distribute literature, and also to deliver an address on the advantages of Canadian emigration. The request will probably be accepted. It is hoped many will be induced to make homes in Canada. Everyone will have between thirty and forty pounds.

Shoot! Shoot! Shoot!" shouted Moran raucously.

Wilbur's revolver was a self cocker. "I'll get it again," he said, hard on the trigger as he did so. It roared and leaped in his hand, and a shift of Wilbur's powerful arm to his nostrils. Then Wilbur was astonished to hear himself shout at the top of his voice:

"Come on now, get into them—get into them, now, everybody!"

The Bertha's Chinamen were all running forward, three of them, well in advance of the others. In the rear Charlie was at grapples with a burly Chinaman who fought with a knife in each hand, and Wilbur had a sudden glimpse of another sitting on the sand with his handle to his mouth, the blood spurting between his fingers.

Wilbur suddenly realized that he held a knife and that he was directly abreast the sand rampart. How he got the knife he could not tell, though later he afterward distinctly remembered throwing away his revolver, loaded as it was. He had leaped the breast-works—he knew that—and between him and the vast bright blur of the ocean he saw one of the beachcombers lacking sway and wavering like a tall tree in a hatchet infant hand. Wilbur had only time to think that he himself would no doubt be killed within the next few moments when this latter halted abruptly, took a step forward and, instead of striking downward, as Wilbur had anticipated, dropped upon his knees and fell flat on his side. It might at the call of Wilbur's big, lithe, young body, the darkness of his locks that saved Wilbur from being hamstrung where he stood. As it was, the knife in his bite almost to the bone and heard the

AN ANGEL UNAWARES.

By KATE M. CLEARY

Copyright, 1901, by Kate M. Cleary

The April downpour was at its fiercest when the knock came to the kitchen door. It was a loud knock—so timid that Nan stood with knife suspended over the pan of apples she was paring. Such a knock no burglar would have; played her a trick. It came again—low, interesting.

The girl crossed to the door and called:

"Good land!" she cried. "Come in! You poor little soul, whoever you are, come in!" And all the blustering of the storm she caught the little black, shrinking figure and whirled it into the warmth and comfort of the big kitchen.

But stood and looked at her unexpected visitor, her gaze a curious blending of amazement and compassion. Such a little old figure of a woman. The plain black cashmere gown, the thin shawl, the close little bonnet, all were dripping rain, from the tip of the spiral ornamenting the bonnet to the hem of the poor skirt. And the face that looked up at Nan, dumb and beseeching, was exhibitably pathetic in its wistfulness. The woman held a worn leg clutched in one hand.

"I," uttered the stranger deprecatingly—"I got caught in the rain!

Nan threw back her head and laughed—a ringing, clear, cheerful and infectious, and the shriveled countenance of the intruder relaxed into a smile.

"Pardon me," cried Nan, controlling herself; "only it was so evident you had not been under shelter the last hour that I couldn't help it. Come, sit here, sit down in this rocker near the stove." She deftly unpinned the soaking shawl and removed the pulpy bonnet. "Dear, dear," she exclaimed, "you've no rubbers on! And your feet are dripping! You've been a bundle of sentiment! Whatever will I do with you?"

She spoke with the air of solicitude she might have used toward a child. Nan was only seventeen, but she had many burdens on her shoulders, and she bore them with courage. A year ago, when she had graduated from the high school, she had that she might go to college was strong within her. But her aunt and cousin had condemned her idea and derided her ambition. There was no money to spare for such nonsense. There was work to be done at home.

The latter fact the girl was given opportunity to doubt. She made all of all work had been dismissed the week of her graduation, and Nan had been the handy man, as well as maid-of-all-work but with fierce inward rebellion, she accepted her duties. But her father sent her books of letters and a professor in a university, and she had inherited his love of study. So it was with a heavy heart she saw the days slipping by and with them the time she would have given to the acquirement of further knowledge. Today many bidden tasks still remained to be accomplished, and how was she to discern creature on her hands?

"I'm sure I'm sorry to be making you trouble, dear," piped up the plaintive old voice. "If when after I'm rested a bit you'll be telling me my direction I'll be moving on."

But suddenly she went giastly white, her head fell back and sharply to her side, and her lips turned blue.

"Here," cried Nan, "take this!" She held open a stimulant and the head back, holding it pressed to the twitching mouth. The old woman swallowed the liquid and began to cry.

"Sit still!" commanded Nan. "You're ill. You mustn't sit!"

Nan slipped her, tall and slender—her blue cotton gown, with a big white apron tucked in the belt, seemed the pure pallor of her face was accounted by the blackness of her brown and lashes. Her gray eyes were wide with perplexity.

"Wait a minute," she ordered and went into the back stairs. She soon reappeared with a load of garments over her arm. "You're such a little of a size that I have only to offer you the will it you," she said. "Your bag! Here it is—and a hot drink for you." And she worked rapidly as she talked.

Now you're dry and comfortable anyway," she said cheerfully.

The old woman smiled up at her gratefully. She did look funny in the unbecoming red of red, but Nan's skill had come into her cheeks, and her chilled feet were growing warm in the dry stockings and slippers.

"Now I'll make you some tea and toast," declared Nan, "and put your clothes to dry. "And then I must get back to— Good gracious, my cake is burning!

She was on her knees in a minute and had snatched the oven door wide open, and the smoke of the conflagration confronted her. And, as it luck would have it, at that very moment Helena Barnard, her cousin and mistress of the house, came to the invalidism of Mrs. Barnet, and walking into the kitchen.

"What's this?" she cried sharply. She was in street attire, but had been well protected from the storm. "Your cake ruined! And that—who is that person?"

Her cheeks scarlet from embarrassment and the heat of the oven. Nan was hastily removing the cake.

"She's an old lady who got caught in the shower," the girl explained nervously. "Did Aunt Ellen come, Helena?"

"No, she didn't," snapped Helena. "I've wasted the most pretty dress on it—it's ruined!—and I've had to walk and make that chicken broth the way mother says she used to like it."

"Yes, and the little honey bearts too."

"You've got the spare room all ready, I dare say?"

"Yes. It's clean, and I lit the fire half an hour ago."

"Well, a lot of trouble and expense to go to for a foolish old woman," grumbled Miss Barnard. "Mother says she always has little means in the pot she allows. But that doesn't alter the fact that she is coming, and what for I'm sure I don't know, with a suit that she has $60,000 to leave. I suppose she will leave it to you, Nan, as you have been such a fool about her ways. Well, I'll spend $100 on mourning for her when I inherit it."

She will never leave me anything," answered Nancy Goodwin. "My mother and she never were friends, and Aunt Ellen never forgave her. But"—briskly buttering some fresh toast—"if she ever wears in mourning for I'd"—

"Go to college, I presume?" ended Helena contemptuously.

"Yes, that I would!" rejoined Nan resolutely. "There's no hope of that!" she added, with a cry to a distant mourbrile of this and drink your tea."

Helena stared from her cousin to the strange guest and back again.

"Do you mean to say you've gone out and picked up something good food on a tramp?" she shrieked.

"Hush!" begged Nan, trembling with indignation. "You will hurt her feelings!"

"Feelings, indeed!" She glared at the stranger. "This dark is over now. She can go about her business."

Nan stood before her cousin.

"Helena," she said cold. She can't get out of the house tonight. Let her sleep in the spare room. I'll make up a shake down on the cot." Then, hurriedly, as she saw angry refusal in the other's eyes, "I'll make me leave you if you value my work!"

"What do you mean?"

"Only that Mrs. Hunter across the street has offered me $10 a week as housekeeper for her home. I would be no more labor there than here, where I am paid nothing. And I shall accept her offer unless you make me turn this poor old creature out!"

"Well, I declare!" ejaculated Miss Barnard. But, aware that this was not quite capable of doing what she threatened, she made a tempestuous exit from the kitchen. Overcoming her apologetic objections, Nan assisted the old woman up the stairs. On the second floor they passed a bright room, having with rosy chintzes, with a jolly fire rollicking in the grate.

"I wish I might take you in there," she whispered. "But that is intended for Mrs. Hunter, who is coming to stay here. You shall have her chicken broth, dear, and I'll bring it to you presently. She can't need it any more than you do."

And when she had tucked the feeble body into her own narrow bed she brought the chicken broth. But that night when the dishes were washed the girl climbed to her room she found her prototype very ill. She was feverish, and the pain in her side was severe. Occasionally she lapsed into delirium; Nan was frightened. So it was a very man grew worse she sped down the stairs and across the street for Dr. Meeker.

"Pneumonia," he said. "Exposure, eh? I thought so. Practically hopeless. What's that, did you want a lawyer?" He bent to listen. "Poor soul, what have you to will?"

"John Meeker," she panted, "don't you know me?"

"I'm young Dr. Meeker, John Meeker is my father. I'm trying to be as good a man. If I can build up his practice that far I shall be happy to make a home for this little girl here."

The old woman smiled and nodded. "You'll do well, young man, maybe if you know that I am Ellen Frankyn. No, don't call the others. Helena is like her mother—cold and selfish. I heard her for myself today."

The physician did what he could and hastened away. His experienced eye told him she had been ill several days and that the exposure of the afternoon was hastening the climax. The lawyer returned with him, and the housebold were aroused. Mrs. Barnard was shocked, exhausted, but triumphant, as she fell back after signing the will.

"I've let Helena a number of times to buy that mourning she was so set on," she whispered. "I only let her learning while he's making the home for you. 'Twas the fine fellow he'd be, I said, when I met him."

And not all the wrath or lamentations of Helena Burnet and her mother could succeed in impeach the validity of the will, which left the property of Ellen Frankyn to Nancy Goodwin.

"It wasn't bold you to your promise now, dear," Charlie Meeker said when he came to see the girl at the end of the week. "You are as heiress now. Everything is different."

"That isn't different!" she replied with emphasis. "You loved me when I was a common drudge. You mustn't stop loving me now that I am going to fit myself to be a wife of whom you may be proud."

He smiled down at her.

"My dear, my dear," he said, "a prince might be proud of you. Here's the train."

Counterfeiters and Weddings.

The marriage of convenience is an institution among criminals, at least in England. In a recent case in London a detective testified that it was common for counterfeiters to marry women solely for the purpose of passing bad coins on the public. These marriages are not contracted from any feelings of mutual attraction or even trade partnership, but in the belief that furies have a reluctance in convicting wives.

Light and Interesting and Little Understood Subject.

It is interesting to note that totemism is found not only in Alaska, but among the North American Indians, the aborigines of Australia, the Hottentots of Africa and even the hill tribes of India. Totems are also common among the Samoans.

Broadly the totem is the badge of a clan or tribe, but it signifies a great deal more than mere political or social alliance. It is not only a tribal emblem, but also a family sign; not merely a badge of nationality, but also an expression of religion; not simply a bond of union among primitive people, but also the register of the marriage laws and of other social institutions. A totem has been defined as a class of material objects which a savage regards with superstitious respect, believing that there exists between him and every member of the class an intimate and special relation."

Among the Ojibway Indians there are no fewer than twenty-three different totems. Nine of these are considered gods, marking out the wolf, the bear, the beaver and other clans, eight are birds, five are fishes and one is the snake.

Some extraordinary superstitions regarding totems prevail in Samoa. There it is believed that if a turtle man eats of a turtle he will grow great, and that the voice of the turtle will be heard in his inside saying: "It is me. I am talking him." If a banana man uses a banana leaf for a cap he becomes bald. If a butterfly man catches a butterfly he strikes him dead. If a fowl man eats a fowl delirious and death results, and so on, all going to show that the totem has something of the quality of a fetich as well as the significance of a family relationship.

Regarding totemism, it is to be noted that the relation of mutual help and protection includes also the totem itself—that is to say, if a man takes care of his totem he expects the totem to return the compliment. If the totem is a dangerous animal it must not hurt his clansmen. The negroes of Senegambia declare that the most deadly scorpions will "run over their bodies without hurting them. There is a snake clan in Australia which holds to a similar belief. Among the Bechuanas the clan of the Beetsaan of a man is bitten by a crocodile or eyes has water splashed on him by one belonging from the clan as one esteemed unworthy by the totem.—Housekeeper.

SOME SUPERSTITIONS.

If you want a cat to stay at your home, rub its paw on the stove.

To keep a new dog, measure his tail with a cornstalk and bury the latter under the front step.

If you sing in bed you will cry next day. To sing before breakfast you will cry before night.

A family must never move except in the light or increase of the moon. This will secure prosperity and increase of possessions.

If a woman is making soap and a man stirs it, all will be well and the soap will be fine, but if a woman comes the soap will spoil in the making.

Looking at a new moon for the first time through eyeglasses, as through a treetop, foretells misfortune during that moon. To see it over the right shoulder and in a clear space brings good luck.

When Lightning Kills.

"As a rule," says a meteorological expert, "a man killed by lightning will retain an appearance of life, staying in the attitude which they had when struck. A Russian minister named Butler witnessed the following: In the town of Preston two barrelmakers were repairing under a hedge during a storm. Lightning struck and killed one, who was left as if petrified. One was found holding in his fingers the snuff which he was about to take. Another had a little dead dog on his knee and had one hand on the animal's head, while holding in the other hand some bread with which he had been feeding it. A third was sitting with his eyes shut and his head turned toward the storm."

A Translator's Blunder.

Jacob Boehme, the "mystic shoemaker," once wrote a pamphlet which he called "Reflections on the Treatise of Isaiah Stiefel." One of Boehme's biographers could never hear of that title without laughing, while he's making the home for you. 'Twas the fine fellow he'd be, I said when I met him."

And not all the wrath or lamentations of Helena Burnet and her mother could succeed in impeach the validity of the will, which left the property of Ellen Frankyn to Nancy Goodwin.

"It wasn't bold you to your promise now, dear," Charlie Meeker said when he came to see the girl at the end of the week. "You are as heiress now. Everything is different."

"That isn't different!" she replied with emphasis. "You loved me when I was a common drudge. You mustn't stop loving me now that I am going to fit myself to be a wife of whom you may be proud."

He smiled down at her.

"My dear, my dear," he said, "a prince might be proud of you. Here's the train."

Counterfeiters and Weddings.

The marriage of convenience is an institution among criminals, at least in England. In a recent case in London a detective testified that it was common for counterfeiters to marry women solely for the purpose of passing bad coins on the public. These marriages are not contracted from any feelings of mutual attraction or even trade partnership, but in the belief that furies have a reluctance in convicting wives.

LITTLE LANTERNS of THE SOUL

By SIDNEY M. COLE

Copyright, 1901, by T. C. McClure

In the library of the villa the two men faced each other. The little red shaded lamp threw their faces into curious room. Outside the last traces of the soft Italian twilight were fading in the dusk, and the leaves of the myrtle stars were blinking, uncertain yellow dots in the blue sky.

Young Orne lifted his piercing black eyes and looked at his son searchingly.

"You're a scoundrel, Jack," he broke burst out, "a gambler, a loafer, a rake. You squander a fortune at the gaming tables, and when you've gambled away more money to lose. Get your money where you lost it. I'm through with you."

Young Orne drew himself up. "Father"—he began.

"I'm done with you," the older man thundered. "I wash my hands of you. As God is my judge, I'll cut you off without a cent. Go out into the world and stand on your own feet or sink in the slime of ruin you've been delving in. It's all one to me."

Young Orne turned slowly to the door, turned, hesitated, then hurried through the hall into the soft night outside. A moment later a boat was gone from the west. Far below him at the foot of the slope the little village twinkled with its lights. He could see that even in the trees they luminous pin points of light shone among the leaves. He remembered that it was St. John's eve and that the lights were a part of the feast.

He descended the steps and strode across the terraces and through the villa gardens. As he neared a group of olive trees just beyond the sundial he saw dimly a girlish figure standing beneath one of the trees. Presently was the rasp of a match, a tiny Chinese lantern was lighted, and in the middle of the group plainly the girl's upturned face as she reached up to fasten the lantern to a low hanging branch. It was Ethelyn Hope, the daughter of his father's oldest friend, who had made the journey with the Orne stores for parents' death. That was years back, when Ethelyn was a little girl in frocks. Now she was a tall, graceful and sweet silks in feature and in temper.

Young Orne came into the little circle of light cast by the lantern. There was a girl alone seat beneath that particular olive tree, and he sank into it.

"Celebrating?" he asked.

"Yes," she said, pointing to the lantern. "It is a little lantern of the soul."

"A what?" he asked in laughing perplexity.

"A little lantern of the soul," she repeated. "You hang them on olive trees and say little prayers for the souls you've forgiven. I heard Pietro and the cook talking about them today. I made them explain."

"I see," said he. "Who's soul is this?" And he pointed to the lantern.

"I haven't decided as yet," she answered, and added quickly, "It will be yours."

"By all means let it be so," he acquiesced. "Heaven knows I'm sadly in need of pious prayers just now."

"Are you in trouble?" she asked. "Have you and Uncle Orne been quarreling again?"

He turned with ironic bitterness. "Oh, there's been a slight tiff," he said easily.

"It's bad," she said, with ready sympathy.

"It ended by—by—well, to use bold slang, by his kicking me out," said he.

Her face became serious. "He didn't really mean it, of course. He'll be sorry before morning."

"I hope so," he said. "You can let me off for the night, I suppose?"

"I let you know?" she said, frightened by his tone. "You're not—not really going?"

Orne's face darkened. All the rankling bitterness his father's words had inspired was upon him again.

"I may be all he called me and worse," he said, with reckless bitterness, "but I still have some pride left. I have to be shown the door but once."

The girl's head dropped resignedly as she leaned against the olive tree. Orne, with his head bowed against it, watched her this. When he raised his eyes she was still leaning against the tree, but with a strange look in her eyes, and all at once he realised that she was no longer a child, but a woman, and that she understood and was his. The fact that there was love in his own heart was as much a shock to him as the discovery of this answering love in hers. He could have knelt at her feet in joy and pain of it. He rose on his feet pale and shaken.

"I must be going," he said roughly. "Where's the boat?" she asked hurriedly. "Hold where?"

He laughed harshly. "Over all the world," he said from, he said bitterly.

He drew her gently to him. For one moment her head rested on his shoulder, and her soft brown hair brushed his cheek.

* * * * * * * *

Orne senior had long entertained an idea. It was that some day his son would come down and ask Ethelyn Hope, her, being a wise old man and knowing too well the dangers of marriage, he had nothing of this either to his son or his ward. Now as he sat in the library after the stormy interview with his son he felt that his hopes had received their deathblow. For a long time he sat by the red shaded lamp, pondering deeply. Then he rose and went into the garden.

He walked rapidly up and down the terraces, his head bent, his hands clasped behind him. Suddenly he paused, startled by a sound. It was the sound of a woman's agonized sobs. He stopped and peered through the darkness. What he saw beneath the olive tree lifted a great weight from his heart and brought a grim smile to his face.

"No, no," the girl was saying wildly, "I cannot let you go. It will break my heart."

His son's voice answered soothingly: "It is best this way, dearest. I—I won't be for long at the most. I'll prove I'm worthy of you, and then I'll come back to claim you."

"Optimistic young idiot!" muttered Orne senior as he strode into the circle of light. His son and the girl rose startled cry, and Orne junior glared at him savagely.

"It seems," said Orne senior, with icy composure, "that you haven't made trouble enough, you've added to this Lotharic business to your already large repertory of transgressions."

Young Orne's face flushed, his fists clenched. For a moment it looked as if he would strike the elder man. Then with an effort he controlled himself.

"Now, what you like about my other affairs, but kindly leave this to me," he said to a voice hoarse, with anger.

"You've set your foot upon the ground she treads on," said the elder Orne.

"Good God, don't I know that?" said his son. He turned on his heel.

"Hold on, Sir Touchstone!" said his father, "and explain this—this—farce!"

Young Orne turned. "Well?" he challenged.

A rare smile curved the mouth of the elder Orne.

"Your spirit in this thing is all very fine," he said grimly, "but you'll very likely find the world a tougher proposition than you imagine, especially if you assail it penniless. I said I'd cut you off without a cent, and I will." The harsh voice softened incredibly. "I'll give it to Ethelyn instead."

He shuffled up the path toward the villa and left them there in amazed silence.

A gust of wind rattled the gray olive leaves. The little lantern swung dangerously. Its paper cover caught fire from the fluttering candle. The girl's hand reached out to put the flame, then drew back.

"Your little lantern of the soul has gone out," she said.

"Anyway, if stood no show with the greater light we have found," he replied.

A Bit of Superstition.

"I've heard tales of superstitious women," said the very intelligent conductor of a Philadelphia Record, "but a woman who lives in our neighborhood has them all beaten to a standstill. She occupies a twin house just above ours and, despite her constant dissertations on hoodoos, bad luck and misfortune, the other day she went out without her key and when she returned home could not get in. She went to the police station, and, most crying when I came along. Naturally I offered to assist by effecting an entrance. I went to the twin house and, climbing through a second story window, I opened the front door. I squeezed through a tiny bathroom window into her house. After I opened the front door I started to leave, but she stopped me. With evident embarrassment she explained that if I left by the other route the luck would be which I entered death would surely visit the house. Summed up, she wanted me to climb back over the roofs. Well, as she is young and pretty and I'm obliging, I did it, but you can bet the next time she loses her key some one else will jeopardize his life."

As Requested.

A pigeon flying enthusiast recently received a letter of acknowledgment once: One morning he found a strange bird in his cot. The owner evidently belonged to the pigeon fancy, for there was a numbered ring on the bird's leg. The finder at once wrote off to the secretary announcing the fact, with the facts and quoting the number on the ring. By return of post came the secretary soon found the name and address of the owner, who was at once made aware of the whereabouts of his bird.

A day or two later the finder received the following communication from the owner:

Sir—I understand you have a homing pigeon ready for me. Please state how you keep my bird? Yours, etc.

The same morning the indignant X. Y. Z. received the following laconic reply by telegram:

Blanktown, 9:15 a. m.—Bird liberated.

Then the following:

9:17 a. m.—Cat got him.

—Stray Stories.

Politeness in Japan.

Politeness in Japan is not at all confined to the upper circles, as you imagine. Servants are quiet as physicians lously polite to each other as their masters. When they meet in the street they will smile correctly at the proper distance from each other. On drawing nearer they commence bowing according to the etiquette prescribed, and then after bows of the finest and most minute significance the inferior of one house will address the betts (horse groom) of another with some such phrase as, "It is long since I have hung upon your honorable eyelids?" And the other will answer, "Please excuse my rudeness at the last time we met." And if by any chance they have occasion to punch one another's heads they won't just until they have expressed, with many bows, their mutual regret that their meeting has not been under more pleasant conditions.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—[illegible] $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the well young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

The Band Concert.

The band concert at Victoria Park last evening attracted a large assemblage of people. The air was exceedingly cool and refreshing, in fact it became too cool for many to remain upon the park. The band furnished a programme that was pleasing to all. Many boats were about the harbor during the concert.

THE TIHN MAN'S DANGER.

He can't resist disease germs—that's why he is such a mark for consumption. In this land of plenty, thinness is shameful; stoutness is not. It is so easily overcome with Ferrozone. TWO OLD BELLEVILLE BOYS WHO SEE MANY CHANGES:

MESSRS. THOMAS AND JOHN W. KEOGH LEFT BELLEVILLE 43 YEARS AGO.

Seated in the rotunda of Hotel Quinte this morning were two quiet, well-to-do-looking gentlemen, who would anywhere be sized up for men whose lines were cast on the shady side of Easy street. They were Messrs. Thomas and John W. Keogh, who left Belleville in the early 60's, and had returned for the reunion. A Reporter man introduced himself.

"Why, I said to myself," said Mr. Keogh, "the boys have got a reporter down here, and there is an air of refinement it never had in the old days."

"It was a pretty good town in old times, too," ventured the newspaper man.

"Pretty good," said Mr. Keogh, "but money was very scarce till the war broke out. My present home? Well, my home is in Ogden, Utah, when I'm there. 'Jack' here, lives in Salt Lake City. We have another brother, who is a banker in Salt Lake City. We were all Californians when we left Belleville, and were in the stock business in California, Nevada, Wyoming, Texas, and finally all over the West pretty well. We started into the business in 1870 in Texas, and drove from Texas to Nevada, 1200 miles through an Indian country. We drove the first sheep seen in Wyoming, and the first men to drive sheep from Nevada to Nebraska.

"Have you met any of your old friends?" asked the newspaper man.

"I saw Jim Cummins this morning," answered Mr. Keogh, with a smile. "He said at first he didn't know me, and wouldn't believe I was Tom Keogh.

"I don't blame him for not knowing me, though. I weighed 130 then; now I go 250."

Mr. "Jack" Keogh, here chipped in, relating how he, over 50 years ago, saved two boys from drowning in the Moira, in which praiseworthy undertaking he was assisted by Sir Mackenzie Bowell. Neither gentleman has, so far as known, received any official recognition of their heroic deed. Perhaps the Carnegie medal might be in order. Mr. "Jack" Keogh told how it seemed but yesterday that he pulled the lads out of the river, and how helpers rolled them over barrels to get the water out of them. Perhaps these boys are in the city now and may recall the incident. No doubt Mr. Keogh would like to meet them again.

Just as Mr. Keogh concluded his story of the rescue a carriage drove up to the door of the Quinte, and the two brothers went out for a drive to see the beauties of Belleville.

Regimental Orders.

Regimental orders for the Fifteenth in connection with the celebration on Monday have been issued. They are as follows: The regiment will take part in the parade and Capt. Barragar will be in command. All officers and men are requested to turn out. Those desiring to get uniforms can do so on Monday morning at the headquarters, Church street. The Bugle Band will be in attendance. Officers and commissioned officers are permitted to appear in uniform at all the functions in connection with the Reunion.

AN UGLY PINE FLOOR.

The Way It Was Made Almost Equal to Hard Polished Wood.

"I moved into a cottage that had unsightly wide boards, with cracked floors of pine. They were badly stained and altogether hopeless looking when one rented them, but there was to be laid on them," says a writer in an exchange. "As there was no possibility of making them look worse, I decided to experiment. I scrubbed them clean then carefully putting up all the cracks with the aid of a putty knife. After the putty was dry I applied oak colored floor paint of a good, reliable brand. The first coat was thinly applied and well brushed in. This paint dried in twelve hours. Then the surface was lightly sandpapered, and a slightly heavier coat of paint was applied. After this was thoroughly hard it was sandpapered again and a thin, well brushed in coat of lacquered varnish put on. This takes longer to dry than paint and must be perfectly dry before being sandpapered in readiness for the second coat. By this time my stained and painted floors were a rich oak color, with a very fine hard polished surface. This work I did in the spring. The last I gave the floors a thin coat of linseed oil and turpentine (two parts of oil to one turpentine), well rubbed in with a flannel, with the result that the floors took on their pristine freshness. Unless they have very hard use, painting and varnishing once a year is sufficient to keep them nice. To clean floors treated in this way it is only necessary to wipe them up once a month with a slightly oiled cloth dipped over a broom. I have seen floors painted black in the same manner and varnished with black floor polish that looked uncommonly well as a background for oriental or bright colored rugs. While I do not claim that floors treated as described herein are equal in effect to the beauty of the waxed hardwood floors, I am sure that they are very well appearing and with rugs on them, greatly to be preferred to the insanitary carpet."

More to the Point.

"I want a business suit now," said Slopay. "I was thinking of something in the way of a small check."

"And I," replied the tailor, "can't help thinking of something in the way of a small check."

A Prejudiced Impression.

"What is your idea of a classic?"

"A classic," said Mr. Cumrox, "is something you have to listen to because somebody else said it was good."

Those who walk most are generally healthiest. The road of perfect health is too narrow for wheels.

BALFOUR IS DEFEATED

Snap Division in Which the Irish Nationalists Led.

Redmond's Proposal to Reduce the Irish Land Commission Vote by One Hundred Pounds Carries Amid Great Excitement—Government Will Re-Introduce Motion — The Aliens Bill Is Passed.

London, July 21.—(C. A. P.)—At 12.15 this morning the Government was defeated by 213 votes to 96 on a snap division taken on a proposal made by John Redmond, Nationalist leader, to reduce the Irish land commission vote by one hundred pounds.

A remarkable scene of excitement occurred when it was known that the Government had been defeated. Nationalists and Liberals rose to their feet and waved hats and handkerchiefs, reinforced with arms and cheers until the glass and ceiling of the House rang again and again. It was some minutes before Sir Thomas Esmonde could announce the numbers, when the cheers were repeated again and again with the utmost enthusiasm.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman rose immediately to his feet and asked Premier Balfour whether he had any statement to make, who, coolly, with a smile, replied he had not at present.

This brought up Mr. Redmond, who in a fiery speech, amid vociferous opposition applause, pointed out that the defeat followed immediately on the assenting of the Government.

Mr. Balfour, rising again, declared that unless it was possible for the Government to carry on the business of the country and the House with dignity, it would not attempt to carry on at all. He suggested it might be right, in the matter of the vote, to ask the House for a reversal of the decision. This was, he said, not necessary definitely, and would consult his colleagues, and give an answer on Monday.

Mr. Redmond, backed by Right. Hon. H. Laguich and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, unsuccessfully endeavored to get the Government to agree to an adjournment till Monday. The Unionist members attribute the defeat to the laxity of the Government supporters, and say there was no cross voting.

It is expected the crisis in the Government will not resign, but reintroduce the motion.

Aliens Bill Passed.

London, July 21.—In the House of Commons the aliens bill was passed its third reading by a majority of 90. Premier Balfour, in winding up the debate on the bill, contended that the proposed restrictions were less severe than those proposed by any other nation.

The aliens bill was based on the lines of the measure introduced in the House of Commons last year, which was defeated by the Government owing to obstruction. It prohibits immigrants from landing except at ports where an immigration officer is stationed, and only with his consent after a medical examination. Permission to land may be refused if immigrants are unable to show that they are in a position to obtain means to keep themselves and their family from becoming a burden or disease or other causes they are likely to become a charge on the taxpayers, or if they have been sentenced abroad for an extraditable crime not of a political nature, or if they have been previously expelled from Britain.

The Home Secretary may order the expulsion of an alien on a certificate from a court of law. The bill, however, provides that permission to land shall not be refused on account of the fact of means if the immigrant is able to prove that he is going to seeking asylum to Great Britain solely to avoid persecution for political offences.

CANADA'S OWN BUSINESS.

Premier Balfour Says Immigration Policy Belongs to the Dominion.

London, July 21.—(C. A. P.)—In the House of Commons yesterday Lord Jones H. Percy asked, amid much opposition to the Government as to the alleged arrangements between Canadian Pacific railway and the North Atlantic Trading Co. about alien immigration to Canada.

Immediately after the question, and before Premier Balfour's reply, C. B. Devlin said: "I would like to ask if the subject matter of this question is not one of Canadian domestic policy and interest exclusively.

"What I want to know is to interfere with the Canadian Government in their methods of importing alien immigrants into Canada? This very subject has been one of dispute and contention between the two political parties in Canada. The course pursued in relation to this matter by the Canadian Government has already been approved by an overwhelming majority in the Canadian House of Commons."

Mr. Balfour thanked Devlin for his interjection, and said it explained exactly the view of the Government. He thought the House of Commons had quite sufficient business to attend to without taking part in Canadian politics. Mr. Balfour's remarks were received with great cheering.

TO GENERAL REVOLUTION.

Boundary Speech in Zemstvo Congress —No Reform From the Czar— An Appeal to the People.

Moscow, July 21.—The sensative congress assembled yesterday without interference on the part of the authorities and commenced a discussion of the proposed legislation.

Prince Trubetskoi read the first reading of the scheme for a constitution by a vote of 102 to 73.

M. Petrunkevitch, president of the Moscow Agricultural Society, declared that all hope regarding the Government's acknowledging which had been nourished, had proved vain. It was obvious, he said, that the bar separating the Emperor and the people was too strong, that they could not communicate, referring to the fact that he appealed to the Emperor and they should now appeal to the people.

Prince Rostkovski said that the Czar's manifesto was a step in the direct incitement to revolution and left the hall.

Count Dolgorukoff repudiated Prince Rostkovski's construction of M. Petrunkevitch's speech, which, he said, only echoed what had been set forth in the memorandum presented by the marshals of the nobility to the Emperor.

A resolution was passed protesting against the constant violation of the private and social rights of Russian citizens by administrative officialdom and calling upon all loyal subjects to protect the sufferers from the present lawless regime and to help in preserving the troops from illegal and arbitrary acts carried out by the authorities.

On To Vladivostok.

Russian Headquarters in the Front, (Location not given.) July 21.—The Japanese advance force, which is composed of a cosmopolitic character, and is being pushed toward Mousan, Nengai and Kangwanchen, is reported to have received reinforcements from Field Marshal Oyama's main army in front of Gen. Linevitch. A landing of Japanese cavalry and infantry would not be surprising, and the operations appear to be developing in that direction. The Japanese advance in the Island of Sakhalin has reached Vladimirovsk. Their force of artillery includes forty machine guns.

That White Interview.

St. Petersburg, July 21.—The interview of the Associated Press with M. Military Funeral in Toronto.

Toronto, July 21.—Major Villiers Sankey, district Deputy Grand Master of Guides, who was drowned at Kenora, was buried with full military honors from his residence in St. James' Cemetery. From the arrival of the remains at the late home of deceased, 393 Huron street, on Tuesday night, until the burial of the Grand cortege to the cemetery after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a guard of honor, including prominent citizens and military men, called at the house to express their sympathies to the bereaved family. Major Sankey's popularity and the sad circumstances surrounding his death drew a large gathering to the obsequies. The floral tributes from the officers and associates of Major Sankey were very beautiful. They were carried from the house to the grave in a hearse.

Montreal, July 21.—The first race for the Dewar trophy was sailed on Lake St. Louis yesterday afternoon in the smart sloop-rigged launch Manchester of the Manchester, Mass., Yacht Club, and the Canadian Club's Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, and resulted in a victory for the American boat.

Bennett Sent For Trial.

Brantford, July 21.—Joseph Bennett will have to stand trial at the Brantford fall assizes for the murder of Betsy Jacobs, Such was the decision given out by Squire Leitch at the preliminary trial held in the court house yesterday morning. The prisoner received the finding without the least perturbation.

Take Wife Beater and Dip Him in Well During Half an Hour.

Then They Lash Him So Hard That He May Die—Thomas Dulmage Taken From His Bed in Early Morning by Eleven Men Masked Who Resent His Alleged Cruelty to His Wife —He Had Been Drinking Heavily.

Chatham, July 21.—Eleven masked men forced an entrance into the home of Thomas Dulmage, a farmer living near Wheatley, early yesterday morning, dragged him from his bed, carried him for half an hour in a well, lashed him to a post and thrashed him with a horsewhip because, it is alleged, he was in the habit of drinking heavily and abusing his wife.

Rumors of Dulmage's alleged illtreatment of his wife have been current for some time. Threats have been made, privately, that something would happen if the Dulmage domestic affairs did not run more smoothly.

Recently, it is said, Dulmage became most brutal, and sentiment in the neighborhood correspondingly took more intense. People began to talk openly and sympathy for the unfortunate was crystallized, so it is declared, in a plan to whip Dulmage and beat him to a little of his own medicine.

Wore Black Masks.

All arrangements were made, and the eleven men, believed to be near neighbors of Dulmage, met and took Dulmage home last Wednesday night, donned black masks and left the black masks and waited until there was a quiet.

Then they approached the house and forced an entrance quietly, going direct to Dulmage's room.

He awakened as the first two men entered, and, realizing that a fight was about to lost the place, showed fight, but before other assistance by one, and he stared at each in amazement, and, then with mingled fear, hesitating and uncertain effort proceedings the immediately and concerted action.

He was soon overpowered from the bed.

Then he began to plead, and when he was not answered, protested, and protested and then struggled desperately.

Dipped In Icy Water.

His captors forced him in a well. A rope was tied around his waist, and he was lowered into the icy water, raised and lowered again and again for half an hour, he had immersed for half a minute at a time.

Finally he was pulled to the surface and carried to a post, for he was besmeared with molasses.

The lash of a horsewhip, was wielded by brawny arms and cut every welt deep into his flesh. He was torn to shreds and the flesh raw. Then, and only then, was he released.

A physician was summoned, who declared Dulmage in a critical condition from agony and exposure.

Crown Attorney Atkinson has taken up the case, which, he declares, will be investigated thoroughly, and the eleven men, if caught, dealt with severely.

Inspector Murray of the Provincial criminal investigation department, arrived here last night.

Troops Fight in Thick Forest.

Japs Took Two Days to Rout Russians At Daline.

Mikado's Soldiers Were Given a Hard Tussle by 200 of the Enemy —They Were Exposed, Owing to the Nature of the Ground, to a Disadvantage and Risk—Japanese Took Five Guns.

Tokio, July 22.—A special telegram from Gensei says that the Russians defeated at Daline were about 200 with six field and three machine guns, and, taking the fullest advantage of the topographical character of the district, offered the most desperate resistance.

The Russian position was well hidden among a thick forest, and it was impossible for the Japanese gunners to make a correct observation. The commande, however, was opened by the Japanese, at 4 o'clock on the morning of July 7, and was kept up until dusk. The Japanese gradually gained ground, coming in on the enemy's line of defence, awaiting an opportunity for an infantry charge. For nearly two hours past midnight when the enemy's first line of defence, strengthened by barricades and trenches, was taken.

Two Days Fight For Victory.

This success was vigorously followed up, but it was not until 4 o'clock on the morning of July 9 that the enemy was driven from the second line of his defence, and a victory secured, with trophies secured of four field guns and one machine gun.

The nature of the ground exposed the Japanese assailants to a great disadvantage, it is stated.

It is believed that, owing to the short supply of ammunition and provisions, the Russians at Sakhalin cannot hold out much longer.

It is officially announced that the Russians under the command of Generals defeated at various points of Sakhalin Island number 4,000, including one colonel and 14 other officers.

Wits In Paris.

Paris, July 22.—M. White, accompanied by his wife, a number of members of his family and a number of officials, making up the party which is on its way to the United States, arrived at the Northern Railway station at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Impossible Terms.

St. Petersburg, July 22.—The Novoe Vremya yesterday devotes a leading article to the alleged peace conditions as published by The Berlin Tageblatt, and Frankfort Zeitung, dwelling especially on the specification against double tracking the Siberian Railroad, which the paper declares is utterly unacceptable. It says we cannot agree to submit to the political and economic suicide of Russia.

Jap Warships Sighted.

Copenhagen, July 22.—A despatch from St. Petersburg to Godsdaan says that private advices received at the Russian capital say that Japanese warships have been seen off Nikolaievsk, at the mouth of the Amur River. Many of the inhabitants of Nikolaievsk and Vladivstock. It is added, have fled to Khabarovsk.

A FRIGHTFUL DISASTER

A Main Boiler of U. S. Gunboat Bennington Explodes.

Bodies and Human Fragments Hurled High in the Air—Explosion Accompanied With a Roar as of Thunder —Bleeding Sailors Fight For Life in the Water—Sea Round Everywhere Was Blood and Bodies.

San Diego, Cal., July 21.—One of the most frightful disasters in the peace history of the American navy, excepting the sinking of the Maine in Havana harbor, occurred in San Diego Bay about 11:30 a. m. yesterday, as aboard the United States gunboat Bennington.

At a moment when the warship, lying at anchor, was the object of interest to hundreds of observing people on the piers and passenger boat, a cloud of steam suddenly burst from a point just forward of the quarterdeck, out of which the spectators were horrified to see bodies and human fragments hurled high in the air and scattered over the surrounding water.

Roar as of Thunder.

The outburst was accompanied by a roar as of thunder and a shock that rocked vessels nearby. The air was filled with shrieks and groans from the wounded, which could be heard ashore, and the fragments of human flesh, brains and pieces of the ship's superstructure.

Almost instantaneously the entire ship fighting, crippled, in the water against the tide, with five boats, the only ones from which they had escaped, while others in one of the cars of his train. They refused to leave the car when the train reached the station here. The conductor with one of the station hands attempted in force their way into the car, which the men in possession had barricaded.

Stones and knives were the weapons used at first. Assistance was sent for and on a renewal of the efforts to dislodge the men, a shot was fired over the heads of the revolvers.

The conductor with a scantling effected an entrance and the men around the station charged the car.

For a time it looked as if the matter would end in bloodshed, but they were finally driven from their stronghold and fled down the track.

FIRST STEAMER ON NEW LINE.

Angola Starts On Route Between Canada and West Indies.

Montreal, July 22.—The steamer Angola, of the newly organized Elders-Dempster line running from Canadian ports to the West Indies and Mexico, sailed yesterday morning with almost all cargo space taken. She had 800 tons of paving blocks for Havana and Cuban railway, which is owned by Canadians, and also a large cargo of hay and grain and flour. At Halifax the Angola will take on fish and other cargo for the West Indies.

It is expected that the Cuba and her sister boat the Mexican will work up a large summer passenger trade on the St. Lawrence route between Montreal and Halifax, and a winter passenger trade between Halifax and West Indian winter resorts. There is every indication also that the new line will work up a large trade between Canada, West Indies and Mexico.

IDEA PATTERNS 10c

SINCLAIR & CO.

Napanee, July 22.—About 7 M. last evening Richard named Harris on the Schooner Mary tripped and fell to the river, and although a rope was thrown him, he failed to grasp it and sank immediately. His body was recovered in 4 or 5 minutes, but he could not be brought to life. It is supposed he was somewhat under the influence of liquor.

Woman Charged With Bigamy.

London, July 21.—In the Police Court yesterday Mrs. John Russell, aged 46 years, was charged with bigamy. Her alleged second husband, Samuel John Hosell, is 17 years old, and it is relatives of the youthful husband who are prosecuting the woman.

Fell From Old Boat.

Montreal, July 21.—Rene Normandin, the 14-yearold son of J. E. Normandin, the drygoods merchant, while playing in an old boat at Boucherville, fell overboard and was drowned.

His Back Broken.

Peterboro, July 22.—Edward Mollroy, aged 16, unmarried, died yesterday morning as the result of injuries received in a runaway accident on a farm on the 7th con. of James Hall in Smith Township. The deceased was brought to Port Hope. It appears Molloy was thrown from a driver by a sudden start of the horses. A doctor was called and found that Molloy's back had been broken.

Shocked by Electricity.

Niagara Falls, July 22.—John Sikes, 20 years of age, employed by the Bell Telephone Co., while stringing wires, was knocked off the top of a 30-foot pole by the wire he had hold of coming in contact with a high voltage electric light wire. Sikes fell to the ground below, crushing his right leg so badly that the bone below the knee protruded through the flesh.

A Remarkable Escape.

Essex, July 21.—Though Fred McCarthy, Pere Marquette station agent at Pelton, while riding on a railway velocipede, met a freight train going full speed in the opposite direction, he was brushed by the collision. McCarthy received a very severe shaking up, however, and now lies in Hotel Dieu, Windsor.

Killed in His Auto.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 21.—M. T. Hancock, a well-known millionaire plow inventor of Los Angeles county, was killed as the result of an automobile accident in Pasadena this afternoon, while his wife, son and daughter were seriously injured. Hancock himself sustained two fractures of the skull and otherwise cut and bruised. His son was running the machine at the rate of 14 miles an hour.

Laidlaw & Ketcheson

Daily Intelligencer.

WELCOME!

On this, the first day of the long-looked-for Old Boys' Reunion, The Intelligencer, in the name of its thousands of readers, extends the gladdest of glad hands to the many old boys and girls who have come and are coming back to celebrate in what, to them, is undoubtedly the fairest and dearest spot on God's footstool. From far and near they have come, singing, with one accord, the sweetest ballad ever written, "Home, Sweet Home."

To some, mayhap, the visit may be a sad one. Perchance they will miss old familiar faces, faces which used to lighten up at sight of them; faces from which the smiles and wrinkles alike have been chased away by the unerring hand of the great leveller, Death. To them we send extend our platitudes in the way of attempted consolation. "The heart knoweth its own bitterness." We can only hope that the memory of olden days, do it be painful, will, after a sad happy scenes, may bring a sense of peace—deep and abiding peace.

Others, again, will come back with no sad thoughts to dampen their spirits. Belleville, to them, is remembered as the place where they returned to claim the bonny bride who had plighted her troth to them in days of doubt, and, true as steel, waited till fortune smiled. Then there was a wedding. Another winsome Belleville girl left the home of her ancestors to share the fortune of the man she loved in a foreign clime. With visitors such as these we rejoice, congratulating them on the fact that, in this city, they secured the fairest and best gift vouchsafed to man in this world.

Others, perchance, have returned hungering for a glimpse of the old familiar faces of their boyhood days, faces of those who shared the same school desk with them; who swam with them in the same swimming hole, who attended the same Sunday School. We sincerely hope that these jolly old chums may be united in this good old city during the next few days, that together they may visit once the old haunts, revisit the old scenes, in fancy loot the same old apple trees and together renew their boyhood days.

The old boys and girls could have chosen no more auspicious time to revisit their old haunts. Never trees, the greenest of green grass and natural beauty of flowers and scenery abounds on every hand. Nature quite waits to welcome the boys and girls who in days gone by sailed and rowed on her lake waters. Their childish charms await them now which gladdened them then. May they enjoy those charms to the full.

There have been months of preparation for the welcoming and entertainment of our old boys and girls, which apparently, has been left undone. Let us hope that, in the case of the latter, the welcoming committee will be exceeded by realization; may the spirit of peace and hearty good fellowship that will be shown to our visitors and visited wonder down sweet memory's lane together and be able to recall, in after years, many delightful days and incidents which marked the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905.

Ladies and gentlemen, Old Girls and Old Boys, the city's yours.

Make yourselves at home.

Buy it Now.

Now is the time to buy Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is certain to be needed some time, and when that time comes you will need a remedy you can depend upon. Buy it now, it may save life. For sale by all druggists.

Eloped With School Boy.

Detroit, Mich., July 20.—Mrs. Tuis Kohlasch, 20 years of age, and Oscar Petter, thirteen years, living near Ann Arbor, are believed to have eloped. An affection has existed between them for some time, so marked that Mrs. Kohlasch's husband had protested to both. The boy and the woman disappeared Tuesday night.

Nothing has since been heard of them. The Sheriff and his deputies are looking for them. Mrs. Kohlasch abandoned three small children. This is a State prison offence. Petter's father has made complaint against him as a truant.

THE WORST OF A COLD.

is how suddenly it comes. No time to hurry to the drug store, croup develops, the lungs are affected with pneumonia or tuberculosis and it is too late. Keep Catarrhozone on hand at all times and instantly something magical about the way it cures catarrh and bronchitis. Catarrhozone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it kills the germs and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket at once occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering. Complete outfit, $1.00; trial size, 25c. Sold by druggists everywhere.

If You Wish to Prove

Zutoo CURES HEADACHE

and unlike the drug cures, leaves no bad effects, you can get samples for nothing. You can buy the small size (six tablets) for 10c., or the large size (twenty-four tablets) for 25c.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Dad millie faithe!

Hope the old girls brought their knitting with 'em.

"Our Jack's come home to-day. "Give him a band, everybody.

Hats off to the old girls. They're nearly as pretty as they would have been if they'd kept at it long.

There should be great congregations in the churches to-morrow.

Don't kill the fatted calf, please. This is not the season for veal.

How many of the old boys went to school to Miss Dafoe? Ask her.

Hospital list? They should hold a caucus, sure.

Wiowever planned the excursions to the country should get a vote of thanks. Many of the visitors will be glad of an opportunity to see the spot where their loved ones rest.

Who said there was no life left in Belleville? Gwan! All we need to do is to look around us. Every minute horse couldn't pass us then.

New, as the gentleman with the fleecy black moustache would say, "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die."

One day recently it was se hot in Cleveland, Ohio, that the automatic fire signals in the business district began to all directions at once. That the firemen were greatly overtaxed over this embarrassing event, goes without saying.

Mexican farmers are greatly incensed over a worm which they have never seen before, and which does immense damage to crops. The worm is called the "hog boy," as he eats and eats and eats and grows. It is said not to be the "cut worm." Millions of these bugs crawl over the stalks of the hay and eat off the tops, when fall to the ground as though mowed with a machine. The hog then passes on, leaving waste in its path.

The Guelph Herald very truly observes that the Conservatives at Ottawa have done Canada an immense service in showing up the immigration policy of Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Sifton. For a family of five from the European continent a grant of $25 is made, whereas for the same number from Great Britain $6 only is given. These grants prove the raise set upon Britishers by the liberal party at Ottawa. Sir Wilfrid, unfortunately for him, is an unguarded moment let out the truth that he thinks of them as strangers and foreigners, how he prizes them at less than Yankees and Dutchmen.

A fellow on the cars who owed $2 last month by giving up smoking. Now his wife demands that he gives up beer.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, who some time ago bought Mr. Corby's yacht, the Skylark, gets some hard raps some time. The Montreal Herald says of him: "Clifford Sifton is having a hard time of it in this country. He gained the reputation of a statesman in 1896 a poor man; he is now worth, they say, a paltry million, and to that extent he has failed. He has a grateful people have voted him a pension of $3,500 for the rest of his days."

The man who lives on the meat block says he is "meaty" to a pretty mean man in this city, who lately cut down his financial income he was too stingy to buy a flea.

Buffalo Express: Lord Roberts says the British army is not fit for war, but he probably means by that, that it fit for South Africa, and get it.

A man who says he stone 85 from the N. S. Detectives' office, Toronto, has sent $200 to the conscience fund, though if that fellow wants to rob anybody else at that rate of interest?

A girl in Elizabeth, N. J., tried to kill herself because she was not beautiful enough to be taken to earth fed as that will ever get nothing in Kingston. There would seem to be a famine in girls.

It is reported from Honolulu that the commander of an American gunboat now in those waters has invented a new cocktail. And everybody will think the Yankee navy isn't good for much.

A Chicago young man who found he could not get a license to marry a girl sixteen years old returned in about half an hour and said he would take out one to marry a girl twenty years old. Time must fly fast in Chicago.

Field Marshal Lord Roberts has consented that a representative of the press shall visit the Canadian National Exhibition when the first or second week, the period of the exhibition extending from August 28th to September 9th.

COMES OF AN OLD HISTORIC FAMILY.

REV. CHARLES A. SIMPSON GRANDSON OF MRS. MARGARET SIMPSON, IS NOW IN THE CITY.

Rev. Chas. A. Simpson, of Brampton, Ont., is here for the Old Boys' Reunion, being the guest of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Robinson. The Rev. gentleman is the fourth son of the late Simpson, who resided in this city over 100 years ago, being among the first settlers. His grandmother kept a store and inn here which was situated on the corner now occupied by Front street. There were, then only six or seven white families here and the latter quarter portion of the place was a swamp. At the grandmother's machine was it was decided to name or changing the name of the place which was then called Meyer's Creek. The present name, Belleville, was selected in honor of the Governor-General's daughter, whose name was Bella Adair. The senior Mr. and Mrs. Simpson lived here for years and died at a ripe old age. Rev. Mr. Simpson has a warm spot in his heart for the city, and hopes to see it progress in every way.

The Festive Auto

A Wallstreet correspondent writes: A number of automobiles have been this season. Out of Jhen frighthe Philadelphia Jew's horse and it ran away and collided with one of Mr. Niles' ornamental trees, turning the machine over and almost extinguishing itself from the harness proceeded up the lake shore road. The owner of the auto and Mr. Green followed in a chaise, and Mr. Green thinking the machine was in a condition made the remark to that effect, when the gentleman opened out the throttle and it fairly leaped in the air. Phil began to look for something to hold at to, and soon the horse was sighted and captured.

What is the Meaning of "Well Balanced" Flour.

A perfectly 'balanced' flour is one which contains the greatest amount of nutriment in its most easily digestible form. No single variety of wheat will produce "well balanced" flour. It requires the careful selection of different kinds.

The makers of ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR have more than a hundred elevators, scattered throughout the greatest wheat growing country in the world, which enables them to secure the very pick of the wheat that will yield perfectly balanced flour—

—The kind of flour that produces the best, the largest and the strongest loaf—

—The loaf which contains the greatest amount of bone, muscle and brain-making protein and the lowest percentage of waste.

ROYAL HOUSEHOLD makes bread which reduces the labor of digestion—and gives greatest nutrition for least stomach effort.

It's the 'balance' in flour that makes bread easier to digest and gives it many other qualities which are usually attributed to other causes.

Ogilvie's "Royal Household" Flour.

OGILVIE'S ROYAL HOUSEHOLD FLOUR

Suggestive.

"Gee whiz" said George for the twentieth time. "It makes me mad every time I think of the $10 I lost today." I actually feel as if I'd like to have somebody kick me."

"By the way, George," said the dear girl dreamily, "don't you think you'd better speak to father this evening?"

The Lot's Advantages.

Advertising Expert—I've written the praises of all these lots but one. I'm afraid you'll call that one. Real Estate Agent—What's the matter with it? Expert—Why, it's on an almost perpendicular hillside. Agent—Call attention to its wonderful drainage facilities.

No More Work.

Hicks—I suppose Dremer is still pottering at his business. Wicks—Why, no. Well, he has actually perfected a great labor saving scheme at last. Hicks—You don't say. Wicks—Yes; he's going to marry Miss Rouley.

FAMOUS PEOPLE

BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL

The Inventor of the Telephone

Alexander Graham Bell, the inventor of the telephone, comes from a family that has made a special study of sounds and speech defects. His grandfather, Alexander Bell, invented a method for removing impediments of speech; his father, Alexander Melville Bell, was the inventor of "visible speech," a system to teach deaf-mutes to speak; and the third of the Alexanders, really "Alexander the Great" of his family, taught a piece of wire to carry the human voice many miles and deliver the message without a change.

He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1847, and after receiving his education there and at the University of his native town, went to London at the age of twenty to attend the University, but remained only a year. In 1870 he came to Canada with his father, and in 1871 introduced his father's system of teaching the deaf and dumb in private classes. But all this time he carried on experiments which grew more fascinating as he progressed, and in 1874 he was in multiplex telegraphy, using the same wire for sending several messages at once. He was not the first to discover this, but he improved on it by day for his own purposes.

Bell was a born experimenter. It seemed as if there was nothing they would not listen to that they could not make talk. He studied the mechanism of the human throat, completed Washington and found his application for a patent. It was a great success. He was made professor of Vocal Physiology, he mentioned his theory of telephony, and he made a series of experiments with the same result, but he had a feeling of delicacy about speaking of his own discovery. So in desperation he renewed his experiments. Almost accidentally, stumbled on a clear that on June 25, 1875, he made his application for a patent on articles described the same day. Bell received, on March 7, 1876, the patent which has made his name famous in the history of invention.

Ran the Hole Out of Town.

A lecturer recently told of a theatre he saw some years ago in Manchester whose methods of achieving realism were not according to the usual code. The invasion had a well in his front yard which he concluded to fill up. He began digging a hole by the side of the well, throwing the dirt from the new excavation into the well.

"In the course of time," said the speaker, "the old well was filled, but there was a hole alongside as big as the first. The Russian went further away and dug another hole to fill the second. He continued this process of digging one hole to fill the other until he literally ran the whole out of town."

Health and Money.

There is this difference between those two temporal blessings, health and money: Money is the most envied, but the least enjoyed; health is the most enjoyed, but the least envied, and this superiority of the latter is still more obvious when we reflect that the poorest man would not part with health for money, but the richest man would gladly part with all his money for health.

People Are Changing.

There was a time when people spent their money for tooth powders, face lotions, hair tonics, etc., but never thought for a moment of their poor feet which had to bear the weight of the whole body day after day. The feet could sweat, blister and agonize and people paid no heed. It was necessary. Since the introduction of Foot Elm, however, many have learned better to change foot misery into foot happiness. It cases work. Try Foot Elm.

Untranslated Opinions.

Artist No. 1—My landscape's absolutely ruined by a turtle perched in it. Artist No. 2—Yes, the hanging's pretty slipshod this year. They've put me next to the crudest thing in the show.

Artist No. 3 (coming up)—Hello! I see they're hung you two cheap together!

The Religious Vocation.

The religious vocation isn't necessarily the outcome of long mental processes. It may either steal upon one suddenly or overwhelm one at a single onslaught.—From "The Bishop's Niece," by George H. Picard.

To Recover Her Child.

"Can you help me to recover my child?" asked the poor woman.

"Is your child lost?"

"No, sir. His clothes are worn out."

Heaven never helps the man who will not act.

The Lesser Evil.

"I don't see why you asked Mr. Bohr to sing," said the popular girl's sister. "I hated to do it," was the reply, "but it was the only way to make him stop talking."

To the Manner Born.

Grubber—What a well bred man Mister Isl Dumley (who doesn't like him)—He ought to be. His father is a baker.

Do all the good you can to all the people you can as long as ever you can in every place you can.

The Last American King.

Maximilian and his followers were shut up in Queretaro. Many powerful influences were at work to save him. Several had been bought. But he made little or no effort to escape. "If he had failed as an emperor he could at least face disaster with the courage and the dignity of a royal Hapsburg prince," he declared to the infamous Lopez, tried before a court martial of boys and ordered to be shot. So great has been the change in the character of all the obligations of friendship and courtesy. A false report of the death of Carlotta being brought to him in prison he had answered, "One less for me to bind me to the world." Led forth to his execution and told to stand between two of his generals who were likewise condemned, he expressed the pious desire to General Miramon in recognition of his courage. The rattle of the musketeers marked perhaps the end of all monarchy in the new world. But the heroic critic of democracy could scarcely desire a greater figure than Maximilian's to stand before the eyes of Americans as the last representative of aristocracy and of kingship on this continent.—William Garrett, in Atlantic.

Just Meandering.

A city girl writes, "It is a fond dream of mine to become a farmer's wife and meander with him down life's pathway."

Ah, yes, that is a nice thing! But when your husband meanders off and leaves you without wood and you have to meander up and down the lane pulling burrs off the fence to cook dinner, and when you meander along in the wet grass in search of the cows till your shoes are the color of rawhide and your stockings soaked, and when you meander out across twenty acres of plowed ground with a club to drive the hogs out of the cornfield and tear your dress on the barb wire fence, when you meander back home to the farmhouse, find that the billy goat has batted the stuffin' out of your cake and find the old hen, with forty chickens, in the parlor, you'll pipe your lamb in your lyre and realize that meandering is not what it is cracked up to be.

Sea Water.

Sea water is a complicated mixture of a great variety of substances. Hoadley speaking, it consists of 96½ per cent of fresh water plus 3½ per cent of mineral salts. Three-fourths of these salts are chloride of sodium, or common table salt, and the next largest component is chloride of magnesium. After these come sulphate of magnesium, sulphate of lime, chloride of potash, bromide of magnesium and carbonate of lime. In addition to these substances sea water contains minute quantities of quite a variety of other salts, including iodine, phosphorus and arsenic. It also contains some silver, copper, zinc, nickel, cobalt, iron and gold. There is said to be 2 cents' worth of gold in every gallon of sea water, but as yet nobody has found a way to extract it. Copper and zinc are found in some seaweeds, and certain species of coral is three-millionths silver.

Deceived.

Mrs. Blinkers—What! Going away? Why? Didn't you like the room we gave you yesterday you gave me the keys to your trunks and drawers and desks and locked them all up? Mr. Blinkers—Yes, I did that to show that I trusted you. What is the matter, Servant—There don't one o' 'em fit.

In Their Order of Importance.

"Oh, did you get elected to the literary club this afternoon, dear?" asked the husband in the evening.

"Let me see," murmured his wife, "oh, yes, I remember now. Why, we announced that, woman who recently moved into the house across the street and Longfellow."

Easy.

Old Lady (watching a football match) "I cannot imagine that foolish Fire Chief." Old Gent—Well, you see, each side is trying to kick the ball between those posts at either end of the field. Old Lady—Well, that makes it hard tee dae if they'd it' aff out o' the head.

Wonder If This Is So?

If you put two persons in the same bedroom, one of whom has the toothache and the other a cold, the man with the cold has the person who has the toothache will go to sleep first. Isn't it curious?

At the Wrong Time.

"You sly puss playing created a great deal of talk" said the friend.

"Yes," answered the pianist, "but unfortunately it was mostly during my performance."

Ever notice how much time the other fellow can spare from his business to talk about it? —Ivan Pyne's Magazine (Ky.) Bulletin.

She Dyed.

"Ah, sir!" said the stranger, "it was but one short year that I was at this summer resort and met a beautiful brunette to whom I plighted my troth. She said she would be true until death, and as I kissed the lovely ringlet of her hair as a gauge of her love. I was to seek her here at this time. It is I do not find her—"

"What was even since?" asked the hotel clerk, for hoped indeed he.

"Hosette Belgage."

"Oh, she died?"

"Died?"

"Yes. That's bar over there at the end of the piazza. That stunning blonde."

As Rosette even [illegible] a beautiful blond [illegible] dered his grips sent [illegible] became looking up [illegible] Chicago Tribune.

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle,

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a sore or pimple. It is better than the needle, because it is painless. It is better than poisonous depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not make the hair grow coarse. In other words, it is the only method that destroys the hair, and does not stimulate the hair, thereby causing it to grow coarser.

Electrical tips, X-ray or depilatories are all condemned by the leading physicians of the world. DE MIRACLE is the only method that is endorsed by physicians, druggists and beauty specialists, which is indicated by prescriptions from physicians and testimonials from druggists and beauty specialists.

DE MIRACLE is sealed in plain wrapper, with full directions for use, and sent to any address on receipt of $2.00 (no C.O.D.'s). Call at the office of the DE MIRACLE CHEMICAL CO., or address them by mail, 61 Church St., Toronto, Ont.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. On every hand we are complimented on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect lay out of the book. Nothing has seemingly been left out—"nothing" which has been included, and very much has been left out: "complete and perfect"—best describe it adequately. We are hurrying from old Bellevillians to other places, for they will be unstinted praise. You should have it—so pay for it yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. Don't delay—go fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would, like to take home with them a "lasting" reminder of the great Reunion, and so here it is—Souvenir Fountain Pen, fully guaranteed. We will have it engraved appropriately named "The City of Belleville." If be a regular $2.00

Sunshine Furnace

Don't Sift Ashes;

—ruin your clothes,injure your hands, raise a dust, the meanest, dirtiest job a man can do—and no work for a woman.

What then? Waste good coal? Increase expense?

No, use a furnace that burns all the coal, that does not shake down some ashes and a lot of coal.

Use a furnace with a grate that drops ashes, but holds the coal — a furnace with such perfect combustion that all the coal is burnt and gives off all the heat that's in it.

That is the Sunshine Furnace made by McClary's — the only furnace that's built to burn all the coal and shake down nothing but ashes.

Built with an ash-pan, no shovelling, no sifting, no dust, no spoiled clothes, no exasperating, expensive waste.

The most modern furnace built, the best burner and best heater—the easiest furnace to manage—the very best.

Write for our furnace booklet, it is worth reading.

The Sunshine Furnace is sold by all enterprising dealers.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Here is a little gem which seems to be apropos just now. Try it over on your grasshoppers. It may be sung to the tune of "All Tied up with a Woollen String":

THE BOYS OF YESTERYEAR.

Where are the boys of yesteryear?
Well, some are in the army,
And some are growing stout on beer,
And some are in the army.

Some, too, have got to Parliament,
And some have grafters grown,
And some are wed and ill content,
And some still live alone.

Some few have gone upon the stage
Some few are cutting hay,
And some are in the crazy cage,
And some have got the price.

Some go to church on Sunday and Think such sermons rather tame,
Some few at jobs are pounding sand,
And some hunt counters Rasp.

Some have grown stout beneath the vest,
Some few are married men,
Some more have emigrated West,
And some are in the pen.

Some make a living piling bricks,
Some digging in the ditch,
Some have gone in for politics,
And dine any growing rich.

Some of the bunch have whiskers grown,
Some wear the shaven face,
Some most to the police are known,
Some fortune's boldest chase.

Some have become both rich and great
Some better and some worse;
Some are in such unhappy state
That they, like us, write verse.

Some have their heads devoid of hairs,
Some never lack for chaup,
And some have grown to bulls and bears
Upon the stock exchange.

And some are wielding axe and saw,
Some carry lawyers' bags,
And some have got a starving jaw,
And some just carry jags.

Thus of the boys of yesteryear,
And there is little doubt
That few, if any, tread the path
In which they started out.

Kingston Whig: Knowing something of Sir Mackenzie Bowell's departmental work, it is a pleasure to say he was a fair, hardworking and efficient Administrator.

Sir Richard Cartwright is alleged to have denied that he intends to leave the Cabinet. But perhaps the Cabinet will leave Sir Dick some fine morning.

A green little boy in a green little way,
A green little apple devoured one day,
And the green little grass now will tenderly wave
O'er the green little apple-boy's green little grave.

They have a queer way of trying to encourage their soldiers and sailors in Russia. Admiral Rojestvensky's report shows that though at Madagascar fourteen sailors were hanged to encourage the others, when his fleet got to the Sea of Japan the men were still disheartened and would not fight well. In Russia the people may not understand how this should be. In other countries it will be thought the cure is simple. The rule of terror does not make for manhood.

Toronto News: Sir Mackenzie Bowell is 81 years of age, and his announcement that he will not lead the Conservative party in the Senate was to be expected. His honesty and sincerity, and his broad, downright style of expressing his opinions have made him a notable figure, and won him the respect of all parties.

The briefest marriage ceremony on record took place, it is stated, at an obscure town to the far West. The pastor was editor of a newspaper, a lawyer and clerk of the town council. The pastor was writing a leading article for his paper. "Time is money," said he, without looking up from his paper. "Do you want her?"

"Yes," said the man.

"And do you want him?"

She stammered an affirmative. "Man and wife," said the editor. One dollar; bring me a load of wood for it; one third plan, balance cash. Details settled later. Good morning."

BIRA CHADSEY ESTATE.

SAID TO BE CLAIMED BY A PICTON LAWYER.

(Picton Gazette.)

Dr. Thernton, Commissioner of Conseour, was at the Chadsey farm, near Wellington, on Monday last, to hold an inquest, but for evidence and circumstances were such as to preclude the possibility of proceeding with the inquest at the present time.

In the meantime it is rumored that Mr. N. Ebbett, a solicitor, of Picton, has assumed possession of the property, under a will in his possession, naming him the sole legatee and executor.

It might here be stated that Mr. Chadsey had a mania for making wills, and devising his property to different people, and whether there is a later dated will than the one alleged to have been presented by Mr. Ebbett, is not known at present, neither is it known, for certain, that Mr. Chadsey is dead. The latter is indulged in by many that the fire, heat, and ashes, were carried out for a purpose and that Mr. Chadsey will turn up again after a time; however, the general opinion is that he is dead.

In the meantime Mr. Fred Chadsey, brother, of Newark, N.J., has arrived at Wellington, and it is to be hoped, has taken formal possession of the farm, and will consequently contest the claim of Ebbett's family to the ownership of the property.

A SAD ACCIDENT.

ROBERT GOOD, A YOUNG LAD, LOST A PORTION OF HIS FOOT THROUGH A RAILROAD ACCIDENT THIS MORNING.

Robert Good, a young son of Mr. Thomas Good of this city, was the unfortunate victim of a distressing accident. When the first train conveying the excursionists from Toronto passed down Pinnacle street at 7 o'clock this morning, Robert, who was on his way to the bridge, accompanied by several companions, attempted to cross the track in front of the engine, and in getting off in front of Mr. W. Thompson's residence, he fell and in some manner his left foot went across the rail. The train was at that time at the whistle passed over the member, crushing it badly. Dr. Herity was promptly called up and carried into Dr. Gibson's office over by, when the injury was examined and treated. He was then conveyed to the hospital accompanied by several physicians.

At the hospital, where a minute examination was made of the crushed foot, it was seen that the bone had passed over it diagonally and it was found necessary to amputate a portion of the member. The young sufferer bore the operation well, and is said to be doing nicely. The unfortunate affair has cast a shadow of regret over the gayety of the occasion.

Holloway St.'s Big Day.

Holloway St. Methodist Church will have a red-letter day to-morrow. For the last three months preparations have been in progress, and the church has been renovated from cellar to steeple. To-morrow it will be reopened, and two former pastors will preach, viz., Rev. Mr. Neal in the morning and Rev. Mr. Waigh in the evening. After the evening service will come the crowning event of many years of self-sacrificing effort on the part of the men and women of Holloway St.—the burning of the mortgages which have for years been on their church and parsonage. Many old boys and girls, who have helped pay the interest on those mortgages in the past, will joyfully watch them burn.

A Strange Coincidence.

Just twenty years ago to-day, July 22, our soldier boys were sent to the Northwest to fight in the Riel rebellion, returned home. Upon that day the city was beautifully decorated, as it is to-day.

Belleville's Warm Welcome To Her Old Boys and Girls

Greatest Event in the City's History, That's What Everybody Says—Decorations Are "Out of Sight"—Nothing Apparently Left Undone to Make the Occasion a Grand One.

The Belleville Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 is off to a good start.

On Wednesday and Thursday people descended intermittently. Yesterday they got down to solid business, with the result that, this morning, the old town, from one corner of its city limits to the other, looked like a scene from "Babes in Toyland." It seems to be a combination of the burst of welcome to the many visitors who have come and are coming. Everywhere you looks he sees waving flags, bright bunting and everything. As for the yards of streamers and girls of to-day will have many stories to tell of how the Old Boys and Girls came home in 1905, and how the staid citizens went wild in their honor. Serious, dull care! On occasions like this some seldom is a lifetime.

The streets last evening presented an animated scene. All the world and his wife were out, apparently looking at the decorations. Up and down the streets walked men and women who have never strayed, and yet, come to think of it, they were not strange, after all. Society or our remembered seeing them before. Sometimes they had a few more lines in them than when we saw them last, sometimes the face, beardless when last one saw it, was now sporting a moustache. Sometimes a lady had, as very long ago, was a girl on Belleville's streets; by her side walks a husband, and by the hand modestly follow her! Ah me! That old fellow, time, never allows any of us to stand still. Girls and boys, women and men, all must keep up with the procession which he marches to the front.

As before stated, the decorations were immense. At the G.T.R. station an arch was erected which was evergreens, and looking very tasteful. Facing the station it bore the legend, "Welcome Old Boys and Girls," on the other side, "God Save the King." Passing on down Station street one could not help but be struck by the profusion of flags and bunting displayed on the houses. One boy of fair girls had a way of decorating a home front in a most unheard-of way, the pillars of the porch being twined with red, white and blue bunting. A young fellow stood his head out of the window. "Do you want half-child?" he shouted. Some of the pillars looked like barber poles, but what matter, everything goes when the old town comes home. The effect of Front street's decorations could not be seen till one reached the upper end of the street, for the street from that point the effect was magnificent. Everybody for miles and miles never looked so handsome before. From a profusion from windows and doors, there were strings of flags across the street at short intervals, while every hundred yards or so were large banners bearing such words as:—"Welcome Old Boys and Girls of Belleville's undying love for them and imploring them to come back again and settle in our midst. Always everybody is welcome, his best it would be hardly fair to particularize. We are not going to say which of the stores looked the handsomest, they looked perfectly charming. There were splendid decorations on the Post Office, the City Hall, the Hotel Quinte, the Court House, etc., but, by common consent, the palm must be awarded to the decorations of the offices of Lazier, Corby Co., Limited, which were magnificent in design and perfect in their carrying out under the direction of Mr. A. I. Bird. A fisher could hardly be imagined. All down to the wharf the decorations at the station, waiting for the first to go took. It was due at the Post Office at 45 minutes. So people waited, but it came not. Then at 11 o'clock, and the same scenes were repeated. But, there were crowds to get the second train, and the crowd was a little more abandoned rather than that on the first. Uniformed gentlemen, too, could be seen at the windows. It turned out that the famous Queen's Own Rifle Band was accompanied the Toronto Old Boys. As the crowd arose to welcome the I.O.O.F. Band of this city played "Home, Sweet Home," and the enthusiasm of everybody knew no bounds.

We learned from Mr. William Johnson that there would be no more specials from Toronto, but ones who were left over would come down on the regular train. After the handshaking was over the Queen's Own Rifle Band, 32 strong, in command of Bugle-Major Swift, formed up on Bridge St. for a march up Front St. They were escorted by the local I.O.O.F. Band. In front of the Bugle Band, in addition to the Bugle-Major, marched Col. Grant and Major Stewart. And you talk about your marching music! A man who couldn't keep step to the Queen's Own Band's quickstep would be past redemption. It was not ready to do so, however, to the undertaker. The procession went up Front St., to Victoria avenue, up that thoroughfare to Pinnacle, then countermarched and went back to the market square, up Bridge St. to Dundas and went to their quarters at the Dominion House. The sidewalks and pavements are a trifle looking lot of the time the Rosebuds' quickstep was said about them by the crowds which lined the streets. The Band Band played going back, and Prof. Denmark and the merry men rose to the occasion in great style. They were out a dandy march. The whole thing was a magnificent spectacle, and the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905.

All visitors who were formerly members of the Fifteenth and wish to parade with their old friends can obtain uniforms on Monday by application to Capt. Barrager at the armory, Church St., on Monday, 9.30 p.m. please," said a little lady, "do ask the merchants not to keep open at night. The only time to see some of the festivities, you know." Some of the merchants wouldn't be so hard-hearted.

The Special train for Toronto will not leave the Market Square till 11 o'clock on Monday night.

Tree Culture.

The largest island in the world is New Guinea, 300,000 square miles. Great Britain is 88,850 square miles.

A Novel Chair.

Among the curiosities in the Maritzburg museum, in South Africa, is a chair, twenty-three feet high, including carved from the trunk of a tree by Kaffir native, at Upper Tugela, Zoutspansberg district, Transvaal. The chair is a monument to the phenomenal patience and skill in carving.

Flowering Plants.

Perpetual snow is the only limit to flowering plants. In Tibet these have been found growing freely at heights of from 16,000 to 18,000 feet.

Pointers and Setters.

A pointer is called because of its habit of stopping and pointing at game with its nose, while the setter gets his name from a like habit, excepting that it crouches instead of standing when pointing under similar circumstances.

English Juries.

A corner in England points out the little known fact that a jury composed over twelve years of age can be called upon as jurors.

A GOOD COMPLEXION.

What the Famous "Beauty Doctors" Say To Do.

What woman would not crave a good complexion? And what woman, whose clear, soft, and blood skin is the envy of all her friends, does not regard it as her dearest possession? It is true that we have blemishes skin—but it takes time and some patience. Cuticura Soap, assisted by healing only in rapid water, regular hours for a few days and with mild ointment, will keep pimples from constipation is the great cause of bad complexion. Take only one thing which will effectually cure constipation—Cascarets. They do not only purify the blood by acting on the skin, liver and kidneys, but create a new flow of pure, healthy blood to every part of the body, and so nourish the whole system. Cascarets are the most wonderful tonics and then condensed into tablets and sold under the name of "Cascarets" or "Fruit Liver Tablets." Those who have used Cascarets highly praise the mild fruit action, and will cure Biliousness, Sick Headache, Bad Liver, Kidney Diseases and all blood impurities. Get Cascarets "Fruit Liver Tablets" somewhere in "just as good," because "Fruit-a-tives" are the only palatable made of fruit juices. For sale at all Druggists, 50c. a box. Send for free sample or write for receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Cabbages in England.

The first cabbages grown in Great Britain were raised on the ground adjoining the abbey of Arbroath, having been produced from seeds obtained from Arabia in Persia.

Serpents' Movements.

The serpent moves by elevating the scales on its abdomen and using them to push the body forward. The curvings are always horizontal. The arrangement of the muscles is such that a vertical have never observed the animal in motion. It is impossible for it to move in that way.

Old Roman Brooches.

The brooches used in Rome during the first and second centuries were often ten bad a martial appearance. They were principally made of silver, bronze, battleaxes and bows.

The Difference Between Expert and Unskilful Tea Blending

THE qualities of different teas prove that there is a distinct difference between expert Red Rose blending methods and the usual methods.

Several kinds of teas may be blended, but if unskilfully selected they will not combine to make a perfect blend; they will retain their original individual characteristics—the strong teas and harshness emphasized.

Such tea is bitter, poorly flavored in the cup (and there is much of it in bulk and package form on the market). It emphasizes the result of inexperience, lack of knowledge of combining qualities of different teas to produce a perfect blend, and the hundred and one other causes of poor tea.

But my expert Red Rose blenders select the right grades of strong, rich Indian teas and delicate fragrant Ceylon teas, and produce Red Rose Tea with entirely new characteristics—a tea with that "rich fruity flavor" that tea so exquisitely different and better than any brand of Ceylon alone, that no one who once tries it ever goes back to Ceylon again.

Red Rose Tea is good Tea

THE MASTER SPECIALISTS OF AMERICA

We know the diseases and weaknesses of men like an open book. We have been curing them for 30 years. We have given our lives to it, and thousands upon thousands of men restored to Vigorous Vitality are today living monuments to the skill, knowledge and success of Drs. Kennedy & Kergan. We never hold out false hopes we never undertake a case we cannot cure. We have made so thorough a study of all the diseases of men—Varicocele, Stricture, Blood Poisons, Hydrocele, Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Bladder, Urinary and Kidney Diseases, General Weakness, Loss of Vitality, that we have cured as many thousands of cases that if there is a cure for YOUR disease you will find it here. When we undertake a case there is no such thing as failure. We charge nothing for consultation and your knowledge, skill and experience are at your service. We will explain to you How and Why We Can Cure You; why the failures of men require the knowledge and skill of Master Specialists. We do not require to make experiments with your case as we know from experience in treating thousands of cases just what remedies are necessary for your conditions. Don't consult family doctors or general practitioners. If you have trouble with your Kidneys, Bladder, Blood, Skin, Nerves, Stomach, Heart, Lungs, Rheumatism, Piles, Rupture, Stricture, Varicocele, Blood Poisons, Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Impotency, Sexual Weakness, Lost Power, Failing Memory, Despondency, Lack of Energy, Specific Blood Poisons, Contagious Blood Poisons, Syphilis, Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Spermatorrhoea, Seminal Emissions, Unnatural Discharges, Diseases of the Prostate Gland, Varicose Veins, Varicocele, Hydrocele, Electric Boils, Free Trials, etc. You must get cured—that is why we have established our Master Specialists Department. Has stood the test for 25 years—why should it fail in your case. We refer you to cases grown incurable you need not pay a cent for treatment. scorching party to Tia Juana that day, and Miss Harriet had returned to the hotel only in time to dress. By 9:30 she emerged from the process—a dainty head levelled her entrance, her younger sister, her maid and one of the hotel chambermaids—a dainty, fern corsetted little body, all tulle, white satin and high piled hair. She carried Marechal Niel roses, ordered by wire from Monterey, and about an hour later, when Ridgeway gave the nod to the waiting musicians and swung her off to the best of a 1-cousin, there was not a more graceful little figure upon the floor of the incomparable round ballroom of the Coronado hotel.

The cotillion was a great success. The seniors and younger officers of the monitor, at that time anchored off the hotel, attended in uniform, and enough of the members of what was known in San Francisco as the "dancing set" were present to give the affair the necessary eclat. Even Jerry Haight, who belonged more distinctly to the "country club set" and who had spent the early part of that winter shooting elk in Oregon, was among the ranks of the "rovers," who grouped themselves about the drafty doorways and endeavored to appear unconscious each time Ridgeway gave the signal for a "break."

The figures had gone round the ball once. The "first set" was out again, and as Ridgeway guided Miss Herrick by the "rovers" she looked over the array of shirt fronts, searching for Jerry Haight.

"Do you see Mr. Haight?" she asked of Ridgeway. "I wanted to favor him this break. I owe him two already, and he'll never forgive me if I ever look him now."

Jerry Haight had gone to the hotel office for a few moments' rest and a cigarette and was nowhere in sight. But when at the finale and Miss Herrick, despairing of Jerry, had started out to favor one of the younger ensigns, she suddenly jostled against him pushing his way eagerly across the floor in the direction of the musicians' platform.

"Oh," she cried, "Mr. Haight, you've missed your chance—I've been looking for you!"

But Jerry did not hear. He seemed very excited. He crossed the floor in most running, and went up on the platform, where the musicians were resting during setty through the end of "La Paloma," and brought them to an abrupt silence.

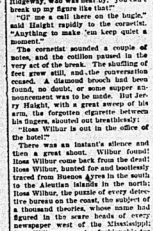

"Here, I say, Haight," exclaimed Ridgeway, who was near by, "you can't break up my figure like that!"

"If" me a call there on the bugle," said Haight rapidly to the cornetist. "Anything to make 'em keep quiet a moment."

The cornetist sounded a couple of notes, and the cotillion paused in the very act of the break. The shuffling of feet grew still, and the conversation ceased. A diamond tiara had been found, no doubt, or some supper announcement was to be made. But Jerry Haight, with a great sweep of his arm, the forgotten cigarette between his fingers, shouted out breathlessly:

"Hoss Wilbur is out in the office of the hotel!"

There was an instant's silence and then a great shout. Wilbur found! Hoss Wilbur come back from the dead! Hoss Wilbur, hunted for and believed traced from Buenos Ayres in the south to the Aleutian Islands in the north! Hoss Wilbur, the puzzle of every detective bureau on the coast, the subject of a thousand theories, whose name had figured in the scare heads of every newspaper west of the Mississippi! Hoss Wilbur, sent at a fashionable tea and his club of an afternoon, then suddenly blotted out from the world of men, swallowed up and engulfed by the unknown, with not so much as a button left behind; Hoss Wilbur, the mystery, Hoss Wilbur, the suspect, Hoss Wilbur, victim of a band of kidnappers, the hero of some thrilling story that was never to be told, the mystery, the regret—behold he was there, back from the unknown, dropped from the clouds, risen from the lap again from the bottom of the earth, a veritable god from the machine who in a single instant was to dissipate all the unexplained complications of those past winter months!

"Here he comes!"

"Here he comes!" shouted Jerry, his eyes caught by a group of men in full dress and jackets who came tramping down the hall to the ballroom, Jerry dragging Ridgeway by their shoulders. "Here he comes—the boys are herding him in this direction! Get ready, turning to the musicians, "can't you play something—anything? All right, you play, Ridgeway—play!" Ridgeway: Ross was late, I guess, but he's here all right. Now, you give him the prize!"

Out of the hall, and then with a slide up for both, the musicians fell into a patriotic air, going on a chair that Hoss Wilbur had mounted on the platform, led by the cornetist in the long drum, and

"Brek-brk-brk-brk, co-ax co-ax!"

Around the edges of the hall excited girls, and men in dress suits were agitated, and were standing up on chairs and benches, a solitude their elders and breaking their fans in their enthusiasm, while every male dancer on the floor—eunique in their gold lace and "service" uniforms, or in starched and immaculate shirt bosoms—cheered and cheered and struggled with one another to shake hands with a man whom two of their number, old Yale grads, with memories of athletic triumphs yet in their minds, carried into their ballroom, borne high upon their shoulders.

And the here of the occasion, the center of all this enthusiasm, thus carried as if in triumph into the assembly in evening dress, in white tulle and white kid, odorous of delicate sachets and scarce perceptible perfumes, was a figure unhandsome and unkempt beyond description. His hair was long and hanging over his eyes; a thing, uncut, for beard covered the mouth and chin. He was dressed in a Chinaman's blouse and jeans, the latter burned into slashed and tattered boots. The tan and weather beatings of nearly half a year of the tropics were spread over his face, a partly healed scar disfigured one temple and cheekbone; the hands, to the very finger nails, were grimy with grime; the jeans and blouse and boots were foul-red with grease, with oil, with pitch and all manner of the dirt of an ancient for ship. And as the dancers of the cotillion pressed about and a hundred kid gloved hands stretched to him, he was pained there fell from Wilbur's belt upon the waxed floor of the ballroom the knife he had so gladly used in the fight upon the beach, the ugly stains still blackening on the haft.

There was no more cotillion that night. They put him down at last, and in half a dozen sentences Wilbur told them of how he had been slaughtered—told them of Magdalena bay, his fortune in the ambergris and the fight with the beachcombers.

"You people are going down there for target practice, aren't you?" he said, turning to one of the Monterey officers in the crowd about him. "Yes? Well, you'll find the beaches there, on the beach, waiting for you. All but one," he added grimly.

"We marooned six of them, but the seventh didn't need to be marooned. They tried to plunder us of our boat, but, by —, we made it interesting for 'em!"

"I say, steady, old man!" exclaimed Ned Ridgeway, glancing covertly toward the girls in the surrounding group. "This isn't Magdalena bay, you know."

And for the first time Wilbur felt a growing pang of disappointment and regret as he realized that it was not.

Half an hour later Ridgeway drew him aside. "I say, Ross, let's get out of here. You can't stand here talking all night. Jerry and pal and I will go up to my rooms, and we can talk there in peace. I'll order up three quarts of fizz, and—"

"Oh, not your fizz!" declared Wilbur. "If you have any wine me Christian tobacco."

An they were going out of the ballroom Wilbur caught sight of Josie Herrick, and, breaking away from the others, ran over to her.

"Oh!" she cried, breathless. "You're back, and to think of your coming back —or all! No, I don't realize it—I can't. It will take me some time yet to find out that you're really come back. I just had a new hat from the north. Your was in my life before. Oh!" she cried, "do I need to tell you how glad I am? It's just too delightful for words! Do you know, I was thought to be the first person you had ever spoken to while alive, and the reporters and all—oh, but no one must have such a talk when all are quiet again! And our dance—we've never had our dance. I've got your card and I remember the one you wrote for me at the Del Monte—and it was published in all the papers. You are going to stay with us when you get back to San Francisco. Oh, Ross, Ross!" she cried, the tears starting to her eyes. "You've really come back, and you are just as glad as I am, aren't you—glad that you've come back—come back to me?"

Later on, in Ridgeway's room, Wilbur told his story again more in detail to Ridgeway and Jerry. All but one portion of it. He could not make up his mind to speak to them—even to nicely fellows, clubmen and city bred—of Moran. How he was going to order his life henceforward—his life, that he felt to be void of interest without her—he did not know. That was a question for later consideration.

"Well give another cotillion," exclaimed Ridgeway, "up in the city—give it for you, Ross, and you'll lead. It'll be the event of the season!"

Wilbur uttered an exclamation of contempt. "It's done with that sort of foolery," he answered.

"Nonsense!" Why, think, we'll have it in your honor. Every smart girl in town will come, and you'll be the lion of—"

"You don't seem to understand," cried Wilbur impatiently. "Do you think there's any fun in that for me now? Why, man, I've fought—fought with a naked dirk, fought with a cooly who snapped at me like a cur—and you talk to me of dancing and

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $5, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young fellow.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

MACKENZIE BOWELL, A GREAT CANADIAN

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The announcement by Sir Mackenzie Bowell that he will no longer lead the Liberal-Conservative party in the Senate means that a great Canadian of sterling worth is to withdraw from active service after making a record which does honor to his name, and adds lustre to the history of his country. Sir Mackenzie will stand aside, regretted by those who know of his splendid work for Canada, but conscious of the fact that his whole career of activity he has labored he has done his duty to the State.

WHAT WORK WILL DO.

There is not in our history a better illustration of the truth that work—constant work—united with rectitude brings its reward, than that we have in the life of Sir Mackenzie. This distinguished Canadian was not born to wealth or position. He was one of the people, and it was by toil and through the confidence which his integrity inspired in his fellow-countrymen that he rose from the printers' office to the Premier's desk. Respected by the people among whom he lived, he was sent to Parliament for the North Riding of Hastings at the first Confederation Election. He had, as the editor of the Belleville Intelligencer — to this day one of the brightest and most influential of the eastern Ontario journals — advocated the union of the provinces into a great Dominion, and it was appropriate that he should have been sent to the House of Commons to participate in the carrying out of the work to which he had so ably championed. In the House he speedily took a prominent place, for he was a ready speaker and a vigorous fighter. He always made certain that, by whatever party he then he went ahead, regardless of what the other side might do.

A STRONG FIGHTER.

It was because he was so determined and so much a combatant that he attracted such attention. In 1873 when he took up the Pacific Scandal he was the Minister of Militia. When the assailed Ministry was attacked in violation of the Independence of Parliament Act, which prohibited members, the Speaker even holding one of these certificates, Sir Mackenzie scattered the country deeply, and contributed materially to the public indignance which followed soon after. Sir John Macdonald, whose personal friend he had a very high opinion of Sir Mackenzie. He considered him a strong man, but, as was explained by the Auditor-General at the time, "a man who knew could say—No!" It was because he had the courage to stand out for what he regarded as right, irrespective of the consequences, that he won confidence in him. In the making of the National Policy Sir Mackenzie help was of the valuable. Sir Leonard Tilley was the Minister who designed the plan, but the work was undertaken, and he had no more faithful or more capable colleague than the Minister of Customs.

ONE OF THE FATHERS.

If Sir Mackenzie was not one of the Fathers of the Confederation, in the sense that he was a member of Parliament at the time when union was decided upon, he was a conspicuous one of the statesmen who completed the foundations and helped to build the roof of the National Policy, and he was afterwards prominently identified with the Canadian Pacific charter. After that he gave attention to the building up of the Conservative Imperial Union, taking part in the conferences at Ottawa in 1894, and pushing the inter-British cable project, which is destined to bind the Empire into closer relations. The title MACKENZIE BOLD STAND.

But Sir Mackenzie took a bold stand on the subject, and won the confidence of those who associated with him, as well as of those who did not. He was in the end proved to have been right. He laid down his line of action in the Senate in the first session in Opposition, as the leader of the Conservatives in the Upper House. He knows has rendered invaluable service to his country. He fought against "deals" or "steals," promoted by the Liberal Leader and his colleagues, and saved the country millions of dollars by his activity and his determination to do what is right. By defeating the Yukon conspiracy, Sir Mackenzie designed by Mr. Clifford Sifton and Laurier for the purpose of securing the best public timber lands over to a syndicate, he reserved to the people property worth many millions of dollars. By throwing out the Drummond deal, Sir Mackenzie forced Sir Wilfrid, who was giving a cool million to certain political friends and campaign subscribers to abandon the worst feature of that evil transaction. Independence has been a prime characteristic of Sir Mackenzie, and he has employed that splendid asset in the country's advantage as the Opposition leader in the Upper House.

JOHN BULL QUALITIES.

As a matter of fact, Sir Mackenzie has the qualities of John Bull. He is strict in his ideas of propriety. He is "set" in his mind, and adheres to to the policy he has laid down. He has a strong sense of justice, and a dislike for anything that is not wrong. By right and by right of all that is best in a vigorous Canadian sentiment. He loves his country, and takes pride in its progress. In December next Sir Mackenzie—John Bull hearty—will be 83 years old, and he thinks that at that period in his life he deserves rest. His fellow-countrymen would like him to continue in harness for a while longer, for there is always something for the ripe man of experience and of ability to do. But he knows his own feelings best, and as he withdraws from the heat of the battle the good wishes of all his fellow-countrymen will go with him.

RICHES LOST FOR LOVE.

SON OF PITTSBURG MILLIONAIRE WHO MARRIED DANCER FORFEITS A FORTUNE.

Pittsburg, July 21. — Because he married his wife a carnival dancing girl Samuel S. Rymer, son of Joseph S. Rymer, the millionaire coal operator, has been practically disinherited. Under the will of the elder Rymer, filed for probate today, he was left only the income from $20,000. Heretofore his expenses have amounted to more than $20,000 a year.

Samuel Rymer married Nellie Parker in Mexico City within two years the father destroyed a will by which the greater part of his fortune was left to the younger son, and a new one was drawn up. This will was executed only a few days before the death of the elder Rymer, which occurred on Monday. The marriage caused him to decline rapidly and within three months he died. Miss Samuel Rymer also has $20,000 from which he is to receive the income will revert to the estate, on the death of the widow, to the younger son, nor can any children that may be born to the couple. The will also provides expressly that the interest shall be paid into the hands of the widow, and that the income is not to be subject to debts already contracted or to be contracted by her. It is not to be anticipated or assigned. A young lawyer who met Nellie Parker several years ago, during an Elks' carnival held in Allegheny, was one of the dancers in an Egyptian ballet. Rymer became infatuated with her, and after the show closed in Allegheny he followed her to a number of other cities, forsaking his affections and his wealth upon the carnival circuit.

At the close of the season he induced the girl to be his bride, which was then in Bolivar, a small mining town in the Connellsville coke fields. She remained there only a short time, however, returning again to Pittsburg. Rymer continued to court her until he married her in June.

The father did everything in his power to separate the couple, but without success. They went to Denver, where they remained for the last days of the elder Rymer. The son came home at that time, but the presence aforesaid is not known to be known.

The marriage, of which the father knew nothing, was performed by Alderman Kinel. A few days later it was learned that Jacob Reymer's attorney, Joseph Stern, recorded in the marriage license office and called upon the alderman. The execution of the new will followed immediately.

The value of the estate is left to the widow, the income to be used during her lifetime, after which the principal of income and principal goes to the decedent's only daughter, Miss Ida Rymer. The personal property is scheduled at $370,000. The bulk of this is in stocks and other holdings is not given, but it is large. The daughter is given $5,000 in her own right. Cornelia M. Campbell, a niece, and E. Reymer Harris, a nephew, are given $5,000 each.

Besides the income from the $20,000 trust fund the son is given a gold watch and chain, presented by the decedent by his brother Philip. Mr. Reymer refers to this gift as one which I hope he may hold as a sacred trust."

The mother of young Reymer has always said for his foreign wife. It is supposed that she will care for him, now that his father has disinherited him.

"THE GRACIOUS INVITATION" — REFRESHING TO FIND SOMETHING THESE DAYS WHICH DOES NOT BEAR A PRICE TAG —THE FAT AND THE LEAN — SOME REFLECTIONS.

(By William T. Ellis.)

A man's first spontaneous thought of every person he knows is a picture of some action, incident or event of that personality. Later, the man's whole life may move into retrospect, but the first glimpse is of a particular characteristic. The same law applies to one's attitude toward religion. Nobody blocks a whole system of theology concerning the person whose name the religion of evangelism bears. Just what the immediate, spontaneous thought of people may be toward Christianity is of great importance. Do they look upon it as a pourri of stern and inexorable justice, which inevitably squashes a sinner every hapless frailty? Is it a sleepless eye, eager to discover mortals in 'wrong-doing'? Is it a system of rigorous and cramping rules of conduct? Or is it a scheme of general philanthropy?

THE SCRIBES IN THE HOSPITAL.

The point is worth considering. Doubtless there will be general agreement that Christianity is, above all else, a pourri of stern and inexorable justice, which inevitably squashes every hapless frailty? Is it a sleepless eye, eager to discover mortals in 'wrong-doing'? Is it a system of rigorous and cramping rules of conduct? Or is it a scheme of general philanthropy?

THE SCRIBES IN THE HOSPITAL.

The point is worth considering. Doubtless there will be general agreement that the answer is, that the world's conception of Christianity is a system

BOMB THROWN AT SULTAN.

His Turkish Majesty Escaped, But Several of His Suite Were Killed —Several Arrests Made.

Constantinople, July 22.—An ineffective attempt on the life of the Sultan was made yesterday. As the Sultan was proceeding to the midday prayers, a bomb was thrown at His Majesty, but he escaped unhurt.

Several Arrests Made.

London, July 22.—The Turkish embassy has issued a statement confirming the report that it is unquestionably that, during the assassin there yesterday, a bomb was exploded among the Sultan in the courtyard of the mosque, but His Majesty escaped unhurt. Several servants of his suite were killed or injured. Several arrests have been made.

Suppressing the News.

London, July 22.—The Turkish censorship is evidently suppressing the news regarding the attempt on the life of the Sultan, for no further press despatches from Constantinople have reached London.

Perpetrator is Dead.

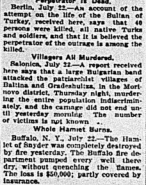

Berlin, July 22.—An account of the attempt on the life of the Sultan of Turkey, received here says that 48 persons were killed, all native Turks and soldiers, and that it is believed the perpetrator of the outrage is among the dead.

Villagers All Murdered.

Salonica, July 22.—A report received here says that a large Bulgarian band attacked the patriarchist villages of Daltina and Gradeshnitza, in the Mortnevo district, Thursday night, murdering the entire population indiscriminately, and the carnage did not end until yesterday morning. The number of victims is not known.

Whole Hamlet Burns.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 22.—The Hamlet of Bethel was completely destroyed by fire yesterday. The Buffalo fire department pumped every well there dry, without quenching the flames. The loss is $50,000, partly covered by insurance.

King's Prize Final.

To-day sees the third and last stage of the King's Prize competition, when ten shots will be fired at each of the 500, 900 and 1,000 yards ranges. The competition now numbers one hundred, their places are decided by their aggregate scores, the first, second and third stages.

Three Canadians still remain—Staff-Sergt. C. R. Crowe, 35th Regiment, Simcoe, 79 p.; No. 3, Sergt. Hall, 48th regiment, P. W. F., Montreal, and Sergt. J. Elliott, 13th Regiment of Artillery, Victoria. Their respective aggregates at the end of yesterday's shoot are 155, 156 and 151—the highest aggregate yet secured being 193.

Won the "Gregory."

Staff-Sergt. Crowe of the 48th Highlanders has won the "Gregory," with a splendid score of 49 bull's-eyes and bulls at the 200 yards range. His twenty-one shots were: Inners, 2; magpies, 5; Lee-Enfield rifle, a Gregory bloncur field glass in aluminum, a Gregory telescope, and a solid leather shooting waterproof coat, valued at £21. Sergt. Hall's was 45, winning £12; Sergt. W. Kelly was 43rd, winning £2; Lt. Bush, 39th, £3; Staff-Sergt. Bayles, 37th, 14 aillings; Sergt. Moore, 44th, 14 aillings; Sergt. Russell, 44th, 14 aillings.

St. George's Vase.

There was some splendid shooting at the two ranges in the first stage of the St. George's Challenge Vase competition yesterday.

In the first stages of the St. George's Challenge Vase, Sergt. Kelly was 194th, winning £2; Sergt. Simpson, 184th, £2; Pte. Sergeant, 183rd, £2; Capt. Jones, 215th, £2.

The following enter the second stage of the St. George's Challenge Vase: Sergt. Kelly, Sergt. Connell, Murfee, Richardson and Wilson.

Other Events.

In the Brookwood, 400 yards, seven shots, Staff-Sergt. Crowe and Sergt. Simpson made possibles.

In the Wingham, 500 yards, four shots, Orderly-Sergt. Phillips, Toronto, made a possible.

In the Handicap, 900 yards, ten shots, Orderly-Sergt. Moore, Peterboro, scored 47; Kelly, 46.

In the Stickleturn, 1,000 yards, Moore scored 47.

OCTOBER DISSOLUTION

Events Are Compelling Premier Balfour to That End.

British Crisis Has Assumed a Serious Aspect — Surmised That the Premier's Audience of King Edward Friday Was to Acquaint His Majesty of His Decision—Cabinet For Half an Hour—Not a Snap.

London, July 22.—It is understood that Premier Balfour has decided to go to the country at the earliest possible moment. The announcement of this decision was to be made this week. The crisis has assumed a serious aspect more so by the circumstances now attending the defeat of the Government Thursday night on the vote for the support of the Irish Land Commission than the intrinsic importance of the vote itself. The vote was actually due to the absence of a number of the Unionists on the Government's own supporters, who, despite the strongest possible whip enforcing the necessity at their attendance on that particular night, allowed themselves to be lulled into a false confidence by the ruse of the Liberals and Nationalists in keeping their men in the background until the critical moment arrived.

Events Developing Rather.

That this was allowed to happen immediately after the Cabinet had called a meeting of his party to impress on all its supporters the need of their absolute loyalty seems to indicate that the Premier's carelessness of attempting to face another session of Parliament just as the holding of elections in August was over, and that the harvest for other reasons would be most inconvenient to the country, he decided to wait until the autumn before dissolving Parliament.

Premier Balfour's audience of King Edward Friday lasted only ten minutes and it is supposed that he intimated His Majesty of his decision to His Majesty.

The Liberal leaders held an informal conference yesterday afternoon. If the Government decides to continue in power Gregg's motion of censure on the fiscal policy will be promptly moved to test it will probably be abandoned. C. A. Vivier, Chamberlain's right hand man, says his party is prepared for the fight.

Sat For Half an Hour.

The Cabinet Council met last nearly half an hour yesterday and then adjourned until Monday in order that Government's decision regarding its future course of action in view of the defeat of the Ministry Thursday night on the Irish Land Commission Bill and the vote of the Irish Land Commission.

Immediately after the Council had assembled, Mr Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, moved for its adjournment, declaring that it would be impossible under the circumstances to proceed with business while the Government was considering its position.

Premier Balfour, however, declined to accede to the House request for the dealing with the differences of the Cabinet Council, and declared that the Free Church had been passed. This the House subsequently passed. The House rose.

Don't Think It's a Snap.

London, July 22.—(C. A. P.)—Particularly interesting at this time in connection against the Government was four, not five, that the Liberals refuse to regard it as a snap division, since the Government's whip issued a special request to the Government supporters that such a division was expected.

Mists and Inter-imperial Trade.

London, July 22.—C. A. Vivier, Liberal Minto had a hearty reception at the dinner in his honor given by the Liberal Union Club. He said he had spent the last year in Canada during a very eventful period in the his ory of the Empire. He might fairly say an unofficial feeling of those entitled to form an opinion was that the closer connection between the King's possessions beyond the seas would be found in some arrangement for the encouragement of inter-imperial trade. He could not understand the statesmens made in Great Britain had no offer in the direction of a preference had been made by Canada, and why Lord Minto in his question had been made a party question.

ENGINE BOILER EXPLODES.

G. T. R. Brakeman Killed Near Princeton—Fireman Badly Injured.

Woodstock, July 22.—Locomotive No. 710, engine 2nd 70, boiler 2nd 69, built '96 on the Grand Trunk, exploded at Princeton station at 1.30 this morning. Engineer Hutchison, brakeman, whose home is in Toronto, was instantly killed. Injured Duncan Martin, fireman, of Otterville.

David Strickland, engineer, was slightly scalded. Engine was in good repair, both ends of the boiler being practically together with small piece of iron work.

The explosion occurred while the train was running 45 miles an hour. No warning was received by the train crew. The cause was either lack of sufficient water in the boiler or some blown sheets on the boiler. An expert will investigate the wreck at Princeton this point. At rr the accident; the momentum of the train carried it 300 yards. A fire was averted and there was little damage to the car.

MODEL FARM SOLD.

Quebec Government Disposes of the Property at Compiegne.

Quebec, July 22.—The Quebec Government have disposed of their Model Farm at Compiegne for the sum of $12,500 to Mr. Dominique Thibodeau, a practical farmer of the same vicinity, who closed the deal through his lawyer.

This farm was acquired by the Provincial Government for the purpose of encouraging agriculture in the Province of Quebec, and as a sort of a hope for the sons of farmers or other young men anxious to learn practical farming. It originally cost $11,000 for the land alone, and was soon, after, stocked and suitable houses erected on the property but a Government Report stated that $4,000 in a and prime stock imported from England and Prince Edward Island.

The farm, however, did not bring the results expected. The running expenses of cost from five to seven thousand dollars per annum, and finally the Government, tiring of the increased expense, came to the conclusion to dispose of it.

WINNIPEG FAIR OPENS.

Rain Spoils Opening Somewhat—Premier Roblin's Remarks.

Winnipeg, July 22.—Winnipeg exhibition was formally opened yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock by Hon. R. P. Roblin, Premier of Manitoba, in the presence of a large number of distinguished guests.

In the build directors' luncheon of the fair the Premier outlined the immigration policy of the Government and expressed confidence in its financial success. It was by the refusa of the prosperity accruing from the illimitable fertile areas of the west.

Unfavorable weather in the early part of the week has operated to check mate the crowds, but the day was spoiled at least for outdoor sports.

There is a good line of exhibits, both in live stock and manufacturers' products.

May Take Cup Won In 1896.

Montreal, July 22.—The American challenger, Manchester of the Manchester Yacht Club, arrived here this afternoon defeated the Canadian defender Canada in the second race for the Seawanhaka Cup. The race was over a triangular course of five miles on Lake St. Louis, sailed three times. The race was a fine breeze blowing. The start was made at 3.24, and from the first the American boat outsailed the Canadian boat, making most of her gains in the windward leg. The Manchester won easily. The Manchester now has two wins to her credit and if the Americans win to-day's race they will win the cup.

THE KING'S PRIZE.

Does Not Come to Canada This Year—East Surrey Man Won It With a Score of 315.

Bisley, July 24.—The King's Prize at the annual meeting of the National Rifle Association was won Saturday by Armorer-Sergeant Comber, of the Second East Surrey Regiment, with a score of 315.

This is materially lower than last year's aggregate, as Pte. Perry of Canada carried off the trophy with a score of 321.

King Edward himself was present on the range to see the winner and the contestant for his gold medal, which he personally presented to the winner.

Canadians' Places.

In the King's Prize, Sergt. Richardson was 87th with 307, winning $30; Staff-Sergt. Wilson was 111th, winning $11; Pte. Merrice, 37th, $8.

The King visited the camp Saturday morning. After inspecting the Canadians and other Colonials, he shook hands with Commandant Hesselein and Adjutant Davidson.

"I take a great interest in the Canadians," he said, "and am glad to hear that they have done well."

In the Brownlow, with 30 shots at 600 yards, Capt. Stuart was first, winning £4 5s.

In the Loder Challenge Cup, Major Howard, the sportsman, of the Nova Scotia, in London, was first, winning in the open and £5 in the army only to the mounted branches of His Majesty's forces, and in seven shots at 600 yards.

In the Rickell-down match 14, Boult was first, winning £10; Sergt. Moore, 3rd, £4; Sergt. Boult, 4th, £3; Sergt. Richardson, 14th, £1; Sergt. Simpson, 19th, £1; Capt. Elliott, 24th, £1; Pte. Fiverts, 27th, £1.

In the Wingrove, Sergt. Phillips was 2nd, winning £14 10s; Sergt. Simpson, 6th, £4 10s; Sergt. Boult, 7th, £3; Sergt. Moore, Pte. Bruneau, 17th, £1; Sergt. Moore, 54th, £1; Capt. Mitchell, 58th, £1.

In the Handsworth competition the following Canadians were among the prize winners: Sergt. Russell, Ottawa, 1st, £1; Sergt. Mellroy, Toronto, 5th, £1; Lt. Boult, Victoria, 17th £1; Sergt. Sergt. Andrew Brown, Sergt. £1; Pte. Morrice, Montreal, 37th, £1; Sergt. Pugh, Quebec, 41st, £1; Capt. Stuart, Vancouver, 54th, £1; Pte. Wilson, Ottawa, 58th, £1; Pte. Busby, Toronto, 97th £1.

Among the winners in the "Henry" competition were: Capt. Mitchell, York, Ranges, 11th, £2; Sergt. Sergt. Crowe, Guelph, 4th, £2; Pte. Morrice, 16th, £1; Capt. Jean, P. E. I., 17th, £1.

The following were successful in the "Association" competition, 900 to 1,000 yards. By the regulations each lady member may nominate a gentleman member of the National Rifle Association in case of her, which does not interfere with the gentleman's right to shoot for himself. A gentleman may represent more than one lady. Sergt. Crowe, 5th, £2; Staff-Sergt. Crowe, 4th, £2; Sergt. Simpson, Toronto, 14th, £2, and 27th, £2; Capt. Mitchell, 19th, £2, and 34th, £2; Sergt. Crowe, 41st, £2; Sergt. Russell, Ottawa, 44th, £2; Sergt. Crowe, 46th, £2; Orderly-Sergt. Phillips, Toronto, 47th, £2; Staff-Sergt. Bayles, Toronto, 54th, £2; Pte. Eastcott, Ottawa, 54th, £2; Sergt. Crowe, 67th, £2; Cal-Sergt. Moore, 74th, £2, and Sergt. Pugh, 81st, £2.

Gleanmen Arrested.

Liaoyang, July 24.—The Japanese armies at present occupy the position of an immense sickle, with the handle reaching from a few miles south of Liaoyang and passing through Chentachi, the blade circling northward toward Kirin, with the tip on the Ocean coast south of Possiet Bay.

It is estimated that Gen. Nogi has 10 battalions, Gen. Oku 40, Gen. Nodzu 24, Gen. Kuroki 160, Gen. Kawamura, 90, and Gen. Hasegawa 128, the battalions averaging a thousand men, which makes the numerical strength of the Japanese 550,000 bayonets, with 2,000 field and mountain guns and about 100 siege guns.

The Japanese extreme left is guarded by Gen. Tamura's cavalry division.

The Chinese in the Japanese service are in the rear, covered by cavalry under the command of Gen. Oshara.

DEAD AND MUST RESIGN

Balfour's Government as Described by John Redmond.

"He Threatened to Reduce Our Numbers, Now We Have Destroyed His Government — What Retort More Crushing?" Ask the Irish Parliamentary Leader—Result of a Series of Parliamentary Coups.

London, July 24.—John Redmond, M.P., chairman of the Irish Parliamentary party, is quoted as saying:

"It seems utterly impossible to me that Balfour can do other than resign in view of all the circumstances of his defeat. Perhaps for the convenience of both parties, either of which desires a dissolution in August or September, an arrangement may be arrived at to defer actual resignation until October; but any way you look at it Balfour's Government is dead.

"The corpse may be kept above ground for a time, but decomposition has already set in. It has met the fate of every British Government in any measure in being defeated on the Irish question.

"But consider the dramatic series of events. A few days ago Balfour introduced his redistribution scheme, the sole object of which was to satisfy the Australian fetish by his followers by reducing the Irish representation in the House of Commons by 22 members.

"He intended to make it through with the coup de'tat declaration. Then he would have introduced his redistribution bill at the next session and kept his Government alive until the autumn of 1906, when, at the critical point of order I got a decision from the Speaker that Balfour is without the simple time for debating the redistribution proposals.

"This was a staggering blow and Balfour's followers were filled with following this up the Irish party reduced the Government majority on a question directly affecting the Minister of Education to such a low that Balfour was panic-stricken. He summoned a Cabinet meeting, at which members and appealed to them to support him in the House, and, if he could not dissolve. They pledged themselves, but within the lobby they were defeated them outright.

"The Irish party naturally feels intensely gratified over this result. The other day Balfour proposed to his supporters to reduce our representation by 22. We have destroyed his Government. What more crushing retort could we have delivered?"

W. WIDDIFIELD DROWNS.

Young Surveyor on Halfway River Creek Is Carried Down Swim.

TELEPHONE TALKS.

TO TELEPHONE USERS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA solicits the favor of a series of five minutes Telephone Talks with its Patrons and the General Public. We shall make these brief, because we recognize that time is valuable, and that it would not be fair or reasonable to ask you to give up, even for the important matter we desire to present, more than five minutes from a busy day.

The subject we have to discuss is one of general interest to all classes; it is of great importance both to you and to us, and we believe that if you follow this series your time will be advantageously spent.

We take this means of discussing these matters, because of the confidence we have in the justice of our position and that it will surely command the approval of fair minded Patrons.

We believe it will be generally conceded that never before in the history of Canada, has the organization, management and transactions of any Company been subjected to such a searching investigation as has the Bell Telephone Company in the proceedings of the Select Committee on Telephone Systems. The Executive of this Company promptly and respectfully complied with the commands of this Committee in the frankest possible manner, withholding nothing, concealing nothing, avoiding nothing. The Company, in its ready acquiescence in all demands, has, in this respect, at least, gained the commendation of the Committee.

We believe that we are justified in claiming that the Company has come through the ordeal of this investigation creditably. Although the records of the Company have been searched from its organization twenty-four years ago, not a single fact has been adduced which reflects discreditably on the integrity or the justice of the management. On the contrary, many statements which have been persistently made by the Company's rivals and detractors have been refuted in the clearest possible manner under oath and should now be effectually set at rest. The purpose in the issue of this series to refer to some of the more important of these points, as we believe that our Patrons and the Public wish to know the facts as they have been brought out by this Committee.

We shall publish these "talks" regularly on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays in this space until the series is completed.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Enjoy yourselves, everybody.

The Corby park is a gem. A beauty spot, for sure.

The old boys and girls seem to be in very happy lot of people.

How many of them will respond to that invitation. "Come back and stay with us?"

One of the Odd Boys, a charming young man of some sixty or seventy summers, a prosperous business man from a busy New York State city, is telling of a slice of cold shoulder given to him yesterday afternoon, but he plunked up courage to ring and was rewarded by having the door opened exactly six inches. His friend, the lady of the house, enquiry, that the lady at the door was the lady of whom he was in search. But, alas! in the mean time the fatal mistake of saying he had not been here for fifty years. Did he suppose that a wise old gentleman her that far back? She had never heard of such a person, to say nothing of having anything to do with such a boy at school; she didn't even recollect the old blacksmith shop around the corner. She is sorry to the five-minute conversation by taking in a rather final tone: "Will you come in?" The wise old gentleman declined with thanks and bowed himself away, feeling rather ashamed, and deep in his kindly heart thankful that not many other people in Belleville were afflicted with such shoulder loss of memory as the lady he had attempted to interview.

OLD BOYS WELCOMED FROM MANY PULPITS.

Yesterday's Church Services Were Unique in Character and Hearty in Spirit — Pastor of Bridge Street Gives Inspiring Address on Welcome—Mortgage Burning at Holloway Street—Notes of Other Church Services.

Bridge Street.

The service at Bridge St. yesterday morning was one that was very impressive. It was over the writer's privilege to attend. The congregation, consisting of the Old Boys and Girls, together with regular members filling up their pews to the ladies and gentlemen, who had come to visit their old church home. The choir was in full strength and in fine form. On either side of the pulpit stood, "welcome" and "welcome." The pastor of Bridge St., Rev. J. F. Wilson, B.A., delivered a delightful and highly inspired address. In this opening prayer he thanked God for the occasion which had brought the sons and daughters of old Bridge St. together to worship once more. The east and the west had given them forth, and the north and the south had not held them back. So many Belleville households to which there was issued much genuine loved ones had returned. At the commencement of the service the choir rendered in particular caught his attention. "We Don't Forget You When You're Away," the text was very true. As he looked in their bright faces it brought to his mind a scene in Samaria.

"And there was great joy in that city."

The city spoken of was one in Samaria, but the words were apropos to Belleville at this time. There was great joy in the city over the return of loved ones. He was thankful that the prayers of many in his congregation had been answered, and they had lived to see their children come home. He had never seen a gathering like the gathering of to-day at more royal welcome given.

The preacher warmly praised the committee which had drafted the programme for the entertainment of the visitors. He had never seen a more painstaking or more efficient committee. He could help wishing that he had, in his church, such workers as those men. Love of home, he said, he ever said, was characteristic of the Anglo-Saxon race. The sweetest words in the English language were, "Home, Home, Sweet Home." Belleville's boys and girls, wherever they were, never forgot Belleville. And why should they? There was no more beautiful city anywhere, and no city which did more to help young people and try to make them good men and women. Strangers who came to Belleville always left it with loving thoughts. Speaking of Bridge St. Church, the preacher said he was glad to be able to tell his hearers that it was still an evangelical one, and had more than held its own in the years since they had left it. Methodism, he had gained, and was still gaining in this city. The Sunday School, too, was still going on in the same old way and with the same superintendent. No boy or girl, the preacher said, had ever left Bridge St. Sunday School without taking with them the best of training and the knowledge that they were living in the greatest country under the sun. The great apostle Paul, he once said the words, "When I was a little child I spake as a little child, I went with to forget the days when he was a little child. Such days were days to be remembered. Such days and gatherings as this, the preacher said, were days to be remembered, and cost the best in human nature. He then spoke of the changes that had come after his recent great visitory, when the Jubilee was held and the return of their associates were then rejoicing with their friends. Many years so, and it might be that the departed would be the mighty dead of Bridge St. Church would be remembered by those who had been present at the jubilee, and who had thought! The preacher closed his address with a touching appeal to Bridge St. He prayed God's blessing might rest upon it, and that it might be a pleasant visit was over, they might have a visit like it again in five years, and then, in the words of the old hymn, said the preacher, "May God be with you till we meet again." The choir rendered the Anthem "Lead Kindly Light," and was very fine. The choir sang "He Shall Feed His Flock" in splendid style. The Boys' choir, assisted by Miss Lucas, sang, "Pleasant Are Thy Courts Above," and Master Murphy sang "Home, Sweet Home" as a solo, with a tenderness and sweetness of good description. Many an eye grew moist as the words of "Home, Sweet Home" and the sweet melody ringing in our ears as we sit and "Sing to Dismiss with the Benediction."

The evening service the preacher was Rev. David Willoughby, a former Belleville boy, now pastor of the largest Congregational church in South Africa, and located in Johannesburg.

A joyful service was held in the Sunday School in the afternoon. The rooms were prettily decorated and the many visitors heartily welcomed. Brief addresses were given by former members of the school, among them Judge Dean, of Lindsay. The choir was made beautifully rendered musical numbers. The Superintendent, Wilbur Gilbert, Dobson, was in his element, and the occasion was a happy one. Rev. Dr. Dobson closed by the prayer.

St. Andrew's.

After a few weeks' absence, the Pastor, Rev. Dr. Ross, occupied the pulpit of St. Andrew's Church at both services, which were appropriate to the present festive occasion. In the morning his text was the 5th verse of the 137th Psalm:

"If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her cunning."

The preacher extended a hearty welcome to the visitors who were worshippers with them, and also during the service paid a tender tribute to the memory of Mr. Wm. Bell, K.C., and Mr. Alexander Gilray, both of whom were members of the congregation, who had departed this life during the past week. During the service the choir rendered an anthem entitled "The Lord is King," Mr. Dwyer taking the solo part.

John Street.

The Pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm, officiated at both services, preaching to good congregations. In the morning his subject was "A Wanderer's Welcome," and the text was from Genesis 28th, 1st chapter and 19th verse:

"And as they went, until they came to Bethlehem. And it came to pass when they were come to Bethlehem that all the city was moved about them, and they said, Is this Naomi?"

In his opening remarks the Rev. gentleman referred to the text was appropriate to this occasion. The question was asked, on account of the changes that had occurred since Naomi Change Ebers were in places and individuals, and which the latter he hoped it was for the best. We should learn understand, wherever our lot was cast. He hoped that God's blessing would be with those who were now revisiting their former home for a short time. He welcomed the sons D. A. Cameron sang, with fine effect, a solo entitled "Trust in God."

Tabernacle.

At the morning service, in addition to the usual congregation, many who had previously worshipped in the church were present. The Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, officiated and presented an appropriate sermon. His text was Jer. Christ-times, 31, chapter and part of the 12th verse:

"Thou shalt suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." [illegible] La La La."

The Rev. gentleman referred to the home-coming of relatives and friends, and hoped their visit would be both pleasant and profitable. During the service Mr. Ed. Meek sang a solo entitled, "Hold Thou My Hand," and Mrs. Clarke a solo entitled, "In Thee, O Lord." Whilst the offertory was being taken the organist, Miss Lavoie, played "Home, Sweet Home."

Christ Church.

Rev. Canon Sowerby, of Kingston, was the preacher of the day at the above church yesterday, preaching to the morning from Galatians 6, 9:

"Be not weary in well-doing."

In the course of his sermon the reverend gentleman referred to the timely remarks in keeping with the occasion. He was pleased to see during the home-coming of so many Belleville boys and girls who would prove both pleasant and profitable. At the evening service the choir sang Arthur Doyle's magnificat and nunc Dimittis, and Mrs. Parker sang a solo, "King of Love," by Gounod.

Emmanuel R.E. Church.

Several former members of the above church were present at the services yesterday, and the hymns were all appropriate to the occasion. Rev. Dr. Bender, Rev. Mr. Hebly, took for the subject of his sermon, "A Home Coming." The text being Luke 15, 19 — And it came to pass, when they were come to Bethlehem, that all the city was moved about them."

Bethlehem of old was stirred because of the return of one of her former citizens, even as Belleville was stirred. The other day, when the citizens had gladdened our hearts, by the return of the boys and girls, we will hope for them their coming again.

Come in the evening or come in the morning.

Come when you're locked for or come when you're not.

Good sheer and a welcome you'll find on the mat.

And the oftener you come here the more welcome you'll be.

During the offertory the choir sang an anthem, "Mere Love is Heaven," and at the close of the offertory, the organist, Mrs. Ford, played "Home, Sweet Home."

St. Thomas'.

The Rector, Rev. Rural Dean Deacon, officiated at both services, which were largely attended. In the morning his discourse was in reference to alms and was a part of worship and praise. The Rev. gentleman made a special appeal on behalf of the hospital, a special collection for which was taken in the afternoon. His text was from Acts, 10th chapter and 4th verse:

"And when He looked on him he was afraid and said, what is it, Lord? and he said unto him, Thy prayers and thy alms are come up for a memorial before God."

The service was fully choral, and was both hearty and inspiring.

Holloway Street.

The services in the above church yesterday were very bright and hearty, the preachers being two former pastors, namely, Rev. Messrs. Best and Wallace. Former in the morning and the latter at night. A large number of visitors were present. Bold in the Sunday school in the afternoon, when addresses were given by Messrs. Best and Bennett, both pastors, namely, Messrs. Best, Wallace, Watch, Steal and Leitch. The church was just about crowded at the night service, and last night presented the appearance of a reunion. The pulpit and organ were decorated with flags in honor of the many visitors present. The choir sang, with fine effect, an anthem, "O, Be Joyful in the Lord," with duet by the Misses McMurray. Mr. Frank Kimmerly, of St. Catharines, a Belleville old boy, sang "Calvary," in an acceptable manner, and four young ladies, Mrs. R. Mc-Murray, Miss Kimmerly, Leonard and K. McMurray, sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," very sweetly.

Rev. Mr. Welch spoke first of the pleasure it was to see so many of the boys and girls who had lived in the city and had left it, and then of the changes Belleville could almost be expressed as the "new Jerusalem." He referred to the verse "If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, etc." Belleville had a record of citizens of note, who had been raised within her borders. They were not known for all night, but for their strenuous and successful efforts in the cause of righteousness, and the congregation of Holloway Street could look with pride from their pulpit and the many names that had glorified Belleville in the church. In the early days of Holloway St. the building of the Holloway St. Church was a mistake, but it was one of the mistakes. Holloway St. Church had proved a blessing to all connected with it. Wherever the shadow of Holloway St. fell, there was found there at a blessing for everyone who will take it. The Rev. gentleman was nearer to the people of Holloway St. than he has been for years, and his sermon appeal all present to accept Him. They had just heard of many of the boys and girls who had grown up and left Belleville and made good. Mr. J. W. Defoe, the church treasurer, gave a sketch of the finances of the church, showing that the debt of $1,400 started with a mortgage debt, of $1,400, which they had up to the date of its liquidation, paid off $1,000, and no less a sum than $2,400, the indebtedness was now discharged in full, and Mr. Defoe handed over the discharged mortgage papers to the church steward, Mr. F. F. Chapman, to be burned. Mr. Cassiff made a few grateful remarks, congratulating the church members on their financial success. He knew that some members of the congregation had deprived themselves of the necessaries of life in order to give to the mortgage fund. Rev. Mr. Leitch, Messrs. Bailey and Magrath made a few congratulatory remarks, after which Rev. Mr. Best, the pastor, declared from from debt, and the meeting was brought to a close by the congregation singing the Doxology. A meeting will be held when those who were contributing their former home for a short time will be present. Rev. D. A. Cameron sang, with fine effect, a solo entitled "Trust in God."

Tabernacle.

At the morning service, in addition to the usual congregation, many who had previously worshipped in the church were present. The Pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, officiated and presented an appropriate sermon. His text was Jer. Christ-times, 31, chapter and part of the 12th verse:

"Thou shalt suffer all things, lest we should hinder the gospel of Christ." [illegible] La La La."

The Rev. gentleman referred to the home-coming of relatives and friends, and hoped their visit would be both pleasant and profitable. During the service Mr. Ed. Meek sang a solo entitled, "Hold Thou My Hand," and Mrs. Clarke a solo entitled, "In Thee, O Lord." Whilst the offertory was being taken the organist, Miss Lavoie, played "Home, Sweet Home."

Baptist.

Rev. Y. H. Cowsert, of Brantford, a former pastor, occupied at both services yesterday and preached interesting sermons. In the morning his text was from Hebrews, 13th chapter, verse 14:

"For we have not here an abiding city, but we seek after the city which is to come."

Mrs. Lee Hoag rendered, in splendid form, a solo entitled, "Consider the Lilies of the Field." Large congregations were present at both services.

PERSONAL ... AND ... SOCIAL.

Mr. Ras. Titus is among the visiting old boys.

Mr. Geo. A. German is home visiting his relatives.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. On every hand we are complimented on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect lay out of the book. Nothing has seemingly been left out—nothing that has been included could very well have been left out; "complete and perfect" best describe it. Already we are booking from old Bellevillian by other states. The words of unstinted praise. You should have such a copy for yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. Only a postal fee—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great Reunion and so we have planned. It is a fountain pen—that daily companion—and is appropriately named "The City of Belleville." It is a regular $2.50 pen, fully guaranteed. We only have a gross—144 customers will secure a bargain. They will not be so late until Saturday, and then for three days only—Friday, Saturday and Monday. We place them on sale at half-price—$1.00 per for $2.50.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Matrons, maids and the men who love women, never consider that will do a woman the most good, health, the most charm to the male mind. Many medicines may help a woman, but they hurt her.

They do not cure, because they do not touch and strengthen the motive of the ills of women.

Of course, there is a remedy compounded for them. Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are such a medicine.

They are a scientific compound prepared by a specialist for the special needs of women. The other is the "stick" insect, which an exact duplicate of a small piece of dried twig some seven or eight inches long.

A Lake Mystery.

One of the great unsolved mysteries of the Hungarian Lake Balaton, is the thousands and thousands of dead smelts which appear annually floating on the surface of the lakes and lining the shores.

Kept on Sunday.

The authorities of an English town offered to give a thief his freedom if he would pay fifty pounds in all accounts and pay the costs in his case. The thief ran the distance in the stipulated time, but attained such momentum that he did so stop to pay the costs.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He should spend nine dollars in living and save for every dollar saved. That being the case, it follows that he must earn ten times the necessary expenses. Very often a few cents prompt advertised, Dr. Hugo's cure for his garden, will save several dollars of his earnings. The thing-ing-ing Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy costs only 25 cents, and a bo (he of it is the boss often cures a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

The Tooth Stainer.

The trade of tooth stainer, followed in eastern cities, is as old a calling as any. The natives prefer black teeth to the white kind, and the tooth stainer, with a little box of brushes and coloring matter, calls on his customers and stains their teeth. The process is not unlike that of blacking a boot, for the pigment is harmless to the teeth. The pigment is harmless.

Dutch toast is a simple dish for using up scraps of bread. Scramble the bread and place in a frying pan with a slice of butter or dripping. Add salt, pepper and sage if liked. It should be quite moist. Add a small quantity of boiling water, cover closely so the steam will soften the bread, stir several times and serve hot.

The White Kings.

Solomon was called by the Jews of his time the "white king" from the color of the ivory of his throne. The allusion made in the New Testament to the lily of the field, a white flower, in connection with Solomon is thus made clearer.

Feast of Reconciliation.

The Feast of Reconciliation was a feast of the Jews established by Moses, and Mary, to be held Jan. 25, 1555, to celebrate the return of the Church of England to the see of Rome.

The Battle of Belshes.

The battle of Belshes is famous in Irish history as the last of the Bruce wars. Two chieftains, O'Neill and O'Donnell, were at the time fighting continuously into a neighboring territory and were returning with their plunder when they met the English army. After a long and feeble resistance ran away, leaving their booty in the hands of the English.

Time would always be in May,
If I only had the time to say
In May
Ev'ryone knows one's boys awake
With new emotions, could forsake
Each day for the day that is
Ah! May.

If I could only have my way
Man's boys could always play
Ah! May.
Ah! swirl of the restless stream,
Ah! sunlight and gleam
Over nooks where flowers beam,
Ah! dreams that are not dream
Ah! day,
If I could only have my way

AN ATTRACTIVE SETTLE.

New You May Make One From an Old Bedstead.

An attractive and serviceable settle, one that may be placed in the hall of the house, on the lawn or on a deep porch, can be made from a discarded wooden bedstead. The illustration is self-explanation. On the piano it is especially effective as a fine old fashioned piece of furniture one is easy, and any old bedstead will do for the foundation.

The headboard and posts make the back to the settle. The foot goes minus the board, completes the foundation. Then one need to find a cushion which rests the seat. The width of the seat is made to fit the cushion, or fifteen inches. The sides of the bedstead are fitted for the arms to the settle, although it is not necessary to have them. The settles made from grandmothers' bed will not need staining or painting. Those of later date need a dressing to be attractive.

A SETTLE FROM A RESTAURANT.

The Importance of Manners.

Gentlemen should be courteous of old and young, rich and poor, alike. At least it must be considered a mark of true gentility, when a man is courteous to the boot and shoe blacks. Frank, brusque ways, often lack this quality, says the Detroit Free Press. But a courteous demeanor to these unfortunate gifts, charm and tact. Indeed, a large element in the charm which makes for social success is manner. In greeting a stranger, for example, words do not by any means take place if the tone and manner be only cold and repellant, while the most brilliant remarks may make an unfavorable impression if uttered in a careless, indifferent way. "In conversation the how is the more important than the what," some one has said. This certainly the genial social favorite is one who is always ready to show interest, she really feels and is unselfish enough to draw out the best there is in others by an inviting and sympathetic manner.

The Training of a Mother.

No experience better qualifies a man to be a good father of boys than to have been himself a boy. To a considerable extent the same thing may be said of girls—that good girls usually make good mothers and that colleges that turn out good women do well. But a good mother is far more of a specialist than an average good father. She must be a judge of food and diet and clothes and must watch and regulate all the details of child-like life. Mothering is skilled labor; fathering isn't. If the father is skilled worker he experiences the things that he does for a living and for the support of his family. They are his daily routine or preliminary training. But the mother has a thousand and one things unknown to the children, and if it is lacking the children suffer.—Harper's Weekly.

What Pleases a Man.

Generally speaking, a man likes it be told he is handsome, whether he b or not. He likes to be told he has small feet. This is a tip for wives. There is more virtue in a pair of tight boots than many a man will admit. An evening than in all the Tea Commandments. Generally speaking, a man likes to be asked for advice. You don't need to take it. Most men have advice to fly at a penny and they are always willing to bestow it on women gratis. It pleases a man for a woman to depend on him. Now is the reason why many foolish girls don't get two hundred guineas a week strong minded women remain old maids.—Women's Life.

The Highest Bridge.

The bridge across the Zambesi at Victoria falls is 650 feet long, 50 feet wide and 420 above the level of the watermark, which is higher than any other bridge in the world.

Indies.

Sometimes preparations of iodine are ordered to be brushed over the skin and may leave an objectionable stain. One quite harmless way is which this can be lightened is to apply vaseline to part with milk. It should be done several times in the course of the day.

Ancient Bracelets.

Among the Greeks, bracelets were worn only by women, but among the Romans they were rewarded as a military decoration, and in monumental inscriptions the number of bracelets conferred on the subject is often stated. They were of thin plates of bronze or silver. Sometimes gold was used, and wound were used. Some bracelets weighing twenty ounces have been found.

A Bermuda Fisherman's Daughter

By Kate Upson Clark, in Leslie's Weekly.

In common with many of his fellow islanders, Thomas Gilbert hoped himself into the sea in his younger days, but stiffening with rheumatism. He had been famous for his fishing, and still assisted in the care of the owner's single sail boat, the property of the landlord. Among the boats which drew up at the Hamilton wharf one night after visits to Boston and New York, with passports, useful breasts, sextet, hatchet, tobacco, and the like, all of them highly colored capitalists, none had used to the sea more than a summer yacht, and his boat was not so well fitted, and the big sail built to his house in order to breed him. But Gilbert, with a lot of laziness, had preferred a place in a store to fishing with his father, before the store was so yet for him possible to be his. The old man's death had gradually fell the old man's disabilities, but Brenda looked upon Martin Mears with no more than the common eye.

Mrs. Gilbert had been taken from some charitable institution in London and brought to Bermuda in her childhood. The first time Brenda Gilbert took care of the rector's horse and his gardener, a young man of his own age, shy, surly, but they had been so happy in the rectory service that they had married and lived all they were past thirty.

There was a spirit of gentility about the small cottage of the Gilberts. It was outward of the Bermuda of the rectory. Brenda Gilbert's face had been ruined by the rector's wife and others, taught her. Her father's name was therefore better bred than most of the girls with whom she associated. More than that, there was not so beautiful a girl in all Bermuda as she. Some people thought that was as much in Bermuda as in Africa. Among the quaint and picturesque folk the delicate and yet black locks of her mates bet in warm tones and brilliant blue eyes and dazzling complexion made her seem like a veritable seraph.

Martin Mears was a gilet, a good enough fellow, and, for a young Bermudian, not bad looking, except that he was perishing for love of her and that made him seem quite handsome, but he lacked the refinement to which she was accustomed. He was dark, with thick hair and red faced, and, in her soul, in spite of the many considerations which her rank and mother urged upon her in his favor. Brenda disliked him.

It is computed that there are only about twenty square miles of territory in the Bermudas that is not strictly, therefore, that there are some men who marry for love. Brenda is of these infants. The others, though nearly twice as many, count Rifle in Bermudian. Thomas Gilbert's beautiful daughter was considered the handsomest girl throughout the islands. Her mother would not allow her to go with the soldiers, and each, with the usual jealousy, and takes on a pettiness of detail commensurate with its geographical area, forbade the young men of the local society to associate on terms of equality with a fisherman's daughter. Yet there was one of them who fell in love with her and he cared nothing for the nasty tongues nor for the comments of his proud mother and relatives.

To do John Masters justice he loved the girl for the lack of vanity and her goodness and gentleness as much as her beauty. Mrs. Gilbert knew that if he had taken Brenda to some of the picnics and that he had walked home with her from church, but she knew, too, that he was poor. To be sure, he was the second son in a good family. His mother was an English officer's widow and had married Governor's daughter and lived in a pleasant mansion in Warwick. But their income was small for the expenses which they were obliged to meet and the young people could hope to marry for years to come, while here was Martin Mears, ready to wed the girl at once and get her and the rest of them beyond the reach of want. It was true that John Masters was a gentleman, but Mrs. Gilbert realized that the distaste which she knew the Masters family would feel for the match would be as nothing to that of Martin Mears!

One day the mother came upon her daughter crying among the lemon trees in the garden. "What is the use," she said, sitting down beside the girl and taking her head in her motherly lap, "what is the use of crying?" sobbed the heartbroken beauty.

"Why—Martin Mears—"

"No, John Masters."

"Or, that's neither," she said. "It is of no account to you. I suppose he is going or to seek his fortune. He had better, for they say hasn't got a cent. Her money all goes to take care of themselves' boys and to help out his big family. He's good looking and all that, but you shouldn't care about him. Brenda, and I've said so before. They wouldn't like it, and I could see that the rector's wife thought it wasn't suitable. Remember that you are in the station in which Providence has been pleased to place you. Why can't you imagine Peter and Mary's mother and take Martin?"

"Mother," said Brenda resolutely, "you might as well know that I never shall marry anybody but John Masters. We are engaged, and glad as soon as he gets settled in New York he shall be married. I don't know what I want me to go out to service, but Dig-fruitcake and german kraut! It wouldn't do some of you people a bit of harm if you were to take a dose yourselves. That sort of life, if it don't do anything else, is bound to be very serious on you. You fellows make, I suppose, a specialty of dyspepsia. "As though there wasn't anything else to do but feed outlibred rat and new figures!"

"Well, what do you propose to do?" inquired Bill Ridgeway in three years' time now—back to Magdalena bay?"

"No."

"Where, then?"

Wilbur smote the table with his fist. "China!" he cried. "I've got a crack schooner lying in San Francisco bay, and I've got $100,000 worth of loot aboard of her. I've been down there once before, and now I'll try Siberia—next. It may be very cold there, but the greased trousers, the satin scarfs and fancy waistcoats—"

"You're a different sort than when you went away, Ross," said Jerry.

"Right you are," answered Wilbur. "But I will venture a prophecy," continued the lying beauty of a man. "Soon, you are a born and bred city man. You're in the blood of you and the bones of you. I'll give you three years for this new notion of yours to wear it out; one thing I think just now you're going to spend the rest of your life as an amateur farmer—in three years at the outside you'll be using your 'best,' as you call it, for the interment of it, to pay your taxes and your labor; your new real and your old dues, and you'll be at the fingerprint end of a respectable member of the community."

"Did you ever kill a man, Jerry?" asked Wilbur. "Well, you will after one some day—kill him in a fair give and take fight, and you'll be sick at your stomach and what fattened it has on you, and then come back and talk to me."

It was a bright, blinding, midsummer noon.

"We'll ring for a boy," said Ridgeway, "and get you a room. I can fix you out with clothes enough in the morning."

Wilbur started in some surprise and then smiled.

"Why, I've got the schooner to look after. I can't have a bedroom—not overnight."

"Why, don't mean to say you've going on board at this time in the morning?"

"Of course."

"Why—but—but you'll catch your death of cold!"

Wilbur stared at Ridgeway, then nodded helplessly and, scratching his head, said, half shyly:

"No. What's the use? I can't make you understand. Second night. I'll see you in the morning."

"We'll all come out and visit you on your yacht," Ridgeway called after him, but Wilbur did not hear.

In answer to Wilbur's whistle Jim came in with the dory and took him off to the schooner. Morsn met him on the quarter deck.

"I took the skiff myself tonight and left you the dory," he said.

"All right," said Wilbur.

"They've come back to the water—lot of 'em. Ross and Bill and Wilbur." But Wilbur had slipped out of here in the morning and had back to the place where he'd left."

"And that's a good bearing, mate."

"Let 'er up here on the quarter deck," ordered Wilbur. "I've something to propose to you."

Morsn, with an arm across his shoulder, and two heads well apart, for an hour Wilbur talked to her earnestly about his new idea of fishmongering, and as he told her of the war he warmed to the affair, and his face glowing, his eyes sparkling, his voice deepening, he broke off.

"But no," he exclaimed. "You don't understand, Morsn. How can you? You've been born. It's an affair of years."

"Main, 'tater" cried Morsn, her hands upon his shoulders. "I'm not who don't understand—don't understand me. I've been with you for two! Your people are mine now. I'm happy only by your happiness. You were right—the best happiness is the happiness of others. And your sorrows belong to me, too, as I belong to you, dear. Your enemies are mine, your quarrels are mine, your quarrels. She drew his head quickly toward her and kissed him.

In the morning the two had made up their minds to a certain vague course of action. To the away—anywhere was their one aim. Morsn was by nature a creature of the open air, and the love of adventure and the desire for action had suddenly leaped to life in Wilbur's blood and was not to be resisted. They could get up to San Francisco, dispose of their cargo, outfit the Bertha Millner as a silhouette and go to sea—anywhere. Meanwhile the advisability of sounding the Horn in so small a ship as the Bertha Millner, but Morsn and settled that at sea.

"I've got to know her pretty well—she told Wilbur. "She's sound as a nut. Only let's get away from this place."

But by 10 o'clock on the morning following the arrival of Chinatown Jim and Morsn were preparing to get under way. Hoang touched Wilbur's arm.

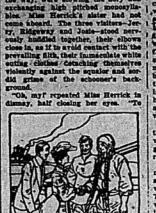

"One piece smoke boat. Him white kid shoes, her collar but fitted at a barely perceptible angle. The men were in yachting suits. "Can we come aboard?" the latter called, hailing the dory.

"Oh, Jo" said Miss Herrick blankly, stopping short.

The decks, masts and rails were thoroughly cleaned with a black coat of dirt and grease; the sails were gray with grime; a strange, sickly, yellow scum floated on the water, and the odors of Chinese punk and drying fish prevailed all the air. Miss Herrick looked, and Jim, here to the bail, their eyes hooped somewhat. Then they met at the top, were slowing the dory and looked at each other in consternation.

"Oh, Jo" Miss Herrick's sister had not come aboard. The three visitors—Jerry, Ridgeway and Wilbur—were closely huddled together, their shoulders close in, as if to avoid contact with the prevailing filth, their handkerchiefs white against the squalor and nor-did grime of the schooner's bedchamber.

"Oh, my" repeated Miss Herrick in dismay, half closing her eyes. "To think of what you must have been through! I thought you had a nice sort of a yacht. I had no idea it would be like this." Jim spoke that Morsn came suddenly upon the group from behind the forward and passed in front of them, her head bent, her hands in her belt.

"I'm very pleased to meet Miss Sterrick, sure."

She still wore men's clothes and was booted to the knee. The heavy blue woolen shirt was open at the throat, and the sleeves rolled halfway up her large white arms; her cap was set on the over her hatless Scandinavian dick. She was fatless as ever, and her heavy, fragrant odors rode the air half roll over her shoulders and breast to her below the waist.

Miss Herrick started sharply, and Morsn turned an inquiring glance on Wilbur. Wilbur took his resolution in both hands.

"Miss Herrick," he said, "this is Morsn—Morsn Sterrsonsen."

Morsn bowed, stepped forward, holding out her hand. Josie, all bewildered, but per her right fingers into the calloused palm, looking up nervously into Morsn's face.

"I'm very glad," she said, feebly, almost breathlessly. "I—I'm sure I'm very glad to meet you, Miss—Miss—"

It was long before the picture left Wilbur's imagination. Josie Herrick's pectin, gowned in white, crisp from her maid's grooming; and Morsn, erect and splendid, a hundred vikings, towering above her, booted and belted, the chocolate-colored head in her own huge fist.

CHAPTER XIII.

SAN FRANCISCO once more! Wilbur had been beating up the bay since daybreak, and now, as he neared the harbor, he was in the midst of a fleet of vessels, all standing in the same direction as himself, all heading northerly winds, putting into head seas.

The warmth, the stillness, the placid, drowsing quiet of Magdalena bay, the shimmering, golden days spent in tropic heaven, the white, baked beach, the long, lazy noons, vanished with the rising into human complexions of white and chilly or emitting loud cry under the sunset, the enchanted scenery of the land of lotus-eaters, all were left behind, and riding more, were replaced by the hard, vigorous, deserving life of the trades, the roll of breakers to land-ward, the sharp, cutting salt of the sea, the innumerable multitudes of gray green seas sweeping silently past the schooner's sides, the long, rolling, heaving tide human symptoms of white and sinking beneath the combers, the sunset, the swift, sharp, cold air.

"Right you are," answered Wilbur. "But I will venture a prophecy," continued the lying beauty of a man. "Soon, you are a born and bred city man. You're in the blood of you and the bones of you. I'll give you three years for this new notion of yours to wear it out; one thing I think just now you're going to spend the rest of your life as an amateur farmer—in three years at the outside you'll be using your 'best,' as you call it, for the interment of it, to pay your taxes and your labor; your new real and your old dues, and you'll be at the fingerprint end of a respectable member of the community."

"Did you ever kill a man, Jerry?" asked Wilbur. "Well, you will after one some day—kill him in a fair give and take fight, and you'll be sick at your stomach and what fattened it has on you, and then come back and talk to me."

It was a bright, blinding, midsummer noon.

"We'll ring for a boy," said Ridgeway, "and get you a room. I can fix you out with clothes enough in the morning."

Wilbur stared in some surprise and then smiled.

"Why, I've got the schooner to look after. I can't have a bedroom—not overnight."

"Why, don't mean to say you've going on board at this time in the morning?"

"Of course."

"Why—but—but you'll catch your death of cold!"

Wilbur stared at Ridgeway, then nodded helplessly and, scratching his head, said, half shyly:

"No. What's the use? I can't make you understand. Second night. I'll see you in the morning."

"We'll all come out and visit you on your yacht," Ridgeway called after him, but Wilbur did not hear.

In answer to Wilbur's whistle Jim came in with the dory and took him off to the schooner. Morsn met him on the quarter deck.

"I took the skiff myself tonight and left you the dory," he said.

"All right," said Wilbur.

"They've come back to the water—lot of 'em. Ross and Bill and Wilbur." But Wilbur had slipped out of here in the morning and had back to the place where he'd left."

"And that's a good bearing, mate."

"Let 'er up here on the quarter deck," ordered Wilbur. "I've something to propose to you."

Morsn, with an arm across his shoulder, and two heads well apart, for an hour Wilbur talked to her earnestly about his new idea of fishmongering, and as he told her of the war he warmed to the affair, and his face glowing, his eyes sparkling, his voice deepening, he broke off.

"But no," he exclaimed. "You don't understand, Morsn. How can you? You've been born. It's an affair of years."

"Main, 'tater" cried Morsn, her hands upon his shoulders. "I'm not who don't understand—don't understand me. I've been with you for two! Your people are mine now. I'm happy only by your happiness. You were right—the best happiness is the happiness of others. And your sorrows belong to me, too, as I belong to you, dear. Your enemies are mine, your quarrels are mine, your quarrels." She drew his head quickly toward her and kissed him.

In the morning the two had made up their minds to a certain vague course of action. To the away—anywhere was their one aim. Morsn was by nature a creature of the open air, and the love of adventure and the desire for action had suddenly leaped to life in Wilbur's blood and was not to be resisted. They could get up to San Francisco, dispose of their cargo, outfit the Bertha Millner as a silhouette and go to sea—anywhere. Meanwhile the advisability of sounding the Horn in so small a ship as the Bertha Millner, but Morsn and settled that at sea.

"I've got to know her pretty well—she told Wilbur. "She's sound as a nut. Only let's get away from this place."

But by 10 o'clock on the morning following the arrival of Chinatown Jim and Morsn were preparing to get under way. Hoang touched Wilbur's white kid shoes, her collar but fitted at a barely perceptible angle. The men were in yachting suits. "Can we come aboard?" the latter called, hailing the dory.

"Oh, Jo" said Miss Herrick blankly, stopping short.

The decks, masts and rails were thoroughly cleaned with a black coat of dirt and grease; the sails were gray with grime; a strange, sickly, yellow scum floated on the water, and the odors of Chinese punk and drying fish prevailed all the air. Miss Herrick looked, and Jim, here to the bail, their eyes hooped somewhat. Then they met at the top, were slowing the dory and looked at each other in consternation.

"Oh, Jo" Miss Herrick's sister had not come aboard. The three visitors—Jerry, Ridgeway and Wilbur—were closely huddled together, their shoulders close in, as if to avoid contact with the prevailing filth, their handkerchiefs white against the squalor and nor-did grime of the schooner's bedchamber.

"Oh, my" repeated Miss Herrick in dismay, half closing her eyes. "To think of what you must have been through! I thought you had a nice sort of a yacht. I had no idea it would be like this." Jim spoke that Morsn came suddenly upon the group from behind the forward and passed in front of them, her head bent, her hands in her belt.

"I'm very pleased to meet Miss Sterrick, sure."

She still wore men's clothes and was booted to the knee. The heavy blue woolen shirt was open at the throat, and the sleeves rolled halfway up her large white arms; her cap was set on the over her hatless Scandinavian dick. She was fatless as ever, and her heavy, fragrant odors rode the air half roll over her shoulders and breast to her below the waist.

Miss Herrick started sharply, and Morsn turned an inquiring glance on Wilbur. Wilbur took his resolution in both hands.

"Miss Herrick," he said, "this is Morsn—Morsn Sterrsonsen."

Morsn bowed, stepped forward, holding out her hand. Josie, all bewildered, but per her right fingers into the calloused palm, looking up nervously into Morsn's face.

"I'm very glad," she said, feebly, almost breathlessly. "I—I'm sure I'm very glad to meet you, Miss—Miss—"

It was long before the picture left Wilbur's imagination. Josie Herrick's pectin, gowned in white, crisp from her maid's grooming; and Morsn, erect and splendid, a hundred vikings, towering above her, booted and belted, the chocolate-colored head in her own huge fist.

CHAPTER XIII.

SAN FRANCISCO once more! Wilbur had been beating up the bay since daybreak, and now, as he neared the harbor, he was in the midst of a fleet of vessels, all standing in the same direction as himself, all heading northerly winds, putting into head seas.

The warmth, the stillness, the placid, drowsing quiet of Magdalena bay, shimmering golden days spent in tropic heaven, the white, baked beach, the long, lazy noons, vanished with the rising into human complexions of white and chilly or emitting loud cry under the sunset, the enchanted scenery of the land of lotus-eaters, all were left behind, and riding more, were replaced by the hard, vigorous, deserving life of the trades, the roll of breakers to landward, the sharp, cutting salt of the sea, the innumerable multitudes of gray green seas sweeping silently past the schooner's sides, the long, rolling, heaving tide human symptoms of white and sinking beneath the combers, the sunset, the swift, sharp, cold air.

Wilbur started as though struck, and took himself hurriedly away, but the picture would not leave him. It was in his brain a veritable mine of conjecture, drama in Magdalena bay was consistent, congruous and fitted into her environment. But how—how was Wilbur to explain her to San Francisco and how could his behavior seem else than fabulous in the case of a girl like Josie Herrick? Only a few days ago and she was engaged to Hamet Wilbur's feeling writhed at the thought.

He saw himself the day of his departure, Josie Herrick in his arms, and drank deep—how sweet it had been! The perfect hours in the narrow cheek of the Pacific. RING WORM AND DANDRUFF.

They Are Both Caused by a Vegetable Germ.

Ring worm and dandruff are something similar in their origin; each is caused by a parasite. The germ that causes dandruff digs to the root of the hair, and saps its vitality, causing falling hair, and, finally, baldness. Without dandruff there would never be baldness, and to cure dandruff it is necessary to kill the germ. There has been no hair preparation that would do this until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide, which positively kills the dandruff germs, allays itching instantly and makes hair grow rapidly and stay on it. Take no substitutes. There is nothing "just as good." Sold by all druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

She Didn't Know It
Was Jack Kissing Her

HERE, no sound. Can it be that she is not here?

As I came into the hall I did not hear the rustle of a skirt. But the maid said she was downstairs. Why then she not come out to greet me?

I will enter the drawing room. Ah, the light is quite dim. Now I can see better. As my eyes grow accustomed to it.

What is that on the couch? It is she.

Ah! She sleeps. I will walk over and look at her.

How beautiful she is! Her cheeks are slightly flushed. Her hair! How natural! I never knew she had such hair before.

She must have dropped down there and fallen asleep. Shall I awaken her?

I always knew that she was a pretty girl, but I never realized how very beautiful she was before.

My heart is going like a trip hammer. We are alone. I must kiss her. I cannot help myself.

Now I am leaning over—closer, closer. It is wrong of me? Well, I will answer for it if she is angry. There is no one to agree. I love her, and I must have that kiss.

There! I did it. It was the finest kiss I ever took. I faint with bliss.

She still sleeps. I wish I knew how I can take another.

Here goes. On her lips this time.

How soundly she sleeps! That last must be even sweeter! It should awaken her. Why doesn't she wake? Can anything be wrong?

Once more! And again! And again! What! Not awake yet?

"Darling, speak to me! It is I—Jack. Why did you sleep so soundly?"

"Oh, dear! I was not asleep, and I didn't know it was—you."—Tom Masson in Lippincott's Magazine.

Encouraged.

"I'm downright discouraged," said the man who always looks on the dark side of life. "What's what I am—downright discouraged?"

"What's the trouble?"

"Every summer that I can remember has produced a day that broke all previous records for heat."

"What of it?"

"Well, figure it out for yourself. Suppose it keeps up the pace for five or six years more?"—Washington Star.

An Insinuation.

Muggins—By the way, isn't one of your brothers a lawyer?

Biffkins—Yes.

Muggins—I suppose, like most lawyers, he would defend a mean, disreputable client, wouldn't he?

Biffkins—Possibly. You might go and state your case to him and tell him I sent you.—Detroit Tribune.

Couldn't Blame Him.

"Are you a lover of the national game?" asked the inquisitive passenger.

"Not me," answered the sad looking young man across the aisle. "I'm a baseball umpire."—Chicago News.

Forewarned.

"Will you tell your sister that I will call this evening?"

"Sure, but you'll be more apt to find her at, if you come unexpectedly."—Browning's Magazine.

At Least.

He—Yes, Dora pants. I am sure of it because she admitted her age to me.

She—Wasn't that clever of her?

He—How do you mean?

She—Clever—clever, to make you believe it.—Detroit Free Press.

Helpful Suggestion.

Excited Father—What are we going to do? These scales only register ten pounds, and the baby weighs more than that.

Calm Brother—You might chop off one leg and weigh that separately.—Somerville Journal.

How Nice of Him!

"Tess," said the fair young girl, "everybody says I'm just the picture of mamma."

"Well," replied the gallant youth, "you're certainly a very flattering picture."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Didn't Scare Him.

"De doctor tell me dat smokin' an' sich wa'n't nuthin' at one time would sho' kill me."

"An' what you gwine do 'bout it?"

"I 'spects I'se gwine t' die, sho'."—Atlanta Constitution.

Her Complete Fast.

"So we were wed her beauties moods I'd attentively watched—
The for look in her eyes, as though she had the look of demand
But after we on matrimony's voyage had started,
I found I never could undone came over me at all,
both of us, it seemed,
She says 'Yes,' I say 'I see' she is whom time wrought the change
Or maybe her seen so very dear it
All provokes a row.
Or does her passive moods have passed,
partake it' isn't strange
That I should find so many moods of Her's?"—Boy Farrell Greene in Judge.

Great was the scientific galaxy of the Victorian era. Richard Owen—not John Tyndall and Thomas Henry Huxley and Michael Faraday and Sir Humphrey Davy and Sir Charles Lyell and Charles Darwin and Joseph Dalton Hooker and John Strean Mendove and scores or other botanists and physicists and chemists and geologists will make the star of Victoria famous during the coming centuries, as the contemporary poets of Shakespeare's immortalized the Elizabethan age. Yet among all the naturalists who lived in England during the nineteenth century not one will be more quoted by the generations to come than Charles Darwin. The son and grandson of famous ancestors he was the greatest of the three. From under the overhanging brow of the great Darwin forehead there looked forth penetrating eyes which read the prehistoric geneologies of animals and vegetables, as a geologist reads the stratified rocks of the past. The ages were to him as days, and time, as it lived and died in generations or in centuries, but in a succession of immeasurable periods. He was the Galileo, he was excommunicated by Protestants and looked upon as an enemy of the Cross by researches will not be used, and no fire insurance being used, to prove that true scientific researches are not.

Of all the books which Charles Darwin wrote not one has had greater influence upon the scientific world than his "Origin of Species by Means of Natural Selection." We do not accept his theory of the survival of the fittest, but in that book is one sentence which is the keynote of his whole life work. "The survival of the fittest" is a sentence which will be heard ringing down the corridors of time. We find the survival of the fittest everywhere. We find the strongest plants crowding out the weaker. We find the strongest species living upon and driving out the weaker species. We find the strongest creatures of the various species transforming upon and destroying the animals and plants of their own kind.

The writer has a fine lawn on a porch overlooking a beautiful yard filled with roses. A neighbor has a great commotion in the hencoop. Within that fence is a struggle for life, deep over the fence with a little chicken in her mouth. Then, off in the distance, I saw that cat run away in terror. I ran to the rescue. Then, in imagination, I saw that little dog being licked by a mountain lion. Then I saw the wolf being killed by a mountain lion. Next I saw the lion being slain by the bullet of a man. In imagination, I saw the human race preying upon the weaker. As I sat on that porch I said to myself, "It is not Charles Darwin's sentence, 'the survival of the fittest,' but only the law of nature, but also the law of God?" Yes, yes, I said. It is true. God deals with the human race just as he deals with the vegetable and animal kingdoms, as well as with the mineral. It is not for us to vindicate the ways of God to man, but our duty lie in recognition its ex'act law and adapting ourselves to its operation. The penalty of indolence in this world is poverty and finally extinction.

Strong physically should we be. Why? Because in this rustling, bustling, pushing, panting age of activity to the work which, he was called upon to do. The physical weakness in the human race is almost in the same position as a sick cow among a herd of stampeding buffalo. "s she cannot help up in the race for life, she falls. She is crushed under hoof. Her sisters and brothers pass over her prostrate form and quivering flesh. The physical weakling is the sub-man position as is the starved tree. The physical weakling is the sub-man and reaches down. With its broad branches it shuts out the sunlight overhead and makes the stunted tree grow under its shadow. It robs the under strongest roots the tall tree of the moisture and nourishment in the soil. This, if a man is not able to stand the gaff, he must go and do so much work as his stouter and broader chested brothers; he falls, another takes his place, and the new comer is not able to do the work, inevitably is either transplant underfoot or absorbed by the stronger. It is a fall in the line of the advancement of progress.

If you do not believe in the physical survival of the fittest, stand on chests of some of our successful men. When you have done so, look around you. Where is the father for the great grandchildren? Where is the great grandchild, the grandson or even the son? Ninety-nine times out of a hundred the physical weakness is the first to go. It is almost an impossibility for the physical weakling to be successful in business by winning the confidence and the patronage of the community, by selling them shoddy goods. The saying is told that every man has his price. The stronger went out to live with the stronger, and the weaker went out to live with the weaker. So soon as the Indian chief opened his store he was surrounded and the Indian came to him again and again and bought the goods. The Indian chief said, "I am a fool." The next day the Indian chief returned to the white merchant and said, "Now, he commenced to pay the interest for the first dollar. The offer of five dollars, then another skin, then another skin, and then another skin had been given to him four skins for the original dollar's worth of goods. Then the chief drew out a dollar and another skin and offered it. He offered this fifth skin to test the white man's honesty. "Will you take it?" He said to himself that fifth skin. You have said me interest enough. I do not want any more." With that the Indian chief gave a grunt of satisfaction. He turned to his warriors and said: "Come, trade with palefaces. He honest man." Then, turning to the white trader he said: "Palefaces, suppose you take that last skin, Indian no trade with you. Then you know you dishonest white man." Ah, yes, the Indian trader knew the law of the survival of the fittest in the business

Swells of Ancient Egypt.

From the days that Egypt lives to us, written, painted or chiseled, the Egyptian mind must have been a great swell. The details of the twelfth dynasty show Egyptian elegance at its best. Every well appointed Egyptian house his statue's photo, called "superintendent of the provision house." There was the "superintendent of the baking house," and the butler of drinks had the title of "scribe of the wine." Egypt seems to be was a butler and regulated the supply of the household. There were wine growers, gardeners, porters and handicraft men, all having attending to the butler. "A preparer of sweets" must have been a confectioner. The Egyptian then was a true "epicure," and their hopes of being well fed in the hereafter, as he believed he would be nourished in his particular heaven with abundant goose and bean offerings to gods show the variety of the Egyptian menu, and in one are included "thirty-two loaves, a jug of drink of birds or game, sixteen varieties of bread and cake, six, assorted meats, four, brews of beers, eleven sorts of fruit, and an endless number of sweet kinds.

Flowers in Northern Russia.

An English traveler in northern Russia tells of the Czar's domestic difficulties that nothing surprised him more than the abundance of flowers and grown flowering plants in dwelling rooms. Even in the cells of monasteries and in the cabins of the peasantry, however, further north than Archangel he found such plants as oleanders, zonale pelargoniums and fuchsias in almost every room. The double windows, so necessary in a climate like that, with a draft tight space between them filled with evergreens, fruit and it does not seem necessary to open them for air during the short summer season. From September to June the country is buried in snow and shut in by ice. The average temperature of the winter is only 10 degrees. The July temperature is sometimes as high as 90 degrees F., which is hardly to be wondered at when it is remembered that the sun shines twenty-two hours out of the twenty-four.

Lost the Prize.

James Greenleaf Whittier, the English biblomaniac, lied him one memorable day in a bookseller's shop. Whittier was enjoying a little volume, took it up and glanced carelessly through it. After a while he asked the price from an old woman and was told it was two and sixpence. "Why, that's dear enough," said Crossley. "Nay," replied the poor old dame, "not for such a bargain." Whereupon our book devourer threw it down in disgust and retired. A gentleman, overhearing the whole affair, stepped forward and purchased it at the sum demanded. Crossley returned as soon after and, noticing the book had gone, anxiously inquired what had become of it. "Why, sir," said the old woman, "for what you refused to give" 'Twas but a penny!" "Yes," said Crossley ruefully, "but it was a penny!"

A Ray of Light.

The straightest thing in nature or art is a ray of light when passing through a vacuum or uniform density. Hence the eye is enabled to test the straightness of any object by the effect it has on the nearly as possible coincident with a ray of light, each parts as do part from straightness intersect increasing a ray and causing a shade to be seen by reflection of light. It is because at what early period in the history of the human race the eye became aware of straightness could be thus determined. Through countless thousands of models, its use the method daily, without being able to give a rational explanation of it.

A Japanese Test.

In Japan it appears that one factor entering into the choice of a son-in-law is her skill in making tea. Each candidate for the hand of a daughter appears on the surface of the statement, but it seems that the thread spun by a silkworm and reeled by the process of production, as the worm has been regularly fed carefully fed. The prospective mother-in-law carefully and minutely examines the garments of the aspiring lady, judging of her qualifications by their condition.

The Man Who Never Kicks.

There are some people who, through sickness, indifference or sheer love of fun, manage to get through life suffering many unpleasant things without protest. They dislike "row" or they don't like to make a fuss, and in consequence of this they come off second best every where. These are the men who always get the poorest seats in a car, and those who have the tough cuts off the joint.—London Saturday Review.

An Altered Case.

Ascum—Have you seen anything of Jiggins lately? Proctor—Yes. I've just been obliged to borrow five bills this morning. Ascum—Indeed! He's getting wealthy, isn't he? Proctor—Well, I can remember when I used to prescribe for him for only a dose of sodium bromide for the same complaint.

A Prudent Suggestion.

"Many people have suffered embarrassment because of their social aspirations."

"Yes," answered Miss Cayenne. "Before you insist on getting into the swim you want to make quite sure you are a swimmer."

Improving.

"Is your son improving much with the violin?"

"Oh, yes! We can now tell whether he's tuning or playing."

He travels safe and not unpleasantly who is guarded by poverty and gilded by love.—Sidney.

A Timely Warning.

Jimmy—What's the matter with you? You don't never go in for any fun at all nowadays. Tommy—No. I'm beginnin' to realize if I don't do a little day party soon as I want to git a present I'll be too old to enjoy it.

Please Us As

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $3, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

DEATH OF DR. LAMBLY.

VETERAN METHODIST MINISTER PASSED TO HIS REST YESTERDAY MORNING.

Rev. Dr. Lambly, an aged superannuated minister of the Methodist Church, died in this city at a quarter hour on Sunday morning. For months the deceased had been in declining health and for weeks his demise was anticipated. The late gentleman was one of the best known ministers of the Bay of Quinte Conference, having at one time been its President. He was born in the year 1817 at New Ireland, Quebec. When a young man he attended Newberry University, in Vermont, where he remained for some time and then came to Belleville where he continued his studies at Victoria University. In the year 1842 he was received into the Methodist conference and exhorted until 1868, when he was ordained. He continued in the ministry until three years ago, when, owing to ill health he was compelled to superannuate. During his ministerial life he was upon the following circuits: Georgetville, Kemptville, Newmarket, Brighton, Belleville North, Stirling, Madoc, Wellington, Bloomfield, Pickering and Belleville North a second time. In the year 1891 he was elected President of the Bay of Quinte Conference. He was a member of the General Conference in the years 1856-58-64-68. In the year 1895 the degree of D.D. was conferred upon him by Victoria University. When over the deceased was stationed he was universally beloved for his charitable disposition and true christian character. A widow and two daughters, Misses Marion and Maud, survive.

Decorative Artists.

On every hand one hears encomiums of the artistic decorative work done in this city by Messrs. Turner & Sons, of Yorkshire, who have now a provincial reputation. It is only necessary to say that the Turner banner decorated the Court House, Hotel Quinte and the offices of the Corby distillery, to show people at what those artists are capable. Many of the handsome decorations on private residences were also put up by them.

Old Boys' Reunion a Huge Success So Far.

Saturday Afternoon's Proceedings—The Kitties on the Park—A Splendid Band—The Excursions Well Attended—Services in the Churches Yesterday—Visitors Welcomed From All City Pulp's—This Morning's Functions

The Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 is an assured success. There is none no doubt of that. Everything so far has gone without a hitch of any kind, and the visitors and all, are apparently, are enjoying themselves to the full. By every train and boat the city has been coming in, there's bubbling over with good spirits. No happier crowd has ever thronged Belleville's streets than the ladies and gentlemen now in our city. Admiration for the decorations is expressed by all the visitors, and the consensus of opinion seems to be that the good people of the City of the Bay have nobly risen to the momentous occasion.

Saturday's Doings.

On Saturday the steamer Niagara ran two excursions up and down the bay for the benefit of the visitors. Both were well patronized, particularly the afternoon one. In the evening, perhaps, the old boys and girls felt more like hunting up old friends than going a-pleasuring.

The famous Kiltie' Band of Belleville gave two concerts on Victoria park on Saturday afternoon, and the grand musical organization was listened to with keen delight. About 5.30 the pipers of the Brigade and Drum Band formed up on Bridge St. and marched to Queen Victoria park, playing a quickstep in stirring style. There was a big crowd on the park when the concert began, and the programme was a charming and animated one. The bright uniforms of the Kilties and the summer toilettes of the ladies helped to produce an effect which could not help but please the eye, and the music which filled the bay were very grateful. The big drum major, looking even bigger than ever, moved in and out among the crowd, and the ladies and children seemed never to tire of looking at him. Sergeant-Major Kidd played for the first time under his new leader, Mr. H. B. Gilliland, a sterling musician, by the way, who has for a long time cornet soloist with Sousa's band. His methods are much quicker than those of Mr. Hobbins, and conducted when the band was last here, but the new leader seemed to be able to bring out all the effects necessary, without any of those gymnastics that were considered so fine. The programme opened with a Scots march, "Romper Edelia," accompanied by the pipers, followed by "Land o' the Leal," a very stirring, indeed. Other numbers were a concert overture, by Hobbins, entitled "Chorus," a selection, a selection, "Concordia," by Godfrey, a "Prince of Pilsen" selection, "Auld Lang Syne," and "The Winds' waltz; an Irish Patrol, and the "Call of the Bugle," by Hobbins. All the numbers were tastefully rendered, the band closing the afternoon's playing the "Prince of Pilsen" selection, "Auld Lang Syne," "God Save the Queen," and the "Way the band's out" selection, which was by no means a dry delightful. It must have been a delightful experience for the old boys who kept his or her feet still. Lovers of the bagpipes were fully satisfied by the playing of Pipe Major Jamieson and the Scottish dancers, at usual intervals during the afternoon. The dances even better than when last seen here, and the "Highland Fling" and "Sailor's Hornpipe" were received with rounds of applause. The vocal soloists, who are artists in every sense of the word, were, in particular, plays with a tone and taste that were delightful. Miss Bessie Bateson's concert by the Kilties was largely attended, and the receipts from the sale were fully six thousand people upon the park during the day. This is a much better form than in the afternoon, owing, no doubt, to some of the social functions that are set others for the afternoon, turning up on the park in the evening. The overture, Lovey's "Admiral Pinafore," the march, "Old Boys and Girls" selection from "King Dodo," and the Hungarian Fantasia, "Rakoczy" number was grand, while the Gem's waltz showed exquisite modulation of the reeds. Nothing nicer could be imagined, hardly, than the waltz. It was great. There was an obligato of darkey laughter, dancing on the trees and the "Coon Band" played by the Kilties choir, that number should certainly be repeated before the Kilties leave Belleville. The selection from "King Dodo" was full of catchy airs, and the trombone soloist had a chance to show off. The singing of the Kilties' choir made a great hit, as did also the fine and inspiring of the Clan Johnstone troops. God Save the Queen sent everybody home in high good humor.

Sunday's Doings.

When people woke up this morning early and heard the rain they felt sorry. What would that awful downpour do to the decorations? However, it was seen that generally that the rain had not hurt the decorations very much, though some of them looked a trifle bedraggled. Then again, the rain had laid the dust, which was something to be thankful for.

Outside of the churches, the only events of interest in the city were the two sacred concerts by the Kilties band. The Victoria park concert at 2.30 o'clock a shower came on, which necessitated the cancellation of the afternoon concert at the park, but a band held on the opera house, which place was packed to the doors. The evening concert at the park was attended by about four thousand people, and was apparently thoroughly enjoyed by everybody.

WIND JAMMERS FRATERNIZE.

Friendship had sprung up between the members of the Queen's City Jingle Band and the local wind jammers of the Fifteenth, and the former were the guests of the latter on Monday afternoon, when the Annie Laurie band was ordered out the Toronto boys taken to Trenton. It was a most pleasant jollification, and enjoyed by all the participants in spite of the rather moist weather. The two wind jammers struck Trenton they were only about fifteen people to be seen on the streets, they say. The two bands paraded the town and woke things up in great style. On returning to the city the visiting bandsmen were entertained by the Fifteenth lads in the latter's quarters on Bridge St.

Monday's Doings.

Expressions of delight were universal when people rose this morning and saw the sunshine in the sky. Crowds were early astir, everybody in good spirits. It was expected that this to be the banner day of the Reunion, and assembly they were not disappointed Visiting bands came in, making things lively for the Corby ladies and the streets and played in front of the hotels.

Presentation of the Corby Park.

The first event of importance in the official programme for this morning was the presentation of the Corby park and fountain to the city. At the Pinnacle at 10 o'clock the writer arrived on the scene, there was a good crowd present, and music was discoursed by the band of the I.O.O.F. Land came up, playing merrily, followed by the Kilties band, which is a pretty place, beautifully situated. The band stopped playing and the fourth admired it. Tears the inscription:

Presented to the City of Belleville

by

Mrs. Harry Corby.

July 24, 1905.

Everybody was highly pleased when it was learned that Mr. Corby was not to be present, his health making it imperative that he stay at the Pinnacle. Mrs. Corby and her daughter, Alice Corby, however, were present, having driven over from the Pinnacle. Banks this morning. Both ladies were charmingly dressed in summer costumes, and seemed to take a lively interest in the function. The band then formed up on the east side of the fountain, and on a small platform on the south side the Corby ladies and the following local celebrities were placed, in a circle: His Worship Mayor Ellis, Mayor Aid. Gordon, Knox, Patterson, McBrides, Vermilyea, Marks and Foster; Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., and Mr. Harry Corby, who, by the way, looked well and happy.

Mr. Harry Corby, who To-day Presented the Corby Park to the City.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, president of the O.B.R.; City Clerk Mikel, City Treasurer Petry, City Assessor Bennett, and Mr. Wm. Johnson, president of the O.B.R.; City Clerk Mikel, City Treasurer Petry, City Assessor Bennett, and Mayor Sulman to read an address to Mrs. Corby, which he did as follows:

To Henry Corby, ex-M. P.

Most Respected and Esteemed Sir,—We, the Mayor and Council of the City of Belleville, in behalf of the citizens, embrace the present opportunity of expressing to you our high appreciation of you as a man, great of heart, magnificent, generous, prosperous; as a statesman, and as a public-spirited fellow-citizen.

We shall always cherish feelings of the deepest gratitude to you for this expression of your Christian-like consideration and kindness in the gift to us of the beautiful pleasure and recreation grounds, which have been very appropriately named "Corby Park."

None of the few, the immortal names,

That were not born to die."

The goodness of heart and noble disposition which have always been characteristics of your amiable wife naturally led her to see that another, though beautiful in itself, would still be more beautiful if suitably adorned. Therefore, Mrs. Corby graciously decided to improve your gift by the addition of a beautiful fountain, ever be remembered for this act of kindness.

This worthy example on the part of yourself and your amiable wife must prove an inspiration to others to learn the luxury of doing good and to do noble deeds, to make life, death and the vast forever one grand sweet joy.

The importance and value of a public park in our midst cannot be overestimated or appreciated. A distinguished British statesman when speaking in Parliament of the benefits derived by the people of London from the public parks proclaimed—"We cannot live without them—they are the lungs of the city."

We sincerely trust that this gift of "Corby" park to our city may ever be a means of recalling in pleasant pleasing remembrance, which no doubt will be enhanced by the thought that it is so beautifully associated with the "Old Boys and Old Girls Reunion."

Praying that you and your estimable wife may long be spared to see our citizens enjoy the pleasure you have provided in the gift of Corby park.

We subscribe ourselves,

The Corporation of the City of Belleville.

CHAS. N. SULMAN,

Mayor.

At the conclusion of the mayor's address a winsome little girl, Miss Marion Dale Corby, presented to her father a beautiful bouquet of roses, and Mr. E. Guss Porter, M. P., replied on behalf of Mr. Corby. He said he quite appreciated the compliment paid him by the mayor, and would answer his friend Harry Corby, the gift to the citizens of Belleville, and his wife and the Quinte district. They all regretted that circumstances prevented, for the present, towards Belleville and love for his native city Harry Corby and his wife Corby and Alice Corby, however, were present, having driven over from the Pinnacle. Banks this morning. Both ladies were charmingly dressed in summer costume, and seemed to take a lively interest in the function. The band then formed up on the east side of the fountain, and on a small platform on the south side the Corby ladies and the following local celebrities were placed, in a circle: His Worship Mayor Ellis, Mayor Aid. BRITAIN CUTS GERMANY OUT.

Trade Figures With Canada and What is Proved.

London, July 25.—The Financial News correspondent quotes certain figures from the latest report of German statistical trade to show how Great Britain's imports to Canada have increased at the expense of German trade. Since the new customs regulations came into force the value of the imports fell from $13,300,000 in 1903 to $8,300,000 in 1904, whilst for the same time British imports rose from $58,900,000 to $61,900,000. The chief German falling off is in iron and foodstuffs, whilst woollens and ready-made clothing somewhat increased and sugar has been annihilated.

MR. PARENT CHAIRMAN.

Changes on the Transcontinental Railway Commission.

Ottawa, July 25.—Premier Parent of Quebec will be here to-day when it is expected that arrangements will be made to appoint him Chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission, in the place of the late Mr. F. B. Wade.

Mr. Brunet, the Quebec commissioner, will retire in favor of Mr. Parent.

Mr. C. F. McIsaac, M.P., for Antigonish, has been mentioned as the representative of the Maritime Provinces on the commission.

MR. KELLIHER APPOINTED.

Chief Engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific An Irishman.

Montreal, July 25.—Mr. B. B. Kelliher has been appointed chief engineer of the Grand Trunk Pacific, with headquarters at Montreal.

Mr. Kelliher has been with the Grand Trunk Pacific since 1904 as division engineer at Winnipeg, which office he held until his recent appointment to the chief engineership. He is an Irishman, but from 1884 to 1901 had wide railway experience in the States. He, however, never took out naturalization papers or dropped his British allegiance.

Mrs. Kyle Committed For Trial.

Ingersoll, July 25.—Mrs. Kyle was yesterday afternoon given her preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Morrison, and was committed for trial at the fall Assizes for the shooting of David McGee. No defence was entered. The only witnesses being Dr. Tait, Raymond Hutt, who loaned the revolver, and Miss Whitman, who was at the Kyle homestead on the morning of the shooting.

Balfour Will Not Resign.

Makes Statement to a House Literally Packed.

Premier Says That Adverse Vote of Thursday Last Does Not Warrant Either Resignation or a Dissolution—Opposition and Irish Leaders Adopt Heated Tone in Replying, But They Abstained from Making a Division.

London, July 25.—The Government has no intention of resigning in consequence of Thursday's adverse vote. This was the gist of Premier Balfour's anticipated statement in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. Although it had been generally recognized that such would be the decision of the Premier there was feverish eagerness on all sides to hear the exact terms of his statement. The House was literally packed. Every gallery available to the peers and the public was crowded and there had not been such an attendance of members during the life of the present Parliament.

Mr. Balfour, who was heartily cheered by his supporters on rising, somewhat tried the patience of his hearers by a long disquisition on how former administrations had ignored defeats similar to that of Thursday. He declared that such incidents had never been regarded as ground for resignation or dissolution and announced that the Government did not propose either to resign or dissolve Parliament because of Thursday's occurrences.

The Premier considered that it would be a grave evil if the tenure of Ministers was made dependent on such votes as that of Thursday. He hoped the practice would never prevail of allowing a Government united in itself and possessing the confidence of the majority of the House to abandon its post merely in consequence of such a vote.

Will Be Hard Fighting.

Mr. Balfour sat down without referring to the remaining business of the session, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the Liberal leader, immediately asked for an opportunity to discuss the Premier's statement. The Opposition, he said, did not propose to proceed with Sir Edward Grey's proposed vote of censure, which obviously was superseded by the occurrence of Thursday. They wanted to discuss the conduct of the Government regarding the events of last week.

John Redmond, the leader of the Irish Nationalists, took a similar line, and the heated tone of both leaders indicated that the Government will have to face the most determined opposition during the balance of the session. Ultimately by arrangement with Mr. Balfour, the chief Government whip, Sir Alexander Acland Hood, formerly moved the adjournment, and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman opened the debate with a sharp attack on the Government.

No Division.

Mr. Redmond followed, and in a few fervid phrases characterized the Premier's action as contemptible. The Opposition, he declared, ought to band together and make the continued life of this Government impossible. Speaking for the Nationalists, Mr. Redmond advised the Government that they would neither ask nor give quarter, but would fight day and night so as to make short work of "this Government of shreds and patches."

The Opposition for tactical reasons deciding to abstain from a division, the debate in the House of Commons was unexpectedly ended and the Government motion for an adjournment was carried without a division.

It is estimated that had a division taken place the Government would have had a majority of from 90 to 100. Eleven by-elections have made their first appearance in the House this year.

Seawanhaka Cup Lifted.

Montreal, July 25.—The American challenger Manchester of the Manchester (Mass.) Yacht Club yesterday defeated the Canadian defender Alexandra in the third and final race for the Seawanhaka Cup, and thus captured the trophy for the United States by three straight wins. Yesterday's race was a beat to windward and return, four miles, sailed three times over a total distance of twelve miles. Canada thus lost the cup she has held since 1circ.

Turkish Troops Fight Rebels.

Hodeida, Yemen Province, Turkish Arabia, July 25.—The Turks are meeting with some success against the insurgents at Sanaa, the chief city of Yemen Province. Operations to recover possession of that city commenced on July 17 from three directions. Marshal Ahmed Fazil Pasha, at the head of the Albanian battalions, dislodged the rebels from a strong position near Menekha, inflicting severe losses on them.

Appeal Is Withdrawn.

Washington, July 25.—Mr. MacMaster, Canadian counsel for the United States Government in the fraser against Greene and Gaynor, has cabled the Department at Washington from London that the two men have withdrawn their petition for leave to appeal to the Privy Council at London, and that on Wednesday the Council will formally dismiss the appeal.

Veteran Sportsman Dead.

Toronto, July 25.—Verging on toward fourscore years, George Warth, the veteran boat builder and sportsman died at his home at 606 Hanlan's Point last night. Mr. Warth has resided in that city almost all his life, and his name was a byword with all interested in aquatics. It was he who built the famous shell that brought fame to Ned Hanlan.

Servian Government Wins.

Belgrade, July 25.—The elections to the Servian Skuptschina have resulted in an absolute majority for the Government. The new Parliament is constituted as follows: Ministerialists 56, Radicals 24, Progressists 2, Socialists 2, Liberals 2, Peasant party 1.

German Troops to Relieve.

Tientsin, July 25.—The German transport Sydra has arrived at Taku with 500 military reliefs. She landed 500 men at Pingtsin.

GREAT EARTHQUAKE.

Most Violent Disturbance in Central Asia Known in Years.

Vienna, July 25.—One of the most violent earthquakes ever known was indicated by the seismographs of the hydrographic instruments at Laibach and Pola Sunday.

Between 2.55 and 4.37 a. m. the instruments showed extraordinary movements in waves, signifying an earthquake catastrophe at a distance of 6,000 kilometres (about 3,700 miles).

At 7 a. m. the instruments were still vibrating.

The distance indicated by the seismographs would locate the earthquake in Central Asia (the most probable point) or in mid-Atlantic.

Recorded in Toronto.

Toronto, July 25.—The earthquake reported yesterday was recorded on the seismograph at the Meteorological office as one of the greatest disturbances on record. The instrument shows it began suddenly at 10.12 p. m. Sunday night, which would correspond with 2.10 a. m. yesterday, Greenwich time. The quake lasted 3 hours and 14 minutes. It attained its greatest force between 10.25 and 11.45 p. m. The maximum movement was recorded at 10.45 p. m. and the swing of the boom amounted to 26 milometers.

THINK OF ME AS DEAD.

So Wrote 14-Year Florence Mowers to Mother on Eloping.

St. Thomas, July 25.—Mrs. Mowers, who lives at Port Bruce with her 14-year-old daughter, Florence, and who attends the matrix here regularly, came to the city on Saturday morning at noon and on her return home found her daughter missing and a letter from her on the table reading:

"Good-bye, mother. Think of me as one dead. Don't follow us, as it is no use. We are going to the States to get married."

The girl, Mrs. Mowers reported to the police Sunday, ran away with a man named Walter Weir, 25 years of age, who has been around Port Bruce and visited at the Mowers' home for some time. He was a married man, but Mrs. Mowers says he claims to have secured a divorce from his wife, who is at present living at Port Stanley.

The girl was seen in the city at 6 o'clock on Saturday night, and the pair are supposed to have gone to Detroit.

Hurricane Destroys Island.

Sydney, N.S.W., July 25.—News has been received here that a hurricane devastated the Marshall Islands June 30.

The Marshall Islands form a large archipelago of small islands of coral formation northeast of the Ladrone Islands, Polynesia.

Flaxseed Market Cornered.

Buffalo, July 25.—John D. Rockefeller, through the American Linseed Oil Co., has cornered the flaxseed market and has compelled the three big independent mills here to close. The price of linseed oil will be advanced 40 cents a gallon. This advance will seriously affect many industries.

Rapid Circulation in the "Bison" Heater

The expansion of hot water in the heater causes circulation.

If the water heats at the bottom first, it cannot circulate till the water in the upper sections is also heated. Most heaters heat the bottom water first.

The "Bison" heats the water at the top first.

That is why it gets almost instantaneous circulation of hot water into the radiators—it is one of ten reasons why the "Bison" is the best heater.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Will yo no come back again?

It grieves us to see them go, doesn't it?

The dear old boys and the dear old girls,
We're sorry to see them go,
But we're not going to pipe our eye
Or hand out a tale of woe—
For memories sweet will dwell with us
When they are far away
Of the happy times ye spent in dear Old Belleville by the Bay.

So strike up a tune, bandmaster, please,
Give us something good and merry
We'll have enough of doleful tunes
Ere we reach old Charon's ferry,
And here's a toast—come, drink it up
A spice to life it lends
Here's to old Belleville's boys and girls,
God bless our fluent friends.

Well, if this jolly old Dairy isn't a pretty fair imitation of Kingston to-morrow you can have the flag-staff on my cork for a fishpole.

MRS. GEORGE CORNISH DEAD

ESTIMABLE LADY PASSED AWAY SUDDENLY YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Mrs. George Cornish, who resided at the family residence, Brassey St., died rather suddenly yesterday afternoon. Although she had not been feeling well for some days she was able to be about even to within a few minutes before she passed away. Heart trouble was the cause of death. Deceased, who was 56 years of age, had always resided in this city, where she was known to many and esteemed for her many good qualities. For years Mrs. Cornish had been a member of the Tabernacle church, taking an active part in church work. In addition to the bereaved husband a family of one son, and two daughters survive. The son, George, resides in Toronto, the daughters, Mrs. J. Ryan and Miss Mabel, at home.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy - The Best in Existence.

T. M. Wood, manager of the Wolfe County News, Bedford, Ark., is a representative southern business man, who does not hesitate in expressing his good opinion of a well known remedy. He says, "It gives me pleasure to recommend Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, having used it myself and in my family with the best results. In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of its kind in existence." Sold by all druggists.

May Lose Three Fingers

A lad named Harry McIntyre, who was employed at Mr. Jas. Wallace's, yesterday afternoon met with a painful accident. He was engaged in operating an ice tool dresser, when his left hand became caught in the cogs. The result was that the top of three fingers were badly crushed. At present it is impossible to say whether he will have to have the tops amputated or not.

Buy it Now.

Now is the time to buy Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is certain to be needed sooner or later and when that time comes you will need it badly—you will need it quickly. Buy it now. It may save life. For sale by all druggists.

SOFTNESS OF SEALSKIN.

Is Rivaled by Human Hair Where Dandruff is Eradicated.

Sealskin is admired the world over for its softness and glossiness; and yet the human hair is equally soft and glossy when healthy; and the radical cause of all hair troubles is dandruff, which is caused by a parasiferous parasite that saps the vitality of the hair at its root. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that is fatal to the dandruff germ. Without dandruff there is no falling hair, but a luxuriant growth of glossy, soft hair. Shampooing the scalp won't cure dandruff. Kill the dandruff germ. Thousands of women owe their beautiful suits of hair to Newbro's Herpicide. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

MR. HAVERSON'S MISHAP.

LAWYER WELL-KNOWN HERE HAS A FEW TROUBLES WITH A DINGHY.

Many people in this city know Mr. James Haverson, and the following amusing article about him will be read with interest and edification:

What Mr. James Haverson does not know about dinghy sailing would fill a decent sized volume, but grim experience is rapidly teaching him indelible lessons upon the subject. His last lesson was taken Wednesday night, says the Star, and it effectually taught Mr. Haverson the futility of trying to take passengers aboard a fourteen foot dinghy via the bow.

Mr. Haverson sails a dinghy called Woos II. She is a pretty little craft and Mr. Haverson takes great pride in keeping her up to the mark. Her decks are scrubbed regularly and she is sponged down every time she is brought back to the Queen City Yacht Club, where Mr. Haverson is a member. Last night the Woos II., resplendent in the glory of a new set gay cushions, and with Skipper Haverson at the helm, set sail for Hanlan's Point. There was a good breeze and Mr. Haverson and his white sweatered "crew" of one man lauded at the little dock Manager Soloman so thoughtfully provided for those who bring boats and canoes to grief. About nine o'clock, just when the passenger traffic is screwed to its limit, Mr. Haverson undertook to escort a lady aboard the craft. He stepped upon the bow and she unhesitatingly followed.

Now this is a "stunt" which no self-respecting fourteen foot dinghy will stand for. Mr. Haverson is no featherweight, and his companion could not very well qualify for the super weight championship, and the dinghy promptly ducked. Woos II. bared away from the dock as far as the bow line would let her, and then putting her stern in the air proceeded to throw a few somersaults. As she went down by the bow Mr. Haverson and his fair companion grasped the mast. The boat hung for an instant in her plunge, as all boats do, just an instant to allow the occupants a chance to anticipate the splash, and then went over like a flash.

Mr. Haverson bobbed up like a cork and grasping his companion in distress swam to the dinghy mast and held on. Seeing that both were safe the crowd let a mighty cheer and then a howl of laughter. The lady was cool and was rescued without difficulty. Then Mr. Haverson, wet to the skin, and the crew of one dry as a bone, undertook to right the boat and bail her out. The crew was in a bit of a temper engendered by the laughter and jibes of the crowd. He worked from the dock while Mr. Haverson stood up to his knees in water in the boat and fished out the floating cushions. Something went foul with the halliards and the crew gave a vigorous yank. The rope came with a run and the mast, with overhauser and promptly fell off the wharf to join the cushions. The crowd simply screamed with laughter at this additional mishap.

The boat was finally bailed and sailed for home.

NO SATISFACTION IN EATING.

Food does you no good. You can't digest—consequently you're afraid to eat, tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, breath is offensive. Pretty soon you'll be overcome by weakness and nervous prostration. Best prescription for your condition is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. For dyspepsia and indigestion it is doubtful if a better remedy will ever be devised. These pills bring new strength and vitality to the stomach and digestive organs; they build up the general health and instill such vim and resisting power into the system that sickness is impossible; try Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Belleville's Warm Welcome to Old Boys and Girls.

(Concluded from page 7.)

fellow-citizen who has earned a world-wide reputation as an author, and who is an honored member of the British House of Parliament — Sir Gilbert Parker!

In law, members have become eminent as jurists and judges.

In medicine, many who first saw the light of day in Belleville, both ladies and gentlemen, have become highly successful in the practice of their chosen professions.

As nurses, there are none who rank higher than our young ladies. Many of them are standing in the front rank in the profession, and have carried off the gold medal in the first examinations.

As ministers of the Gospel, whose mission it is to proclaim the blessings of Christianity, our boys have done nobly and have honored this profession. After listening to the eloquent and instructive addresses delivered yesterday in our various churches, we must confess that too much cannot be said in their praise.

In Educational matters, in addition to the colleges in Belleville organized and sustained by Belleville boys, others have gone out and established colleges in other parts of the Dominion and many, both ladies and gentlemen, are serving their country as teachers.

The world of architects and designers has received some of its brightest and best additions from Belleville, and many have achieved fame as electricians.

Some of the best business men and most successful merchants in all parts of this continent have gone forth from Belleville; also of mechanics and a few have attained the highest honors in their chosen callings.

The arts and sciences have also sent out their representatives from Belleville.

In music, many of Belleville's sons and daughters by their sweet, melodious voices, and skilful performance upon musical instruments, are delighting audiences and bringing credit to themselves.

To-day we begin with us those representing every department and walk in life, who have returned home perhaps after many years of absence. We welcome you, every one.

This Reunion was arranged to enable you to gratify a longing desire to visit dear old Belleville, to see your relatives and friends; to note what changes and improvements have taken place in the city; to visit the parks and walk the streets under the shade of the same trees where you in merry childhood ran and played; to sail on the beautiful Bay of Quinte, where as a youth you swam, rowed and fished; to visit the churches and Sabbath schools with all their hallowed associations, and the cemetery with all their sacred memories. Many faces will be missed, and many old familiar voices not heard, but you will all receive a hearty welcome from those who fill their places to-day.

Old Boys and Old Girls of Belleville we have been longing to welcome you return. We have come home and we are all glad to see you and welcome you, and sincerely hope you will all enjoy yourselves to your heart's content.

There is nothing too good for the Old Boys and Old Girls of Belleville, and this we will endeavor to fully prove.

CHAS. N. SULMAN,
Chairman.

The address was most heartily received.

Col. Ponton, chairman of the reception committee, spoke briefly and appropriately, and said the "big four," Messrs. Yeomans, Flint, McGinnis and Johnson had done the most to make the Reunion a success. The Colonel said he believed they would be a financial success as well as sentimental results would accrue from the Reunion.

Judge Dean, of Lindsay, made a most delightful speech. This, he said, was going to be a day of cross lights, and amid all the chorus of welcome he had heard the silent voice of the dead. The Judge paid of early days in Belleville and the men he knew here in the '50's, a rich and rare way he told of his old friends, most of them gone to the shades of Beleville, and drew some amusing comparisons between the conditions of those days and these days when he first set foot in Belleville.

Mr. H. Cook, president of the Belleville Old Boys' Association of Toronto, congratulated the Belleville committee on the success of the Reunion, and, on behalf of the Toronto Association, tendered hearty thanks for the splendid welcome given them. He said that it would be a good idea to have annual reunion of this kind, and he need not go into elaborate as this one had been. The speaker referred to Sir Mackenzie Bowell as a Belleville boy, and said they were all proud of, He had been 40 years in Belleville and had not a stain or blemish on his character. If the Conservatives had been content to follow Sir Mackenzie in 1896, said Mr. Cooke, there would have been no such exhibition as there was that called the Conservative party to-day. In conclusion the speaker moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Belleville executive, on behalf of the Toronto Old Boys, for the splendid welcome given them to-day.

The motion was carried by Mr. Charles Rosevear, of Toronto, and carried with great enthusiasm.

Mr. Thomas Keogh, of Ogden, Utah, made a witty speech, and said the town had greatly improved since he and his brothers left it 43 years ago. He congratulated Belleville on its handsome young ladies, not one of whom, so far as he could see, had a galvanized check. (Laughter). It was too bad, the speaker said, there were not more young men here to marry the girls.

Mr. Pierce Kingsley thanked the promoters of the Old Boys' Reunion for the pleasantest hour he had spent in all his life. He had been in every city of any size in the U. S. and Canada, but had never found any place which was so dear to him as Belleville. He had, to-day, met some of his old friends he had not seen for 28 years.

Mr. H. F. Gardiner, principal of the Brantford Institution for the Blind, made a splendid speech, telling of the sixteen years he had spent in Belleville, and gave many interesting and amusing reminiscences of old times.

Col. Hendrick, U. S. Consul, thanked the committee for the hearty kindnesses shown to returned old boys from the United States. Belleville, he said, was a city of beautiful women and broad-minded men.

During the evening the following musical numbers were splendidly rendered:

Quartette, "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," Misses Mabel Vermilyea, Maud Estelle Price, Messrs. Vermilyea and Burns.

Duet, the Misses Gertrude and Kissie Price, "When Far North Alien Skies."

Song, Miss Styles, of Toronto, "The Land of Apollo."

Song, William Cunnington, "The Veteran's Song."

Song, Miss Mabel Vermilya, "In the City by the Bay."

Song, Miss Maysel Stork, "I Love Dearest."

Quartette, "Life's Golden Long Ago" Misses Morgan, Miss Ella Price, Messrs. Merton and Erwin Gordon.

Song, Mrs. James Grant, "A Summer Time Song."

Recitation, Mr. Carmichael, "An Old Mariner's Advice to His Son."

Song, Mr. E. Henthorn, "The Bedouin Love Song."

Song, Mrs. Parker, "Oft in the Stilly Night."

Mrs. Campbell acted as accompanist with her usual perfect good taste and skill.

AN ADDRESS TO THE KILTIES.

The concert given on Queen Victoria park last night by the Kilties band was very largely patronized. Fully five thousand people were present to hear in the performance of the famous band. At an intermission during the programme Mr. J. Wallace Griffith, chairman of the executive committee of the Reunion mounted the band stand and read the following address:

To George W. Griffith, owner; R. B. Gilford, conductor; T. P. J. Powder, manager, and the members of the Kilties band of Belleville, Canada.

Gentlemen,—Your welcome presence at the Reunion of Belleville Old Boys, and your prominent participation in the many scenes of interest that have made this occasion the most delightful and memorable in the history of the city, have given the committee in charge of the arrangements in connection with one-half of the citizens of Belleville, to feel indebted to you back from your distinguished professional tour in England, Ireland and Scotland.

We bid you God speed and bon voyage in September last, feeling assured that you would increase your fame, and incidentally do credit to this city and the Dominion. You have accomplished even greater things than we expected you would, and from the magnificent receptions you met and appreciations you experienced during your visit to the old country, of thousands of our fellow-subjects throughout Great Britain and Ireland.

Not only do we desire to present you with our cordial greetings, but we also wish to thank you for the prominence given in your programmes, posters and announcements to the fact that you are the "Kilties band of Belleville." Now that you are starting again to tour this continent, we beg you to accept the assurance of our good will for the organization under your control and friendship for each one of you.

WM. JOHNSON,
Chairman.
ARTHUR McGINNIS,
Secretary.

Belleville, Ontario, July 24th, 1905.

Bandmaster Gilliford responded gracefully on behalf of the Kilties. They would ever remember Belleville with pleasure, as among some of their memories the gratifying words uttered. Mr. Griffith, owner, and Mr. T. P. J. Power, manager, also returned thanks.

AFTERNOON SPORTS.

At 3.30 a programme of aquatic sports was run off on Victoria place, but only two events were filled, namely, the ladies' swimming race and the punt race. The dinghy race did not fill, and there were only two entries for the canoe race, viz., those of Augulus and Spray. Just after they started the former upset in the Spray, manoeuvering, had the misfortune to capsize her spar and was forced to withdraw. The 1896, said Mr. Cooke, there would have been no such exhibition as there was that called the Conservative party to-day. In conclusion the speaker moved a hearty vote of thanks to the Belleville executive, on behalf of the Toronto Old Boys, for the splendid welcome given them to-day.

The motion was carried by Mr. Charles Rosevear, of Toronto, and carried with great enthusiasm.

Mr. Thomas Keogh, of Ogden, Utah, made a witty speech, and said the town had greatly improved since he and his brothers left it 43 years ago. He congratulated Belleville on its handsome young ladies, not one of whom, so far as he could see, had a galvanized check. (Laughter). It was

TORONTO OLD BOYS GIVEN A HEARTY SEND-OFF.

There was a tremendous crowd at the Grand Trunk depot and Esplanade from streets last night to say good-by to the Toronto old boys and girls who were going home by special train. It was a memorable scene. The bright waving flags and banners, the sea of smiling faces, the uniforms of the bandsmen and the airy costumes of the ladies made a jour ensemble pleasant to gaze upon. The train left at 7 o'clock, and during the time there were thousands of people waiting to see it off. Some festive youths, armed with drums and bugles, cheerfully succeeded in annoying a whole lot of people who were more quietly disposed. Handshaking and osculatory exercises were going on at a great rate. At last, just as the clock struck 11, the long train pulled out amid cheers and waving hats and handkerchiefs. For the Toronto old boys' party, Mr. Hoad, the Reunion of 1905 was over.

Notes of the Day.

It is estimated that there were at least 5,000 people on Victoria Park last night, the largest ever before in its history.

Dr. Yeomans will be famous now. The Kilties band had a night playing in his honor.

The IRISH Band played on the Corby park last night. Many people were present to hear them.

Rev. Father Farrelly was out in a big motor carriage, a delighted spectator of the big procession.

It is estimated that there were at least 1,000 visitors in the city yesterday.

The ladies, by common consent, voted that the two youngest old boys present, Master Bowerman, aged four years, and Master Dean, of Lindsay, and Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

This was a day and go-as-you please day for everybody. The visitors had the freedom of the parks and streets and listening to the concerts on the parks, while large numbers availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the cemetery by steamer and street car.

The Kilties band this afternoon gave a concert on the Corby park, on the IRISH Band building forth on Queen Victoria park.

The chairmen and members of the committee are unanimous in that there was no lack of accommodation for the visitors. Everybody secured excellent quarters and everybody was satisfied.

The excursions on the bay yesterday by steamer Niagara were not very successful owing to other attractions in the city, but this morning at 10 she carried a large number to the cemetery and for a sail up the bay.

A few craft decorated with Chinese lanterns were sailing about the harbor last night during the band concert, making a pretty scene.

It was unfortunate that pickpockets were in evidence here yesterday afternoon. Two gentlemen were relieved of their wallets, one losing $20 and the other $65. The thieves took place in the vicinity of the G. T.R. station, when a crowd were leaving at 5 o'clock.

A gentleman who has made himself very popular by his courtesy and geniality while here is Mr. C. C. Howlett, special agent of the Eastern Canada Passenger Association who was engaged in the task of validating the tickets of returning old boys and girls. Many bouquets are being thrown in Mr. Howlett's direction these days.

Exactly 1300 visitors to the Reunion registered on coming into Toronto. What's the matter with the Toronto Old Boys?

Mr. J. S. H. Flint again proved his claim to the title of the best marshal and director of a parade Belleville ever had. The arrangement of all the details of the procession were in his hands, and how well he succeeded in his efforts could be seen yesterday afternoon.

In fact all the members of the various committees have done nobly, and, for fear that people will have forgotten them we will publish their names, together with the officials of the Reunion. Here they are:

Hon. President—Hon. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C.M.G.

Hon. Vice-Presidents—His Worship the Mayor, Charles N. Sulman, Esq.; C. M. Stork, Esq., President of the Board of Trade; J. Corby, Esq., M.P.; Thomas Hitchie, Esq.; E. Guss Porter, Esq., M.P.P.; W. B. Northrup, Esq., M.P.; J. M. Hurley, Esq., ex-M.P.

Indigestion.

There is no sense in wasting words about indigestion. We know that it causes terrible suffering. The dull, darting pains are enough to drive one mad. What a sufferer would give to be free from the pain to stop. He wants to be well and happy once again. One way to get relief and to cure of indigestion is by taking Dutch. It goes to the very seat where the trouble lies. Takes effect after you eat. Then two or three at bedtime and you're cured. It will neutralize the condition of the stomach and give gratifying relief. It will sweeten your breath, will overcome and banish pain. Dutch is guaranteed. Take one, their doubting does not change the fact. Dutch is a doctor for ten cents.

BOYS' BLOUSH SUITS.

Nothing more becoming to the average small boy has ever been devised. For summer wear the Blouse Suit is particularly appropriate. Quick-A-Robertson have about 200 of these Blouse Suits in serges, fancy vists and worsteds, ranging in price from 75c to $7.50. These goods are being sold for below their intrinsic worth and are all this season's productions.

DANGEROUS GERMS IN SUMMER.

STRENGTHEN THE STOMACH WITH MI-O-NA AND KEEP WELL.

A wealthy philanthropist in New York spends thousands of dollars every summer providing milk for the babies, with the result that the mortality is greatly decreased. He appreciates the fact that disease germs are common in the summer and that the stomach must be kept healthy to resist their attacks.

Other people do not live on a milk diet to insure health, but they can so strengthen the stomach and digestive organs by the use of Mi-o-na that they too, will be free from sickness in the summer season.

Mi-o-na restores complete health to the whole system and cures headaches, back-ache, sleeplessness, pains and distress after eating, vertigo, heart-burn, and the general debility which result from a weak stomach and imperfect digestion.

A guarantee to refund the money if Mi-o-na does not show help, is given with every 50 cent box. Ask J. S. McKeown to show you the guarantee.

DEATH.

CORNSELL—At Belleville, on Monday, July 24th, 1905, Mrs. Sarah Cornsell, wife of George Cornsell, aged 56 years.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon, 26th inst., from the family residence, Brassey street, at 2.30. Services at the house at 2 o'clock.

TO STOP A CRYING BABY.

Babies cry because they are sick. The way to cure is by the stomach, colic or cramps—but in any case a few drops of Nerviline soothes away the distress and allows the baby to sleep peacefully. Where there are small children there should also be Nerviline. It cures all the minor ailments just as promptly as the doctor and not so expensive. For nearly fifty years Polson's Nerviline has been the great household remedy of Canada. Sold everywhere in large 25c bottles.

IS YOUR CATARRH ANY BETTER?

Probably getting worse all the time. Why not try a new remedy? What do you suppose folks here care whether you was born on this farm or some other farm? There is only Catarrhozone, Mr. Greeley, and don't you forget it!"

BOOK BINDING

Orders for rebinding should be left at the intelligencer Office. A volume can be made of those magazines, even though they are somewhat soiled from mishandling. Books, magazines or periodicals bound or rebound in any style at very reasonable prices. Blank books, such as journals, ledgers, day books with any kind of ruling, made to order. All work warranted first-class.

Our Souvenir Book

has "caught on" wonderfully and is going with a rush. On every hand we hear it highly commended on the completeness, the handy size, the neat finish and the perfect lay out of the book. Nothing has been left out, everything which has been included could very well have been left out; "complete and perfect" fairly describe it. Already we are hearing from old Bellevillians in other places, in terms of unstinted praise. You should have it—a copy for yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting reminder of the great Reunion, and we have planned. It is a fountain pen—that daily accessory—and is appropriately named "The City of Belleville." If a regular $2.00 pen, fully guaranteed. We only have a gross—144 pens—and secure a bargain. They will not be on sale until Saturday, and then for three days only—Saturday, Monday and Tuesday. We place them on sale at half-price—a $2.00 pen for $1.50.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Well, good-by Jim. Take care of yourself.

It will seem rather quiet in the old town to-morrow.

Fold up the flags carefully. We may need 'em for Labor day.

"Happy to meet, sorry to part, happy to meet again."

No wonder the city was gay yesterday. There were nearly a dozen visiting newspaper men in town.

Congratulations to everybody who had anything to do with the Reunion of 1905. You did us proud.

Any Belgian workman who is over sixty-five years old and has less than $70 a year income is entitled, on demand, to an old-age pension of $12.50 a year. Any Canadian workman who should ask the Laurier Government for an old-age allowance would be laughed at.

Really fireproof buildings are coming at last. The latest New York hotel contains no wood except the door sidings, which are chemically treated for fire resistance, and a strip half an inch in length, necessary to tack the carpets to. With asbestos doura, mutal-covered furniture, and elaborate, appliances for announcing fire and turning on water, perfect safety is thought to have been reached.

A correspondent of a London paper lists a plaintive wail against extravagant vacations. He would return to the old-fashioned summer outing. There is no such thing as rest in the way a great many spend their holidays in these merry-go-round times. Long trips to overcrowded resorts are not only costly but wearing to all but the strongest. Hundreds of people in this city take trips far from home who do not know one-half the rural scenic beauties of Hastings county.

Bleebeard.

"Who was the original Bleebeard?" asks a writer in the London Chronicle. He continues: "We owe the familiar Bluebeard of the pantomime to Charles Perrault, the Frenchman who published in 1696-97 his immortal stories of 'Bluebeard,' 'The Sleeping Beauty,' 'Little Red Riding Hood' and 'Cinderella.' But it is very uncertain who, if anybody, was Perrault's model for Bluebeard. Some have supposed that it was our Henry VIII., others that the tale is a humorous upon the custom of knight errantry many in general. Perhaps the favorite candidate has been Gilles de Laval, marshal of France, who was hanged and burned in 1440 for an awful series of crimes. During fourteen years he was believed to have kidnaped about 150 children, tortured them, sacrificed them to the devil, burned their bodies and buried the ashes in his castle grounds. But the resemblance between his tale and Bluebeard's is too slight to be convincing."

An Unmarried Widow.

It would appear that the high standard of happiness of at least one African widow in Manhattan had reached high water mark. Among the daily advertisement published a few days ago:

Widow, colored, age 24, with high school training, excellent accident record, desires a husband same age or younger; awful automobile fiend; owns machine herself; never been married. Address WIDOW.

The following personal, printed in a metropolitan newspaper the other day, deserves a class by itself;

A European gentleman wishes to meet an American who is the typical daughter of old King Cole, with complexion of cream spiced with the bold frankness of unconventionality, the enthusiasm of expression, the merry cheerfulness of superiority, the psychical and physical alertness of those of tomorrow: the worldly independence of this present must be qualified with the gentleness of that which is to come, with matrimony.

FESTINA LENTE.

Knives For Brides.

The custom of giving knives to brides was formerly a common practice, when it was fashionable for women to wear knives sheathed and suspended from their girdles. A wedding offered an opportunity of presenting something novel or ornamental in the cutlery line, and frequent reference to such presents occurs in the plays of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. In the "Witch of Edmonton," 1048, for instance, the bride is described as wearing "the new pair of Sheffield knives, fitted to her mouth." A list of trinkets usually worn by ladies about 1600 includes girdles, knives, purses and pin cases. In Dekker's "Match Me In London," 1631, the bride says to her jealous husband:

"See, at my girdle hang my wedding knives;
With these dispatch me."

The first test of a truly great man is humanity.

Tale bearers are as bad as tale makers.

A DOG IS ALWAYS HONEST.

He Can't Growl and Wag His Tail at the Same Time.

"There is one peculiar thing about dogs," remarked a well known local fancier and huntsman, and that is you never saw one pant and wag his tail at the same time. A dog is not capable of a double emotion. He can't growl and wag his tail at the same time, for it is impossible for him to be glad at one end and glad at the other.

"If a dog is glad to see his master he will bark and wag his tail. If he wants to get into the house he will paw at the door, whine and wag his tail, but they are all symptoms of gog and the same ideas. But if his master gives the door he will cease to show anxiety immediately by whining and will show pleasure only by the wagging of his tail.

"In order to get a man's temper one must watch his eyes, but for a dog's one have to watch his tail. The dog is likewise incapable of deceit, and hence he is nothing of a politician. He deceives no one, not even his master. If he is overjoyed every emotion is indicative of that fact, and his whole makeup gives ample testimony to it. If he is displeased or angered it is the same way."

A Double Presentation.

John Kendrick Bangs once ran across a gift copy of one of his books in a secondhand bookshop, still having this inscription on the fly leaf: "To his friend, G., with the regards and the esteem of J. K. Bangs, July, 1890." Mr. Bangs bought the copy and sent it to his friend G. with a second inscription beneath, "This book, bought in a secondhand bookshop, is respectfully sent to G. with renewed and reiterated regards and esteem by J. K. Bangs, December, 1890."

The Same Thing.

"What makes you think you have great business ability?" laughed the successful business man. "Why, you've never made a dollar!"

"But you forget, dear," replied his energetic wife, "that I made you!"

Playing Indians.

Mamma—Playing Indian is so rough. Why are you crying? Have they been scalping you again? Spotted Panther, alias Willie—No, mamma. We have been smoking the pipe of peace.

The Miserable Moors.

The lives lived by the Moors are, without a perhaps or exception, the most precarious and miserable that can be imagined. They pour mail in from prison for sums he never possessed and can never pay, the rich to be squeezed as he possesses, while those only can hope to escape who are members of families sufficiently powerful to arouse fears of the local governor should he attempt extortion and not sufficiently powerful to stir up the jealousy of the sultan. Even the governors of the provinces suffer because they make efforts and suffer, for just as they squeeze the agriculturist and the peasant so are they squeezed by the sultan and his viziers, and should they fail by constant presents to maintain a good opinion at court the sack can expect only imprisonment and often death.

The Only One of Its Kind.

On an evening somewhere about the end of the nineteenth century a traveler from Sweden might have been observed at the door of the Rose theater in London. He was going in to see a new piece called "Titus Andronicus," and in order to follow it in the native language he bought a copy of the play, price sixpence, at the theater door. When he went back to Sweden he took the book with him to show his wife and friends what strange stuff the foreigners delight in. 200 years it was preserved and in 1904, being discovered in the home of a countrywoman, was transferred by her to the Lund university. The book is the only one of its kind known to exist.

Matchmaking In France.

A recent news says of the commercial side of matchmaking in France: "In most French marriages money plays the important part. The first question asked by the young man is, 'How much?' As a rule, it is an easy matter to ascertain what the lady's dowry is, whether it is payable down directly to the papa, but even when no question of dowry is raised at the formal demand there is always a contract drawn up by a notary, which specifies the exact sum the girl receives."

A Man of Credit.

A distinguished Irish lawyer, always in impoverished circumstances, once took Chief Justice Whiteside to see his magnificently furnished new house in Dublin.

"Don't you think," he said, with a complacent look about, "that I deserve great credit for this?"

"Yes," the judge answered dryly, "and you appear to have got it."

Alas!

THE suit I got but yesteryear
And have so little worn
To rummage sale is doomed, I fear;
It's gone!

Of dignity all shorn.
The coat too tight, the vest too low,
The trousers here too wide
And there too narrow—long ago
'Twas labeled "countrified!"

My auto—ah, my auto fine,
But lately bought and mine!
When I regard its gauche design
I swear I'm quite ashamed
With exclamation points galore
The catalogues contain
To show how model nineteen-four
Is ranked by nineteen-five!

My camera was scarce in hand
And settled was the bill
Before I saw that the brand
Was changed and bettered still
And work on which a painful while
One dentist bored and grooved
Exchange'd for one in latest style
And said should be removed!

And, oh, my wife, who once I thought
The fairest through all the world I sought
Before herself I found!
Nay, even she I discovered
And I fail for are regret—
A blond she is, and now I read
The fashion is brunette!

Boston.

Boston was originally named Tremount, or Trimountain, from being built on three hills—Beacon, Kopp and Fort hills. In 1630 the court of Charlestown ordered the same changed to Boston. This was the name of a city in England, a contraction of St. Botolph's town, a town in Lincolnshire, which grew up round a famous monastery.

Sunlight and Eyesight.

Sunlight is distinct from sun heat to of benefit to human eyes. Unless refracted from white cliffs or stretches of sand or by other means, it does not cause any impairment of vision. It is the natural provision of the sense of sight and is in harmony with the natural period for work and pleasure—that is, the day. So soon as we introduce artificial light we deal with that which needs caution. A dim light injures vision because the eye alters its shape to receive the feeble rays. On the other hand, a strong artificial light will produce inflammation of the eye [illegible]

LYDIA'S QUORUM

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1905, by Belle Maniates

"Well, Lydky, I'll get you the job if you want it; it's going to be a mighty hard thing to get a 'ccrum,'" I mean Watrous was saying. "You see, that young Wright thinks we ought to have a man. Of course you'll have my vote, but Bill Stiles is always straddlin' a fence, and the last time he talks to gets him. This young feller's highfalutin talk kind of caught Bill's fancy, and he was tottertin', but I took him in hand, and now he's leanin' our way again. I'll stick to him tighter than a brother and keep him away from Wright till mess meetin' is over. It's tomorrow night."

"You are so good, Deacon Watrous," replied Lydia, raising grateful eyes, "and if I get the place I'll do my best to vindicate your choice."

"I'll do it! I can, Lydky," said the deacon.

Lydia Gaston had spent the past summer away from home, and when she returned to the farm she had found the family in a state of gloom. Crops had been poor, a number of cattle had died, and the inevitable mortgage had to be met. Lydia prepared to meet it by teaching in the district school. She had been reasonably certain of securing the position, counting on the deacon and Bill for a quorum, but now this young man, who had followed her to the farm of his uncle, John Wight, and had come to the Corners in her absence, might carry his point of hiring a man to teach.

She simply hid to have the position, and she determined to help Deacon Watrous in his efforts to secure Bill's needed vote. It would be useless for her to appeal to Bill—Weatherrock Bill," as he was called. She resolved to make a bold move and encounter the enemy whom she had never seen.

Hugh Wight was in the sitting room of the old homestead pondering over this same subject of a quorum. When he succeeded to his inheritance he had determined to become a practical farmer and win the esteemed position his uncle had ever maintained in the hearts of the simple country folk. They had laughed at the young man for thinking he could be a farmer, but he had shown them he could learn from them and improve on their methods. They were glad to have his succeed his uncle as a member of the school committee. That seemed to be more in his line.

He had as firm convictions on the educational question as he had on most subjects, and he thought a man more fitted to wrestle with the difficulties of a country school than a woman. He had not seen this applicant, but he did not approve of a young girl who had no preparation or experience in teaching.

In the midst of his cogitations there was a knock at the south door. He opened it to admit a winsome, willowy girl with big, innocent eyes and an artless manner.

"Are you Mr. Wight? I am Lydia Gardner."

He acknowledged the introduction gravely and asked her to be seated. Hugh Wight was not easily susceptible man, and Lydia's beauty only strengthened him in his belief that she was not the appropriate for the position of school teacher at the Corners.

"I am, as you know," she said, "a candidate for the position of teacher. I hear that you are in favor of hiring a man for the place, but I don't suppose you know that I could say would change your opinion. I came to ask you not to insist upon having a male assistant me."

He was somewhat surprised at this frank appeal. He liked directness.

"I'll secure you a board to us," she continued earnestly, "and if I don't get the place it will go very hard with my self, for I have set my heart on it. I'll help him more than you can know."

Hugh felt as if he had been stealing sheep. She did not want the money for fripperies, then, but to help her father. "Fripperies" was the term by my influencing Bill?" he asked.

"It's like this," she explained. "Deacon Watrous is of course for me, and Bill is, too, or would be, if you leave him alone and say nothing about the advantages of having a man, but the last person that approaches Bill has to do it, and they say you have a countenance tongue. The deacon is going to try and keep Bill away from you until the meeting is over, but I didn't care to trust to that, so I came to ask you. I wouldn't presume to ask you to vote for me, but to let Bill alone."

Up to this time the eyes, voice and manner of the young man had not been at all persuasive, but in the hearty peal of infectious laughter that followed her request Lydia caught a spice of appreciation, and some way she derived hope from his amusement.

"The deacon will strike me as rather odd that you should come and show me the way to gain my point and then ask me not to take it."

"Maybe it is," she said wistfully, "but I didn't know what else to do."

He remained in deep study for a moment. He did not like to be influenced by personalities.

"Well," he said abruptly, "I'll not speak to Bill or in his presence about this matter, and I'll waive my objections for this year and vote for you myself, though I still believe a man should have the place."

Two bright spots burned in Lydia's cheeks.

"Thank you. I will now have another incentive to do my best. I shall try to show you that I can fill the position as acceptably as a man. You took incredulous. They all said about here that you, a 'city chap,' could never make a farmer, but you showed them you could. I'll show you I can make a teacher."

He rose and this telling point, Lydia took her departure. Immediately the housekeeper came in and expressed her approval of Wight's concession.

"Lyddy's a smart gal, and for all her purty looks and baby way she's got a master lot of grit, Lyddy has, an' didn't have it. He used to be a professor, and he's edicated Lyddy. She's been workin' to get something the next night Lydia received a unanimous vote, and when school opened she was installed as teacher. She made companions of the big boys and girls and pets of the little ones. The composition work was perfectly satisfied. In due course of time Deacon Watrous and Bill Stiles came to board the newcomer at their table. Lydia was fully prepared for this occasion and invited them to question the class. They knew it was to test her questions to ask, and as they had paid many visits to the school the pupils knew the answers by heart. Then Lydia asked them to sing a stirring war song and a hymn. Bill's little girl piped a duet that would be rehearsed beforehand. The two members went away enthusiastic over the new teacher and told Wight so, and he better go and see for himself.

And he did, appearing suddenly and unexpectedly one day at the close of an Indian summer afternoon. Lydia's expression of dismay was quickly changed to appreciation among the older boys. Instead of a reprimand she gave them an implering look that could not be withstood, and order reigned at once. Lydia felt that the visitor had noted the look and interpreted it as a confession of inability to govern.

Just as she was about to call upon the school for a song little Bob Hank let loose a mouse he had carefully confined in his book bag. Excitement prevailed among the girls, and delight among the boys. Had Lydia known that she was to have her pupils' minds all with have done as she did now, jumped up on her chair.

Hugh came the moment threw it out of the window, ejected Bob and his book bag and in stentorian tone restored order. Lydia was down from her chair and in her confusion called upon the arithmetic class to come forward. She was in the act of speaking and resumed at home that day. Arithmetic was not his forte. She planned adroitly to ask him, but the visitor instantly detected the confusion and answered upon the blackboard.

"Like," he asked, "how many times does 9 go in 27?"

The Lydia's dismay Like promptly stepped to the blackboard and commenced a solution via long division, finally putting down "3" as an answer.

"Very again, Like," urged Wight cheerfully.

Like then substituted the figure 6 for 3.

"You've got another guess coming, Like."

The boy looked bewildered, and Lydia desperately came to his rescue.

"Like, won't it go three times?" she asked insinuatingly.

Like looked at her seriously.

"Why, yes," he agreed slowly, "it will, but it's a dern'd tight squeeze!"

Then came that delightful unconstrained laughter that Lydia had heard once before from Hugh Wight. The school joined with him. The teacher was the first to recover, and thankfully observed it was time for dismissal. She stood at the door until the last scholar was out of hearing. Then she came back to the platform, where Wight still sat and Like lingered.

"Like," she said very earnestly, "I don't bet fault. I never did know nothin' about arithmetic. She's the best teacher we ever had."

This touch of sympathy from the little urchin was the finishing touch to Lydia. Her self control slipped, and her head went down on the desk.

"Like," said Wight, "you did better than I expected. There are lots of things in life more desirable than a knowledge of arithmetic. Run along. Take this dime and go down to the Corners and see what you can get."

The boy sped happily away. Lydia raised her head. A little gleam of anger and defiance flashed through the tears.

"You can send and get a man teacher or boy if you want to. I am glad I am not a man."

"So am I, Lydia," he said heartily, with such emphasis that the dark eyes that the slender hand of the schoolteacher went up in a pathetic little way to her eyes.

"I am your 'quorum,' you know," he said whimsically, but with a new softness still in his voice, "and I didn't come to inspect the school nor the arithmetic, but to take the teacher driving. Will she go?"

Her hands came quickly down from her eyes, and she answered him smiling away in a glow of pleasure.

"Yes," she replied, "I will go."

The New England Kitchen.

There is a kind of sentiment about the kitchen in New England—a kind of sentiment not provoked by other rooms. Here the farmer drops in to spend a few minutes in the morning, back from the barn or field on an errand. Here in the warm, clean, sweet, comfortable place, the busy housewife lives, sometimes rocking the cradle, sometimes nursing a sick or allow bowl. The children sit on the stove, stringing beans, shelling peas or boiling berries, the cat sleeps on the floor near the wood box and the visitor feels exiled if he stays in sitting room or parlor, for here, where the mother is always busy, is the heart of the "arghouse."—Cetur.

Major Crofoot, The Promoter

The Great American Deadbeat Meets a Humorist and Is Greatly Humiliated.

[Copyright, 1905, by R. B. McClure.]

MAJOR CROFOOT, grand promoter and artful dodger, was seated at his desk and chewing the bit of binding pad, while he wondered where his lunch for that day was coming from, when his office door opened and a middle aged man entered with a smile on his face. The major at once jumped to the conclusion that it was something interest in his scheme to raise sugar beets on the great Sahara desert, and he rose up and extended his hand and said:

"Good morning to you, sir. Pleasant morning. What can I do for you?"

"Yes, it is a pleasant morning. Ha! ha! ha!" laughed the caller as he helped himself to a chair.

"You—you wanted to see me on business, I presume?"

"Yes, on business. Ha! ha! ha!"

"You perhaps want to make an investment?" continued the major, looking more cheerfully as the man had the fires of insanity in his eyes.

MADE HIS HEELS KNOCK OVER THE STOVE AS HE SWUNG AROUND.

"Perhaps I do. Ha! ha! ha! Say, this is a good one."

"You must excuse me, sir, if I fail to catch on."

"Oh, the catching on is easy enough. Don't you remember me, major?"

"I am sorry to say that I do not. Have you ever invested with me?"

"Have I? Have I? Ha, ha, ha! That is a good one."

"My time is very much occupied, sir."

"Yes, I know. That's another good one. Excuse me, major, while I gurgle."

He gurgled and chuckled and slapped his leg for half a minute, while the major studied his features. All of a sudden his identity was revealed.

"So you remember me?" asked the man as he saw the trouble in the major's face. "Yes, I am Green. We used to room and board in the same house. Yes—ha, ha, ha!"

"So this is Green," mused the major as he sent out his hand—"the dear old friend of other days? How on earth could I have failed to recognize your identity at once? You will excuse me, I know. By George, I was just thinking of you at the moment you entered!"

"Not a dumb of it, major—not a dumb. Funny, isn't it? Ha, ha, ha!"

"My dear old hilarious boy, I am glad to see you once more, and nothing in my life in such spirits. The last time I heard of you they said you had gone to Mexico and were running a mine."

"Did they? Ha, ha, ha! Say, that is funny; that is funny!"

And the major threw himself back in his chair with such force as to carry away the back. It took him quite a full minute, and there were tears in his eyes as he finally straightened up and said:

"You are the same dear old deadbeat and liar, and you ought to have a medal. How many times have you got on hand just now? You don't look as prosperous as you might, sir."

Mr. Green wiped the face of the starvation. When you finally recognized me your face became as white as a sheet, and you tried your best to swallow your Adam's apple. This is as good as ever a funny time."

"Mr. Green," began the major, trying to look very serious, "I was not always a millionaire."

"No? Ha, ha, ha! Keep it up, major!"

"There was a time, and that not far distant, when I lacked the wherewithal to buy a meal, I, who had a good education and determination, but no money. One day you came to me and offered me a loan of $25. Never to be paid—"

"I came to you? I offered you a loan, of $5? Say, major, laugh with me—ha! ha! ha!"

"Never in my life shall I forget your unexpected kindness. You knew nothing about me, but you saw honesty and integrity in my looks, and something told you that you could trust me. I accepted it in the spirit tendered. That loan laid the foundations of my fortune. All I have I owe to you, and I am free to say so."

"All you have!" shouted Mr. Green as he looked around at the office furniture. "Say, major, you grow funnier by the minute. You will next be offering to repay the loan—ha! ha! ha!"

"Had I known where to reach you the loan would have been repaid years ago. As it is, I shall not content myself with handling you a check for the amount. Mr. Green, have you ever heard of the Great American Interchangeable I'e company?"

Mr. Green stood up and laughed. Then he leaned against the wall and laughed. Then he sat down and sniggered.

Our object is to make the American [illegible] of the greatest value [illegible] appreciated. No other nation ever built itself up on pie. It is the pie, sir—the American pie—that made the world. My company proposes to make them by the billion and ship them to every inhabited spot on the globe from the 1st of October to the 1st of March of every year we shall [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] premiums and two cruises in every pie, our trademark plainly stamped on the upper crust, and all persons counterfeiting it will be arrested at once. How many pies can you contain in your own wooden dish, and 10 cents will buy one in Persia as well as in Chi-

"Stop, major, now—ha! ha! ha!" roared Mr. Green as he laughed till he was red in the face.

"Post March 1 to Oct. 1," continued the major, without turning a hair, "we shall send out custard, peach, cherry and lemon pies. The price will be the same, and they will give the same satisfaction. The capital is $2,000,000, you said in, and the stock is already selling above par. Biggest, grandest, biggest pie ever made on the face of the earth. The dividends will reach 100 per cent in the first six months. Don't touch Standard Oil—don't deal with the pie trust. Come into the Great American Interchangeable Pie company. That is all."

"That is, you want me for vice president at a salary of $25,000 per year?" interrupted Mr. Green.

"You have struck it exactly. Several years ago you loaned me $5. It was bread cast upon the waters. I want it to return a hundredfold to you. I want you to know and feel in your mind that the sentiment of gratitude still beats in the human breast. Accept the place, my dear old friend—accept it, and let me shake your hand in congratulation."

"Are you through, major?" was asked.

"Well, you can tell me what you will do. If you have a better thing on hand, why, I have nothing to say, but you know I would like to have you with me."

Mr. Green smiled. Then he grinned. Then he chuckled. Then he roared and slapped his leg.

"And the dividends can't be less than 100 per cent after the first six months," solemnly asserted the major, who was a good deal troubled in his mind.

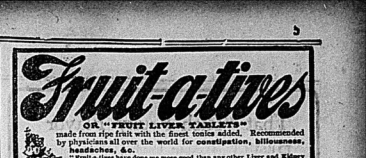

"You slick deadbeat! You noble old liar! You beneficent old baldheaded son of a gun!"

"I do not understand you, sir."

Then Mr. Green rose up with a smile on his face and reached out for the major and made his heels knock over the stove as he swung him around. The second swing cleared the desk, and the third raised the plaster all along one wall. Then the major was stood on his head, stood on his feet, danced up and down and played pitch and toss with, and when he was finally left lying on the dusty floor Mr. Green passed out of the office without a "Ta ta, major. The Great American Interchangeable Deadbeat company wishes you a good day!"

The major got up after a few minutes and brushed the dust off and set up and hummed merrily to himself. He had lost everything but honor, but that was as safe as the rock of Gibraltar.

FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Timely Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

VITALITY IN MILK.

The most important work of a public natures which, in my opinion, will operate to effect the interest of the owners of Holstein cattle, is the promulgation of a better knowledge among consumers of milk, of the dietetic value of the grade of milk produced by our cows. It is a well-known fact that the offspring of those breeds of cattle whose milk is rich in butter-fat are reared with the greatest difficulty. Such offspring seem to be deficient in vitality, and especially subject to stomach and bowel troubles, which are fatal in many cases; and it is now being more generally recognized by physicians and consumers that milk rich in butter-fat is an improper food for young children, and is deleterious in its effects, and produces generally the same effects in human beings as in animals.

These results are now said by scientists to be due to several causes, and primarily to the excess of fat in milk, and in the case of children, particularly are probably also due to the extraordinary character of the fatty globules, which, in these small breeds of cattle are extraordinarily large and entirely unlike those in Holstein milk, which they correspond with human milk in its solid contents.

It is also becoming widely recognized that the milk from the large and vigorous races of cattle, especially Holsteins, possesses another quality, characterized by Professor Carlyle as vitality, and that this quality is communicated to the consumer whether man or beast. Thus we have large, strong, vigorous calves when reared on Holstein milk, and gamy, weak ones from those reared on milk rich in butter-fat; and human beings fed upon milk possessing the same characteristics of Holstein milk are likewise healthy, strong and vigorous.

Prof. Carlyle is right in affirming that "there is such a thing as vitality in milk, and that it is of equal, if not greater, importance than its chemical composition, especially for the milk supply of cities, and there can be no question but that the vitality of milk is largely associated with the vitality of the animal producing it."—A. A. Cortelyou.

AGRICULTURAL ITEMS.

Butter Wound in Irish Bogs.

A decided curiosity in the dairy line is a lump of butter weighing over twenty pounds found in a peat bog in Ireland, which it is supposed to have lain anywhere from one hundred to a thousand years, yet it appeared quite fresh when dug out. It was found four feet under the surface, and appeared as if it had been dropped there while being carried to market. That in the days when the summer made butter was buried in this way and then forgotten.

New Potatoes From Old.

Certain English dealers were surprised at the appearance of a lot of potatoes on the market extremely early in the season, also at the toughness of the skins. On investigation it was found that the tricky producers had buried some old potatoes in the soil for some time, thus freshening them up and improving their complexion so that they were able to pass for new potatoes, although not of first quality.

Success With The Cabbage.

For club root in cabbage sow lime broadcast at the rate of seventy-five bushels per acre before plant-ing, and harrow in, or avoid using diseased land. Destroy wild mustard and charlock, as these weeds will harbor the disease. For aphis spray with soapsuds or kerosene emulsion. For maggots cut circular pieces of tarred paper about three inches in diameter, cut a slit in each from centre to circumference and place one of these pieces about the stem of each plant at time of transplanting, or spray with carbolic acid emulsion. For cabbage worm spray with paris green and flour mixture when the plants are small; later with insect powder or hot water. When the caterpillars first appear hand picking may be resorted to.

Roots For the Pig.

Wherever roots are used as part of their rations, quite remarkable results are obtained, apparently out of all proportion to the feeding value of the roots. This seems to show that the roots serve to render other food more digestible. Although pigs will eat turnips raw, yet when the turnips are cooked, and mixed with raw potatoes or cabbage, they will eat them readily. When a small amount of tansy is fed with this mash, good gains are made.

A Good Stock Tonic.

Each of the many stock foods, or condimental spices now on the market, has its own particular composition, and it is butter, both from the points of view of economy and cleanliness, to make use of these, but if this is quite impossible the following recipe may be safely adopted: Tumeric, one-half pound; cumin, one-half pound; gentian, three-fourths pound, ground ginger, one-half pound; grains of paradise, one-half pound; bi-carbonate of soda, 6 ounces; fenugreek, 6 ounces; black pepper, 6 ounces; sulphur, 5 pounds; fine salt, 1 3-4 pounds. The above ingredients should be well ground by the druggist and be thoroughly mixed with one thousand pounds of finely ground meal. When mixed with meals most the quantity to be fed to a horse, cow, or ox at each feed is one pint, and to each calf, foal, sheep or hog, half a pint. When fed without a meal it should be given 6/8 the proportion of a tablespoonful to a horse, cow or ox, and half that quantity for each of the smaller farm animals.

POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

The Ostrich, a Transplanted Race.

Like the negroes and from the same locality ostriches have been transplanted to this country and to thrive as well in their original habitats. California and Arizona contain the majority of American ostriches at this writing, though there are several ostrich farms elsewhere; Florida, North Carolina and Arkansas have some also.

At present, fowls are derived by their exhibition to the public by the interested proprietors as much and perhaps more than from the sale of the creatures or their beautiful feathers; in Africa it is from the latter income is derived and large fortunes have been made in the last forty years in this industry.

One ostrich farm proprietor in California receives some thirty thousand dollars a year from admission fees alone, but he has so beautified his ostrich farm with tropical foliage, fountains and aviaries that, as a garden in a comparative desert, it is almost worth the twenty-five cents admission charge with the ostriches left out.

The largest American ostrich farm is located at Phoenix, Arizona; here are found more ostriches than are contained in all the other American farms put together. This institution is a genuine one, after the manner of the German ones, established for the production of ostrich feathers, and not merely a show farm for the delectation of tourists. It was established by a theatrical manager, who dreamed of the wealth accruing the entire American ostrich population and establish a trust, by which all American women would have to come for their supply of American ostrich feathers. He was called away prior to the realization of his dream, and his widow now presides over a comparatively great success in attained; a thousand ostriches are there maintained in the flocks, many sold to other ostrich farmers who enjoy a retail market, and to its branch at San Jose, Cal., not far from San Francisco, which has been established within the last two years. It is now too late to establish such a monopoly, and the American people will enjoy ostrich feathers in a few years at a cheaper rate than ever before in the duty added by the British Government on the export of all African ostrich feathers to this country. The smallest American ostrich farm contains seven, and the largest more than a thousand ostriches, as we have so far observed. The smallest farms are in California, located at San Diego and Pasadena; the proprietor of one of these has become a millionaire in the business; the other a clerk. Seventeen years ago they were rival showmen in California, exhibiting their ornithological freaks to the wandering tourists; through the vicissitudes incident to establishing a new land with a new exotic they both passed, finally with the same result. Both are men of ability and integrity, and both travelled the same path of experience and depression for thirteen long years. In 1899, however, the Panama farmer evolved the theory in his subdued mentality that the ladies of the land would enjoy real California, home-grown, duty-saved ostrich feathers, either because they were patriotic, economical or believed all that was written in magazines. He, therefore, spent a few hundred dollars of remittance money, for he is a "remittance man," that is, a man resident in the country who receives regular remittances from England or elsewhere, interest of invested inherited funds, in magazine advertising space.

Amusement and delight filled his soul at the result; thousands of letters began to arrive from inquiring women resident in all parts of the Union and a valorant of gold to flow into his little sequestered eight-acre ostrich farm. The weary watching of the long years was over, the ostriches no longer required remittance money for their support, and this comforting income, instead of being the mainstay and support of the infant industry, served to help in time of trouble" dwindled into insignificance. Three hundred thousand dollars may safely be considered the annual output of this fortunate exile's mortar. A regiment of women has to be employed in sending the feathers to the anxious customers who have read the laudatory reports of this new American product in the widely circulated magazines; credulous and confiding—woman's nature—they believe they are receiving home-grown American ostrich feathers, whereas they receive what they are probably better than any California feathers, for their former possessors have never been compelled to stand in narrow shoe pens for the inspection of the public, but have roamed the pathless veldt after the untrammeled manner of their species four thousand years ago. It is of record that one of the African farms of one thousand acres in size and contains more than that number of ostriches. The African ostrich farmers receive $9,000,000 a year from the world for ostrich feathers, whereof off-arises pay two million annually.

Among these multitudes of small boxes crossing the sere and rugged mountains daily are certainly California ostrich feathers, about ten per cent. of the demand; but the dramatic result of this novel experiment has been the manufacture of another California boomer, who is now rolling in money and financial power. In due time he will join the Spreckles, Flood, Crocker and Stanford, who have bequeathed such fame to the Golden State and made themselves financially immortal. Not imitating the Presidents Crowns, the long-established rival still pursues the ostrich show business, and for the delight of the army of tourists, as well as vending some fine feathers to the interested, but he is now head chrik in the ostrich department of a street carnival, for this company has acquired interest in his stock and has erected him as the best man to attend to it.

Thus has the race of Struthio camelus become safely and surely established in America, enriching our conservatories on the one and depriving the British of immense profits, and the wastes of Arizona and not except for the enterprise of certain Americans, who conceived twenty years ago the value of Arizona and California excellently adapted to the African ostrich and ostrich feather industry.—U. S. exchange.

SHEEP ENRICH ORCHARDS.

The greatest value of sheep in an orchard is found probably, in their use as a means of keeping the orchards that are bearing. If put in the same somewhat early in the spring and fed a suitable supplementary food with the grass which the orchard may furnish, it will be found that the sheep will thus convey fertility to the land, and they will do so in a marked degree if fed on right kinds of food. Such food may consist very largely of wheat bran, which is in itself a valuable fertilizer. It may be wise to encourage the sheep to eat it freely, to add a little grain with the bran. A little oil cake will also improve the food. The droppings thus left in the orchard will tend very much to its enrichment. The outcome will be that where this system is perserved in, during considerable portions of the season, orchards will be found in the end with a liberal application of fertility. This statement, of course, is based on the supposition that the same proper relation between the numbers of sheep grazed and the area of the orchard.

For Injuries Received

By IZOLA FORRESTER

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

"I am so sorry," said the girl.

"Don't mention it," responded Stafford.

"Are you badly hurt? Can you stand up?"

Stafford made an effort to rise. It was curious. There was no particular pain, but so far as any usefulness or sense of feeling went he might as well have had no legs at all.

"I don't believe I can," he said. "It's awkward, isn't it? Did you run clear over me?"

"Oh, dear, I don't know! It was the snow, and I was in a hurry. I didn't even know that you were in the road at all until the machine hit you and jumped. It might have gone over you. Just think if I had killed you!"

Stafford looked up at her with contented, speculative interest. He was bruised-bad. His left leg about a hundred feet down the road—at least what there was left of it. There did not seem to be much snow on his body. He wondered if she had been holding his head in her lap.

"Don't think of it. It isn't pleasant. Anyway, it would have been my own fault if I had been. I was trespassing."

"Yes, that's just it!" cried the girl eagerly. "You know these are private grounds, and I never thought for a moment that there could be any one in the road. How did you get past the gates?"

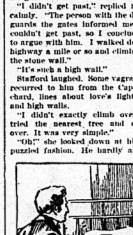

"I didn't get past," replied Stafford calmly. "The gentleman at the gate guards the gates informed me that I couldn't get past, so I concluded not to try to get by him. I walked down the highway a mile or so and climbed over the stone wall."

"It's such a high wall."

Stafford laughed. Some vagrant lineal recurred to him from the Capulet ory, and, lines about love's light wings and high walls.

"I didn't exactly climb over it. I tried the nearest tree and dropped over. It was very simple."

"Oh!" she looked down at him in a puzzled fashion. He hardly appeared

"WE WANT YOUR VIEW ON THE STRIKE QUESTION."

to belong to the tramp genus, but his methods were decidedly tramp-like. "Did you walk to see me at the house?"

"Well, I did," Stafford confessed cheerfully. "But they wouldn't let me in, so I was going back by way of the gates this time."

The girl laughed a trifle nervously and drew on her gloves.

"They'll have to let you in this time, because I mean to take you back with me. Lift the gentleman in, please, Andrew."

Stafford managed to suggest something about going to the hotel at Union-port, but would be all right there; he could wire to New York—when the injuries raised him, and with the rush of sudden agonizing pain there came a slipping back into silence and darkness.

The silence remained when he found light again. It was very still. He was lying up at the yellow tinted walls, at the window next his bed. There were yellow curtains at it, and the sunlight came through. There were blossoming daffodils. They looked pretty. He wondered how long he had been engrossed in watching them that he did not notice the girl standing at the half open door, and then entered into the room and she came to the foot of the bed and smiled down at him.

"Was I delirious?" asked Stafford. She laughed.

"You have been bad, haven't you? It was day before, day before, day before yesterday—last Tuesday—"

"Did you send word directly up at her. Last Tuesday? And he should have turned in the interview by Wednesday. "Can't you get me to New York?"

"We couldn't. We didn't know where to wire. You're the prince incog., you know. We don't know a blessed thing about you, who you are or where you came from. It's very interesting."

"So it is," assented Stafford seriously. "May I ask if Mr. Houghton has been here?"

"Oh, yes! He came up the very first thing and said he thought you were all right. We didn't want a Rafles, you know. One must draw the line somewhere. But papa said you were all right, so we kept you. Otherwise he would have sent you to a hospital and settled the damages with you later. As it is, you are here and have daffodils and"—

"No damages."

She laughed at his again.

"Oh, you might even collect damages in spite of the daffodils! What shall I tell papa you want?"

"Tell him I want an interview," said Stafford grimly. "And, say, will you please give me pad and pencil in the inside pocket of my overcoat—no, the other side—thanks. Before he comes up."

When Houghton entered he gave the occupant of the bed a quick, direct look. The girl was behind him. Stafford punched another pillow back of his head and tried to sit up.

"Keep still," said Houghton. "Grace will take your notes for you. Is this what you came after?"

"Yes. From the Record-News, New York." Stafford fumbled weakly to get his old grip on the pencil. "We want your view on the strike situation. The elevated men went out Monday, and the subway followed them Tuesday morning. If the surface men go out it will tie up the whole town. We're by heads the committee of arbitration, but they say you are back of him and want your notes."

Houghton opened his mouth to speak and shut it again as he looked down at the white, disgraced young face on the pillows. When he left the room half an hour later Stafford held eleven pages of notes, and the girl had taken down for him. It was the broadest interview old Houghton had ever given out to any newspaper. Stafford smiled faintly at the daffodils and thought first of what Curtis would say and, second, of how the bright hat danced and flickered around a certain girl's blond head as she sat at the foot of the sleeping couch.

It was six weeks before he left Brakesmere. He had not noticed the time. It was the first interview he had dropped over the stone wall. It was April before he wrote the Record-News that he was on his way south again.

Houghton went himself to the station with him. The two men had passed many a comradely ten minutes together during the convalescence period. It made things a little easier for Stafford as he told Grace and the promise he held from her.

"It's all right, Tom," said Houghton. "Nothing to say at all. I've got six of them married, and this makes seven everything from a broker to a duke. I am inclined to compliment Grace on her choice. Ought to be one of the best of them, especially the duke. He's having no damages at all. Speak about that interview, you left out one important feature. You wanted my views on the arbitration question, didn't you, and you thought I was holding Bixby back on the arbitration?"

"Well, weren't you?" demanded Stafford.

"My boy, that strike was arbitrated and settled and called off the night Grace ran you down with her auto. But you can't expect your boss in town all the same. That was the only interview I gave out, and it clinched Bixby's stand. It is because your damages are about settled, eh?"

Stafford smiled, but he was thinking of a girl and a young man in daffodils in the garden, her face upraised to his.

"Sealed in full for injuries received," he said.

What They Might Have Done.

A good story is told of two young Englishmen traveling in Europe. They had never been outside of England and of the languages commonly spoken on the continent and were particularly weak in their French, knowing that language well enough by sight, but not having a speaking acquaintance with it.

Finding themselves in a small French town one evening, they were desirous of obtaining a cup of coffee and coffee. Knowing that cafe was coffee and that latt was milk, they endeavored to call for a publication of the latter kind, but their articulation was of so remarkable an order that they succeeded only in getting the coffee. Call an latt they tried without success. Then du lay-it was attempted unsuccessfully. Another suggestion that latt might be pronounced "light" was adopted equally in vain.

Finally in despair one of the struggling youths exclaimed:

"Well, it's mighty queer we don't know enough to get a little drop of milk!"

"You want milk?" asked the waitress, opening her mouth for the first time.

"Oui, oui!" stammered the travelers, overwhelmed with surprise.

"Then why didn't you say so at latt?" queried the girl as she flounced off.

And again the young men didn't know.—London Tit-Bits.

A Plasterist and Mr. Howells.

"When W. D. Howells," said a publisher, "was the editor of Harper's, a young man of humble and rough exterior one day submitted personality to him a poem.

"Mr. Howells looked over the poem. Then he said to the young man:

"'Did you write this poem yourself?'

"'Yes, sir,' was the reply in a youth nasal.

"'I still think it is magnificent,' said Mr. Howells. 'Did you compose it unaided?'

"'I certainly did,' said the young man firmly. 'I wrote every line of it out of my own head.'

"Mr. Howells rose and said:

"'Then, Lord Byron, I am very glad to meet you.' The young man under the impression that you had died at Missolonghi a good many years ago.'"—New York Tribune.

Smart Dressers

Young men are, as a general thing, the smartest dressers.

The up-to-the-moment young man is a sort of a lexicon of clothes, style and correctness. He knows what's what and gets it.

But good fit, the newest colors, patterns, etc., aren't enough, for unless that snappy, gaunty appearance—characteristic of our excellent Tailor-Made Clothing is there, it isn't what the young man wants.

Our success in pleasing young men is not just "luck." It's due to our knowledge of what the young man wants and our

Ability to Provide It for Him

Then again our prices are always reasonable—Suits at $5, $8, $10, $12 and $15, that will at once appeal to the swell young dresser.

Did you ever notice how many young men come here for clothes? There's a reason for it.

Monday One of Greatest Days in City's History.

Festivities Reached the Crest of the Wave Yesterday—The Big Procession—A Notable Scene on Front St.—Ladies' "At Home" at St. Agnes' School—Delightful and Informal Function—Reception and Concert in the Opera House at Night—Bright Musical Features—Happy Speeches by Old Boys and Others—An Address to the Kiltles on the Park—Notes of the Day.

The Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 will soon be a thing of the past, and there is no exaggeration in saying that the whole matter may be summed up in one expressive phrase—a grand success.

If the visitors have not enjoyed their visit to Belle ville it has not been the fault of the executive committee or the citizens of Belleville, who have done all in their power to give their guests "the time of their lives." The glad hand has been outstretched in all directions, and has been heartily received in the spirit in which it was offered. Nothing has occurred to mar the festivities. The weather man has been kind and all has gone smoothly. Now, with the last of the visitors ready to take train or boat for their homes, and with men waiting to pull down the decorations, it is pleasant to think on these things. Let us hope that too many of us will not have passed out of this beautiful spot on the shores of the bay before the scenes and festivities of July, 1905, are repeated.

Monday Afternoon and Evening

THE PROCESSION WAS THE "GREATEST EVER."

The greatest feature of the Old Boys' Reunion, of course, was the procession. Everybody likes a procession. What is life but a procession, anyhow? And what a time the people had waiting for that procession on Monday afternoon! There were many false starts, but at last, at 2 o'clock, they cry went up, "Here they come," and sure enough it turned out to be true. Long before this the people were lining the sidewalks on Front St., and the windows and every couch and stoop was occupied. And what a jolly crowd it was! Old men and children, young men and maidens, all were there, all laughing and talking loudly, and all agreeing that old Belleville had never had so many glad tugs on before. But let's get back to the procession. Here comes Magistrate Flint, the marshal, and an imposing figure he is, too. Following was the order of procession behind him:

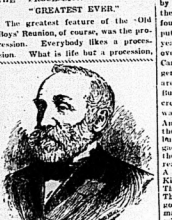

Police
I. O. O. F. Band
Executive Committee of Reunion
City Council
Board of Education
Separate School Board
Belleville Board of Trade
Company "The Queen's Own"
Fifteenth Bugle and Drum Band
Fifteenth's Colors, escorted by Private Gallagher, Sergt. Hughes and McCoy, South African Veterans, Clothed in Khaki.
Company of Fifteenth
Canton Militant, I. O. O. F.
Queen's Own Bugle and Drum Band
Toronto Belleville Old Boys
St. Thomas' Boys' Brigade
Deseronto Band
Old Boys From Everywhere.
Killbuck Band of Belleville
Cheese Board of Trade

Next came a number of floats, representing

A Cheese Warehouse
March & Henderson's Foundry, depicting the making of a Boiler
Rattan's Blacksmith Shop
The Canadian Coal Company's Parade.
The Downey Coal Company's Parade
Belleville Hardware Co.'s Float with nurse in attendance.
Ladies of W. C. A. in Ambulance
Private Carriages
The Ritchie Company's float
Dr. Ackerill's Dispensary
Tickell & Sons' float
Reed & Sills' Float.
More girls in decorated wagon, singing "The Maple Leaf."
The "Muddy Day Club" in a carriage.
The Mac Medicine Company's float.
The Madoc Band.
Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.
Juvenile and Senior Sons of England.
T. P. Brown's float.
The Fire Brigade

Mr. Magrath's gaily decorated autos.

The procession was great, and was hugely enjoyed by the crowds. The executive committee of the Reunion marched proudly, like men who had done their duty, which everyone will admit they had. The City Council made a fine appearance. There are no files on the City Fathers. Nay, nay, Pauline! The Board of Education boys stepped out like a lot of colts. They're all good for re-election sure! And the Separate school board! Dressed to kill! Why you couldn't have thrown a brick without hitting a plug hat. And the Board of Trade! Why, to see them step out you'd think the Government had already taken over the Bay Bridge! The Forty-ninth lads marched like veterans and their band—the Fifteenth's Bugle Band was on its mettle, and surprised their best friends by the way they played. The same for Fifteenth's new colors, and the four khaki boys who guarded them put one in mind of the days a few years back of all their names. Perhaps over the news from South Africa. The Canton looked spick and span. The gentlemen in the fore and aft carriages looked fine, sure. The Queen's Own Bugle Band got a hand from the crowd of course, they are deservedly warm favorites with the people. And the Toronto old boys. Hats off to them! They were the warmest bunch in the parade. The Thomas' Brigade of St. Thomas' looked neat and the Deseronto Band headed out a really nice article of marching music. A creditable organization, that. The Killties, of course, looked splendid. There's nothing so showy as the kilts. The different floats were good—very good, in fact, and the pretty little maids singing were just as sweet as the windsong as they could be. The Hospital float was splendid, and came in for much applause, as did also the ladies in the ambulance. The floats of the Ritchie company and Mr. T. P. Brown were very tastefully gotten up, indeed, as, in fact, were all the displays. The Madoc band played on excellent march for the railroad men, and stepped out finely. The Sons of England, headed by two jolly tars, clothed in sailor's uniform, looked very well. The firemen had quite a business-like appearance, and the pretty decorated autos were very creditable. Taken altogether, the parade was one the old town could well be proud of. It will, probably, be long before we see one like it again.

PROCESSION NOTES.

Field Marshal Flint was the "whole cheese."

The Toronto old boys carried the streamers which had been on their trains when they came in, marked "Belleville Old Boys of Toronto." They were a happy bunch, sure.

The most novel part of the parade was not so well represented as it might have been, but the display was excellent, what there was of it.

The national float was prepared by Mr. H. Wrightmyer, and was one of the prettiest features of the parade.

The Hospital float was a beauty. Many envied the chaps in the cot, with the pretty nurse close by to comfort him.

Four prominent ladies of the W.C.A. took part in the ambulance, namely, Mrs. J. J. B. Flint, Mrs. L. W. Yeomans, Mrs. A. Bap and Miss Alice Kay.

Two more tastefully gotten up floats than those of the Ritchie Company and Mr. T. P. Brown it would be hard to conceive.

The three young ladies on the decorated bicycles were Misses Myrtle Davison, Edna Thompson and Mabel Burke. The wheels and their fair riders made a pretty picture.

The automobiles looked very pretty, but "halked" quite a bit. It was lucky they were at the end of the parade and not in the lead.

The route of the procession was up Front street to Tickell's factory, down Pinnacle street to Victoria avenue, up Victoria avenue to Charles street, down Charles street to Bridge street, down Bridge street to Pinnacle street and thence to the market square, where it disbanded.

The executive committee, after leading the procession all along the route, formed up at the top of Taylor's Hill, allowing the other portions of the parade to pass them, and heartily cheering them as they went by.

LADIES' AT HOME AT ST. AGNES' SCHOOL.

One of the most enjoyable and elegant affairs ever seen in Belleville was the "at home" given by the Ladies' Auxiliary on the grounds at St. Agnes' School yesterday afternoon. The weather could hardly be glorious on the fair ladies who had the affair in charge. The function was supposed to open at 3.30, but, so soon as the procession was over, many ladies and gentlemen made their way to St. Agnes'. That was all right, of course, as one of the ladies on the reception committee said, but it rather upset their plans, as they had expected to form up and receive the visitors as they came in. However, "we'll just please," etc., you know. The visitors came, made themselves at home by taking all the chairs in sight, and the ladies of the reception committee gracefully bowed to the inevitable. Mrs. (Col.) Campbell was the convenor of the reception committee, and, as being asked for the names of the ladies who formed the committee, said: "Really, I couldn't think of all their names. Perhaps you had better say that about 100 ladies, besides myself, took part in the preparation of the "at home." So there you are. And the 101 ladies certainly covered themselves with glory. Tables were stationed at intervals on the lawn, presided over by stately married ladies, each assisted by two or three young girls, attired in the daintiest of summer costumes, who provided the guests with lemonade and cake fit for the gods. The different tables were presided over by the following ladies:

Mrs. Mathison, assisted by Misses Helen Vermilyea, Elsie Scarff, of Montreal, and Miss Mathison.

Mrs. Bird, assisted by Miss Susie O'Flynn, Miss Ethel Gorman and Miss Clara Phillips.

Mrs. Waters, assisted by Mrs. Cochrane, Miss McLean and Miss Davis, of Montreal.

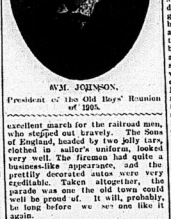

Mrs. McCarthy, assisted by Misses Edna Carson, Madeline Dumble and Ida Conant.

Mrs. Fred Smith, assisted by Misses Ethel Lingham, Eva Phippen and Mabel Palmer.

Mrs. (Dr.) MacColl, assisted by Misses Muriel Benjamin, Edna Hinnmie and Sydna Browne.

Mrs. Robert Bury, assisted by Misses Ella Butler, Bon Davy and Lulu Davy.

The afternoon function was a most informal and delightful affair. Very seldom, indeed, have Belleville people and their guests the opportunity of enjoying such generous and daintily hospitality, coupled with such music as that furnished by the Killties' band yesterday afternoon. The scene was a charming one. The band played under the trees to the west of the school, their showy uniforms, and the pretty costumes of the ladies, combining to make a scene to gladden the eye. And the great band, of course, gladdened the ear of all present. The programme was of the usual order played by the Killties, being popular selections, bright, catchy and pleasurable without being so severely classical as to make people wish they were away. The excellent organization in question seems to have the happy medium in music, a fact which adds greatly to their own popularity and the pleasure of their audiences. As interpreters of descriptive music the Killties certainly rank high. The Scottish dancers and pipers, as usual, delighted everybody. One particularly pleasant number on the programme was given by the Killtie band, it was termed "In the City by the Bay," by Mr. Pierce Kingsley, an old Belleville boy, who, with his charming wife, was present to hear it sung. Miss Vermilyea did the sweet melody full justice, and her number was rapturously applauded and encored. So, amid scenes of beauty, the visitors and old friends and chatted over old times, and the afternoon wore away all too quick. It was nearly 6 o'clock when the last number was played. Many a day, probably, will pass before so delightful a function takes place in Belleville again. To the fair ladies who planned it, to Mrs. Lingham, for the use of her lovely grounds, and to the grand band which furnished such sweet music, all present yesterday afternoon owe a debt of gratitude.

Secretary of the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905.

THE RECEPTION AND CONCERT IN THE OPERA HOUSE.

One of the most pleasant incidents of the Reunion was the official reception to the Old Boys and the concert which took place in the opera house last night. There was a large audience present, and the stage was beautifully decorated. At a few minutes after 8, when the proceedings opened, the seats on the stage were taken possession of by many representative citizens and visiting old boys, among whom we noticed the following: His Worship the Mayor and most of the City Council; Judge Dean, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, E. Gaw Porter, M.P., M. B. Morrison, M.P.P., Col. Ponton, Rev. Messrs. Wilson, Brown, Leitch, Watch, Martin, Adams, Monsignor Farrelly, Rev. Father Twomey, Col. Laxier, Consul Hendrick, Messrs. Thos. Ritchie, C. M. Stork, Thos. Keogh (Utah), R. J. Graham, R. G. Sills, J. M. Hurley, Carl Strom, J. J. B. Flint, R. Mathison, H. F. Gardiner (Brantford), D. Price, Chas. Hoover, H. Cooke (Toronto), W. J. Diamond, Mr. Ostrom (Trenton), A. G. Parker, Burns, Mickel, Hudson, Webster, Bogart, W. R. Beeton, Mardiss, Butler, Carmichael (Toronto) and many others.

Mr. William Johnson, president of the Reunion of Old Boys' Association, was chairman, and seated on his right and left respectively were the Mayor and Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

The chairman apologized for his inability to speak, together with the other members of the committee, had been whooping things up in honor of the visitors, to whom, in the name of the citizens of Belleville, he tendered a "Cead Mille Failthe,' one hundred thousand welcomes. Mr. Johnson then read a number of letters introduced each speaker and singer with apt remarks, and, on the whole did it to perfection. He first of all called on the Mayor to read an address of welcome to Mr. Flint, which, as the chief Magistrate did as follows:

The Mayor's Address.

To say that I am grateful of the honor conferred on me as Mayor of the City of "Beautiful Belleville" in the handling to our Old Boys and Old Girls a hearty welcome home, very feebly expresses my heart-felt pleasure.

Home again. That word, "House," how much it is expressed. There is no word in the English language so significant that breaks forth so many tender, affectionate, longing desires. "Home, sweet home, be it ever so humble there is no place like home."

The history of mankind proves unmistakably the fact that love of home and love of country are blended and have been expressed from time immemorial in the words, "My God, my home, my country." The influence of home and country man has always been ready and willing, if need be, to suffer and die. In short, there is nothing that will give a man more noble courage and inspire him to accomplish undying deeds of valor than love of home.

When the great Nelson was lying dying on the deck of his ship, Victory, he exclaimed, "In honor's cause my life has passed, in honor's cause I look at last, for England, home and beauty."

The Irishman, after roaming in many lands, is impelled to think of home—dear old Ireland is the given expression to his heart's desire "by saying, "No more I wish to roam. Oh erery my bargue be Erin's Isle, for Erin in my home."

And so is the Scotchman "Whose heart hath ne'er within him burned as home his footsteps he hath turned from wandering on a foreign strand,' And the sentiments as expressed by one of Canada's gifted sons, in the words, "As long as in me there is the breath of life, my guiding star, and my only guiding star, shall be, Canada first, Canada last, and Canada always" are freely endorsed by all true and loyal Canadians, "Our hearts, our lives are all with thee, our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears, our faith triumphant o'er our fears are all with thee, all with thee!" Belleville has its local history, and is rich in the history of individuals who have become distinguished in every profession and calling of life. In times of war our boys have proved themselves heroes. Who can forget our flag on the hill at Pretoria? A Belleville boy. Who led the charge at Balaclava? Belleville boys. "Nulli Secundus" (second to none) is the motto of the good old Telford and I think this is our motto.

As statesmen and authors many of Belleville's sons have become noted. Our own Sir Mackenzie Bowell by rising to the highest honor in the gift of the people of our great Dominion has lit a flame that has given to Belleville historic fame. Some have distinguished themselves not not only in the Dominion of Canada, but also in other lands. Have we not good reason to be proud of our

ROUTE SHOULD BE CHANGED.

St. John Valley Said to Offer Better Grade and Trade.

Ottawa, July 24.—The New Brunswick delegation in connection with the route of the National Transcontinental Railway through the Province, met Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. S. Fielding and Hon. H. R. Emmerson, yesterday forenoon. Senator Thompson and Mr. Carvell were the principal speakers.

A petition by F. B. Carvell, M. P., Senator Thompson, Senator Wills, Senator Domville, Senator Wark, G. Turgeon, M. P., James Reid, M. P., and O. J. Leblanc, M. P., was presented to the Government, which set forth that the question to be decided was by which route the greatest amount of traffic could be conducted for a given amount of money. One central route was circuitous in order to obtain the necessary grades. It was contemplated for this purpose by at least forty-five miles between Grand Falls and Chipman, in excess of the actual distance between these points.

On the other hand, the St. John Valley route, which the delegation wanted the Government to adopt, offered a down-grade of two lengths of 1 per cent. going east from Grand Falls to Fredericton, and practically a level grade from thence to Moncton. The local traffic on the valley route would make it a paying investment. To secure the advantages to Canada to be got over Portland, the route which offered the least resistance to transportation, should be selected. The Premier promised to look into the whole question.

Apple Shippers, Take Warning.

Ottawa, July 24.—The Department of Agriculture has received word to the effect that the Government of Cape Colony, South Africa, intends to enforce more strictly the existing regulations against the introduction of apples infected with the disease known as "black spot." Shippers and other exporters of such fruit from Canada are warned that shipments found to be so infected will be liable to confiscation under the provisions of the import regulations.

Norwegian Ship Ashore.

Eureka, Calif., July 24.—The Norwegian steamer Tricolor, Capt. Wold, went ashore yesterday near the Cape Mendocina light. A tug arrived here last night with the entire crew of 27 persons. The steamer lies broadside on the beach among the rocks and is a total loss. Her value is estimated at $200,000.

Armies Seven Miles Apart.

Past Three Months Most Quiet Period of Entire War.

Reconnoitring Parties in Constant Touch, But Losses Are Unimportant—Russian Loss In Friday's Clash 100 Men and a Reverse—Japs Dislodge Enemy from Neighborhood of Puki and Puryong.

Fusan, July 24.—The past three months with little rumbles has been the most quiet period of the entire war. There has been no engagements at the front, the only encounters being those of reconnoitring expeditions sent out by both armies with a small total of losses.

The Russian and Japanese lines are seven miles apart. The Russians maintain a screen of cavalry outposts, some miles in front of their trenches to guard attacks. Reconnoitring forces from both sides traverse the neutral zone, frequently feeling the strength of the others at the front and making a small weekly list of killed, wounded and captured.

The fight reported on Friday was the first worthy of mention, which has occurred east of the railway. Two Russian reconnoitering forces approached the Japanese line, one about twenty miles, the other seventy miles east of the railway. The first contingent consisted of two squadrons of cavalry, the second of the battalion of infantry. Both retired after brief encounters.

Russians Lose 100.

The Japanese sustained no losses, but those of the Russians are supposed to have been nearly 100.

In the first encounter the Russian cavalry, with its front side a thousand metres long, advanced upon the Japanese line until it came under fire, when it retired in confusion and the infantry advanced. The Japanese fired 40 rounds with a captured Russian battery, when the Russians retired, the Japanese following them for ten miles.

Enemy Dislodged.

Tokio, July 24.—An official report from the headquarters of the Japanese army in Northern Corea, says:

"On Monday, July 25, the army succeeded in dislodging the enemy from the neighborhood of Puku and Puryong and occupied a line to the orthward."

Reinforcements For Linevitch.

St. Petersburg, July 24.—Reinforcements for Gen. Linevitch are steadily being forwarded. Thirteenth army corps, the headquarters of which are at Smolensk, will leave for the front next week.

MODEST INDEMNITY ONLY.

Peace Truly Wanted Says Spokesman of Japanese Plenipotentiaries.

New York, July 24.—That Japan will demand an indemnity from Russia, in the negotiations for peace, and that the war will be declared at an end at the conclusion of the negotiations at Portsmouth, N. H., next month, is the belief of Baron Komura, head of the Japanese peace mission, as voiced by Almar Sato, official spokesman for the baron. The party arrived here yesterday.

Mr. Sato, in an interview last night, said: "I am confident that peace will be successfully negotiated by the appointed delegation. The Japanese will be guided by moderation, and no excessive demands will be made, but the sentiment in Japan and Russia is for peace, and in the interests of humanity and prosperity there must be peace.

"The cost to Japan, however, has been great. On both sides the loss has been $70,000 men, of which Russia lost 370,000. The war is costing Japan one million dollars a day, and there is a feeling that you ought to be an indemnity."

Asked as to the probability of an armistice, Mr. Sato said that that probability would be among the first questions the plenipotentiaries would consider. Based on previous treaty negotiations, Japan will make the demands for Russia's consideration he said. The peace terms were formulated by the Emperor of Japan and his council.

Witte Is Welcomed.

Of the attitude of the Japanese plenipotentiaries toward the Russian delegates, Mr. Sato said: "We admire M. Witte and Baron Rosen. The announcement of M. Witte's appointment was more welcome to us than that of any other person could have been. We recognize him as a great statesman."

Of the future of China, Mr. Sato said: "If the central Government could work in harmony with the district or Provincial Governments, China would become a great power, but at present that seems to be impossible." Japan's attitude toward China was most friendly, and she felt that it was more or less under Japanese protection. This protection, by way of illustration, Mr. Sato said, was "not so strong over China as the protection the United States ex'r South America."

Mr. Sato emphasized the announcement made frequently before, that Japan does not seek territorial aggrandizement, saying: "We want in Manchuria equal opportunity, or what Mr. Hall called "the open door."

Japan Over Populated.

Mr. Sato said Japan is over populated, and that in the opening up of Manchuria and Corea, an attractive field for immigration would be nearer home than those offered in Hawaii or this continent.

Mr. Sato said that while a desire for peace was the sentiment of Japan it was not a desire for peace at any price. "Japan is in a comfortable condition at present," he said, "and the war cannot fail financially to affect the people yet. There has already been subscribed $250,000,000 to a new internal loan, and our people are further indicated in the success of our foreign loans."

America An Ally.

As to Japan's attitude toward America, Mr. Sato said: "You laughingly mean the yellow peril," and then continued enthusiastically: "We are all most loyals in our enthusiasm and friendship for America. While we are friendly with China as orientals, our greatest friends are England and America. We regard America as an ally without a treaty."

Baron Komura and his party arrived at Jersey City early yesterday from Chicago, and proceeded at once to the Waldorf Astoria, where they will be quartered until the baron's departure for Washington. He will be seen only by colleague on the commission, Kogoro Takahira, Minister at Washington.

College Chums.

Oyster Bay, July 24.—Baron Komura, the principal peace envoy of Japan, probably will call on President Roosevelt this week at Sagamore Hill.

Both the president and Baron Kogoro are graduates of Harvard, and, having become personally acquainted with each other several years ago, have some personal matters in common. The call of Baron Komura on the president, if made, will be entirely informal.

Witte's Farewells.

Paris, July 24.—M. Witte yesterday made his parting calls on Premier Rouvier and other Government officials and the diplomatic corps, preparatory to sailing from Cherbourg for New York on the Kaiser Wilhelm de Grosse today.

Cassini Is Quoted Again.

New York, July 24.—Count Cassini, formerly Russian Ambassador at Washington, expresses the opinion, according to The Herald's Paris correspondent, that all now depends on the Japanese, and that if their demands at the coming peace conference are reasonable peace is assured.

RUSSIFICATION OF POLAND.

Polish Better Classes Petition the Committee of Ministers.

St. Petersburg, July 24.—Three hundred leading representatives of the better classes in Poland to-day presented a memorandum to the committee of Ministers appealing against the policy of the Government looking to the Russification of Poland.

Riots in Caucasus.

St. Petersburg, July 24.—Disturbances resulting from strikes are reported from several places in the Caucasus. During a conflict between Cossacks and a mob in Perm the Cossacks fired, killing two and wounding many.

Strike On in Warsaw.

Warsaw, July 26.—Four thousand workmen in the Warsaw Iron Works and 5,000 in the Dombrows Steel Works struck yesterday for higher wages. The striking bakers destroyed a bakery shop in Grochowska street, and in the disturbance which followed one person was killed.

Fell From Moving Car.

Toronto, July 24.—Jumping from a swiftly moving car to catch his hat, which had blown off, Albert Dale of 124 Pandora ave., this morning fell to the pavement yesterday and sustained what may prove to be a fracture at the base of the skull. He was taken to the Emergency and late last night he had not fully regained consciousness. His condition is critical.

Robbed of $3,900,000.

New York, July 26.—Richard Cullen, who said he was president of the Cullen Iron Manufacturing Co. of Duluth, Minn., offers a reward for the recovery of a large pocketbook containing a stock certificate of his company of the face value of $2,500,000. He was laving his face in Battery Park fountain when it disappeared.

TELEPHONE TALKS.

TO TELEPHONE USERS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC.—

The Bell Telephone Company of Canada is a purely Canadian Company.

At the opening of the Parliamentary Committee statements were made by various witnesses, whose ignorance of the facts must be their only excuse, that a very considerable portion of the stock of the Company had been allotted to the American Bell Telephone Company and panies for patent rights which were now valueless and that the burden of paying dividends on such stock represented an annual tax of about $3.60 on every one of the Company's subscribers.

In the evidence before the Committee, both the testimony of the Officers and the complete records of the Company which were produced, proved the absolute falsity of such charges.

The facts are that with a total capital stock of $7,000,000 on the Company's patent account stands at the inconsiderable sum of $70,000, every dollar of which represents not only full value in existing patents, but secures to the Company other important advantages to we shall refer later. For the present we merely emphasize that not one dollar of royalty or tribute is paid by the Company for patent or other rights.

With the exception of a trifling amount of stock issued to the American Company for the acquisition of valuable patent rights essential to the Company's existence at the date of organization, all of which has been written off as such patents expired, not one dollar of stock has been issued for patents.

The stock held by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company has been paid for in cash at or above par and the interest of that Company is purely that of a minority stockholder having no controlling voice in the management or policy of the Canadian Company.

Probably there is no large corporation doing business in Canada to-day of which the sentiment is so thoroughly Canadian as that of The Bell Telephone Company of Canada. It is entirely independent in its management and operations, as well as financially. The Company is officered almost exclusively by Canadians and those holding executive offices have, almost without exception, begun their business career in the service of the Company.

The list of shareholders shows that about eleven hundred persons hold stock in the Company, of whom over ninety per cent. are Canadians.

The Sessional Indemnity

Since the Bill increasing the sessional indemnity was passed Parliament there has been, from all shades of newspapers, a chorus of denunciation of the measure. In some cases the denunciation has been mild, in others it has been as fierce as a mosquito on the lowlands. In contrast to this chorus of execration are the utterances of the Toronto News, which praises the Bill, thinking that it will result in bringing a better class of men into public life. The News says:—

"By the new scale of Parliamentary indemnities and the allowances to retired Ministers, it becomes much easier for men of moderate means to enter public life. The fear has been expressed that this will create a class of professional politicians, meaning those who will depend upon the indemnity and the salary for their living. The truth is, there have always been such men in public life, and we have been afraid to face the situation. Some men of small means have been reduced to poverty; some have sought to increase their incomes by means that did not promote the public interest; some have been dependent upon Governments, waiting for offices or other favors. Now the situation is fairly faced. It is recognized that there is in this country a class of leisured persons who can afford to give at least part of their time to public affairs, and the indemnities and salaries are fixed on that basis.

"Is there anything necessarily evil in making a public career to a certain extent a professional career? Some undesirable candidates might be tempted by a salary of $2,500, though it would hardly to a bait for a greedy, money-loving man. It will be all the more necessary to exercise care in the selection of candidates. On the other hand, there is now an opening for young men of small means who have a sincere desire to render useful and honourable service to the country. It is a worthy ambition to understand the constitution of Canada, the procedure of Parliament, and the work of the various departments of government, so far as that comes before Parliament. There is no reason why that business or profession should be learned in a systematic way.

"The Hon. David Mills, who had a very high conception of his duties as a member of Parliament, made it a practice to explain to his constituents at reasonable intervals the business that came before Parliament in his time. It was an excellent practice and one that ought to be followed more largely now that the indemnity has been increased. We hope that the change will have the effect of bringing into public life more men of the type of Mr. Mills. He might be called "a professional politician," using the word politician in the best sense. Public service was his chief interest. He had a high regard for the constitution and for the orderly and dignified transaction of public business. It will be for the electors to say which class of professional politicians shall be encouraged to enter public life by the new conditions. They have it in their power to open the doorways for promising young men having the desire and ability to serve the country. This function was sometimes performed by the Senate, but by a worthy patron having a constituency in his gift. It is much better that it should be performed by the people."

TIMELY TOPICS.

Well, dear sisters and brothers, the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 is over—and well over. Thanks to energetic and painstaking officials the arrangements were just about as near perfect as they could be. Not a visitor was slighted or neglected; not a visitor of any description but was met by the glad hand and treated with the courtesy and consideration that the occasion demanded.

To say that the whole affair was a success is putting it mildly. The visitors, one and all, could not find words adequate to express their appreciation of the treatment meted out to them. It gratified them to see that they were not forgotten that their friends of other days still treasured their memories, but most of all it gratified them to see that the old town they had loved and left, behind had risen to the occasion in grand style, and that her people could say, in the words of the eloquent tentmaker, "We are citizens of no mean city."

And so, while the decorations are being taken down, and while the handshakes and good-byes are still fresh in our memory, we say "Auf wiedersehen" to all the dear old boys and girls who came back home to help us live over again the scenes of the past. May they all live to—some day—see another Reunion in Belleville.

Talk about your souvenirs, but one lady who came to the Reunion took home a black eye as a remembrance of Belleville's dear old woodon walks which fly up and do things to unsuspecting and unoffending people.

Before the next Reunion takes place it will be in order to capture a few seats for the Corby park.

Ottawa has a snake boom from Oakland, Cal., to Sacramento. A regular tramp, that cat.

A prima donna is said to have sung at a house party near London for $650 a minute. It's a good thing for her empress she didn't work overtime.

Simcoe in Evansville, Ind., stole a Salvation Army contribution box containing twelve cents. He is smaller than the dozen men who contributed the money.

It is said that the inhabitants of Berlin drank 60,000 gallons of beer in the first week in July—nearly 2 1-2 gallons for every man, woman and child in the city. And yet we hear of "poverty-stricken masses" of Europe!

There is a scarcity of $5 bills in business circles in Chicago. That is to say, there is not enough money to go round.

The astronomers have found a bridge stretching clear across Mars. Now see the point. Moral—Don't cross a bridge of that kind till you come to it.

An Illinois young man was basten insensible by a party of his friends because he would not interfere on Saturday night to make their purchases before nine o'clock as it is to walk around an hour or two, chatting with friends, and then set out to do their trading. Little wonder is it that, after being on their feet from thirteen to fifteen hours, the clerks are so apt to complain of the Sabbath, and absent themselves from church. The truth must ultimately win the people, and there is no reason why it cannot be remedied."

Mr. George E. Harris, of New York City, one of the Reunion visitors, suggested that the Government should be made for another Reunion to be held in Belleville five years hence. He thinks that permanent secretaries should be located in New York, Rochester, Detroit and many other points, who shall keep in touch with the various Old Boys in their respective States, thus facilitating matters for the few months immediately preceding the next Reunion. The idea is an excellent one.

Mr. Balfour, it is intimated, will not resign as a result of last week's vote in the British House of Commons. He has in the position he has taken both precedent and common sense to support him. Both precedent and common sense suggest, however, that no more incidents of the kind can with safety be allowed to occur. A government's majority in Parliament should be kept where it can be counted whenever necessary.

An American exchange says: It has been pronounced on high scientific authority that early rising tends to promote insanity, and that our lunatic asylums are being filled with misguided creatures who have risen pre-late time without due rest. Certainly we ought to get sufficient sleep, and less than eight or nine hours daily is not enough. As a rule the life of the ordinary citizen is much too strenuous, and the mental powers are not given sufficient rest. Rising with the lark is not much better than staying out for a lark. Reason must be used, and certainly sleep, gentle sleep, should be diligently wooed and never slighted.

The Brockville Times hands out the following straight talk in answer to some recent fulminations by Senator Choquette and remarks concerning them in the Toronto Star:

"What does the Toronto Star mean, however, by saying that the people of Canada grew discontented they could break away from the Confederation and join the United States! Does the Star imagine that the people of Canada would allow Quebec to break up the Dominion of Canada by seceding? Not by a long majority. Quebec would be compelled by force to stay in the Confederation of Canadian provinces. It would not be allowed to undo the work done at so great a cost by the British people in years gone by. The Dominion of Canada is a British country and it will be held intact, peaceably if possible, but by force if necessary, as the Choquette may learn in the future."

HIS END WAS NOT PEACE.

At the opening day of a Vanderver kindergarten little Billie had worn out the teacher's patience, and, being of the old school, she administered the time-honored remedy for naughtiness. As the result would have it, Billie belonged to the elect. His mother was a member of the School Board, and forthwith turn down upon the school-teacher. Her tones were icy. "Miss Harrington, I wish some information on this outrageous proceeding. Kindly tell me what evil you had in view in punishing my son." "Mrs. Grant," was the reply, "I had the same end in view that anybody would have in spanking a little boy."

Griffin-Harris

The Midland Free Press gives the following account of the marriage of a former Belleville girl:

A very quiet but pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, July 12th, at Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Harris, Queen street, when their daughter, Estella, was united in marriage to Mr. Henry Griffin, of Orillia, formerly of Midland. The ceremony was performed at 12 o'clock noon by Rev. A. W. Torrie, pastor of the Baptist church. The bride was handsomely attired in a gown of cream silk mousseline de soie. The maid of honor was Miss Ethel Frontes, and Mr. Howard Smith supported the groom. After a dainty dinner the happy couple left on the 3.20 train for Orillia, where they will reside. The bride's travelling suit was of grey tweed with hat to match.

Mr. Griffin is in charge of the grocery department of Kane & Knox's large dry goods store in Orillia, and he and Mrs. Griffin are active workers in church and temperance societies, and have many friends who join in extending best wishes for a long and happy life.

Satisfactory Settlement Made.

Tweed News: Messrs. Nicholson and Bleecker, County Councillors, for County Clerk Aylsworth were in town on Tuesday in consultation with Messrs. James Bedore, of Plinton, and Wm. Ward, of Bridgewater, in regard to the damages which they sustained by the collapse of a bridge between Madoc and Actinolite last spring. It will be remembered that Mr. Bedore's horse-hitching engine went through the bridge, and considerable damage was done to the engine. Mr. Nicholson's claim amounted to $75.00, and Mr. West, who was driving, some personal injuries, in addition to having his horses pulled into the water, brought in a claim for $100. After considerable consultation a satisfactory settlement was made, and it will be seen, Mr. Bedore accepting $17.50 and Mr. West $3.00 in full settlement.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses to every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars during the year. Such seeds as Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, it costs but a few cents and a bo tle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

has "caught on" wonderfully and is growing in favor daily. On every hand we are compli-mented on the completeness, the beauty of style and finish and the perfect lay out of the book. Nothing has seemingly been left out—nothing which has been handled could very well have been left out; "complete and perfect" best describes it. We are ready we are hearing from old Bellevillians in other places, in words of unstinted praise, and would have it—a copy for yourself and one for each of your out-of-town friends. They're going fast—don't be one of the sorry ones.

Our Souvenir Fountain Pen

We thought our Old Boys and Girls would like to take home with them a lasting remembrance of the great Re-union, and so we have pleased—we think—the majority with that daily companion—and is appreciating example—"The City of Belleville." If is a regular $3.00 pen, fully guaranteed. We only have a gross—144 customers will secure a pen. Orders will not be so sale until Saturday, and then for three days only—Friday, Saturday and Monday. Bogus Ballot-Boxes in the House of Commons.

Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick (Minister of Justice)—I must very much that the member for Hastings (Mr. Porter) did not think it at all necessary to extend to me the usual courtesies when I arose to answer at this sort; that is, to give me some sort of notice that the question of criminal libel was coming up in this House. This is the sort of courtesy I have received from gentlemen opposite, which I prize, but not seem to me that this is a question which the Government might going to do, it is to a larger extent a question of what the Government has done; then, the member for West (Hastings (Mr. Porter) says that the Government is to blame for not having taken prompt action to punish those connected with the fraud. Let us see what occurred. I have no doubt that the facts are fresh in the hon. gentleman's memory; but, in his desire to exhibit this bad taste, he forgot to state the facts. Let me draw his attention to the fact that on the morning of election day, he approached in connection with this matter—by Mr. Williams, the returning officer, and he was then asked what the facts were in connection with the ballot boxes. Thereupon I will read from a letter, written by that officer, dated November 8th, which he gives the result of his efforts with the hon. member, and which him to assist in taking action in this matter:

"On the morning of election day, Mr. Shibley called at the Chief of Police of this city a ballot-box with a metallic partition, worked by a miniature handle on the top of the ballot-box, so that, by turning it one way the ballot fell through the hole in the corner would go into the main part of the box and by turning it the other way it would go into a small compartment at the bottom of the box, under and the end of the box nearest thereto.

"I examined both of the box and saw that it was not any of the boxes used by the deputy returning officers, nor Mr. Porter on the street, who told me that five such boxes had been seized in the hands of a deputy returning officer, whose name he declined to disclose to me."

That does not look as if the hon. gentleman was very anxious to prosecute the matter. The letter then goes on:

"I told him that I thought it was his duty then and there to declare Shibley whose he got the ballot-box, and that proper proceedings might be taken if any sufficient evidence was forthcoming, and he informed me in reply that all things would be done in good time, but that he could not be declined to give any information in regard to the place from which he had been seized or to whose possession it had been found."

And now he stands up in the House and denounces the Government for not prosecuting in the matter.

Mr. Porter. If the Minister will permit me, at this moment or after the conversation between the returning officer and myself is quite correct. But built an hour or three-quarters of an hour later, after consultation with my friends and considering of the matter, I thought it would be better to state the facts, and I announced from the platform publicly the name of the gentleman who had given me the information.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. But the conversation as reported is merely reported, as I understand?

Mr. Porter. Yes.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. We have another little bit of evidence that my hon. friend did not think it was necessary to explain. The hon. gentleman said that this occurred on the 7th of November. On the 7th of November, without any suggestion from the Government, without any attempt on his part to draw the attention of the Department to the matter, or to begin proceedings in prosecution of the charges now made with such a famous fraud, the Department of Justice sent an officer of the Dominion police, Inspector Charlebois, up to Belleville. That officer attempted to find the ballot-box. He found it not, but he was absent. Not content with sending the inspector, I sent Commissioner Perry, the Dominion detective himself, who went to Belleville on the 10th of November. I also instructed it necessary to instruct Mr. Shepley K.C., of Toronto, to prosecute everybody engaged in the fraud. To those gentlemen went to Belleville on the 11th, and there met the hon. the member for West (Hastings; and here is a report from Colonel Sherwood, Commissioner of Police:

"That evening, the 11th, I went to Belleville, and the following day I met Mr. Shepley, and with him saw Mr. Porter and Mr. Ponton, and with them heard some of the particulars. In the afternoon I had there waswore in possession of the solicitors who were looking after the matter for the Government, Mr. Shepley, K.C. set.

Again declining to give the information he had. So here again we do not appear to have had very much assistance from the hon. members for West Hastings.

Mr. Porter. Pardon. He referred them to his solicitors.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. Yes; but in a criminal matter of this kind, when appeal may be a matter of the utmost importance, it is not usual for one to rest satisfied by referring the officers of the law to his solicitors in a distant city. These parties were in or near Belleville, and it was in Belleville that these proceedings must be instituted; and they ought to have been proceeded with at once. I am dealing with the charges that the Government were to blame for delay in this matter.

Mr. Porter. Perhaps the Minister will permit me to say a word in answer to that. He, perhaps, has overlooked the fact that my action for criminal libel was then pending, and it was in the hands of my solicitors. I think I took a perfectly proper way of dealing with the matter.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. But the important matter here was not the hon. gentleman's case of criminal libel; the important matter was to find the guilty parties and put them in the dock. The case of criminal libel was only secondary. I must confess that I have always failed to clearly understand why he was so taken up with his criminal libel case, and so slow in prosecuting the charges of personal guilty of this fraud.

Let me show just what the Government did in connection with this matter. I have already told of the instructions given to the Inspector of the Dominion Police, the Commissioner of Police, Colonel Sherwood, and Mr. Shepley, to prosecute this matter vigorously. Two result from that warrants were issued for Lott, Shibley, Reilly, Thomas Whalen, Lott was the defeated candidate in West Hastings, Shibley the defeated candidate in Frontenac, Reilly a school-teacher, and Whalen, an exclerk officer of the Inland Revenue Department in Mr. Tarte's office. Lott was arrested on Monday morning, and gave bail. Button, one of Shibley's workers—he was the one who received the ballot-box of King-Hawley, the deputy returning officer at Sydenham—was arrested on these men with the exception of Thomas Whalen, Hawley never proceeded against. So that every man connected with the transaction, save one, has been arrested and committed for trial. These others have obtained the custody, notwithstanding that they were under bail —all but Shibley.

Mr. Porter. Shibley was not arrested.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. No; he evaded arrest, and escaped from the country.

Mr. Porter. And Hawley also.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. Let me say Lott was arrested and he gave bail. Shibley escaped, and I say that his bail also escaped. All the others were arrested. So he is what respect did the Government fail to do its duty?

Mr. Porter. That is the very point. Lott, Shibley and Hawley, the deputy returning officer, the principals in the transaction, were allowed to escape. Several days elapsed and they were not arrested. Why not?

Mr. Fitzpatrick. Why did not the hon. gentleman assist the Government on the morning of November 8th by giving the information when he was asked for it? Why did he not give it on November 11th when he was asked for it? Why did he not consult the Government, instead of merely trying to make a case which he could talk about here in Parliament? Now, as I have shown, every man connected with these frauds was either arrested or a warrant was issued for him and he was ordered to leave the country and, so far as Lott is concerned, he was not allowed to escape, he jumped his bail. He was in the act of escaping, who obliged him to give bail of $2,000; and he forfeited that bail and left the country. Is the Government responsible for that? Is the hon. gentleman responsible for that? Is the Government responsible?

Mr. A. E. Bedden. When did Shibley and Hawley leave the country?

Mr. Fitzpatrick. I cannot say; but could be found when the officers went to arrest him. The warrant for Shibley was issued, and unfortunately Inspector Chamberlain proceeded to harass me on Frontenac matters for the purpose of finding him. But he could not be located — the gentleman was not to be arrested. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Porter) says that the ballot-boxes were not used. I cannot say that the hon. gentleman does, to a closed book beside me and from which I am reading. He found here"; but I think I can show by the hon. gentleman's own deposition that, in his opinion, not a single one of these ballot-boxes was used in the election, and I will now from his report, and I will put Colonel Sherwood's report in with that statement made by the hon. gentleman:

"Of the twenty false ballot-boxes seized before the polls opened, fifteen have been recovered, and none of them were used in use; nine of them were issued still to be in Lake Loughborough, from which nine were recovered with their false bottoms, and one four which were sent to Bremner, Chamberlain, and to have been delivered to Harryett."

"My own opinion is that none of the boxes were used, notwithstanding the positive assertion by two deputy returning officers, and by the returning officer, but simply to create a false impression that different patterns were given out."

That man Hawley, it appears, was a resident of the City of Chicago. Now the only complaint I would make to the Government about this election is that this man Hawley was employed as a deputy returning officer. It is unquestionable that this man, who was a stranger to this country, should have been employed in the performance of duties of a responsible kind. But with that single exception, there is not a word to be said against the conduct of the election there is not a case to be brought out in the trial which does not show that the law in the returning officer or any one of his deputies, with that single exception, was in any way connected with those ballot boxes. I further state that there is nothing in the evidence which goes to show that a single one of these ballot-boxes was used. The information I have from the Inspector is that every box of these ballot-boxes had been accounted for, with one exception.

OUR OWN.

If I had known in the morning
How wearily it all the day
The words unkind
Would trouble my mind
I said when you went away,
I had been more careful, darling,
Nor given you needless pain;
But we vex "our own"
With look and word
We might never take back again.

For though in the quiet evening
You may give the kiss of peace
Yet still in the heart
That never for me
The sweet light must cease.

How many go forth in the morning
Who never return home at night!
And hearts have broken
For harsh words spoken
That sorrow can never set right.

We have careful thought for the stranger,
And smiles for the casual guest,
But oft for "our own"
The bitter tear flows
Though we love our own the best.
Ah! bp with the mean impatience,
Ah! brow with, that look of scorn,
"Twere a cruel fate
We three pass hence
To undo the work of morn.

CANADIAN BORN.

Millionaire Contractors Who Tossed Timber in Lanark's Limits.

Despatches recently reported the capture of a big timber limit from the C. P. R. and a $7,000,000 one from the Grand Trunk, both by the Foley Brothers of St. Paul. These brothers are Canadians, and their father was born in Darling, says The Carleton Place Canadian. There were four—Timothy, Michael, Daniel and John. The last is dead. These brothers began life in the humblest manner, working in the camps of Mr. Mair of Lanark. They were as poor as anyone could be, but they had plenty of intellect and energy. They were born with an aptitude to do things on a big scale, and as Murphy knew them when they were in the chrysalis of the cocoon state, so he knew at the moment of blooming ambition he accepted a position in the camps where they were engaged. He saw that they had the faculty to take command and the hand-spike. Time speedily was powerful in the art of logrolling; Timothy Foley, the eldest, had married Miss Guthrie of Darling, and had also acquired a farm in Ramsay, besides a royal greeting. T. Foley lives in the summer on his farm, Lilly Park, the noted railway magnate, the brother John is at present visiting in Europe.

Newspapers In Canada.

Is it true that some parts of Canada are overcrowded with newspapers? For instance, have British Columbia, with its population of 180,000, and Manitoba, with its population of 250,000, got too many newspapers? In this former there is a newspaper for every 2,398 people, and in the latter one for every 1,389 people.

When we consider the number of children in Canada, the number of people who read newspapers, and the number of poor people who never buy them, it is surprising that there are so many publications.

Figures for Ontario are almost as low

Ontario has a total area of 222,000 square miles, and a population of only 2,179 persons. The Territories have an area of 1,800,000 square miles; Nova Scotia one for every 5,478; Prince Edward Island one for every 4,320; and Quebec one for every 12,934—almost as low as Keewatin.

Uncovered 48 Skeletons.

While John Failla, a farmer, living close to the United States boundary, ten miles from Niagara Falls, Ont., was digging a cellar, he happened upon a skeleton. He at once told the rest of his workmen unearthed a human bone. In all forty-eight skeletons, from the lonely grave of an Indian, were found. Around each skeleton, other skulls were mat. By evening forty-eight had been taken from the soil, and the digging for more operations were discovered.

The excavation was watched by his mysterious discovery, Mr. Failla loaded the relics into a wagon and drove to the Crystal City, where they elicited much curiosity.

The theory advanced is that the spot had been the scene of some battle between the Indians. The skulls of time of the conflict were thrown into a common pit in the basis of Indians.

Skulls of Dead Indians.

What is probably the finest of an old Indian burying ground was revealed a few days ago by excavations for a cellar in the C. P. R. station yard at Myrtle, Ont., on the Toronto & Hamilton division of the railway. The discovery was made by Contractor John Bescomb's staff. The ploughs usually employed were found uncovered ribs and leg bones, and soon a complete skeleton appeared. Three of the skulls were sent to Ottawa for the Dominion museum, and four to Dr. Clendennan at Toronto Junction. Seven were retained by a liveryman as relics. Others were stolen from his stable the same night.

New System of Checking.

The most important baggage agent who were recently in session at Cleveland discussed an innovation on baggage checking that will be of great benefit to the traveler. It is proposed to check the baggage at the passengers' residence to the destination at the terminal point. If the railroads in Canada and the United States agree to the proposition it will be put into operation next year.

NEWEST SHIP IN FLEET

FEATURES OF THE "TRIUMPH" AS DESCRIBED BY THE ENGINEER.

Britain's Latest Type of Battleship Shows Various Alterations — Electricity Employed Wherever Possible — Guns Mounted Containing Ten 7.5 Inch Guns On Main Deck— How Economy of Space Is Effected.

The great length of the Triumph as the fleet between appendicitars, is very observable as one approaches her when afloat, and gives the impression of remarkable low freeboard. Such, however, is not in reality characteristic of this new vessel. Her freeboard at the bow is 21 feet 6 in., but as she has a rising sheer aft, the freeboard at the stern is 18 feet 6 in. and the height in the centre of the two 10-inch guns forward above the load waterline is 23 feet 6 inches, a correspondent centre height of 20 feet above two feet less. The height of centres of the main deck, Mark VII. inch guns is 18 feet 2 inches, or rather more than that of the main deck freeboard at the bow is 21 feet 6 in., but as she has a rising sheer aft, the freeboard at the stern is 18 feet 6 in. and the height in the centre of the two 10-inch guns forward above the load waterline is 23 feet 6 inches, a correspondent centre height of 20 feet above two feet less. The height of centres of the main deck, Mark VII. inch guns is 18 feet 2 inches, or rather more than that of the main deck battery 6-inch guns of the King Edward VII., which, however, is quite adequate required to bring the centre of the muzzles to water level rather less than that of the last named ship, in consequence, of course, of the much greater length of the 6-inch guns.

Great Gun Battery.

A striking feature of the Triumph is the main deck battery, each containing ten 7.5-inch guns. It is enclosed by 7-inch Krupp steel bulkheads of 4-inch steel armor at the ends. One of these bulkheads is fitted with a watch steel armor at the ends. One of these bulkheads is fitted with a watch tight steel armor at the ends. The Captain's Plight

By Martha McCulloch-Williams

Copyright, 1905, by Martha McCulloch-Williams

If Anne Maria Jones had been born a beauty or even moderately pretty this story would not have to be written. With a snub nose, hair, eyes and complexion of the same piece and no figure to speak of, even a robust vanity cannot deceive. Anne Maria's vanity was not robust. How should it be when she had a beautiful sister, upon whom the family hopes and the family expenditures equally centered? But Anne Maria had understanding. Since she could not be ornamental, she resolved to be useful. Moreover, she had a palate rare in womenkind and a deft way in the kitchen that was worth a lot of looks.

You begin to perceive the relation of things. If she had been a beauty she wouldn't have been a cook. And then Captain Josephus Marshall—but stories should be told as they happen. Captain Josephus was a bachelor, rich and cranky, who had rare caves in life-keeping his indigestion and his freedom. To say that he was nice over his eating is putting it quite too mildly. It was the same regarding his single estate. He thought every girl who was even civil to him had visions of money or alimony floating through her head. And he was firmly resolved never to marry—and as firmly resolved that his nephew, Alonzo, should not live a bachelor unless marry any wife save one of the captain's choosing.

"DRIED PEACH PIES!" THE CAPTAIN MUMBLED.

Judge Jones, Anne Maria's father, had been at college with the captain. Naturally when a business deal brought the captain to the judge's town he was made very welcome in the Jones home. Naturally also Alonzo, who came along, went down before Lonella, the belle. Then the captain called him names and sent him packing, saying gruffly, "If you want any money to go to charity just marry anything named Jones."

When Lonella heard that she tossed her head and went on a long visit to her city aunt. Anne Maria stayed at home, keeping very much out of the captain's way, but getting up such dishes for him as he had not tasted since his mother died. Good feeding is held to breed good temper, but the captain must have been born to set rule and proverbs at defiance. The latter he got the crankier he showed himself to be. Indeed, Judge Jones gave Anne Maria a caution at the end of the third fortnight, saying: "If you feed up that old wreck much more there'll be no doing business with him. As matters stand this whole thing hinges on his consent, and yesterday he let us know in full board that unless he has his own way in everything, from the weight of the rails to the natures of the stations, the railroad will never be built. The final meeting with all must be decided comes off two days hence. If only you could make the captain ill—ill enough to be in his usual—but really I don't believe it is possible. He has the stomach of an ostrich, although he talks dyspepsia half the time.

Anne Maria sighed, then smiled, but said nothing. She studied all that night, and next morning said privately to the judge: "Don't send home to lunch, father. I shall send something to the office. And be sure you keep the captain to eat with you." Then she disappeared in the direction of the kitchen, smiling subtly, and also digesting the least bit in the world.

"What have we here? As I live, fried pies! Jerusalem, how my mouth waters! I can eat an acre of 'em any day!" the captain cried as toward 1 o'clock that day Judge Jones threw back the dimmick cover of the Indian tray that had just been set on top of his big desk. "And I'm hungry as a wolf! This is luck!" the captain went on, seizing one of the rich brown greasy half moons and popping the cud of it into his mouth. It came away with a clean semicircle cut some thing less than four inches across. "Dried peach pies!" the captain mumbled excitedly, chewing hard. "Hain't dried peaches too! Where, where did you find 'em, Jones? Never tasted any thing so good—can all my life!"

"Well, mine look like women," the judge said, chuckling behind his hand.

He began to see the method of Anne Maria's madness. Heretofore he paced of the other things on the captain, but without avail. The first pie disappeared in exactly a minute. The second lasted a minute and a half. Then the judge lost count, though his hopes not was still keen. He smiled still more when the captain said in a conscience stricken voice:

"Good ideas me! Jones, I've eaten every pie! Such a pile of them too! But you'll forgive me. I don't get 'em only once in a blue moon. Besides, after the luck out I shan't want anything for at least two days."

"You're more than welcome," the judge said hospitably, lighting a cigar. The captain waved aside a proffered pipe. "Wouldn't spoil the after taste of my pies for a fortune," he said. "I'm going right now to sleep away the afternoon. Indeed, I feel like sleeping till to-morrow morning."

Man proposes sometimes. The captain slept for three hours, to awake in agony. Not for naught had he coddled and, consequently, ailed all those years. It resented angrily the burden he had put upon it. Pried pastry had been nothing to it—why, indeed, put to eat it with a boy's appetite in late middle age made it quite another thing. The peached bees as sweet and spiced as the pastry was greasy. To endure thus the poor captain by all right long. In the morning he was weak and wan—so weak the bare thought of food revolted him. He got up and staggered about the room, but found it idle to think of going out. Then came the judge to whisk him away to his house in spite of the captain's weak and wavering protests.

"Leave you here! Not much. Hotels are dreary places for sick men," the judge said heartily, sounding quite glad

MOOSE ATTACKS MAN.

Guide Gave Wrong Call and Bull Became Enraged — Priest's Story Was a Revelation.

After a long discussion the other day by members of the North American Club and Game Protective Association as to whether or not it is certain circumstances will attack human beings, the following incident was brought to the effect that not only moose but the little red deer or Virginian deer also will under some conditions assault a man.

The story, told in perfectly sober earnest by the woman in the party, Miss Mary Patterson, of Portland, Oregon, who is a well-known sportsman, and naturalist, although of her own experience in the New Brunswick woods, near Indian Lake, within two miles of the City of St. John, where, in company with an old Indian guide, he went with John, his father's guide, to "try the experiment of "calling" a moose.

The season was not yet open, for little big game, so it had been well understood that it by "hook or crook" a bull should be "raised" no harm would be done the animal unless the safety of the party required it.

We had first to dispose of the captain," said Father Pierre, "we had some difficulty in coaxing him into the form of an ancient pine, and we did at length persuade him to it. John took his place on the top of a boulder within reach of a decaying birch, whose ragged, yellow bark, shone in the moonlight, and I took the lower limb of the captain's tree. Then, drawing a long breath, the Indian pressed his birch wheeling blast. John was a master player on the birch call, and suddenly a familiar sound broke the stillness. Again he put the instrument to his lips. This time the call was soft, the mere coo of a dove in comparison with the last ear-splitting effort.

"The effect was instantaneous. Away down on the bottom there was a rush and commotion, and out of the darkness came a series of hoarse grunts and the shaking of antlers like the rattling of ax handles in a shop. Openly with no attempt to follow the shadows his lordship came out on the plateau as a gentleman.

"It was now up to John to lure him to us. I wanted to hear him give the cow-call once more, but he did not—and herein the secret of our not fortunes. Instead of the coaxing call of the cow some demon tempted him to give out the bone-chilling challenge of a bull. Then, without waiting to hear the beast begin to tear the curling bark from the birch tree by which he was sitting, he gave us all the noise he could, and punctuated his grunts with subdued grunts from the horn.

"No self-respecting moose could refuse that sort of a battle. With a snort and roar he charged up the hill. Soon the bull was standing upon us, believing evidently that our clump of trees contained his enemy. As he waited in among us I realized that a few more feet of advance would help my case most considerably. I hastened therefore to clamber beyond his reach, which brought me very close to the captain.

"Doubtless things began to happen. The Indian at the first onset of the moose had made safety in the birch tree, but the lower stubs being rotten, they gave way with him. The roaring and the excited efforts to climb made attracted the attention of the bull from the charge on John's head without further ado.

"I could witness the Indian's frantic efforts to climb up to the heavier branches only to be charged to the reach of his adversary. He clung to his rifle, holding it out from him as he climbed. The split hoofs of the moose rattle viciously on the stools as he projected himself in John's direction, and the next moment he was beneath the tree.

"Then I saw an unusual sight. The Indian up the tree saw all of some friendly hand had given him a hotel, and the moose passed out into the open. The latter soon scurried out to be found for a swift second a foothold on the moose and thus gave Indian the necessary lift upward. My own impression was that the moose did the lifting and that John only had the luck to land in the right direction. The bull was not yet done with him, however. Circling, he came back to the charge, leaving the Indian in perfect battle grunt.

"Again the unusual happened. I had seen on the famous moose ground, near the Grand Pabos River in Canada, a herd of moose feeding in early winter, and I had watched them while the bulls reared up and with their fore feet drew down the birch sapling within reach of the young cows and sliced the trees to keep them down. But I had never seen the angry bull would adopt the same tactics to get at an enemy.

"That is just what he tried to do, nevertheless. Standing on his hind legs, he struck with his fore feet, his horse-like muzzle pointing upward, to which end he reared in the attempt to reach John. John was now in real danger. He had by the time described the highest branch that would sustain his weight and, the splitting brute all but struck him at each jump.

"Perhaps it was the futility of the spectacle that held me spellbound. At the old captain found no entertainment in the affair. He was simply trying with wide near him, he dared almost approach the scene of the combat for fear of the moose. Whether his aim was good or bad I could not tell, but each time the ball zipped over as if her had been hit, and then, recovering himself, made off, in the direction of the hills.

"Wrong," said Wright.

Our Aylmer correspondent says in yesterday's issue that Mrs. Wright is visiting St. Thomas. Mr. Wrong. We presume it is wrong to make a correction upon the above personal, but as our intentions are right. It is remarkable that when Mrs. Wright was Miss Wrong she took advantage of the call for to become Mrs. Wright and refused to be called Wrong after she was made Wright. We say right here that this is right, but most women permit to be buying themselves right when they are wrong.—St. Thomas Journal.

Wright went right in seeking the Wrong. Wrong was right in accepting Wright. Wrong was right made Wright, and it's all right. We would also like to write that Wright is also married etc. the made Wrong Wright.—St. Thomas Times.

CAN CALL ALL ANIMALS

REMARKABLE INSTANCES OF THE USE OF A RARE FACULTY.

Manitoba Lad One of the Most Accomplished Imitators of Animals Ever Met By the Observant Lt.-Col. Andrew Haggard—Indians Beat Teachers — Illustrations That Betrayed a Lion Hunter.

The art of decoying wild animals by imitation of their cries is a very primitive one, practised by savages in all countries as a means of procuring food. Many white men excel in "calling" animals and birds, notably the cowboys among the larger animals, but if history could be carried far enough it would probably be found, writes Lt.-Col. Andrew Haggard in Forest and Stream, that the most skilful owe their aptitude in this respect to the traditions of untrained savages whose lives depend upon the exercise of this gift.

An exception to this origin of the art of calling may, perhaps, be found in the case of Mr. Wright, who, I believe, has attained the utmost perfection in "calling" a moose. Mr. Wright, whom, in company with an old Indian guide, he went with John, his father's guide, to "try the experiment of "calling" a moose.

The season was not yet open, for little big game, so it had been well understood that if by "hook or crook" a bull should be "raised" no harm would be done the animal unless the safety of the party required it.

Away down on the bottom there was a rush and commotion, and out of the darkness came a series of hoarse grunts and the shaking of antlers like the rattling of ax handles in a shop. Openly with no attempt to follow the shadows his lordship came out on the plateau as a gentleman.

"It was now up to John to lure him to us. I wanted to hear him give the cow-call once more, but he did not—and herein the secret of our not fortunes. Instead of the coaxing call of the cow some demon tempted him to give out the bone-chilling challenge of a bull. Then, without waiting to hear the beast begin to tear the curling bark from the birch tree by which he was sitting, he gave us all the noise he could, and punctuated his grunts with subdued grunts from the horn.

"No self-respecting moose could refuse that sort of a battle. With a snort and roar he charged up the hill. Soon the bull was standing upon us, believing evidently that our clump of trees contained his enemy. As he waited in among us I realized that a few more feet of advance would help my case most considerably. I hastened therefore to clamber beyond his reach, which brought me very close to the captain.

"Doubtless things began to happen. The Indian at the first onset of the moose had made safety in the birch tree, but the lower stubs being rotten, they gave way with him. The roaring and the excited efforts to climb made attracted the attention of the bull from the charge on John's head without further ado.

"I could witness the Indian's frantic efforts to climb up to the heavier branches only to be charged to the reach of his adversary. He clung to his rifle, holding it out from him as he climbed. The split hoofs of the moose rattle viciously on the stools as he projected himself in John's direction, and the next moment he was beneath the tree.

"Then I saw an unusual sight. The Indian up the tree saw all of some friendly hand had given him a hotel, and the moose passed out into the open. The latter soon scurried out to be found for a swift second a foothold on the moose and thus gave Indian the necessary lift upward. My own impression was that the moose did the lifting and that John only had the luck to land in the right direction. The bull was not yet done with him, however. Circling, he came back to the charge, leaving the Indian in perfect battle grunt.

"Again the unusual happened. I had seen on the famous moose ground, near the Grand Pabos River in Canada, a herd of moose feeding in early winter, and I had watched them while the bulls reared up and with their fore feet drew down the birch sapling within reach of the young cows and sliced the trees to keep them down. But I had never seen the angry bull would adopt the same tactics to get at an enemy.

"That is just what he tried to do, nevertheless. Standing on his hind legs, he struck with his fore feet, his horse-like muzzle pointing upward, to which end he reared in the attempt to reach John. John was now in real danger. He had by the time described the highest branch that would sustain his weight and the splitting brute all but struck him at each jump.

"Perhaps it was the futility of the spectacle that held me spellbound. At the old captain found no entertainment in the affair. He was simply trying with wide near him, he dared almost approach the scene of the combat for fear of the moose. Whether his aim was good or bad I could not tell, but each time the ball zipped over as if her had been hit, and then, recovering himself, made off, in the direction of the hills.

"Wrong," said Wright.

Our Aylmer correspondent says in yesterday's issue that Mrs. Wright is visiting St. Thomas. Mr. Wrong. We presume it is wrong to make a correction upon the above personal, but as our intentions are right. It is remarkable that when Mrs. Wright was Miss Wrong she took advantage of the call for to become Mrs. Wright and refused to be called Wrong after she was made Wright. We say right here that this is right, but most women permit to be buying themselves right when they are wrong.—St. Thomas Journal.

Wright went right in seeking the Wrong. Wrong was right in accepting Wright. Wrong was made Wright, and it's all right. We would also like to write also Mrs. Wright, the marriage etc. the made Wrong Wright.—St. Thomas Times.

IRRITANT HOUSE PLANTS.

Some Regarded as Harmless Accused of Causing Skin Diseases.

Every one knows enough to give poison ivy a wide berth, and the sufferer from hay fever understands only too well what particular plants have to contribute to the misery of midsummer. It is not so generally known, however, that plants commonly grown in houses, even such as are commonly grown indoors, by occasionally developing a poison those who come in contact with them. Thus, Primula obconica, which is given by a writer in Cosmos (Paris), who states that house plants, or at any rate many of the species found in them, are dangerous, causing various cutaneous affections.

We already know, says the writer, the irritating properties of the nettle and those of the cirmalis of the hedges, also of Euphorbia veratrum, whose professional mendicants are in the habit of producing with the leaves superficial eruptions that disappear with the sympathy of compassionate hearts. A large anemone, Pulsatilla, has the power of producing effects of the same kind, and we are, obviously, excuses brought on by house plants.

M. Dubreuilh, of the Bordeaux Medical Journal, recalls a number of cases of dermatitis caused by primroses. The latter, who had suffered from violent attacks of eczema in the right eye every spring for nine years was relieved when he removed the primroses from his window.

Not less curious is the case, published by Retsdorff, of a widower who had every spring, from 1901 to 1901 in the latter part of October, a violent eruption on the forehead, the eyelids and the ears, yield to treatment and would not disappear till January. This last eruption received as a birthday present on October 15, several pots of China primroses (Primula obconica), which she cared for herself until spring, when she threw out the last one, observed the removal of the primroses caused the eruption to disappear.

Such is also the story of another woman, who, having received a plant of China primrose, cultivated it and suffered an acute eruption of the eyelids, cheeks and ears, inflammation of the eyes and eyelids. In this case, and in others that have come under the inflammation caused by the primroses was localized on the exposed face. Nevertheless, it is not always the plant that produces the eruption on the chest of a lady who had carried on her person a bouquet of Chinese primroses. Sometimes, in fact, it has had a habit of biting off and eating Primrose blossoms, which left small sores on her lips and in the mouth.

Primroses are not the only house plants capable of causing such eruptions. Some years ago, for example, the Munich Medical Weekly, H. Hoffmann, assistant to Prof. Lesser, of Berlin, published a account of a case of dermatitis caused by the juice of the leaves of Dieffenbachia seguina. They were being attacked by eruptions. These eruptions are worth noting. They constitute, however, exceptions and are rare in the case of house plants. Nevertheless. Those who are afflicted may, with some precautions, continue to cultivate them, provided touch them as little as possible, and when the eruption takes place, to wash it with alcohol, and to solve the irritant matter and then with a solution of boric acid, and to dry by squirting and shorten the duration of the malady.

The Quickest Route.

The new Allan line turbine steamship Virginian arrived at Rimouski at 7 a.m. on Tuesday, thus covering the fastest passage from land to land in the history of the St. Lawrence route. The mails, which left Liverpool on Saturday at 4.15 o'clock that afternoon, arrived in Rimouski at 4 o'clock next morning. The mail was delivered to the Virginian at Moville on Saturday evening. On tuesday, June 9, so that they were delivered in Montreal by the special train of seven days, or faster by hours than they would have come by the New York route. By the Allan route the letters by the Virginian will be delivered at St. Paul Minn., before the mail by the White Star steamer Cretic, which left a day before the Virginian.

The Virginian sailed from Moville on Friday, June 9, at 2 p.m., and on account of Cape Race being ten hours and thirty minutes, thus crediting the passengers and mail aboard over the long southern route. She arrived at Rimouski at 4 a.m. on Tuesday, June 15. Allowing four hours for the transfer of the mail between Rimouski and Moville, she occupied just six days, six hours and fifteen minutes on the passage, which is the fastest on the Atlantic. The Virginian beat the Bavarian's record in May, when she made the run from Moville to Rimouski in six days, fourteen hours, and thirty minutes. The passage of the Virginian was three hours and a half faster than her previous record. The Virginian will sail from St. John on the season she leaves commence running from Rimouski to Liverpool via the Straits of Belle Isle, the Virginian will be able to make the passage in a day less than by the present route.

Hospital For Sick Horses.

The Toronto Humane Society has decided to purchase a two-acre farm for poor horses to recuperate. Every driver whose owners are unable to pay for a veterinary surgeon's bill will get a week's gambolling in pasture. A shed for hay, wood and tired canines may fall at ease is also contemplated. The first money raised by the purchase of the farm was $327 raised at a Horse Show booth.

NIAGARA CAMP ROUND.

Historic Reminiscences Cited In View of the Fact That Champe de Mars Was Used By Militia.

"There is some talk that the famous camp grounds at Niagara may be sold by the Government, and those who look for our history making environments will be grieved to learn of anything of the think, indeue reconsideration. One of them says:

The importance of Niagara from the historic point of view cannot be overestimated. This point was for years the key to the situation, in so far as the military operations of the English and French explorers acknowledged its importance. Indeed, it was the object in their business to occupy it, and in order to secure this object, many treaties were early on the spot, and their occupation of the site of the present United States fort gave the French control. The French position was not seriously contested until nearly a hundred years later, when Sir William Johnson, the New York agent, acquired loyal in the States while others of equal rank were joining in the revolt, descended upon the fort with his Mohawk Indians and took possession. That was in 1759, and Johnson held the possession of France in the new world. Following the gallant Brock, before going out to die for his country, he had brought, with his own hands, plan volunteers, drilled on the spot now reduced to its present state. The history usually crowned the efforts of the defenders of the country against the American had their occasional triumphs. One of these was the burning of Niagara by the Americans on December 11, 1813. That operation wiped out 131 houses, 400 barns, stables and children into the wilder woods to seek shelter. This was followed by the destruction of private property served the purpose of the British in a hostile reprisals, which were very costly to the sufferers.

A great military centre was old Niagara. But it had been that for years before the Militia Act came into the Province. We are accustomed to regard the year 1792 as the year 1792 as the beginning of Niagara. This is a mistake. Niagara was the centre of military activity in Canada's capital before the first Governor arrived. Moreover, it was a populous centre, with people of all sorts of business. Thus we read in the archives of Canada of a commissioning there of all the Mississauga Indians, under Captain Brant, to make a treaty with Sir John Johnson on behalf of the great white father. This treaty was made in the fifteen years of service, as we have it to-day. Thus, also, we are told that the Indian grants were made in the neighborhood on the authority of Lieutenant-Governor of Canada. Simcoe reached a town, we should call it a village, on the Niagara River, and took up his residence in one of the military—or perhaps it belonged to the Administration—buildings. It was Navy Hall. This was really a long period, and was first occupied by what the Governor was not very particular as to his house, for when he went afterwards removed to Toronto, then York, he stowed the whole of the furniture which had belonged to the celebrated Capt. Cook. This was in advance of the settlement of the Province by people by him Castle Frank, after his son.

There came, however, the consideration at that time for the Legislature, for at Newark—as the Upper Canada Governor, not under the guidance of the new Governor, of the Legislature—there was all been proud, owing to the fact that its first Act was the abolition of slavery. It was the first Act, indeed, of the initial work of the forefathers of Canada to secure the rights of the slave. But Governor Simcoe has left on record his wish to remove the capital, which he did in consequence of the anti-slavery legislation. He writes that there was great resistance to the idea, and gives plausible arguments as to the dearness of labor were to the Province.

"Some possessing negroes, having purchased them under the faith of the Indians at small prices, wished to reject the bill with indignation, and many were to supply themselves by allowing the importation for two years. The matter was finally settled by unitedly taking to secure the property already possessed, and agreeing that in the immediate steps should be put to the importation of slaves, which, although by gradually abolished.

It was, no doubt, owing to the policy of the Governor, whose process that the Niagara Herald was able to publish as a fact that the Legislature assembled there.

Fair sale—A negro mare slave, 18 years of age, stout and healthy; has been used to all sorts of work, and the service either in the house or out of doors. The terms will be made easy to the purchaser. Apply to the printer will be received in payment."

The Government has passed a good deal of important legislation at Niagara, but it was not all satisfactory.

"The story of Niagara is told in a pamphlet recently issued by the rector of St. Mark's (Anglican) was founded in 1792, and St. Andrew's (Presbyterian) was founded in 1794. Both congregations in their records splendid contributions to the history of the Province. Methodist and are themselves testimonies to the originality of their work, and to no doubt that everything of a public character in the Province had its origin around the town of Upper Canada, the first business centre, the pioneer seat of government, and the place of the first Legislature, should be reverently preserved. Niagara is also historically famous for its great military gathering grounds that have been made sentiments on perilous occasions, and at other times, as now, in periods of peace, on behalf of our country.

LAST DAY OF REUNION WAS MUCH ENJOYED.

VISITORS VIEWED BEAUTIES OF BAY, LISTENED TO BAND CONCERTS, WITNESSED AQUATIC SPORTS, AND THOROUGHLY ENJOYED THEMSELVES.

Yesterday was the quietest day in connection with the Old Boys' Reunion, but none the less enjoyable to the visitors on that account. The different excursions by the Niagara were much enjoyed, particularly the one to Picton and Consecon. The band concerts were well attended, particularly the ones at Queen Victoria park. The aquatic sports off the park were prevented on account of the wet, following being a summary of the different events:—

Punt Race—The entries were the King of the Waters, Zephyr, Meteor, and Vega. After a portion of the course had been sailed the Meteor and Vega dropped out. The King of the Waters, as usual, upheld the name of Bears and won, the Zephyr being second.

Double Paddling Canoe Race.—This event brought out three contestants and the winners were J. Turner and J. O'Flynn. These two young men also won the upset race with ease.

Two swimming events were carried out, and there were a number of contestants. The race for boys under 15 years was won by M. Rutherford and for boys over 15 years by W. Marlow.

Mr. W. Rogers had this part of the programme under his supervision, and did his work well.

At this writing a few of the visitors are left in the city, but at least nine-tenths of them have gone home, and all voting the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 a huge success.

We are informed that the committee on subscriptions met with but three refusals—all from wealthy men and only one subscription, of $10, was received.

The gentlemen composing the different committees are now tired but happy, and when they can get a chance and all voting the Old Boys' Reunion of 1905 a huge success.

We are informed that the committee on subscriptions met with but three refusals—all from wealthy men and only one subscription, of $10, was received.

The gentlemen composing the different committees are now tired but happy, and when they can get a chance all, congratulate themselves on the universal success of their efforts, efforts, and so the almost phenomenal success of the entire affair.

Mr. A. J. Hicks, who is here in connection with the railway privilege, says that he is very pleased to give expert testimony in regard to reunion and public gatherings, says the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion was the best managed affair of the kind he ever attended. Another feather in the cap of the officials.

MR. FLINT SUMS UP.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

My Dear Sir,—I cannot be to thank you for your more than kind words offering to myself. The members of the Executive all worked arduously and almost unreservedly, inspired by the sentiments to do all we could for the honor of our beloved city. As Chairman of the Executive, I desire to tender to those of our citizens who so nobly responded to the invitations extended to them to join in the parade the hearty thanks of their fellow citizens. To the ladies who made the construction of a number of floats and their adornment, a labor of love, our best and warmest thanks are due. Thanking you again, I remain,

Most sincerely yours,
J. H. FLINT,
Chairman of Parade.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT THE RACES YESTERDAY.

BUT THE EVENTS WERE SOMEWHAT DISAPPOINTING TO SPECTATORS—TO-DAY'S RACES CALLED OFF OWING TO LACK OF ENTRIES.

The races held yesterday at the Belleville Driving Park, under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario Turf Association were by no means entirely satisfactory to the spectators, it appearing as though some of the drivers were not driving to win. This was evident by the judges that in one event two drivers were changed. There was a good attendance and the grand stand upon the store card looked as if the races would be first-class. Much disappointment was felt when Mr. Wilmot, the starter, announced from the stand that there was to be no racing to-day owing to lack of entries there would be no races on Wednesday. He said that the officials of the association were sorry such was the case, but they could not help it. It was learned that most of those in a position to know that there was scarcely an entry for any event, and, of course, they could not be made at that late hour.

As mentioned above, there were three events on yesterday's programme, namely, the 2.40 class, the 2.25 class and half-mile run.

2.40 Class—Purse $180.

This was the first event, called and three horses responded to the bell, namely, Asta, Dan Finister and Frank R. It was anticipated that Billy Sphinx, who was upon the card, would race, but such was not the case.

First Heat.—The horses were sent away on the second attempt at scoring. Frank R. soon forged ahead and although at times Dan Finister pressed him close, he was unable to overtake him. Asta was not far behind when the heat was finished.

Second Heat.—This was, to a great extent, a repetition of the first heat except that on the home stretch Asta forged ahead of Dan Finister and secured second place.

Third Heat.—When the horses were called out for the last heat Starter Campbell called the drivers of Asta and Dan Finister to the stand and informed them that the spectators and judges were not satisfied with the manner in which they were driving and told them to dismount, and two other drivers were substituted. The result was, however, the same, Frank C. winning the heat handily, with Dan Finister second. The summary was as follows:

Frank C., g., by Cheltenham,
(J. Caverley, Madoc	1	1	1
Dan Finister, blk., J. Aldous,
Fenlon Falls	2	3	2
Asta, b.m., by Allie Wilkes, D.
Lake, Napanee	3	2	3

Time—2.30 1-4, 2.30, 2.29 1-4.

2.25 class; purse $125.

In this event there were but three entries, namely, Miss Paisley, Minnie Bell and City Boy. In the three heats which were won there was no change whatever in the positions of the horses in passing under the wire, Miss Paisley being winner and City Boy second. At no stage of the proceedings was there a question of doubt as to the winner. The time made, as will be seen, was by no means as good as in the 2.40 class, leading the impression on the minds of many that the horses did not exhibit their speed.

The summary was as follows:

Miss Paisley, b.m., by Montrose,
Geo. Lipsett, Peterboro	1	1	1
City Boy, blk. by Jim City, J.
Yeomans, Osborne	2	2	2
Minnie Bell, ch.m., by Bourbon
A. G. Bowell, Peterboro	3	3	3

Time—2.30, 2.32, 2.32.

Half-mile run; purse $100.

This event was anxiously looked forward to by the spectators and it certainly was a good race, although the time made was by no means a record. The judges called for two heats to decide, as Liquozone, a horse from Flint, Mich., and Ben Butte, a fair margin and Marston Moor, from Montreal, were second in both heats. The horses were sent off in both heats. The winner was certainly a speedy beast, and a finely-looking animal.

The summary of this event was as follows:

Liquozone, ch.g., G. Reed, Flint,
Mich.	1	1
Marston Moor, J. F. Smith, Montreal	2	2
Ben Butte, ns., P. Barlow, Tur-
onto	4	3
Greenfield, blk., J. F. Smith,
Montreal	3	4
Brooster, b.h., J. J. Paterson,
Montreal	5	5

Time—54, :52 1-2.

The officials of the day were as follows:

Starter—Chas. Wilmot, Fort Hope. Judges—M. Shaw, Kingston; J. A. Ketcheson and Dr. Dolan, city.

Timekeepers—Jas. Carnew, city; and S. Curry, Madoc.

RESPECTED LADY DEAD.

MRS. ROBERT TANNAHILL PASSED AWAY LAST EVENING.

In the death of Mrs. Robert Tannahill, which sad event occurred at 8.10 last evening, at the family residence, George street, an estimable lady has gone to her reward. For some months her deceased had been in declining health, and for weeks was confined to the house. The cause of death was an internal trouble. Her end was peace. Mrs. Tannahill, whose maiden name was Miss Mary Kay, was born in Kingston, ont., but in Glasgow, Scotland, in September, 1830. Before coming to Belleville she was of age. Her father was a merchant and ship-builder. In the year 1854 she was married at Kingston to Mr. Tannahill, who preceded her to the tomb two years ago. In 1858 Mr. and Mrs. Tannahill came to Canada and a year later arrived in the city, where both resided till the time of their death. Mrs. Tannahill was a devout Christian lady, being a member of the John Street Presbyterian church, in the affairs of which she took an active part. She was also an honored member of the Woman's Christian Association since its inception, occupying many positions of trust, the last she occupied in connection with the latter body being that of second vice-president. The only surviving member of the family is Mr. Robert Tannahill, who is connected with the Bank of Montreal in this city. A sister of the deceased, Miss Flemington, resides in Scotland.

Mrs. Tannahill was a true Christian lady, a devoted wife and loving mother. Her demise will be sincerely regretted by a large circle of friends.

Seeing Double.

The two eyes really see two objects. If the two forefingers be held, one at the distance of a foot, the other two feet in front of the eyes, and the former looked at, two phantoms of the latter will be observed, one on each side. If the latter finger be expanded, two phantoms of the nearer finger will be observed mounting guard, one on either side.

Suicide by Drowning.

"Nearly every person who commits suicide by drowning partly undresses before entering the water," said ex-Captain Westcott at an inquest in London.

To "pile on agony."

To "pile on agony" is popularly supposed to be an Americanism. It is, however, found in one of the letters of Junius Brutus and was used in English popular literature before the beginning of the last century.

Hats.

The hats grows better in light than in darkness because of the stimulating effect of light and sunshine. It has been often noticed in the case of dhs who sit in offices with one side always turned toward the light that the mustache or beard on that side grows longer than that on the other.

Venezuela.

Venezuela means "Little Venice." The natives found the houses of the Indians living in houses placed on piles in the marshes.

Proof on a Calf.

A piece of evidence in a Quebec breach of promise case was a calf with an offer of marriage written on it. On this night the defendant was holding the plaintiff's hand and, while peering fervid words, he popped the question in accordance with the sentiment of her wrist. She was sentimental or shrewd enough to keep that article out of the way, and it has proved of practical value.

Serious Crisis Over the Norway Disunion Bill.

Dissolution of the Union of the Two Kingdoms Must Come After Negotiation Only—Report of the Swedish Committee—Terms to Be Insisted On by Sweden in the Event of a Dissolution.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 26.—The Cabinet has resigned.

A special committee appointed by the Riksdag to deal with the crisis which created the revolution in Norway yesterday delivered its report. The committee declares unanimously that the Government bill cannot be adopted in the form in which it is now presented to the Riksdag, and proposes that the Riksdag shall signify its willingness to negotiate with Norway for a dissolution of the union if the newly-elected Storthing requests a repeal of the act of union, or if such request is received from Norway after the Norwegian people by a plebiscite have declared in favor of a dissolution of the union.

Terms Sweden Should Demand.

The committee recommends that in the event of a dissolution of the union Sweden should insist on the following terms:

First, the establishment of a zone on each side of the frontier separating the kingdoms within which the existing fortifications shall be razed and new fortifications may not be erected.

Second, the right of pasturing reindeer belonging to Swedish Lapsanders in North Norway.

Third, that the transit trade through both countries shall be secured against unjustifiable obstruction.

Fourth, that the status of Sweden in respect to foreign powers as established by the treaty shall be clearly defined by the consent of Sweden as a condition of the repeal of the act of union, the part of Sweden and of the recognition of Norway must be declared and adhered to with rigor and determination.

Newspapers Await Debate.

Christiania, July 26.—Commenting on the situation in Stockholm all the newspapers prefer to await the debate in the Riksdag on the report of the special committee before considering the conditions Sweden desires to impose, but the majority inclined to the opinion that these conditions will not be acceptable to Norway.

Wisby, Sweden, July 26.—The German Imperial yacht Hohenzollern with Emperor William on board, arrived here yesterday.

7,000 Workmen Locked Out.

New York, July 26.—The Herald prints the following from Rome:—A telegram from Terris states that the masons have place rolling mills there have been closed pending the settlement of the workingmen for the eight-hour day. Seven thousand men are locked out. The Government has proposed to take steps for conciliation, but the workingmen have refused to accept it. It is probable that this will be a general strike in sympathy in all the iron and steel mills in the country. Anarchist and Socialist leaflets are stated to be inciting the workmen.

Moscow is situated almost in the geographical center of European Russia.

CLOSURE ONLY MEANS

Of Advancing Business Before Redmond's Obstruction.

Nationalist Leader Keeps House of Commons In a Ferment Till 3 a. m. —Determination to Block Government Business Carried So Far That 27 Private Bills Are Sent Over For a Year.

London, July 26.—The members of the Opposition in the House of Commons, practically led by John Redmond, the Nationalist leader, who was the managing of the recent defeat of the Government, yesterday inaugurated their threatened plan of making Government business impossible, and in pursuance of which, they managed to keep the House in stormy session until 3 o'clock this morning, compelling Premier Balfour to have constant recourse to closure as the only means of advancing business.

Supporters of the Government, warned by the recent disaster, loyally stood by Mr. Balfour, maintaining a majority in the neighborhood of 60.

One phase of Mr. Redmond's obstructionist tactics is likely to arouse great resentment.

In consisted in blocking private bills for enterprise promoted at vast expense by municipalities and commercial companies, for public works, such as railroads and tramways.

No less than 27 such bills were blocked yesterday, the effect being to delay their exportation for a whole year.

INDIAN MURDERER TRIES SUICIDE

Attempted to Cut Artery, But Did Not Cheat the Hangman.

New Westminster, B. C., July 26.—Wierdly and plaintively chanting the Lord's Prayer in Chinook, spiritually interpreted by Rev. Thomas Crosby and supported in a wavering walk by two guards, Indian Police Commissioner Radcliffe, Tom Kiedamkilzhuh, the murderer of Constable Campbell, was led to death on the scaffold in the Provincial Jail here yesterday morning.

Monday afternoon the condemned man managed to secure a piece of broken glass and made a gash under his knee in an attempt to cut an artery, but was detected in time to prevent fatality, and weak from the loss of blood and half crazed by the terror of the impending execution, he spent a restless night.

Deadly Level Crossing.

Toronto, July 26.—Again the death level crossing has been the cause of a tragedy. This time Michael Lanigan, aged 54, a teamster, residing at 43 Palmerston avenue, was killed while driving across the railway tracks at the foot of Spadina avenue yesterday morning. On his wagon was a heavy load of clay. When he started down the steep hill that leads to the car tracks, he saw the train coming from the east. Throwing all of his weight upon the brake, he endeavored to swerve his team and himself from the threatened death. His effort was made too late.

Handled Over an Embankment.

Toronto, July 26.—After having his wagon hitched astern of a traction engine over Dundas street bridge, causing his horses to run away, and at last to plunge through the railing at the eastern end of the bridge, turn two somersaults in the air and fall to the foot of the embankment, dash through a second fence and finish on a railway tracks below, Thomas Mill, 45 years old, a sewing machine agent, of 37 Bracondale avenue, emerged yesterday afternoon with only his little finger sprained. The horse was killed as a result of the accident, and the wagon lacks a dash board.

John Laughrin Dismissed.

Toronto, July 26.—It is rumored around the Parliament buildings that John Laughrin, registrar of deeds for Nipissing, and magistrate at Sudbury, has received his dismissal. The charges for offensive partisanship. Mr. Laughrin holds offices setting him about $4,000 a year.

Has C. P. R. Got Pere Marquette?

WILL WATCH LEGISLATION.

Convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 26.—The convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities opened yesterday with a large attendance from the east, Manitoba and the Territories. Mayor Urquhart of Toronto, in the absence of Mayor Laporte of Montreal, president of the union, occupied the chair.

Mayor Thomas Sharpe welcomed the delegates to Winnipeg.

Ald. Couture of Montreal responded on behalf of the convention.

The president's address was given by Mayor Urquhart, who referred to the battle of the Canadian Commons over the Toronto & Hamilton Railway a few years ago, in which municipalities came forward to fight for the rights of Toronto. There should be Provincial union in each Province, meeting annually, and appointing delegates to the convention of the Union of Canadian Municipalities. Provincial organization would look after legislation in Provincial Parliaments, while the Dominion convention could watch the interests of municipalities in the Ottawa House.

The annual report of the secretary-treasurer was read by W. D. Lighthall. The union, he said, has had a history for seven years since its first formation. There are now on roll 130 members, comprising the leading and the leading municipalities of Canada.

The principal event of the year had been the formation of the Dominion telephone committee, which had been the means of throwing a flood of light on the telephone situation. In Ottawa and Montreal the municipalities were living up for a corporation fight.

MAJOR WALSH DEAD.

Former Yukon Commissioner—As Inspector of Mounted Police Induced Sitting Bull to Surrender to U.S.

Brockville, July 26.—Major J. M. Walsh died at his home here yesterday morning, after a week's illness with heart trouble.

Major Walsh was 62 years of age, being born in Prescott in 1843. In 1866 he was commissioned Lieutenant No. 3 Co. Rifles, Prescott, was appointed captain and subsequently of 56th Battalion on its formation in 1867, and soon after raised and took command of D Squadron, 6th Hussars. At the time of the Red River Rebellion, 1870, he was appointed ensign, but resigned. In 1873 he was gazetted brevet major, and retired from the militia retaining his rank in November, 1875.

He served throughout the Fenian Raid and again in 1870, and in 1873 was appointed inspector of the North-west Mounted Police. In the North-west Territories he established a reputation for firmness and courage in dealing with the Indians and more especially in the treatment of Sitting Bull, the Sioux chief. The latter having fled from the American forces in check and utterly defeated General Custer, and his command had withdrawn across the boundary line, Major Walsh was met by Major Walsh and several troopers and induced to surrender to the United States authorities.

Major Walsh resigned from the Mounted Police in 1883, and entered the Dominion Coal, Coke and Transportation Company. The discovery of gold in the Yukon district and the consequent advent of population, induced the Dominion Government to appoint a special commissioner to Administer the Government in that territory. Major Walsh was selected Aug. 17, 1897, for that office, which he held creditably with distinguished ability for one year.

BLOWN TO DEATH.

Three Men Meet Violent Death in British Columbia Mines.

Banff, B. C., July 26.—While miners were at work in the Bank Head mine Monday afternoon, three miles east of here, a fearful explosion of gas suddenly occurred, which wrought awful havoc to the workmen. Among the dead is that of Thomas Singley of Ireland, David Jones of Wales, and John Williams of Wales, and injury to many others.

The mine and buildings were literally blown to pieces. The cause of the explosion is not yet known.

MUNICIPAL MATTERS.

Proceedings at Union of Canadian Municipalities at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, July 27.—Features of the opening session of the Canadian Municipal Convention yesterday were addresses by Hon. Louis Beth, city comptroller of St. Paul, Minn., and by Mayor Ellis of Ottawa.

Mr. Beth spoke on "Municipal Financing and Accounting," a subject on which he has been invited to speak at the ninth annual convention of the League of American Municipalities, to be held at Toledo in August. "The Ottawa Electric Light" was taken up by Mayor Ellis.

The feature of the afternoon session was an excellent address by F. W. Darger, telephone expert from Ottawa, which was listened to with deep interest. Joshua Dyke, ex-mayor of Fort William, gave an able review of municipal ownership in the twin towns of Fort William and Port Arthur, showing that municipal ownership had been made to pay.

At last night's session John T. Hall, assessment commissioner of Hamilton, delivered an address and Harry Bragg, editor of The Canadian Municipal Journal, entertained the delegates to a lecture on "Canadian Cities, Their Position, Location and Attractions."

The convention will finish its work with this morning's session and the afternoon is to be spent at the fair.

Warrant For Abduction.

St. Thomas, July 27.—Mrs. Mary Ann Mowers of Port Bruce was in the city yesterday and laid an information before County Magistrate Hunt, charging Walter Weir with the abduction of her 14-year-old daughter, Florence Mowers. A warrant was therefore issued for the arrest of Weir, who is believed to be in the States.

"Yellow Jack" Has 45 Victims.

New Orleans, La., July 27.—Six deaths from yellow fever were recorded yesterday up to 6 p. m., making a total to date of 45. The number of new cases reported yesterday and compiled to-day is 11, making all told to date 164 cases. There are now 19 centres of infection.

Killed by the G. T. R. Flyer.

The Misses Inglehart of Palermo Meet Instantaneous Death.

The Two Ladies Had Crossed the Track Before the G. T. R. International Limited, But Their Horse Became Frightened and Backed Up on the 6th Line Level Crossing —One Badly Mangled, Other Slightly Marked.

Oakville, July 27.—As a result of a little recklessness and a frightened horse, a double fatality occurred here yesterday afternoon when the Misses Inglehart of Palermo were instantly killed by the International Limited of the G. T. R.

The accident occurred at the sixth line level crossing, a short distance west of the station. The ladies had been shopping in Oakville during the afternoon, and were on their way home.

As they neared the crossing they were warned by a farm hand of the approach of the flyer. The view of the track, however, was obstructed by the station and by a number of cars on the siding.

They drove ahead and managed to cross the tracks in safety. Unfortunately the horse became frightened by the noise and excitement and, stopping, backed up.

The locomotive struck the buggy and demolished it. One of the occupants was buried about two rods; her death not quite so far. One had her head badly mangled, the other but little marked. The horse was not injured.

Dr. Lusk and Dr. Urquhart were summoned, but found that both women had met with instant death. The bodies were removed by the undertaker's mortuary. No inquest will be held.

The Misses Emma and Ella Inglehart were the only daughters of J. E. Inglehart of Dundas street, Palermo, one of the oldest and best known families in the County. They were about 30 years of age. Mrs. Inglehart died last fall.

Woman Hurled to Death.

Cowbar, July 27.—While returning from Lake St. Clair attending a church picnic, Mrs. Chris. Stevenson of Mersea Township, was thrown from her buggy in crossing the G. T. R. tracks at Stoney Point. The unfortunate woman fell under the horse's feet, and her skull was fractured, death ensuing before the arrival of the Grey & Bruce Cement Works. He was oiling the shafting, which in some manner he lost his footing and fell headlong to the cement floor a distance of 16 feet.

In Changing Seats Boat Capsized.

Buffalo, July 27.—A double drowning accident on the Welland Canal, near Montrose, Ont., occurred Tuesday night. The victims were Miss Hazel Hayden and Ernest Doane, both residents of Niagara Falls, N.Y. They were in a boat with Gertrude Dick and Chas. Bloore. An attempt was made to exchange seats, the boat being capsized.

Dynamite Disfigures Children.

Tottenham, July 27.—By the explosion of a dynamite cartridge in the hands of two children or William Courtney, near here, a boy of seven years of age, had three fingers torn off his right hand, and the other, a child of ten years, had the flesh torn from his body and arm. Both children are badly disfigured about the face, but no fatal results are anticipated.

One Man Dead, Three Dying.

Tottenham, July 27.—By the falling of trestle work on the construction of this new C. P. R. road, about thirty miles south of here, six cars loaded with gravel fell some ten feet and buried beneath the debris four men, three of whom were extricated, badly and probably fatally injured, and the fourth instantly killed. The dead man is a Russian, 23 years of age, and unmarried. No name can be assigned for the accident, the structure being apparently substantially built.

Boy Instantly Killed.

Brooklin, July 27.—The twelve-year-old son of William Corner was killed at his father's farm, about two miles west of here, yesterday forenoon. In the absence of his father and elder brother he had cut the oats, spitting hitched a horse to a light wagon and started for a load of wood. Within a few rods of home the horse took fright, and ran away, throwing the lad violently to the ground and fracturing his skull. Death was instantaneous.

WORTH A LARGE SUBSIDY.

Pacific Cable Conference Has Scheme Under Consideration.

London, July 27.—The C. A. P. understands that the final meeting of the Pacific cable conference on Friday a report will be submitted which it is hoped all the delegates will be able to sign.

No proposal will be made to stop operations of the cable in order to cut current losses or by wanting to the Treasury and the Colonies involved in the partnery, but various plans will be recommended, whereby they will have to be placed on a sounder commercial basis.

The conference is agreed the cable is worth a large Imperial asset, taking into considera.ion the large reduction in cable rates in Australia, which the competition it introduced brought about.

G. T. R. MUST OBLIGE C. P. R.

Railway Commission Orders Interchanging at London.

Ottawa, July 27.—The Railway Commission has handed out judgment in the London interchanging case. The Grand Trunk is ordered to afford all reasonable and proper facilities to the Canadian Pacific for receiving, forwarding and delivering all traffic offered to it, and for the interchange of traffic between the lines and those of the C. P. R.

The rates to be paid are to be those provided for by any joint tariffs in existence between the railway companies interested. When such do not exist the figure established is one cent per hundred pounds, but not less than $5 per car load. For immediate switching between the point of connection and the connection of the G. T. R. with the Pere Marquette the rate is to be $3 per car.

GREECE EXTENDS PREFERENCE.

Good For Britain and Colonies Under Reciprocal Terms.

London, July 27.—(C. A. P.)—An official statement has been issued by the Board of Trade giving particulars of the new commercial arrangement with Greece. Goods produced and manufactured in any part of the British Empire are to enjoy conditionally the most favored nation treatment in Greece so long as such portion of the British Empire accords to goods of Greek origin treatment as favorable as it gives the goods of any other foreign nation. The duty on cod and spck fish of 3s 6d a cwt. has been reduced to less than 2s 6d as a concession to Newfoundland in return for the free admission of Greek currants.

To Jail For Prize Fighting.

Montreal, July 27.—Judge Choquette yesterday sentenced Jimmy Brooks, formerly of Brooklyn, and Jack Walsh of Montreal to three months in jail for prize-fighting in a handball alley in the heart of the city. They were the principals, and the judge had no option. An appeal will be taken and judgment in the case of three others for aiding and abetting was withheld until the appeal is decided.

Big Storm Sweeps Carolinas.

San Francisco, July 27.—Rev. J. M. Shannon, who for fifteen years has labored as a missionary among the natives of the Caroline Islands, brings news of a frightful storm which swept over the Carolines in April last. Nearly all of the islands in the eastern end of the group were devastated. Nineteen natives were kill d, and the schooners Punape and Diana were destroyed.

Dies While Bicycling.

Cobourg, July 27.—A sad death occurred Tuesday evening when Miss Nettie Carruthers, youngest daughter of the late J. D. Carruthers, Hamilton Township, accompanied by her sist r, was cycling from her home to the residence of her uncle, only about a mile distant. She was taken suddenly ill and expired in about three minutes, and before she could be taken to her home.

Small-pox Scare at Stirling.

Stirling News-Argus: A little excitement has been caused on account of what is alleged by the physicians to be a mild case of smallpox in our village, the patient being Mr. Chas. Heard, who with his wife recently came from Seattle, Wash., on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Heard. He had been ill for some time, and on Saturday last the medical health officer, in consultation with other doctors of the village, declared it to be a case of smallpox and quarantined the house. Many were skeptical, however, about it being smallpox, and it was not till a specialist from Toronto, Dr. Bell, had declared that it was smallpox that they believed it; and even yet some are inclined to doubt. The patient has been placed in a tent on the commons at the west end of the village. There need be no alarm over this, as every precaution has been taken to keep the parties isolated, and whether smallpox or not, it is a very mild case.

AUGUST CANADIAN MAGAZINE.

The colored illustrations in the August Canadian Magazine are fully equal to anything which this enterprising publication has previously produced. The colored reproduction of Mr. Brigden's drawing is especially good, and it is pleasant to know that both the drawing and the plates were "Made in Canada." The fiction in this number is exceptionally good and every story is by a native writer. In fact, this whole number is packed full of interesting and delightful features.

Church and State in France.

Antagonism to Clericalism has been slowly but effectively taking possession of the minds of the educated masses of the civilized portions of the world. Whether this is the result of what is termed advanced thought on the part of the rising generation, or a fixed desire to rid themselves of what is considered clerical dictation and clerical tyranny, or both; opinions differ. One thing is certain, people are refusing to continue to live in that state of clerical serfdom, which has prevailed so long in certain churches and in certain portions of the world, and are throwing to the wind all church controls, telling the church to confine itself to spiritual matters, and let State affairs alone.

Italy some years ago stripped the Pope of certain rights and powers in civil matters; England severed the connection between the Church and the State in Ireland, and is now agitating for further concessions in that line; Canada rejected the principle of Church and State years ago; now France, a Roman Catholic country, has taken a decisive step in the same direction. Agitation in that country has at last culminated in the passage of a bill in the Chamber of Deputies, providing for a total separation of Church and State, on a vote of 341 to 233.

This most important legislation affecting the long established social and religious conditions of France becomes an accomplished fact so far as the Chamber of Deputies is concerned. The next step away by this bill dates from 1801, when the famous "concordat" was signed by Pius the Seventh and Napoleon. This gave religion governmental status, the churches being government property with the clergy paid by the State and the entire church administration being under the direction of a member of the President's Cabinet. The new system abolishes all laws and regulation under the concordat and terminates the authority of the concordat itself.

The general principle of the measure as finally adopted by the Chamber of Deputies is as follows:

"The Republic assures liberty of conscience and guarantees the free exercise of religion subject to the restrictions of public order. The Republic neither recognizes, pays stipends to, nor subsidizes any sect, but provides funds for colleges, hospitals and asylum chaplains. Otherwise, the public worship budget is abolished and public establishments connected with religion are suppressed."

The most active contest took place over the question whereby the priceless riches of the church, consisting of collections made during many centuries, tapestries and statuary, were to be passed to the State. This was finally modified so that civil organizations retain control of the good of the church.

TIMELY TOPICS.

After many strenuous days,
When jollity was rife,
Doesn't it make you sad to go
Back to the simple life?

Of all sad words of tongue or pen
The saddest are these: "They're off again."

Has anyone seen the president of the Houlton lately? The last seen of him he was at the train station, giving the Chautauqua salute to a lot of old girls who were going away.

No band concert to-night. That's right. What we need at present is not band concerts, but a chance to pull ourselves together a bit.

It is popularly supposed that kings and queens have easy jobs, but, after recent experiences, many people in this city will probably change their minds, when they remember that, in some town or city, the heads that wear crowns are up against that three cheers and a tiger state of affairs about four days or so a week. No, indeed! the tasks of royalty are not easy. Here is a case in point: The other day the King and Queen paid a visit to Sheffield, leaving London at 10 a.m., and arriving in the Steel Town at 1 p.m. They left again at 3.30 p.m. In the four and a half hours of their stay this is what happened:

Reception at station.
Luncheon at Town Hall.
Opened new university buildings.
Unveiled memorial to South African soldiers.
Presented colors to 2nd Battalion, King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry.
Inspected Vickers-Maxim Works.
Seven Royal salutes fired.
Three bouquets presented to Her Majesty.
Received five addresses.
His Majesty made two speeches.
Listened to three speeches.
Several people were presented.
Drove several miles through streets lined by thousands of cheering subjects.

It will be willingly admitted that this represented a hard day's work.

A Toronto judge has decided that a husband is the owner of his wife's wedding ring, after her death. Her engagement ring, he says, a wife can will to whom she pleases, but the wedding ring he holds to be always the property of the husband. And in the marriage ceremony as a symbol. The case arose through a woman, now deceased, giving her wedding ring to her mother before she died. The husband wanted it, sued his mother-in-law for it, and hence the judgment, which seems to be a case.

"This," said the man on the next block, "is fine weather for my corn." And the way he limped showed what corn he meant.

A Michigan clergyman, who used a telephone on Sunday, has been asked, by his congregation, to give up his job. There is a certain amount of hello! about Sunday phones, you know.

A New York man has been arrested for deserting his wife and 20 children. Perhaps he got disheartened trying to remember all the children's names.

A South Dakota girl captured a burglar. When that young lady goes after a husband she will probably get him.

A fellow in New Jersey says he got married because his girl lived in another town and it was too hot to go and court her every Wednesday night. Laziness gets many a fine fellow into trouble.

A Toronto man quarrelled with his wife and then hanged himself in the cellar. A real suicide, that.

It is not the Scarabrick cup that cheers Montrealers just now. They've lost it after nine years custody.

The advice about early shopping on Saturday night, which appeared in this column last night, made a hit with many people. It is a fact, according to parties with whom we talked, that the thought seems to make a practice of chatting with friends for an hour or so on Front St. on Saturday night before they start to do their shopping. If they would do their shopping first and their chatting afterwards it might be the means of giving them much easier for many a tired salesman, who, as conditions are at present, feels, on Sunday morning, too tired to get up and go to church." The Golden Rule is one which might well be borne in mind by Saturday night shoppers.

Many leading papers throughout Canada had kind things to say about the Belleville Old Boys' Reunion, which is pleasant and only natural. There is a sentiment about reunions and home-comings which appeals to everybody, the same being one of the kindliest traits in human nature.

It has lately become the fashion to picture Rockefeller, the oil king, sitting and and dejected, in a corner, crushed and broken-hearted over the storm of public opinion which has broken out against him. The next we hear is, as the Brockville Times remarks, John seems to have kept his eye on the ticker just the same, and is now looking for we learn that he has just cornered the flax-seed market and closed up three big mills in Buffalo, too.

They are surely leading the simple life up in Lindsay. The Post says Horn Bros., proprietors of the Lindsay Woollen Co., limited, have closed down their factory for two weeks, in order to give all their employees a vacation.

YOUVE HEARD THIS BEFORE.
(Chicago News.)

The moment that I felt the jerk,
I knew the fish would make me work.

I thought at first the line would break
Or he would pull me in the lake.

I've seen some bass that I would call
Fish-sized, but this was best them all.

Two feet would be his length, I guess
He certainly was not much less.

You needn't snicker. I defy
The world to prove that it's a lie.

Well, then, if you're not satisfied
You'd better go and ask the guide.

I played him till my arms were sore,
Yes—played him for an hour or more.

And all the time the way he fought
Beat any fish I ever caught.

I was exhausted, just about,
Before I tired that monster out.

No, I can't say what he would scale,
But all the same he was a whale.

The reason why I cannot say
Is that the beggar got away.

Things are coming to a pretty pass in the Liberal party when The Globe says The Toronto Star, Sir William Mulock's paper, "has become a sort of commerce and gain-belt of the machine element of the Liberal party, and a professional apologist for anything brought forward by its party allies." Wow! Wouldn't that make your Uncle William raise the price of The Globe's postage, though?

Admiral Roy had an operation performed on his head. Perhaps the doctors were trying to put something in it.

TRAGEDIES OF A DAY.
(Toronto Globe.)

Are Canadians becoming as reckless of life as men are accused to be fine? The enormous increase in the number of fatal accidents in recent years seems to indicate that human life is held more cheaply than it was, and that people take chances, not merely with their own lives, but with the lives of those they should care for and protect. The long list of fatalities grouped together this morning contains examples of several sorts of deadly carelessness. Take the worst was that of a young man on the Welland River, who sat with his feet over the side of a skiff in which a party of four were sailing. A lady companion tried to change her seat, the skiff upset, because the lady's weight was thrown so far from the centre of gravity, and the young man and girl were drowned. He died like a hero, trying to save his companion, but a man may be a fool as well as a hero.

A Montreal woman who left a two-year-old infant in charge of a six-year-old sister, the result being that the little tot overbalanced and fell to death on the street, is another example of the recklessness that is deadly.

The burns figures largely in the horrible story. Two girls were killed near Oakville while driving across the railway track. The theory is that when they noticed the train they were partly across the track, and tried to back or turn the horse. The animal became intractable. A Brougham twelve-year-old boy was killed on being thrown from a wagon by a runaway horse, and a Sidney Point woman was killed because her horse became frightened at some heaps of gravel on a railway crossing and bolted. The moral of all this is that a horse cannot be managed in a grave emergency save by a strong adult.

The list of the day's tragedies is a long one, and it is only by the man at the telegraph desk that its ever-increasing length is fully appreciated. Care for human life should be taught by all who mould either public opinion or the individual conscience.

LONG AND FAITHFUL SERVICE

MR. ROBERT GORDON HAS BEEN SABBATH SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENT FOR FIFTY-SIX YEARS.

From the Christian Guardian of the 5th inst., we clip the following:

"Rev. J. W. Totten writes that on the Tweed circuit, at the Lodge room Church, Mr. R. Gordon, manager of the Sovereign Bank, is now in his fifty-seventh year as superintendent of the Sunday school. Some who were scholars in the school during the term of Mr. Gordon's superintendency are no doubt now aged people. One thing that is noteworthy is the fact that there are in the school as scholars persons who are well advanced in years. We would like to hear if there is any other school with a similar record of unbroken oversight as superintendent for fifty-six years, entering with vigor and zeal into the fifty-seventh."

Mr. Robert Gordon is the father of Ald. Gordon, of this city.

Bogus Ballot-Boxes in House of Commons.

Mr. Porter. The evidence shows that those boxes left Ottawa and were shipped into the County of Hastings.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. If the hon. member for Hastings (Mr. Porter) will read the evidence, he will be better able to appreciate it.

Mr. Porter. The Minister states that there is evidence that the bogus ballot-box was used. Here is the evidence. Let him read it.

Q.—Where did you get that ballot box from? A.—The court house, Kingston.

Q.—What division is that? A.—Division No. 2, Sidney, No. 2.

Q.—Your division? A.—Yes.

Q.—From whom? A.—Mr. Grant, caretaker of the court house.

Q.—Was that ballot-box used in your poll? A.—It was not.

Q.—You have examined one of these ballot boxes? A.—Yes.

Q.—Will you do so? A.—I can't say it was the same box, but it was similar in every respect.

The box that was used was similar to the ballot-box produced in every respect, and that is corroborated by another witness.

Mr. R. L. Borden. (West Toronto.) The accusation made against my hon. friend from Hastings (Mr. Porter) that he was indifferent to the prosecution of those engaged in this infraction of the law is unfounded. I am in a position to deny. I know that the Minister was exceedingly anxious, and immediately on learning that the facts were as stated, caused the case to Toronto and consulted some of his friends. We found that the Government could not take action at the time. The suggestion was made that Mr. DuVernet should be employed to conduct this case, and I was present at a meeting at which Mr. DuVernet was engaged to see at once that these men were arrested and that those connected with the fraud punished. Mr. DuVernet, I gave him to understand, was the man to which to proceed was by the way of a criminal action. Against the wishes of those who were rather incredulous of the result, and afraid to take this, that course as Mr. DuVernet was pursued. It was necessary to raise private funds for that purpose, and it was with private funds that most of the evidence to connect with this matter was procured. I say that in my judgment had it not been for the fervent prosecution of these men, they would probably have been allowed to escape. But the proceedings came to a point where they were put into Mr. Shepley's hands. Mr. Shepley told me then that there had been sufficient delay to allow a lot of the men to escape. I thought it my duty to cooperate my hon. friend from Hastings (Mr. Porter) from the charge that he deliberately delayed proceedings.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. As to the statement that on private funds alone the prosecution was entered, I can say that I paid accounts myself and I paid the witnesses.

At six o'clock, House took recess.

AFTER RECESS.

House resumed at eight o'clock.

Mr. R. L. Borden. Mr. Speaker, I desire to say only a very few words in regard to the matter that is occupying the attention of the House. I think my hon. friend from West Hastings and Mr. Shepley has presented the case to the House in a very moderate and judicial manner. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice criticised the hon. member for West Hastings (Mr. Porter) in giving notice. I made some inquiry in regard to this and I think that is due to a misunderstanding between my hon. friend from West Hastings and myself. He stated that I was to give notice of motion with reference to this matter, and he understood me to answer that in a matter of this kind it was not necessary to give any notice. It is certainly not necessary under the rules of the House, but it is always desirable and upon this misunderstanding between my hon. friend from West Hastings and myself must be placed the slightest to give notice in this instance. My hon. friend the Minister of Justice criticised the hon. member (Mr. Hastings) for not giving certain information when he was asked on it, on the 23rd of November, and he treated in a very casual way the circumstances that at that time there was a prosecution in a case of criminal libel outstanding. I think that is one way to look at it, but in a proceeding of that kind great care must be taken and it would not be right that the member for West Hastings took a very prompt and full course in giving the information which he did on a subsequent occasion and in view of words referring counsel employed by this Government to his own solicitors upon which he was acting in that case. However, these are mere details. The real question is after all first to which the hon. Minister of Justice addressed himself, and that is whether or not the Government in this case exercised a reasonable amount of diligence in dealing with what undoubtedly was a very grave conspiracy on the part of certain men to deprive the people of certain constituencies of the country of their right to return their representatives to Parliament. Now, it will not be denied that this matter was made public on the 2nd or 3rd of November. In some of the newspapers of Toronto—I cannot say with reference to it on the 2nd of November, and I think the Toronto Globe published it on the 3rd of November. Notwithstanding that it appears, as I understand, from the statement of my hon. friend from West Hastings, that no detective, no police officer of the Government, appeared on the scene or took any action until the 18th of November.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. No, on the 7th of November.

Mr. R. L. Borden. Well, I am mistaken in that. I had understood from my hon. friend (Mr. Porter) that he was otherwise engaged in the riding until the 18th of November.

How Lord Alcy Sprung the Joke He Had Prepared.

Act 1 (at a railway station).

Lord Alcy—Aw—aw—aw—bah Jove! See that confounded person trying to crawl ovah that valise!

Jack Joiner—He's not drunk, poor fellow!

Bob Roller—Oh, come, now! Not drunk!

Jack Joiner—No. Can't you see that he's just getting over the grip?

Lord Alcy—Aw—I see. Good! Lord Alcy—Beg pawdon!

(Exeunt, explaining it.)

Act 2 (at the theatre).

Lord Alcy (alone)—Bah Jove, hyah's a go! Here's a confounded play-bill which I thought I had prepared with such care, and I've got the wrong one! Why, it's a play about a bally good Joke, ye know. I neahly made myself ill laughing when I saw it in rehearsal. Confounded bounder, why, as it proved, was not drunk at all, ye know, but quite ill, was climbing upon my leg. "Here, you drunken sot," said Josher, who's a deuce of a wit, "you've got the grip!" And the poor chap's just recovering from the influenza! Well, you chaps don't catch it, I see, that's the first remark. One has to be educated to American humor. But it's the blawsted good!

GERM DISEASES OF SUMMER.

NO ONE NEED FEARS SICK NESS IF MI-O-NA IS USED.

People with strong stomachs and natural digestion are ordinarily not subject to bowel troubles, diarrhoea, and other germ diseases that are so prevalent and dangerous in the summer months.

A Mi-o-na tablet taken before eating will give such health and strength to the weakest stomach that the whole system will become strong and well, and so clean and sweet that there will be no chance for disease germs to become effective.

A great many people imagine that a headache, dizziness, heart burn, or general despondency and weakness is a sign of fatal illness, when the trouble is ordinarily one result of a weak stomach and imperfect digestion. A 50-cent box of Mi-o-na tablets will show by the very great help with that box that the sick is the cause of the poor health, and that Mi-o-na is the only remedy that will drive out all weakness, debility, and disease.

Mi-o-na is nearly infallible in curing the diseases resulting from a weakened stomach, excepting cancer of the stomach that, if Mi-o-na McKeown guarantees to refund the money without the remedy not give perfect satisfaction.

SPORTING NOTES.

The annual meet of the A. A. L. C. to be held in Ottawa on Friday, Sept. 15th, promises to be a top notcher. Special railroad rates from all points in Canada have been secured. Entries have already been received from Jacks, N.B., to Winnipeg, and it is certain that the best athletic ability of Canada will be there. The events are all open to Canadian amateurs in good standing.

AD sport notes

England defeated in the fourth test cricket match from Australia yesterday, when in their second innings the Australians made 109 runs. England in the first made 446 runs, Australia 197, England winning by an innings and 80 runs.

Some trouble exists between the management and players of the Brantford Lacrosse Club. Yesterday the former issued a somewhat lengthy statement, showing that the salaries so far paid out to players total $2,100, not counting other expenses. The players have not been paid for last week, and it is believed this is the whole cause of the trouble. (With the several good games in the future the management is brought to a pretty extremely bright, since all the debt will be cleared off by the end of next Tuesday night the players refused to continue the last week's pay, but when the situation was explained the majority of them backed down. The Brantfords have been troubled by no means implex the troubles of the Elks. All dates will be filled, and with good teams as well. It is thought that all the difficulty can be overcome in a day or two, though complications looked very serious yesterday.

Temeraire, the Fife boat, owned by Rear Commodore Nichols of the Royal Canadian Yacht Club, is the craft which the R.C.Y.C. will send across the Atlantic to defend the Canada's Cup. The selection was finally made last night by the judges, Commodore Nichols, Messrs. Hamilton and George Evans, after a most exhaustive test in the afternoon.

THE PRIZE FISH STORY.

HOW A PETERBORO ANGLER CAUGHT A WHOLE COLONY OF BASS—SEND THE BELT UP TO MR. BEST.

Peterboro, July 26.—Up to date the prize for the best fish story of the season must be awarded to Mr. E. M. Best, but in this case he is not the hero of the first part. He appears, however, that a gentleman from the fifth ward recently purchased a fish outfit from Mr. Best, and the same day went down the river to engage in a piscatorial purpose. He was not long at it, his fondest hope, however, and instead of bringing home at a mess of fish he generally considered pretty good eating, he had a string of bass. It happened, in this wise: It appears that these bass five fish had all been feasting on the outfit that Mr. Best hooked him an enterprising fisherman. who had, in his generosity, put the string through their gills, the common habit of fishermen, but after he had gone a few rods he felt a tug on each end of the string, the fishes which had got a taste of steel and regaining their native element, had decided to take a swim. Now these five bass have been disporting themselves in the waters of the Otonabee, but, it is said, not for long; but a few days ago the quiescence of their existence was the first fish on the string once more saw the tempting bait, and as a foolhardy fish will do, he bit on with the result that he was caught, but unfortunately for the others was not to death to himself, but also to his four mates, for they were all pulled in.

The surprise of Mr. Thos. Mead, for that is the name of the fisherman referred to, may be imagined, when he found that he had caught not a fish but a colony of fish, instead of one, as he supposed. Fortunately his life buoy was not required, and with the result that they will never again have the satisfaction of escaping after having dared the fisherman's bait.

LITERATURE IN CANADA

OUR PEOPLE DEPENDENTS ON ENGLISH AND U. S. AUTHORS.

Ominous Feature Is the Americanizing of the Canadian Public—Effect on Business of American Advertising in Canadian Homes—The Plaint of the Canadian Writer—Good English Magazines.

Canada's abject dependency in the matter of literature upon English and American authors is a theme that has lately become the subject of discussion in newspapers all over the British Empire. From whatever point of view the matter may be regarded, it is most unsatisfactory, and surely must be humiliating to every good Canadian. If it is to be hoped that a period of lethargy will not continue forever, and that in this matter, as in most others, we shall reach a point when we shall be self-sufficient. The most distressing feature of the situation is not that some of the popular literature which we get from both England and America is pernicious, but that it should be in many instances absolutely hostile to our national ideals and character. It is for this reason that the subject becomes of such great importance, and one which might well command the attention of Parliament.

The Dominant Americanism.

There are two aspects in which the Americanizing of the Canadian people may be regarded. Undoubtedly the most serious feature in the case strikes at the very root of our patriotism. In the course of a year the number of dollars which Canadians spend for periodicals of a distinctly or constantly offensive to British sentiment is not inconsiderable. The American sales of these magazines was so much as to cause a readjustment of the rates charged in Canada. The Canadian market had become worth while. And there is reason to believe that in Don't tell, it is because this good old American paper has no Canadian circulation, not because there has been any complaint on the part of Canadian publishers and writers.

The Effect on Business.

While the insidious influence of American magazines should concern the Government, business interests are more affected by another matter. This is the advertising of American goods in Canadian publications, with the valuable assistance of the postal authorities. This phase of the question has already been discussed in The Mail and Empire, and the Canadian magazine literature is a pump which conveys Canadian trade into the United States. Whatever the volume of our purchases in the United States each year may be, it cannot be doubted that the bulk of it is inspired by advertisements. Some of these advertisements appear in Canadian publications, chiefly in newspapers. These, however, are a small portion of the American advertising matter circulated in Canada. Canadian manufacturers who pay particular attention to Canadian business use Canadian newspapers of course, but the Canadian magazine which circulates in both countries finds no competition in either Canadian nor American journals in this field.

The Canadian Writer's Plaint.

The undermining of Canadian sentiment and Canadian business by foreign industry are undoubtedly the two most deplorable features of the American invasion. In spite of these, some Canadians appear to be quite indifferent to the cause of the foreign magazine. It alone offers them a market for their output. For its copy will be paid for in dollars and dollars a year is paid by Canadian publishers for the privilege of using fiction. These authors forget that the market would not exist, even then, were it not a single American publication would be published, not because the authors are Canadians, but because they are entertaining. Canadian writers should hold their own, with the fiction producers of the United States, especially as that they are obliged to go abroad for their publication. The reason why it is first the story, then the writer, who crosses into the United States. It is some of the brightest of Canada's youth engage in fiction writing, their fate is a tragic one. They never get to the top. But in the present circumstances it is idle to complain of the total exclusion of American magazines. They publish the best serial stories, the read short stories, and timely illustrated articles. There is no Canadian publication which supplies the public and so the American magazine is purchased by the million readers every month.

Good English Magazines.

It might be feasible to give British magazines a preference, for they are produced entirely of a class higher than those published in the United States. Of course, the latter are unsurpassed as applying to the old and almost classic magazine literature, nevertheless it is not so widely realized as regards vehicles of pure fiction. It may be confidently asserted, however, that there is no American magazine which receives contributions from a single one of the authors as contribute to an English magazine published in London, or New Co. The most successful series of stories published in recent years, that of "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes" appeared first in another English magazine. The most successful writer of exclusively publishing the humorous stories of W. W. Jacobs appeared in the most highly paid of regular magazine contributors. It is not that the best English magazines alone, our plight would not be so serious, for after all our reading matter would be better in every respect than it is at present.

Englishmen and Story-Tellers.

As regards more serious essay in fiction than magazine-short stories, our dependency is no less apparent than that of readers in the United States. The Englishmen. One might mention a dozen at once, but one sufficient to quote led by any living American writer. There is everything in the United States a kind of literature peculiarly American, and in its development our writers have shown unusual ability. This may be described as the literature of business. Also we observe a tendency, which may be fleeting, to make politics the subject of novels. In both these departments some really good work has been done; but either the American business and American politics are interesting to American readers, or the writers have not the Canadian business and Canadian politics, until rather than do so, they will starve.

PROSPEROUS YEAR.

Fishermen's Catch Much Larger Than Usual—Waters Nearing Depletion.

The report of the Deputy Commissioner of Fisheries, Mr. E. E. Bastedo, for 1904 shows that in spite of the lateness of the commencement of the season, it was a very prosperous one for the fishermen. Prices were high and 12,912,000 pounds of fish were taken during the year, or 2,815,765 pounds more than the previous season. This was valued at $1,782,229. This amount is distributed as follows: 1,000 boats, 6,375,430; whitefish, 2,474,300; herring, 1,315,150; pickerel, 1,432,250; bass, 154,150; perch (pickerel), 1,716,700; coarse fish, 2,087,900 pounds; perch, 323,600; eels, 134,000; sturgeon, 1,000; trout, 150; sturgeon, 483,300; and of caviare, 1,000.

During the year licenses were issued for 1,000 boats, 1,000 nets, 814 pounds net, 473 hoop nets, 120 seines, 76 dip nets, three machines and several spearing licenses.

The occupation gave employment to 3,000 men, 1,000 large and 2,000 small boats. An estimated capital of $931,097 was invested in the fisheries.

The number of prosecutions for violations of the fishery laws was fewer than in 1903. There were 48, as compared with 105 in 1903. The principal offences were for illegal fishing and for the fines amounted to $513, as compared with $1,113 in 1903. Illegal hoop nets, 115 gill nets, 10 jackknifes and 1 fish-can occupied the time of four boats and several hundred pounds of fish were confiscated.

Depletion of Waters.

Regarding the depletion of interior waters Mr. Bastedo says: "I am to blame for excessive fishing on the American and Canadian sides, because of the failure to provide protective measures and to regulate the fishing was not properly enforced. In view of the increasing number of fishermen and the increasing demand for fishing nets, he says, it is evident that if something is not done to check the wholesale catch, no one can expect, he adds, that the Canadian will enforce protection when such is apparently which are not adopted by the Americans. The Federal Government, however, will likely be undertaken in 1905, and attention to the matter as well as that of close seasons.

The danger has been noted in inland waters, where sportsmen, Canadian and American sportsmen, for some time bemoaned the depletion. For four seasons, however, the Government, aided by the fishing companies, has been restocking these waters. In 1904 the number of fry reached 12,955 bass having been deposited.

PAID HER FARE.

And the Feelings of a Stranger In a Strange Land Were Spared.

One of those rare instances of one woman's kindness to another was seen on a Yonge street car last night as the latter was about to leave the car, says The Toronto World. By the way, he was a youngish-looking young man by his actions evidently a stranger in a city, but lately taken to the handling of the public conveyance for.

On the long seat of the closed car sat a well-dressed young woman apparently an English emigrant, taking in the sights. In leaving the car fares the conductor passed the fare box under her nose, which brought her to the realization that the introduction of a new custom. She guessed what it meant and acted on it, but when on the fare while she produced her pocketbook. The conductor, who by this time appeared to be a golden haired-sovereign. Handing it to the stranger, she said:

"I won't anything smaller."

In the mind of the young official a vein of thought of his own evidently passed in his trying to reckon what the fare in pounds, shillings and pence. It up and told the lady that as far as he knew the conductor was a perfective foreign money. For a moment the young woman's lip quivered. She was alone in a strange country, she did not know the customs of the people who might be out of her way. Her breach was happily closed by an elderly gentleman, who, seeing the trouble, the poor girl's fare. Turning to her she assisted a ventured to say, "Never thank you, ma'am. If they're all as kind as you are here I'm not sorry I came to Canada."

A Large Family.

A couple of weeks ago we complained that Dundas Beacon had given the safe arrival of his fourth pair of twins, making the even dozen of his family of children. At the time we little thought that this was "about the limit," but we have since learned that a resident of the town we live in and the inhabitants thereof, Lawrence Bowyer by name, is the seat and resident, dropped in-to the office of the Dundas Star with birth, deaths and marriages to record the advent of a new baby boy, and to-gether with twins, what do you think, twenty-sixth. After the registrar recovered sufficiently to speak he learned that Lalonde had been married twice, the first wife being a Beauchamp, and No. 2 a Vasseur. By each of his wives he had had a family of twelve, and Lalonde seems quite proud of his achievement, and until someone can make a better record we think he is entitled to it as a record. We may mention that three pairs of twins and twenty eighty are count for the full twenty-six.—Penetang Herald.

Excusable.

"It seems to me that Bilgins does-n't know his own mind."

"Well, you can't blame the man. He has been on the jury and has had heard the arguments of counsel on both sides so much that he doesn't feel sure of anything."

TO CURE DANDRUFF.

It is necessary That the Dandruff Germ Be Eradicated.

"Destroy the cause, you remove the effect." Kill the germ that causes dandruff, falling hair and baldness, and you will have no more dandruff and your hair must grow luxuriantly. Herpicide not only contains the dandruff germ destroyer, but it is also a most delightful hair dressing. No other hair preparation is on this scientific basis for destroying the dandruff germ, and note other claims to be, for the simple reason that it was only recently that a knowledge of the germ has been discovered—Newbro's Herpicide. The only hair preparation that actually kills dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. J. S. McArthur, special agent.

I find the toothache once to beat the band.

It gave me fits all of a month or more,

It jumped and thumped until I couldn't stand

Another night—and every day I swore

I'd his me to the dentist's, but my sand

Was shy of that by just about a grain,

And so I stopped it with a lavish hand

And pointed up my face to stop the pain,

And some of them would hold it for a while,

But it bruce loose again, and, holy land!

I thought my roof would surely lose a tile,

It kept me squirming for a month, about,

And then it stopped—because I had it out.

Say! Have you noticed how we seem to hate

To yank the measly snags that give us grief

The most? We always want to wait

To see if they'll turn over a new leaf.

We dope and poultice in affairs of grain,

And rub the social gum with creole.

We patch the ugly places with gold plate

And try each politician's antidote.

We fill and fool around to get things straight,

Although we know that plugging it tills,

But with the dentist we don't make a date,

Because we've not the sand to stand the jerk;

As long as there's a dead sure cure to take

I reckon that we'd rather have the ache.

Sometimes the column of "Sharps and Flats" was long and political, sometimes it was short and gossipy, and occasionally the ideas of the writer ran in rhyme; here, for instance, is how the "column" reads for November 9, 1864:

An editor in Kankakee,
Once failing in a burning passion
With a vexatious rival, he Wrote him a letter in this fashion:
'You are an ass, uncouth and rude,
And will be one eternally,'
Then in an absent-minded mood,
He signed it "Yours fraternally."

Strikers are not profitable either to workmen or employers. Of the 4,000 Chicago teamsters who were out on strike, it is estimated that 2,700 will be required to secure their former jobs. The cost to the employers is placed at $2,000,000. This is a large sum, but as the price of losing alleged to manage their own business affairs it is cheap. How much the strikers have lost it is difficult to find out.

The Halifax Chronicle, Fielding's organ, protests against the increase in Intercolonial freight rates, claiming that if the road was properly managed the present rates would be sufficient. This is a hard hit at the Minister of Railways and Canals, coming as it does from the Finance Minister's organ, but it's true.

NO SATISFACTION IN EATING.

Food does you no good. You can't digest—consequently you're afraid to eat, tongue is coated, mouth tastes bad, stomach is bloated. Pretty soon you'll be overcome by weakness and nervous prostration. Best prescription for constipation is Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. For sympathetic indigestion it is doubtful if a better remedy will ever be devised. These pills bring new strength and vitality to the stomach and digestive organs; they build up the general health and instill such vim and resisting power into the system that sickness is impossible; try Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The Largest Jack Manufacturer in the World Writes about

Zutoo

Regarding your Zutoo Tablets I beg to say: I have been a sufferer from headache since childhood and have used all kinds of so-called "cures" on the market, till warned by my physician to discontinue their use on account of their bad effects on the heart. Some months since my attention was called to your Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. In fact they are "cure" or "nervous" headache in a few minutes after you take them. My family use them with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from headache and they never fail to give quick relief. I find them a good remedy for "sore" stomach as well as headache. I always carry them in my grip on the road and would not be without them for any cost.

Saxony.

Saxony was so called because it was inhabited by the Saxons, who took their name from the sea ax, a small battleax or knife which they bore in their girdles.

Henry Clay's Voice.

Henry Clay had a voice of medium strength, but of singular purity. He spoke with a strong southern accent and in a pleasant, sympathetic tone that carried the audience with him from the start.

Scott's Favorites.

Scott believed that "Waverley" was his best novel and the "Lady of the Lake" his best poem. He and the Ballantynes had more than one lively discussion on the subject, but he would never admit a change of opinion. He knew the "Lady of the Lake" by heart and once repeated the whole to prove the fact.

Inauguration Week

By TROY ALLISON

Copyright, 1905, by T. C. McClure

Pennsylvania avenue was gay with flying flags and bunting. The crowd on the pavements, kept from overflowing the curbstone by the force of mounted police, was larger than the city had seen for years.

On the corner of Twelfth and the avenue the people who had been unable to decide whether they preferred seeing the start of the inaugural from the White House or arrive at the capitol had finally formed a congested mob that concluded to let well enough alone and save the wear and tear of further progress.

A group of cowboys in their best western fancy jacked a crowd of girls that had turned out to see the procession. Two Indians, decorated with every specimen of button, badge and feather, stood with stolid patience just where the crowd was thickest.

A man in a light overcoat towered head and shoulders above the rest. A newsboy reached up with a variegated cane and tilted his derby rakishly to one side. "Wisht I was up in dat," he chuckled, "instead of down here. I could review this procession to bet'er advantage."

"I might as well be stone blind," came a plaintive voice from a man of diminutive stature who was wedged in between the Indians and the man with the light coat. "And I wouldn't be rather more comfortable if I were stone deaf at the same time."

Sedley looked down upon his height of six feet three with a smile at the humor of the situation. "It's too bad," he said pityingly. "Push back this way a little—I can elbow the crowd at the side a bit—might be dangerous to push forward into those Indians—don't think I ever saw any more decorated specimens—they must have tomahawks in every pocket for all of you."

The girl laughed and moved toward him. "I don't mind them." She showed a row of white teeth and black eyes sparkling with excitement. "I'm so dark and small and black haired that that newsboy with the cane asked me if I was the squaw that belonged to the Indian gentleman!"

Sedley had already recognized her voice as belonging to a daughter of the far south, and when she turned her face toward him her Creole ancestry was a certainty.

"I have lost my crowd. I tried to take a little walk by myself before it was time to meet the party at the grand stand," she said, with frank friendliness, "and I have lost my hotel. I don't know where anything on earth is except just me." Her sentence ended with a little gasp as the crowd made a sudden impulse forward.

"And I'm afraid among your other losses you are going to lose your view of the president," said Sedley, trying to keep the crowd from jostling her. "How much can you see from down there?"

"Oh, I can't see anything but two buckskin jackets. They may be very nice in the buckskin line, but I want to see the president. I never saw a real live president in my life," dolefully.

"He's almost here," he said. "I wonder if—er—you would let me—er—lift you up so you could see him?" he suggested, with a touch of good natured slyness.

"Oh, would you?" she exclaimed, with the volume of gratitude of one who has been granted a heart's desire. "I weigh a hundred and one. Do you think you could hold me till he passes sir?" anxiously.

"Just try me," he said, smiling as he lifted her until she seemed happily over the two greased heads in front of them.

The president in acknowledging the cheers that burst forth gave a purely personal smile of amusement and good will to a girl whose sparkling face rose clear above the mass and who in her excitement snatched a derby hat and waved it enthusiastically.

"Did you see his smile at me?" she asked breathlessly, when her feet touched the pavement.

"I don't see how he could help it!" Sedley took her hand and drew her in one side as the people hurried on toward the capitol. "If you will give me some information on the subject, I will go if you can find your hotel."

"You are just as good as can be," she said gratefully. "It's the Willard, and I know papa is frantic about me by this time."

"The Willard? That's easy." And Sedley's conscience justified the "round about way" to get your thumb" route which he took to the hotel, by the theory that it was easier to walk at the side than in the crowd, empty streets than to walk two against a surging mob.

When they arrived at the hotel, he took his leave reluctantly. "I wonder if it would be rude to say I would like to meet you again?" he asked.

"I don't think it would—very," There was a twinkle in her eye. "Papa would probably like to thank you for finding this lost lost."

When she told him her name and her native state, Sedley's face brightened visibly. "Do you happen to know the congressman from the Second district?" he asked eagerly.

"Know him? He read law in papa's office," he said.

The congressman from that Second district was interrupted at his dinner that night by a young giant who threatened to break every bone in his body if he did not take him around to be introduced to Judge Gallivant and his daughter.

The congressman helped himself to the macaroni and smiled broadly.

"All right, Sedley, my boy; I'll arrange it. That's the belle of our state. I don't wonder that you show symptoms of having it in the very worst form."

One afternoon a week later Sedley guided Jessie Gallivant through the corridors of the Congressional library, wearing an expression that would have affirmed the opinion that there was no occupation or pursuit ever followed by man that was one-half as pleasant as guiding visitors over Washington.

While she read the old English inscriptions he wondered if the native Boston ever saw it but that compared with the girl's little red turban, or if Boston ever saw anything as perfect as the glowing face set off by her chinchilla furs.

"Was that turban made from a bird of paradise?" he asked musingly.

"Bird of paradise!" she left the old English inscription and turned toward him laughing. "Your study of ornithology has been woefully neglected, I think—we had better take in the zoo next. I believe you would find it came nearer the interior of a flamingo. We must hurry back to the hotel in time to lunch with papa. He says he has scarcely seen me for the last week. But you are a wonderful clever guide," she added approvingly.

"Let's sit here just a minute," he said persuasively. "It's terrible to think you are going home in three days"—despondently.

Novelle laughed at his woeful face. "Perhaps you'll be Yankee of the deepest dye"—reproachfully—"to think going south is such a terrible ordeal. You ought to see our south before you say things about it."

"May I really come?" he asked, and his voice made her lower her eyes and commence a study of the American Beauty she wore on her coat.

"We are a hospitable people," she said evasively, "and our house is very large."

He leaned forward earnestly, trying to see her eyes. "But I don't want to venture into your strange land unless there would be some one there who would be happy because of my coming"—pleadingly.

She gave him a glimpse of her eyes. "It would make me happy," she said softly.

"You dear little girl," he whispered, laying his hand impulsively over the little gloved hand on the seat beside him.

HUMOR

YE MODERN TIME.

Tribulations of One Who Tried to Fit in a Country Home.

Having encountered the laundry home at the most reasonable unreasonable price I could obtain, I determined to furnish it according to modern ideas.

Approaching the head salesman of the largest establishment for that purpose, I explained the object of my visit.

"You will, I suppose," he said, "carry out the grand idea for the interior."

"I will do anything you say," I replied, "only, however, you must kindly see if your training has been sufficient for my purpose."

He drew himself up in a haughty manner. "I was brought up in a sawmill," he replied, "and since that time have lived with a line of Indians."

Apologizing, I submitted the plans.

"Your hall," said the salesman, "should have nothing but our latest model of settees and chairs, made from brooms. Here is a sofa such as you should have."

The sofa was composed of sixteen new brooms put together with tempering nails by a retired chief of the Ojibways, who had lost all his money in a government contract in Colorado.

"How much is it?" I asked.

"Oh, only $40."

"Now, as to bedrooms, I am going to furnish them in the usual way—ordinary chairs and ordinary beds."

The salesman smiled a self-assuring smile. "Beds!" he cried. "It isn't the proper thing to use beds any more."

"What would you suggest?" I asked humbly.

He led me to another room.

"This is what we are using now," he said forthwith, with a wave of his fly white hand. "Improved elongated soap boxes, made in the form of bunks, with the original label on. Only $80 each, installing extra."—Judge.

FRUIT

As a Medicine.

Fruit has been used as a medicine for thousands of years. Every one knows its value as a tonic. The acids, malates and apples acts on the kidneys and makes more urinary excretion than any other remedy in the world, but the patient must take half a pint three or four times a day. Apple juice is most curative in kidney disease. The juice of four large oranges taken before each meal and on retiring at night has more curative action on the skin than any remedy ever discovered. Orange juice clears and beautifies the complexion. Again, fruit acts on the bowels and makes them active, acts on the liver and makes more bile flow, which is the natural purgative for the bowels—and thus cures constipation. An Ottawa physician after years of study has discovered a process of combining and concentrating the juices of apples, oranges, pressed and bottled, so a positive cure for constipation, biliousness, headaches, kidney and liver disease is effected. These juices, called "Fruit-a-tives" are fruit, concentrated and made stronger than ordinary fruit. For sale at Driggist Soc. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50, or sent postpaid on receipt by FRUIT-A-TIVES LIMITED, Ottawa.

The Doctor's Card.

A young physician, at a little social demonstration the other evening, made himself particularly agreeable to everybody. He was bright, clever and interesting, especially to one elderly lady, whom he had taken under the formality of an introduction, to the dining room. "Dear me," said the elderly lady to the young doctor, "you have given me a most delightful evening. We have not been introduced, and you have therefore overlooked that we are strangers, and I should like to know your name, Mrs. Is."

The doctor fumbled in his pocket for his card. And this was the strange way he discovered that in some way had got into the collection: "Crown Hill Cemetery, Adrait One."—Indianapolis News.

Tangible Evidence.

A little girl was afraid to stay in her bed in the dark. Her mother left her with the usual reassurance that there was no need of fear. God was with her.

In answer to fruitful pleadings the mother returned to the nursery and tucked a favorite doll in beside her little daughter for comfort. Serenely she seated herself in the sitting room when a little voice piped over the banister:

"Mamma, mamma, I don't want God, and I don't want dolly; I want somefing with a skin face!"—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Mere Dauntello.

We were interviewing Mr. Gotrox, the multimillionaire.

"You began life with very little money, did you not?" we inquired.

A Pleasing Address.

She—And you met my husband at the dinner?

He—Yes, I did.

"Don't you think he has a pleasing address?"

"Why, yes, it pleased me. He didn't get a chance to deliver it."—Yonkers Statesman.

Dangerous Experiment.

"Hello, Jones! What are you doing in that outlandish place?"

"Just trying an experiment, old chap. I bought a bulldog yesterday, and now I'm going to find out if he's any good on tramps."

An Impression.

"From some of the letters I receive," said Mr. Dustin Stax, "I am inclined to think a number of people consider some of my wealth essential to their happiness."—Washington Star.

Poor Bowser Gets Excited

Meets With Series of Mishaps and Tries to Hold Mrs. B. Responsible.

INQUIRES FOR THE COOK

Raises Rumpus When He Hears She Is Out, but His Mother-in-law Squelches Him.

[Copyright, 1905, by R. B. McClure.]

WHEN Mr. Bowser left the office for home he felt down three or four steps of the stairs and a soulless man laughed at him. When he got out on the street a newsboy ran against him and disturbed his equilibrium. When he took the street car a woman grabbed him by the coat tails to draw herself up the step, and when he swore about it she said he was a boor and a cad and no gentleman. The conductor worked off a nickel quarter on him in his changes, and a cross eyed man wanted to touch him on the chin for luck.

Therefore when he got home he was ready to hold Mrs. Bowser responsible for everything that had happened. Of course she was to blame for it—of course. Would any son of a gun of a eross eyed man have dared to put a finger on his chin for luck at puter but for Mrs. Bowser?

HE MADE HIMSELF A CUP OF COFFEE.

Mr. Bowser slammed the gate open. He did it to let Mrs. Bowser understand that he was not a man to be trifled with, and that things had got to stand around for him. He knew that the front door was open. He did it that she might know he had arrived and have goose flesh over it. He expected to see her on the hall and to shout "Woman!" at her and demand why in Halifax he was in the back parlor when he came in, and why she wasn't there. The cat wasn't there. The cook was not in the kitchen.

"Now, by the seven gods of the seven brindled bulls, but this is too much to be much!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he went climbing upstairs.

Where was more to come, however. His friend Mrs. Bowser is fond of a headache, while the cat was chasing a rubber ball around on the floor as if domestic troubles were not of the slightest account.

"I heard you come in," faintly announced Mrs. Bowser from the bed.

"Oh, you did, eh? You heard me come in, and you ignored me, eh?"

"I have had a raging headache all day."

"Serves you right. Any woman who will eat pickles and smoked herrings and then walk out in the back yard in her thin slippers feet must expect to have headaches. Where in Texas is that redheaded cook of yours?"

"I let her go home for the day. She said she'd surely be back by 4 o'clock. Hasn't she come yet?"

"Of course she hasn't come, and of course she won't show up till midnight! Why on earth you hired enough to take her word?"

"I thought she'd come."

"Yes, you thought and thought, and this is the result of it. By John, was there ever such a household known as this! I have now got to putter around for two hours to get myself a bite to eat."

"If I tried to get up a few minutes sooner couldn't do it," explained Mrs. Bowser.

"Of course you couldn't. You are probably in for a spell of sickness. You have smallpox or the plague before you get through with it. That cook will come back when I'm out, and the cook shows up, and I'll make her think a house fell on her. I'll be up and get myself something to eat."

"Why don't you go to a restaurant for this once?"

"Why don't I go to the drug store and ask for strychnine? Didn't I come within an ace of dying once after getting a bite to eat in a one horse restaurant?"

"But I thought it was too many bones that ailed you."

"Too many nightmare! If you think you would die before I get back I'll now go down and poke about the kitchen, and if that infernal cook ever eyed at follows me I'll be the death of him."

Mr. Bowser went down and poked. He made himself a cup of coffee and ate some bread and butter and cold meat, and though the cat looked into the kitchen once or twice he dared not venture into the open. "Dinner" was made ready and drinked in half an hour, and then Mr. Bowser was ready for other business. He had a grievance against the cat, the cook and Mrs. Bowser, and he anticipated a good time that evening. No one who has read of him can call him cross hearted; he simply likes to have a racket on hand to vary the monotony. He is never to blame for anything, and it brings joy to his heart to convict others.

"Well, I suppose I'd better telephone for the doctor and hear the worst at once," he said as he came tramping upstairs.

"I told you it was only a headache," replied Mrs. Bowser.

"Yes, you told me so, but if you sit in for a case of spinal meningitis then I'll miss my guess. They live about three days with that disease, I believe."

"I shall be all right in the morning."

"Or marked for death. I have offered a telephone for the doctor—that's all I can do. It's your fault that you are where you are anyway. Why will you have so careless?"

Mrs. Bowser, whose head was throbbing and beating with the pain, made no reply, and presently he went on:

"I was told about a woman the other day who was using burdock leaves to improve her complexion—eating burdock leaves and drinking lobbered milk. Perhaps you have been trying it? If you have, it serves you just right."

She almost smiled to herself at the thought of Mrs. Bowser with the milk mustaches before he said:

"Who has gone and skewjawed that bureau across the corner? It was never that way before."

"It—it was moved this morning," she replied.

"But why? That bureau was standing against the wall, and it had no business moving it. You know I can never sleep in a room where things are skewjawed around. I shall put it back at once."

"Please wait until morning."

"Not a minute. It makes me nervous go sit here. You might as well have the bed cater-corner across the room. Was it that cook of yours who did it?"

"No, sir, it wasn't!" exclaimed a voice that brought out the goose flesh in a second. "It was the undersigned, and I want to know what Mr. Bowser is going to do about it."

Mr. Bowser knew it was the mother-in-law before he turned, and he knew that she must have been in the house when he came home. So she was, but she had bidden her son and his dog to his own supper and only appeared when a denouement seemed to be called for.

"Well, why don't you throw your arms around my neck and kiss me?" she asked as he stood looking at her and turning all sorts of colors.

"So you are here?" he growled.

"Lemuel, I am here, and it's a good thing I am. You won't have to strain your back moving the bureau to-night."

"Who wants to move any bureaus? When you are coming here, why the devil don't you telegraph and have somebody meet you at the depot?"

"I come and go as I please, and I should like to see anybody prevent me. I am not an old and feeble man that I can't come up from the depot alone. You were having a fine time, weren't you? Going to move the bureau whether it killed your wife or not. I always happen to drop in just in time."

"Yes, you always—always."

"Stop right there, Lemuel! I have heard enough from you to spell. Go downstairs and sit down and fold your hands, and I will be down presently and will talk to you."

Mr. Bowser went downstairs and put on his hat and softly opened the door and walked out into the night. The mother-in-law came down a few minutes later and looked for him and called and called, but he was not to be found. Darkness and distance had swallowed him up, and only the bewildering cat was left behind as a sign that the man had once been there and played high jinks.

THE Oxford Hot Water Boiler is built to use absolutely all the heat generated in the fire-pot.

The inclining walls of the fire-pot expose great surface to the direct heat of the fire. The first section is greater in depth than the other sections, and the flues of this section are bell-shaped, against which the heat rays sharply impinge, so that a greater body of water gets the direct effect of the fire.

Oxford Hot Water Boiler

The entire boiler is steel and iron. The joints are made with steel push nipples, which are absolutely indestructible—no rubber washers.

Food Value

Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas are crisp squares of wholesome nourishment. They are the food that builds strength and muscle. They are as easily digested by the child and invalid as by the sturdy workman. They contain ALL the food properties of finest Canadian wheat flour, in a form that delights the appetite.

Always fresh and crisp in the moisture-proof packages.

At all grocers in 1 and 3 pound packages.

Why furnaces crack in Summer.

In the old fashioned hotwater heaters with wide, flat surfaces, the soot finds a comfortable lodging place and moisture and brush jams soot into the interstices between the sections. There it cakes and hardens, absorbs moisture, then it expands, and you have a cracked waterpot. If you have one of these hotwater heater you won't have any furnace troubles. There are no flues collecting surfaces in the "Bison"—no crevices where soot can lodge; there will be no cracked waterpots, no delays, no mess, no plumber's bills.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

Most Famous of Nurses, 85 Years Old, Longs to Take Part in Manchurian Red Cross Work.

Florence Nightingal, heroine of many a bloody battlefield, and the most famous nurse in the world, recently celebrated her 85th birthday. Old as she is, she has the intense longing to go to Manchuria and take part in the Red Cross work there.

The Russian guns that roared fifty years ago at Sebastopol was gaining a world-wide fame, are roaring still. When she witnessed the fall of Sebastopol the century ago, the little thought she would live to see the Czar's troops engaged in another great war.

Miss Nightingale is taking a deep interest in the battle-cry, "On for Khartoum," she watches every development there, and is a close student of the methods of the Red Cross to-day. She sees much in the way of improvement since the day when she started out with her band of heroic nurses to tend wounded and help the dying in the Crimean War.

The queen of nurses lives now in a quiet little house in London, the house that has been her home for forty years. She is a beautiful old lady, and it seems almost wrong to her when she smooths her white brow and so few the wrinkles that have come to furrow her pale old face.

This woman, the pioneer of battlefield nurses, loves to have visits from nurses in the old uniform she wore so well. She begs them all to come attired in the nursing uniform.

It is natural that in the evening of life Miss Nightingale's mind turns from the battlefield to home nursing. Not long ago she expressed the peculiar interest which she felt in the progress of district nursing. No class of work appeals to her more strongly. It was in the homes of the poor that she spent her earliest efforts in sick nursing were made, when as a young woman of leisure she visited the cottages of the surrounding villages in Derbyshire and Hampshire. At the institution of Kaiserswerth, where she graduated as a nurse, her attention was chiefly directed toward the care of the sick poor. Her work written a deal along the same theme. The appalling condition of affairs revealed in the hospitals of the east during the Crimean War summoned her to the care of the soldier, and for many years afterwards she made such hospitals her chief concern. But now she turns again to the earlier work, and the sick poor are in these later days much on her mind.

Need of the Age.

Miss Nightingale, looking upon the needs of the great unit of the nation, feels that the chief need of the age is the intelligently managed purc, clean home in which the men and women of the future may be reared, and regards the district nurse as an important factor in bringing about this condition. The district nurse meets the family in their own ground, shows them in their own home how they can be clean and orderly, how they can help in nursing their sick ones, the way to obtain official sanitary help, how to improvise appliances, where, new to life over difficulties and prevent their home being broken up. To one one of Miss Nightingale's expressive phrases, the district nurse can teach "without seeming to preach to the family" as

POSSIBLY FATAL ACCIDENT IN DESERONTO YESTERDAY

LATELY ARRIVED IMMIGRANT FELL ON A BAND SAW IN THE CEDAR MILL.

Deseronto, July 26. — (Special.)—A very sad accident happened this morning at the cedar mill. Charles Marnihant, an English emigrant, who came to Canada from England with his wife about a month ago, and who has been employed by the Rathbun Company since his arrival, was working on the band saw and started around the saw to get instructions from the sawyer, when his hand was caught, cutting off his first three fingers. He lost his balance and fell on the saw, cutting his arm at the elbow and again at the shoulder. He nearly escaped losing his life. Had his shoulder been cut a half inch further the saw would have severed the artery. The doctors attending hope they can save the arm.

A SLEEPY WOOER, THIS.

WYOMING MAN WHO CLAIMS THAT HE POPPED THE QUESTION WHILE IN THE LAND OF DREAMS.

Bordeaux, Wyo., July 26. — If Miss Katherine Brandt, a pretty young school teacher, shall execute her threat to sue Simon Brandt for breach of promise, Brandt will go into court and deny the suit on the ground that to his knowledge he never made a proposal of marriage to Miss Rippin, and that if he did propose to her he did it when he was asleep, and therefore is to be held neither to a moral nor legal accountability.

The suit promises to be one of the most singular and interesting ones of its kind in the history of jurisprudence in this country.

Brandt is a ranchman, well to do, good-looking, intelligent, and one of his best young men in the region.

Miss Rippin has secured legal advice, and the case will soon come to trial. Miss Rippin will testify that Brandt made proposals of marriage to her and that she promised to marry him on the night last winter. Then he called on her and sat up with her until after midnight. Brandt will testify that he spent the evening in question with Miss Rippin, and remained with her until after midnight. But he will deny that he ever consciously made a proposal of marriage to her. He will seek to show by witnesses that ever since he was a boy he has been addicted to the strange habit of talking, walking and doing many other things in his sleep, and that what he said and did, in his sleep he never was able to recall after he awoke.

They will testify that they have known Brandt suddenly to fall into a sleep, or a mental state resembling sleep, when sitting up in his chair, and in his sleep to carry on an apparently rational conversation, and then to awake in utter unconsciousness of and utterly unable to recall a word that he had said.

BELLEVILLE OLD BOYS.

MONTREAL PAPER JOLLIES US GENTLY ON THE RECENT CELEBRATION — THE CORBY PARK AND FOUNTAIN.

Montreal Star : The City of Belleville had had an Old Boys' celebration, and the general verdict is that no city of its size and political records has had a larger one. Of course nine "old boy" than Belleville. First and foremost Belleville boasts an ex-Premier—Sir Mackenzie Bowell—who is to-day the Grand Old Boy of our public life, and there is a general desire that he will become a resident of the Bay before he carries out his threat to retire from his present position of influence into effect.

The reports of the Old Boys' Reunion tell us that at least 10,000 visitors rallied to the celebration, of which 1,500 came from Toronto. This sounds very well, and we feel like a complimentary nood jorward the City on the Bay when we read that " the Toronto crowd are in the majority and they practically own the town." Now, there is something reminiscent about a statement like this. An article can present 1,000 as the majority of 10,000 people recalls to our minds a certain Belleville ballot-box and it almost looks as if some of that ten thousand must have voted in the Corby compartment of the trick ballot-box. No one would be surprised, of course, that almost any number of Torontonians would feel that they constituted a majority, and would be content with the "practically owned the town," and possibly it was a Torontonian who did the counting.

Another curious thing happened during the celebration, and that was the presentation to the city of a park and fountain by Mr. Hiram Corby, ex-M.P. The park is easily understood, and was a generous and appreciated gift. We have no doubt ; but would not a water fountain from Mr. Corby be a trifle disappointing to the Old Boys ? Was it to have been a park fountain that they spent all the way to the old city ? We have been told that Mr. Corby contains which were not wholly disappointing. Instead of the Old Boy of the Romer, in Frankfort, a fountain which used to run with wine when the Hohenzollerns of the Belleville Empire were crowned within the ancient Hall. And there is a splendid municipal way brought home from this fountain to the city a hint which would make the Old Boys take to the fountain like ducks to the fluid which they had left behind them in the old city. Afterwards not surprising that 1,500 people let home from Toronto counted themselves a majority of ten thousand and felt that they " owned the town."

LIQUOR LICENSES.

TOTAL NUMBER CUT OFF BY WHITNEY GOVERNMENT WILL BE ABOUT 100.

Hotel and tavern licenses cancelled in Ontario since the incoming of the Whitney Government will number approximately one hundred, out of a total of 3,099. The exact number will be known soon after July 31, when the last of the licenses for the year expire. The greatest number of licenses cancelled in any one county has been in the county of Peel, being 13 out of a total of 36, or 50 per cent. The License Department at the Parliament Buildings has been extraordinarily busy during the last few months, owing to the appointment of three new commissioners and numerous inspectors, throughout the Province, all of whom have to be fully instructed as to the duties of their office. Out of a total of 152 license inspectors all but a dozen are new men.

A Policeman's Revels

Night Constable H. Howorth had a big time on Tuesday night, says the Kingston Standard, he went out for the lake to attend the Church of England S. S. picnic. When he got as far as the Rossin House, Constable Howorth stepped off the car to indulge in a little refreshment. How much he refreshed himself can only be imagined, however. At all events he never reached the lake that night. There are rumors to the effect that when he had taken a few high balls he issued a challenge to wrestle anybody and everybody. He flopped all who wanted a tussle, and finally arrived at a fight down near the railway bridge with one of the gang. When they got him down there the whole crowd seems to have piled on him. Howorth, and pounded him to their hearts' contentment. Early this, but some of the vicious brutes appear to have committed tendencies, for they showed him arms. The whole night's revelry is said to pretty well illustrate the character of the Police House as at present conducted. When Howorth finally emerged from the sylvan shades of Cedar Dale he presented a battered spectacle in the pale moonlight. His face was all jammed and his body seriously bruised. The constable has since been suspended.

BOYS' BLOUSE SUITS.

Nothing more becoming to the average small boy has ever been devised. For summer wear the Blouse Suit is particularly appropriate. Quick & Robertson have about 400 sample Blouse Suits in serges, flannelettes and worsteds, ranging in price from 75c to $2.50. These goods are being sold much below their regular worth and are all this season's productions.

FORMER BELLEVILLE MINISTER'S DEATH.

SUDDEN DEMISE OF REV. T. J. EDMISON, ONCE PRESIDENT R. OF Q. CONFERENCE.

Rev. T. J. Edmison, a well-known minister of the Methodist Church, died suddenly at his home in Brighton last evening. Deceased was about 55 years of age and had been in the ministry some years. He was for one year President of the Bay of Quinte Conference, and for three years was pastor of Holloway Street church in this city. Mr. Edmison was esteemed by all who knew him, being in every sense of the term a kindly christian gentleman, and his death will be sincerely regretted by a large circle of acquaintance and friends. A widow and a family of three sons and three daughters survive. The funeral will take place at Brighton to-morrow afternoon, and will be conducted by the Rev. J. F. Wilson, of that city.

SAD CASE OF DESTITUTION.

ENGLISH FAMILY OF TEN WERE IN A STARVING CONDITION AT PETERBORO.

Peterboro Examiner : A particularly sad case of destitution was brought to light on Monday evening, when an English family of six children and their mother arrived at the G.T.R. station from Fort Hope, in a starving condition, having had nothing to eat since Sunday at noon.

The family, whose name is Stitson, had just arrived from England, and were on their way to Peterborough, where the father has resided since his arrival from England, about two years ago, with another son, a lad of eleven years.

The children range in age from 1 2 to 14 years, and accompanied by their mother, were taken to the Children's Aid Shelter, where they were fed and cared for, through the offices of Mrs. Peter Campbell the treasurer of the Children's Aid Society, and Mrs. William Lloyd, of the Salvation Army. The family were lodged for the night at the Shelter and left upon the morning train for Lindsay, where Mr. Stitson has prepared a home since his arrival in this country. The appointed daughter, eighteen years of age, remained in England. The children were apparently bright and intelligent looking notwithstanding the discomforts and privations which they had passed through.

STRUCK BY A TRAIN.

DEAF WOMAN FAILED TO HEAR WARNING AND SUSTAINED FATAL INJURIES.

Tweed News: A very sad accident occurred on the Bay of Quinte Ry., yesterday near Alians. Mrs. George Young and several other women, who had been out berry picking, were walking along the track about one hundred yards south of Frankin's crossing when the north-bound train rounded a curve behind them running at a good speed. Mrs. Young, according to reports, was quite deaf and in the excitement the approaching train in time to get off the track. She was struck by the pilot and instantly terrible injuries. One leg was completely severed from the body, and she was thrown into Franklin's house near by and died shortly afterwards. Mr. Young, who, we understand is employed at the Craig mine near Hannoekburn.

CROSSED THE DARK RIVER.

MR. JOHN ADAMS.

Mr. John Adams, a carpenter, who resided on Burton street, died last evening at the advanced age of 57 years deceased, who was 57 years of age, was born in the township of Richmond. After residing for some years in the United States Mr. Adams and family came to Belleville some 10 years ago and have lived here since. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's Church and a man who was respected by all who knew him. In addition to the widow he leaves, James, and a daughter, Miss Vivian, both of this city, survive.

MRS. ANN FARNSWORTH.

Mrs. Ann Farnsworth, widow of the late Mr. John Farnsworth, died last evening at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. John Dalton, Church street. Deceased, who was 82 years of age, was born in England and shortly after marriage came to this section of the country where her life was resided. For the past four years she had lived in Belleville. Her illness was not of long duration. Mrs. Farnsworth had been for many years a member of the Methodist Church. The surviving members of the family are one son, John H., who resides at Cobourg, and two sons and two daughters, Mrs. John Dalton, and Mrs. Furnside, residing in this city. The remains will be taken to Tweed to-morrow for interment.

Her Revenge.

Women are revengful creatures, in a little town a few miles away in Maryland there lives a man who, a Pennsylvania people say, is so "mean" that in his years he allowed his wife to have only three frocks. It came out in the testimony when she sued for divorce. She won her suit, too, and the man began to speedily realize the error of his ways. It cost him much more to live when he had to pay cook and laundress than when he had a wife to work for him, so he began to take overtures to the one who had left him.

He wanted her to return to him, and he promised to be a different man if she would. She had gone to her people in New Jersey, but she wrote that reconciliation was possible. She wanted to be married in style, though, with a trousseau and a wedding trip to Niagara Falls. He would have to send her money for these things before she would start the ball. It nearly killed the man to part with his money, but he did it. She was a good manager, and he calculated that the trousseau would last her another ten years at least. He let her buy railway tickets and arranged nothing.

Then he started for the scene. He arrived there just an hour after the lady married another man. He was just in time, in fact, to see her start off for Niagara Falls with the bridegroom and the tickets he had paid for. He was, as one man says, stung, and by a woman for whom he had given three new gowns in ten years.—Washington Post.

Hard Work For a Horse.

"I don't want a particularly strong horse," said a prospective customer at a horse mart. "He will have nothing to do but travel from my hotel to the railway station five or six times a day to meet trains. The distance is less than a mile."

"You need the strongest horse you can get for that sort of work," replied the expert. "The average cab driver in New York has an easy time of it in comparison with the unfortunate beast that has to back for a village hack. Nothing tells upon a horse's condition more than going to and from the station, even though the distance is small.

"In the first place, the harness is generally thrown on in a careless way and he is rattled off in a hurry. If the train is late, as it usually is, he is left to stand restless in a overheated conditions. When the passing trains do not frighten him half out of his wits, he is bored by flies. In many ways his day's work is not only unpleasant, but absolutely hideous.

"The horse is a nervous animal. It is wear and tear upon his nervous system, not work, that destroys his useful ness. If a horse had any choice in the matter he would rather hand on omnibus in the city than be put between the shafts of a village hack."—New York Press.

JAPS' ATTACK ON TUMEN

Osaka Reports Big Engagement is Now In Progress.

Japanese to Threaten Harbin By An Expedition Up the Amur River — Landing Chronicled at Dakastrio; Emphasizes Well-Planned Attempt to Send Naval Assistance for Attack on Fortifications.

London, July 27.—The correspondent of the Daily Telegraph at Tokio, sends a report received from Osaka, Japan, to the effect that a Japanese army of many thousand is attacking the Russian position on the Tumen river.

Siberian Lighthouse Seized.

St. Petersburg, July 27.—Despatches from Manchuria report the landing of a Japanese battalion and the seizure of the lighthouse on the Siberian coast near Dakastrio, a port formerly call d Alexandrovsk, 700 miles north of Vladivostok, after a preliminary shelling by torpedo boat destroyers.

Military officials here say this apparently is part of the strategy of the Japanese to prevent the escape of Russian garrisons in Sakhalin across the straits. They add that the landing is too far north to have any effect upon the main campaign or on operations against Vladivostok.

To Seize Mouth of Amur.

London, July 27.—The Japanese landing at Dekastrive, which is the terminus of the only cable line connecting the mainland with the island of Sakhalin is regarded by the London morning newspapers as an attempt to seize the mouth of the Amur River, in order to enable the Japanese to despatch an army up that great waterway to Khabarovsk. Russian communication Japanese gunboats and torpedo boats could thus reach Harbin and give effectual assistance to the attack on the Russian fortifications.

Met in Spirit of Defiance.

Washington, July 27.—Whether there is to be peace in the Far East or a continuance of the war will be practically decided at the first business meeting of the Washington conference, which will convene at the navy yard, Portsmouth, N. H., August 8. Baron Komura will on that occasion present to Count Cassini, the Russian plenipotentiaries are prepared to accept these essentials, the officials here are confident that the boats will be at the foreign office sure to listen to the signing of a treaty of Washington defining peace in the Far East.

Witte Is Detained.

Cherbourg, July 27.—M. Witte has not left Cherbourg owing to the non-arrival of the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which is fog bound at Southampton. He expects to sail early this morning.

Rejoicing Over Operated On.

Tokio, July 27.—Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky has undergone a successful operation. A wound on his forehead was opened and a small piece of bone was removed. His condition is considered satisfactory.

Wants Prompt Compensation.

Petersburg, July 27.—Acting on U. S. Ambassador Meyers' recommendation, in regard to obtaining relief for Clay, the Standard Oil Co., consignors of the cargo of the British steamer Oldhamia, which was sunk by Russian warships and burned off Sakhalin Island, have handed their case in the hands of a local attorney, who is empowered to ask the prize court to act as adjudicator. The cargo was valued at $12,000. The British ambassador is making representations in behalf of the British owners of the ship.

An Inflammatory Proclamation.

Odessa, July 27.—The Governor of Odessa has issued an extraordinary proclamation which, when posted in the city gates, seems to have the effect of increasing the already bitter feeling against the Jews among the troops and more ignorant classes of the population. The proclamation continues:

"Letters have come from the Jews charging the police with preparing for a Jewish massacre."

The Governor then declares that such action is groundless and will not be permitted, but he adds: "The Governor is accustomed to the Jews addressing such a letter to him, seeing that it is the Jews themselves who caused the disorders. They have invariably found revolvers, bombs, and prohibited literature in Jewish houses. But for this the Jews threw would be no disturbances and no Kishef Potemkine affair. And the Jews have the impertinence to bring charges against the police".

The Boilermakers.

Toronto, July 27.—Boiler inspection laws and the quality of steel plate for boilers were the chief topics discussed yesterday at the American Boiler Owners' Association convention here yesterday. Then the officers were elected: F. Munroe, Jr., of Pittsburg, Pa., president, and among the vice-presidents was second is J. J. Main, Toronto. The association will meet at Pittsburg next year.

Baby Falls From Window.

Montreal, July 27.—Ida Desrobers, the little 18-months-old daughter of Jean Baptiste Desrobers, fell from the third storey window of her home, yesterday, and died shortly afterwards. The child was opening the shutters when she overbalanced.

Fatal Fall of 20 Feet.

Toronto, July 26.—George Forbes was instantly killed at Walter Dowland had his spine injured by the collapse of a scaffolding on which they were carpentering at the residence of Hume Blake, Forbes fell about 20 feet, Dowland may be paralyzed, although he was doing well at Western Hospital last night.

No Truth in It.

Toronto, July 27.—Regarding the St. Thomas dispatch which stated that the C. P. R. Railway had assumed complete control over the Pere Marquette General Superintendent Timmerman has entered a complete denial.

London, July 27.—The British Medical Association has accepted the invitation to meet at Toronto in 1906.

LORD'S DAY LEGISLATION.

Privy Council Refuses Leave to Appeal the Case.

London, July 27.—Judgment was given yesterday by the Privy Council on the petition of the Dominion Government for leave to appeal the Lord's Day case, in which it was recently held that the major part of the Lord's Day legislation now in force in the various Provinces was beyond the power of the Provinces. The application was refused, although Mr. Newcombe, Deputy Minister of Justice, said the matter was one of great public interest to the Dominion and the Provinces, which should know their representative jurisdictions. The court declined to hear A. H. F. Macpherson, who appeared for the Lord's Day Alliance, supporting the petition.

The meaning of this action, in the terms of the reasons of the Privy Council in denying leave to appeal, is that the Dominion alone has the right to legislate in matters pertaining to Lord's Day observance.

Appeal Will Be Heard.

London, July 27.—(C. A. P.)—The Privy Council will hear the appeal for the Dominion Government against the judgment of Justice Anglin that the officials of the Pere Marquette Railway are subject to Canada in relation to the Alien Labor law cannot be deported because of the Dominion's lack of power to do so. Yesterday morning the Privy Council granted the application of the Dominion Government for leave to appeal, leave to appeal the case against Cain and Shiff. Their Lordships said the Dominion must pay the respondents' costs in any event. The question is not a purely hypothetical case, as the court of first instance has given a decision, while the statutory twelve months' period allowed for deportation.

WARNING TO LIQUOR MEN.

Hon. W. J. Hanna Speaks Right Out at Newmarket.

Newmarket, July 27.—Yesterday a monster picnic was held by North York Conservatives here, when Hon. Secretary of T. Herbert Lennox at the last election by 1,000 majority, addressed the people. In addition to a program of sports, there were speeches by J. P. Downey, M. P., Robert Lennox, M. P. P., and Hon. W. J. Hanna. The latter's two speakers about an hour. Hon. J. P. Whitney had redeemed his pre-election promises, and Mr. Hanna's speech, which was a ringing exposition of the Government's short career, was received with loud cheers at every utterance:

"The Government has cancelled the right of hotelkeepers to sell to boys under the age of 21, and he hoped the liquor men would support it.

"To the liquor men he says: 'You'll be making a great mistake if you attempt to set the law at defiance.' We don't say this to any unfriendly ear, ing to the liquor men, but it is to the interest of all that the law be as ours to see that the law is observed."

MORE POWER FOR COMMISSION.

Ontario Government Hands Over Control of Temiskaming Town Sites.

Toronto, July 27.—The Government has handed over to the Temiskaming Commission the town sites on the railway, which will enable them to have a stated reserve fund.

The commission has also been given power over the minerals. The roadbeds are reserved to the Government with mineral. In disposing of min rights the Crown retain a proportion interest in them, enabling the Province to benefit by the mineral wealth.

T. J. Patin of Little Current will represent Ontario in the survey of the boundaries between Ontario and the Province from a point 46 miles north of Lake Nipissing, Mr. Ambeau is making representations in behalf of the British owners of the ship.

AGNES DONAHOE AGAIN

Uruguayan Government Has Refused to Arbitrate Case.

Britain May Send a Warship to Release Canadian Captain From Prison in Uruguay—Official Advices at Washington Indicate Rather Serious Possibilities—No Relief to An Acute Situation.

Washington, July 27.—Official advices reaching Washington fail to show any relief in the acute situation which has been developing for some time between the British and Uruguayan Governments over the imprisonment in Uruguay of the captain and crew of the Canadian fishing vessel Agnes Donahoe, for alleged poaching.

Several months ago the British Government laid before the American State Department a full statement of its side of the case, and the American Minister at Uruguay was instructed to use his good offices to assist an amicable settlement. The British Government takes the ground that, as the contract of the Uruguayan Government is to a certain extent, a grant the exclusive right to fish in certain waters was a private contract and was not communicated to or recognized by foreign Governments, the capture of a Canadian ship for fishing in these waters was illegal.

Under strong representations, however, the Canadian captain remains in prison, and the London Times regarding the advisability of sending a warship down to the scene of the quarrel. This step, however, will be taken only after every diplomatic method has been tried to obtain the release of the prisoners.

The London Government is not averse to a settlement of the matter by arbitration, but the Uruguayan Government has thus far refused to arbitrate.

VOL. 39 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1905. NO. 75

UNION OF MUNICIPALITIES.

Election of Officers For 1905-6—Met at Halifax Next Year.

Winnipeg, July 28.—The most important business before the Union of Canadian Municipalities yesterday morning was the election of officers for 1905-1906. Mayor Urquhart, of Toronto, was unanimously elected for re-election by the delegates, no other name being mentioned. It was decided that the next annual meeting should be held in Halifax, N. S. Convention concluded its labors yesterday.

Officers—President, Mayor Urquhart, Toronto; hon. secretary-treasurer, Lighthall (ex-mayor of Westmount); executive committee — Ontario, first vice-president, Mayor Ellis, Ottawa; second vice-president, Mayor Meek, St. Thomas; third vice-president, Alderman Dyke, Fort William; fourth vice-president, Controller Ward, Toronto; fifth vice-president, Mayor Biggar, Hamilton.

Quebec—First vice-president, Ald. Lapointe, Montreal; second vice-president, Mayor Ch. Fabien, St. Cunegonde; third vice-president, Mayor C. A. Ducloz, Westmount; fourth vice-president, Ald. L. A. Lavalle, Montreal; fifth vice-president, Mayor Leonard, Sherbrooke.

New Brunswick—Mayor MacIlreith, Halifax; Ald. J. A. Johnstone, Halifax.

British Columbia—Mayor W. H. Keary, New Westminster; second vice, Mayor Stevens, Kamloops.

Manitoba—First, Mayor Sharpe, Winnipeg; second, Mayor Fleming, Brandon; third, Mayor Brown, Portage la Prairie; fourth, Ald. Larmer, Winnipeg; fifth, Reeve C. Stinson of Wallace-burg municipality.

Prince Edward Island—First, Dr. D. E. Kelly, Mayor of Charlottetown; second, Councillor Paton, Charlottetown.

Alberta—First, Mayor Emmerson, Calgary; second, Mayor Forrester, Medicine Hat.

Saskatchewan—First, Mayor Laird, Regina; second Mayor Holdsworth, Moosejaw.

And the president and secretary-treasurer, assistant secretary-treasurer, G. S. Wilson; secretary Province of Quebec, L. N. Several.

Sues For Husband's Death.

Montreal, July 28.—Vincenzo Ferraro has entered action against the Canadian Pacific Railway for $5,000 for the loss of her husband, killed about a year ago by a hand-car accident.

Indian Agent's Death.

Port Arthur, July 28.—L. U. Bonin, Indian agent, died yesterday morning after four months' illness. He had been a resident of Port Arthur for thirty years.

He Demanded Four Things.

But Komura's Stipulations Mean Big Victory, Then Peace.

Three of Them Already Granted and the News From War Front Indicates the Imminence of the Fourth—Neutralization of Vladivostock May Be Gained By Concessions Re Port Arthur.

Washington, July 28.—As a clearer idea is gain of Japan's peace terms, whose general character was outlined in the associated press despatches last night, the skepticism with which Washington receives European reports that Japan would determine the neutralization of Vladivostock is lessened.

In fact it is learned that not only is this likely to constitute one of Japan's demands, but it will be accompanied by a startling counter proposal. In effect, according to a seemingly well-informed source, Japan will propose in return for the neutralization of this last Russian port on the Pacific not to fortify Port Arthur. Should this information prove correct, it will entirely change the view which has prevailed in official circles, that the question of Vladivostock's neutralization could not reasonably be made a part of Japan's peace price.

It is pointed out that while the war has demonstrated that Port Arthur was a military blunder, nevertheless this great fortification, still stands as a tremendous political influence in the Far Eastern question, and its abandonment as a stronghold is a concession of such magnitude that it is not felt Russia can afford to meet it.

Sacrifice Only Apparent.

While on the other hand, Japan's sacrifice would not be as great as seems at first glance, because her fortification of the Straits of Corea would offset the loss of Port Arthur as a strategic point. It is believed here that the question of Vladivostock will prove to be one of the most difficult which the conference will face, as Russia has not accepted her humiliation, so to speak, to permit it to enter in the negotiations. In this connection an interesting story is current in diplomatic circles regarding the selection of Baron Komura as Japan's chief plenipotentiary. According to this story Japan had hardly had the trouble than did Russia in finding an official willing to undertake this delicate mission.

His Stipulations.

Baron Komura was finally induced to accept it, with the stipulation that before the conference assembled the following things should be done:

First—The location of a new loan in order that Japan should be prepared to continue the war in the event the effort for peace failed.

Second—The occupation of the Island of Sakhalin.

Third—An advance against Vladivostock.

The last—That Cyons should stylen a decisive blow at the Russian army in Manchuria.

The fact that the first three stipulations have been fulfilled, while advices from the front indicate the imminence of a general engagement, would indicate that the story is well founded.

Komura Meets Roosevelt.

Oyster Bay, July 28.—President Roosevelt entertained at luncheon yesterday Baron Huzaro Komura, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Kogoro Takahira, Minister to the United States, the Japanese envoys to the Washington peace conference. Subsequently he had a long interview with them at which all phases of the approaching negotiations were considered.

Minister Takahira, speaking for both Baron Komura and himself, said that they had had a delightful and satisfactory visit, and talk with the President. Baron Komura, he said, had desired to pay his homage to President Roosevelt, and on behalf of the Emperor to thank him for his efforts to bring about peace in the Far East.

RESISTANCE FEEBLE.

Two Towns Quickly Occupied by the Japanese In Siberia.

Tokio, July 28.—It is announced at army headquarters that the Japanese army landed on Sakhalin Island on the morning of July 24, without meeting heavy resistance from the Russians, commenced landing in the neighborhood of Alexandrovsk, eight miles north of Alexandrovsk, and that Alexandrovsk was seized Tuesday.

The following official announcement was made yesterday afternoon: "The detachment detailed to proceed to the landing of the Siberian coast of Japanese troops from the Island of Sakhalin dislodged the enemy from the vicinity of Aikova, July 24. The enemy's strength consisted of one battalion of infantry, besides several hundred volunteers with eight field pieces.

"Another detachment landed at Mugati and captured 46,000 tons of coal and light railway materials. Alexandrovsk was taken after some engagement evening after some resistance. At dawn July 25 the enemy fortified a position east of Alexandrovsk was attacked, and our troops pursued him toward Novo-Michelskoye, which place we completely occupied the same day. Two hundred prisoners, 10 guns, 20 Russian gun carriages, ammunition and provisions."

Ferry Boat Sunk.

Kuanchangtsu, Manchuria, July 28.—According to reports from Corea the Japanese army under Nodzu has crossed forty mile front. Their vanguard is now about eighty miles from the mouth of the Tumen River. The Cor ans estimate the strength of the Japanese at about 60,000 men. The main force is concentrated at Kenchea.

Russian Retreat.

London, July 28.—The correspondent of The Daily Telegraph at Osaka, Japan, sends the following:

"Hearing of the advance of the Japanese, the Russians on Monday hastily retreated from Buryong and Fukyo, in Northern Corea."

Stopped British Ship.

Port Said, Egypt, July 28.—The Russian auxiliary cruiser cruiser Kuban stopped and examined the British steamer Pavilia, Peninsular and Oriental (July 9, for Calcutta), in the Red Sea, July 25. The Pavilia was allowed to proceed after her papers had been examined. The Kuban was formerly the Hamburg-American line steamer Auguste Victoria.

Japan to Supply War Boats.

Berlin, July 28.—The National Zeitung yesterday published as an example of the Japanese influence in China the statement that Chang Chi Tung, Governor of the two Hu Provinces, has ordered from the Kawasaka works at Kobe, Japan, for use on the Yang Tse River six gunboats and four torpedo boats, the whole costing over $1,000,000.

Jews Killed in Riots.

Kishineff, July 28.—An attack on Jews in which several were killed and injured is reported to have occurred at Ruska Novaka (New Russia, probably a village near Kishineff). The number of fatalities has not been established.

War Party Still Active.

St. Petersburg, July 28.—The war party is again making headway, drawing capital from Count Lamsdorff's optimistic telegrams, one of which with the Emperor's reply declaring that the misfortunes of war have not shaken his belief and devotion in the army and containing a wish that the troops may bring the war to a happy conclusion is published.

Fresh Agrarian Disorders.

Odessa, July 28.—Serious agrarian disorders are reported to have occurred near Sherinka, in the Government of Kieff.

REVOLUTION BY REFERENDUM

Probable Recommendation of the Norwegian Government Referred.

Christiania, July 28.—The Norwegian Government yesterday proposed to the Storthing the holding of a referendum on the dissolution of the union with Sweden. The proposal was referred to a special committee.

Britain and Recognition.

London, July 28.—No application has yet been made to Great Britain for the recognition of Norway as an independent state, and it is not expected that such an application will be made until Sweden and Norway arrange their differences. The British Government feels it could with perfect propriety recognize Norway, but that out of regard for Sweden it will await an agreement on the subject of the dissolution of the union.

To Treat With Norway.

Stockholm, Sweden, July 28.—Both Houses of the Swedish Parliament yesterday morning approved the report of the special committee appointed by Parliament to deal with the crisis between Norway and Sweden.

Union Must Not Interfere.

Toronto, July 28.—Unionism was given a sore blow yesterday in the decision of Judge Teetzel in the Berlin case, which has been hanging fire for the past two years. By the decision an officer of the union in coming upon the premises and ordering a man to quit work holds himself liable to a fine. The case just decided was one in which a contractor of the Town of Berlin was building a house, and the secretary of the Bricklayers' Union came upon the scene and stated that as the foundation had been laid by non-union men the union bricklayers employed would be forced to quit work. This was done and the suit resulted.

TELEPHONE TALKS.

TO TELEPHONE USERS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC,—

The impression has gone abroad that THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA is required to purchase its equipment from American manufacturers at high prices, and that subscribers are paying for this in their rates. There is absolutely no foundation for this.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY OF CANADA, is one of the large manufacturing concerns of the country and is also one of the largest employers of Canadian labor. Practically everything that goes into the construction of a modern telephone system is produced in the factories owned and controlled by the Company. The prices charged the Company are fixed by competition with the largest electrical concerns on the Continent. That the prices are reasonable and the articles of the highest merit is demonstrated by the fact that nearly fifty per cent. of the output of these factories is sold to other Canadian consumers in competition with producers in the United States and Europe. At the present time the Company's factories are being doubled in size and capacity to keep pace with the demand.

The Bell Telephone Company employs in its various interests about 5,000 people and pays out in salaries alone $1,742,152.00 per annum.

These are facts of which the public is perhaps not aware, but which will, no doubt, interest all Canadians.

INTELLIGENCER JOB OFFICE FOR CHEAP AND ARTISTIC WORK

Daily Intelligencer.

A Silly French-Canadian.

A letter in the New York Times, on which that paper based an editorial, expresses an opinion gained from a brief visit to Quebec last Jan. that annexation would sooner or later join the American Union. The writer gave as the conclusion of a French-Canadian with whom he conversed, that the trade of the two countries was of such steadily increasing importance that the time would soon come when the advantages of unimpeded commerce would be secured by union—the only way, he was persuaded, that they could be got. This French Canadian says in exchange, has surely gone wild. He forgets the traditions of his race and the whole history of the conquest of Canada, if he supposes that these can be lightly subordinated to the question of commercial advantages, which are so largely a matter of tariffs. If there is due element more than another in Canada interested in the status quo it is the French-Canadian, from the fact that it possesses national rights and privileges under British rule guaranteed by the good faith of the Crown, which would not be recognized in any other portion of the Empire, much less by the United States under any form of union that could be considered. The rights and immunities secured by treaty after the battle of Quebec were almost equivalent to those accorded to the winner of a battle. They would never be surrendered for the sake of an expansion of trade, while that can be at any time secured by commercial negotiations. In this aspect the constitution of the Province of Quebec, instead of being a source of weakness to the Empire on this continent, is an important bulwark. A propaganda looking to annexation from any other portion of the Dominion, such as the new immigration from the States we are welcoming to the Northwest, would receive prompt check in Quebec in the demand for the preservation of its vested treaty interests, which would be swept away directly union with the Republic were consummated. Whether other parts of the Dominion relish the dominance of French-Canada or not, with whatever vexation they perceive an occasional appearance of a sentiment inimical to the passing aims of the Imperial part, this is the condition as it exists, and will be found operative despite anything that a French-Canadian trader might say to a New Yorker on "a brief visit to Quebec," regarded in this light, the saying of Sir E. P. Taché, one of Canada's great administrators of the past, that "the last shot in defence of British connection would be fired by a French-Canadian," is full of permanent significance.

Under-paid Post Office Clerks.

In the annual readjustment of the U. S. Post Office Department additional clerks have been allowed in many cities, from ten to fifteen in places of three hundred thousand inhabitants.

While Sir William Mulock is looking abroad for things to copy in his postal administration, he would be decidedly to remain oblivious to this phase of governmental liberality, among our neighbors.

The following from the London Free Press will be very apropos in this connection. It will meet the approbation of many in this city: "The post offices of this country are notoriously undermanned. Salaries in the upper grades of officialdom have been raised, while those of minor work people remain stationary at the lowest notch. No other class of labor requiring the same standard of education, ability and trustworthiness is so overworked and under paid as that of the post office officials in the cities; nor is any class of men in the public service, not excepting township treasurers, which are subjects of special paramoncy, so illiberally rewarded as the rural postmasters. The little many of them get for their services they give, constant and faithful the year round, is a scandal to the government. Sir William, being himself a millionaire, may not be expected to give very close personal attention to the wants of men and women in these humble positions. Gentlemen in high station generally as rulers, are apt to forget what is due to those who form, as it were, the cogs in the great wheel of public administration. They realise on their own part, however, the necessity or desirability of fat compensation for the services they give, as seen in the advances recently made aggregating $600,000 per annum.

While they were about it the great men of the country might have remembered the "small fry" in official life, the postal officials, for example, who are paid less than a dollar a day, not the wages of charwomen who go out in days' work, and to be hoped, in the interest of this deserving class of public servants, that Sir William Mulock, when he returns from the family gatherings abroad, will open his heart upon these matters and extend some of the sympathy that has been lavished upon people in high station to the laborers in the public vineyard who are struggling to live."

Most people who read the papers and kept in touch with events, followed up to the Spanish-American war, will say "Amen!" to the following remarks, made by "The Man" in the Hamilton Herald :

"There are three kinds of courage—physical courage, moral courage and death courage, and moral courage is the rarest of them all. The other day in home ports a Yankee gunboat was blown to pieces and her crew destroyed. Then there will be nothing come of it. A few years ago a Yankee warship blew up in Havana harbor, and a bloody war resulted, and one of the oldest and proudest nations on earth was humiliated in the dust. There are not a dozen people outside of the United States who believe that the calamity that befell the Maine was other than an accident resulting from carelessness or faulty construction, but the great United States claimed on evidence that would not hang a tailless dog in any civilized country, and she was forgotten.

"Why don't the Yankees raise the Maine and find out for certain what happened. She is a valuable relic, and it is admitted that there is only a small hole in her.

"The Japs sooner or later will raise every warship sunk by the Russians in Port Arthur harbor, and some of them are as full of apertures as an openwork steel lamp. Moreover, the Maine is a danger to navigation in Havana harbor. But the Yanks don't raise her. They don't want a post-mortem. If they raised the Maine the whole world would know that they had laid a cruel, cowardly and false charge against a weak and chivalrous nation—that it was a case of the Wolf and the Lamb over again, and that the picking of that quarrel was one of the blackest stains on the United States' escutcheon.

"The Yankees don't want to remember the Maine now. They would like to forget her. Oh, for a sleep and a forgetting!"

Romance, pathos, humor. Great combination, that, and all contained in the celebrated "Raffles" stories, which begin in The Intelligencer next Monday. Don't miss them. Critics pronounce them the most entrancing tales since Conan Doyle wrote his first series of Sherlock Holmes detective stories. The whole series of thirteen will be run in The Intelligencer.

The Laurier Government has capped the climax of its meanness to the Auditor-General by placing his superannuation allowance at the very lowest figure possible. They could have given him $2,800 per annum, but will only give him $2,000. The fine old "Watchdog of the Treasury" now gets his reward for daring to call extravagance and dishonesty by their proper names.

SEEING BY TELEPHONE.
(Everybody's Magazine)

"How well you're looking this morning!" says the facetious man in telephonic greetings to his friend a hundred miles away. J. H. Fowler, of Portland, Ore., has taken the nub out of this joke by inventing an apparatus by which images displayed before a lens at one end of a telephone wire are projected upon a screen at the other end. Mr. Fowler invites his visitors to talk with his daughter. He puts the telephone transmitter to the ear, apply the eye to an aperture in the telephone box, and see the young woman in miniature speaking 3,000 feet away. Mr. Fowler is preparing now to show a train in motion in his invention. He has no doubt of its commercial use and declares that within a few years it will be in operation throughout the country. For some it may be a boon. For others it will be a curse. Who has not telephoned when he wanted to avoid a face-to-face interview? What will finish the hands of the "busy office" say to a machine that shows to suspicious wives the ships that pass in the night? Mr. Fowler may not be a public benefactor, after all.

It would appear that "Japhet in Search of a Father" is being outdone by Aylesworth in Search of a Seat. The Laurier Government want the celebrated lawyer in the Cabinet, but no Ontario constituency wants him, even though he may promise them the Trent canal terminus. It seems a pity in one way, for that aggregation of political misfits at Ottawa would certainly be ballasted up a lot by the accession of a man like A. B. Aylesworth.

VACCINATION AND DANDRUFF.

There is as Sure Prevention of Baldness as There is of Smallpox.

It is now accepted that vaccination renders the vaccinated person exempt from smallpox; or at worst, he never has anything but the lightest kind of a case. Now as sure a preventive and cure for dandruff, which causes falling hair and baldness, has been discovered by Newbro's Herpicide. It kills the dandruff germ. C. H. Reed, Victor, Idaho, says : "My wife and wife have been troubled with dandruff and falling hair for several years. We tried remedies without effect until we used Newbro's Herpicide, two bottles of which cured me. Hundreds of similar testimonials. Sold by leading druggists. Bogus Ballot-Boxes in House of Commons.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. On the 7th of November there was an officer looking for Mr. Porter at the riding-director, Chamberlain.

Mr. F. G. Borden. Very good. At what time did any officer call on the Government first communicate with Mr. Porter?

Mr. Fitzpatrick. On the 7th of November an officer left here for the purpose of taking Chamberlain. He reached the same night and on the 8th he called at Mr. Porter's house. He was not found but absent and on the 9th of November Mr. Porter appeared on the scene with his commission. On the 8th of November the officer was in Chamberlain's house. He was found to be in Toronto.

Mr. R. L. Borden. The information, I take it, that two of the men mainly implicated have been allowed to escape and it does not appear that any warrants had been issued for their arrests until—I issued for their arrests until—I not have the exact date.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. About the 11th or 12th of December. I have not my papers here at the moment, but I think it was about then.

Mr. R. L. Borden. Of course, the dates are of some importance.

Mr. Fitzpatrick. I have sent for my papers.

Mr. R. L. Borden. I understood from the evidence given before Hastings, in asking some questions during the progress of the election, that no warrants were issued for these men until about the 16th or 17th. However, the minister of Justice can give us the exact dates. The important point after all was that two of the men were allowed to escape and another is reported to point is the fact that in the ballot in this case was fixed at $2,000, while, as I am informed by my hon. friend the member for West Hastings, the ballot in the case of the Toronto ballot-box was fixed at $20,000. One would have thought that $20,000 was the man who failed to have been balled in a sum something like $20,000 and that the ball of the Police Magistrate might possibly have been fixed at somewhat less. But of course it is very easy to criticise. There may be some reason which will be apparent, but which would explain the matter, but at all events it is obvious that the ball fixed in the case of Lott was perfectly inadequate, and as a result the prisoner was able to escape bail and to escape prosecution or punishment in company with two other men who were not arrested at all. It does not seem to me that the result can be said to be satisfactory. In so far as the details of the dates are concerned I have not at present any knowledge. All I am dealing with at this moment is the fact, but there are two or three circumstances in connection with this matter that seem to call for Government, and one of these is the circumstance that ballots of the same kind from the printing office in the City of Ottawa upon two occasions appeared. It must be remembered that no scheme of this kind can be successfully executed if it is to defeat the will of the people unless a supply of apparently genuine ballots is obtained, and such deputy returning officers are appointed as will be unscrupulous enough to lend themselves to a conspiracy of this kind. It appears to me upon the face of the case, as far as we can judge, on which Lott made visit to Ottawa, that unsuccessful attempting to procure these ballots in another way, that, failing in that, he turned upon a mere telephone message to some person or persons whom he was personally acting on behalf of the returning officer or his assistant in the City of Ottawa, and I do not know how that may be. I would suppose that ballot papers are handed to the deputy returning officers by a responsible person—that would be by the returning officer—and with the exact record of their delivery, the person to whom they were delivered, and the number of ballots that were delivered would be kept in every case. He has given us a very significant certificate and it seems a remarkable loose way of transacting business and one which lends itself to the perpetration of frauds of this kind can be successful unless it turns out of a conspiracy such as this. As to the extent to which the conspiracy may have successfully carried out, let it be remembered that it is only a matter of conjecture. It is very probable that only a portion of this kind can be detected and exposed, that still more remains below the surface. There is one matter, to which the Minister of Justice alluded in terms of somewhat severe comment, but to which he got by mistake. It appears that a man named Hawley, against whom I have no personal interest after he left the county did not even reside in the riding for which he was appointed deputy returning officer. The returning officers have no discretion in such a case. It is competent only to be officers of this House and to be punishable as such. They should respectively reside in the municipality should be, it was, the would and himself to either one political party or the other in connection with the proceedings at an election. It appears that the returning officer for Prescott at the City of Ottawa appointed his deputy returning officers upon the nominations of the Liberal organization of that riding. I submit to the Minister of Justice, I submit to the members of the Government, I submit to gentlemen on that side of the House, that that is a most extraordinary procedure for that returning officer to follow. He should have appointed men who were nominated by one political organization or the other, but because [illegible] fair and impartial and competent. That is the only reason which ought to actuate him in making such an appointment. Not only did the Mr. Franking, the returning officer for Frontenac, appoint his deputy returning officers upon the nomination of the Liberal committee, but he instituted upon appointing one who was a non-resident of the riding and who was appointed from the City of Ottawa no doubt for the very purpose which was to be subserved by this bogus ballot-box. The Minister of Justice has spoken of that as an outrage. It is not only an outrage so far as the appointment of Hawley, the deputy returning officer, but it seems to me that the Minister of Justice might have said that it is an outrage to appoint as returning officer any man who has no higher conception of his duties than Franklin seems to have had. This man Hawley was appointed, he was brought for a purpose beyond doubt and brought for a purpose connected with these bogus ballot-boxes, which were certainly used in one political contest in the City of Ottawa. Conservative candidate for the riding objected to the appointment of Hawley because he came from outside the riding, the answer which he got from this man Franklin was that an impartial servant of Parliament, was, that Hawley had been appointed because forsooth he was the nominee of the Liberal committee. It is impossible to imagine a more partisanship, that unfairness and what I might call connivance, could be displayed than I venture to think the Government of this country in the appointment of a returning officer make themselves — without designs it may be—a party to the conspiracy which led to the appoint Liberals if you like, but let them appoint men who are above suspicion. There are many Liberals in every riding in the country who are above suspicion, and who would be trusted by their Conservative opponents, just as many Conservatives are Conservative in the land. Appoint such men as returning officers. Such men point a man like this Franklin or returning officer who has no higher conception of his duties than that he is to make himself the tool of the Liberal committee in the riding, and you lend yourselves—I do not care whether you are to blame or whether you are to make yourself parties to just such a conspiracy as was carried out in the case of the two ridings. Let every hon. gentleman upon the treasury bench bear in mind, that, when the Government of Canada consents to the appointment of such returning officer as Hawley, and that, when the Government of Canada consents to the appointment of such deputy returning officers as were appointed at that ballot-box, they are responsible to the country for the result

A SUMMER NIGHT.

(August Century.)

Summah is de lovin' time—
Es' keer what you say,
Night is allus pearl an' prime,
Bestbah de day;
Dough, de day is sweet an' good,
Birds a-singin' fine;
Flavo jamailin' in de woods—
But de night 's mine.

Rivah whisperin' "Howdy do?"
Es it pass you by?
Moon a-lookin' down at you,
Winkin' on de sly,
Frogs a-croakin' 'Fum de pon',
Singin' bass dey till
An' you listen 'way beyon'
De' mos' whippo'will.

Hush up, honey, tek my han',
Mak' yo' footsteps light;
Somebody 's kin' a 'sleep in de lan'
On a summah night.
Somep'n dat you nevah see
An' nevah heyahs,
But you feels it is de breeze—
Somep'n' nigh to teahs.

Somep'n nigh to teahs! Dat's so;
But hit's nigh to smiles,
An' you feel it ca' you go
Down de aisles
Tek my han', my little dove;
Hush, an' come along;
Summah-ls de time fo' love
Night-time beats de day!

Are you fond of a little bit of romance? Of course you are; everyone is. Then be sure and read the celebrated "Raffles" stories, which have made their author famous, and which will start in The Intelligencer on Monday next. People who have read them pronounce them even better than the Sherlock Holmes stories.

Fox hunting seems to be on the wane in England. Some attribute this to the inroads of the automobile and others to hard times and "the loss of many hunting men during the South African war."

Some papers are advocating the publication of by-laws, which leads others to ask why all statutes are not published in the newspapers. This is done as a rule in the various States of the Union. No reader of newspapers can then plead ignorance of the laws that are passed for the people's guidance. How many persons in Ontario outside of the legal profession have a chance to see the laws until they are expounded in court?

It is evident that old John Bull intends to lose no part of his wellwon grasp in the commercial world. It is said that the number of commercial travelers leaving old England's shores have almost doubled in the past years. One of these commercial gentlemen says that Britain is becoming more and more aggressive in her lines, and her firms are changing many old methods, in obedience to world-wide requirements.

If the next Geneva peace convention does not deal with the question of the hatpin, the law will have to do it. Any lady carping next in the terrors of the hatpin. In the hand of a malignant it may be used as a dangerous weapon, and when pointed in self defence is recognized as formidable. Recently a man was fatally stabbed (jabbed) by coming accidentally in contact with one of these deadly, shiny, pointed implements worn in front of him. Any lady carping next London impaled a sparrow in his flight across the road on a hatpin which protruded about two inches. These are but a few instances. Now, then, as a Philadelphia physician that the hatpin is a cause of fainting. Any one who rides much in the trolley cars, is the latest suggestion that some other form of fastening appeals to the ingenuity of inventors.

Hon. Mr. Monteith, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario, is outspoken in his report dealing with country fairs and exhibitions, saying that, in his opinion, a great deal of public money is wasted upon them, under the system of application which grow up in the last regime. The expenditure on grants to agricultural and horticultural societies amounts to nearly $83,000—a larger sum than is expended for any other agricultural purpose, being considerably more than twice as much as the combined grants to farmers' institutes, dairy schools, experimental farms and for the fighting of the San Jose scale. An effort is to be made to place the societies on a more satisfactory footing. As a remedy it is proposed that either a commission be appointed to visit the several counties where county and township fairs overlap, or that the department should deal with the question outright, limiting the number of societies to each district and leaving the people interested to decide which of the societies should receive Government support.

Butchers' Cattle.

Owing to light receipts of butcher's cattle on Thursday the trade was dull. Monday and Tuesday of this week prices for good to choice cattle were firm, although on the fact they were, if anything, better than for the previous week. Loads of picked cattle sold at $4.50 to $4.70, loads of good at $4.25 to $4.40, medium at $3.75 to $4, common at $3.25 to $3.50, inferior and rough at $2.50 to $3 per cwt.

Stockers and Feeders.

There were few feeder and stockers offered, but plenty for the demand, which farmers can find plenty of good stock without waiting to have anything sent out to them. Quotations for this line were: One load of feeders, 1000 lbs. each, were reported as being sold at $3.75 per cwt., and another lot of 17 stockers, 700 lbs. each, at $3.10. A few eastern stockers were reported at $3.25 per cwt.

Milch Cows.

About 20 milch cows and springers sold all the way from $30 to $47 each.

Veal Calves.

About 130 veal calves, the quality of which was fair to good, sold during the week, away from $3.50 to $5.75 for the bulk, with a few choice ones at $6 per cwt., and a few at $3 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Trade for sheep and lambs was brisk at $4 to $4.25 for ewes, and export rams; bucks, $3 to $3.25; lambs, $5.50 to $7 per cwt.

Hogs.

Delivered, $6.25 per cwt., and $6.10 per cwt. off cars at country points, for choice hogs, fed and watered, and $6.50 for lights and fats.

Mrs. Rosella Acquitted.

London, July 28.—Mrs. Roselle, charged with blazmy, who married a boy seventeen years old, but who, at that age, was acquitted yesterday. The crown case was William Scott, who admitted he married Jennie Gough before he met the prisoner, and that Jennie is still living. He was married to Mrs. Roselle many years ago, and has by her a son and four children. When Mrs. Roselle discovered Scott's real wife was living she left him.

Dr. Mascham Dead.

Peterboro, July 28.—Dr. W. W. Mascham, for many years a prominent conservative member of the Legislature, died Wednesday night at his residence in Lakefield after a short illness from appendicitis. The late Dr. Mascham was 64 years of age, removed to Warsaw four years ago from Napanee.

Dr. Ami to Report.

Ottawa, July 28.—Dr. A. H. Ami of the Geological Survey Department is engaged in the preparation of a report of the country through which the Grand Trunk Pacific will pass from Winnipeg to the Pacific coast.

Still the Same Story.

Winnipeg, July 28.—The C. P. R. crop report for the week ending July 24 was received yesterday and continues most favorable.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Are the Up-to-Date Remedy.

Medicines, like clothes, are made from different materials now than they were twenty-five years ago. Some of the materials used in making Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women had not been discovered then. You cannot get these new ingredients in the old time remedies. And yet these ingredients are now known in diseases of women by all the world's greatest physicians.

Progressive women—thinking women keep up-to-date in the matter of medicines as well as clothes. They are buying Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets, the scientific cookery preparation for women, and the one now recognized beyond doubt or question as the one best adapted to their special needs.

They make healthy women.

HUMOR

THE LITTLE ONES.

Some Real Sayings by Wee Mites of Humanity.

A gentleman found his two little sons digging a deep hole in the garden.

"What is that for?" he asked.

"To bury Mary in," was the reply. Mary was a new nurse.

"And what has Mary done?"

"She does not speak good English."

"Indeed! What is the matter with her English?"

"She says 'No,' when she ought to say 'Yes.'"

Mr. C. was telling his tiny nephew the story of George Washington and his hatchet. When the climax was reached and George said, "I cannot tell a lie," Ernest said wonderingly: "Couldn't he? What was the matter with him?"

The same little fellow often watched a neighbor go by who was an undertaker. Being of a friendly disposition, he would call out, "Good morning, Mr. Brown!" but his salutation seldom met with any response. One day when Mr. Brown had gone by without noticing him Ernest said to his mother, "He does not like live little boys, does he?"

Robbie wrote a composition on flowers in which he said, "There are three kind of flowers, roses, lome and colly flowers" (cauliflowers).

He also asked his teacher if Greek and Latin were "talkative languages."

A kindergarten teacher was explaining to the little ones what wool was. "Feel my dress," she said. "It is made of wool. Many of our winter clothes are of wool."

A little later, to refresh his memory, she asked, "Now, of what are your trousers made?"

"Of papa's old ones!" shouted Johnny.—Lippincott's Magazine.

Determined to Be the First.

A mother of little boys who had gone to the country to spend the summer received the following postal from the eldest:

Dear Mother—I wanted to be the first to write to you so I got a postal card left home and will mail it when we reach Livingston. We had a fine time and sound. Excuse the writing, because you keep coming into the room. Your loving son, WILLIAM.

The mother had said she would send a dime to the one who wrote the first, and Master William determined to beat his brothers, so he literally "sold them by the forehead."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Her Dilemma.

Mrs. Nubride (excitedly)—Oh, John, please send off a telegram for me, quick!

Mr. Nubride—My, dearest, what has happened?

Mrs. Nubride—Why, I'm taking a correspondence course in cooking, and the cake I made is running all over the oven. I want to telegraph quick to find out what to do.—Brooklyn Life.

Time Throws Away.

Clara—Did he propose, dear?

Dora—It's goo much to bear. Mr. Fairheart Kaley is engaged.

Clara—But you told me you wouldn't marry him.

Dora—Of course I wouldn't. But after all the time I've wasted on him I think he might at least give me a chance to refuse him.—New York Weekly.

The Truth of It.

General Schenck's Last Game.

General Robert E. Schenck was a famous poker player. Just a week before his death he sat around a table in his own house with General Schofield, General Rucker and two United States senators. It was a friendly game. Everybody had passed up to Schenck, who promptly opened it for a dollar. Each of the senators raised, the general raised back, and the senator stayed. Back drew one card. Then the limit began, fast and furious. Finally the senator said:

"Well, I have you beaten. I think I have a sure thing, and I don't want to bet any more money on this kind of a hand."

"But I don't think you have me beat. When I get enough of it I will quit."

So the merry war of chips recommenced, and finally Schenck accepted his proposition and offered to fatten the stakes by a wager of a dinner for the five gentlemen present. This was accepted. General Schenck had four aces. The senator had a straight flush. But the little dinner for the five never came off. Two days before the evening set for it General Schenck died.

How Much One Should Eat.

One of the much discussed questions of the day on which there are almost as many opinions as individuals is the quantity of food one should eat. Doctors assert that the majority of people eat too much. Babies from the day of their birth are forced to eat too much, and they grow up with this artificial appetite. The most reasonable estimate yet made is probably that of Horace Greeley, who died of the average weight of the body as the average daily quantity required. If you weigh 150 pounds you should consume seven pounds of food. This includes drink as well as solid food. But it is ridiculous to set down a hard and fast rule. Such a quantity might kill some, and there is a case on record of a man wasting away on a diet of seven or eight pounds of food a day. He changed his diet to three-quarters of a pound of liquid and the same of solid food, and in a few months grew stout and lived to a ripe old age.

Siamese Love For Games of Chance.

The Siamese are devoted to the holiday making and ceremonies and processions which accompany the most important anniversaries or incidents of life, death, marriage, etc., and of course an infinite amount of money to be squandered and time lost.

They love cock fighting, a sort of shuttlecock football and fighting with cocks, crickets, duffles and the like, though it is to be surmised that the main attraction of these pursuits consists in the excitement of betting and gambling, which are the cardinal national vices.

In Siamese hands money on anything. Licensed gambling houses exist in the cities and are a large source of income to the government, which farms out the monopoly. A royal lottery is extensively patronized in Bangkok.

Pleasures of Engravers' Lives.

In St. John's college, Oxford, is preserved a portrait of the cook of the college in days gone by. As they seem to be, are really microscopic writing, the face alone containing the Lord's prayer, Psalms, with the creeds and several forms of prayers.

The learned Person is known to have indulged in this species of curious ingenuity occasionally, and perhaps the Greek verses from the Medea of Euripides, with Johnson's translation of a long piece, "Ode on Saint Cecilia's Music," were executed by him. Though consisting of 720 words, they are compressed in a space not much in diameter, with a small space in the center left blank.

The Truth of It.

"He can't get a job to suit him, he says." He complains constantly about hard luck. I wonder what he means by hard luck anyway."

COUNTESS POTOCKA

The Woman Who Sang to Chopin as He Lay Dead in Death.

As the great Chopin lay dying his soul was inspired out by the song of the beautiful Countess Delphine Potocka, who had been his dearest confidante and friend. In the presence of their friendship, one of the sweetest in history, is related by Gustav Kobbe in the Baltimore, the last tragic scene in the life of the composer has often been described and has been painted by Barrias. It is fitting that only one may well read another version of it. Mr. Kobbe writes:

"In this scene what is perhaps the most touching scene that has been handed down to us in the lives of the great composers. When Delphine entered what was soon to be the death chamber Chopin sat at the piano and a few of his most intimate friends were gathered there. She took her place by Louise. When the dying man opened his eyes and saw her standing at the foot of his bed, tall, slight, draped in white, resembling a beautiful angel, and mingling her tears with those of Louise his face moved, and those nearest him, bending over to catch his words, heard him ask that she would sing.

"Mastering her emotion by a strong effort of the will, she sang in a voice of bell-like purity the canticle to the Virgin attributed to Stradella—sang it so devoutly, so fervently, that the dying man, 'artist and lover of the beautiful to the very last,' whispered in ecstasy: 'How exquisite! Again, again!'

"Once more she sang, this time a psalm by Marcello. It was the haunted hour of twilight. The dying day draped the scene in its mysterious shadows. Those at the bedside had sunk noiselessly on their knees. Over the mournful accompaniment of sobs floated the voice of Delphine like a melody from heaven."

BEGGARS' APPEALS.

How the Professionals Raise Them as the Public's Reactions.

Never do panhandlers make the mistake of appealing to the reason. The emotions are the only ones attacked. There is always a complete absence of argument. In the first instance, could be more compelling of sympathy than the spectacle of the woman in the doorway, lifting up her sniveling as it seemed grinding a wheezy old organ which he had lied both to and about? Or the suggestiveness of that perambulator, coupled with the sound of that organ, more forlorn than mortal child ever uttered, was worth dollars a day to the man behind it. Unquestionable art, of course, but art nevertheless. And the artist grew rich, for when inspiration failed he had but to wax found to be the owner of many houses in Hoboken.

Again, could there be anything more likely to excite compassion than the blind accordion man? It was invented by a German beggar named Laug, whose French disciple, Lemaire, practiced it unbeknown. I have seen a crust thrower operating in Sixth avenue. He was a semi-well dressed man, and he walked slowly through the crowds of shoppers. Suddenly he uttered a hoarse cry and darted out into the roadway, where, pouncing upon a crust of bread which he had thrown, he began ravenously gnawing it ravenously. He did not wait for sympathy. He walked rapidly away, but a dozen people who saw the act ran after him and crowded one another for the privilege of giving him money.—Theodore Waters in Everybody's Magazine.

Conceit of the Rooster.

Were it not for the disgusting self conceit of the rooster one might enjoy a poultry show. The rooster is the handsomest fowl. He has not civilization enough to veneer his opinions with common politeness and savoir faire, and his disgusting exhibition of the art of being it offends good taste and refinement. How the hen manages to put up with it is certainly one of the mysteries of the coop. If six or eight hens would form a ladies' club and indicted after Sorosis and throw the rooster down good and hard once or twice, he would soon discover that he was not the only kernel on the cob.

Write the 'i' and 'e' exactly alike and put the one in the middle over them."—London Telegraph.

A Bermuda Fisherman's Daughter

By Kate Upson Clark

Copyright, 1905, by Kate Upson Clark.

IN common with many of his fellow islanders, Thomas Gilbert found himself before he was fifty years old a grandfather.

He had been brought up by gardening and still assisted in the care of his master's grounds, but most of the time he fished. Among the boats which, on Sunday afternoons, used to set him, bending over to catch his words, heard him ask that she would sing.

"Mastering her emotion by a strong effort of the will, she sang in a voice of bell-like purity the canticle to the Virgin attributed to Stradella—sang it so devoutly, so fervently, that the dying man, 'artist and lover of the beautiful to the very last,' whispered in ecstasy: 'How exquisite! She thought he was the handsomest man in the world.

Go away!" And, thrusting her hands forward like a man pushing an utter loathing, she rushed into the house.

She had been in a sort of stupor for the last few days, but now the old wide awake and her soul was on fire. Here could she find out whether what Martin said was true? She had wondered past John Masters' mother's home in Warwick. She had seen the sisters driving in their pony carriage, she had come near throwing herself in front of them and crying: "Tell your son's sake tell me is John living—and where is he?" But nobody was supposed to know that she was anything to John Masters—and her pride had kept her silent. Now she would know. She would go to his home and inquire. There was no one to go with her, but that did not matter. She would go as soon as she could get ready in the morning.

Dressing herself the next day with uncommon care, she set forth. Yes, Mrs. Masters was home. Brenda had written her name on a plain card which she handed to the maid. She heard Mrs. Masters coming down the stairs. She rose, but her tongue clave to the roof of her mouth. Then it occurred to her that of course John was living. If he had died everybody would have known it. What a fool she had been to come here! Yes, Martin was right. He had a certain hard sense which she had always admired in him. Or perhaps she could get out without seeing anybody, after all! Her nerves almost forced her from her in shrieks.

"Did you wish to see me?"

A cold, stately personage stood before her. Brenda remained standing. She drew itself up, and answered coldly: "How much had John told her? Oh, what should she say?

The lady's manner waited, staring at her. A pitiful smile dusted over the girl's face underneath her dotted veil. She put her hands out as though to catch hold of something. Then she tottered and fell. She was not a strong girl, and the cold woman was hardened up to the extent of letting the fainting girl's veil and falling of her gloves, while she rang the bell for assistance. Before a servant appeared Mrs. Masters had come to herself and had sat up on the sofa, looking the proud mother before her full in the eyes.

"Tell me," she said breathlessly—"tell me before anybody comes—is John well? Oh, tell me, is he living?"

"Yes," said John's mother, a scorn creeping over her handsome face with the consciousness of her son's. "I cannot imagine why you want to know. But John is fairly well. He is now in New York. We have many friends and relatives there, and he is very happy."

"Oh, no," said Brenda, her head streaming slowly down her face.

"So he writes," pursued the mother mercilessly.

"Tell him," Brenda said presently, with all her self control gone, "tell him I am—glad—that he is happy." Then her crushed pride gave a great recoil, and without looking at the woman before fairly knowing that she was uttering them she added, "Tell him that I—I am going to be married."

Somehow she emerged from the house and made her way home. She felt that everything was gone, and it did not make any difference now what became of her. She might as well leave her father and mother and do what she could to make their lives easier. She would be the quiet little daughter at home as though she were crazy.

"Mother," she said, "you may tell Martin Mears that I will never marry him."

"When?" gasped the startled mother. "Why, Brenda, you—you—"

Five years passed, and Brenda was the mother of two children. They were twins, and the light of her father's life. Martin had been a devoted husband. He had put Brenda's brother through college, had set him up in life, and all the comfort which the family had accumulated from the marriage had been realized.

One day Brenda was in her storeroom, when in response to a call from her husband's which he always kept locked, it fell to the floor. The lock sprang, and a package of papers and letters dropped out. Brenda's blood froze in her veins as she looked at them. They were addressed to her in the handwriting of John Masters. She tore them open fearfully. They were letters full of love at first, of aggonized doubt and fear later, then of silence. Another had been written after her marriage. "Oh, how could you leave me, my darling! Could you not have let me know? Probably she had kept in leash so many months that she was addressed to you all the time! I know about that young Masters—but, Brenda, he never meant anything. He's all right, over there in America—you can go up and ask his folks on their farm. But he is a man and he isn't troubling himself about you. And I am waiting for you. You will never hear from him again. Please all that I could for you? You have stripped life forever of its brightness for me. Oh, if I could only know what has come between us!"

Brenda read great gusts of passion as she read on. And her husband had kept these letters from her. She hated him.

When he came to his dinner the letters lay beside his plate. He recognized them instantly. One of the children was taking its noonday nap. He sent the servant to bed by the cook woman in the kitchen. Brenda was sitting in her place colorless and her eyes fixed on a picture. Martin looked reproach. He gazed at her a moment. Then he dropped upon the door and prevailed at her feet in an agony for the first time.

"How could you, Martin; how could you?"

"Oh, I know it wasn't right, Brenda!" he said hoarsely, "very wrong, but you don't know how I loved you! Nobody ever loved anybody so. I had to have you, and I got you. I burned the letters, and I paid him not to let you have them. I knew it wasn't right! But it was the only way that I saw to get you. And haven't I been good to you, Brenda? Haven't I done everything for you?"

She rose and left him. His touch seemed to poison her.

A week followed of horrible, silent suffering for them both. Then came a scene which she had pictured to herself for many years. Even since her marriage she had known that sometimes imagining it, though she had tried to be a good and faithful wife to the one who was now known as her husband, to the only man when she had ever loved.

John Masters stood before her. He had ordered past John Masters' mother's home in Warwick. She had seen the sisters driving in their pony carriage, she had come near throwing herself in front of them and crying: "Tell your son's sake tell me is John living—and where is he?" But nobody was supposed to know that she was anything to John Masters—and her pride had kept her silent. Now she would know. She would go to his home and inquire. FEIR TO PLEASE QUEBEC.

Mrs. Caroline Lemieux Campbell of Brockville, N. Y. Will Press Claim.

For Twenty Millions.

Attempt to establish her claim to a heritage of a million acres, granted by the British Government, in 1763, which is now worth $20,000,000—Only half was ever sold, the rest of the City of Montreal, Mrs. Caroline Lemieux Campbell of Alexandria, Mrs. Caroline Lemieux Campbell, of Brockville, N. Y., proposes, as assistant superintendent, to establish her claim to a heritage of a million acres granted by the British Government in 1763, which is now worth $20,000,000—only half was ever sold, the rest of the City of Montreal and the Province of Quebec. Mrs. Campbell is a granddaughter of Sir William Johnson, who received from Lord Egremont, Colonial Secretary, a royal grant of 100,000 acres in the Province of Quebec that Lord Kinsbury, the then Colonial Secretary, might have a large tract of land to take other soldiers to settle upon the estates of the nobility in the mother country. Sir William Johnson was the first superintendent of Indian affairs in Canada.

Sir Wilfrid's Inquiry.

"Where have you been all this years, and what have you done?" Sir Wilfrid Laurier when Mr. Campbell visited him and laid before a large assembly of our family and their legal advisers the "Parchment of Peace." Sir Wilfrid through his wife was a collateral claimant to the Lamb estate.

The energetic efforts of Mrs. Campbell, daughter of the late Lawrence Lambert, of Kingston, N. Y., so far have resulted in finding many documents which Montreal and Quebec lawyers had failed to unearth in years past. Her success would mean her big interest in the property upon which the Dominion Parliament buildings, the Dufferin Terrace and many of the best business and residential sites in the city, for which the British Government is now paying ground rents.

Mr. Campbell went to Quebec in 1874, and helped to build Chalmers church on the Esplanade, and found a priest delivering a sermon. It was known that the Lambert ancestors were of the Roman faith, and therefore became owner in perpetuity by himself and heirs of three pews. Mr. Campbell asked the aged sexton to admit him to the Lambert pew. The man gazed at him in astonishment, and said that none but the Lamberts might enter.

"I am husband of Augustine Lambert's granddaughter," said Mr. Campbell. The sexton hurried away, and returning with a great bunch of rusty keys led Mr. Campbell down the centre aisle and near the front opened an ancient pew. The priest paused in his discourse and the latter bobbed a pair of low bows. As the sexton left he whispered to Mr. Campbell: "Sir, no one but his wife has entered here for fifty years."

Archbishop's Papers Removed.

Among the effects of Mrs. Campbell's grandfather was a memorandum which the Archbishop directed. The papers are in the vault, No. 37, about his sister, from the time Augustine Campbell tried to see these papers. He learned that the building had been burned, but the vaults were uninjured, though their contents were unknown. But where they now are she has not been able to learn from the Provincial Government.

Mrs. Campbell's father, Leander Lambert, was not sent to school, but thought their contents were removed. The pew in 1854 and died there in 1846. Leander had married and one child, Mrs. Campbell, was born before the war. He went to St. Louis on business in 1855 and fell a victim to the cholera while attending a concert in that city.

Augustine Lambert was the Lambert of the third generation, with whose life the estate was involved. His father's estate was left to him, but he removed to the United States. His son was only three years old when he got to Quebec, and the young widow got no assistance in the matter from the Government. Mrs. Campbell continued: "I certainly have a right to the property, and I shall begin proceedings to recover the property, which is worth millions."

Duel at Pembroke in Duel.

Pembroke, Ont., July 28.—(Special.)—A duel was fought here on Wednesday morning between Dr. Leigh Lamphier and Dr. Lewis, in which the latter received the deadly wound. Dr. Lamphier is a native of England, and Dr. Lewis is a native of this town. The duel was fought with double-barrel shotguns, and the distance was 30 paces. The cause of the duel was the alleged attentions of Dr. Lewis to Mrs. Lamphier, which the husband resented. The duel was fought under the auspices of the Pembroke Rifle Association, and was conducted according to the rules governing duels. Dr. Lewis received the charge in the abdomen, and died in a few minutes. Dr. Lamphier is under arrest, and will be tried by the Pembroke Rifle Association. Dr. Lewis was married about a year ago, and leaves a widow and one child.

CANADIAN PIONEERS.

Reminiscences of Mr. Robert Clarke on His Diamond Wedding Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarke, of Toronto, have received congratulations of numerous friends upon the celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of their wedding day. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke were married in Ireland, and came to Canada on the Steadfast in 1845, and settled with a wealthy body of settlers.

Mr. Clarke was born in Ireland, in 1821, and was married in 1845. He was a farmer in Ireland, and settled with his wife in Toronto. Mr. Clarke has witnessed the passing of the old sailing vessels and the steamships and the stage coach and the railroad, and the development of the country from a wilderness to a prosperous state. He has been a member of the Orange Order for 60 years, and is the only surviving member of the Sun-rise Lodge, which was established in Toronto Junction, and also one of the eight members who first had been the red sash or sailton taken from the Humber Bridge.

On the 12th of June, 1845, he married Miss Jane Wilson, of West Gwillimbury, in the County of Simcoe, the marriage being solemnized by the late Thomas Oakley, rector of the famous Dr. Osler. Doubtless Mr. Clarke considered that the event in his life which overshadowed the "Wellington," for his wedding day was on the date of the anniversary of that famous battle.

Mrs. Clarke was born in Toronto in 1821. The young couple commenced life in the Township of York, where for many years they carried on successful farming operations, retiring from active life to their present home. While yet a young man Mr. Clarke was appointed a justice of the peace, in his old home in Downsview he was for many years superintendent of the Sunday school, trustee, steward and leader in the Methodist Church. Public-spirited and progressive, in 1853 he, was appointed assign to the 2nd Battalion of the 34th Regiment, and was promoted to the rank of ensign to the 1st Battalion (Upper Canada).

During his earlier life, when Toronto was known as "Muddy York," he together with several pioneer neighbors, cut a road through the woods from Bathurst street to Spadina avenue for their own convenience in going to and from market. The road is now Bloor street. Mr. and Mrs. Clarke both tell interesting tales of the Rebellion of 1837. Mr. Clarke is the eldest and last surviving member of a family of six.

They Didn't Shoot Straight.

An incident in which the Italian cruiser Umbria was concerned at Vancouver, B. C., has given rise to so much ill-feeling between that port and Rome, and has been exaggerated to such proportions in its transmission, Commander Corsi of the Umbria asking for an apology, that the minister of the naval authorities at Esquimalt to practice his gunners at the targets on the Sidney Island, and that between sixty and one hundred non-explosive shells landed in the fields and on the shores and in the camp of a party of salmon fishers. An enterprising reporter, in picturesque account of the affair was sent to Rome, and Commander Corsi was a good deal astonished to find on arriving at the port of disembarkation that the government at Rome asking him for an explanation.

It was the purest accident, Commander Corsi was reported to have given to any ship in gunnery practice, and he was afraid that he would be court-martialled. Nobody was hurt, and no damage was done to property.

Some small guns are inclined, however, to take a graver view of the matter than the Umbria's officers. The sacra diana they declare, might have killed again, and killed to order, to fatality. They say that there was no target on the island, and they hint that what the Umbria's gunners fired at were buoys placed later by the fishermen to locate their fishing traps.

HUMANE BUFFALO BILL.

Tries to Save Two Deer From Cadillac Marauders.

The sporting proclivities of a cousin of Senator Hoar led him to shoot a deer at the zoo, says The Toronto Globe, and the humane Senator has been at pains to explain that he cannot be held responsible for the act. The deer was killed until him. Travelers that Thursday morning when Superintendent Carter and his assistant were engaged in the act of going to investigate the cause found two deer in the enclosure, and one of them was dead. Question arose, could it be the work of dogs? Then the thought of the cousin of the senator from Massachusetts occurred to the minds of the gentlemen Mr. Carter, being informed, that they were still alive, but had received a number of wounds, and that they were badly injured. A bullet put through the head of one of the animals finished it, and the other, which was also injured in the protection of his mate, was captured without much difficulty by the dogs in vigorous fashion, and did not long survive the loss of blood which followed. Mr. Carter, on making inquiries, found that the deer had been driven down from the hills by the cadillacs, and that Buffalo Bill, who was in the city, had been asked to shoot them. He, however, declined to do so, but he did not object to his cousin, Senator Hoar, doing so. Mr. Carter, on making further inquiries, found that Senator Hoar had been asked to shoot some of the animals in the zoo, and that he had done so. Mr. Carter, however, would not say to him that he was responsible for the death of the deer, as he was not aware of the circumstances under which they were killed.

Another cousin, is C. D. Lambert, general passenger agent of the Grand Canyon National Park, of Williams, Ariz., and a guest at the Queen's hotel.

Another cousin, is C. D. Lambert, general passenger agent of the Grand Canyon National Park, of Williams, Ariz., and a guest at the Queen's hotel, who investigated his rights in the matter several years ago, and found that he was not the rightful heir. He is one of the direct descendants of Augustine Lambert.

Since Mrs. Campbell has appeared on the field, the properties she claims in Quebec have been practically tied up, and the Government is disposed to give up but short lease to the lands at issue. It has refused to permit the rebuilding of the Victoria Hotel, which was burned there a few years ago.

TO KEEP FLOWERS FRESH.

Simple Method Which Will Last Three or Four Weeks If Treated Properly.

Cut flowers when properly treated will last a fortnight, and by many to look fresh for three or four weeks. Every night take them out of the water and thoroughly rinse the stalks under the water again and as each blossom is arranged for the day in the vase wash fresh water. Strip off a little portion of the stalk with a pair of scissors. Always carefully trim away any faded part.

Once a day the supply of sulphate of ammonia, a few drops of which should be added to the water, put in the vase. At night put the flowers into some dark, cool corner. A cellar is as it is not good either for the flowers or for the household that they should remain all the time in the living rooms.

To revive cut flowers put them into warm salt water to which has been added a few drops of ammonia. Cut flowers are constantly sent by express and through the mails, but seldom in such a fashion as to preserve their bloom and freshness. They are often packed three in a tight wooden box lined with cotton or wadding, laying over this a sheet of tissue paper. Then the flowers not on top of each other, but in rows, side by side, the blossom of each row on the stems of their neighbors.

Each closely, otherwise the flowers will be displaced and injured in the journey. Before packing they should stand in water for several hours in order to absorb moisture enough to keep them from withering. It is not good to sprinkle them too heavily after they are in the box, for without air, this is likely to produce mildew.—St. Louis Republic.

IMMORTALITY.

Two caterpillars crawling on a leaf;
By some strange accident in contact met;
Their conversation, passing all belief,
Was that same argument, the very, that
Has been "passed and comes" from
Time to time,
Yet, ever since the wondrous world began,
The only creatures
Who have ever
Failed to return.
Wind your wheels, you old fool! wisely
Said the one, as he turned on his
Axle, and started off.
Not I, said the other, as he reared
His head, and looked around and Saw the green leaves and the sunlight
And the dew-drops on the grass.
Not I, for I cannot believe that all
This beauty, and this sweetness,
And this joy, is created merely
To be destroyed.
It cannot be that the Great Power
Who has implanted in us
This desire of existence,
Has doomed us to disappointment.
No, something tells me
That we shall live forever.
Live forever! said the first,
Why, what street crimes we have Committed,
That have us so forlorn and so unlikely?
Perhaps we've been unjustly, unfortunately
The pain to me that life's not worth Living.
"Come, come, cheer up," the jovial
Worm replied,
"Let's take a look upon this other side;
Suppose we cannot fly like moths or Butterflies,
Are we to blame for being caterpillars?
Suppose that God has ordained us to Crawl the earth.
A prey to every bird that's given birth,
Forgive our captor as he eats and sings,
And deserve no heaven with angels'
Wings?
If we can't skim the air like owl or bat,
We will not turn 'or s' that,"
They argued though the summer
Sun shone on them,
The ugly things composed themselves
To sleep,
And so to make their funeral quite Complete,
Each wrapped him in his little winding-
Sheet.
The tender web encompassed them
Full soon,
Each for his coffin made him a cocoon.
All through the winter's chilling blast
They
Dead to the world, aye, dead as human
Clay.
Lo, spring comes forth with all her
Warmth and love;
She breathes her balmy solace from the Realms above;
She breathes, she revivalls, she resurrects
The dead;
Two butterflies ascend encircling her
Head.
And so this emblem shall forever be
A sign of immortality.
—Joseph Jefferson.

THE BUREAU OF LABOR.

Interesting Details in the Fifth Annual Report of the Department.

The fifth annual report of the Labor Bureau shows that during 1904 there were 54 trade disputes resulting in strikes or lockouts, involving 16,984 workmen and 8,943 persons. An aggregate of 878 days was occupied in the strikes. An average duration of each dispute being 16.41 days, or 10.18 days per person employed. Of the disputes, involving 429 establishments, 18.9 per cent. were successful, 24.9 per cent. average of 32.2 days to each dispute, and 56.6 per cent. partially so, with an average of 17.15 days.

The report includes the replies of clerks of offices, towns and villages to the questions sent to the municipality existing in their municipalities. These replies are favorable, and show that not help being struck by the variety of industries established in different parts of Province. The plan of gathering such information is the work of Mr. Mackenzie, the editor of Commercial Intelligence, London, in a letter written to the bureau, says: "The value of statistics of interest to all workers and employers, and the increasing necessity for co-operation between employer and employee, a knowledge of the latter kind of statistics, the factory act, with the latest revisions, has made necessary. The amount of valuable information is comprised in the report.

He Tried to Follow Directions.

Dr. William Osler, formerly of Johns Hopkins, now of Oxford University, medicine at Oxford, was talking, during his visit to Canada, about the importance of precision in the writing of prescriptions.

"Wherever I went," he said, "I found patients that the careless, slipshod way of writing prescriptions was ruinous.

"A young foreigner, the city Visited Montreal, came to me with a bad cough, malady that had befallen him.

"I'm thing that you ought to get away for the winter," I said. "A milder, warmer air best before breakfast every morning, would be beneficial to you."

"Under these circumstances, I thought, I would write a prescription for him.

"Accordingly the physical wrote the directions down, namely: 'Before breakfast every morning.'

"'I did my best, sir,' said the young man, 'but I couldn't keep it up more than a few minutes at a stretch.'"

WINNIPEG IN 1904.

When Sir John Macdonald Was Burnt in Effigy and Now—Initial Inertia Overcame.

Winnipeg is an Indian word which being interpreted, means "muddy water." To one who knows Winnipeg, still dirty as the original Indian, and either "muddy" as applied to either water or city, it is curious to find a student of place names will discover a deeper significance in the word. Says the Canadian Magazine, "Muddy seems to profane the name of one of the greatest destinies in the world. 'Muddy York' of the early nineteenth century is Toronto of the twentieth. But why calmly accept that fact? It is quite likely that 'muddy' is a corruption, but in that case, 1,000 years hence, when the Winnipeg of to-day is a shapeless ruin, the old H. B. Co.'s fort, and gateway side, remains, it may be taken as certain that Winnipeg, a city of 15,000 souls teeming there within 16 years, Hundreds of miles from any American city, more than a thousand miles from any seaport, in addition city, without railway connection with either of these, rebellion and all, began with a population of 241, and by an overpowering flow of new life, a mechanism was burned in effigy by ardent Reformers in the early days, a few years before the railway address made a city of it. Winnipeg is the only Winnipeg stands. In 1872, the town's population was 1,869, and by the power rail communication with Emerson near the American boundary, it reached 7,985. In 1891, the population was 12,000—the inrush had begun. In 1892, the population was 20,000, and had been quadrupled—had leapt from 6,500 to 25,000. The inrushing tide ebbed, but when fortunes were made in an evening, and real estate changed hands at a million a day, as speculating land agents pointed out desirable lots to the crowds that thronged the city by the inevitable reaction. In 1896, the population had dropped to 12,000, and remained so for three years. Statistics like that are startling.

The boom played havoc with the local prophets of the day, as they write, fascinatingly, in immigration pamphlets and more ponderous tomes, in the streets of Winnipeg.

Winnipeg was not looking for scenery—a page of generalities and a list of building permits was printed to accompany each pamphlet on summer resorts. And who shall blame them? Even the novelists and writers have remained closest for years and years, and still they never delivered of the children of their brain. A vast country was opening, and was shimmering at a spa. So a city whose avowed aim is to be the New York to the metropolis of a Dominion in thirty years does not waste much consideration on its own beauty.

Winnipeg is a city where one lives on the morrow, on the prospects and on the excitement of executing them; it is for the humanities. Nature, that loves to work out problems, to speculate on probabilities, to try experiments, has left on the tired scientific who is resting on the laurels of accomplishment, the charm of a rich, colored life. Thus it is that in the cities of settlement, where nothing houses groups of young men are seen excitedly discussing the latest speculative business schemes — how they are going to monopolize the trade in wheat, in the country districts, how much of the Province they will control, how they can corner some concern and how they can wedge in some other. Nature, that has absorbed the people are in "business," I may say that one evening in the Ashdown Hardware, Main street, I was speaking to a friend about the old days of Fort Garry. "Yes," said a man who had evidently seen me wave my hand in the direction of the land, and who had listened, that, being an old inhabitant, he could give me some reminiscences. "Yes, I thought I might get some tales of rebel days, and put a sensational touch of romance into my article. Consequently I asked was not, and he shall" led into a corner. "What I want you was to sell his land, and to that end I asked him to describe it. He was a cattle, his clearings, his chief characteristic, of the land, and how much they are [illegible] in the world for small-scale [illegible] of Winnipeg. Then suddenly he asked right from the shoulder. "Say, you're a Scotchman, aren't you?" I said I

THE BOYS' CLOTHES

A regular boy easy on his clothes? Hardly!

Boys are not built that way.

Don't spoil his fun because his clothes won't stand the wear and tear of boyish pranks. He'll be a boy only once, and he has all of life before him in which to be careful.

Buy him clothes such as we handle, that are strong to toughness in fabric and made so well that seams can't rip even under the stress of a ROUGH AND TUMBLE.

You like him to look stylish, you say? Why, certainly, and he will if his clothes come from here.

Our tailors know how to put style as well as durability into boys' clothing and we demand it in every case.

WEDDING BELLS.

NUPTIALS OF A YOUNG LADY KNOWN TO MANY IN THIS CITY.

A very pleasant event was celebrated at "Orchard Park," Morven, the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. P. Gordanier, at high noon on Wednesday, when their only daughter, Addie S., was united in marriage to Rev. W. H. Montgomery, B.A., B.D., of Newton Butts, N.Y.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Henry Thomas, beneath a bell, composed of roses and carnations and backed by a white cotillion of palms and ferns, over which floated the flags of the two countries. To the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," beautifully rendered by Miss Gertrude Sexsmith, of Bath, the bride, leaning on her father's arm, becomingly attired in white silk etc., lienne over taffeta, the bodice trimmed with bronzed chiffon and appique, entered the room. She wore the conventional tulle veil, caught on the left shoulder with a rosebud, and surmounted by a wreath of lemon blossoms her mother had worn. She bride carried a shower bouquet of roses and maiden-hair fern, and wore an opal and diamond ring, the groom's gift. The bridesmaid, Miss Mignt Hoskin, Mt. Vernon, cousin of the groom, was prettily gowned in cream silk voile over old gold silk, and carried pink carnations. Little Mabel Gordanier, niece of the bride dressed in white silk mull made a dainty little flower girl and ring bearer, Master Arthur Montgomery, cousin of the bride, ably supported the groom. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a sergeant pin, to the flower-girl a cupid pin, to the groomsman gold cuff links and to Mrs. Sexsmith also a crescent pin. After the ceremony about sixty guests sat down to a somewhat late luncheon and did justice to all kinds of refreshments and delicacies. The table decorations were very effective with garlands of smilax and bouquets over impressive effect. After some humorous toasts the bridal party dashed their departure amid showers of rice and old boots. The bride's going-away gown was a white silk trimmed with bands of Alencon lace to match. The popularity of the bride was shown by the many beautiful and costly gifts she received. Another ceremony took place at the home of Mr. Gordanier, of Helen Grange, infant daughter of J. A. Gordanier, brother of the bride.

FIRE IN A BARN.

FIREMEN HAD A RUN FOR THEIR MONEY LAST EVENING.

At 6 o'clock last evening a fire broke out in a barn belonging to Mr. B. S. Sills, situated in the rear of his premises on the corner of Catherine and Pinnacle streets. Before the flames were subdued the structure was gutted and some damage sustained to an adjoining barn belonging to Mr. S. J. Vandervoort. Slight damage was done to the residences of these parties. How the fire originated is not known. It was discovered by Mr. Sills and when first seen had gained considerable headway. In the barn were stored a household effects and many useful articles. The loss will probably be $300, with no insurance. Mr. Vandervoort's loss is covered by insurance in the Anglo, and the damage sustained by Mr. Sills house is also covered by insurance.

MORE FLAG TROUBLE.

AMERICANS WOULDN'T FLY CANADIAN FLAG.

Kingston Whig: At Rideau, sometime Oliver's Ferry, a party of young Americans were flying the Stars and Stripes on their yacht. Some boy called the attention of Mr. Campbell, bridgeman, to it, and he courteously pointed out that the law required that the Canadian flag should fly from all craft navigating Canadian waters. They at once complied, remarking that they would fly their own flag, and ordered him to open the bridge. This he quietly refused to do, and in answer to their wrath, said two courses were open to them, viz., that he or his draft freeze next December right in the lake. The party seemed to think now the question is, did the lookers-ter let them through or are they cruising somewhere between Pounakamo lee and the Ferry?

Died at Melrose, Mass.

Mr. W. H. Toplin, of Melrose, Mass., died suddenly yesterday. Deceased was a son-in-law of the Rev. Mr. Ferguson, of this city. He was about 50 years of age. Mr. Toplin was a Canadian, but had resided for some time in the United States. The remains will be taken to Athens, Ont., for burial. Two sons and two daughters in the family within nine months. Relatives of the bereaved in this city will attend the obsequies at Athens.

TO STOP A CRYING BABY.

Babies cry because they are sick. It may be a pain in the stomach, colic or cramps—but it's sick. A few drops of Nerviline soothes away the distress and allows the baby to sleep peacefully. Where there are young children there should always be Nerviline. It cures all the minor ailments just as promptly as the doctor and not so expensively. For nearly fifty years Nerviline has been the great household remedy. Sold everywhere in large 25c bottles.

DEATH CAME WITH GREAT SUDDENNESS.

TO THE LATE REV. T. G. EDMISON—APPRECIATIVE SKETCH IN AN EXCHANGE PAPER.

Peterboro Examiner: "This afternoon the Rev. T. J. Edmison, B.A., dropped dead while stowing away hay in the loft."

In these brief words, dated yesterday and despatched from Brighton, is told the story of the death of one of the many noble sons of Peterboro county. Further than the fact that he is dead and that he died in the manner indicated, there is no information published.

Upon hearing of the death, Mr. Robt. Edmison, of Smith, a brother of the deceased, left immediately for Brighton to arrange for the funeral, which will be held to-morrow at 2 o'clock in Brighton. It is learned that the cause of his death was heart failure. The late Mr. Edmison was a native of this county, where he was raised, and lived until he left to take up his life-work, that of preaching the Gospel, to which calling he has been very successful. He was a cousin of Mr. Geo. Edmison, K.C., County Police Magistrate, and late proprietor of the Victoria University, from which institution he graduated in arts and theology, and he entered the ministry in the Methodist church in 1868, and has since that time filled many important offices in the gift of his church.

In 1900 he was elected President of the Bay of Quinte conference, and for years was Secretary of the Board of Management for the same. He was most highly respected of all the ministers in the conference, and by many took a deep interest in the work of the ministry and in the preparation for the same, for that work. Some years ago he was stationed in Lakefield, going from there to Norwood. He also preached at Wellington and at other places in this vicinity. Deceased is a brother of his death he was in good health and had always been a strong, hearty man. His preaching was marked by an earnestness which, coupled with his life, which was most exemplary, was most successful, and everywhere he had been he left many monuments in the churches of which he was pastor. He has always been prominent in the educational work of the church.

He leaves, besides his bereaved wife a family of six children, three boys and three girls. The oldest boy, Frederick, is a druggist practising at Castleton, and the second son, Alexander, a mere lad of 20, has followed his father, and is entering the ministry. He is at present a probationer, stationed on the Tyrone circuit, where he is highly respected for his manly qualities. A third son lives at home, as do the three daughters. Miss Marion being the oldest, with two younger sisters.

Respected Lady Dead.

The Port Hope Guide gives the following particulars of the death of a lady who, with her husband, had often visited in this city: "The announcement of the death of Mrs. Geo. Wilson, wife of the senior editor of the Guide, will cause a great shock to many of our readers. Mrs. Wilson, though ill, has been about until Saturday last, when upon returning from an errand down street she was suddenly overtaken with faintness and fell to the ground. Sympathetic onlookers lifted her and placed her comfortably, telephoned this office and ordered a cab. She was removed to her home and given every care; Dr. Powers made careful examination and found the hip injured. Changes for the worse came very rapidly, and the doctor, nurse and friends were surprised when she survived over Tuesday night. The end came very peacefully on Wednesday evening. She passed away absolutely without pain—simply fell asleep. Mrs. Strike, her sister, and Mrs. (Dr.) Greenwood, of Sutton, were with her at the last. On account of their sorrowing husband and Mr. Wilson it was thought advisable to keep the previous illness of Mrs. and death of Mrs. Wilson from him, and for this reason there will not be any service but at the house. The funeral will take place at Greenwood cemetery, Port Hope, where reposes the father, mother and other members of the family, rest."

Mr. Adam's Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mr. John Adams took place this morning from the family residence, Burton st. Services were held at St. Michael's chapel, being conducted by Rev. Father Collins. The bearers were Messrs. Jas. Carney, W. Carney, Hanley, J. McGuiness, W. Paterson and J. Keaney.

MARRIED CHINAMEN.

TWO TORONTO GIRLS FIND HUSBANDS IN NATIVES OF THE FLOWERY KINGDOM.

Toronto, July 27. — The tale in detail of the first double wedding of Chinamen to white girls ever known in Toronto arrived at the city hall yesterday in two little yellow cards being the formal registration of the unusual event.

The weddings were solemnized a week ago to-night. The bridal parties were Charlie Gong Lee, laundryman, entrant early in the evening and drove to the house of Rev. Robert Brown, who, as a token of the wedding festivities afterwards remarked, is the "only Chinese minister in Canada." Rev. Brown lives in St. Westmoreland avenue, and here it was the knots were tied.

Charlie, Lee lives in Brampton. He is a laundryman and a Presbyterian 25 years of age, and was born in Shanghai. His bride is Nellie M. Chandler, Toronto girl, waitress, and Anglican, 24 years of age. The bridesmaid was May Barrett, 446 College St., and the best man, Charlie How, 119 Bay street.

Charlie Sing, the other happy bridegroom, is a restaurantee and a Methodist, 29 years of age. He was born in Canton, and is the son of Lum Sing. Charlie, too, is a Presbyterian in Christ. His bride is Retha Maynenger, a waitress and a Lutheran, 21 years old, who was born in the State of Ohio. The bridesmaid was Olive England, and Charlie How was again best man.

LAID TO REST.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. TANNAHILL TOOK PLACE THIS AFTERNOON.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Tannahill took place this afternoon from the family residence, George street, and many citizens were present to pay the last tribute of respect to one who in life was esteemed by all who knew her. Services at the house were conducted by the Rev. A. H. Drumm, pastor of the John Street Methodist church, assisted by the Rev. R. S. Laidlaw. The bearers were Messrs. Thos. Ritchie, W. B. Northrup, J. W. Murray, T. Stewart, Col. Tobin and Prof. Coleman. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, being contributed by the following:

Anchors — Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie, Mrs. Caldwell (of Winnipeg), Miss Walbridge, Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Chisholm.

Cut flowers — Mrs. Yarwood, Mrs. Edmonds and Miss Etta Macdonald.

A Kingston Mystery.

JOHN McNALLY, FIREMAN ON THE STEAMER TORONTO, FOUND ON THE G.T.R. TRACKS WITH HIS HEAD SEVERED FROM HIS BODY.

Kingston, July 28—(Special)—John McNally, a fireman on the steamer Toronto, was killed on the G.T.R. tracks in the city during the night.

How the accident happened is unknown.

Early this morning McNally's remains were found by the side of the tracks, the head severed from the body.

The man was about 35 years of age, and resided in Toronto.

DIED IN GANANOQUE.

MR. ALEX. T. CAMPBELL, SON OF THE LATE COL. CAMPBELL, OF THIS CITY, PASSED AWAY ON TUESDAY.

Mr. Alexander T. Campbell, eldest son of the late Col. Campbell, of this city, died on Tuesday at Gananoque. Deceased, who was 50 years of age, was born in Belleville, where he received and built he reached manhood. For years the deceased had lived in Gananoque, occupying the position of Deputy Postmaster, previous to which he was identified with a bank in that town. Mr. Campbell had been ill for some time. He was a member of the Methodist church. A widow, but no family, survives.

OVERALLS AT TEN CENTS.

CAUSE A STAMPEDE ON THREE THOUSAND WOMEN IN A STORE MANY FAINT.

Pittsburg, July 27.—A sign reading, Men's overalls, 10 cents; ladies' shirts 10 cents, was put in the window of Woolworth & Co.'s store on Fifth avenue at noon and it caused a stampede among the women. Eight women were seriously hurt in a rush to secure the articles, and fully a dozen more of police had to be called out in the downtown district. Ambulances and patrol wagons banked up to the door of the big store, and as fast as the injured women were taken away, others were brought in.

Mrs. Harry Bloomer, of Pride street, coming in the crush, fainted at the head of a stairway and would have fallen to the lower floor had the crowd been thin enough to allow her to fall, but she was held up in the crush apparently dead, and the entire body of three thousand women became panic-stricken and tried to reach the street by the shortest way it seems women fainted, and the police on their arrival had all they could do to handle the frenzied crowd which remained in the place. After about 2,500 had got out the store, which by now looked a wreck, was turned into a hospital, and the women who had fainted and all for the most to their homes some of them in carriages.

BRITISH FLEET FOR BALTIC.

Admiralty Affirms That It Is Only For Ordinary Manoeuvres.

London, July 28.—The British Channel fleet sails for the Baltic Sea August 30 and will remain there throughout September.

It is two years since a British fleet appeared in that sea. The announcement is connected in the public mind with Emperor William's recent tour and the visit of a German squadron to Scandinavian waters.

The cruise of the British fleet is regarded as intended to counteract the preponderance of German influence in northern politics.

The Admiralty, however, discourages the idea of politics having any part in the cruise, the object of which, the Baltic is an open sea and that the fleet is simply going there to exercise, and moreover, ceremonious visits not being contemplated.

DECLINE A QUICK HEARING.

Privy Council Again Rules in Canada's Favor.

Allen Lasker Appeals.

London, July 28.—(C.A.P.)—In the case of the Attorney-General of Canada, vi Cala, arising from the Pere Marquette decision, Deputy Minister of Justice Newcombe, for the Dominion, made application to the Privy Council for speedy hearing of the Appeal, which was granted. Wednesday. McKenzie, for the respondents, opposed the application. The Council declined Newcombe's application, which he is open to repeat on November.

In granting the leave to appeal yesterday the Privy Council stated decision was not likely to be given within 12 months.

Judgment Reserved.

London, July 28.—(C. A. P.)—The Privy Council has reserved judgment in the Kitty D. v. the King appeal.

CUT SWATH A MILE WIDE.

Poles and Wires Downed and Other Damage Done.

Carrickville, July 28.—The recent electric storm was very severe in this vicinity. All the wires and poles, telephone, telegraph, etc., were down for three days, and every available man has had to be put at work trying to open up connection with outside points. Such a storm has never before experienced in this part of the country.

Sheds and outbuildings, fences, barns, etc., were levelled in all directions, while the growing crops in many instances are seriously damaged, and in a few places totally destroyed.

The bush where it fell is fence stripped the leaves from all growing vegetation and fruit trees not blown down were stripped of their very promising crops.

The roads in the villages and country were rendered impassable from fallen trees, some of these being of large dimensions.

The passenger steamer Queens, on her usual trip from Ottawa to Kingston, had to be run on shore below Beckett's Landing. The track of the storm was not over a mile wide. The Electric Light Co. was temporarily put out of business.

$50,000 FIRE AT FERNIE.

Fernie Free Press Office and Several Stores Destroyed.

Winnipeg, July 28.—A serious fire visited the business section of Fernie, B.C., Wednesday night, but was under control at 4 a.m. yesterday morning.

The Fernie Free Press office, Carruthers' tailor shop, Sheard & Elliott's block, Furniture store, G. N. city office, Northern Hotel, Kenny & McLeod's shop and C. C. Wright's jewellet, are totally destroyed. The Windsor Hotel on the opposite side of the street is very much damaged.

The loss will be about $50,000 in thous-and dollars, with insurance on one-third.

French Freighter Ashore.

Guernsey, Channel Islands, July 28.—A large French freight steamer went ashore yesterday on the west coast of this island. It is believed that the vessel, the name of which is not known, will be a total loss. There was no loss of life. There was a fog.

Sheep Held For Double Duty.

Helena, Montana, July 28.—Two thousand five hundred head of sheep that strayed across the Canadian border for better grass has been seized by the Canadian Mounted Police and are held for double duty. The duty amounts to $3,100.

Boats on the Nile.

Besides the unique craft used by natives on the Nile, good weather sees hundreds of graceful white winged boats drifting over its surface. Sometimes there are so many sailboats that it is almost impossible to steer a safe course through the mass. The effect of seeing modern pleasure craft silhouetted against a background of ancient temples is one of the attractive features of a journey up the Nile.

"Crocodile Tears."

"Crocodile tears" are alluded to by several Latin and Greek authors, it being a superstition among the ancients that the crocodile, after killing a man, ate all the body but his head and shed tears over that before eating it also.

Electric Train Collides With Stationary Cars at Liverpool—Architect's Ready Wit Saves Others From Horrible Death Immediately After Crash Came the Mockage in Burst Into Flames—Car Smash to Pieces.

Liverpool, July 28.—An electric express train on the Lancashire & Yorkshire Railway, from Liverpool to Southport, collided last evening with an empty stationary train at the Hall road station, causing the death of twenty-three persons and the injury of twenty-three. The first car of the express, which was crowded, was smashed to kindling wood, and its occupants escaped. The road was recently given an electric equipment.

The in the first s rious accident that has occurred on an electric railway in England, and it filled with horror the numerous waiting passengers standing at the Hall road station, who were spectators of the disaster. The collision lifted the first car of the rear motor completely off the steel frame and hurled it down on the side. Fortunate passengers, twenty of whom were killed outright.

More of them would have been killed but for the presence of mind of a Liverpool architect, who seeing that a collision was inevitable, shouted to his fellow passengers to fall on the recesses upon the floor of the car.

Almost simultaneously after the crash the wreckage burst into flames. The wooden cars burned like dead, and the cries of the injured vainly beseeching that they be extricated from the burning wreckage. A coroner's jury was sworn, and many women on the platform had fainted from the combined effects of women and children. Fortunately, the badly injured number comparatively few.

The cause of the collision is unknown.

Fifty May Be Dead.

Detroit, Mich., July 28.—A Tribune special from Port Huron, Mich., says: "A passenger train is reported wrecked near here on the Detroit, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad. It is feared that fifty people have been killed. Most of the victims were Finns on their way to a temperance convention in Ironwood."

Six Killed and Three Injured.

Amsterdam, N. Y., July 28.—Six men were killed and three probably fatally injured by being struck by train No. 14 on M. C. R. Tuesday six miles west of this city, shortly before 7 o'clock.

Harbor Dragged: Body Found.

Picton, July 28.—Thomas Fegan was missing from his home since Monday night, when he left to attend the Orangemen's Rathbun's dock. His friends became alarmed and instituted a search, being party to drag the harbor for his body. A grapple was put down off the Rathbun dock and the very first time down brought it up. Deceased was 40 years old, the son of the late Capt. John Fegan. He was a sailor and carpenter.

Killed By a Slab.

Burk's Falls, July 28.—While working in the Kaladar Lumber Co. mill a slab thrown upon a revolving saw was projected sideways with great force, striking Frank Hunter, a young man about 24 years old, in the abdomen. Internal complications set in, and he died last night.

A Dynamite Pencil.

Guelph, July 28.—Edward Heffernan, a young lad of only 12 years, picked up what he thought to be the head of a pencil, and while hammering at it an explosion occurred. His two hands were badly lacerated and his chest burned. Object mentioned was a detonate. Blood poisoning may develop.

LOST IN ONTARIO WOODS.

Young Man Found After Eight Days a Raving Maniac.

Temiskaming, July 28.—Early on Friday, District Engineer Molesworth has returned from a trip of inspection of the Transcontinental surveying parties under his charge.

At one of the camps visited they found a young Englishman who had been lost in the woods for eight days, and it was only by chance some Indians had found him and brought him in. When found he was almost in a state of nudity and was a raving maniac. They secured days ago, and in this condition, but has gradually recovered his mental balance.

Many such cases are reported from time to time north, and two parties now searching parties found only the remains of the men who had gone astray.

Seven Years Penal Servitude.

London, July 28.—Edward Long, found guilty on the Old Bailey of obtaining £700 by the confidence trick from Michael Shiels of Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, and was sentenced to seven years penal servitude.

DEVONSHIRE'S MOTION

Lord Minto Declares It to Be Cold Rebuff to Colonies.

Former Governor General of Canada Takes Up Cudgels in the House of Lords—Motion Disapproving Chamberlain's Preferential Tariff Lost by 121 to 87—Fierce Attacks Made Up on Chamberlain and Balfour.

London, July 28.—The dullness of the House of Lords was somewhat relieved when the Duke of Devonshire spoke to his motion calling attention to Joseph Chamberlain's recent utterances and expressing disapproval of any proposal to establish a general preferential tariff based on taxation of food. He asked the Ministers whether they intended to put any proposals before the Colonial conference if it met.

Before the present Government went out of office it was anxious to know whether Mr. Balfour's and Mr. Chamberlain's policies were the policies of one. If so, was it by Mr. Chamberlain retiring or Mr. Balfour advancing. He thought there was a good deal of evidence to show that Mr. Chamberlain had captured Mr. Balfour.

Mr. Chamberlain cared nothing for retaliation. The policy was one of revolution, to which Mr. Balfour had given encouragement by his silence. It was not surprised at Mr. Chamberlain's audacious claim that the Prime Minister's policy was practically the same as his own.

Lord Minto Speaks.

Lord Minto, in moving the amendment, said the Colonial Conference's resolution could only be taken as a cold rebuff by our kinsmen beyond the seas. The question of preferential trade with the mother country was one which had caused fascination in portions of Canada. It represented to them their opinion as the result of the discussion. Before he left the Dominion, Chamberlain of Commerce and other members of the Government were speaking bodies in favor of it. They could not afford to ignore the views of statesmen of such full acquaintance with the sentiment of the Colonies.

Lord Roberson fiercely attacked both Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour. He urged the Conservative party to make it clear it was not a tool of Mr. Chamberlain and to put an end to the reign of quackery.

Lord Goschen's View.

Lord Goschen found fault with Mr. Balfour's reticence and obscurity. He asked for a frank pronouncement declaration of the views of the Government. He believed the Colonies, before sending representatives, would prefer to have the exact policy advocated by the home Government.

Lord Lansdowne scouted the idea that the Government were not in touch with the Colonies.

The motion was met by moving the previous question and was lost by 121 to 87.

To Boycott a Bank.

Shanghai, July 28.—The native bankers here have called a meeting to discuss a proposal to boycott the International Banking Corporation, which was organized in 1901, under the laws of Connecticut, receiving the charter by a special act of the Legislature. In 1903 it was made the agent of the United States Government for the receipt of the payments on account of the Chinese Boxer indemnity.

THE WEATHER.

TO-DAY'S PROBS.

Moderate to fresh easterly and northeasterly winds, occasional showers and a little lower temperature. Sunday, fair.

Winnipeg Fair a Success.

Winnipeg, July 29.—The fair closed yesterday. The total attendance for the week is about 110,000 or 40,000 short of the aggregate for the Toronto Exhibition. Fair, which ran a full fortnight. In no other year has the total paid admissions passed the 100,000 mark.

Young Man Disappears.

Brussels, Ont., July 29.—Wednesday morning, John J. Strachan, son of Thomas Strachan, ex-reeve of Grey, left his home and has not been heard of since. Boarding matters out and scouring the entire neighborhood.

Her First Auto Ride.

Stamford, Conn., July 29.—Mrs. Sarah Lockwood, who was 100 years old on April last, enjoyed her first automobile ride this week. After a good deal of persuasion she entered Fitch A. Hoyt's automobile and was driven to Scotland town, where she is spending the summer. At this close number of 100 years she only ride in an airship now I would be content."

Big Grain Yield Promised.

Toronto, July 29.—Reports received by the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. Nelson Monteith, indicate that the wheat and oat yield will be exceptional. In 1900 the Province yielded 24,000,000 bushels of wheat; and in 1903 the oat crop was 102,900,000 bushels, and these figures will probably be exceeded this year.

Japan's Ruler Now A Knight.

King Edward Will Create Mikado As a Garter Knight.

Demonstration That the Court of St. James and England Believe Japan's Ruler to Be in the First Class—Prince of Wales Will Make State Visit to Tokio to Make the Investiture.

London, July 29.—The Emperor of Japan is about to be created a Knight of the Garter.

Investiture will take place a Tokio during the coming autumn. In view of the fact that the Kaiser conferred the order of the Black Eagle upon Prince Arisugawa, and of the possibility of the conflict in Manchuria being indefinitely prolonged, it has been determined to further to the Japanese a demonstration that the Court of St. James and the King regard the Mikado the ruler of Japan as forming one of the brotherhood of civilized monarchs.

It is understood the Prince and Princess of Wales, on their completion of their State progress through India in the late autumn, will proceed to Tokio for the purpose of paying a State visit to the Court of Japan, and that the British heir apparent, will then undertake the ceremony of investing the Mikado with the Order of the Garter in the name of King Edward.

Russians Are Isolated.

Tokio, July 29.—Lieut.-col. Sagahara Island, to which point the Russians retreated, is some thirty miles southeast of Alexandrovsk, beyond a range of the mountains. Alexandrovsk is the district from the plain. Here the Russians are completely isolated owing to the lack of roads. It is impossible for them to make a long stand, but it is expected that they will soon be subdued. A victory over them will make the Japanese virtual masters of the whole island.

China Wants $100,000,000.

New York, July 29.—The Washington correspondent of The Tribune says:

Coincident with China's notice to the Powers that Manchuria must be restored to her intact, observance by the terms of agreements reached at the Portsmouth peace conference, the Chinese viceroy of Russia and Japan, it is learned that the Chinese Government intends to follow this up by demanding of the belligerents a big indemnity as compensation for the occupation of Manchuria by hostile armies. The amount of the indemnity to be asked will be at least $100,000,000.

It is not believed that the Chinese themselves entertain any serious embarrassment for the injury sustained, but the motive for China's action is further pointed with regard to Manchuria to the world at large.

Japs Don't Want Armistice.

New York, July 29.—It was learned yesterday that the Japanese peace envoys do not want an armistice and will probably oppose any move for one made by the Russian Commissioners unless they are permitted to dictate terms and fix the time limit. Japanese diplomatic sentiment here is that an armistice would militate against the success of Roosevelt's peace ships, and under the circumstances the Emperor would be very loth to reach a settlement.

Japanese Steamer Seized.

Tokio, July 29.—The German steamship Darling, 1,900 tons, has been seized by the Japanese near Loochoo.

BALFOUR AND EMPIRE LEAGUE.

Premier Promises to Consider the Resolutions.

London, July 29.—Mr. Balfour has written the honorary secretary of the British Empire League, promising that their resolutions passed at the meeting on the 3rd inst., will receive his careful attention of the Government.

The resolutions are to the effect that there should e a permanent council of the Empire, its members to be named by letter and telegram as well as by personal meeting.

Shot Gun Quarantine.

New Orleans, La., July 29.—Although the unofficial reports received here yesterday showed a larger number of prostrations and less deaths than previous, there were only two, and the appearance of several new cases, the men of science who are warring against the yellow fever plague believe the situation well in hand. Owing to the increasing number of local quarantines it is almost impossible to go to any point through Mississippi without a health certificate. The shot gun quarantine is again in evidence and there is every indication of a revival of the panicky feeling of seven or eight years ago.

$600 Saves Bluebeard's Life.

Chicago, July 29.—Almost pitiless player and swindler of unnumbered wives, "Bluebeard," Johann Hoch, was yesterday, by a woman's pity, given a respite of two hours from the hangman, and before the two hours were up had been reprieved for four weeks more. The four weeks were secured, not by pity, but by cold cash. The exact amount of money essential for an appeal of his case to the Supreme Court was $500." Miss Cora Wilson was the woman.

George Wash's Many Friends.

Montreal, July 29.—George Hass of the C. P. R. was yesterday morning declared by his physician to be dangerously out of danger. Since his illness the entire city has been in a state of bustle but answer letters and telegrams from all over the continent as to his condition. Mr. Hass's room at the Windsor Hospital is already a bower of flowers sent by friends from far and near.

FARMER PROTECTS CROP

Surveyors Run Off the Clarke Farm Near Bolton.

Trying to Run a Line For the C. P. R. But Were Worsted in the Fight. Which, However, Only Lasted Ten Minutes—Case Will Be Argued Before Brampton Court Authorities at an Early Date—Charges and Counter-Charges Laid.

Bolton, July 28.—The C. P. R. surveyors have gone up against a snag. They attempted to run a line through the Clarke farm just south of the village, but met with opposition. Mrs. Clarke, the owner, ordered the surveyors off the premises, but the latter did not comply. Charlie's brothers, William and Robert, got a hand and the result was a pitched battle in which the surveyors were, in a second, routed.

Shortly afterwards they returned with reinforcements, when more threatening language was used and surveying ceased, but a shot gun was said to have been exhibited in a hostile manner. The surveyors finally moved off.

Charges and counter-charges have been laid by the belligerents with the Brampton authorities, which will no doubt be heard at an early date.

Clarke says he was simply protecting his crop from injury and says he is willing that the surveyors should proceed with their work, but would first make arrangements to pay him for the damage which would be done to his growing crop.

STILL STIR UP TROUBLE.

Rouvier and Von Radolin Unable to Get Together on Terms.

Paris, July 29.—Delicate relations with Germany are again showing signs of strain. Rouvier, the premier of Premier Rouvier and Ambassador Von Radolin have failed to agree upon a program for the Moroccan conference.

Yesterday afternoon the journal'd a joint program, but the arrangement fell through, owing to some trivial difficulty, particularly in connection with France's claim to the right of military adjoining Algeria and supporting communications through Morocco to the Empire.

It is the French view that these rights follow from the agreement of April 8, which recognizes that which to define the extent of French policy and financial reforms.

GOD'S REWARD, SAYS SULTAN.

His Preservation From Bomb Due to Divine Interposition.

Constantinople, July 29.—In reply to the Sultan's address of loyalty and gratification at his escape from assassination by the explosion of a bomb on Friday last, the Sultan says that the protection of the latter against that occasion was God's reward to him for his constant efforts to promote the peace and happiness of his people.

The only fragment of the incident which deeply affected him was the fact that so many of his dear, devoted soldiers and well-beloved people were killed or injured.

May Be Tested Again.

Bucharest, Roumania, July 29.—A plot against the life of the Sultan of Turkey has been discovered by the authorities of Kustendji. A search of houses occupied by Turks disclosed large quantities of revolvers, rifles, cartridges and compromising documents. The Roumanian officials subsequently discovered cases of rifles hidden in the hold of a Turkish steamer now at Kustendji.

ANOTHER ABDUCTION CASE.

Wheatley Man Used Bad Judgment and is Jailed.

Wheatley, July 29.—On Wednesday afternoon Paul Lapine, porter in the Commercial Hotel here, hired a rig, and Miss Pitch, a waitress in the same hotel, told her mother they were going to Leamington to see a ball game.

But, on driving away, instead of going west towards Leamington, they went north in the direction of Tilbury. This aroused suspicion and the girl's parents were notified. Constable Wellwood of Tilbury was phoned a description of them, and a few minutes after their arrival they were taken in custody and later on brought back to Wheatley.

Lapine was taken to Sandwich to await further trial. He is about 19 years of age, while the girl is only 15.

Unearthing Grit Crimes.

There were few people in Canada in touch with the political situation in Ontario, who did not expect that the Whitney Government would fall when it had time to let the light into the Departments so long misconducted by the Ross Government and its Grit predecessors, disclose to the public not a little Grit malpractice, flagrantly at variance with the public interests. But any expectation of that kind must have been more than satisfied by the recent exposure of the fact that the Ross Government had made a grant to the Grand Trunk Railway Company of a strip of New Ontario, 400 miles long and 36 miles wide, and for which there was not a shadow of public excuse seeing the G. T. P. would have to build the road through that region whether such a grant were made or not. The exposure of such an iniquitous squandering of the public resources would be destructive in itself, but Premier Whitney seems determined not merely to expose the iniquity, but to make it by suitable legislation. In an interview on the subject, Mr. Whitney is reported to have said:

"It is simply astonishing that men who call themselves statesmen in this age of the world should have thrown to the lucre of land sharks all timber other than pine to a company—which had to be organized as there anyway."

What terms would you have favored in the case?" the Premier was asked.

"Not a cent," cut an acre of land for 999 dollars," was the emphatic reply. "I recorded my objections at the time of the bill. Why it was arranged with the company that all side lines be given over by the Government. That meant that in fifteen years the company would have been paid a cash price for what they had already got—selling through an amendment that if the Government should ever take over the line the money bonus and the value of the land grant should be refunded to the treasurer of this province."

"What can the Government do in the matter?"

"Nothing till the Legislature meets."

"What then?"

"Rescind the legislation, it necessary. The Legislature has that power. Certainly! Legislation rushed through in that way during the last few days of the session is simply monstrous. But was the way of the late Government ever anything else? Better Hon. Jno. put these men go to church! Huh!"

Mr. Whitney has certainly got hold of a very useful grievance—namely, that deals such as this, passed through by a Government present in the dark and to the public, should not be respected by a new Government. Such a deal, that established by a former Government, could be repudiated by a new Government. Such a deal, that established legislation should be passed to remedy its wrong by restoring to the people the rights of which they had been robbed.

Commenting on the above matter the Halifax Herald says:

"The Grit Government of Ontario is not the only Grit Government that has come to grief at his office. This is a ridiculous and arbitrary measure. What difference does it make whether these offices are paid for when received, and the Government has the money? The accuracy of the bookkeeper is not affected by the payment in advance. The Government is not going to be put off with the Mikado.

That "great" man, Sir William Mulock, has been at some more of his foolishness. He has issued a postal edict prohibiting any postmaster from selling post cards and stamps to customers who are The Dictator.

The other day during the visit of a friend Sammy sat down in the middle of the floor and began crying with all his might. His mother tried expedient after expedient, but to no avail. The tears flowed on.

"Do you want some candy, Sammy?" she asked.

"No!" he shrieked disdefully.

"A cooky?"

"Aw, no!"

"Then what on earth do you want?"

"Well," with a despairing wail, "you might take me over next door and see if that would please me."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Sketch Wit.

In Aberdeen we are found a court official who is as good a type of the canny Scot as one could wish to meet with. On a recent occasion an important witness failed to appear, and the judge was furious.

Where is he?"

The official, with true Scotch cautiousness, replied: "Weel, I'll no say for that. But he's dead."—Bystander.

In fact I believe it to be the best remedy of the kind in existence." Sold by all druggists.

Smoking Too Soon.

A medical journal vouches for the following story: A woman who was seriously ill awoke one night to find the nurse sitting at the foot of her bed smoking a cigarette and reading a novel. Greatly startled, the patient raised herself up in her bed and cried out, "What in the world are you doing, nurse?"

To which the nurse replied: "Good gracious! I thought you were dead!"

BOY GOLF CHAMPION.

Amateur Final That Was Regarded a Blinding Rain Storm.

The wonderful golf roller, A. G. Barry, only 13 years of age, and one of the youngest students at St. Andrew's University, won the highest honours in amateur golf at Pratwick yesterday, when the final stage of the amateur golf championship was played off, says The London Mail.

His opponent was the Hon. G. Scott of the Royal North Devon Club, and the conditions were 36 holes medal play, three up and two to play, thus capturing the championship ingloriously and the gold medal.

There was magnificent display on the boy's part, for his golf was very nearly perfect, and among the best that had ever been seen in the final.

The great point about him from start to finish is a blinding downpour of rain, which soaked the golfers to the skin, and before they had been 20 minutes at work.

Young Barry, marching barehanded over the links, with never a stitch of his body to his any crisis, was, if possible, more nervous towards the end than at the beginning.

If he won the honour by his play he may not exaggerate if the game more than another, it was by his putting. His driving was steady and good enough for Mr. Scott's; he occasionally faltered in his approaches to the green, but once ago to hit hard at the ball on the golden putting green of the home and he holes a chance every time.

It was in the afternoon that Mr. Scott failed chiefly, and several times he lost holes by being badly short with his long putts.

Despite the heavy rain, there were between three and four thousand spectators, who missed the finish of the match such keen interest that several times they were in the way of the players.

Mr. Barry is of light build, and looks his age. Nevertheless he is a fine driver of the ball, and in his follow-through almost goes down on one knee, somewhat as he learnt his golf at St. Andrew's, he was born in Cromarty. He has distinguished matches would play for England.

This match was put in Mr. Barry's favor from the very start, for Mr. Scott missed the first hole, and the next at St. Andrew's boy won the hole and the next one, and finished the first nine holes down to his opponent.

For four holes in the middle of the first round the match was squared, and again for the last four holes of the second round, but after that Mr. Scott was never on level terms with his opponent.

At the sixth hole in the morning an odd incident occurred. Both players, Mr. Scott, Mr. Barry made a seven each, but the latter was declared to be very lie of the hole for three or four inches. It looked to be a half stroke, but gradually the wet, soft turf on the hole had sunk under the ball's weight, and it fell it.

The putting performances of the match was accomplished by Mr. Scott—the latter having taken 36 putts, and from 18 yards range.

Mr. Barry wound up with a brilliant dive, a deadly approach, and a certain [illegible] to a 25-foot hole, and when his ball went down he was the youngest golf champion of the year.

Then, for the first time yesterday, he lit his pipe.

"BEWITCHED" FARM.

Family Are Driven Mad by Visit of Witch.

The visit of a modern "witch," who was called in to aid in the search for [illegible] at a farm in the Parish of May Hill, on the western side of Gloucestershire, has had disastrous effects on the farmer and his family, says The London Mail.

The farmer missed £50 in gold from his bedroom cupboard, and in order that it was suggested that the "witch" at [illegible] woman named Mrs. Taylor, a divination, who resides in the Forest of Dean, should be sent for to help to date the mystery.

The suggestion was acted upon, and the entire neighborhood now believes that the farm has been "bewitched" as the result of the woman's visit.

Immediately Mrs. Taylor arrived on the scene the farmer's daughter and the daughter developed mysterious symptoms of madness. The daughter, who is a married woman, declared that she had to be removed to the Gloucester Asylum, and the grandchild daughter was taken to Newent Workhouse Hospital.

The morning on which they were removed the farmer's wife suddenly disappeared. Inspector Dennis of the Gloucester police, on a search of the outstables, with many neighbors and constables, organized a search for her, but no trace of her whereabouts could be discovered.

She returned home a few days ago, however, in a very distressed condition, having subsisted during her absence on the berries she found in the wood and a little water from the ditch.

She had both seen and heard the searchers, she said, but was afraid to discover her whereabouts to them. In her hand she carried a small bottle which, she said, was "to keep the witches away."

On Thursday the farmer's son also developed signs of madness, and it was necessary to place him under restraint. He was discovered in bed, inflicting himself by running his head against a large wardrobe.

His wife screamed loudly when she saw the condition of her son, and, recognizing that she, too, was "bewitched," threatened to commit suicide. Her husband was streaming from his head, in which he had made a deep cut, and consequently that she might escape the evil spirits.

The entire district is in a condition of excitement, and the occurrence at [illegible] is shunned by all the neighbors. Although the farmer has a large number of horses, mysterious breaking of windows and destruction of crops have been declared to have occurred in the district.

MARGARET ANGLIN

Canada's Successful Young Actress

Miss Margaret Anglin, the popular young Canadian actress, has manifested her individuality on many occasions—and in her portrayal of Camille in Dumas' play she did not follow the conventions by creating the role on new lines, making the heroine a sweet, simple, sincere ingénue, uncontaminated by the sombre atmosphere in which she lived. Nor did she make a strong defense for her conception of the character and gave chapter and verse from the writer of the play to prove her contention.

Miss Anglin was born in Ottawa in 1876, and here first asserted her individuality by choosing as the scene of her début on earth the ballroom of the Governor of the House of Parliament, her father at that time being Speaker of the House of Commons. Her early education was at Loretto Abbey, Toronto, and the Convent of the Sacred Heart at Montreal. At the age of fourteen she determined to go on the stage, and went to New York to study at the Empire School of Dramatic Art, and began to show her ability by the clever character work in two matinées given by the students.

In 1894 she made her professional début at the Academy of Music in New York in Bronson Howard's successful play "Shenandoah." A season of barnstorming and the ever-trials and troubles incident to ensuight standing proved of value in giving her a deeper insight into certain phases of life, in increasing her sympathies, and in preparing her for her later successes.

In 1896-7 Miss Anglin, as the leading lady of James O'Neill's company, made a tour of the United States and Canada and did splendid work as Camille in "Camille," Virginia in "Virginius," Julie de Montmar in "Richelieu" and Mercedes in "Monte Cristo." The ease and simplicity of her acting and her versatility were again shown in her clever portrayal of Meg in "Lord Chumley," and she rendered even more absolute and secure her place in the hearts of Canadian audiences during her stay in Montreal.

Her brilliant acting in "Mrs. Dane's Defence" and her later work in Mr. Mansfield's company revealed to the world at large the strength of character and the broadening of her genius. Through all great acting runs the golden thread of personality, and the natural refinement, culture and dramatic strength of character of the woman merely finds new expression in the work of the actress. In addition to her dramatic talents Miss Anglin has a brilliant musician, speaks French fluently in her calm, clear, charming modulated voice and is a writer of some ability.

Over a Silver Bridge.

One of the customs observed at a Bohemian marriage feast is that of making the bride cross a silver bridge, the bride's father placing a coin at each of the table, where she walks on two rows of all we coins, at the end of which bow Iceland stands and receives her into his arms. The silver bridge typifies the wealth with which her bridegroom hopes to smooth her path in life.

THE NEW SPEAKER.

Admirably Fitted For His New Position is James William Lowther, Who Succeeds Speaker Gully.

James William Lowther drops quite naturally into the position of Speaker of the House of Commons, for which he is admirably fitted, having spent a number of years as chairman of Parliamentary committees and as Deputy Speaker of the Chair. Mr. Lowther, it is simply revels in Parliamentary procedure, says the London Mail. He is, they say, "As intricate are to him as intricacies of love" to Shakespeare, and it is because he knows the rules of the game. Mr. Lowther, when in the House, has extraordinary patience combined with decision, and has even allowed a Cabinet Minister to wander from the straight path that he had proclaimed worthy of the confidence of the lower House of England's Parliament.

He is a tall, well built, clear complexioned, brown haired, fair bearded Anglo-Saxon, wearing his hair closely cropped, and he is particularly English in his appearance. His sensible tone in which he approaches every question, absence of free from mere gestures or heated invective. He is a methodical man, as he knows, for he has a diary which will serve day furnish interesting reading, as he has seen much of English and Continental life, especially Paris, for he has been appointed secretary of the Embassy at St. Petersburg and at Berlin.

Formerly he was known as one of the best amateur actors in English society, at one time belonged to a troupe of amateurs, known as the "Pantomime Rehearsers," in which Alfred Lyttelton, Lord Ribblesdale, the Duke of Beaufort, and Lord Crewes, former Viceroy of Ireland, were also members. Mr. Lowther, indeed, figuring on the playbills as "Mr. Jones, Q.C." He is also the name of a once popular but now defunct publication, the Strand Magazine, in the Burlington arcade, which Mr. Lowther edited.

The Lowther estate which bel, Ireland to be nicknamed Lowther Arcadia when the Lowther family were in residence. Hunting and sporting fame was appointed by the Lowthers, and the tenants were one of everybody, to the post of Secretary for Ireland. Although a radical Mr. Lowther is popular as well with the Irish party, the head of sympathetic and kindly nature, and is more than other of a political character. His appointment to the Speakership would not help feeling kindly in favor.

Mr. Lowther has been twice married, he married to a daughter of Lady Mildred Beaumont, sister of the late Lord Salisbury, and thus he has become brother-in-law of the first cousin of the Premier, Arthur Balfour, the son and daughter of the late Lord Lytton's sisters; and he is also a cousin of Lord Cranborne, the present Lord Salisbury. He is handy with the fellow-Members as he is with the Lowthers in England—and a particularly popular Speaker he will make. Indeed, it will be a novelty to have in the Speaker's Chair a Speaker who will be able to relieve the tedium of the debate by a humorous observation, and the knowledge that they are expecting something of the kind will serve as a more effacacious restraint to the "talking out" of measures than of "cloture."

The Lowthers have from time immemorial played an important role in the annals of Westmoreland, and are to their name unknown in the world of letters. The late Lord Lonsdale was known by the nickname of "Lowther," and one of those who known as the "wicked earl." They present head of the house, the Hon. Gerald Lowther, of the present creation, is the champion cricketer of the family, and a fine specimen. The new Speaker's brother, Gerald Lowther, is a diplomatist, being secretary of the embassy at Washington, and is known to the sporting world as a veteran Right of New York. He is now a widower in Montana, where he has a big ranch.

Famous Pictures Sold.

Many London picture dealers crowded Christie's auction rooms in London the other day when the deal sale took place of 52 pictures of Lord Tweedmouth's family collection. They brought an average $1,500 each.

The most valuable portrait of his wife sold for $43,425, which is a record auction price for a picture by the great painter.

The purchaser is said to be J. Pierpont Morgan.

Other sales in the collection were as follows: Romney, $21,000; portrait of Mrs. Howe, W. Hogarth, $14,455; portrait of Mrs. Hogarth, Hogarth, $12,600; Dorothy Dogs, G. Morland; $21,000; portrait of Lady Louisa Manners, Romney, $10,500; portrait of Mrs. Oswald, Raeburn, $18,900; portrait of Mrs. Graham, Raeburn, $5,250; portrait of the Countess of Bellamont, Sir Joshua Reynolds, $15,450; Simplicity, Reynolds, $18,500; portrait of Miss Gunning, Sir Reynolds, $15,450; a portrait of Robert Burns, by Alexander Nasmyth, £1,575 to Mr. Gladstone; and is the property of the Misses Calhoun of Ayr, who sold it to the National Portrait Gallery, London.

Unsandid Dassenfield.

Here is a new word in Parliament, the authority quoted for it being Sir Thomas Dassenfield.

A famous diplomatist once went to Paris. He was received and treated with him, and found him very agreeable, and soon after, when he had shown him up came and asked him for a present.

"But why?"

"Don't you remember?" was the answer: "I showed you up to Lord Beaconsfield."

"What of that?" said the other.

"Oh, all the more reason why he did damn me uncommon for telling you he was at home."—From M. A. P.

Translatitatess.

This word means literally, activity of the fingers. The French academy sanctioned its formation, thus forcing it on posterity. It was coined by Juliet de Rambouillet, who, when she received visitors, who abandoned the title of "accomplished" (lingère) as beneath his artistic erudite dignity.

Kepler's Theory.

Kepler firmly believed the moon to be inhabited. He advanced as one of the supposed people of that orb as "the Selenites."

One Result of the Derby.

Speaking of the gambling evil, a London coroner says: "I always look for suicides after the Derby. After that event you always find that a certain number of silly people become embedded and a number of other people have committed suicide."

TIMELY TOPICS.

PACKING THE GRIP.

When father packs for traveling
There's just no end to it;
He checks his best coats nightshirt in
A handkerchief or two,
Some collars, cuffs and underwear,
And his silver-mounted comb,
Leaves out, at last, the things he'll wear
When the old man goes from home
And daddy packs the grip!

But when my ma goes traveling
And takes us kids along,
Why things is more very different,
And it's quite another song.
The first crowds in clothes by nighties,
For the baby, me and Ray;
There isn't room for hairpins, she says,
She don't need it anyway;
But there's brush and comb and soap, and—

Soap and powder, needles, thread,
Tea and thimbles and court-plaster,
'Cause don't I cut my head!
Then there's cough drops and fresh-baked
And there's vanities and strings,
Paper, pencil, stamps and crackers,
And such jolly heaps o' things;
For when we're traveling
There's one thing we're agreed—
My ma has still bein'sbeaued
Just what us kids will need.
And I speak for knives and fishlines
And Ray wants sugar lumps,
And ma is firm for cough drops,
The baths and corset bumps.
Oh, there's lots of fun a-packing
To squeeze things good and tight,
And there ain't no use a-talking
For every family's right
When our ma she packs the grip!

—Florence Perry Clark in Good Housekeeping.

Are you fond of a little bit of romance? Of course you are; everyone is. Then be sure and read the celebrated "Raffles" stories, which have made their author famous, and which will appear in The Intelligencer on Monday next. People who have read them pronounce them even better than the Sherlock Holmes stories.

A Chicago man, coming across a fellow who was trying to steal his wife's affections, knocked him down-stairs, breaking his neck. The coroner's jury refused to indict the aggrieved husband, saying that "he had done just right." Precedent on matrimonial preserves get small sympathy in Chicago.

The guileless village maid was about to visit the city for the first time.

"Remember, Lizzie," said the anxious mother, "if any of those bad city men try to flirt with you don't pay any attention to them."

"But how about the good men, mamma, dear?" asked the pretty daughter anxiously.

The intercolonial Railway was not built as a paying property at first. The long, circuitous route was chosen for military reasons first of all. In the second place, the idea of profit or at least of a smaller deficit if the road were not used for graft, favoritism and politics.

A father "of the old school" in Canada taught his boys how to behave in the way of taking care of money beyond their depth and easily. them off with the old-fashioned "Now see you young rapscallions. The boys became fearless swimmers, and champions of all sorts of sports. And what did this in Syracuse lately is now under a charge of manslaughter. He could not get there in time to save one promising lad,

Weather sharps agree that "hot waves" in summer do more actual damage than cold waves in winter. It was estimated that the hot wave of 1894 cost Iowa some fifty millions of dollars, and that the drop in property loss in the Galveston disaster, in highest crops. And this is an average case. There is a reduced efficiency of workers, their health and comfort, not being considered. The difference between a cool summer, in popular estimation, and a hot one, is much less, the cool summer having only what is generally supposed. The difference comes in the extremes. Thirty days of a temperature of 95 makes as much less impression on the public than bring the total down to the same figure.

BEE'S GOOD SENSE.

(Brotherville Times.)

On account of the refusal of the Massachusetts authorities to allow the 43rd Regiment of Ottawa to enter that State with their arms upon the occasion of their proposed trip on the 5th prox., it is likely that the trip may be abandoned. We think that it will be abandoned. Canadian regiments should visit their own towns and become better acquainted with their own kith and kin instead of going away to a foreign country to be made the victims of some mixed processes of non-military organizations, and to run the risk of being insulted or injured by Anglophobe fanatics. If it is not safe for Canadian soldiers to enter the United States with their arms it is not safe for them to go without. It is a farce to send them away stripped of the most essential part of their equipment.

CURIOUS SCRAPS.

An Ancient Recipe for Marriage Divinity—Origin of Leather Curtains—Origin of Names of Streets—Origin of Tennis.

The superstition owes its birth to the business energy of one Joseph Dun, a bookseller of London, in the reign of Henry VII. He was reported to be so expert and successful in the disposal of his bad stock collecting that when a crowd of fools in a tremendous bodies to deal with, it became customary for gentlemen pushing to cry out, "Room for Joe Dun! Dun!" And so the noun became a verb, and a verb it has remained ever since.

Marriage Divination.

"Make a plain cake, and into three-in a wedding ring and a small silver coin—as a sixpence. When the company assembled retire in the morning after a wedding, break the cake into three equal portions as there are married women present, and give a piece of it to each of them. She who gets the ring will be married very soon afterwards; but she who gets the sixpence will die an old maid." "What is to be done by those who get neither wedding ring nor sixpence we are not told.)

Pin Lore.

An old folk rhyme runs:

Give a pin and have it up.
All the day you'll have good luck;
Give a knife and let it be,
All the day you'll need to cry.

So as the Intercolonial borders it—

To see a pin and let it lie,
You'll want a pin before you die.

But pins have become cheaper since the words were first written, and so they are seldom, if ever, repeated nowadays.

Easter Customs.

A peculiar Easter custom is observed at Hailsham, in Leicestershire. On Easter Day certain villagers meet together at the rectory, and thence walk in procession to a field called the Nuttery, and which many years ago was bequeathed for the use of the parish to provide them with a calf's head boiled and baked ready for their breakfast and a great in cash.

Norfolk customs is to eat baked custard at Easter tide, probably because eggs are the principal ingredient of the dish.

An old Easter weather rhyme, popular in agricultural districts, runs:—

If it rains on Good Friday and Easter day
There'll be plenty of grass and some very good hay.

Origin of Departed Spirits.

"What," asks a correspondent, "is the meaning of the words in the song 'Down among the dead men let him lie'?" The writer is a relic of the old drinking days, and the words mean simply that when drink is overcome by alcohol, or spirit, is no longer in them. He is not a dead man, and so, when he is a dead man, and so, when the spirit is put into him (the bottle is notoriously called "a dead man."

A Good Turn.

Now that the old windmill is a thing of the past, it is interesting to learn that it was first invented by the Crusaders" as a cure for—rheumatism! In 1213, Mr. Home Secretary Peel, tells, lay officially asked the visiting justices to inquire into the case of a prisoner confined "under upon the prisoners' petition, who alleged that he was in every way beneficial, and cited, as an instance, the case of a man who was, a rheumatic woman, who as she was grinding complained of pain in her back on the treadmill, being asked how she felt, answered that her rheumatism was entirely cured.

A Maligned Ecclesiastic.

The Scottish Archbishop (and church historian), Spottiswood, in 1616, was sent out to rest in Westminster Abbey after a long and distinguished career in the ministry—reputation of having, in his early career, been a member of the Presbyterian Church folk—shockingly heinous sin or plot—especially on his return to Scotland! All this is how he acquired it: Returning from court, where he had been playing a disorderly rable who were playing with the direction, to prevent it striking his shins he placed his feet on the rail, and through that natural defensive action he gained the stigma which clung to him ever after during the remainder of his career.

The Ill and the Well.

To St. Oswald's Well, in Benton, Northumberland, sufferers from sore eyes—providing certain simple formalities are observed—are promised the recovery or otherwise of a sick person or animal. Visitors to the well must do that if an undergarment, taken off the afflicted person, be left for a night on the water the patient will recover, but if it be removed the patient will die. As well, as its name indicates, is under the patronage of St. Oswald, though that natural defensive action he gained the stigma which clung to him ever after during the remainder of his career.

The Bird Man's Story.

There is a pitiful story told in the Bookman of Phillip Bourke Marston, the blind poet. Despite his affliction he was particularly good ides came to him, and he sat down to his typewriter and set to work. He wrote rapidly for hours, and had nearly finished his task when a friend came in. "Read that," said Marston, handing him the sheets. "Do you think of it?" The friend stared at the hopeless jumble of words and blank sheets of paper in his hand before he could realize the meaning of his little tragedy. The ribbon had been taken from the typewriter, and Marston's toil was for nothing. He never had the heart to write that story again.

IMPORTANT SCIENTIFIC DISCOVERY.

Dr. Kilp's The Dandruff Germ.

A most important discovery has been made after a year's patient investigation by one of the country's leading scientists. Dr. Kilp, in the preparation that prevents falling hair, and speedily and permanently eradicates dandruff. These evils are caused by a germ or parasite that burrows into the scalp, thereby causing dandruff, as it sends to sap the life of the hair at the root. There's no baldness without falling or thin hair, so this half without dandruff, and no dandruff if the germ is destroyed. Newbro's Herpicide is the only preparation that will do the work. "Destroy the germ, you will remove the effect." Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. F. G. McKown, special agent.

MEMORIES.

Very freshly I remember certain nights
I quite well,
When I went a-courting Sarah—that's the girl I used to know.
I remembered how she lingered when the time had come to part,
How I said I must be going, yet could never make a start.
How her pink wool "fascinator" amply justified its name,
How at last at my entreaty in the garden
she became
Then how few the happy moments as we sat 'neath the moon,
With a gentle swinging motion on the old back garden gate.

I remember how the maples threw a kind, obscuring shade
When we thought we were all too briefly for an all too timid maid.
I remember how I felt a feeling—what an ecstacy divine—
Thrilling down to toes and fingers
when her soft, warm lips met mine.

And our talk was all in whispers, and we said the fancy knows what—
Unimportant rot most likely, quite unmitigated rubbish,
But it seemed very pleasant at the time, at any rate.
When two young things were swinging on the good old garden gate.

There is little faith in women—and there's not much in man;
She was false or I was fickle; I forget
just how it began.
I suspect some other fellow with her soft eyes beguiled
But that doesn't hurt my feelings as it
when I was young.
For I passed her home quite lately and
I had to notice that
She was not a dream of beauty and had grown extremely fat.

She was screaming at her children who is blessed with six or eight,
Who were brawling down the hinges of the good old garden gate.

AKERS-DOUGLAS.

Home Secretary Not Well Known But Has Many Good Points.

Every now and again one hears in the departure of the Right Hon. Aretas Akers-Douglas in connection with the work as Secretary of State for the Home Department in England, one of the duties and perhaps the most important in attendance at all Royal births. But although he holds one of the most important offices in the administration, comparatively little is known of the popular Home Secretary. He is the only Supreme Court of Criminal Appeal in the United Kingdom, as being the sole channel through which ministerial public and Parliament can approach the Sovereign, yet there is no Englishman about whom less is known personally outside of the Government circles. He is a man of reserved man, and the impression which he makes on those who meet him once is augmented by his hard, unbending appearance. He is also free of his apparent coldness and his way of playing at a game of cards affords the slightest token of recognition when he succeeds in his absorbed, then no man reckoned better company in the smoking-room, etc he is a most welcome and entertaining guest at a dinner party. Possessed of a fund of anecdote and a fund of humor all the more telling owing to the dryness of his source.

Previous to being the Home Secretary, he is to all intents and purposes the head of the party organization of the Conservative machine, a task for which he was pre-eminently fitted by his experience which he obtained during the years he was Chief Whip of the party, the whip being the one who has to keep together the ranks of his fellow members into line, and to see that, however far off it may be, a number of them are always on hand for the divisions.

Another and another feature, too, of his work which would be far to obtain the confidence and the influences of every conceivable character that he has to deal with. Then, again, in connection with the efforts to attain, Akers-Douglas is a rich man, owning a fine estate in Kent and another country seat in Scotland. In the latter he generally spends a part of his time when he is not engaged in the House of Lords, being a keen sportsman. He is a great botanist the best material for the compilation of the Government Bill, the British National Legislature—namely, Parliament—and, finally, his high principled, well to do English country gentleman with the experienced man of the world.

Timber in India.

There is a growing demand in India for timber other than teak, owing to the increased high price of coal mines, while there is also a large demand for timber for railway construction, practised by the forest tribes of India who search for patch of wooding, leaving all the trunks bare of branches and then to sow among the fertilizing ashes a miserable crop of millet. Often this was done for two years by which time the jungle plants grew up and choked everything. In this way perhaps 25,000 worth of timber was destroyed for every 100 worth of grain, as some of these tribes to this day know no other way to grow corn. They would be very interested with and revenges themselves by arson, and many forests are destroyed.

Candid Chang.

That is a fine story of Li Hung Chang's candor which came was never quite equalled in this world. He was dining with Mr. Depew, and said:

"You come from Sweden," said the great man, "don't you?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"And what kind of country is Sweden?" rejoined the other; whereupon Depew launched into a long and glowing description of its charms.

When he had said, "that is very nice; very nice, indeed. When I next meet Oscar, King of Sweden, I will tell him to take Sweden!"—London Chronicle.

There is nothing like Sunlight Soap for Household Utensils.

When you have to use hard water it is not an easy matter to wash household utensils. To do good-washing you should have good soap and soft water. (rain water). If you use hard water you must have good soap, and the best soap you can get is Sunlight Soap because it softens the hard water and makes a copious creamy lather. An Echo of The Old Boys' Reunion.

(Smith's Falls News.)

No general topic of talk is elicited and deeply interested in an 'Old Boys' Reunion," can fully appreciate what such a gathering means to the boys after an absence of twenty or thirty years from the town that gave them birth, and from town in which they spent those happiest of all days —those hood days—coming back to visit the old home, the old play grounds, the old swimming ponds, and to shake the hands of those with whom they played on the green, hunted the squirrels in the grove, and went fishing with, or sat sat with them in the same classroom in the old school, under the same teacher, and to meet with the old friends, the fathers and mothers of their boy and girl chums, the dear kind old souls who welcomed us back to their homes and treated them kindly.

We know that personally very few News readers will be interested in the Yalleville Old Boys' Reunion, in that it was the very great privilege of the Editor of the News to attend last Saturday, July 22nd, and that for the first time it might be well to say in that interview was the town in which the writer was born. It was in Belleville that our father and mother were born, and it was near Belleville that grandfather on the first settled with other U. E. Loyalists after the American Revolution. Grandfather was the late William Rose, and Col. Elijah Jefferson, who all were so prominently identified with the early settlement and history of the Bay of Quinte, and so surprising therefore that the writer should have visited with feelings of reverence, feelings of joy mixed with feelings of sadness, the home of so many hallowed and cherished associations.

As we stated in the beginning, such a reunion can only be appreciated by one who has after a long absence come both to renew the acquaintances of his childhood days, and to visit the lovely town it is situated on the rapid banks of the Bay of Quinte, with the small, but nevertheless charming river Moira winding through the centre. Its old fashioned but beautiful homes with their magnificent grounds surrounding, its well kept streets, its long rows of shady maples, its delightful parks, with some and costly churches, and public buildings make it a most charming old town. But the real charm is the kindness of the people and their hospitable residents. Old fashioned, some of our readers may think they are, but old fashioned in their kindness of heart, in their welcome to come, in their generous hospitality, in their pleasant greetings to every one we visited the old town on the occasion referred to, and in every way with any other feeling than they had been accustomed to, for whose warm welcome and kind greetings will remain as long as life shall last.

It would be impossible and unnecessary that we should go into full particulars of the Reunion as a occasion. Let us mention only a few of the leading features. First of all we may say that the city was decorated from one end to the other with flags, streamers, flags, bunting, and Chinese lanterns. Yalleville was never seen in large letters not only on the business streets, but on almost every residence that you met. Each train was met by a committee, and the visitors were escorted to their homes by bands of music. There were band concerts in the park every afternoon and evening; there were excursions on the bay; there were games provided to make the visitors happy, and to show how well the matter is thought are due praises that cannot be spoken for their untiring zeal in their work and organization.

Perhaps the greatest feature of the reunion was that which took place on the grounds, when the parades of the various churches, with hardly an exception, were occupied by those who were on the way to the town, and who had gone out and entered the parade of the church elsewhere. It was the pleasure of the writer to meet together with others, and to walk with a couple he was associated in old No. 2 school, and it was a pleasure to shake the hands of [illegible] Wash[illegible] Ladies [illegible] many of the old boys and girls of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

THE BOYS' CLOTHES

A regular boy easy on his clothes ?
Hardly !
Boys are not bulls that way.
Don't spoil his fun because his clothes won't stand the wear and tear of boyish pranks. He'll be a boy only once, and he has all of life before him in which to "be careful."
Boy him clothes such as we handle, that are strong to tough-ness in fabric and made so well that seams can't rip even under the stress of a ROUGH AND TUMBLE.
You like him to look stylish, you say ? Why, certainly, and he will if his clothes come from here.
Our tailors know how to put style as well as durability into boys' clothing and we demand it in every case.

The Strenuous Life in Chicago.

A Chicago newspaper, boasting of that city's remarkable progress, indisputably demonstrates that the pace is a killing one to many and an uncomfortable one to most. The article referred to proclaims the following pleasing features of the windy City :

A man every fifteen minutes.
A birth every eight minutes and sixty-seven seconds.
A murder every seventy hours.
A suicide every eighteen hours.
A serious accident, necessitating more or physicians' care, every four minutes.
A fatal accident every five hours.
A case of assault and battery every twenty-six minutes.
A burglary every three hours.
A hotdrop every six hours.
A divorce granted in Reno, to attract attention, every six seconds.
A larceny every twenty minutes.
An arrest every seven minutes and thirty seconds.
A fire every hour.
An arrest for drunkenness' every fifteen minutes.
A conflagration suburban and through arrive every second at railway stations.
Screaming thousand gallons of water a minute through the 100 miles of city water mains.
The thousand two hundred and forty-three letters are delivered by the post office every minute, day and night.

"Something doing in Chicago all the time," was the proper comment on the foregoing summary. So there is, for, as he is also announced, "Every 12 minutes cause average more than one a second." The simple life is better.

SELF-SLAIN GIRL IN CALIFORNIA TRAGEDY FROM TORONTO.

Oakland, Cal., July 22.—A terrible accident occurred to-day near Orockview, causing the death of a young woman. A San Jose local train bound for Oakland at 11:30 this morning struck and killed a young woman a little this side of Orockview. According to the statement of Motorman Hansen, the engineer, the woman appeared to have intentionally placed herself before the approaching train.

As the train was nearing Orockview station the woman walked out on the track. The engineer blew the whistle, but the figure walked on, apparently unheeding. He blew it again, again blew it and at the same time tried to slow the train by putting on the reverse, but he could not stop until after the young woman's head had been severed from her body.

Engineer Hansen says that after the woman cross the track, reached it and then suddenly threw herself across the rail in such a way that her head laid across one of them. She carried a satchel, in which were found cards of two physicians on Sutter St., San Francisco, Dr. Lytig and Dr. Lahlsen. Another card was found with a defaced address, but the blurred figure 9 and "King street" could be distinguished, and visible above all was the name Toronto, Ont. The body is so badly mutilated that the only method of identifying her will be by her clothes and articles found on her to-day.

KING EDWARD'S POPULARITY.

CORRESPONDENT OF A TORONTO PAPER WRITES SOME TIMELY TRUTHS.

("Observer," in Mail and Empire.)

Sir,—I notice in one of your editorial columns of July 6 a comment on the writer in the Sault (Mich.) Evening News, who announces that "The Maple Leaf For Ever" is now "The Maple Leaf For Ever," we can understand how easily the impression was created that the National Anthem of Canada, and every other part of the British Empire, is sung "The Maple Leaf Forever," but "God Save the King," and if Canadians in a foreign country wish to exhibit their patriotism that is what they should sing.

If a party of Virginians come to Canada or even to England they don't sing "Here's to the Old Dominion," and call it the American National Anthem. It is true that there was a time when the Southern States effected a separate national song and a separate national anthem, but that was when those States had armies in the field fighting for a separate national existence; and when the people of the States notice Canadians putting their patriotism to the test at the British National Anthem, 'God Save the King," and notice Canadian Parliamentarians and Canadian audiences to stand up and join in the song as a National Anthem, they will see that it is naturally conclude that the Canadians are not very successful in their cultivate a separate national sentiment.

The origin of this disloyal tendency, however, was not difficult to trace. The special "The "taking" qualities of this ditty, which is "A Hot Time in the Old Town to-night" and "The Land of the Maple," "The Men of the North," etc., are entirely in its title of "The Maple Leaf, and when a musical organization, unacquainted with the military new arrangement of it, it said to have played "The Maple Leaf" instead of it the Canadian National Anthem, and as musical intelligence in Canada is conspicuous by its absence, the musicians among the musical organizations bands and singers took to rendering "The Maple Leaf" as a National Anthem of Canadian national anthem.

But these musical organizations that for a little selfish gain thus cultivates a separatist sentiment in the minds of the people, and disregard the fact that "God Save the King" is not "popular in Canada," but the beloved VII. is one of the most popular sovereigns that ever wore the Crown of England, and distinguished above all for the common Prince Consort, and for the important role most requisite in the ruler of a great limited monarchy.

The Visit Appreciated.

Trenton Advocate: On Sunday afternoon the peaceful quiet of the day was broken by the sound of cannon and a bugle band. Some thought it was the Trenton band on church parade, others that it was the 49th bugle band. However, it turned out that the XY. bugle band, of Belleville, had arrived by the Queen's Own Regimental bugle band a day's outing on the steamer Annie Lang. The band marched under Bandmaster Pulley's stirt under the command of Sergeant-Major Wood, of Belleville, paraded through the principal streets and then departed, amid the cheers of those present. They presented a fine appearance, the G. T. R. Co. generously donating the use of the Fifteenths wore a brilliant colored uniform, and altogether the XY. players enjoyed themselves as much as the townspeople enjoyed their visit. They will come again.

PASTOR OF MARMORA.

WAS INDUCTED BY OFFICERS OF THE PRESBYTERY OF PETERBORO — WILL CONTINUE HIS NEW CLASSES AT QUEEN'S.

A Marmora correspondent sends the following induction. The new minister spoken of belongs to Belleville, being a son of our old and respected fellow-citizen, Mr. Peter Petrie :

The Presbytery of Peterboro met on Monday evening, July 17th, in the Presbyterian church, Marmora, for the purpose of ordaining Rev. J. A. Petrie, B.A., to the holy ministry, and installing him in the pastorate of Marmora and Havelock Creek and Cordova.

Rev. J. Hay Potter, Peterboro, presided; Rev. R. W. Mackay conducted devotional exercises; Rev. J. G. Shearer addressed the ministers, and Rev. J. McLennan the people.

Mr. Petrie has been assistant to Rev. Prof. Ross, D. D. Jordan, Queen's University, during the past session, and will continue classes in Hebrew during the coming session.

GOOD THING FOR TRENTON IF STORY IS CORRECT.

STATEMENT IS MADE THAT THE STANDARD COMPANY WILL TAKE OVER OLD GILMOUR MILL AT TRENTON.

A Trenton correspondent says: It has been rumored around for some little time past that the Rathbon company of Deseronto have acquired the old Gilmour mill and will operate it in the near future. The company will employ several hundred men. The Rathbons have had an eye on the site may be procured at a reasonable price. It is the natural point of towing of logs down to Deseronto. Moreover, the company would have very little trouble in getting their logs here, by using the Trent River or the C.O.R. Railway.

Most of the timberlands of the Rathbon company plant would be a good thing for Trenton. The industry would mean any existing business, the weekly Times-Courier would make a marked difference in local circles.

THE LATE DR MEACHAM.

WAS RELATED TO ONE OF BELLEVILLE'S OLDEST FAMILIES — HAD TENDED STORE FOR HON. BILLA FLINT.

Picton, Ont., July 27. — News comes from Warsaw, near here, of the death of Dr. Meacham, ex-M.P.P. for Lennox, Addington, Hastings, this morning. Dr. Meacham had been ill for some time.

Deceased was born at Osborne in 1841. He was the grandson of Capt. Seth Meacham, who came to Belleville from the United States after the war of 1812. He was educated his profession in that place until he was about 21 years old. He then passed after his school days went before the late Hon. Billa Flint, M.P., Belleville, and after-wards taught school for three years at Rednersville and in the county of Prince Edward. He studied for a doctor, and graduated in 1859 and first settled at Brighton, in the county of Oxford where he remained until the spring of 1872, when he removed to Warsaw.

In 1886 he was tendered the nomination of the party for the Ontario Legislature, being particularly asked to do so by Conservatives in the Provincial sentiment in politics, He served in the House for three years. He was next, consistent member of the Methodist church for forty years, and a liberal supporter of its every interest, and has since worked in moral and temperance movements.

Of Course They Did.

Picton Gazette: The ministers of the various Belleville churches rose to the dignity of the occasion when the Old Boys and Girls visited that city last Monday and made special and pleasing reference to the return of the absent ones, and were accordingly given a most hearty welcome. They will not forget to give the community the benefit of the good advice that was also them for the efforts they had put forth for beautifying and adorning city.

DYSPEPSIA.

BAD DIGESTION IN GOOD TIMES.

This is an ugly, discouraging story, one calculated to make a man's faith in humanity flag. It is a story to make one wonder why the Lord does not let us go to the dogs. It is easy to understand the story of the flood, and of the destruction of Sodom and the unattempted unrelieved humanity. But in this unattempted age of our Lord, nineteen hundred and five, it is still so easy to maintain the theory that God is on the side of the devil. It is very hard to look in the face the advertisements found in many reputable newspapers, of former unfortunates, of shattered nerves of readers, and spiritual medicines, and not get to have a question rise in his own mind, as to whether God is not as much superstition and fake as the rest of the world. Even if there was no old Judah, when people were not on David's throne, and presumably intelligent, people are still looking for their destiny in the stars, or in a greasy pack of cards, or in an old fortune-teller, afraid of the will of the infinite. When we consider the world as it is, and not as it ought to be, when we look at it as the table in a country tavern looks at a man who has had over the bowling or a mirror, or the bottom of a glass, we see that we are not separated from Manasseh and his history by something so much greater than the lapse of time. We searches deep in the lives of every day people will find the same superstitions and superstitious very near at hand.

THE MOST SATANIC SIN.

The person who is in the fashion of something that is not in it, is the blackness of the devil. Of all the sins that the devil has invented to damn souls there is that of leading others astray. The most intolerant of Manasseh not that of folly or pride, or wickedness, but that of leading his ancestor Jeroboam. "He made Judah to sin by his idolatries." Of course, sir." That is a charge before which we all shrink. It is the sweeping indictment of only Manasseh, but of all who intend youthful imaginations by their own speech; all who put in innocent lips the sap of their falsehood; all in any way guide the steps of beginners into the way of the transgressor. Better a thousand fold for such a one that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into the depths of the sea.

A good man gone bad is the worst thing in the world. Better a devil than the heathen whom the Lord sent Israel to drive out. Better anything that is the law of extreme opposites. Because it is called, is expected to be, and is working has intensified folly, the occasional drinker, the occasional gambler, the occasional liar has a regular topsy for sacrilegiousness, the occasional sinner is the worst sinner. The school may be worse than the graduate. The amateur may be worse than the professional. The boy may be worse than the man. The occasional may be worse than the habitual. Manasseh was worse than Jeroboam, Jeroboam than his kingdom. So the sin of sins is the sin of the saint.

HOW GOD GETS EVEN.

C. C. all the follies of foolish men and women, all the sins of the wicked, are not God. Now that is one thing which Manasseh was not allowed to do; it would overthrow his theme of God as the Holy One. God is God because he cannot be defied or demoted, or dethroned. He is God because of what he will must be done. That is why the Bible is so full of the wrath of God on the eternal principles, which are God's law of being. Sin cannot overthrow the Infinite. Justice is the eternal attribute.

Manasseh was brought to repent when he would give no heed to warnings. He was "taken" by the hook, by wrong-doers, who are bitted to their will, and led captive to Babylon, with the broom of Assyria. Many a man has been led captive by the bit of his own lusts, by the broom of his sin, "Why keep I Oh Lord, how many times I have been warned, have been righted, just as many times have I been led captive by my own lusts." When the financial and political world is in a panic, God is not in it, but is directly progressing. The mills of God grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine, grind to powder, grind to dust. Manasseh could no his own want one single thing that he was not getting. God is not mocked.

A LESSON HARDLY LEARNED.

Afflictions had to be visited upon Manasseh before he would turn to the Lord. Most men will not look to God when they have a heap prosperity on their backs, when they are in the saddle, when they do not need to be persuaded to persist until he comes. Then is the time to look to God. The secret of many human experiences is that God is trying to make us understand his love.

As the mercies turns to the pole, so the afflictions turn the sinner's face to his Creator. When disease or disaster comes, when the foundations of our earth are unsteady, when we are in our extremity the soul always looks to God.

And God hears. That is the most wonderful thing in the world. "He is kind to the unthankful and to the evil." Even Manasseh, the unspeakable, the despiser of a sacrificial God, is forgiven. He did not get his deserts for more than forty years of his life. He got the infinite mercy that we would have meted out to a worthless body but God would have heard and forgiven him at the first moment of the first of his failures, the first time he ever thought of God in vain. "He heard Manasseh's supplication." Manasseh knew that Jehovah was God.

Individual Power.

London, July 19.—In the course of a discussion on the Irish Land Purchase Act in the House of Commons yesterday, Mr. Lecky, member for Dublin University, and Lord of the Admiralty, announced that the Government had decided to dispense with the Chatham dockyard, on account, he said, of the difficulty of access to the new base at Sheerness. Fifty of Portsmouth, Devonport and Chatham workmen contemplated the expenditure with £15,000,000.

Explaining the reasons for this step, Mr. Lecky said there was no doubt as to the ability the warships in the future would be fewer in number and greater in individual power. Hence the territorial system of defence must be the largest size. The Admiralty had decided that Keyham steam engineering college and other structures than the dockyard should be retained, except for a naval base of the most considerable description, that would be could be carried out as required. The total saving, when complete, would cost $12,500,000.

FIRE ON THE TEUTONIC.

$5,000 Damage in Electrical Room—Firemen Rescue Three.

New York, July 19.—A fire which threatened the destruction of the magnificent steamship of the White Star Line at her pier in the North River, at the foot of 11th street, broke out early last night, but before it was extinguished did damage estimated at more than $5,000. It was accidentally discovered by a fireman named Fisher on the steamship to sail from pier next Wednesday.

In the electrical room, where the fire started, Fisher and Engineer McKeen were gassed and the entire electrical equipment was destroyed by the flames. The room adjoined the engine department, where two others, Engineer Brown and John O'Connor, were at work. They were rendered unconscious by firemen.

Referendum Will Be Held.

Christiania, July 19.—The Storthing last night unanimously adopted the proposal fixing August 13 for the submission of the question to the people.

Investigating Child's Death.

Shelburne, July 19.—The interest in the Mahoney investigation over the death of Sarah Adeline Boone, the two-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Boone of lot 16, con. 4, continues. The Boones are members of what is commonly known as "Evening Light," although the members of the proudest prefer the name "Church of God." Rev. Mr. Mahoney is their pastor. The little one died Thursday night, July 10. Dr. Martin of Dundalk had been called in Thursday night, but could not avail for the child, as Boone would not permit him to minister medicine. It is said one of the neighborhood was that the child died from starvation. Following the death, Dr. Martin went to the Boone house and performed a post mortem. T. T. Steele of Shelburne, coroner, decided an inquest was unnecessary and it was proceeded with in the Town Hall yesterday. Dr. Martin and Constable McKay of Orangeville was present. The inquest was adjourned until the hour of 4 o'clock on Friday, August 1st, when Mr. and Mrs. Boone with both of their house under quarantine.

Gone With Married Man.

St. Catharines, July 19.—(Special) Late Eugene Winninger, chef at the Russell House has been very lonesome since Jessie Pollick, the head waitress, so says the wife of Mr. Winninger, who is being a married man with two children. Proceedings against Winninger on the trouble discharged the waitress. On Thursday afternoon Winninger left his employer, gave out the information that the "sheriff has been with me." The two left for the Falls on the 5 o'clock trolley. Winninger left without getting his wages and instructed to fill which were due him. He has erected a house on Ontario street, but lately sold it and it is thought that he borrowed a large sum on the deal.

Inventor of Dry Plates Dead.

Philadelphia, July 19.—John Carbutt, known as a photographic pioneer, died over, is dead at his home here, aged 72 years, of bright's disease. The Photographers' Association of America, which was the first organization to be acted as official photographer when the Canadian Pacific Railway was constructed. He made several inventions facilitating the taking of pictures in color, chief of which was the orthochromatic plate, for a perfected his widely known "Carbutt dry plate" which revolutionized the trade.

Bribery Going On.

Winnipeg, July 19.—It looks as though the city's loquity will be settled in a couple of weeks. Reports state that whiskey is being distributed among the rank and breeds, and that bribery has been attempted in interested persons. The half-breeds are of an ignorant class and are somewhat excited over the proceedings.

Shot by Drunken Man.

Cornwall, July 19.—A telegram from Riparian, Ont., to inform Cornwall friends that Alex. Hall, son of William Hall, Mayor of Cornwall, has been shot and badly wounded by a drunken miner, it is stated, it appears that the wound was mortal, but the telegram may not be in improving.

Hon. Edward Blake Dead.

Quebec, July 19.—Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., arrived here yesterday morning on board the Dominion liner Canadian. Outside Rimouski he took ill. He looked in good health, and is in his usual spirits. He said he intended leaving directly for Metis to spend a holiday before visiting Toronto.

Steamer On the Rocks.

Guernsey, Channel Islands, July 19.—The steamship which went ashore Thursday on the west coast of the island is the French steamer Victoria, from Rosario, for Rouen. She was driven on the rocks by a heavy storm. Her cargo of corn is being jettisoned.

ENQUIRY AS TO ADVERTISEMENT IN THE PRESS.

Miss Jamieson Asks If Mason Tells Reporter She Did Not Drink Argist-A-tron Enough Credit.

(From the Ottawa Journal)

Many hundreds of people read and talked about the Argist-A-tron medicine matter put in the daily papers all over the world as newspaper puffs or advertisements of patent medicines. Millions of dollars are paid every year in bribings to the attention of the public to benefits to be derived by the use of this or that nostrum. Due to the free use of printer's ink that has been made possible by the use of trade. These medicines are advertised in every kind of way, but the bulk of the money expended by the artful fellows who manufacture them is in the columns of the newspapers.

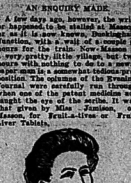

But a few days ago there was a pleasing account of good done by a patent medicine. Not only any remedy but find out the bona fides of the case was followed. Then what appeared to be something of a scuttle in matters appertaining to patent medicines.

AN ENQUIRY MADE.

A few days ago, however, the writer happened to be stalled at Masson Station, on the Montreal-Ottawa line. Seating, with a wail of a couple of babies in the car, the writer thought it very pretty little village, but free from any thing of interest. But a fellow-passenger soon became entertaining. He was a commercial traveller, and had a story to tell. Among other things he said that he had just been to Masson to find out the bona fides of the case was followed. Then what appeared to be something of a scuttle in matters appertaining to patent medicines.

AN ENQUIRY MADE.

A few days ago, however, the writer happened to be stalled at Masson Station, on the Montreal-Ottawa line. Seating, with a wail of a couple of babies in the car, the writer thought it very pretty little village, but free from any thing of interest. But a fellow-passenger soon became entertaining. He was a commercial traveller, and had a story to tell. Among other things he said that he had just been to Masson to find out the bona fides of the case was followed. Then what appeared to be something of a scuttle in matters appertaining to patent medicines.

In her letter to the proprietors of this medicine in June, 1903, and July, 1904, Miss Jamieson said that she "had taken it in spring tonic and found the great benefit I have received from Argist-A-tron. I am sure that I feel I cannot say too much for it, especially as I am now in good health." Continuing, Miss Jamieson told of suffering from kidney trouble that her complexion was sallow, with pimples on her face, and that dizziness, indigestion, constipation, and headaches every morning so got her up. Miss Jamieson was very candid and, with careful following of the directions as to diet, etc., after three boxes she lost all her ailments and regained perfect health.

VISIT TO MISS JAMISON.

Here was just a suitable case and the writer proceeded to the home of Miss Jamieson, in the township of Fruit-a-tives. Might I ask you your reason for giving such a strong testimonial? Did you feel sure of your medicine?

"Why certainly," replied Miss Jamieson, "I am only too happy to give such a testimonial. I feel sure I have said nothing about Fruit-a-tives but what is fair and true. I was a sickly, sick man and death in the family, when I got a good deal of worry and sewing. I became terribly run down and feeling that the neighbors thought I should ever be well again."

Then Miss Jamieson told Dr. Church and took considerable medicine, but with the same result. Then Miss Jamieson started taking Fruit-a-tives knowing that they were a patent medicine, but having a medical man's authority that it would do no good. Further, I felt that there could be no harm and I was prepared to do anything to get well. I am glad I did, and mine to give the medicine a good fair chance, with faith and by view I carefully followed all the directions as to diet, etc. I suffered terribly with a chronic constipation which caused headaches and I never knew what it was to get up in the morning without a headache that invariably lasted the whole day. I was also troubled with pain in the back. Fruit-a-tives, and in an incredibly short time, I was a changed man. And I was cured of my other troubles.

"Why, continued Miss Jamison, getting enthusiastic on the subject, I was a sickly, sallow looking complexion and look at me now! I do not look like the same girl. I am glad, but I always have a box handy and take them occasionally. I am worth ten times the price in my estimation. They are only using for the benefit of one's complexion. They are so much for Fruit-a-tives as far as I am concerned, and I am glad to recommend them after my experience with the medicine."

A LOCAL CONCERN.

The above enquiry is of more than usual interest, due to the fact that Fruit-a-tives, Limited, is a local concern, and from what is said of the Argist-A-tron, is a worthy substitution of great magnitude. The medicine is made from the juice of fruit, and is put up in tablet form and no difficulty is experienced in taking them. The fruit is the principal ingredient of an Ottawa physician who combined the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, making the compound. This was found to be a stomach and makes the liver active, and the establishment of a company and the manufacture of the tablets in large quantities at low prices. It resulted in the reduction of cost of production, the result being the fact that the household remedy can now be had for 50c. a box, or five times the value of the original cost had to be.

The medical writer who looked into the case of Miss Jamison does not regret his visit, which certainly proved that that young lady was not a victim to the use of patent medicines from Fruit-a-tives but that she is naturally a healthy girl, who was suffering from what she knew the facts, it.

Two Fall Victims to C. P. R. Express at Mount Forest.

Mrs. Pole, Curran, Wife of a Well-Known Farmer, Instantly Killed—Her Husband Thrown Clear—Daughter Perhaps Fatally Injured—Driving in Covered Buggy and Did Not Notice Approaching Train.

Mount Forest, July 19.—While driving across the railway tracks from the north to the south side of the town, Mrs. Pole, Curran, wife of a well-known farmer, was instantly killed by the Toronto express, at 10 o'clock this morning. Her husband escaped injury, but was thrown to the ground. Their daughter, Miss Pole, perhaps fatally, injured.

He was forgetting up the bars of the pasture gate when the animal made a rush at him, but not help been at hand. Mr. McNaughton would have met with a bad end, as it was two the wars broken, one getting his left arm and is in a serious condition.

Fatal Head and Neck Hurt.

Toronto, July 23.—A runaway south Rosedale Thursday afternoon, by which pitched into Bait Line No. 918 on the Metropolitan Railway, Yonge street, last night, about 10 o'clock. No one was present at the time of the result of the collision; for all the passengers had left the car at Yonge street and in time, and jumped while the car was standing at the street. Mrs. Sheriff and Rebecca LeBrun, 311 Preston avenue, Rosedale, were in the car, and the car alighted on her head, receiving a severe scalp wound, from which blood flowed freely. Dr. Perry was called and attended to her wounds. She was then taken into 456 Spadina avenue and later removed to the Toronto General Hospital, and at midnight was doing well.

Find Loophole in Silly Law.

Berlin, July 19.—The Berlin Court Bailiff Otto Hiller of Ottawa will pass through Berlin next week, on one of his next parade, neither will they drill, but they will use the opportunity to show the dignity of going through the city with their drums. This is the result of action the statute prohibiting drilling or marching through the streets, repealed absolutely during the stay of Governor-General Grey, but the Berlin reeves of the law the militia authorities have not accept. It is a case of "Hobson's choice" with the Berlin council, or some change is made in the next few days the trip will be cancelled.

Will Hold Another Trial.

London, July 19.—The British Government does not intend to despatch a warship to Constantinople at once, it is said, but will take other threatening action until the Sultan's reply to the insurgent demands against the Canadian fishing vessel, Minnie E. Slauenwhite, seized while she has been detained. The Government has also requested the Sultan to grant fishermen's permit (not fifteen) penalty of one hundred dollars. Meanwhile the Sultan has not yet replied to the demands of the insurgents, but the Ottawa Government has been advised that the Sultan's reply will be forthcoming.

The Script Enquiry.

Whereon Claim to Have Sold Under Cost Price.

Killarney, Man., July 23.—The script enquiry opened here this morning before Judge Myers. A number of witnesses were examined, their evidence being very similar to that already adduced. The most important witness was Mr. Angus Donald under pressure of threat of committal, admitted that he had received knowledge of the purport of the paper served.

After Law Breakers.

Toronto, July, 23.—Special officers of the Canadian Pacific Railway are investigating the observance of the liquor law in the Northwest and in Manitoba. During the past week 14 informations were laid against Mr. Rowan and other municipalities in Northern Ontario. In every instance the accused beliefkeepers were brought to justice, convictions being obtained in nearly every case. The Department of Justice was represented by K. C. Crown Attorney W. E. Raney, K. C., of Toronto, and Mr. Slaght, K. C. Frank Reed of Simcoe, Ont., was represented by James Haverson, K. C., of Toronto, and Mr. Kelly of Simcoe.

HIGHWAYMEN AT INGERSOLL.

Held Up Father of Mr. Sutherland, M. P. P., But Unsuccessfully.

Ingersoll, July 31.—During highway-men held up Robert Sutherland, father of Donald Sutherland, M. P. P., on Thames street bridge, as he was on his way home about 11 o'clock Friday night. For a man of his years Mr. Sutherland offered a plucky resistance, which, together with his cries for help, put his assailants to flight. In the mix-up Mr. Sutherland was rather roughly handled, receiving a vicious kick on the wrist and another heavy blow in the face, both of which left large bruised spots. To R. D. McCarty, who went to his rescue, he explained that he had been attacked and robbed, but at the bridge Mr. McCarty picked up his pocketbook and cane.

Crossing a Dangerous One.

Mount Forest, July 31.—The coroner's jury, empaneled to enquire into the cause of the death of Catherine Curran, after hearing the evidence of the train hands and others Saturday, were of the opinion that death was caused by being struck by engine 310 on regular train No. 53, on Grand Trunk Railway; that the train hands are in no way to blame for the accident; that they believe the crossing to be a very dangerous one, and recommend that the Grand Trunk replace the board fence on the sides of the track with wire fence for at least 200 yards west of the crossing, and also that arrangements be made with Mrs. Polster to remove the part of her orchard that obstructs the view of an approaching train from Main street.

Miss Curran, from whose home when her mother was killed, died yesterday afternoon.

Rev. Dr. Ure Dead.

Goderich, July 31.—Rev. Robert Ure, D. D., died suddenly Saturday whilst sitting in his garden. Dr. Ure was born at Lanarkshire, Scotland, in January, 1813. When 12 years of age, he settled in Hamilton, and shortly afterwards entered Knox College, completing his theological course in 1856, and receiving ordination and a call from Streetsville, where he remained for 12 years. Queen's University conferred upon him the degree of doctor of divinity in May, 1874. He lectured for two years on apologetics at Knox College, and also on homiletics at Queen's. In 1881 he removed to Goderich as minister of Knox Church, and labored until failing health compelled him to relinquish his charge.

Many Killed By Lightning.

Terror at Coney Island Where Five Are Struck Down.

Fifty Person Prostrated—Bolt Strikes Flagstaff and Grounds in Crowd Sheltered From Rain—Other Deaths From Lightning —Reservoirs Burst in Connecticut and Lives Are Lost and Property Immensely Damaged.

New York, July 31.—During a thunderstorm of terrific intensity which passed over New York yesterday afternoon, five men were struck by lightning and instantly killed and nine were seriously injured at the Parkway baths at Coney Island. At the same time one man was killed and three were prostrated at Gravesend Beach.

A few minutes before 5 o'clock a bolt struck the flagstaff on the big bath house and grounded the entire fabric of the crowd. Nearly 40 persons were prostrated, and the rest, screaming with terror, rushed out into the storm. Those who had remained in the water were also panic-stricken and fled in all directions, not daring to enter the bath house, which appeared to be on fire.

Ambulances were summoned from all the nearest hospitals, and on their arrival five persons were found dead and nine unconscious under the bath house. The bodies of all were scorched by the electric fluid. The nine injured were removed to a hospital, where it was said that none were dangerously ill.

About the same time Henry Ranseweller was struck and killed while standing under a tree at Gravesend Bay, and his son, William, with John Appleton and Daniel McCauley, were rendered unconscious.

RAIN BURSTS RESERVOIRS.

Loss of Life and Immense Damage to Property in Connecticut.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 31.—Loss of life and immense damage to property followed the bursting of reservoirs north of this city, as a result a 7-inch fall of rain Saturday night and early yesterday.

At Easton and Trumbull the rainfall was even greater and the dam at Ward's mill at Easton went out early yesterday morning, sending a great body of water down through the town of Trumbull. The dam at the paper mill reservoir broke and the body of water swept down into Berkshire pond.

There was no warning to the people who lived on the banks of what is usually a small water course. The home of John Lesco was picked up by the flood and carried a mile below. The Lesco family were all rescued after a perilous journey. A house occupied by Michael Moran was hurled against the Berkshire bridge and wrecked, and it is expected that Moran was drowned.

The powder of Pembroke Lake, in North Bridgeport, wrecked the Barnaby avenue bridge with a wagon and crossing it. In the wagon were William Kowenski and John Starkin. The wagon and horses were swept away and Kowenski was drowned.

Barn and Stock Burned.

Cookeville, July 31.—An electrical storm of unusual prevalence and violence passed over this district at an early hour yesterday morning. Various minor accidents are reported from lightning, the most serious being the destruction of the barn and stables of Rees Goldthorpe, Toronto Township. Goldthorpe lost one cow, four pigs and about 50 tons of hay. The total loss is over $2,000.

LEFT TO DROWN AND LOSES LIFE

Norman Hill of Oshawa, Aged 14, Slips From Steamer's Deck Into Lake.

Oshawa, July 31.—Norman Hill a 14-year-old boy, of the Queen's Hotel, fell overboard from the steamer Argyle on Friday night, and by some error the boat went on without making an effort to rescue him. The body has not been recovered.

The lad was on a moonlight excursion out of Oshawa, and, passing Newcastle, was standing near the rail. He lost his grip and fell from the upper deck. Other passengers heard the splash and gave the alarm.

The boat commenced to go back to the rescue in the direction of the drowning lad's cries, but, some bungle occurred, and the steamer turned and proceeded on her course.

Hill had been at the Queen's Hotel for some time. His parents live at Whitby.

Canoeist Seized With Fit Drowns.

Toronto Junction, July 31.—Accidents may claimed another victim yesterday afternoon, when Reginald Percy Stocks, a young C. P. R. fireman of West Toronto Junction, met death in its watery grave. Stocks in company with a companion named Clarence Payne, of 43 Melville avenue, left the beach at the foot of Morley avenue in a canoe shortly after three o'clock. Stocks fell out of the canoe in a fainting spell, and Payne after vainly attempting to rescue him was drowned. Stocks was barely 19 years of age and his mother was prostrated with grief at the loss of her only son. At a late hour last night the efforts were expressed regarding her recovery.

Saved and Then Lost.

Manasquan, N. J., July 31.—While Frank Brown of Jamaica, L. I., was bathing at Manasquan beach yesterday with his daughter and Miss Todd of Plainfield, N. J., the two girls became exhausted, and he was only able to keep them afloat until two men put out from shore in a boat and took them on board. While Brown was trying to get into the boat it was upset, and all were thrown into the water. The bathers rescued Miss Todd, but Brown and his daughter were swept away by the current and drowned.

G. T. P. Surveyor Lost.

Port Arthur, July 31.—Mr. J. P. Engineer Deschene, whose home is in Eastern Canada, is lost in the pathless forest north of Sturgeon Lake, where he had been making preliminary surveys. He had about a dozen men with him and all have been searching for him since last Tuesday.

Arm Crushed by Cars.

Brampton, July 31.—While attempting to board train 67 C. P. R. train here Saturday night, John Bell, a middle-aged man, whose home is in Malton, missed his footing and fell beside the wheels of the moving train. He narrowly escaped instant death. When brought to the platform it was discovered that a goodly portion of the flesh was crushed from the right arm, which, however, was not broken. He was also suffering from the shock and many bruises, and it is probable that the arm will be amputated.

Tennessee Imposes Quarantine.

Memphis, Tenn., July 31.—Following the quarantines established by Memphis and Chattanooga, the entire State of Tennessee Saturday closed its doors against New Orleans and other points where yellow fever is prevalent.

New Orleans, La., July 31.—New cases of yellow fever reported up to 6 o'clock last evening numbered 27; total cases to date 282; deaths yesterday 3; deaths to date 57; new foci 4; total foci 41.

Secretary to Commission.

Ottawa, July 31.—It is learned on reliable authority that John Bain, assistant commissioner of customs, has been selected for the position of secretary of tariff commission. He is conversant with all the details of the tariff and is in close touch with the needs of the country in this department. Mr. Bain became private secretary to Hon. William Paterson in 1896 and was appointed assistant commissioner of customs in 1904.

Mrs. Kyle Out on Bail.

Ingersoll, July 31.—Mrs. Robert Kyle was released on bail from the Woodstock jail at 7 o'clock Friday night and accompanied by her husband return'd to Ingersoll. Her bondsmen are Walter J. Berry, John Jamilyn, Frederick Dutton and James T. Bierbrick.

Drowned at Kenora.

Kenora, July 31.—A sad drowning accident occurred here yesterday afternoon resulting in the death of Miss Bella Milne and the narrow escape of her companion, Miss Shallow. The latter girl got beyond her depth while bathing off Lemon's Island.

Bankruptcy in Britain.

London, July 31.—A Board of Trade return of the bankruptcies in Great Britain for 1904 shows that they numbered 3,631, of which 487 were failures of women. The total liabilities were £12,958,257. The estimated loss to creditors was £9,371,780.

Boy Loses a Foot.

London, July 31.—While playing on the cars on the G. T. R. switch yesterday afternoon, Herbert Green, 13 years old, fell beneath the wheels when the engine was shunting, and had his foot cut off close to the ankle.

No Dissolution This Year.

ANNUAL SALE OF MEN'S HATS
—FOR—
FIVE DAYS, AUGUST 1ST TO 5TH

$3.00 Hats 98c

On August 1st, we commence our annual Summer Sale. This sale has met with such previous success that it needs no introduction to the men of this city. Suffice to say that we have as good bargains to offer this season as ever before

Stiff Hats—Soft Hats—Knockabout Hats and Dress Hats, all the odds and ends of assortments, including some of the most up-to-date shapes, must be cleared at once to make room for our fall goods.

—Your choice of the remainder of our summer stock of Men's Soft and Stiff Hats, in black, brown, grey, Fawn, Castor, etc., regular price $1.50 to $3.00, for five days, only 98c

More Alteration Prices

A visit to our mantle department will clearly demonstrate to you our clearance necessity in this section. We have had to crowd our racks and tables into about half the space they usually occupy.

Although our low prices have cleared a great quantity of goods, we find we need still more room. We know you will help us when you read over the list below.

Children's $1.00 Night Gowns 35c

—An assorted lot of Children's White Cotton Night Gowns—made in neat styles and daintily trimmed with embroidery, regular price 50c to $1.00, sizes 4 to 10, Tuesday and Wednesday price 35c

$20.00 Silk Shirt Waist Suits $11.38

—7 only Ladies' Fine Silk Shirt Waist Suits, made in very latest styles of fine quality silk—These garments promise to be more than ever popular for fall —navy, green and blue shot, brown and white check and plain black, regular $15.00 to $20.00 suits, Tuesday and Wednesday $11.38

$2.25 Lawn Sacques 98c

—About 2 dozen White Lawn Dressing Sacques that have become slightly soiled by handling—will wash up fresh as new, all dainty styles, regular $1.50, to $2.25 for 98c

$6.75 Cotton Shirt Waist Suits $3 98

After the season's selling we find about a dozen Cotton Shirt Waist Suits on our tables—there's no particular reason why they should be here as we have sold many others in similar styles, but as they are here we make this price reduction for Tuesday and Wednesday to clear them quickly,

—$3.75 Cotton Shirt Waist Suits $2.98
—$4.50 Cotton Shirt Waist Suits $3.38
—$5.00 to $6.75 Cotton Shirt Waist Suits $3.98

$3.50 Lawn Blouses 98c

—Dainty styles and moderate prices have made this our largest blouse season. We have a few remaining which we desire to clear at once—continual handling has slightly soiled a few of them. They were regularly $1.50 to $3.50, your choice until cleared 93c

Boys' 75c Shirts 25c

—A lot of Boys' Shirts and Waists, in odd sizes, hardly any two alike, regular 50c and 75c, to clear at 25c

35c Wash Goods 23c

—Don't forget our sale of beautiful Wash Goods. These are all this season's materials, in dainty colorings and designs. Some have only waist lengths, others have enough for whole dresses, regular prices 30c to 35c, to clear at 23c

TELEPHONE TALKS.

TO TELEPHONE USERS AND THE GENERAL PUBLIC.—

The Bell Telephone Company of Canada has been operating for twenty-four years. Its operations were at first confined to the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario, but later it also undertook business in the Northwest.

The amount expended by the Company during this time in building up its system, is $10,558,686.79, over $300 per head of the population of the country served.

Considering that large sections of these Provinces are sparsely settled, that there are large areas where the Bell Company does not operate, but which are served by other Companies, the amount invested will compare favorably with any other country.

The Bell Telephone Company of Canada has secured from investors this large sum of money upon the record of its management. While scores of other telephone organizations both in this country and the United States have either failed to pay dividends or gone to the wall, involving the loss of millions of capital, the stock of this Company has always been sold at par or upwards. The Company has survived the keenest competition in important centres, all of which is a practical endorsement of the Company's management.

Is it not an advantage to telephone users and to the commercial interests of Canada, particularly during this period of national development, that so important a factor as the local and long distance telephone service should be in the hands of a strong company which commands the confidence of capitalists? Confidente and cash go hand in hand in the up-building of a telephone system, and both are an absolute necessity to continuous development. It is certain that the development of the next ten years will exceed that of the past twenty years. It is essential that the confidence of capitalists shall be maintained if the requirements of this growing country are to be met. This cannot be unless returns upon the investment are assured by reasonable rates, careful administration and an energetic and continuous policy.

The Agnes Donahue Case.

Once again it becomes apparent that it is a good thing for Canadian marines men that they have the British navy at their back. The case of the Agnes Donahue has been pressed by the British Government in a way which leaves little doubt that the captain and crew, who are lying in prison in Uruguay, will have justice done them, though the methods are tardy.

The United States Government assumes a certain share of responsibility for the way in which the South American Republics conduct their relations with foreign countries. It is the price which those Republics pay for the guarantee they receive under the Monroe Act to have this strong hand over them. They must mete out justice in alleged breaches of law, and make no default in their payments.

This may be found inconvenient at times. It is more conformable to the minds of most of the South American potentates to do their will without outside accountability, to seize and imprison men without trial and make confiscation at odd times when it is easier to repudiate than pay. But the United States has undertaken to see that these petty sovereign presidents obey correct and civilized usages; it is the obligation the Washington Government assumes in protecting the legality of that portion of the continent.

Thus the case of the Agnes Donahue has had to be submitted to Washington as an intermediary. What is determined there may be the measure of the rights which the sealing vessel in question possesses, and which the British Government will proceed to enforce. If the sealing crew exceeded their privileges in the waters of Uruguay, they will have to take the penalty. If they were within their rights, the Washington authorities will have to see to it, and the British authorities to enforce with as little delay as possible.

The contention at Uruguay is that the seals caught by the Canadians belonged to a private company having a contract with the Government. The opposite plea is that such contract, if made, was not communicated to other governments. To determine the various points at issue may require months of negotiation. The case of the British Columbia sealers whose vessels were seized by the United States revenue officers, took years to settle.

But while these negotiations are going on the men should not be held bound as if wrongdoers dangerous. Guilty or not, they should be released or brought to speedy trial. And if this be not done, the arrival of a British warship on the coast may hasten matters.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Our sincere commiserations are hereby extended to the old boys of Kingston, who had their reunion last Saturday and to-day.

How thankful we can be that the weather man was so good to us. The blow would surely have killed father if the Belleville old boys and girls had been soaked like their old friends in Kingston.

It was feared that the raspberry crop would be ruined by the dry weather, but it should be all right now.

Not being sure of Lord Bobs to open the Toronto fair, the management is after a prince. They'll have lines out for King Edward next.

The Forty-third Regiment of Ottawa will be allowed to take their rifles with them, after all, because, as the military editor of the Citizen puts it, "the Yankee girls would have no use for the boys without their arms."

The man who lives on the next block was in rather a sarcastic mood last night when coming home from church. "I noticed," he said, "that the loudest music to-night was uttered by a man who is known to be a habitual despoiler of the widow and orphan. Hardly a man in town but can tell you a story of his wolfish greed and unsettled tongue. And you could hardly, on a Sunday night, throw a brick without hitting somebody to match him. I tell you that nowadays you can't tell a man's piety by his unctuousness in the prayer meeting, or gauge his righteousness by his sweetness at his wife's at home. If you could, can like the Pharisee in the New Testament who, with angelic poise, told the Almighty how good he was, and how bad the other poor devil was, might be able to do a land office business at skinning his neighbors, or some sugar-coated Judas might deceive the most lynx-eyed financier. People have learned to measure a man by his blood and not by his profession. We can't fool people these days with fervid devotion or cheap goody-goody talk. There never was a time when straight up and up [illegible] meant more, and when cant and humbug were better understood. A man is sized up for more accurately than most of us think."

The Sheriff of Elgin has lost his job, the cause being an offence alleged to have taken place six years ago. This proof that members of the Whitney Cabinet have long memories is not apt to make certain people in this city feel very safe in their positions.

The St. Thomas Journal has a few remarks to make concerning the increased sessional indemnity which are interesting, and contain, perhaps, a certain amount of truth. The Journal says: "The trouble with the average Canadian elector is that he imagines the member of Parliament should be touched for five or ten dollars for every sporting organization, picnic, new church; in fact, should be a contribution to everything. Many a man who has entered public life has been ruined by the People with the thing. Hon. Dr. Ross was one of our men who sat for a western constituency for four years, and in that time used up nearly every dollar he had to engage on all his property in paying election expenses and meeting the demands of electors for gifts—anything from cow to shingling and that. The People should not abuse the Men in Parliament for the increase, and blame the People. No M. P. should be expected to join every club, contribute to all the churches, all the picnics and all the other things that are going, as demanded, any more than other people."

A despatch from Toronto states that less than 10 per cent. of the hotel proprietors in Toronto men own the premises where they carry on their business. The real owners are the brewing and distilling companies who "stake" them. It would do no harm in order to permit them to start. This is hardly to be wondered at when it is learned that the fee paid for the transfer of liquor licenses in Toronto run all the way from $10,000 to $80,000. There must be a huge "outlay" on the beer when licenses have to cough up $80,000 for a chance to sell the stuff that makes you walk on your toes.

No work ordered by the Council in recent years has given more satisfaction than the new iron fountain which has recently being going on. Better street lighting, less dampness, fewer mosquitoes and a more healthy condition of affairs is secured.

The young fellow with the ice cream vest and the pretty girl minus a lid, who walk out together by the park meadows, will have to arrange to hold more login to watch out for meteors. The earth is now passing through the zone of the Perseids, and from now till the middle of August the meteoric visitants will probably be numerous. The maximum display will be about August 10, the meteors radiating from the constellation of Perseus.

The world is still discussing what Emperor Bill and the Czar said to each other when they recently met at sea, but what's the difference, anyhow? Confidential interviews between crowned heads have less significance than in days gone by. The people have more to say now.

The fact that another great coal strike in the United States is predicted should spur Canadians on to see if they cannot devise some plan by which they may become independent of the Yankees. What about those enormous discoveries of coal in the Northwest which we used to hear of? Surely something could be done to prevent a repetition of the worry and anxiety to which Canadians were subjected a couple of years ago! In the meantime it is not out of place to state that the present agreement between the operators and miners in the Pennsylvania anthracite fields expires April 1 next. The miners want better terms than they now have and are preparing to enforce their demands. Meanwhile all mines are being worked to fullest capacity and the operators are storing great quantities of coal. By April it is said they expect to have on hand a supply sufficient to last two years, so that they will be in position to face a long strike. Stockades and fences are being built around some of the mines and altogether there are indications that trouble is anticipated. The miners, on their part, are strengthening their organizations and accumulating funds.

Funny, isn't it. Just because The Globe wants to run Fitzpatrick out of the Cabinet the Quebec Liberal papers are giving The Globe fits. And there are few better fits in any tailor shop than some of the pet names the Quebecers are calling The Globe.

The editor of The Montreal Star asks: "Will Russia pay an indemnity?" The question does not seem to be "will she pay?" but "how much will she pay?" That Russia will have to pay a war indemnity seems reasonably certain to everybody. The Japs are hardly likely to sidestep the chance to cripple, for half a century, the country which never showed mercy to any other land, and which, had it conquered Japan, would have laid waste the Land of Chrysanthemums and around its people into the sea.

The news of the death of Col. Montizambert will come as a shock to many in this city who had met the popular and whole-souled old soldier. A true gentleman was he, one of nature's noblemen, living proof that a man can be an officer, a first and unsparing, and still keep himself above the pettiness which some wearers of the uniform seem to think is called for when they are dressed in a little brief authority. The memory of Col. Montizambert will be dear to all who met him in the discharge of his duty. May he rest in peace!

AN OLD BOY'S THANKS.

ARE TENDERED TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE, PARTICULARLY THE LADIES, FOR THE PLEASURES OF THE REUNION.

The following letter explains itself:

Boston, Mass., July 25, 1905.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly allow me, through your columns, to extend my most heartfelt thanks to the citizens of Belleville for the royal welcome and thorough good time given us "Old Boys" the past week?

I thank the committee in charge of the reunion and the ladies particularly, for their unremitting energy to make the affair such a success.

We will feast on the thoughts of those four days in Belleville for some years to come.

Very gratefully yours,
JAMES S. JOHNSON.

Sprained His Ankle.

Mr. Wm. Johnson, Inspector of Weights and Measures, etc., had the misfortune this morning to slip and sprain his ankle. Whilst not serious the mishap will cause Mr. Johnson considerable pain and inconvenience. His many friends will regret the accident.

One Dollar Saved Represents Ten Dollars Earned.

The average man does not save to exceed ten per cent. of his earnings. He must spend nine dollars in living expenses for every dollar saved. That being the case he cannot be too careful about unnecessary expenses. Very often a few cents properly invested, like buying seeds for his garden, will save several dollars outlay later on. It is the same in buying Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It costs but a few cents, and a bottle of it in the house often saves a doctor's bill of several dollars. For sale by all druggists.

IN ALL WALKS OF LIFE.

Herpicide is Used to Cure Dandruff, E. H. Lyon, New York, N.Y., says: "I am very fond of Herpicide and enjoy using it, and its refreshing."

Dr. J. H. Dash, Toledo, O., writes: "New-bro's Herpicide has given better satisfaction than anything I have ever used."

Mrs. Berkey, of Chadron, Neb., says of Herpicide:

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Mr. Frank Harden is confined to his room by illness.

Police Officer Cook is confined to the house with a sprained ankle.

Miss Grace Griffin, Toronto, is visiting Mrs. (Dr.) Marshall, Bridge St.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Graham, of Hopkins, N.Y., are in the city visiting friends.

Mr. H. L. Ross, of Toronto, is shaking the hands with old friends in Belleville to-day.

Mr. Robt. Addison, of Port Arthur, is visiting his parents, on Cedar street.

Mr. C. H. Vermilyea and family go to Wellington on Wednesday to enjoy a few breezes for a month.

Mr. Richard Connors, of Buffalo, N.Y., a former Belleville boy, is in the city on a visit to friends.

Miss Aggie Symons, Coleman St., has gone to visit friends in Rochester for a couple of weeks.

Mr. Howard Yeoh, who has been spending his holidays with his parents, has returned to Philadelphia.

Miss J. L. Gunn returned to New York city on Saturday, after spending her vacation with her parents.

Miss Sadie E. Capp, of Lancaster, Donna, niece of Mrs. R. J. Renshaw, is visiting the latter on Albert St.

Miss Kate Woods, of Plainfield, has also been among the excursionists to Ste. Anne de Beaupre, has returned home.

Mrs. Joe Morgan, of St. Louis, Mo., is in the city visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lyng, Meagher street.

Mrs. (Rev. Dr.) Lambly and the Misses Lambly will leave this week for a prolonged visit to many relatives in the Province of Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Hendrick, Mr. and Mrs. Gregory, Mr. Troesher and Miss Mollie Walsh, of New York, are guests of Col. and Mrs. Hendrick, John street.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller Empey and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Foster who now reside in Rochester, N.Y., and who came over for the Old Boys' Reunion, are still in the city renewing many friendships. They join in the universal chorus Belleville must be reckoned as beautiful as now; we see improvements everywhere; the reunion was a huge success."

At the Quinte: J. Jordan, F. Darling, F. Coppin, D. Miller, J. A. Mc-Lear Sir, — Will you kindly allow me, through your columns, to extend my most heartfelt thanks to the citizens of Belleville for the royal welcome and thorough good time given us "Old Boys" the past week?

A Run-Down Woman Made Well by Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women

Miss Jennie Thomas, of Dirsville, Que., was in a run-down condition—down in health, discouraged out. Thousands of women know just how she felt.

She was given a box of Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women by her family physician. She took them two weeks and then wrote us in these words:

"I have received such great benefit from taking your tablets, I desire to continue taking them two weeks longer. The benefit received from the one box has been so great, and I feel so much better now, I am satisfied only one box more will be necessary to effect what you claim for your tablets, that is, make me again a healthy woman."

She was sent the second box. She took them and has since assured us of perfect restoration to health.

And they are doing this for women all the time. Every day we receive letters from grateful women, testifying to their gain in health since taking these tablets.

If you are in poor health, out of condition, or suffer from any weakness peculiar to your sex, they will restore you to perfect health. They make healthy women.

But you must do as Mrs. Thomas did—take the tablets. They will notice improvement the first week.

STEAMER ARGYLE RAN AGROUND IN A FOG.

BIG BOAT WRECKED NEAR OSHAWA—128 PASSENGERS WERE BADLY FRIGHTENED — LARGE HOLE IN STEAMER'S HULL, BUT NO CASUALTIES OCCURRED.

Toronto, July 31.—Lost in a heavy fog, the steamer Argyle ran foul of the rocks at Gamble's Point, about four miles from Oshawa, Saturday morning, where she still lies with two large jagged holes in her hull. Her passengers, 150 excursionists from the Toronto Carpet Works, were safely landed by a tug of the Donnelly Wrecking Co. of Kingston. They were sent home by train. When the boat struck the shock was so sharp and severe that dozens of the excursionists were thrown to the deck with their feet. Many women screamed and many of them fainted.

Two Miles Out of Course.

As the Argyle is pointing It is evident the vessel had got a couple of miles out of her course and too near shore in order to avoid the fog which prevailed on the lake during the morning. Had soundings been taken the accident would have been averted. The steamer ran on with full head steam and indications by the log as nothing was wrong. Her pumps were wholly inadequate to keep down the water which poured into the boiler-room until the stokers were working waist deep and were helpless in keeping up the fires against the rising flood. At last the fires were put out by water, and only the steamer's way was unable even to sound her whistle, so dense was the fog.

No one knows definitely yet just how much damage was done to the boat. The vessel is resting squarely on the bottom, at least at low water and normal draught, at the prow, and as much lower at the stern. All Sunday the Donnelly Wrecking Co.'s steamer Dominion of Kingston was moored to the lake-ward side of the Argyle and the men were engaged in lightening the steamer's hull. No effort was yet been made to plug the holes in the hull and pump out the water necessary to get a tug tempt at pulling her off. Very fortunately the weather has been several points to the northward Sunday several points to the northward Sunday several points to the northward Sunday

WOMAN'S WANTS

(According to the popular poet, all that a woman wants is love.—News item.)

All she desires is love, you say;
But shows how much you know;
She wants to see the matinee,
And to the circus go
She wants a handsome diamond ring,
She wants a rope of pearls;
She wants a poodle on a string,
She wants some extra curls;
She wants a motor twice a year,
She wants an Easter hat;
She wants to read her little clear
Unto a stylish flat;
She wants a four-cast motor car,
She wants a real Worth gown;
She wants a trip to Europe, or
At least to Newport town;
She wants a cask of rare cologne,
She wants a diamond pin;
She wants a carriage of her own
To go out calling in;
She wants the stars above,
And yet you have the nerve to say
That all she wants is love!

A man who died in 1899 has been voting ever since in Philadelphia — at least somebody has been voting for him. In an incident as that must make the grit machine in Ontario take a back seat.

The Montreal Gazette has small sympathy with the bridge tender who lately held up a Yankee yacht because she refused to fly the Canadian flag, as reported in these columns on Saturday, and thus comments on the matter: "It seems now that a bridge tender on the Rideau canal has undertaken to permit a United States yacht to pass his draw because it was flying the United States flag. There seems to be occasion in this continent for some sharp lessons on the subject of good sense in regard to flags. The proper thing for a vessel to fly is that of the country to which it belongs, and when an official or anyone else seeks to coerce it into flying any other he is both ignorant and impertinent. Ignorant and impertinent men should not be in the public service."

The old saying, "In the midst of life we are in death" was illustrated a few days ago in the case of a robust captain at a New Jersey life saving station, who went up for a physical examination just to obey the law. He was a perfect picture of health, and the doctor ridiculed the legal requirement that one so big and brawny should be examined. But the captain no sooner took off his coat than he gave a gasp and sank in his knees, dying in two minutes from hemorrhages of the lungs.

The return of long ocean voyages for the benefit of tourists who desire to spend their four weeks in cruising instead of six days, is predicted as among coming changes of fashion. The American Shipbuilder explores a theory that a line of fast sailing packets would pay handsome profits and be filled to their utmost capacity during the season of travel. "They could," it says, "be fitted up with all the modern conveniences of the present day, even electric lights, refrigerating plants, and everything for comfort. They could carry from 75 to 100 passengers and perhaps consider the high-class freight, and taken as a whole pay much larger dividends than the mammoth high-speed passenger steamers of to-day."

A Long Island lady went to church Sunday armed with a razor. She did not carry anyone, nor did the sight of the razor cause alarm. The congregation laughed when she flourished it, but the mistook it for a fan. It was her husband's safety razor and it didn't "spread itself" like the fan she thought she picked up in her anxiety not to be "late at church.

DEATH OF LIEUT.-COL. MACLEAN.

Kingston, July 31.—The death occurred at Ovid, Mich., on Saturday morning of Lieut.-Col. Charles B. Maclean. The late Col. Montmambert retired as Lt. Col. two years and a half ago, being succeeded by Col. Buchan. Since that time he has been in ill health. A couple of months ago he left for the south in charge of Mrs. Hill, who proved a faithful nurse. In military circles he was greatly admired and respected. Col. Montmambert's military service began in 1860. He saw service in the Fenian raid and in the Northwest rebellion. He was born in Quebec in 1841.

"RAFFLES, THE AMATEUR CRACKSMAN"

This is the first of a series of thirteen new stories entitled "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman."

Raffles is destined to achieve as widespread fame in his own peculiar line as did Sherlock Holmes in a totally different sphere, for Raffles and Holmes are exact opposites in view, character and career.

While Sherlock Holmes exercised his wonderful powers towards the detection of crime, Raffles is represented as a man of unusual intellect and of high birth and breeding who has sunk to employing his undoubted genius to enable him to live by his wits

THE IDES OF MARCH

I.

It was about half-past twelve when I returned to the Albany as a last desperate resort. The scene of my disappearance was as I had left it. The cocoa-rat-counters still strewed the table, with the empty glasses and the loaded ash-trays. A window had been opened to let the smoke out, and was letting in the fog instead. Raffles himself had barely changed his dining jacket for one of his innumerable blazers. He had lighted a cigarette as though I had dragged from him his bed.

"Forgotten something?" said he, when he saw me in the door.

"No," said I, pushing past him without ceremony. And I let the door to behind me with an impudence amazing to myself.

"Got come back for your revenge, have you? I'm afraid I can't give it you single-handed. I was sorry to leave you in the lurch."

"Don't talk rot," said I, and I cut him short.

"Raffles," said I, "you may well be surprised at my coming back in this way and at this hour. I hardly know you. I was never in your rooms before-to-night. But I forged for you at school, and you said you remembered me. Of course that's no excuse, but you will listen to me—for two minutes?"

"In my emotion I had at first to struggle for every word; but the fog reassured me as I went on, and I was not mistaken in its expression.

"Certainly my dear man," said he; "as many minutes as you like. I will mix a Sullivan and sit down." And he handed me his silver cigarette case.

"No," said I, finding a full voice as I shook my head. "No, I won't smoke, and won't sit down, thank you. Nor will you when you've done so either when you've heard what I have to say."

"Really?" said he lighting his own cigarette with one clear blue eye upon me. "How can you tell?"

"Because you're probably not the man you've tried, bitterly; "and you'll be lucky if you're not. I've been a fool, a beating about the bush. You know I grouped over two hundred just now?"

He nodded.

"I hadn't the money in my pocket."

"I remember."

"But I had my cheque-book, and I wrote each of you a cheque at that desk."

"Quite!"

"Not one of them was worth the paper it was written on. Raffles, I am overdrawn already at my bank!"

"Surely not, my dear fellow!"

"Oh, I have spent everything." "That would tell me where we are well off, I heard you had come in for money."

"So I did. Three years ago. It has been the curse now. It's a poor estate every penny. Yes, I've been a fool; there never was a fool will be such a fool as I've been. . . . Isn't this enough for you? Why should you turn out of your way to be walking up and down with me, my dear fellow, now?"

"Couldn't let people go and ring!" said he at length.

"Thank God!" I cried, "I have no people! I was an only child. I came in for everything there was. My one comfort is that they're gone, and who never knew."

I cast myself into a chair and hid my face, Raffles continuing to pace the rich carpet that was of a piece with everything else in his rooms. There was no variation in his soft and even footfalls.

"You used to be a literary dilettante," he said at length; "didn't you edit the mag. before you left? Anyway I recollect fagging you to do my verses; and literature of all sorts is the very thing nowadays. Any fool can make a living at it."

I shook my head. "Any fool couldn't write off my debts," said I.

"Then you have a flat somewhere?" he went on.

"Yes, in Mount Street."

"Well, what about the furniture?"

"It's all mixed in my misery," I said; "I've bill of sale on every piece for months!"

And at that Raffles stood still, with raised eyebrows and stiffs eyes that I could meet the better now that he knew the worst; then, with a shrug, he resumed his walk, and for some minutes neither of us spoke. But in his handsome unmoved face, I read my fate and death-warrant; and with every breath I cursed my folly and my cowardice in coming to him at all. Because he had been kind to me at school, when he was captain of the eleven, and I his fag, I had dared to look for kindness from him now; because I was ruined, and he rich enough to play cricket all the summer, and do nothing for the rest of the the year, I had fatuously counted on his mercy, his sympathy, his help. Yes, I had relied on him in my heart, for all my outward stiffness and hauteur, and I was rightly served. There, again, as little of mercy as of sympathy in that curling nostril and that right eyebrow that could be lifted so high! I was a fool to have come to door; elsewhere all was as it had been left overnight. And but for a train of mingled disorder behind the bow captain, a bottle of wine and a cigarbox half whilst liberties had been taken, a rather black towel in the lavatory, a dirty match here and there, and four finger-marks on the dusty panels, not a trace of the night's visit did we leave.

"We had a good head for long?" said Raffles, as we strolled through the streets, now full of life, for all the world as though we were returning from a dance, and not from a burglary. I answered that I was that supper empty about a month ago, and brought a few things in the shape of the lie of the land. That reminded me that I never paid for them! But, by Jove, I will to-morrow, and if that isn't sensitive, what is?" One must always see the possibilities of the place, but you cannot convinced me of the impossibleness without a pal. So I had practically given up the idea, when you came home the very night and in the very plight for it! But here we are at the Albany, and I hope there's some fire left; you don't know how you feel, but for my part I'm as cold as Keats's urn."

He switched on the light of Keats on his way from a fellow's bank, and I saw that his forehead was knotted. Floodgates were loosed within me, and I told him in English of the adventure rushed over me as cold as ice. That was a burglar. I had found him out to commit one burglary, therefore I was a burglar myself. I had come home to warm myself by his fire, and watch him at supper; nothing more nothing less.

My blood froze. My heart sickened. My knees gave way. How I had liked this villain! How I had admired him! Even my literary appreciation must turn to loathing and disgust. I waited for the change. I longed to feel it in my heart. But—I loved and I waited for it in vain.

I saw that he was emptying his pockets; the table was littered with their hoard. Rings by the dozen, bracelets, lockets, brooches, necklaces, pearls, cables, pendants, studs, sleeve-links, diamonds always, diamonds in everything. Diamonds were the common denominating me—blinding me—as I could not see through a pane of glass. Last of all came no gem, indeed, but a handful of notes from his inner pocket. And that struck a chord. I suppose I was a receiver thing—after all. At last, I can see Raffles now, as he looked at me across the more than I ever saw after each clear eye. I can see him pick out the cattle-prod of a pocket-knife, cynical smile, before he would give my pistol back to me again.

"You mayn't believe it, Bunny," said he, "but I never carried a loaded one before. On the whole, I think it gives one confidence. It would be very awkward if anything went wrong to-night, and I'm glad that's not the game at all, though I don't often thought the trick must have just done before things got too hot for him. Don't looks distressed, old chap! Your turn will never come, I'm sometimes, and I don't suppose I ever shall."

"But what have you have done before?" said I, mystified.

"Before? My dear Bunny, you offered me! Did I ever tell you of the first time I ever found I have done it before."

"Often!"

"Well, not often enough to destroy the charm, at all events, for there is a story at fact, unless I'm currently hard up. Did I ever tell about the Thirlsby diamonds? Well, that was the last time I was a poor lot for long, I can tell you. Then there was the little business of the Lammer bonehead at Henley last year. That was mine alone—saving the mark. I've not brought a really big coup yet; when I do I shall retire.

I remembered both cases very well. To think that he was their author! It was incredible, outrageous, inconceivable. Yet there he was, in full dress on the table, twinkling and glittering with stolen gems, and looking—he was at an end.

"How shall we begin?" I asked, my curiosity overcame mere wonder, and my interest for his career was such that I swore itself into my fascination for the moment.

"Ah! that's a long story," said Raffles, "it was out there playing cricket. It's too late—there's no time now, but I was in much the same fix that you were in to-night, and I was my only way out. I never meant it for anything more; but I'd a good deal, and it was at one of the best. Why should I work when I could steal? Why your fellow-men more than unconscientious billet, when existence is much easier and a few evening were all going begging together? Don't answer. It's very wrong, we can't all be moralists, and the distribution of wealth is not exactly to be with. Besides, you're not at all the type. I'm sure you're not cut out for crime to myself, but they're profoundly sorry, I wonder if you're like the life as much as I do!"

"Like it!" I cried out. "Not it! It's the only life worth living!"

"You would, then, be a hand another diamond?"

"Don't ask me, Raffles. Don't ask me, for's sake!"

"Yet you said you would do anything for me! You asked me to nzme my crime! But I'll tell you the time you were in love. If you didn't go back on me to-night, and you ought to be satisfied, you've proved it. I suppose I'm unreasonable, and all that, but I'm sure you'll see it at this. But you're the very woman for me, Bunny. Be—don't say no. I think how we got through to-night. Still a scratch—not a hitch! There's nothing very terrible in it you see; there's only one thing that's really wrong."

He was standing in front of me with a hand on each shoulder, and was forgetting as he knew so well how to smile, I was looking at the blanted my elbows on the chimney-piece, and my shoulders on the mantelpiece. I had just spent a still harder hand had fallen on the way back.

"All right, my boy! You are quite right, and I'm sure you're wrong. I'll never ask it again. Go, if you want it, and come and see me when you've had a rash. There was no bargain; but I'm sorry, I'll go out of your way. Especially after the way you've stood by me in the past."

I was round again with my blood on fire.

"I'll do it again," I said, through my teeth.

He shook his head. "Not you," he said, handling quite good-humouredly on my insane enthusiasm.

"I will," I cried with an oath. "I'll and you a hand as often as you like! What does it matter now? I've lost in it once. I'll be in it again. I've gone to the devil anyhow, I can't go back, and wouldn't if I could. Nothing matters another cent. When you want me I'm your man!"

And that is how Raffles and I joined felonious forces on the Ides of March.

MAKE RIGHT BEGINNING

DESIRE WHICH IMPELLED SAVIOUR AT CANA OF GALILEE.

THE FIRST MIRACLE OF JESUS

Performed So as to Reveal the Father to the World in the Most Attractive, Winning and Impressive Way — Preacher Draws Lesson of Good Cheer and Helpfulness and Enjoyment From the Incident.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1905, by Frederick Dixon, of Toronto, at the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 30.—In this sermon the preacher draws the lesson of a gospel of good cheer and helpfulness and shows that Christianity bars no one from innocent enjoyment. The text is John ii, 11, "This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee."

Finding the rational cause for the inception of things is a passion in the human heart and mind. But not to it is the desire of making out of what when, after years of hard work and toil, we would give to the world the results of our labor and our invention. When Henry M. Stanley came from his exploration of the dark continent he did not let the facts there gained lie dormant in his mind. He at once headed toward the great metropolis of London. There, in Albert Memorial hall, before the representatives of the English throne and the greatest of scientists, he described the results of his daring journey. What he did—told by his mind as soon as he was able to the world by his pen. No spooner did Edison with his crazy ax did the Greek mathematician, Archimedes, "I have found it! I have found that I can measure the gold in the crown of the wives," than at once he applied to the Archimedes compass to help him build a line from Baltimore to Washington. He would prove to the world, in the best and most emphatic way, that telegraphy was to be classed among the "found arts."

I enter a great artist's studio. I say to Jean Despujols, "What are you doing worthing so hard about?" "Oh," he says, "I have conceived my life's supreme mission of art. I used to be noted for the skill with which I could paint to the lowest passions of life—to the evil desires of the world through suggestive figures of the nude. I now understand looking at one of my pictures which I see is too bad that Mlle. with such a genius as he has, paints pictures like that!" I at once left Paris and went back to my old home. There I found the banners of France's fleur de lis to study the pure beauties to be found in the lives of my old playmates. Now I am trying as an artist to depict the homely virtues of the French people. As life is my first pleasant picture to be sent to the French salon, I have placed my mark in the wheat field, for when a man is to make a great success in any one line he must be very careful about his beginning. This is a new definition for an old Christian article." To make a right beginning is a problem for artisan, Christian—Tissot, the former artist of the French society women, secluded himself in the garret of his home to do his might walk and live amid the scenes where Christ lived and died. As a Christian artist he wanted to make a right beginning.

The desire to make a right beginning is laudable. Young people often who starts upon a great career for the reformation of the customs and the habits of the world. Thus, when I began to think upon this subject, this young girl who left the beginning of ministry began to grow and widen and deepen and broaden in my mind's eye, under the purposes of Jesus Christ. Why? It was Christ's first miracle. For thirty long years he led the life of obscurity. Now Jesus comes forth and practically says: "I have come to reveal my Father in the world. I want to win the hearts of all men to the people. How shall I begin my work in the world? Why not begin in the most way? I will do it at the wedding in Cana of Galilee. There I will not have to preach our subject with awe and reverence. This miracle is not a mere happen as. The first miracle of Jesus was one by which we may catch the forward movement of manifestments of a perfect life.

Therefore does the active scene of Christ's earthly ministry open? At a public scene. At a time of joyful festivities. At a time when not only the young but also the old and the middle-aged are trying to be happy and to make every one happy. At a time when the young people are going forth in the great social economy. The celestial song which sang on the morning of the Nativity was no more joyful in note than the songs we hear as we come over the hills and see the maidens merry dancing upon the grass upon the occasion of the wedding feast in Cana.

Would you have me describe the joy of a wedding festival I once witnessed in Spain? I will not do it. I will say that I did see it, however, at one of the wedding festivals of Spain. Of course, I found the wedding guests came from far and near. As I came over the hills toward that village I was first attracted by the scene, with their hair decorated with flowers and their garments of the brightest, gorgeous colorings of the east, mingled in the sunlight. Then the songs emerging each other's waist and dancing in the open air. Then I looked over the greensward and singing in the open air. Then games and feats of strength for the competitors at those festivals. At last, after days of frolic, came the wedding ceremony. Then came the great climax of all, the "wedding supper." Christ's first miracle was performed at a season of social festivities.

I am glad that Christ's Nativity was announced to the world by the over me of song. I am glad that his first miracle was performed at a wedding. I am glad we do not see Jesus at this time standing clothed in the skins of wild beasts, as was John the Baptist in the wilderness. Christ came to this wedding to mark his approval of innocent pleasure. "His attendance upon the wedding in Cana of Galilee proves," wrote Bishop Ryle, "that true religion was never meant to make man melancholy. There are times when it is lawful to be merry and rejoice." The calendar of the ancient Jews was full of days of the year marked as festival days, and Dr. Edersheim says, "but every day of the Christian's calendar is marked by the hand of God as a day of rejoicing." Yes, by the echoing chimes of the wedding bells we know it. By the joyful shouts of the boys coming down the Galilean hills, in the chorus of which Christ's voice may be the blending, we believe it. Thank God, Christ's first miracle was performed for a bride and not for a widow, at a banquet and not by a bier.

Christ's ministry opens in a scene of human festivities. It does more than that. Christ came to Cana of Galilee to prove that the most important place on earth this side of heaven is the marriage altar. "Marriage," wrote Dr. Taylor, "is the mother of the world and precious kingdoms and fills cities and churches and heaven itself. Like a useful bee, it builds a house and gathers sweetness from every flower, and labors and unites in societies and republics, and sends out colonies, and feeds the world with delicacies, and obeys the king, and exercises many virtues, and promotes the interest of mankind, and is that s'ate of good to which God hath designed the greatest constitution of the world." That is, the right kind of marriage does all this. Therefore, the marriage is important in God's sight and man's. It is very essential, O, young people, that you ask Jesus Christ to your weddings when you are about to be married! For the strange fact remains that the last Bible book in the volume of our sacred writings is the first in the volume of our every think of inviting to our weddings is Jesus Christ.

We read Christ a great deal as some of us have treated our best earthly friends—as a guest, a reception or a party. We take the calling list of our most intimate friends and acquaintances and we bunch them together with the names of our personal friends, both relatives and friends, for the event on the night of the entertainment comes around we say to ourselves, "Why is no; Mr. So-and-so here." Then we go to our wife and say: "My dear, Mr. So-and-so is not here. Did you invite him?" She looks at the list of guests and answers: "No, husband. We forgot to put that name down." "Then it is bad." "Yes, it is too bad. But, though it is too bad, this fact remains unconvertible, that you did not neglect to invite that very wealthy man to your daughter's wedding. Why? Because you expected him to give her a large present. You forgot to invite the wise, prominent statesman or social queen. Why? Because you expected them to give that wedding prominence in the newspaper. But you did neglect to invite that one dear friend who has been true to you for many, many years. Then we neglected to invite Jesus to our wedding. Christ, who is our best of all friends.

Not only do the young people often neglect to ask Christ to the wedding, but they very often neglect to talk to him and consult with him before they engage themselves for life. They ignore Christ in reference to the coming engagement as a great deal as did a young lady many years ago her New England home. Pelpin was a young lady. She said: "Pastor, I want to talk to you. I have decided whether I should marry Mr. So-and-so. I want your advice." With that the kindly old minister looked at her and said: "Well, my girl, when is the wedding to take place? Next Thursday, did you say?" She answered. "Not next Tuesday, but next Thursday." Is it any wonder people come to Christ to talk about their coming weddings when they have made up their minds to marry whether God wants them to marry or no. These young girls will talk about their wedding plans with other girls. They will tell lifelong friends people who are almost strangers. But they will not talk about them to Christ, who is more interested in that coming wedding than any other being in the universe, not excepting the bridegroom himself.

Another lesson of the miracle is that no wedding is to be too insignificant to do it by that act you are going to perform Christ will be present. The changing of water into wine was not likely to be the trick, or in plain the dead, or to cast out the "devils," which is the number of a legion were torturing the possessed to avoid the Gadarene tombs. It was done simply and purely to relieve the embarrassment of a host and hostess whose supply of wine for the marriage feast had run out. It was done to alleviate one of those little annoyances with which most of us have been conversant in the days of our wedding.

Cannot you see those guests gathering in the east in your own house? Cannot you see the loaded preparations for ten or twelve guests for dinner. There was just enough oysters, enough salads, enough squabs, enough figures of ice cream, for the invited guests, you more and no less. Suddenly, when you were about to be seated, the bell rang, and in came three or four friends from a distant city. You had to ask them to dine. There was no way out of it. Then your wife took you and the children aside and said: "I don't know how we will get through. We have not enough to feed those guests. Now, you and the children have got to take turns in going without. You must refuse to eat. Different courses. When the plates are passed you must say, 'I do not want any, thank you.'" Of course all went well except with the youngest boy. The salad looked so good that when it was being passed he said, "Oh, mamma, mamma." Then his face flushed. She was embarrassed. Every one in the room was embarrassed. Do you not recognize a mighty Christian lesson in the fact that Christ performed his first miracle in order to relieve a little domestic flurry in the home?

If I put myself in Jesus' place I think I can imagine the scene which took place which led to his going to this wedding. Cana is only a few miles away from Nazareth, where Jesus was then living. There is a tradition that this Cana bridegroom's name was Chrysphas, who was about to marry Mary's daughter, Ismaria. Jesus had been invited to the wedding. Mary, the mother of Jesus, was there. Mary, the sister of Jesus, was there. Mary, the mother, had said: "Jesus, you will have a good time, and I will send my aunt my love and benediction through you." "But, my dear," said Mary, "I do not want to go without you. You should go for the family's sake as well as for mine." "Well, mother," he answers, "if you wish it, I will go. Does that mean that I must bear out the strange wording of this chapter, 'And the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee, and the mother of Jesus was there'? And this Jesus was called and his disciples to the marriage?" Why was Mary's name mentioned first? Is there not a reason for Christ going there to please his mother? Certainly. I am not going beyond my right when I make that assertion. Christ's first miracle he performed his "first miracle" there to teach us that nothing in life is too small or too insignificant to do if by that little act we can bring happiness into some loving heart.

The further you go into this premise the more powerful becomes the gospel lesson. Not only did Christ begin his public career, his ministry among his neighbors, but he began that gospel ministry in a private way, within the quietude of his own home. Mary, his mother, had said: "I cannot go without you before the outside world felt I; and save it in Cana of Galilee. How did I know? The Inference is clear from the chapter of my text. When the bride, the bridegroom and the mother of the house talking together about the marriage. "The world has a custom that if the bride to be was Mary's own sister and friend she would be invited. Why pened? Why, Mary immediately went and told Christ. Then she said to the servants, "Whatsoever he saith unto you do it." Do not these statements prove to you that Mary knew Jesus could settle the most difficult of the world? Do not these statements prove to you the divinity first in his home. It is right and necessary that we go to the ministry for Christ among our friends. It is not, however, more important to be a missionary to our neighbors than to a gospel messenger in private to our husbands, our wives, our children, our children, in the quiet sanctity of your own homes. Begin to talk about Christ in a carpenter shop before he gets a divine chance to change the water blush crimson in Cana of Galilee.

But we must not circumscribe our gospel ministry to our friends and our neighbors and our friends. We must not. Because Christ performed his first miracle at a wedding, therefore we will attend the weddings and the festivities of the young people. We will not preach Christ and the cypress as well as amid the orange blossoms. We will preach Christ to the moaning, weeping willows as well as among the singing multitude of well dressed people. We will go before to go to the house of mourning than to the house of joy. We will go as gladly to go to both places. But remember, oh, young people, that you cannot enter another world and to be married to Christ. You cannot go to a world who are about to place upon their brow the wedding ring of god which will encircle the finger after Death has withered away in the grave.

Feats of Photography.

Photography has caught the fastest express trains in motion, pictures of the electrocutograph, and it also shows the growth of a flower. A rose which bursts into bloom in, say, sixteen days is exposed to a camera every fifteen minutes during the sixteen days, and when the pictures developed from the plates are assembled in order in the moving picture machine the observer sees the bud, the bursting of the calyx or two, the gradual breaking of the petals, the full-blown rose at last, night and reopen in the morning, the gradual power under the eye, the sepals peep from cover and finally the full blown flower.

The Greatest Number.

Hume the historian found himself one day at a social dinner next to Lord John Russell, who, in the course of conversation his lordship said: "What do you consider the greatest number in legislation?"

"The greatest good of the greatest number," was Hume's answer.

"And what do you consider the greatest number?" continued Lord John Russell.

"Number one, my lord," was the historian's prompt reply.—English Memoirs.

Homemade Tablets to Purify the Breath

Some harmless breath purifiers may be made at home, and charcoal tablets are among the best. A delicious tablet is made of one ounce of pulverized charcoal, one-quarter of an ounce of orris root, one ounce of powdered sugar, three ounces of powdered chocolate, one drachm of powdered vanillin, one-half dram of powdered orris root, and a half grains each of oil of cloves and oil of peppermint. Put the powders and the gum into an earthen bowl and melt together over a very gentle heat, stirring to keep it smooth. Then add the oils and make the mass into a stiff paste. Put and cut into lozenges. These tablets, if eaten, may be eaten several times a day.

Cleanse the teeth frequently with antiseptic aromatic washes is to be recommended.

Food of the Gods Found.

The food of the gods of history is now been discovered at last. According to the news from Athens, Prof. Spiridon and Dr. Huchard, in London, formic acid can increase the strength of people. The wise men have discovered the delicate subject who could only raise his arm to the level of his head, experimented upon, able to lift five times his strength. Indeed, took pertinent upon himself is decidedly increased in a few days, it is said, it doubled his strength, and in five days trebled it. To achieve this he had to drink a solution of the formic acid, a colorless liquid found in the bodies of ants, in the leaves and stems of certain caterpillars, and in nettles. It is very powerful and extremely corrosive and may be prepared artificially in many different ways.

Stevenson and Carlyle.

Robert Louis Stevenson used to tell this story of his early days: He was entering in an absentminded way the Princes avenue section of Edinburgh, when Mr. Stillie, who he ran into a fainting fit and fell down in the middle of the establishment. The later circulated in an angry tone, "Mean, can you not look where you are going?" Stevenson apologized for his absentmindedness and was then confronted by Mr. Stillie, who was evidently in a very excited state, who said: "The creature has been trying to make out that an old book I sold him was valuable. I told him it was worthless, but he knows nothing about back letters. I believe he is a fool. Another impudent customer that ever entered my shop!"

"Who is he?" asked Stevenson.

"Oh, that's the great Mr. Thomas Carlyle," was the answer.

Old Inns.

The Ostrich Inn, at Colnbrook, Middlesex, England, has had an uninterrupted existence since the early days of King John. It was doing a thriving business before Magna Charta was signed and Runnymede was won, even before Crecy was fought. The Mitre Inn, at Oxford, was a licensed house in the year of Poitiers and Agincourt. Before the reformation the cathedral was founded, and it boasts a fine old Elizabethan clock which began to tick ever so long before Dr. Johnson was born—nearly two centuries ago.

Duke's Treasure Quest.

The Duke of Argyll's search in Tobermory Bay for the treasure of the gold of the sunken treasure among the wreckage of the great Armada galleon, the Florida, which went down in 1848, has been resumed after an interval of nearly forty years.

The duke is represented by Capt. Dan Gurney, of the Admiralty staff, and the operations are being conducted with the assistance of a diving dress from sight by a canvas awning. An apparatus for taking photographs of the sea bottom is carefully concealed with tarnaulin.

Single and double-breasted Sack Suits of the latest Fabrics, Plaid, Checks, Stripes, Overplaids, Greys, Greens, Browns, Blacks and Blues.

Price range for these natty suits is:

$6.00 up to $18.00

Coats are cut longer with broader lapels —trousers are cut looser. Some with belt loops.

There are no smart styles or kinks omitted from our line of young men's suits.

THE BOYS' CLOTHES

A regular boy easy on his clothes? Hardly!
Boys are not built that way.
Don't spoil his fun because his clothes won't stand the wear and tear of boyish pranks. He'll be a boy only once, and he has all of life before him in which to "be careful."
Buy him clothes such as we handle, that are strong to toughness in fabric and made so well that seams can't rip even under the stress of a ROUGH AND TUMBLE.
You like him to look stylish, you say? Why, certainly, and he will if his clothes come from here.
Our tailors know how to put style as well as durability into boys' clothing and we demand it in every case.

PRETTY WEDDING AT CHRIST CHURCH TO-DAY.

NUPTIALS OF MR. ROBERT A. BACKUS AND MISS JULIA A. VANDEWATER.

A very pretty wedding took place at 11 o'clock this morning at Christ Church, many of the fair sex being present to witness the ceremony. The groom was Mr. Robert A. Backus, of this city, who for years has been head clerk at Hyman & Co.'s, and the bride Miss Julia Augusta Vandewater, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Vandewater, of Marmora village, and a sister of the bride, in the officiating clergyman. The bridesmaid was Miss Annie Vandewater, a sister of the bride whilst Mr. Frank E. Backus, of Lorraine, Ohio, a brother of the groom, did honors for him. The bride looked charming in a gown of cream taffeta silk trimmed with point d'esprit over lace, she wore the traditional veil, and orange blossoms, and also carried a bouquet of cream roses. The bridesmaid's gown was white silk and she wore a large picture hat and carried a bouquet of pink roses. After the ceremony the bridal party and invited friends assembled at the residence of the bride's parents where a reception was held and a wedding repast partaken of. This was the most pleasant part of the wedding. The bride received a large number of presents, which were both handsome and costly, including a sum of money from her grandfather Hoover's estate. The groom's present to the bride was a sunburst of pearls with attached, to the bridesmaid a pearl pendant and to the groomsman an opal pin. The young couple left for the west this afternoon and will visit Niagara Falls, Buffalo and other points before returning to take up their residence here. A host of friends in this city wish the young couple much joy on their married life.

HARVESTERS FARE WELL AROUND PETERBORO.

EXPERIENCED MEN HARD TO GET —MANY ENGLISHMEN BEING ENGAGED.

Peterboro Review, This year a good farm hand—one with a little experience—can make big wages as a helper or hired man. Some of the surrounding farmers are paying $30 per month and board, while in some other places farmers are paying $30 a month and board. No wonder some of the hired hands can afford to wear a fine turnout in the line of a nifty horse and rubber tired buggy. There are many inexperienced or "green" hands on the farms this year from England—some of whom have never hitched a horse, milked a cow, handled a fork or done anything in connection with farm work. These are rolling hired by many farmers, who won't take them, however, unless they sign contracts to stay a certain period of time, perhaps one or two years, as the farmer does not want to spend his time in teaching a green hand and then have him leave. Some farm hands get from $20 to $30 per month, with board, but the majority are paid about $25 and board. The farmers don't like paying $30 or more per month for hired help, but must have same as they can't get through their work.

Experienced help seems to be scarce in many localities, the Northwest having attracted many. Major Whitlaw of the Salvation Army, succeeded in placing many English immigrants on farms in the Peterboro district. A number of these newcomers are very shiftless, and sometimes leave for the towns and cities while others, who came out with farm money, are steady and very willing workers.

Died At Redneerville.

After an illness reaching over some months, Mr. Levi Peters, blacksmith at Redneerville, died on Sunday morning, the cause of death being a tumor in the stomach, from which the deceased had been a great sufferer for some time, the left side of the face being nearly eaten away by the disease. Mr. Peters was a member of the O.O.M.W., I.O.O.F., and Lake Lodge of A., F. and A. M., Picton, the funeral of which he has vanquished his Muscovite enemy, but he not indeed by two things. Lord Wolseley and others long ago quite realized that Japan was not an all-powerful colossus; and all the frothy bunkum that has been published notwithstanding, the Japanese soldier is not the "best human machine in the world." The past has made and the future alike, will make this most clear. The foam of the horses, and of the Russian's blood, has not yet run dry, nor has the supply failed of regimental unit of battalions of British marines who are second to none, have proved them in the field, and I have no fear of the so-called Yellow peril; and I am willing to bet my last sixpence and Tommy Atkins' superiority.

DAVE GEROW HAD A VERY NARROW ESCAPE.

VENERABLE ISLAND DWELLER NEARLY MADE THE ACQUAINTANCE OF DAVY JONES' ON SATURDAY EVENING.

David Gerow, an aged man who resides on an island bearing his name, which is situated on the south shore of the bay, a couple of miles below the city, on Saturday evening had a narrow escape from drowning. It appears that Gerow was in the city during the day and left about six o'clock for his domicile. At the time there was considerable sea on the bay, the wind blowing hard from the southeast. Gerow was in a skiff and had nearly made the other shore when his craft upset. His cries for help attracted the attention of Horace Dickens, who also lives on an island across the bay and he went to Gerow's assistance. After considerable difficulty he managed to get the unfortunate man into his craft, and took him to shore. As Gerow is partially paralyzed and was in the water for a considerable length of time it seems almost miraculous that he was not drowned.

A SOCIETY FUNERAL.

OBSEQUIES OF THE LATE JOHN YORK WERE VERY IMPRESSIVE

The funeral of the late Mr. John York took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence on Bleasby street. It was under the auspices of the I.O.O.F., and many of the members turned out. At the house the services of the Order were conducted by the Rev. Bro. G. R. Beamish and Bro. J. Eedes, No. 42 of Bridge Lodge. The cortege was then formed, and headed by the I.O.O.F. Band, playing the dead march in "Saul," proceeded to St. Thomas' Church, where the impressive burial service of the Anglican church was held, conducted by the rector, Rev. Rural Dean Ardagh. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The bearers were the attendants of the night nurses, G. Gulliver, G. Cornish, H. Hudgins, Brough, W. Reilly and W. Hall. The interment took place at the cemetery.

The floral tributes were from the following:

Wife, pillow.
Children, three links.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Clark, cross.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Rosser, Toronto, anchor.
Mr. H. M. Meehan, Toronto, wreath.
Mrs. Priory, spray.
Mrs. J. Chase, Campbellford, spray.
Mrs. B. Chase, Frankford, spray.
Mrs. F. Pulse and Mr. and Mrs. Gorton, spray.
Mrs. M. Thompson, spray.
Mr., Mrs. and Miss G. Teale, spray.
Mrs. Craig and family, spray.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Barlow, spray.
Mr. G. Cornish and family, spray.
Mr. and Mrs. G. Gulliver, spray.
Mr. and Mrs. J. Neste, spray.
Mr. and Mrs. T. Marshall, sweet peas.
Mr. and Mrs. W. Tamworth, cut flowers.
Miss Irene and Roy Lafay, cut flowers.

TOMMY ATKINS YET, SAYS BEN BURLEIGH.

THE FAMOUS WAR CORRESPONDENT GIVES OPINION AFTER RUSSO-JAP EXPERIENCES.

Mr. Bennet Burleigh, in his recently published book, "The Empire of the East," discusses a topic of peculiar interest to every soldier. He says: "I have not written as a partisan, either pro-Japanese or pro-Russian, but as I have seen and learned, and have no need to take a roof in my mouth to remember it. Let no Germaine in the Russians I have not been slack to praise the size and quality of their soldiers, but lacking, as I contend, an object. Nor have I forgotten their lack of considerable, their contempt of most of the obstacles, and their over-haste and inexpacity for detail. 'Where is the hurry, my friend?' I said. 'Well done, little Ruji!' Certainly he deserves all credit for his wonderful endurance, which he has vanquished his Muscovite enemy, but he not indeed by two things. Lord Wolseley and others long ago quite realized that Japan was not an all-powerful colossus; and all the frothy bunkum that has been published notwithstanding, the Japanese soldier is not the 'best human machine in the world.' The past has made and the future alike, will make this most clear. CHURCH CHIMES OF YESTERDAY.

NOTES OF SERVICES IN BELLEVILLES DIFFERENT PLACES OF WORSHIP.

Bridge Street.

"The Lord's Supper" was the subject of the discourse in the evening, and the Rev. J. F. Wilson spoke very appropriately on this holy ordinance. He also, during his sermon referred to the death of Rev. Dr. Lambly, and Rev. T. J. Edmison, who passed away during the week. During the service Miss Vermilyea sang a solo entitled "Saved by Grace," and she and Mrs. S. Burrows, Jr., sang solos in the anthem entitled "The Morn Breaks Sweetly Over Us."

Christ Church.

Rev. Canon Loucks, of Kingston, yesterday officiated at both services. In the evening his text was from 2nd Samuel, 12th chapter and a portion of the 7th verse:

"Thou art the man."

Holloway Street.

The pastor, Rev. R. H. Leitch, preached at both services yesterday to good congregations. In the evening his text was from Revelations, 14th chapter and a portion of the 15th verse:

"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever."

Emmanuel R. E. Church.

Fair congregations were present at the above church yesterday, and the Rector, Rev. A. A. Hubly, preached forcibly on live topics. At the evening service he preached on "Clusters of fruit on the iron gate," dealing with apostolic days and showing that more of the apostolic spirit was needed today.

Tabernacle.

In the absence of the pastor yesterday the service in the morning was conducted by Dr. Morrison, and in the evening by the Rev. R. N. Adams.

Bethel Hall Gospel Tent.

Notwithstanding unfavorable weather the attendance last night was good and much interest was manifested. Mr. Irving spoke from Rev. 21st, 17, and the spirit and the bride say "Come" and let him that heareth say "Come," and let him that is a thirst "Come," and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely. Pincher spoke from John 3.16; God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, dwelling on God's love to sinful man, and God's offer of salvation full and free to all who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. Meetings were announced for each evening during the week at 8

OLD BOYS' REUNION.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MUCH ENCOURAGED AT GENEROUS SPIRIT SHOWN BY CITIZENS.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Old Boys Reunion was held on Saturday evening for the purpose of general business and straightening up of matters. The members are much encouraged with the manner in which finances are coming to hand. Many, hearing the committee had a deficit, have doubled their subscriptions, and others, who had not previously contributed, to make the object, are doing so. When the returns are all in the committee are hopeful that all liabilities will be met.

Presented With a Ring and Cheque.

A presentation took place this morning at the residence of Mr. R. H. Vandewater, Front St., when his daughter, Miss Annie Vandewater, was presented with a ring and a cheque from the estate of her grandfather, the late Mr. Hoover. Rev. C. M. Harris made the presentation, which occurred on the parent's silver wedding. Many guests witnessed the pleasing event.

Another Cow Killed.

During a thunderstorm on Saturday afternoon, which passed over Prince Edward County, a valuable cow belonging to Mr. Charles Grant, at Roblin's Mills, was killed by lightning.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

Child Not Expected to Live from One Hour to Another, but Cured by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Rush, the little daughter of E. N. Dewey & Assemblie, Q. C., was seriously ill of cholera infantum last summer. "We gave her up and did not expect her to live from one hour to another," he says "but happened to think of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and got a bottle of it from the store. In few hours she was getting for the better. We kept on giving it and before she had taken the half of one small bottle she was well." This remedy is for sale by all druggists.

DEATHS.

OSTROM — On July 30, 1905, at the residence of her son, G. W. Ostrom, Barrister, Trenton, Margaret Ann Ostrom, relict of the late Sylvester Ostrom. Born 25th September, 1807, in Montgomery County, State of New York, aged 97 years and 10 months.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her son, G. W. Ostrom, Trenton, on Wednesday, August 2nd, 1905, at 1.30 p.m. Interment at Belleville cemetery.

DEATH OF GALLANT AND POPULAR SOLDIER.

COL. MONTIZAMBERT, WELL AND FAVORABLY KNOWN HERE, PASSED AWAY IN MICHIGAN.

Quebec, July 30.—A message from Ovid, Mich., announces the death of Lieut.-Col. Charles E. Montizambert, late D.O.C. at Montreal and Kingston.

Lieut.-Col. Montizambert was born in Quebec Jan. 27, 1841, his father being Edward Montizambert, law clerk of the Senate, and his mother, the daughter of the late Sir Narcisse Benoit. He was descended from an old French-Canadian family of note, his first of their ancestors coming to Canada being Pierre Boucher, who was first Governor of Three Rivers in 1622. The family name, says Morgan, is Boucher de Montizambert. On the maternal side two of Col. Montizambert's grandmother's brothers were English officers, one of whom was killed at the taking of Martinique. An uncle was killed in action in India, so that the late colonel was descended from a family of soldiers.

Educated at Upper Canada College, Toronto, he early showed a decided taste for military pursuits, and in 1860 entered with great zest the volunteer movement, being subsequently appointed captain of the adjutant of the Quebec Volunteer Garrison Artillery, in which corps he served until 1871. When A and B Batteries, Schools of Gunnery, were raised in that year he was transferred to the command of B Battery, Permanent Artillery, Quebec. He attained the rank of major in 1872 and lieutenant-colonel in 1877. In 1882 he was made commandant of the School of Artillery, consisting of B Battery, Kingston, which office he occupied when he was recalled in command of the Wimbledon team and was subsequently attached to the Royal Artillery at Aldershot for the autumn manoeuvres, after rejoining at Woolwich for instruction.

He remained under Col. Strange on several occasions during rots in Quebec and the provinces, and in the Northwest Rebellion of 1885 the first artillery corps that made the passage through the Lake Superior route on their unfinished portion of the C. P. R. scored a hit on the shore of Lake Superior. He was in action at Fish Creek and at Batoche, and was mentioned in despatches and recommended for C.M.G.

Deceased was the author of a gunnery for the medal presented by the Dominion Artillery Association on the supply, care and repair of artillery. In 1897 he was transferred to Kingston as D.O.C. of military districts 3 and 4, and inspector of artillery, for districts 1, 2, 3 and 4. Two years and a half ago he was retired.

He was a member of the Anglican Church. In 1870 he married Alice Lawson, daughter of the late James Gibb, of Quebec

MRS. OSTROM NEARLY REACHED CENTURY MARK.

GRAND OLD RESIDENT OF QUINTE DISTRICT DIED IN TRENTON YESTERDAY IN HER NINETY-EIGHTH YEAR.

The death occurred at Trenton yesterday of a grand old lady—one of the good old sort we hear so little about in these days and also the foundation for its present prosperity.

We refer to Mrs. Margaret Ann Ostrom, relict of the late Sylvester Ostrom, who passed away at the residence of her son, Geo. W. Ostrom, barrister, of Trenton, in the 98th year of her age. No grander specimen of womanhood and sterling worth ever a breath of Hay of Quinte air. The late Mrs. Ostrom, whose maiden name was Miss Margaret Ann Rees, was born in Montgomery County, New York, on the 25th of September, 1807, and was thus in her 98th year. She came to Belleville in 1816, with her brother, the late Dr. James Rees, and subsequently married the late Sylvester Ostrom, residing in Belleville thereafter until within the last two years, when she took up her residence with her son, G. W. Ostrom, Barrister, Trenton, where the aged deceased her in 1883. Of their family of six children, three sons survive her, namely, G. W. Ostrom, barrister, Trenton; Wm. A. Ostrom, late of the firm of Ostrom & Wilson, and E. Ostrom, of Saginaw, Mich. In her day Mrs. Ostrom was a great reader, kept thoroughly conversant with current events, and took a deep and intelligent interest in all public matters. Up to very recently she could converse with wonderful accuracy and in an interesting manner, on the past history of the town and, vicinity; and in fact on all important events of Canadian history. She was a thorough Methodist and for many years also worshipped with her late husband, who was a Methodist. In the death of Mrs. Ostrom, a link—a mere of the Quinte district passes away.

Forced Liberality.

It is not often miscellaneus gets such a straightforward rebuke as in the case quoted by the Montclair Times. In the early days of primitive Methodism there lived in England an eccentric minister named Neale, who was famous for his plain talking. On one occasion he was preaching missionary sermons at a village so noted for its small collections that he determined to pass the plate himself.

On his round he came to a farmer who was, as Mr. Neale well knew, the richest man in the place. This individual placed a penny on the plate. Mr. Neale stopped immediately and said in a loud voice:

"Take your penny out, man, take it out! Don't you see you've covered up your laborer's sixpence?"

The rebuke was effectual, and a much more valuable coin was placed on the plate.

Cloves.

From Java, Sumatra, Mauritius, Zanzibar and Guiana come the little brown flower buds of the clove tree. When gathered the buds are red and are dried by exposure to the smoke of wood fires and afterward by the rays of the sun. In a very short time they become of a deep brown color. To secure a unsoiled rind thus keep up the price the Dutch in the seventeenth century destroyed all their clove trees except those on the island of Amboyna. The chief value of cloves lies in their essential oil, which forms about one sixth of their whole weight.

Good Stage Elocution.

It was one of Joseph Jefferson's distinctions that he was not only an actor, but an exemplar, of good stage elocution. He was, however, an exception that proved the rule. The first step toward a better state of affairs is to convince managers and actors that it is desirable. With the memory of many a bad quarter hour of strained effort to hear what should be apprehended with ease, we respectfully submit this word of suggestion.

Where Silence Is Golden.

This story is typical of the love of absolute silence and loneliness of the typical Australian bush camp:

Two men were shepherding together, but rarely exchanged a word.

One morning one of the men remarked:

"Bill, I dreamed a cow fell down in the swamp just now."

Nothing more was said, and they went about their business for the rest of the day. Twenty-four hours later, once more at breakfast, the second man said:

"How d'you know it wasn't a bull?"

Again a contented pause of twenty-four hours. Next morning the first man began to pack up his "billy" and "swag."

"You going?" inquired the other.

"Yes."

"Why?"

"Because," said his friend, "there's too much argument in this camp" [illegible]

"Wot did yer tell de judge?"

"Dat everybody was tryin' to keep me town."

"An' what did he do?"

"Sent me up."—Exchange.

WITTE CAN'T & WON'T

Entertain Any Jap Demands Based on Probabilities.

Regards Himself As An Imperial Courier, to Ascertain the Terms of Japan, But With Powers Sufficient to Conclude Peace—Will Do Anything Compatible With Russia's Honor to Reach That End.

London, July 31.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent on board the Kaiser Wilhelm Der Grosse, on which M. Witte, the Russian peace plenipotentiary is a passenger, sends an interview which he has had with M. Witte in which the latter said that if Russia and Japan had agreed upon a common basis before appointing peace plenipotentiaries it would have been much better.

As it was, M. Witte said, he regarded himself rather as an Imperial courier sent to ascertain the terms of Japan. He was prepared to make peace, nevertheless, he added, as his powers were very complete, and he would discuss the demands based on Japan's actual military and naval successes, in a business-like spirit of give and take.

"But I can't and will not," continued M. Witte, "seriously discuss, based on expected military successes in the future." I am conversant with the humane intentions of my Imperial master, and I will do anything compatible with Russia's honor and dignity to establish that work of which I have been an unswerving advocate.

"My first task, however, in the new world will be to search for a basis for fruitful discussion."

Russian Peace Warlike.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—The tone of the Russian press comments leaves more warlike as the peace conference draws nigh that the Government on all sides is urged to resist humiliating demands, even at the cost of continuing the war.

Has Typhoon in the World.

New York, July 31.—Almar Sato of the Japanese peace delegation made a statement to the Associated Press Saturday relative to the cable dispatch he has ever in any interview given any hint of the terms upon which Japan will negotiate peace, or that he has assumed that Japan will make any demands whatever, Mr. Sato said: "Sensational articles have been published, which are fabrications, and in which I have been misquoted. I do not base upon what terms peace may be negotiated."

Kill 200, Capture 500.

Tokio, July 31.—The following despatch has been received from Japanese headquarters:

"Our independent cavalry, which entered Rykoff on Sakhalin Island, 6 miles northeast of Port Due, July 27, effected no fighting order in the city unfavorable to its occupation. Our cavalry left the city and the enemy's force before they retreated from the eminences west of Ryikoff, commenced to advance at 3 a. m. on July 29. The van, together with an independent body of cavalry, advanced by forced marches attacking and dislodging the enemy holding the passes extremity of Ryikoff, and rushed into the town. Confused stores of war were found, but the town was completely taken at 8.30 o'clock in the morning.

"The enemy's main strength, which numbered about 2,000 men, fled in disorder southward, taking the short route leading to Parsono.

"On July 30, our detachment, which was sent south in pursuit of the enemy, met the enemy's infantry, about 500 strong, at a point six miles south of Ryikoff, and killed over 200 and captured 500.

"The enemy's strength opposed to our right column was of some 2,000 infantry and four guns and four machine guns, and that opposed to our left column some 2,000 infantry and four guns.

"The enemy's loss in trophies is under investigation."

Electoral College System.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—The following are the principal parts of an electoral system, approved by the Council of Ministers for the proposed national assembly. The aim has been to elaborate a system eliminating as far as possible class representation. The only classes existing are the franchise of the soldiers, persons under the age of 25 years, foreigners, governors and vice-governors of Provinces, prefects and police authorities, nomads and persons deprived of civil rights.

For St. Petersburg, Moscow and 16 of the larger cities there will be a system of electoral colleges numbering 160 members. For St. Petersburg, Moscow and 80 other towns these members will be elected by electors of the first degree, comprising owners of land and house property yielding $1,500 in value, the electors in the case of St. Petersburg, Moscow and 1,500 other towns to include also the holders of industrial patents and paying specified taxes, with an educational qualification to religion.

For the Provinces, similar system of colleges will be elected by voters of three categories, namely, landowners, electors of other towns than the before-mentioned large towns and communal representation of peasants. Here also a property qualification is required of the electors and a literary qualification. The elections will be by secret ballot and an absolute majority is required.

True to Russia.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—Emphatic denial has been issued in answer to an appeal from the clergy of Orenburg not to conclude a shameful peace: "The Russian people can rely upon the Emperor and told the judge she shameful peace, or one unworthy of great Russia."

Kaiser Urged Peace.

Berlin, July 31.—The Foreign Office, taking cognizance of statements from St. Petersburg, particularly those published in the Novoe Vremya, to the effect, authorizes the Associated Press to say that Emperor William in the interview off the island of Bjoerkoe not only did not encourage Emperor Nicholas to continue the war, but gave his influence directly in favor of President Roosevelt's peace policy. The Foreign Office again with the utmost positiveness says that the meeting took place at the wish of Emperor Nicholas.

Novoe Vremya Is Outspoken.

St. Peterburg, July 31.—The Novoe Vremya prints this morning a despatch from Khersu that there is great discontent among the reservists in Manchuria at the distress indicated on their families because of the negligence of the authorities, who have failed to provide proper support for them. This outspoken statement from a Russian source is looked upon as significant.

Disease Is Believed.

St. Petersburg, July 31.—Gen. Rosenbel has been relieved of his command of the Third Siberian Army Corps.

Bakers' Strike Causes Riots.

Warsaw, July 31.—The bakers' strike, in which 26 bakeries are involved, is the cause almost daily of murders and excesses. The police appear to be unable to ferret out the perpetrators of the crimes.

43 HURT IN TRAIN WRECK.

Four of Them May Die — Twenty Hurt in Another Wreck.

Fort Smith, Ark., July 31.—The Little Rock & Arkansas City special train on the Little Rock and Fort Smith branch of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway, was wrecked at Grass Saturday, injuring four persons, four of whom may die. Spreading rails caused the wreck.

Accident on Santa Fe.

Chicago, July 31.—The California express on the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, ran off the track and threw two cars into a ditch Saturday night at Lemont, Ill. One man was killed and twenty were injured, beyond recognition. Three others were probably fatally injured and a score of others sustained slight injuries.

Killed By a Train.

Uxbridge, July 31.—An unknown man was struck by a train and killed by a train on the railway about five miles north of here yesterday. He was a middle-aged man, dark, and had a tweed suit, no vest, and a gold-filled watch with a Masonic charm and name on it. He was sitting or lying on the track when struck by the train.

Motorman Killed.

Cleveland, July 31.—Motorman George Searles of Rocky River was electrocuted and Conductor James Fryer of Cleveland severely injured yesterday when a special newspaper car on the Lake Shore Electric Railway jumped the track and was wrecked near Clifton Park.

GUN BETWEEN HIS KNEES.

C. E. George of Dovercourt Found With Top of Head Blown Off.

Toronto, July 31.—About 8 o'clock Saturday night Charles E. George was found in his bedroom at his residence on Main street, in Dovercourt Village, with the top of his head blown off. They were across the stock of the shotgun with the right hand lying on the floor by his side, which was pointing towards his head.

It was quite evident that death was caused by the discharge of the gun, but whether accidental or otherwise does not seem to be quite clear. His wife committed his death in such a manner as to secure the idea of suicide, as she says there was no reason for anyone to do so, should take his own life.

The victim of the tragedy was at one time a market gardener, but lately he has been in the employ of the Canada Foundry Co. He worked yesterday forenoon in the foundry. He was about 56 years of age, and leaves a wife, two grown-up sons and three daughters. His wife says he was despondent for a few days, but was not given to fits of depression.

Dr. Cowboy of Moor street was called in, and afterwards Dr. C. W. Clendenan, coroner of Toronto Junction, was sent for, but after investigation the latter did not deem an inquest necessary.

Canada's One Winter Port.

Sir John, N. B., July 31.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which has its Atlantic terminus at St. John, addressed the Maritime Saturday, on his way to St. Andrew's, where he has a summer residence. Referring to the Province of Canada's trade, he said St. John was indeed the winter port of Canada. Montreal, Canada has but one winter portthat is St. John. Here, therefore, is the transportation commission, which is now looking into such questions.

Is Exact Shade.

The elder Gallus once was wearing the ribbon of a certain order, having recently been made a commandant, and an enthusiastic friend congratulated it. "My dear fellow," he said, "that color is exactly the same as your nose!" "I think it was your woolen vest that was showing." "Oh, no, my dear IVE——," replied Dumas, with a smile, "you are mistaken. It's not a bad color; it is exactly the shade of the sour grapes in the fable."

Possible.

SELECTIONS

THE MAN OVER FORTY.

Andrew Lang Has a Word to Say on Dr. Osler's Theory.

Andrew Lang writes as follows regarding Dr. Osler's theory that men are comparatively useless after forty years: "I fancy that Titian, at seventy, had nothing to fear from the competition of any of our young portrait painters. Mr. Watts in his age was probably the best of our painters long after he was seventy. In poetry, Tennyson wrote his glorious Colonsus in extreme old age, and it has for many centuries outlived the forgotten works of the younger dramatists who were carrying off the prizes in the dramatic competitions. Tennyson, when about eighty, wrote 'Crossing the Bar,' and Pindar, when as old, wrote, I am informed, a deathless lyric, which, alas, I have never perused. Milton can have been no young fellow when he finished 'Paradise Lost.' In fiction Scott turned novelist after he was forty and could have gone on delightfully as long as he had health. He knew too much of books and life to write himself out. There is a lady novelist among us who, though the remark is ungallant, certainly is not under forty and who seems to improve in her art from advance in public favor as years roll on.

"In science, Helmholtz, I understand, took it up when 'you would look at him often before you took him for a schoolboy.' Darwin was not under forty when he wrote the 'Origin of Species.' Mr. Huxley never grew old, and Lord Kelvin digests the diction of the American philosopher. In history, Carlyle had well passed forty before he began the great sign that is his 'Frederick the Great,' one of the most delightful books in the world.

"Horace Walpole never fell off as a letter writer, though he did fall in love every late in life and was fooled. Those who also fell in love, was far over forty when he wrote his entertaining history of the Reformation. Froude's writing to the last was exactly as good as ever, and so we could go on with instances to prove that there is more blood in the old man than our American philosopher thinks."

The Confederate Master Mind.

In pursuance of an act of the Fifty-eighth congress General Ainsworth, now drawing the pension of a brigadier general of volunteers, has completed the work upon the compilation of the Confederate muster rolls. The chief point of interest naturally in the determination of the respective numbers of the two armies in the civil war. The roster of Union soldiers has been made out, but the difficulties are greater as regard the Confederate armies owing to the incompleteness of the records. To make the roster as complete as possible letters have been addressed by the secretary of war to the governors of the fifteen states of the former Confederacy requiring the completion of the work, which has been cheerfully given. The muster rolls supplied by these states will be returned as soon as the compilation is made, and it is believed the list as thus made up will be practically complete.

An Interesting Ancient Town.

Roman certain temples of ancient Egypt were joules of a queen of that land on account of her bourgeois extraction the twentieth century has been enriched with increased knowledge of the ancient time. Queen Tiy was the wife of King Amenhotep III. of the tenth dynasty. The parents of Queen Tiye were Yuaa and Thuiu, common people. Queen Tele was unable to establish her parentage on account of the fact of the opposition of the Egyptian aristocrats, so she gave them a name. This name was changed artificially that it was not discovered until a few months ago, when Mrs. Jane Davis discovered it and all its undisturbed treasures.

Budapest Blackmailers.

Budapest has a gang of blackmailers who operate under the title of "Black Hand" here. Letters have been received by many well to do persons, all signed simply by the letters "13" and all demanding sums of not less than $500 and under still larger, under threats of dynamite in case of refusal. A grain or two of explosive material is enclosed with the letter by way of a sample. Although these missives have been numerous during the last few months no one has so far been obtained to the writers.

The German Way.

Isidore Duncan, a California girl who has received the dances of the Greeks, was fined $30 by a German court recently for insulting a government ballet. The official called to hear the documents to Miss Duncan, who called him an insolent person. Isidore Duncan appeared in court in a pure white costume, her hair in a fillet, her bare feet in sandals, and the judge said she was nervous and hysterical from overwork. The judge admitted her plea, indicting a fine only.

He Wasn't Dead.

Patrick Mullin startled his comrades at the reunion of the First Defenders at Parkville, Pa., by rising in the midst of the assemblage and asking that his name be stricken from the death roll and offering his own presence as evidence that an error had been made. The organization is made up of the survivors of the First Pennsylvania regiment which responded to Lincoln's first call for troops. Of the 800 who entered the service but forty-four are now alive.

HALF-DAZED BY DRUGS

Grimsby Woman Found Early Saturday in Tonawanda.

Story Shows That Lottie Graham Was Taken to Wrong Address by Buffalo Hackman and That She Becoming Drowsy Was Robbed of Small Sum of Money—Shocked So Badly She Returns Home.

Tonawanda, July 31.—Lottie Graham, 21 years old, handsome, and in appearance younger than her age, was discovered wandering down the Military road in this city early Saturday morning, and, in a half-dazed condition, was taken to the home of Town Constable Kaye.

Miss Graham, whose home is in Grimsby, Ont., came to Buffalo Friday night to accept a position as housekeeper in a Delaware avenue home. She arrived at the Central depot shortly before midnight, and, unfamiliar with the city, enquired the nearest route to the place on Delaware avenue. A hackman told her that the street was several miles away, and advised her to ride. She hesitated, but finally took the hansom, giving the driver explicit directions as to the Delaware street number. Her two trunks were placed on the rig, and she was driven rapidly from one street to another, and it was then that she realized that the carriage stopped, the driver alighted, and he found himself before a house, into which her luggage was being taken. Glad that she had arrived at her destination so soon, Miss Graham passed from the country entered the place. The woman at the door was not Lottie's servant.

From that time on she has only a vague recollection of the occurrences until she was discovered in the Military road by Constable Kaye. It is supposed that the place to which she was taken is on Gay street, that having been the name of the street sign which the cab whirled around the corner. She thinks a man accompanied her on a trolley later, but is uncertain about that point. She had about $20 in money when she left Grimsby, but the amount found on her person was less than $5. Her trunks were found at the home of Constable Kaye's home.

This affair has been such a shock to Miss Graham that she insisted upon returning to her people in Grimsby Monday afternoon.

THEY PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

Wheatley Reformers Appear Before Chatham Magistrate.

Chatham, July 31.—The Wheatley whitecappers, seven in number, were arraigned before Magistrate Houston Saturday morning on charges of conspiracy and assault. They pleaded not guilty. The parties against whom the informations have been laid are: William J. Martin, Ewart Gibson, Oscar Gibson, Alfred Williams, William Curtis, James McDonald and William Tremblay, the latter a county constable for Essex. No attempt was made by any of them to evade arrest.

There are two charges The first is that the parties charged did unlawfully assault Dunnage and Knox, and do actual bodily harm to one Thomas Dulmage and did unlawfully disturb the peace.

The prisoners after pleading not guilty elected to be tried by a jury at the next fall assizes, which will be held on Sept. 18 at Chatham.

To the second charge, that of assault and doing actual bodily harm, they entered the same plea.

The preliminary hearing was then adjourned till Thursday next at 10.30 o'clock, the prisoners being released on $600 bail.

The Isle of Man.

The Isle of Man is situated in the Irish sea, nearly midway from England and Ireland and belongs to Great Britain. The government is vested in a lieutenant governor, executive council and house of keys. It was the chief residence of the Scottish monarchs until the thirteenth century; was annexed to Scotland by Alexander III., and was afterward a fief of various kings. It was ruled by the Stanley family from the beginning of the fifteenth century to 1765, when it passed to the earls of Athole. In 1765 the British government bought most of the royal rights of the Athole family, the last rights falling to the Crown in 1826. English is generally spoken, and the native Manx is fast disappearing. It has an area of 220 square miles and a population of about 55,000. The legs used on its coins are the emblem of the island and signify "The Isle of Man legs conquered England, kicks at Scotland and spurns Ireland."

They'll Go to Boston.

Ottawa, July 31.—The Forty-third Regiment will go to Boston on Friday next after all. The final telegram was received by Col. Rogers from Adjutant-General Bingford to-day at Montmorenci, saying:

"Satisfactory arrangements arrived at with your officers yesterday. There can be no friction under the conditions I shall expect to see you on the railroad."

We See All of the Sun.

The inhabitants of this earth never get a glimpse of but one side of the sun, not in fact more than a trifle over one half of the sun's surface is turned toward us. This is because the sun's master is almost coincident with the plane of the ecliptic, the inclination being only about seven degrees.

"I tell you my love for you is making me mad—mad!"

"Well, keep quiet about it. It's had just the same effect upon papa."
